Antrim's Greatest.

A SENSATION OF A NATURE STIRRING OUR QUIET TOWN.

A Strange Man is Found Dead in an Unoccupied House in a Lonely Section of Town of Antrim.

Of all the sensations the quiet little town of Antrim has had in the past few years, we think the present one exceeds them all. Anyway, for a few hours excitement ran at nearly fever heat; not so much when the body of the dead man was found in the unoccupied house on the farm of Charles F. Whitney, some two and a half miles from the village, but when it was given out Tuesday afternoon at the conclusion of an autopsy that the man did not die from natural causes neither did he commit suicide. There seemed but one conclusion to arrive at and that being that he was foully dealt with. Upon this fact matters hinge and unless something new develops it is probable that further steps will be taken along this line, although as far as learned no deffinite plan has yet been outlined.

It was Sunday afternoon when it was reported by men at Melendy's camp that one of their number had been missing for a week. The matter was reported to Selectman Lowe and he at once proceeded to investigate. It seems that just one week ago several from the camp filled up on something (not water) and in wanderiug down from the Branch one of the number got lost and was not seen by the men since. Upon inquiry he was last seen by Lewellyn Livingston who found him in his kitchen when he arose Monday morning, the man having made his way in during the night. He left and started towardi the camp. Nothing more till Sunday, when Messrs Lowe and Wheeler went to the Whitney place where the body was found in a front room; he had evidently been dead several days. The matter was at once reported to those in authority; later the body was removed to the tomb. He was known in this vicinity as George Lee but it is believed that this was not his right name.

Monday night, Medical Referee Greeley and County Solicitor Wason arrived from Nashua, and viewed the remains. Tuesday, these same gentlemen, accompanied by Dr. Congdon and Detective Hildreth, were in town. An autopsy was held, conducted by Drs. Greeley and Congdon of Nashua and Dr. Warner of Antrim, with the result as stated above.

In the afternoon, Sheriff Doane arrived from Manchester, and with Deputy Sheriffs Perkins and Dutton, who were already here, began investigations. At nightfall while no arrests had been made, yet four men had been brought in from the camp to tell what they knew of the matter. Only one man was held over night, he being Allen Knapp, the others after being questioned were let go.

To-day, Wednesday, the investigations will be continued, and something of importance may develop in a few hours that will throw much light on the matter.

Already the case has assumed proportions sufficient to warrant the closest investigations. It is hoped by all that the matter will be probed to the bottom, and that justice will be done and the law and people satisfied.

Russia's Big Man, Witte.

Sergius Witte, ex-premier of Russia and head of the peace embassy, is one of the few influential men of the empire who has risen from the people. Originally a railway clerk, he has worked his way up and is a practical man of affairs, wielding great moral and intellectual force in Russian officialdom.

Witte's role in Russia is unique. He is a Russian of Dutch descent and has had the manliness to quarrel with the czar and with the clique which is all powerful in the palace. While affiliating with the autocrats, he has not failed to keep a skilled hand upon the pulse of the masses from which he sprung. He knows the temper of the people and long ago arrived at the conclusion that absolutism is doomed.

The climax in Witte's career came when he stubbornly opposed the czar's far eastern policy. He opposed the Russian plans of conquest in Korea and Manchuria, the seizure of Port Arthur and in general every act tending to provoke Japan. Instead of making an enemy of the Japanese he advised the czar to cultivate their friendship. He received humiliation and a loss of position for his pains.

Witte has always been a sturdy foe to reaction. He denounced the Kishineff massacres, defeated for a time the Russification of the Finnish army and saved the universities from persecution. He believes in the people and, what is more, stands for the moral rights of the people as derived from a higher law than that of the backward empire. If Russia is to be trusted because of the possibilities in her people, Sergius Witte is a representative to listen to and to look to as her guide. He has been pronounced the "living bridge between autocracy and constitutionalism, possibly the only bridge autocracy can cross safely."

The "Lid" In Canada.

Readers who are curious to know what goes to the making of a "wild political revel" among our northern neighbors are referred to the menu here quoted, which was recently enjoyed at a picnic given by a Liberal member of parliament to his constituents in London, Ont. The edibles, potables, etc., disposed of by, say, 5,000 voters and their families, were as follows:

25,000 sandwiches.
400 layer cakes.
100 angel cakes.
100 jelly rolls.
250 gallons vanilla ice cream.
800 dozen bananas.
15 barrels lemonade.
20 dozen ginger ale.
20 dozen lemon sour.
20 dozen ginger beer.
20 dozen sarsaparilla for the blood.
20 dozen soda water.
5,000 cigars.
5,000 bags of candies.

The spread looks very innocent to outsiders, but the opposition party press of the district took a different view and denounced the excursion in such terms as "orgie," "saturnalia" and "wild political revel." The sports indulged in were in keeping with the menu, and, with the exception of the cigars, the whole affair suggests a Sunday school outing. Evidently party feeling is very bitter or the "lid" is down very tight in the province of Ontario.

An American who has been abroad for some years is struck with the rage for putting handles to names which is now prevalent in this country. He observes that in his lifetime Daniel Webster was simply Mr. Webster and not "Senator" Webster. Not content with giving high political titles, many now have the custom of tacking on the name of the simplest offices and callings—as "councilman," "selectman," "forecaster," and even "conductor." In the highest official circles, both civil and military, titles are reserved for formal occasions, when they mean something.

Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, would probably find it much easier to get the world to accept with alacrity that new calendar of his if he would only insert two or three October days in every week of the summer months.

Yes, John Paul Jones at one time was in the Russian navy, but as that was over 100 years ago it cannot reflect upon his fame as an able fighter.

How Jake Won the Judge's Daughter

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1905, by Frank H. Sweet

Jake Allsbrook was the only industrious member of an improvident family, and the work of his early years was wasted on shiftless kinfolk, but in one way and another he had acquired a good education, first in public schools and then by reading all the useful books he could obtain. It was in a public school, before she was thought ready to send away to a private institution for young ladies, that he first met Edith Potter. That was before either of them understood the importance of social position.

Jake was good at boat building and good at many other things which the village people who looked down upon his family did not know. This morning he was at his workbench in a small building he had erected near a lake when he heard the sound of carriage wheels, followed presently by firm, ponderous footsteps coming around the end of the cabin. Looking up, he saw Judge Potter approaching.

"How do you do, Jake?" the judge said, advancing with gracious cordiality. "Always at work, it seems. Thought likely I would find you here. I want to have a talk with you."

Jake looked at him with questioning curiosity. It was Judge Potter, certainly, but why had he brought his social equality voice along? He had never wasted that upon him before.

"What a trim looking lot of boats you have here, Jake," the judge went on, without waiting for Jake to speak, "but never mind explaining about them, though. What I am here about is the steamer line. Would you mind going over some of the main points again?"

Jake stared, then laughed a little curtly.

"What's the use?" he said. "When I went to you about the matter I was in the first callow enthusiasm of the idea and did not realize the fool's quest I was on. Suppose we dismiss the subject altogether. I haven't money enough to get the invention patented, much less to start a steamboat line."

The judge picked up a shaving with the point of his cane and twirled it complacently.

"Sometimes an idea is worth more than capital," he observed, but with an odd look in his eyes. "Let me see. I think you said a hundred thousand?"

"Yes," Jake found himself saying, with reluctant eagerness. "My idea was a stock company capitalized at $100,000—that is, a hundred shares at $1,000 each. We should"— He paused abruptly and, in a sudden revulsion of feeling, took up a hammer as though to resume work. "But excuse me for allowing myself to be carried away, judge. I've thought over the scheme until it has grown very real and personal. It's a sure thing if one can go into it. I can't. Even the few hundred I had saved were sunk in my railroad survey down the shore."

The judge smiled indulgently.

"That's all right, Jake," he said. "Profitable enterprises usually have a combination of brains and capital. We are ready to furnish the capital. In brief, I will take thirty shares and my brother and a friend fifteen shares each. That will give us a controlling vote. Then I'm sure Lawyer Blake and three or four others will take from five to ten each. There will be no difficulty in floating the stock."

Jake dropped his hammer.

"Do you really mean," he asked huskily, "that you intend to go into this thing?"

"Of course." Then a little hurriedly, "I was rather—abrupt with you before because—because I make it a business rule never to go into anything without ample time for deliberation. Understand? Come to my house at 3 o'clock this afternoon and we will fix up the papers. You will be superintendent and general manager."

"Wait a moment, judge," cried Jake as the visitor moved toward the door. "How do you dare to—to trust me? I have heard you say that all of my name were—well, thieves."

"Oh, tut, tut, boy!" That was in a moment of petulance. As to trusting you," an enigmatical smile twitching the corners of his mouth, "remember I have known you a good many years. And—er—I am really glad to be associated with the name." With that the judge turned away, chuckling and murmuring to himself, "I do believe the boy has not seen the paper yet."

Ten minutes later as Jake was mechanically putting his tools away he heard other footsteps coming around the cabin, this time light, nervous and hurried. Turning, he found himself face to face with Lawyer Blake.

"Good morning, Jake. Didn't I see Judge Potter leaving here just now? I hope it wasn't about the boat scheme I was considering."

"Yes, it was just that," Jake answered dryly; "about the boat scheme you refused to consider. He has arranged for shares enough to assure its success."

The lawyer's countenance fell.

"Too bad, too bad, too bad!" he muttered. "I had thought the matter over and decided upon that very thing myself. Well, if it's too late I suppose there is still the railroad scheme?"

"Yes," faintly.

"Well," more briskly, "I will undertake capitalizing that, then. Come to my office this afternoon and we will arrange the details. We will need you for a general oversight of the business, of course."

An hour later he was in the postoffice, still dazed and bewildered. His two or three letters were read and slipped into his pocket, then he opened the county paper. Almost the first paragraph was one with the startling headlines:

"Coming Home With Millions of Gold. Mr. John Allsbrook, uncle of our esteemed fellow citizen, Mr. Jake Allsbrook, is probably on his way home with a ton or more of gold. We notice the name and his great success in a current Klondike paper."

Jake crumpled the paper contemptuously. That explained the whole wretched business. Five minutes later he was in the presence of Judge Potter.

"There has been a mistake," he began grimly. "My Uncle John is not"—

The judge interrupted him blandly. It never occurred to him that there might be a mistake.

"Oh, tut, tut, boy! I see you have the paper. I hope you don't think a man of my position is influenced by a thing like that. Three o'clock, remember. And— Oh, yes, we are going to have a few friends in this evening and we wish you to join us. Mrs. Potter and Edith both desire it."

Jake murmured something and allowed the judge to bow him from the room. This was more stupendous than all the rest. He could grasp the magnitude of a few thousand dollars, but an invitation to the inner circle of social life, into the very heart of the social fortress, was incomprehensible.

But, in spite of his bewilderment, he found his way to Lawyer Blake's office and listened to another indignant protest against the aspersion of being influenced by a vulgar newspaper report. At last he retired, baffled, obliged to allow matters to take their course.

For many months the good people of the village looked for the coming of John Allsbrook and his millions in vain; but, long before they ceased looking, Jake Allsbrook had won the judge's daughter and was accounted one of the most prosperous men in all the north lake country.

Cattle King Miller.

In his "Gold Hunters of California" Thomas H. Farish tells some interesting anecdotes of the men of the early days.

Speaking of Henry Miller, a western cattle king, Mr. Farish says that none knew better than he the value of a reliable, efficient man. "Once, on one of his Kern county ranches, he had a foreman with whom he quarreled. The foreman said, 'If it were not that you are a smaller man than I, I would beat you half to death.' At this Miller threw off his coat and went for the man. The foreman succeeded in giving him a good trouncing, then demanded a settlement, which was made. That all over with, Miller apologized and hired the man over again, with an advance in wages. He knew he had a good man."

Another story of Miller: "I remember Miller once at Firebaugh's ferry, on the San Joaquin river, when he was buying so much land. It was at breakfast and a man called 'Hog' Johnson began to criticise Miller's purchases, when Miller turned to him and said: 'Hog, you knows dere iss more peoples born into de world effery year dan dies out of it, don't you?' 'Yes,' admitted Hog. 'Vell, dey all hat to lif off de land, and dere iss no more land borned effery year.'"

An Unpolished Reflection.

John Philpot Curran, the eminent Irish barrister and orator, once met his match in a pert, jolly, keen eyed Paddy, who acted as hostler at a large stable and who was up as witness in a case of a horse buying dispute.

Curran much desired to break down the credibility of this witness and thought to do it by making the man contradict himself by tangling him up in a network of adroitly framed questions, but all to no avail. The hostler was a companion to Sam Weller. His good common sense and his equanimity and good nature were not to be overturned.

By and by Curran, in towering wrath, belched forth, as not another counsel would have dared to do in the presence of the court:

"Sirrah, you are incorrigible. The truth is not to be got from you, for it is not in you. I see the villain in your face."

"I' faith, yer honor," said the witness, with the utmost simplicity and truth and honesty, "my face must be mighty clane and shinin' indade if it can reflect like that."

A Physician healed, now prescribes it daily.

DR. GEO. EWING, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I have been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced to use Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles I was entirely relieved and cured. I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles, for I can honestly state I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success."

Wm. F. Dickey, Town Hall Drug Store,

Kept His Word.

The day had been a heavy one for the Blankshire rifle volunteers. Under a sweltering sun they had marched till their feet blistered and they were weary in the extreme.

At last Private Hopkins "fell out."

"I won't walk another step," he declared.

"Come along, man!" cried his captain. "The invading force is known to be in the neighborhood, and you'll be captured if you stay behind."

But nothing would induce the valiant Hopkins to move another step; therefore the regiment went on without him.

They had barely passed out of view, however, before Private Hopkins was observed to be pounding after his comrades at a speed which would have done a professional athlete credit, a maddened bull close behind him evidently supplying the necessary motive for haste.

He reached them safely, the bull was headed off, and all was well.

"I thought you said you wouldn't walk another step?" remarked the captain.

"Great Scott!" cried Hopkins, mopping his fevered brow. "You don't call that walking, do you?"—Birmingham (England) Post.

Fooling Mother.

Most boys and girls think they are fooling mother. I used to think that way. It is the same way with all mothers. It is a good deal easier to fool father than mother. Mother doesn't say as much as father, but she sees twice as far. Just because mother doesn't jump on to you every time you have done something wrong it is no sign that you have her fooled. She is just giving you enough rope so you will hang yourself. Mother is a whole lot wiser than she gets credit for being. That pleasant smile she gives you when you are putting up some fairy tale would make you feel like a three cent piece with a hole in it if you could only see what was behind it. Mother fools you every day in the week, and it's a glorious thing for you that she does. She not only fools you, but she fools father too. Father is always wise and throwing out the impression that he knows something. Mother just goes about her business and says nothing, but she is thinking a whole lot all the time. The next time you attempt to fool mother stop and think a couple of times before getting on the leg. It may save poor mother the humiliation of thinking what a triple plated chump she has for a son.—Osborne (Kan.) Farmer.

An Endless Journey.

Most of us have probably speculated, at one time or another, what would happen if a hole were bored right through the earth and one were to drop a stone into it, and a scientific man gives his views on this puzzling question. "The stone," he says, "would fall with increasing speed to the center of the earth, where it would have attained a rate of nearly 200 miles a minute. Its momentum would carry it at a constantly reducing speed through the remaining half of its journey, until by the time it appeared at the antipodean end of the hole it would have come to a standstill. It would then begin to drop again and would perform exactly the same journey on its return to the starting point. Thus it would continue to travel backward and forward from one end of the earth to the other practically forever."

They Were Stopped.

"I want those eggs stopped!" shouted the tragedian, striding to the footlights.

"Well, you're stoppin' 'em, ain't you?" asked the boy in the gallery, soaking him with another.—Houston Post.

The graft in Philadelphia is said to have amounted to at least $70,000,000 in five years. The whirlwind of reform which has struck the Quaker town may be only locking the stable after the horse is stolen. But, then, again, there are millions left, and the thieves are not all dead.

They All

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 246 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O, writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at Dickey's drug store; price 50c.

ANTRIM CENTRE.

The Ladies' Aid society will hold their annual Apron Sale and entertainment in the vestry of the church, Friday evening, August 18. A good entertainment will be provided and all are cordially invited.

A Touching Story

is the saving from death, of the baby girl of G. A. Eyler, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 11 months, our little girl was in declining health, with serious Throat Trouble, and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair, when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve a cough or cold. At Dickey's drug store; 20c and $1.00 guaranteed. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure
Digests what you eat.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 9. 1905.

Entered at the Post-office at Antrim as second-class matter.

"If we could only progress as fast as we can retrogress, how easy it would be to become great."

If you want the local, Antrim news before it's a week or two old, you'll have to take THE REPORTER,—no other paper has it.

Now is the time of year when the summer visitor is in the country in force, and really for the next few weeks is when the country is at its best and prettiest.

The Polander who murdered his wife in Belmont, Mass., seems to be giving the state authorities a bit of trouble in his apparent effort to convince them that he is an insane person.

It has been quite a warm summer, so much so that even the politician has kept pretty well in the shade. However, at almost any time it would not be surprising to learn of quiet moves being made along different lines.

A little ripple of excitement is in the air, and how quickly a crowd of people will gather on the street. After the curiosity has been lulled, it is remarkable how quickly these same people get out of sight. Did you ever notice it?

As will be noticed, in another column, under Antrim Centre heading, Rev. O. M. Lord has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Congregational church in this town to take effect September 1st. Mr. Lord has taken great interest in the affairs of his church during the five years he has been its pastor, and also has been much interested in the affairs of the town. Many there are who will regret to read of Mr. Lord's resignation.

Jerry Lower of Keene was in court last week upon two accounts, one for beating his wife and the other for abusing his horse. For the first offence he was fined $5 and costs, and for the second $10 and costs.—Exchange.

This item reads well in passing, if one does not stop to reflect. A man is fined less for beating his wife than for abusing his horse! Well, let us hope there was some good reason for such sentence, and that the judge was an impartial one.

Fiendish Suffering

is often caused by sores, ulcers and cancers, that eat away your skin. "I feel," of Flat Rock, Mich., says: "I have used Bucklen's Arnica Salve, for Ulcers, Sores and Cancers. Annual Methodist Fair.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church held their annual mid-summer fair and entertainment at Town hall on Wednesday last, afternoon and evening. The weather proved good, and with the usual amount of hard work that the ladies had put into it, the results were very gratifying.

In the afternoon was held the fair proper, with sale of fancy articles of utility and beauty, besides tables of home-made candies, cakes, mystery packages, etc., and ice cream.

In the evening the sale was continued, and in addition was given for entertainment "Aunt Jerusha's Quilting Party." Appleton's orchestra furnished music. The several parts in the "Party" were well taken and enjoyed by a large audience.

The ladies having in charge the details of the fair and entertainment have every reason to be proud of the success of the occasion, which crowned their earnest efforts and hours of hard work. The net receipts from the fair, including all sources, was $128.42

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Annual Field Day of Hillsboro County Pomona Grange.

Hillsboro county pomona grange held its annual field meeting at Pine Island park, Goffe Falls, Friday, Aug. 4. There was an address by Miss Ethel R. Tucker and addresses by master H. O. Hadley and Rev. John Thorpe.

The afternoon program consisted of reports by officers of the state and subordinate granges, a piano solo by Miss Bertha Hubbard and addresses by Richard Pattee, George R. Drake, A. A. Hixon and C. W. Childs.

It was estimated that over 300 grangers were in attendance, and the meeting was pronounced one of the most successful outings ever held under the auspices of the pomona grange.

Letter to Sheriff Perkins,
Antrim, N. H.

Dear Sir: You are interested in the prosperity of your town. You can contribute to it materially, and give it a far more prosperous look at the same time.

Perhaps the public property needs a good coat of paint.

Devoe will supply that coat with two-thirds of the number of gallons required of any other. Devoe will last twice as long as any other. Devoe is all paint and full-measure. Devoe is the strongest paint known. Devoe will take care of the property, in the long run, for half the money required by any other.

The reason is stated above: Devoe is all paint and full-measure: the strongest paint known.

E. D. Jewell, Corry, Pa, painted his house 5 years ago with a mixed paint; took 14 gallons. Last spring he repainted with Devoe; bought 14 gallons and had 4 left. Saved $15 to $20, for painting costs two or three times as much as the paint.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & CO.,

BENNINGTON

Lake George a Minature Fairy-land.

On the evening of Aug. 5th, a goodly company responded to the unique invitations issued by "Lakeview" to attend "The 2d Musical" given by the cottagers and their guests. Maple Farm, Brookside, Montview, Glenmere, Pine hurst, Dew Drop Inn and The Tall Pines were all there en masse. Also the guests from The Prescott House, Mt. Crotchet, who were conveyed by the proprietor, F. A. Prescott, in his mountain team, while from the Village one might have seen Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. Joslin, William Starrett, Allan Gerard and family, also Henry Wilson and wife, among the gathering.

Mr. Benjamin T. Freeman, the well known photographer, of Somerville, Mass., was a most delightful host, and the friends, upon arrival were conducted to rustic seats facing his hospitable and roomy cottage.

The spacious piazza had been converted into a picturesque stage. Evergreen and golden-rod entwined, American Beauty roses and garlands were swung from "post to pillar." Crimson draperies formed a most delightful background for the charming white gowns of the artists.

The scene was made brilliant by Japanese lanterns, while "Old Glory" waved its approval from above.

The Artistic programmes announced Gladys Geneva Libby, reader; Margaret Louise Foster, soprano soloist; Rupen Eksergian, violinist; Edwin Amos Freeman, flutest; Helen Belle Weeks, piano soloist; Fanny Bagden Freeman, piano soloist and accompanist; Little Master Le Von Eksergian in "wild indian" costume delighted the company by relating "How His Arrow Flew." Many encores testified to a most appreciative audience and the talent often graciously responded.

Ice-cream, from the well known, Taylor Farm, and cake, was the last number on the programme, being gracefully served by the young friends.

For a short time all were busy collecting Autographs, as ordered by the programmes, before all clustered around their host and hostess to warmly thank them for a most delightful evening, while the moon smiled down on gay farewells, as the groups started that they might be safely home before the midnight hour.

Carl B. Edmans was before Judge E. M. Smith in Peterboro Monday and pleaded guilty to bigamy, being bound over to the superior court, September term, at Manchester. Two Dyspeptics

If you are too fat it is because your food turns to fat instead of muscle—strength. If you are too lean the fat producing foods that you eat are not properly digested and assimilated.

Lean, thin, stringy people do not have enough Pepsin in the stomach, while fat people have too much Pepsin and not enough Pancreatine.

Kodol

contains all the digestive juices that are found in a healthy stomach, and in exactly those proportions necessary to enable the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all foods that may be eaten. Kodol is not only a perfect digestant, but it is a reconstructive, tissue building tonic as well. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation of the Heart and Constipation. You will like it.

THE SACRED BO TREE.

One of the Most Wonderful Natural Growths Ever Known.

In October, 1887, the sacred bo tree, at that time supposed to be the oldest living vegetable monument on the earth's surface, was uprooted and destroyed by a cyclone which swept over the island of Ceylon. The oldest written description of the sacred bo tree now in existence is that by the celebrated Chinese historian, Fa Hian, who visited the island and the sacred tree in the year 414 A. D. According to this learned Chinaman, the tree was at that time 702 years old, having been planted in the year 288 before our era by King Devinpiatissa.

As soon as it was known throughout the island that the tree had been destroyed by the fury of the elements great crowds of mourners gathered around its "sacred remains" and held regular funeral services for two or three weeks. After the season of mourning was over the tree was cut into proper lengths, each piece wrapped separately in white cloth and cremated with the same funeral rites which would have been given a member of the royal family.

So perished the sacred bo tree, one of the most wonderful natural growths known to the world—a tree which had been worshiped daily, one might almost say hourly, for 2,175 years.

THE CHOICE OF MATES.

Artificial Matrimonial Selection Has Given Poor Results.

No one knows what type will be the best for survival in an unknown future environment. We often see the extinction of families of parents whom any physician would have pronounced ideal, but their children lacked resistance to the invasion of pathogenic organisms or there was some other defect which made them easy targets for climatic causes of physical decay.

On the other hand, we quite often find that parents below par physically have fine families. The curious unions which take place must be the result of laws such as we find in every biologic phenomenon. Man has the same instinct found in lower animals to select a mate who is more or less different from himself.

Should like types mate, their common characteristics may be so exaggerated as to be harmful and the line perish. It is an instinct of those of great intelligence to marry those of less than the average, for the offspring revert to the better average. It is very evident that if we try to improve the race intellectually by the marriage of like types we will violate the natural law upon which our existence is based. Artificial matrimonial selection has been tried, though the results were disastrous.—American Medicine.

Lord Roberts told the American team of marksmen at their farewell dinner in London that West Point was the finest military college in the world. As Lord Roberts' reputation for veracity never has been impeached, we must conclude that he is right.

For the thousandth time the health authorities are announcing the discovery that mosquitoes are responsible for yellow fever. What's the use of talking so much? Why don't they get out and "swat" the mosquitoes?

Hay Fever for 27 Years.

Well Known New England Woman Cured of Hay Fever—Cure Was Lasting.

The thousands of discouraged people who dread the approach of summer because they have hay fever and cannot find any relief from it, will read with interest and gratitude the following statement from Helen S. Williams of Mansfield, Mass.

"For 27 years, from the month of August until heavy frost, I have been afflicted with hay fever, growing worse and worse each year, until of late years I was unable to attend to my work during that period.

"Last summer I fortunately gave Hyomei a trial, and I am happy to say that it entirely cured me, and I have had no occurrence of the disease since."

This letter is only one of many that have come to the proprietors of Hyomei, and the results following this treatment have been so remarkable that it is proposed at the annual convention of hay fever sufferers to recommend Hyomei.

By breathing the germ-killing and healing balsams of Hyomei, anyone can have at any moment of the day, either in their home or office, a climate like that of the White Mountains.

The complete outfit costs but $1, extra bottles 50 cents. W. F. Dickey agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without benefit.

Backache, "The Blues"

Both Symptoms of Organic Derangement in Women—Thousands of Sufferers Find Relief.

How often do we hear women say: "It seems as though my back would break," or "Don't speak to me, I am all out of sorts?" These significant remarks prove that the system requires attention.

Backache and "the blues" are direct symptoms of an inward trouble which will sooner or later declare itself. It may be caused by diseased kidneys or some uterine derangement. Nature requires assistance and at once, and Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound instantly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women. It has been the standby of intelligent American women for twenty years, and the ablest specialists agree that it is the most universally successful remedy for woman's ills known to medicine.

The following letters from Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Cotrely are among the many thousands which Mrs. Pinkham has received this year from those whom she has relieved.

Surely such testimony is convincing.

Mrs. J. G. Holmes, of Larimore, North Dakota, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have suffered everything with backache and womb trouble—I let the trouble run on until my system was in such a condition that I was unable to be about, and then it was I commenced to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If I had only known how much suffering I would have saved, I should have taken it months sooner—for a few weeks' treatment made me well and strong. My backaches and headaches are all gone and I suffer no pain at my menstrual periods, whereas before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered intense pain."

Mrs. Emma Cotrely, 109 East 12th Street, New York City, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I feel it my duty to tell all suffering women of the relief I have found in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I commenced taking the Compound I suffered everything with backaches, headaches, menstrual and ovarian troubles. I am completely cured and enjoy the best of health, and I owe it all to you."

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any substitute.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN.

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., her advice is free and cheerfully given to every ailing woman who asks for it. Her advice and medicine have restored to health more than one hundred thousand women.

OLD TIME DENTISTRY.

Queer Instruments In Harvard Dental School's Collection.

Like many other of the "new" professions, dentistry is a very old one. It is known that 400 years before the beginning of the Christian era Egyptian dentists filled teeth with gold, but no trace of their methods of doing their work has ever been found. Aesculapius, the patron of physicians, was the first famous dentist in Roman history, and the old Romans used a toothpick very much like the little wooden one that is made today. The Arabians ages ago produced a dentifrice, but it soon seemed to be very generally used.

The story of dentistry is told in the instruments it has employed. As they are known today they had their beginning in the sixteenth century, but their evolution has been slow. In the Harvard Dental school in Boston there is a collection of instruments used by dentists in the first half of the last century. One of the formidable tools it includes is what was called a key, doubtless from its peculiar shape, which was used for extracting teeth, the process being to slowly and painfully twist and pry the offending molar out of its place. In order that no mistake should be made the dentist began operations by hammering and prodding one tooth after another with a sort of bludgeon until he had satisfied himself—not to mention the tortured patient—that he had found the most sensitive one and therefore the most likely candidate for extraction.

The grandfathers of the delicate steel tools that lie in rows on the modern dentist's table were small in number, but large in awfulness. There are in the Harvard collection chisels and mallets, rude forceps for removing the teeth, miniature crowbars used to repair cavities for filling, files for sharpening the cutting and grinding surfaces of teeth and one particularly horrid instrument, known as the pelican, with which teeth were "lifted."

How rapidly and recently dentistry has become one of the important sciences appears in the fact that in the middle of the last century blacksmiths were doing their best—or worst—to relieve the victims of the toothache, while today institutions like the Harvard Dental school attract students from all over the world. Besides, while it was sure torture to go to the dentist in the so called "good old days," such a visit now is comparatively comfortable, so far has the profession gone in the direction of performing its operations without causing pain.

BITS FROM THE WRITERS.

There is nothing in life worth making a secret of—except one's income.—Seton Merriman.

Civilization means universal civility, and to be civil to everybody argues a great power of telling lies.—Eden Phillpotts.

How exquisite in life is the art of not seeing many things and of forgetting many that have been seen!—James Lane Allen.

Truisms, whether they lie in the depths of thought or on the surface, are at any rate the pearls of experience.—George Meredith.

Have you never observed that if you conscientiously neglect to do your work it somehow manages to get done without you?—Henry Harland.

Relations, as somebody said, are disagreeable acquaintances inflicted upon us by Providence. But it is no use losing one's temper about what they say. It only pleases them.—Richard Bagot.

An Interesting Experiment.

A vessel containing a certain white powder is placed upon the table, when the operator advances, waving his wand and uttering some magic words coined by himself, when, lo, of a sudden the room is lighted up with a brilliant light, so effulgent that it dims the eyes of the spectators. The secret is this: The powder is composed of equal weights of loaf sugar and chlorate of potash, separately reduced to fine powder and then well mixed together. This is placed in a cup, and when the powder is touched with the least drop of sulphuric acid it will instantly burst into a flame. The end of the glass rod should be dipped in the acid immediately before use.

Carefully Led Up To.

"Yonder," said the party of the first part, "is the house in which I was born. We lived on the first floor. McBooth Rantington, the great tragedian, occupied the upper apartments. He was not only a famous actor, but a singularly fortunate man."

"Then," responded the party of the second part, "you were born under a lucky star, eh?"

N. B.—The management begs to state that it considers this one of the most elaborately worked out jokes we have produced this season.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Woman's Presence.

What a consoler is woman! No presence but hers can win a man from his sorrow. The soldier becomes a lightsome boy at her feet; the anxious statesman smiles himself back to the free hearted youth beside her and the still and shaded countenance of care brightens beneath her influence, as the closed flower blooms in the sunshine.—American Queen.

IN THE BASQUE COUNTRY.

The Peculiar Language and Odd Customs of the People.

Of the strange scenes and customs of the Basque country a traveler writes: "I was struck by the way the women walked and carried themselves. A fat old woman with a huge tray on her head walked along at a swinging pace, shouting her waves meanwhile at the top of her voice. I saw a woman carrying on her head first of all a large tray of fruit (its size can be imagined when I tell you that it was afterward her stall). On the top of this were a basket of washing and a big umbrella to be used to cover the stall. Then in her left hand she carried a supplementary stall, and by the other she led a little child which could just reach the mother's hand by holding its own up as high as it could stretch.

"I was waiting once at a little wayside inn in the village of Ascain when I saw an old lady, followed by two great fat white pigs. They all three waddled over to the village pump, and then, procuring some water in a pail, the old lady proceeded to wash her charges. She cleaned them most assiduously—eyes, ears, tail, back, hind quarters and feet.

"There is a dignity of carriage about all the women in this country. I fancied it might be due to the fact that formerly, before the 'Code Napoleon' came into operation, the law obliged the firstborn, whether boy or girl, to inherit the patrimony and continue the head of the family, the husband taking the wife's name when the inheritor was a woman, thus giving the woman a perfect equality from her birth. The matrons are not less beautiful than the younger women.

"Quite unlike any other language is that of the Basques. Although when hearing the people talk a Spanish sound seems to be occasionally emitted, it is not really at all like Spanish. I was amused to find that 'no' is 'ess' in Basque, and when I asked what 'yes' was I thought at first the answer was 'na,' which would have been very curious, but it turned out to be 'ba,' with the 'b' softly pronounced."

A PERFUME THAT SMELLS.

The Awful Odor That Comes From Pure Attar of Roses.

The perfumer took from his desk a small flask of copper.

"In flasks like this attar of roses comes to us," he said. "Attar of roses is worth from $10 to $25 an ounce, according to the market. This flask is empty now, but in it a little odor still lingers."

The visitor smiled delightedly. He had never smelt pure attar of roses before. Now he unscrewed the stopper and, closing his eyes, with an ecstatic look he applied his nostrils to the flask.

But only for an instant. Then he threw back his head, twisting his features into a grimace of disgust, and he exclaimed:

"Garbage! Bone yards! Glue factories!"

The perfumer laughed.

"All essential oils smell like that," he said. "Yet no good perfume can be made without them."

He took from a shelf a cut glass jar filled with a thick, yellowish oil that looked like petroleum partly refined.

"In this jar," he said, "there are forty ounces of pure attar of roses worth over $500. You know how the attar smells alone. Now watch me make a rich perfume by adding things to it."

He put a few drops of the attar into a vial. He filled the vial with spirits of musk, another of orris, then one of neroli, one of rose, of violet, of orange, of vanilla; and, finally, the oil of cloves and bergamot.

"There," he said, "smell that. Isn't it exquisite?"

"Exquisite!" said the visitor.

"Well, without its foundation of the malodorous and costly attar of roses it wouldn't smell any better than a plate of soup."—New York Herald.

As a Clincher.

"I'm not so particular about speed, but I must have a gentle horse," repeated Mr. Green. "My wife wants to drive, you see. Will you warrant this horse to be safe?"

"Certainly," said the dealer reassuringly. "He's a regular lady's horse."

"You are sure he's not afraid of anything?" asked Mr. Green anxiously and for the tenth time.

The dealer assumed an air of reflection.

"Well, there is one thing that he has always appeared to be afraid of ever since I got him," he admitted conscientiously. "It seems as if he's scared to death for fear some one might say 'Whoa!' and he not hear it."

BATTLEFIELD ORATIONS.

A Great Deal of Fiction About the Recorded Martial Speeches.

Somebody once asked the Duke of Wellington if speeches on the battlefield were really made as reported and what was their effect. The duke said. "What effect on the whole army can be made by a speech since you cannot conveniently make it heard by more than a thousand men standing about you?" Then the duke was asked if it were not the fact that Napoleon delivered some rather notable orations on the field. The duke would not have it. "The proclamations you read of in the French army were much more seen in the papers than by the soldiers—they were meant for Paris." It was all right, the duke agreed, to address a regiment upon presenting it with colors and that sort of thing. On the whole, French troops might be more impressed by a speech than the English, who in the duke's Waterloo army were, he declared, "the scum of the earth, who had all enlisted for drink." The French, with their system of conscription, had a fair sprinkling of all classes.

"No," comments a writer, "all these martial obiter dicta which our histories treasure up for us were for the most part never spoken at all. The 'last words' of dying men and the speeches made on the battlefield or the deck of an admiral's flagship are not to be regarded as having been actually uttered. The famous 'Up, guards, and at 'em!' accredited to Wellington at Waterloo, was never spoken. Wellington himself denied it."

SELLING GOODS.

The Methods That Lead to Success In Business Life.

When a customer comes in, don't, whatever you do, drag yourself out of the chair as though you were disturbed from a rest, but jump up and greet her or him as though you were really glad to wait on them. Act so they will ask for you the next time they come to the store. The salesman who is constantly being asked for by customers never has to worry about a job.

Don't be stiff and act or feel as though you were far the mental superior of the customer. If you do, no sale will result.

Just for the sake of argument, let us take all the successes in your city, no matter what line they are in. Do they advertise?

The public, somehow or other, seem to be able to read between the lines. If your ad. is not truthful they will not respond.

It takes more than a mere cut to attract the eye to make your ad. pay. There must be solid, honest store news of good values behind it.

Never underrate the intelligence of your customer. He may know more about the article you are showing than you do.

Post yourself on every article you are expected to sell, so you can talk convincingly and knowingly. That is what sells goods—convincing talks. Never mind the price; that will take care of itself.—Brains.

A Stevenson Story.

A book on Stevenson tells of a speech he made at a gathering of Scotchmen in Samoa. He said: "I cannot say why we are proud to be Scotsmen, but the fact remains that we are. It is not that our land is sunny like these tropical isles, and its climate is not even lovely. Scotland's history contains little that is not disgusting to people of humane feelings. That long brawl which is called Scottish history contains scarcely one object that Scots have patience with." The address drew tears to the eyes of a German who had gone to the meeting violently prejudiced against Stevenson. No sooner had the speaker finished than the meeting proceeded to clasp hands and sing "Auld Lang Syne."

Curious Titles.

The English reformers adopted some curious titles for their devotional and controversial works. "Matches Lighted at the Divine Fire." "The Gun of Penitence," "The Shop of the Spiritual Apothecary," "The Bank of Faith," "Sixpennyworth of Divine Spirit," "Some Fine Biscuits Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For the Chickens of the Church," "The Sparrows of the Spirit" and "The Sweet Swallows of Salvation" are among the number.

Four Nations.

Practical idealism takes with the German chiefly the form of devotion to duty. In the Russian it is a readiness to sacrifice everything to his inward feeling. In the Anglo-Saxon it is the staking of the whole person for a concrete, palpable and distinctly fixed purpose. In the Frenchman it is a general idea which carries him away to great deeds.—Baron F. von Wrangell in Contemporary Review.

An Optimist.

"Oh, yes, he's quite an enthusiast. He goes in for things in real earnest."

"Yes, if some one were to send him on a wild goose chase he'd speak of himself afterward as a sportsman."—Philadelphia Press.

TO THE SUPERIOR COURT.

HILLSBOROUGH, SS.

Cora E. Cleaves of Peterborough in said County, complains against Fred J. Cleaves late of said Peterborough, but whose present residence is to the petitioner unknown, and says she was lawfully married to him, at Antrim in said County, on the 12th day of December, 1891, and has always behaved as a dutiful, faithful wife.

Yet the said Fred J. Cleaves, wholly regardless of his marriage covenant and duty, at said Peterborough, on or about the 1st day of February, 1902, and more than three years before the filing of this libel, without sufficient cause, and without her consent, abandoned the said libelant, and now refuses, and during all the time since the said abandonment has refused, to cohabit with her.

The said Cora E. Cleaves, after their said intermarriage, lived with her said husband at said Antrim for about eight years, when they removed to said Peterborough where they resided until the said date of abandonment and where the said libelant has since resided and resides at the date of filing this libel.

Said libelant had two children by the said Fred J. Cleaves, who are now living, viz., Robert H. Cleaves, who is now twelve years of age and Henry B. Cleaves, who is now ten years of age.

The last known postoffice address of the said libelee was: Winchendon, Massachusetts, and the name and postoffice address of his nearest relative is that of his father, which is: Gilman H. Cleaves, Antrim, New Hampshire.

Wherefore the said Cora E. Cleaves prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony between herself and the said Fred J. Cleaves may be decreed; that the custody and education of the said Henry B. Cleaves may be committed to her; and for such other relief as may be just.

CORA E. CLEAVES.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Hillsborough, ss. July 31, A. D. 1905.

Office of Clerk of Superior Court,

The foregoing LIBEL having been this day filed in said office, it is ordered that the said libelant give notice to the said libelee to appear at the Superior Court next to be holden at Nashua in said county of Hillsborough, on the third Tuesday of September, A. D. 1905 then and there to show cause, if any he have, why the prayer of said libel should not be granted, by causing a true and attested copy of the foregoing libel and this order thereon to be published in the ANTRIM REPORTER, a newspaper printed at Antrim in said county of Hillsborough, it being the newspaper nearest the last known residence of the libelee in this state, three successive weeks at intervals of not less than seven days, the last publication to be not less than thirty days before said third Tuesday of September, A. D. 1905.

It is further ordered that on the date of the first publication the publisher of said newspaper shall mail a postpaid copy of said newspaper containing the libel and order of notice thereon, addressed to the libelee at Winchendon, Mass., and a like copy addressed to Gilman H. Cleaves at Antrim, N. H.

ATTEST: THOS. D. LUCE, Clerk.

J. F. BRENNAN Esquire, Atty for Libelant.

The foregoing is a true copy of a libel for divorce filed as aforesaid, and of the order of notice thereon.

ATTEST: THOS. D. LUCE, Clerk.

POSTAL TYPEWRITER

$100.00 TYPEWRITER $25.00

No one can imagine how much easier and faster it is to write with a machine than with a pen, until one has tried the comparison. It is like riding and walking. The Postal at its very low price offers the opportunity to everybody to try.

The Postal is first of all a practical typewriter, having the Universal keyboard. The working parts are made of best steel hardened and tempered to withstand wear, and everything in the manufacture of the Postal is the same quality as goes into the high priced machines. The construction is so simple and strong, that not only has the number of parts been brought down to about one-third of what it is in the high-priced machines, but, what is far more important, the number of accurate adjustments has been reduced to the proportion of 1 to 28 as compared with other type wheel machines and 1 to 76 in type bar machines.

In the Postal the alignment is practically perfect and permanent.

The Postal offers the advantage of changing in a few seconds from one style of type to another, or from one language to another.

The writing is in sight all the time, with the exception of the few letters immediately near the point of printing.

We warrant all our machines to be of good workmanship and material and agree to furnish free within one year any part that may wear out or break through defect.

A Postal Typewriter may be seen in operation at The Antrim Reporter Office, Antrim, N. H., where orders will be received.
