ELDER TWIGG'S PHILOSOPHY.
How they come! Oh, just fair—Fair to middle.
Chuck to eat and duds to wear. Uh-m-m, fair to middle.
I'm one them men who never get Particularly overhot When food or had luck some—and yet I'm fair to middle.
I ferg things run just about From fair to middle.
First and last, in day out. Just fair to middle.
You'll find a smile for every ear. And viny verry, verry dear. The world looks even—pretty near—At fair to middle.
It's better when you're that away—Say fair to middle. Uh-m-m, fair to middle. At fair to middle.
I claim a man don't have to choose Twixt parties and the cabbage. You're just as fat and lots more use At fair to middle.

A BELATED SOUL.

It was twilight. The wind howled, the snow fell fast, and little Martine lay dying.
"Alas!" wept the mother, "will the caro come? Thou hast been a good child, and must thy unbeloved son wander about the gates of paradise? Ah, I can bear it no longer!" And she ran out into the night to find the laggard priest.
Martine shivered. She feared to die alone.
"But why should a tender voice breathe her name?"
"Martine, knowest thou the good God confesses, through his angels, the souls of children?"
"Tell me thy sins."
"The girl raised her eyes and beheld a dim white form with folded wings and a holy head rippled over with golden curls. And strength came to her to speak. She confessed her poor little faults bravely and bowed her head for absolution."
"What!" said the angel. "So thou hast eaten a rose colored kerchief from thy friend Babette?"
"Forgive!" murmured Martine.
"What hast thou done with this kerchief?"
"I have it here, beneath my pillow, monsignor."
"But why hast thou not returned it?"
"I will become no well on my deathbed," sighed the little Martine.
"Fiel Vain one!" cried the angel severely. "I see well thou dost not repent truly of this fault and must do penance ere I grant thee absolution."
"Rise!"
"Take this kerchief and restore it to Babette!"
"But," exclaimed Martine, stupefied, "if my mother return with the cure, to seek me on my deathbed. I will assume thy shape. But mark the hour! St. Peter has orders to admit thee at dawn. Beware of being late, for I can not assume thy soul's shape and seek entrance for thee to paradise. Notwithstanding, I claim my own place there until I give account of thee. I might be doomed wander here on earth, or, in fact," he added impatiently, "no one can say what complications might arise."
"I will hasten!" cried Martine, springing from the bed. Dressing with haste, she wrapped herself in her warm cloak and ran joyously from the house. The snow ceased falling; the wind died among the trees; the stars came out and twinkled merrily. Then the moon rose, dimming the light of the stars, turning the icicles to diamonds and the frozen roads to green. And Martine ran, danced, skipped and sang!
How beautiful was life and youth and health! Her limbs were as strong, her blood as warm, as before the fever laid its wasting hand upon her.
Alas! It is but to die—at 16!
"It cannot be more than 7 o'clock," she thought, "and I have until day-break." But she could not stay her dancing feet, and soon the lights of the village glimmered softly through the trees. There to the right lay the frozen Babette! An instant more, and she stood upon the threshold.
"Martine! Dear Martine!" a chorus of gay voices greeted her. "Martine, we heard that you were ill and dying!"
Martine shuddered. "And so indeed I am," she thought sadly.
"Come with us, Martine," cried Babette. "Good M. Champeaux has offered us his barn for a dance, for it is the fate of our little Lucienne."
"Come!"
"Surely thou art well enough to dance!"
"Nay!" exclaimed Martine, thrusting the kerchief into Babette's hand. "I have come to restore this, for indeed I have not long to live, only the short night!"
A burst of laughter interrupted her. "Thou art mad, little one!" cried little Pierre, the handsomest lad in the village. "Thy cheeks are as bright as the twinkling stars! But since thou hast but this slight to live dance with us."
"Surely, there is no harm in that," thought Martine. "I can still be home before the dawn."
"Chez the dance had begun she forgot her doubts and everything else, for she had a light foot, this little Martine! And the sky was already gray in the east when there came a sound of horses' hoofs and laughing voices, and the barn doors were flung wide open, and a band of gentlemen, richly dressed, appeared before the astonished peasant folk.
"Your prince, good people!" cried one of the gentlemen, "desires to look upon your merry-making." And Martine saw in their midst a tall figure in a cloak of white velvet, and with shining golden curls.
"The angel!" she murmured, trembling.
But as the abashed peasants remained silent the prince threw off his velvet cloak, and stopping forth in all his glory, he said:
"Little Martine! I had the dance myself. Soon all the peasant lads were frowning blackly against the wall, but this

WHISTLER AND THE MILLIONAIRE.

Just What Really Occurred Upon a Celebrated Occasion.

Here is a true version of an oft told story of Whistler, the distortion bearing only a faint racial likeness to the original:
A man from nowhere made a large fortune in London and once proceeded to indulge a genuine if somewhat cross love of art. He sent agents the length and breadth of Europe to purchase the highest priced pictures to be had—old masters, if possible; if not, copies by first class artists, if they could be got to do the work. Modern artists were patronized in the original. In fact, he set up a private Luxembourg, crossed with a spurious Louvre.
The home he built him was magnificent. No man in London with leanings toward art had such a house. Everybody, or nearly everybody, who was invited went to see it, to remain, to feast, even to gaze upon the millionaire as he sat, in his hand, the robes of Japan or of Greece flowing about him.
But one crumpled rose leaf had the millionaire in his case, he was in hand, the robes of Japan or of Greece flowing about him.
One crumpled rose leaf had the millionaire in his case, he was in hand, the robes of Japan or of Greece flowing about him.
The art millionaire was in despair. His wine turned to gall. His palate grinded at him. His sleep was infected with nightmare, which wore the disdainful smirk of Whistler. Even the famous white look seemed to assume an air of lofty unattainableness.
In short, he was miserable, for until Whistler, the exigent, the eccentric, the impossible, the snob, the snob of his approval, the art millionaire's position in the world was open to dispute.
One day Whistler abruptly sent him word that he would call upon him the next morning at 10 o'clock. What actuated the great man will never be known. The simplest explanation is that it was one of his many freaks.
The art millionaire, fairly palpitating with joy, received Whistler at the entrance to his palatial home, bowed gravely. Whistler bowed. The millionaire offered his arm. Whistler took it impressively and permitted himself to be conducted over the house. He walked through rooms filled with the treasures of Japan, of India, of Turkey; rooms hung with priceless tapestries, inlaid with rare porcelains, rooms representing apartments in ancient Greece, Rome, Pompeii. He stared with fixed eyes and said never a word—a dining room taken from a feudal castle, a hall arched like Cloopatra's, bedrooms whose silken hangings could have gone through the eye of a needle. Never a word.
The host, much perturbed, but willing to make all allowances for the eccentricities of genius, finally flung aside the portieres of a great studio. In it were such a number of sketches and curios as artists dream of. The canvas an hour molded awaited the sword of the millionaire. Never a word. Whistler permitted his stony star to roam from one object to another, then swung his host about, led him through the portieres and made for the entrance. As they descended the grand staircase the millionaire burst forth:
"Great heavens, Mr. Whistler! ain't you going to say anything?"
Whistler turned abruptly and regarded him for a moment with a solemn stare. Then he brought his hand heavily down on the millionaire's back and exclaimed hoarsely:
"It's amazing! And—there's—no—excuse—for—it!"—New York Sun.

THE CENTURY IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, THE CENTURY will print during 1895
A New Life of NAPOLEON
Magnificently Illustrated.
The Century is famous for its great historical series, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this. The life of Napoleon, written by Prof. William M. Sloane, of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation of this work, is a biography of the man of destiny, as appeared in either English or French in the great, all-round, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this—here is the concentration of all the best material available. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of the Century's art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of the artistic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical illustrations reproduced, and Castiglione and other modern artists have drawn some of the most striking scenes of Napoleon's life for this history.

The Truth of It.
Teacher—Johnny, can you define for us the difference between "candor" and "downrightness?"
Johnny—Yes, ma'am. When you're scared to go out with your best and stay home for fear you'll sink, and the boat comes in all right, that's "downrightness."
Teacher—Well, what's "candor?"
Johnny—Well, if you've got your best home and the boat does sink, then it's "candor."

The Antrim Reporter

Published every Wednesday.
H. WEBSTER ELDREDGE,
Publisher and Proprietor.
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 5, 1894.
Entered at the Post-Office at Antrim as second-class matter.

The Senate and House of Representatives for this state convenes at Concord, the first Wednesday of January next.

The funeral of Anton Gregor Rubinstein, the great Russian composer and pianist, took place at St. Petersburg, Wednesday.

The final session of the fifty-third Congress convened on Monday of this week. The session will probably not be a very long one, as the time for its close is March 4th next.

On Wednesday last, at the Sub-Treasury, it was announced that the government gold reserve is now undoubtedly at the $100,000,000 mark, with additional millions still piling in, as the result of the government's acceptance of the Stewart syndicate's bid for the bond issue. There was reported by the bankers who held the bonds that there was a great demand for them.

The sad intelligence of young men and young ladies breaking through and drowning as a result of skating on too thin ice, has already begun to spread. It would be a wise plan for our young people to wait too long, and lose their much loved winter sport if need be, than to venture on ice that is not sufficiently thick to hold the weight of a crowd, aggregating at times several hundred pounds.

Orders were issued on Wednesday last from the headquarters of the American Sugar Refining Company, in Wall street, New York, to shut down completely all its refineries in the cities of Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, thus throwing out of employment 50,000 men. President Havemeyer of the Trust, gives out his statement, which in brief is that the last Congress is responsible for the present situation, and claims that the refineries have been run at a loss for some time past. This statement will hardly warrant the supposition that we shall be obliged to go without this sweet article of necessity just because a combination of millionaires give out a statement that they will have what they want or stop the business.

Thanksgiving.

The day of feasting and of home gathering, has come and gone. It is one which will be remembered by many with pleasure, while others will have sorrowful memories of the day.

In this town, as is always the custom, there were about the usual number of family reunions, and several families in different parts of the town visited among friends in their immediate neighborhood.

The day was fine and cool, lacking the white mantle which has at times memorized the day. The religious union services at the Methodist church were fairly well attended. The day as a whole, was quiet, and everyone seemed to enter into the spirit of the day, and be thankful for the many blessings they from time to time receive.

Many of our young people attended a Thanksgiving dance at Hillsboro Bridge on Wednesday evening, and some attended a similar occasion at Hancock the following evening.

Antrim High school closed on Wednesday afternoon last, for a short vacation. About twenty visitors were present at the public examinations, who were exceedingly well pleased with the progress the scholars have made in their studies, the mode of instruction practiced by Principal Small, and the promptness with which each scholar responded to questions. Remarks were made by D. W. Cooley and A. B. Crombie, members of the school board, and E. W. Baker. The committee expressed their satisfaction with the school, the teacher, and the scholars, and hoped the latter would continue their manifest interest in the school and their studies. Principal Small made a few remarks, in which he paid a just compliment to his scholars, and thought the work done in the school during the past term was done in a thorough manner. A great like this one cannot receive too much encouragement from our citizens, and should receive a generous support at the annual school meeting. In what way can we spend our money to better advantage, or what better improvement can be made than to give our public schools a high standing, and give the rising generation and our children advantage in this respect, which some, in days gone by, were never fortunate enough to enjoy? To all interested a wise suggestion would be to go and visit the schools, and think seriously upon the subject above referred to.

Saving Teamsters' Souls.

In crowded streets it is of frequent occurrence to see a teamster render the air blue with blasphemy, because his harness has broken and he is obliged to stop for repairs. Breaks in harness occur so often because most harness is made of common leather which, when exposed to the weather and to the perspiration of the animals, soon gets hard and rotten and then breaks. But if the harness is well saturated with viscol once or twice a year neither the weather nor the perspiration has any effect upon it, and it is kept soft and strong for a lifetime.

When Peterboro's bakery oven was destroyed by fire, Mr. Sawyer supplied his customers with material from the Antrim Bakery. Mr. Sawyer's oven having been completed, is turning out fine cookery, and now that Mr. Wyman's health requires him to take a vacation, Mr. Sawyer daily forwards fresh wares to Antrim.—Peterboro Transcript.

A Christian Endeavor Paper.

A need of a paper devoted entirely to the great Christian Endeavor movement in this state has been manifested for some time, and to meet this demand there will be published, under the auspices of the Concord Christian Endeavor Union, a monthly paper, the first issue of which will appear about the 15th of December.

The size and general arrangement of the paper will be the same as the standard religious weeklies, and the number of pages will be regulated by the patronage of the Endeavorers. It will be edited by the Press Committee of the Concord Christian Endeavor Union, and there will be contributions from the leading Christian Endeavorers in the state. The first number will contain an article on "Good Citizenship," the new Christian Endeavor movement, from the pen of Rev. O. W. Waldron, the state president, who has made this a special study.

The subscription price is only 25 cents a year, and the Endeavorers will undoubtedly roll up a large list for this much needed paper. A limited amount of the paper will be reserved for advertisements.

The Concord union now includes 15 societies and four junior societies, and has a membership of nearly 1,500. Under their auspices the paper cannot be otherwise than a success, as there are nearly 9,000 Christian Endeavorers in the state. All communications or subscriptions should be sent to the business manager, Charles Ed. Smith, at Concord, N. H.—Concord Evening Monitor, Nov. 28.

Dictionary of United States History.

One of the most complete and best arranged books of reference we have yet seen is the one just issued by the Puritan Publishing Co., of Boston. It is styled "Dictionary of United States History," and contains four centuries of history, written concisely and arranged alphabetically in dictionary form, by J. Franklin Jameson, Ph.D., professor of history at Brown University. It is illustrated with nearly 300 elegant portraits of eminent men of the past. This history is not the book for every professional man, merchant, mechanic, farmer, laborer, and ladies as well, and all interested in the United States history. The price of the book is based on the quality of binding.

FREE!

We will send to you the ANTRIM REPORTER from now till Jan. 1, 1895, free, if you subscribe for it one year. That is, by sending $1.00 to us now we will credit your subscription up to Jan. 1, 1895.

All in arrears, or whose subscription expires previous to the first of January next, by paying up to such date, may have their receipt read to January 1, 1895.

The Companion's Calendar.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION has just published a calendar for 1895 which is a work of art—indeed, three works of art in one. Scenes typical of each season of the year, Winter, Summer, Autumn, are shown. The first picture represents a mother and son pausing in their walk in a snowy field, across which a rabbit is running, much to the amusement of the boy.

The artist in the summer scene has pictured three children rowing down a winding river; and were it not for the apples which fill the pan in her arms, one would scarcely realize that the graceful girl in the third picture was typical of Autumn. Around the pictures are grouped the monthly calendars, tied together by ribbons.

This attractive calendar and full prospectus for 1895 will be sent free upon application, to any one considering a subscription to THE COMPANION. From no other paper can so much entertainment and instruction be obtained for so little money (only $1.75 a year). If you subscribe now you will receive the paper until January 1, 1895, and for a full year from that date, including the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Double Numbers.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, Boston, Mass.

How to Get Rich.

To make money rapidly, become independent, and enjoy a life of ease, has been the ambition of mankind since the days of Adam! "Show me how, and quickly," is the cry. While the ways of making money are many and varied, the most successful, and that in which the largest fortunes have been accumulated can be told in one word, SPECULATION!

In a measure we are all speculators, whether we buy merchandise which we expect to sell at a profit, houses and lands which we hold for an advance, or stock, bonds and grain. But of all commodities, stocks and grain pay the greatest profits. The values are better known and you can always find a market. No long tedious waits, perhaps for months before you realize a profit (as in the case of the development of land), but a constant and rapid change in values, registered daily on the "Ticker," and which if taken advantage of lead to LARGE GAINS. It is impossible to set forth in an article of this character, the ways of speculating and the many advantages to be obtained by a Broker who is constantly on THE GROUND.

Suffice it to say: We have had a large experience in the Stock Brokerage business, and our book on STOCK SPECULATION fully explains in all its details the method of speculation.

We charge a commission of but 1-16 in the execution of all orders, and where the trader does not have easy access to the markets, we give him the benefit of our experience by accepting DISCRETIONARY ORDERS, or in other words, buy and sell to the best of our judgment for his account and profit.

We deal in STOCKS, GRAIN and PROVISIONS on lots of ten shares and upwards on a margin of from 3 to 5 per cent., and all orders receive our personal and prompt attention. Orders can be sent by mail or telegraph at our expense. Deposits received subject to check, and SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Correspondence solicited.

STANDARD STOCK EXCHANGE, 40 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Provincial Department, Room 36.

Cards of Thanks.

I wish to return my heartfelt thanks to those kind friends who gave me a generous sum of money to aid me in the loss of my cows.
