OLD HOME DAY IN ANTRIM, NEW HAMPSHIRE

Sunday Starts Off the Week

With Special Services at the Presbyterian Church, Which Were Very Largely Attended

One of the most lovely days in August that our people ever enjoyed was on Sunday last, the opening day of Old Home Week. The special arrangements for the services were in charge of the ministers, under the supervision of the Town Committee, and a most pleasing program was the result; the order of service as rendered is given herewith. One of the largest audiences that ever attended divine worship in this house was gathered here at this time, and enjoyed fine music and the very appropriate address. The decorations were neat and showed much taste in arrangement.

The discourse by Rev. G. E. Sweet, pastor of Centre Congregational church, was a worthy effort and enjoyed by all who heard it. His address, "The Value of The Return," contained many interesting and instructive thoughts, and stated that between the two early commands of the Master: "Go ye out" and the one so closely connected therewith "and Return," is what there is of man and what he gives to his fellows as a memorial—what he does for the uplift of mankind; and in his thoughts to his hearers made much of "The Return." It was presented in a plain and easy manner and really deserves a better and more extended notice than we have the time and space to devote to it; howerer, in this brief notice let it be known to our readers that it was one of the best Old Home sermons that we ever listened to.

At the reception to Governor Bass. at the town hall, at 11.30 o'clock, upon his arrival in Antrim, it is the desire of the committee that all our people be present and meet him at this time.

A Tribute to Sunday's Services

The musical part of the service was greatly augmented by orchestral pieces: M. E. Nay, cornet; George Appleton and Miss N. Forsaith, violins, and Miss Grace Whittle at the piano. For all the singing during the morning service, Miss Parmenter presided at the organ. The union choir was made up from the different members of the choirs of the village churches; and the numbers of the program which were joined in by the congregation gave character to the service and proved that everyone who had the least bit of music in their makeup had joined in the spirit of the occasion and doing their best to have it a grand success. The inspiring music, the spirit of the occasion and the apt thoughts of the speaker so delightfully and prettily presented, were pronounced features of the hour and did much in putting happy thoughts in the minds of all present.

Hear Governor Bass!

The general committee wishes us to announce with as much emphasis as possible that His Excellency Governor Robert P. Bass is to be in Antrim on Old Home Day, August 24, for not more than two hours, being scheduled to arrive here at eleven o'clock and remain till about one o'clock and all who desire to see and hear him should be at the grove on Elm street during these hours. His address will be given at 12.45.

Board of Trade Matters

At the meeting of the Board of Trade, Monday evening, W. E. Gibney was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of E. M. Lane. Mr. Lane was elected a member of the directors.

The Board of Trade voted to accept the invitation of Paul W. Thayer and hold the annual summer "Outing Day" picnic again at White Birch Point on the shores of Gregg lake, Saturday, this week. Music, sports, boating, speaking, and a general good time for all, and everybody cordially invited to join in the day's pleasure.

The Public Meeting in Town hall, Friday evening, will be an event of Old Home Week that should fill the hall to its capacity limit. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Board of Trade and Antrim people know what the public meetings of this organization are like. Hon. W. H. Barry, mayor of Nashua; John R. Rablin, Esq., of Boston, chief engineer of the Metropolitan Park Commission; and Frank B. Hall, Esq., of Worcester, Mass., will be speakers. All our Antrim people will remember with plearuse Mr. Hall, whose presence and speech at our Annual Banquet was one of the most interesting features of that delightful occasion.

Brush Fire

An alarm of fire was rung in on Monday afternoon for a brush fire in what is known as the Butman lot, about one-fourth mile west of Herbert Bryer's farm. Quite a number of the villagers went and helped subdue the flames. It burned over some territory and damaged a quantity of dry hard wood which was owned by W. O. Stearns of Hancock. Under less favorable conditions a great amount of damage might have been done.

A well known Des Moines woman after suffering miserably for two days from bowel complaint, was cured by one dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

FLEMING FAMILY REUNION

A very pleasant family reunion occured on Wednesday, Aug. 16, at the Balch farm in this town. Forty-four relatives of the family varying in age from a few months to over seventy years were present and enjoyed the beautiful day to its fullest extent.

A bountiful picnic dinner was served under the trees in front of the old farm house, at 12.30 o'clock, which tested the capacity of all present. The day was spent in pleasant renewal of acquaintance with old friends, and reminiscences of the past.

After dinner, several of the men joined in the game of pitching horse shoes, which caused considerable excitement and brought out several experts (?).

When the shadows had lengthened, the friends departed for their respective homes, declaring that one more good time was added to the long list of happy occasions enjoyed at the old home, which has been in the Fleming family one hundred years the coming November.

There were present, relatives from Greenfield, Keene, Antrim, Bennington, Peterboro, and Gardner, Lynnfield and Lowell, Mass.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

The English Method of Dealing Out Supplies by the Week.

In the matter of small savings and watchfulness of expenditure the English housewife is ahead. For example, the English housekeeper deals out to her servants the week's allowance of sugar, rice, flour, coffee and all other household provisions that are kept in quantity, and requires an account of it all to be rendered, the thing having been brought to so fine a point that she knows the exact amount of each article requisite for her family, allowing so much to each individual and that quantity being sufficient, as she knows by experience, two ounces of tea, for instance, being regarded as a week's supply for each single individual, one-half pound of sugar, three and one-half pounds of meat for a woman and five and one-fourth for a man—facts which the housekeeper probably learned from her mother before her—knowing, moreover, the greater variety of the simpler kinds required.

All of these stores she sets down in her housekeeping book as she gives them out, and she does not fail on the next dispensing day to consult her dates and if anything be left over in the cook's hands not accounted for to subtract that from the amount to be newly issued. And in England servants expect this. So far from being indignant with it they would feel as if there were no guiding hand behind them if left undone and they given their head in an overflowing storeroom, as servants are with us.

In fact, there is no saving which the housewife across the water considers too small to practice or as beneath her dignity.—Exchange.

Sir John Rose at Great Length.

An accomplished English barrister was Sir John Karslake. In height he was six feet four inches.

A provincial newspaper in reporting a case in which he was engaged on circuit laconically described the opening for the complainant as follows:

"Sir John Karslake, as soon as the defendant's case was concluded, rose at great length to reply."

Very Simple.

"I've been working two or three evenings making an umbrella stand," says the man who has taken up arts and crafts endeavor.

"Two or three evenings!" exclaims the other man. "Why waste all that time? Why don't you lean it in a corner or stick it in the ground?"—Judge.

The Trouble.

"What's the trouble?" inquired the judge.

"This lady lawyer wants to make a motion," explained the clerk, "but her gown is too tight."—Washington Herald.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Blum, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

Gregg Pond Notes

Miss Lora Craige is under the doctor's care, threatened with a fever.

Mrs. Bert Watson and two children of Enfield are at Valley Pine farm.

George W. Price and D. W. Poor of Boston were at Whitefield Cottage over Sunday.

Mrs. and Miss Pattee and Mrs. Robbins composed a family picnic with a boat to the south end.

Mrs. Francis Ball of Hartford, Conn., is to be a guest at Bonnie Doon cottage over Labor Day.

At the Presbyterian picnic was registered 116 and have reason to believe there was toward 140 present.

Miss Louise Munhall of Bennington was a visitor for several days at Bonnie Doon Cottage during the past week.

Miss Annie Rogers, daughter of James Rogers, a former owner of the farm now owned by George Price, and Miss Glen. Scanoell of East Dedham, Mass., are at the Cuddihy farm for a few weeks.

Otis G. Knapp of "McCoy Hill" east part of the town, made his first visit to Gregg pond, though for many years a resident of the town, during the past week, with his two daughters and son, Walter Knapp.

Winthrop Walley is the prize fisherman of Gregg pond so far this year: 2 hours fishing; 37 fish, 24 bass, 13 perch, 18 pounds; worms for bait. It rained a bit, but was worth it. W. W. Duncan, Esq., of Lowell, Mass., and Morton Paige were other successful fisherman. The occupants of Lookoff Cottage have obtained their daily supply.

The water of the pond which at its height comes under a portion of the Peterwaugh cottage, is now one hundred feet distant, and the Sow's Back is so that one can walk a distance of three hundred feet. Before the dam was raised this point extending into the pond was well covered with bushes and trees and belongs with the Peterwaugh real estate.

Quite a number inquiries have been made as to the name of Peterwaugh, where it originated. It was the name of the only known Indian who was a resident of this town, his cabin being a little west of the pond on the road to Craige's. At his request was buried on Meeting House Hill in the White Man's Graveyard. The "Peterwaugh" was named by the late Reed P. Saltmarsh, who left the greater part of his property to the worthy poor of the town.

S. M. Thompson, the road agent, has been doing some work on the highway this year probably more than has been done for eight years on these roads from the west of Stillbelle cottage which are strictly connected with the pond. With the fact that the taxes have been increased greatly and property on these roads are paying over $600 per year, it would seem as if the Selectmen for the town would allow the Agent extra money and have him go ahead at once as with the pond so low the material for placing the roads in proper shape is unusually easy to obtain and make the road what it should be to Brown's Corner and have a good railing placed, a new one which will be an ornament to the town.

When Old Home Week was started for the purpose of not only bringing people back to town for a gathering but to show our attractions and there were several places suggested and the owners of the then Gregg Pond House and Peterwaugh, then public places, offered $50 if they would hold same at the pond; but it was too much work they claimed the first year, but it is a fact that since then private enterprise with $100 expense has brought to the pond at two different times as many if not more than at any Old Home Celebration, which shows what part of the town appeals to the new comers or visitors as well as to many residents.

Passed away August 17th, about 6 A. M.; he has been ill for a year or two, having had a slight shock which left him in a feeble condition. About a week before he died he began to fail, and became quite delirious at times. He passed away quietly without a struggle.

He was born in Windsor, Aug. 22d, 1848, and came here with his parents in 1849; most of his life has been spent in town. He was a man well known in this vicinity and well liked by those who knew him. He was the last of the family, having buried his aged mother a year or so ago.

Funeral from his late residence on Monday afternoon. Rev. D. Salmond officiated. A large attendance at the funeral, quite a number from out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bennett of Manchester visited her sister, Mrs. Crombie, the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby and two children, from Somerville, Mass., called on the Tafts the past week.

Mr. Warren of "River Crest farm" is putting in an engine and pump to raise water from the river to his house and barn, at quite an expense. We hope he will realize his expectations.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

Thirty Years Together

Thirty years of association—think of it. How the merit of a good thing stands out in that time—or the worthlessness of a bad one. So there's no guesswork in this evidence of Thos. Ariss, Concord, Mich., who writes: I have used Dr. King's New Discovery for 30 years, and it's the best cough and cold cure I ever used." Once it finds entrance in a home you can't pry it out. Many families have used it forty years. It's the most infallible throat and lung medicine on earth. Unequaled for lagrippe, hay fever, croup, quinsy or sore lungs Price 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Each Eye is examined separately and fitted with the lens it requires when you come to us. This is one advantage you get over the ready-made glasses, which are made to sell and not to correct eye troubles.

Don't be reckless with your eyes. They certainly deserve the best care that can be had.

Don't let some slick tongued fakir who peddles glasses thro' the country come into your home and sell you a pair of glasses. They know how to fit a glass that makes you see splendidly to-day, or a few days, but it is an unnatural lens and the eye cannot stand up under the strain. Then you turn to your peddler, —he is gone.

WE ARE HERE TO STAY! And we have hundreds of satisfied customers to refer you to.

TOWN HALL BLOCK

Rev. G. M. Curl

Rev. George M. Curl, pastor of the Methodist church in Claremont, and a former pastor of the Antrim M. E. church, was found dead in bed in his room at the Phenix hotel, Concord, last Thursday morning.

Mr. Curl went to Concord Wednesday night for the purpose of going to The Weirs, where the Methodist camp-meeting is in progress. He took rooms at the Phenix and was apparently in his usual health, when he retired, leaving word to be called for the early train.

On getting no response to repeated rappings, the door was forced and Mr. Curl was found dead, the cause as given by Dr. Grafton, who was called, being heart desease.

Rev. Mr. Curl was a native of Iowa. His first conference membership was in Northwest Iowa Conference, and after holding three pastorates under that jurisdiction he came east and served as supply in New Ipswich in 1878, and in Antrim in 1879-80. Transferring to the New Hampshire conference he continued for a year as pastor at Antrim then was appointed to Littleton, remaining there three years and also filled pastorates in Claremont, Great Falls and at St. Johnsbury in the Vermont conference.

He served Baker Memorial church in Concord, in 1892, and remained the limit of time allowed by the conference. His work in Concord was singularly successful and it was during his pastorate that the present church edifice at the corner of North State and Warren streets was built and dedicated.

He was appointed presiding elder of the Concord district in 1896, serving in that district for one year, and later was appointed presiding elder of the Manchester district, both of which positions he filled with great ability.

After leaving Concord he filled a pastorate in Lawrence, Mass., and his last charge was his old parish in Claremont.

Mr. Curl served during the war as a private in Co. H, Forty-fourth Iowa volunteers, and in Concord he became affiliated with E. E. Sturtevant post. At the time of his death he was chaplain of the department of New Hampshire, G. A. R., having been chosen to the position on the death of Rev. E. R. Wilkins.

His wife and theee sons, Royal, Charles and Mervin survive.

The body was taken to Claremont where services were held on Sunday afternoon, Rev. R. T. Wolcott, district superintendent, officiating, assisted by Rev. Drs. Roscoe Sanderson and D. C. Babcock.

He was one of the first Past Grands of Waverley Lodge, No. 59 I. O. O. F., and had always kept his membership with this lodge. Past Grand Morris Burnham, and a dear friend of the deceased, was sent to attend the funeral as representative of Waverley Lodge.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S Favorite Remedy

The one sure cure for The Kidneys, Liver and Blood

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

Their Representative

A Story for Labor Day Showing a New Way of Ending a Strike

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"I'm sorry, miss, to have to tell you that I'm going to leave you."

A girl of twenty, whose red and white complexion bespoke Irish blood, stood before her mistress, fingering her apron with evident embarrassment.

"Why, Maggie, what have I done?"

"Nothing, miss."

"Then why are you going to leave me?"

"Well, miss—the truth is—why, miss—I'm going to be married."

"Oh, I see. Who are you going to marry, Maggie?"

"Jim Doolan, that works in the Ainsworth factory."

"The Ainsworth factory?"

"Yes, miss."

Margaret Etheridge, the girl's mistress, was interested in the Ainsworth company as a stockholder and through its president and manager, Richard Ainsworth.

"I'm sorry to lose you, Maggie," said Miss Etheridge, "but if you are going to be married, you can depend upon me to give you whatever you will need in the way of clothes, household linen and other things, to enable you to set up housekeeping."

"Thank you, miss."

Maggie was married and went to live with her husband in a small suit of rooms. Jim's wages were not very large, but the couple made them do very well till the first child came, when they were obliged to take a backward step financially by incurring a considerable bill for medical attendance. Then Jim was taken sick, and that increased the indebtedness.

Meanwhile Richard Ainsworth had been pressing an unsuccessful suit with Miss Etheridge. He had greatly increased the output of the Ainsworth company since he took the management, and to the book value of the stock 50 per cent had been added. Indeed, Richard Ainsworth had come to be considered one of the smartest young business men in the state. But there were differences between him and Margaret Etheridge that prevented her from accepting him. Those business qualifications for which the world applauded him did not appeal to her. She did not understand the methods by which that silent partner, capital, was made to absorb the lion's share of the profits of a business. She saw the operatives—men, women and children—going to the works early in the morning and, having worked hard all day, return in the evening to their shabby homes to repeat the process day after day. The were working to pay dividends on her stock, while she, who did nothing, lived in affluence. It seemed to her that there was something wrong. She appealed to Richard Ainsworth for an explanation, but his explanations were not satisfactory. His reasons convinced her, but her heart, her sense of justice, were unmoved by them.

"Why can't you pay your operatives enough to enable them to live more comfortably?" she asked Mr. Ainsworth.

"Because of competition."

"Explain."

"Other concerns would be able to undersell and we would be forced out of business."

"Why not appropriate a portion of the dividends, which are enormous, to the operatives?"

"Because of several reasons, the most pertinent of which is that the stockholders would object."

"I am a stockholder. You may cut my dividends in half, giving one half to the operatives."

"You are one among hundreds; the rest, instead of being willing to give up their profits, are howling for more. My dear Margaret, you don't understand such things."

"Does anybody understand them?"

"Yes, one—Providence."

One day Maggie Doolan sent a pitiful message to Margaret, scrawled in pencil on a bit of paper, saying that she was ill, her husband was away at his work all day, the children had no one to take care of them, and Jim's wages were pledged for debts. Besides this, there was nothing to eat in the house. Margaret immediately sallied forth with a well filled purse and, stopping at the provision shops by the way, carried comfort to the distressed. As she was coming away, Jim came in with a rueful countenance and, throwing himself into a chair, dropped his head in his arms on a table.

"What is it, Jim?" asked his wife in a frightened tone.

"The strike is on," was the mournful reply.

"Oh, heavens!" cried Maggie in dismay.

"What are the hands striking for?" asked Margaret Etheridge.

"Ten per cent advance all around."

"And do you mean that you will have no income whatever till the matter is settled?"

"I do."

"How much do you earn?"

"Twenty-one dollars a week."

"Very well. Every weekly pay day I will send you a check for that amount."

Margaret left, leaving a relieved and thankful household behind her.

The strike proved to be a prolonged one. One evening while it was in progress Richard Ainsworth and Margaret Etheridge were sitting in her home discussing the matter.

"Why do you not give the men what they demand?" she asked.

"For a number of reasons—first, if I do within six months they will make another demand, and so on until we pay them so much that we can't manufacture at a profit. This will drive us out of business and them out of employment."

"Why can't a compromise be effected?"

"The question is a difficult one to answer. If these men were represented by one of their own number a compromise might be effected. But they are represented by one or more persons whose interest I don't consider their interest. The questions between the laborer and the capitalist are those constantly arising between partners in business. Whenever the interests of persons and peoples are intertwined there can only be loss to both in a want of harmony. When the capitalist is unjust to the laborer he in the long run injures his business. When the laborer is excessive in his demands upon the capitalist he injures the business in which he is a partner."

Ainsworth had scarcely spoken the last word when there was evidence of a commotion without. Some one cried:

"Hurrah for the strike sympathizer!"

Ainsworth and Margaret looked at each other wonderingly.

"Where's the leddy? Come out!"

There was a ring at the door bell. Margaret chose to answer the summons herself. A workman stood at the door, who, pulling respectfully the rim of his tattered hat, said to her:

"There's a lot of us here, miss, that hearin' ye have contributed to the strikers' fund by paying Jim Doolan's family his weekly wages, have come to thank ye. Would ye mind showin' yourself on the porch?"

Margaret went out and saw a crowd of upturned faces, lighted only by a street lamp.

"Three cheers for the leddy strike sympathizer!" cried the man who had brought her out.

The cheers were given with a will, and when quiet was restored Margaret said:

"I can't say exactly that I am a strike sympathizer, but I can say that I am a sympathizer with you and your families. I am a stockholder in the Ainsworth company, and if by throwing off all my dividends except what I need to keep body and soul together I could end this strike I would do so."

"Good for you!" "Let the other stockholders do the same!" "For God's sake, end it!"

"How would you like to make me your representative to confer in your name with the management of the Ainsworth company with a view to a compromise?"

"Bully!" "Go ahead!" "Do't!"

Margaret's introducer held up his hand for silence and said:

"All in favor of Miss Etheridge representing us say aye."

There was a wild shout of ayes. No noes were called for or given.

"Very well," said Margaret. "Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock I will be ready to receive a committee of men who are workers, men who have been supporting their families by their labor in the works of the Ainsworth company. Don't send any one else. If you do I shall decline to act for you."

She withdrew, followed by wild shouts from laborers delighted with the novel plan of endeavoring to secure their demands through a stockholder and a woman. In ten minutes more the neighborhood was deserted.

The next morning Richard Ainsworth was at Margaret's home some time before the appearance of the committee and was shown into a room by himself, ready to decide upon any proposition that might be made. When the committee arrived they were placed in the drawing room. Margaret entered and said:

"Make your demand."

"Our only demand," replied the spokesman, "is for 10 per cent advance."

"If the raise is granted, how long before a demand will be made for another raise?"

The committee conferred and finally agreed to pledge themselves that no new demand should be made within two years.

"How is the management of the company to be assured that you will keep this pledge?"

After another consultation the spokesman said, "Every operative will sign a written pledge to you, and you can give your word to the management."

"Very well. Wait here."

Withdrawing, Margaret went into the room occupied by the manager and made him the proposition.

Now Richard Ainsworth had a shrewd head in more ways than one. He could see an opportunity when it presented itself, and he saw one now.

"Margaret," he said, "the terms are accepted on one condition."

"What is it?"

"That you make an additional pledge."

"What pledge?"

"To become my wife."

Margaret was not ready to give a definite answer. She tried to satisfy him with an evasion. All to no purpose. He stood firm as a rock. Either the stipulation must be introduced into the agreement or the strike must go on. Finally she put out her hand and turned away her face. Ainsworth took the hand and sealed the contract with a kiss.

That night there was a demonstration about Margaret Etheridge's home and nothing would satisfy the demonstration except carrying their representatives in a chair on their shoulders around the factory and home again.

ECCENTRIC WAGNER.

A Glimpse of the Famous Composer In One of His Moods.

Richard Wagner, the composer, needed a good deal of managing, and Frau Cosima was always tactful, according to Judith Gautier's "Wagner at Home." When the author hesitated before accepting Wagner's invitation to an excursion she says Frau Cosima made signs to her and, coming nearer, said in a low voice: "Do not refuse, he would be angry. And let him manage it all; let him take the lead, if you do not wish to grieve him."

Later on she gives another curious scene: "Behind the house, in that court which formed a part of the garden, and from which the carriage drive started, there was a high swing, which the children were allowed to use very carefully, and with which the older people sometimes amused themselves. One day Mme. Cosima was sitting on the narrow board. Wagner offered to start the swing and give her a good flight through the air. All went well for a time, but, little by little, the motion became more rapid; higher and still higher went the swing. In vain Mme. Cosima begged for mercy. Carried away by a kind of frenzy, the master paid no attention and the incident began to have a terrifying effect.

"Cosima grew white; her hold relaxed, and she was about to fall. 'Do you not see that she is fainting?' I cried, throwing myself toward Wagner. He grew pale in his turn, and the danger was quickly averted. But, as the poor woman continued to be dizzy and trembling, the master concluded it would be wise to create a diversion. He ran rapidly toward the house, and by the aid of the shutters, the moldings and protections of the stones, he climbed nimbly up the side and, reaching the balcony of the floor above, leaped over it.

"He had obtained the desired effect, but in replacing one evil by another. Trembling with anxiety, Cosima turned to me, saying under her breath: 'Above all things, do not notice him; do not look surprised, or you can never tell where he will end.'"

A Wig and a Tragedy.

It is just as well that our enthusiasm for oriental curiosities should be tempered by discretion. Eastern antiquities may be picturesque and with all the charm of mystery, but at the same time they may have a history that, if known, would consign them to the stove without benefit of clergy. Here is a story bearing upon the point and with its obvious moral. A young and extremely pretty girl went to a fancy dress ball in Chinese costume. The triumph of her makeup was a real oriental wig, and she wore it proudly. Some time after a strange mark appeared on her forehead, and this was treated as a trifling skin affection. But it refused to disappear; in fact, it grew larger, and then the specialist was consulted. It was leprosy.—Argonaut.

Color of Lightning.

The color of lightning is almost entirely due to the nature of the substance in its track that is made incandescent. The blue, red, purple or silver tints, which are ordinarily much more brilliantly marked in tropical countries than they ever are in this latitude, are due to the same circumstance as that which produces the color designedly communicated to the light of different kinds of fireworks. Each different foreign ingredient that floats in the air has its own proper hue, which it can communicate to the lightning. The vapor of iron has one kind of shine and the vapor of sulphur another.—Harper's Weekly.
