DEATH OF LINCOLN.

NOAH BROOKS' RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GREAT TRAGEDY.

The President Did Not Want to Go to the Theater, but Would Not Disappoint the Public—A Sorrowing People Under a Weeping Sky That April Morning.

The afternoon and evening of April 14, 1865, were cold, raw and gusty.
Dark clouds enveloped the capital, and the air was chilly, with occasional showers. Late in the afternoon I filled an appointment by calling on the president at the White House, and was told by him that he "had had a notion" of sending for me to go to the theater that evening with him and Mrs. Lincoln, but he added that Mrs. Lincoln had already made up a party to take the place of General and Mrs. Grant, who had somewhat unexpectedly left the city for Burlington, N. J. The party was originally planned for the purpose of taking (General and Mrs. Grant to see "Our American Cousin" at Ford's theater, and when Mr. Grant had decided to leave Washington he (the president) had "felt inclined to give up the whole thing," but as it had been announced in the morning papers that this distinguished party would go to the theater that night Mrs. Lincoln had decried that they ought to go in rather than let the expectant public should not be wholly disappointed.

On my way home I met Schuyler Colfax, who was about leaving for California, and who tarried with me on the sidewalk a little while, talking about the trip and the people whom I knew in San Francisco and Sacramento that he wished to meet. Mr. Lincoln had often talked with me about the possibilities of his eventually taking up his residence in California after his term of office should be over. He thought, he said, that that country would afford better opportunities for his two boys than any of the older states, and when he heard that Colfax was going to California he was greatly interested in his trip and said that he hoped that Colfax would bring him back a good report of what his keen and practical observation would note in the country which he (Colfax) was about to see for the first time.

The evening being inclement, I staid within doors to nurse a violent cold with which I was afflicted, and my roommate, McA., and I whittled away the time chatting and playing cards. About half past 10 our attention was attracted to the frequent galloping of cavalry or the mounted patrol past the house which we occupied on New York avenue, near the state department building. After a while quiet was restored, and we returned to our sleeping room in the rear part of the house.

As I turned down the gas I said to my roommate: "Will, I have guessed the cause of the clatter outside tonight. You know Wade Hampton has disappeared with his cavalry somewhere in the mountains of Virginia. Now, my theory of the racket is that he has raided Washington and has pounced down upon the president and has attempted to carry him off." Of course this was said jocously and without the slightest thought that the president was in any way in danger, and my friend, in a similar spirit, banteringly replied, "What good will that do the rebs unless they carry off Andy Johnson also?" The next morning I was awakened in the early dawn by a loud and hurried knocking on my chamber door, and the voice of Mr. Gardner, the landlord, crying:
"Wake, wake, Mr. Brooks! I have dreadful news."

I slipped out, turned the key of the door, and Mr. Gardner came in, pale, trembling and we began, like him who "drew Priam's curtain at the death of night," and told his awful story. At that time it was believed that the president, Mr. Seward, Vice President Johnson and other members of the government had been killed, and this was the burden of the tale that was told to us.
I sank back into my bed, cold and shivering with horror, and for a time it seemed as though the end of all things had come. I was aroused by the loud weeping of my comrades, who had not left his bed in another part of the room.

When we had sufficiently collected ourselves to dress and go out of doors in the bleak and cheerless April morning, we found in the streets an extraordinary spectacle. They were suddenly crowded with people—men, women and children thronging the pavements and darkening the thoroughfares. It seemed as if everybody was in tears. Pale faces, streaming eyes, with now and again an angry, frowning countenance, were on every side. Men and women who were strangers accosted one another with distressed looks and tearful inquiries for the welfare of the president and Mr. Seward's family. The president still lived, but at half past 7 o'clock in the morning the tolling of the bells announced to the innumerable people that he had ceased to breathe. His great and loving heart was still. The last official bulletin from the war department stated that he died at 23 minutes past 7 o'clock on the morning of April 15.

Instantly flags were raised at half mast all over the city, the bells tolled solemnly, and with incredible swiftness Washington went into deep, universal mourning. All stores, government departments and private offices were closed, and everywhere, on the most pretentious residences and on the humblest hovels, were the black badges of grief.
Nature seemed to sympathize in the general lamentation, and tears of rain fell from the moist and somber sky. The wind sighed mournfully through streets crowded with sad-faced people, and broad folds of funeral drapery flapped heavily in the wind over the decorations of the day before.—Noah Brooks in Century.

Music resembles poetry. In each are nameless, ace which no methods teach, and which a master's hand alone can reach.—Pope.

Arrested Gravitation.
"I wonder what keeps her dress from slipping off her shoulders?"
"Er—the attraction, I suppose."
Halifax Herald.

William Morris.
William Morris, the English poet, re-joices in the possession of a prodigious memory. Given a fair start on any sentence in Dickens' works, he will continue it with very little deviation from textual accuracy. Were every copy of "Pickwick Papers" destroyed today William Morris could write the book almost word for word as it now stands.

Greenland was so called because in summer its hills were covered with a beautiful green moss.

Paganini looked like a caricature of a man, so thin was he, with every feature exaggerated.

Haydn had a long nose, an almost invariable peculiarity of genius.

Buckram was at first any sort of cloth stiffened with gum.

Spring Medicine

Is a necessity because the tonic of winter air is gone, and milder weather, increased moisture, accumulated impurities in the blood, open the way for that tired feeling, nervous troubles, and other ills. The skin, mucous membrane and the various organs strive in vain to relieve the impure current of life. They all welcome

Hood's
Sarsa-Sparilla

to assist Nature at this time when she most needs help, to purify the blood, tone and strengthen the laboring organs and build up the nerves.

"I was troubled last spring with nervous prostration and a bad cough. I could not sleep, and would get up in the morning with a headache. At last I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and I have now used six bottles. I can sleep well nights and can walk long distances." Mrs. M.
M. Lockwood, Medford, New Hampshire.

and was better in every way." ANTRIM J.

George Dunfield is improving the would also be more of an improvement if the Road Agent would fix the road in front of Mr. Dunfield's, it is about as rough as any cart road.

They do not make as wide roads with the road machine as by the old way of plowing for they only round up the centre and do not have good ditches to carry off the water and they soon wash out.

The Antrim Base Ball Association, after making arrangements for a game with the Warner team on Memorial Day, was at the last minute disappointed, and they were resolved to have a game. They tried to make a game with several different nines, and finally secured the team from North Branch. The first two or three innings the game was all one way, favoring the home team, when a change in the battery of the visiting club changed the complexion of the game somewhat, and from then to the close a good game of ball was put up. The game being called at a late hour the nine innings were not played, but at the close of seven the score was 14 to 6 in favor of the Antrim nine, and the game came to a close.

A Remarkable Business.

So large is the demand for Moxie, after eight years there is not room enough in the new twelve acre union station in Boston to make it, if it should be made in a factory.
There are now twenty factories in the United States, all in charge of the Lowell office. The company had over thirty bushels of testmonials sent to them voluntarily last year.
Scores of helpless people from malnutrition became insane from overwork; thousands of cases of nervous exhaustion, and as many of weakly convalescents were recovered after medicine had failed. Thousands of people write from all over the United States to congratulate the company, and state that while using it they can do double the work they ought to and not break down. The well take it steadily.

What are its possibilities in the future if eight years will win its present conditions?
There is no surprise that the stock of the company is not for sale. There are two reasons for its popularity. 1. It is harmless, luscious, useful character, and its value compared with the price—10 cents per bottle is bought by the case of twelve bottles and the amples are returned. Signature of A.
Thompson, M. D., on a label over the cork on the genuine. Will send a case to remeditious of the country, freight free, for $5.00 per case, and pay back 50 cents for the empty bottles and case. Address Moxie Nerve Food Co., Lowell, Mass., or apply to Goodwin's Cash Store, Antrim.
