HIS TEMPTATION.

"Oh, shut up, Macpherson!"

Walter Macpherson, medical student, who was thus emphatically addressed, finished the verse of the music hall melody he was singing in his musical, if rather boisterous voice, and then turned toward his companion.

"What's up, old man?" he asked, regarding him with a comical look of concern on his good natured face. "You don't look so happy as I've seen you."

To quote Galileo in "The Sign of the Cross": "Whether is it your liver or your heart that troubles you? If the former, send for the doctor; if the latter, send for the woman." That advice is invaluable, my dear fellow, and ought to be acted upon at once."

Frank Ross pushed the book he had been poring over away from him impatiently and rose from the table. He was a tall, slightly made lad, very different in appearance from the stalwart Walter Macpherson, with whom he had shared his lodgings for the last two sessions. They were both medical students and in their second last year.

"I wish you'd keep your advice to yourself, Macpherson," he said. "I find it difficult enough to study just now, when you are in the room it's impossible. I cannot imagine how you ever manage to get through your exams, and with honors too."

"You see, I'm not in love, Ross, and that makes a difference. My dear boy," he continued, changing his bantering tone. "I wish you would not worry yourself so much over trifles. You will make yourself ill before the end of the second session."

"Trifles!" Ross exclaimed. "Do you call it a trifle that I have not seen her for nearly three weeks and that, although I know she is in town, she has not even written to let me know her address? I tell you, it is enough to drive a man mad to be engaged to a girl like that!"

Walter Macpherson glanced at Ross' pained, angry face with a look of sympathy on his own handsome one. Then a dark flush crept gradually over it and he busied himself in lighting his pipe.

"I have not seen Miss Wilson lately, then?" he asked, kindly. He had a disagreeable feeling of disloyalty to his friend in his honest heart as he thought of how only a few nights ago he had met, quite by accident on his part, the young lady in question, and as he had had nothing special to do with her, he had gone with her to where she was staying with friends. Somehow he had omitted to mention the meeting to Ross, and of course took it for granted that he knew where she was living and had seen her himself. Macpherson had known Lily Wilson for some time and was on friendly terms with her, as being Frank's intended. She and Frank came from the same town, some distance out of Glasgow, and had known each other all their lives. It was an understood thing that the marriage would take place when ever Ross was through. He made no secret to Macpherson of his all absorbing love for Lily, and Walter, who had never been in love as yet, listened good naturedly, wondering sometimes if any girl was worth troubling so much over, and invariably coming to the conclusion that if such a one existed it was Lily Wilson—Lily, with her yellow hair and tall, willowy figure.

For a moment he hesitated whether to tell Ross of the chance encounter or not, then he made up his mind to say nothing about it. He would try to see her again and tell her how much pain she was causing Frank by her silence. Macpherson had grown very fond of his companion within the last two sessions, and in his own blunt, good natured way would have done almost anything to save him trouble or pain.

"Don't fret over her, Frank," he said, laying his hand on his shoulder. "You will see her soon, I'm convinced of that, and then you will laugh at all your fears and doubts about her."

And Ross' despondency, as usual, gave way before his friend's cheerfulness and unflinching influence.

That night Walter Macpherson, after his classes were over, went round in the direction of where Lily had told him she was staying in the hopes of seeing her. It was beginning to get dark as he sauntered slowly along toward the gates of the park, where he had met her the previous evening. He had almost given up hope of meeting her, when he saw her slim figure come slowly toward him with a book under her arm. He stopped and raised his hat. There seemed an unusual glow on Lily's fair face as she gave him her hand.

"I have been enjoying the park and a book all afternoon," she said. "We seem destined to meet, Mr. Macpherson."

"I was in hopes of doing so," Walter said in his blithe way, looking from his great height at her gracefully poised head and soft blue eyes, which looked almost black in the gathering dusk. "It is too late for you to be wandering about alone. But since we have met I want to have a talk with you. Let us take a seat in the park for a short time."

Lily turned with him, and they sat down on a empty seat near the garden gates. After a moment's silence Walter said abruptly:

"Frank tells me he has not seen you since you came to town, Miss Wilson? Forgive me for interfering, but is that not rather unfair? He is making himself quite mischievous over not hearing from you."

"Does he know you have seen me?" Lily asked, her face, which had been flushed a few moments ago, gradually growing pale.

"No, I have not told him," Macpherson answered. "I know it is quite un-tempting on your part, Miss Wilson, for you could not do an unkind action, but you are causing him great pain. I can not bear to see him unhappy. He and I are like brothers, and I know you will excuse me for pleading with you on his behalf. You cannot have any reason for treating him like this, and he does not deserve it. I believe he would cut off his right hand sooner than cause you a moment's pain."

Lily sat quite still for a few minutes after Walter had ceased speaking. He looked at her in surprise. She seemed different from the bright, vivacious girl she used to be. Had she really intentionally kept her address from Frank? Walter had never thought of this before, but had put her conduct down to carelessness.

As if she raised her head and looked at him in the dusk.

"What do you wish me to do?" she asked in a low voice.

"To see Frank at once and put an end to his anxiety and unhappiness, of course. Surely, Miss Wilson, that is what he might naturally expect from his future wife?"

Lily turned on him suddenly and laid her small white gloved hand on his arm.

"You ask me to do this?" she asked passionately.

A curious thrill ran through Walter's arm as she touched him.

"Yes," he answered steadily. "I ask you to do this. Surely it is the mode of action your own heart would dictate?"

"Oh," Lily said in the same low, passionate tone, "you will force me to speak plainly and honestly, won't you? I don't! Have you not seen that the bond between Frank and me has become intolerable, unbearable to me—ever since I met you?"

The last words were almost a whisper, but Walter heard them. His heart gave a wild throb, then almost ceased to beat. What undreamed of, unheard of thing had happened? Walter Macpherson had none of that vanity with which some men are so plentifully endowed, and he had never thought of the possibility of any woman falling in love with him. And Lily—wonderful, beautiful Lily! For a moment he thought he would have dreamed that she whispered those last words, then as he saw her face he realized that it had been no dream. Walter thought she had never looked so beautiful as she did now.

"You were coming to see me in the park, and a pale yellow moon was beginning to shed its rays on Lily's golden hair and dark, slight figure so close beside him. For a moment a wild longing to draw her into his arms came over Walter; to take the prize that was so suddenly and unexpectedly his. Was it not his by right after what she had said? Then, suddenly remembering Frank, he put the temptation from him. Was he going to betray his friend who had trusted him with his whole heart?

A dark flush rose to his brow.

"I can not say how I feel about what your words imply, Miss Wilson," he said. "Believe me, I shall not think of them again. Remember Frank, who has not a thought apart from you, whose ambitions, hopes and dreams for the future are all centered round you, and who has not seen Miss Wilson lately, then?" he asked, kindly. He had a disagreeable feeling of disloyalty to his friend in his honest heart as he thought of how only a few nights ago he had met, quite by accident on his part, the young lady in question, and as he had had nothing special to do with her, he had gone with her to where she was staying with friends. Athletic Training.

Professor Francis Fariss is director of physical education in the University of Pennsylvania. He contributes to Outing various suggestions to those who enter training for athletic contests of any sort. The preliminary condition for all is the same. Each must ascertain before beginning the training whether he has a good constitution, whether he is free from any organic trouble or disease, such as weakness or ailment of the lungs, heart or kidneys, or whether he suffers from nervous debility. Sound nerves are as essential as sound lungs and heart.

The candidate must further decide on the kind of contest for which he is to train and on whether nature has adapted him to it. There is one other and vitally important requisite to successful competitive training. The candidate must ask himself in all sincerity: "Do I possess the will power to train faithfully?" The necessity of being able to answer the last question affirmatively may be understood when it is remembered that the athlete in training must diet rigidly, must abstain from all dissipation and must take regular rest and plenty of it. "Let me warn the athlete who trains and dissipates at the same time not to do so, because he will inevitably break down and be overtaken sooner or later by disease."

"Twelve weeks is the right time to be given to training for a contest when one enters the lists for the first time. Long distance running, from three to five miles, Professor Fariss considers the best all round exercise to give wind and endurance, no matter for what kind of athletic contest a candidate is training. He should also be careful to train the body all over harmoniously, legs, arms, trunk and chest, every part. The man with one part of his body abnormally developed, like the acrobat in a circus who uses mainly his arms and shoulders, is sure to break down before his time. The man who can lift a small ox and yet cannot walk ten miles without fatigue cannot be called an athlete. The director lays great stress on keeping a level head and a determined will of the "do or die" kind. He recommends never to give up a contest till the end, no matter if you finish as the last man. Do not let two or three or half a dozen defeats discourage you. Light all round physical training is good for everybody, no matter how delicate, but no one under 18 should take severe training.

The people of Delaware must be proud of their legislature. In Delaware divorces are obtained by having the state legislature pass a special act to that effect in each case. There is accordingly among the legislative committees a special one called the divorce committee. This hears evidence in divorces cases and makes recommendations to the general assembly accordingly. It is now charged that members of this committee refuse to act favorably to the applicant unless they are handsomely paid for it. Testimony in two different suits is to this effect. One applicant's lawyer says he is ready to appear before the general assembly and give the names of men whom he is convinced would have recommended a divorce for his client if he had paid them $250 apiece. In other words, it required in his case about $2,500 to get the divorce bill through the legislature. In another case the charge is made that members of the legislature demanded $5,000 from a lady of Cleveland before they would vote to pass her bill. It is to be hoped investigation will prove the charges not to be true. Lawmakers who would take bribes for giving people divorces are undoubtedly as low down as lawmakers in any country could be.

There is only one house in the Greek legislative body, the boule. Its members are elected by votes of the people and serve a term of four years. There is nothing to correspond to the upper house in ordinary legislative bodies, except a committee which is called the council of state. This council numbers from 16 to 25 members, who are named by the king and serve two years. The council of state are submitted for approval all laws passed by the boule. In case bills meet its disapproval it returns them to the lawmaking body with amendments and suggestions.

Trotting on horseback from New York to Philadelphia seems to be rather popular among certain members of the rich and fashionable set in New York. The distance is 98 miles, and Mrs. Hyde and her riding master trotted it in 8 hours 27 minutes. Of course speed is a matter of taste, and every one to his own particular taste. But to our mind jolting 98 miles without stopping upon a trotting horse is a queer performance to be called amusement. The unfortunate New York Four Hundred may not know any better, but excuse us, if you please.

Even though upon the surface victorious, Turkey speedily showed that she was not in her heart hankering for more war.

We feared it would take longer to elect a senator in Kentucky than to fight the Greco-Turkish war to a finish, and so it did.

What a pity it is that Ohio cannot get an office or two under this administration!

The Orator Revealed.

Mr. F. P. Stearns, in his book of "Sketches From Concord to Appledore," describes the occasion that revealed Phillips, the orator.

In October, 1837, he was married to Miss Anna Green, a cousin to Mrs. Maria Chapman. In November occurred the riot at Milton, Mass., and the assassination of Lovejoy. Dr. Channing's first petition for an indignation meeting in Faneuil hall was refused by the authorities, but a second and more urgent one was granted. The audience was almost equally divided between the antislavery people and their opponents, who made the most noise and disturbance. It seemed as if the meeting would end in confusion.

"I went there," said Wendell Phillips, 20 years later, "without the least intention of making a speech or taking any part in the proceedings. My wife and Mrs. Chapman wished to go, and I accompanied them. I remember wearing

ANTRIM THREE LINKS.

They Celebrate Their 78th National Anniversary by a Sermon and Appropriate Exercises.
According to history, in 1819, five persevering brothers, after several previous failures, established in Baltimore, Md., a lodge of Independent Order of Old Fellows, by the name of Washington Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F., and from this small beginning this large and powerful brotherhood has grown and flourished. In 1843 the first lodge in the Granite State was started in Nashua. Waverly Lodge of Antrim was instituted in February, 1876, and has steadily grown to its present proportions, not only in numbers but in the personnel of its membership, and is now one of the largest organizations in the town.
It was the pleasure of the lodge on Sunday to celebrate the 78th anniversary of the order in America, and although it was a stormy day outside yet everything in lodge room and hall was in a most delightful and pleasing condition. There was nothing to mar the brightness of the day inside except the inclemency of the weather outside kept many from attending who would otherwise have gladly seen present and in consequence have filled the hall. As it was about two hundred were in attendance.
The brothers of Waverly Lodge and the sisters of the Rebekah Degree met at their lodge room and marched to the hall, counter-marched and entered the hall, and were seated. At the rear of the stage were seated the choir of the Presbyterian church which furnished the music of the hour, with Mrs. John Anderson at the piano. At the front of the stage and along the footlights were potted plants mostly in full bloom, presenting a very handsome appearance. Seated upon the stage were also Charles H. Kimball of Henniker, chairman of the hour, Rev. William A. Loyne, who was to deliver the sermon, H. W. Eldredge, chaplain of the lodge, who read the scripture lesson, and Brother A. W. Small, who conducted the responsive reading of the 87th Psalm.
After the opening exercises were concluded Brother Kimball introduced in a few well chosen remarks the speaker, Rev. W. A. Loyne, pastor of the Methodist church here, who is a member of the brotherhood in Colburn, this State, and who talked very interestingly along the lines of fraternal, brotherly love and friendship. The speaker took for his text words from the gospel by St. Luke, 16th chapter, 24th and 25th verses. Of this text the speaker had particular stress on the words "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness," which words were the foundation of his remarks, illustrating the great need of friends in this world of ours, and their assistance along life's journey, and the good results which will necessarily follow; "that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations." Mr. Loyne's remarks were practical and instructive and listened to with intense interest by all present. The same spirit of feeling was apparently manifest in the audience as was in the speaker. That of friendship, charity and harmony. The singing of a hymn and the benediction closed the exercises of the day.

A Novel Inquiry.

A novel inquiry has been made by the Boston Journal of its readers. The leading Republican daily of New England desires a closer acquaintance with its 80,000 subscribers. It already knows them as a body. It has had long and abundant experience of their intelligence, patriotism and steadfastness, but it is a misfortune of modern daily journalism that with broadened scope and steadily increased patronage the daily newspaper loses touch with the individual reader. By the wholesale method of distribution the Journal has on its books the names of about 5000 subscribers who receive the papers in single wrappers directly from the office. This number is far larger than the corresponding list of any other Boston paper. It is probable that it is larger than the combined lists of all the other Boston dailies, and yet it is but little more than 6 per cent of the Journal's total circulation. To learn the names and tastes of the buyers of the 75,000 papers circulated daily by agents and newsboys the Journal has inaugurated the thirteenth daily newspaper census ever undertaken. A blank was published with questions for the readers to answer, and the result promises to be of unusual value.

PEOPLES' DEPARTMENT.

NEW PAINKILLER, MINN., Apr. 27.

Dear Reporter—
In your columns of last week I was startled to behold the reproduction of my boyish freak—written I believe in '72—the spring I was fifteen. As I follow through the lines of comment below, the lump gradually receded from my throat, for I saw that my reputation was vindicated. I was at first glance under the impression that the old production had been sprung upon the innocent reading public as a recent one—and even a western man could hardly respect himself if that were charged to his credit as a statement of present conditions.
Dear Old Antrim! You were doing more for your boys and girls at that day than any of us could appreciate. Your citizens would sit out a larger percent of honest men and noble women than could be found in any town I have known elsewhere. Your common schools, under the old system, contrived to secure some of the brightest and most faithful teachers that ever endured the antics, the dullness and the endless questions of young America. Your churches, cheerfully and freely supported by earnest, conscientious, God-fearing people, carried along a moral influence that was sweetly in keeping with that exquisite little poem closing the preface of your town history. The old motto carried aloft on the decorated wagon drawn to Hillsboro Fair by ninety oxen of oxen "Can't be beat—Antrim!" reached higher than its designer knew.

Count up the boys and girls of that day and follow their career in life, whose records as marked on the great book of humanity.

"Are there more beautiful, it seems,"

"Than Antrim's hills and waters," and I question if any other New England town can boast a better average of sturdily growing and sterling worth. It must be recognized that other

Antrim Improvement Society.

At the last meeting of the Improvement Society it was voted to suspend the membership fee and annual dues for one year. This action opens the meetings absolutely free to everybody. It was thought best to try this experiment for one year, and every one both men and women are cordially invited to attend the regular meeting the fourth Monday in each month. If the citizens of Antrim are disposed to take an interest in the advancement of our interests and attractions, and will once a month come together and exchange ideas, a great deal can be accomplished, which will be of benefit to every one in town.

Bank Note Forgeries.

Appropos of the forging of some 46,230 Bank of England notes recently, the London Times says: "Forgeries of Bank of England notes are very rare, which, we believe, is more than can be said with regard to the notes of the banks of France and Russia. The very large circulation of these great institutions and the small denominations of notes which they are obliged to issue no doubt make it easier for the forger in those countries to carry on his trade. The Bank of France changes the plates very frequently, but has not succeeded in baffling the criminals. We understand that during the last five years the average number of forged Bank of England notes detected was only 10.1 per annum. During the previous five years the average was 12.4, owing chiefly to a number of forged 25 notes being put in circulation in 1891. Probably it is not generally known that there are still a number of forged 21 and 23 notes in existence. They were forged long ago and are not included in the figures comprising the above average. The number of genuine notes of all denominations paid in 1896 was 16,495,495, so that the average proportion of forgeries is infinitesimal. It may be well to mention, as there appears to be some misapprehension on the point, that forged notes are never paid and never have been paid. As to giving warning of forged notes being in circulation, a warning that would reach every banker and money changer could not possibly be given, and were it given it would, from the nature of the case, be too late to do any good. For a remedy present the whole of a batch of forged notes at several places simultaneously and then disappear. The first news the bank can have that forged notes are out must come from the very parties who have had the misfortune to cash them."

Bank Injustice.

The editor of the Journal and Banner picked up one of his metropolitan exchanges and read:

"The charming little sourette, Eva Hollis-Wheeler, has just purchased a new dress for a party to be given."

"It is darn funny," said he to himself and the out, "that these here city papers publish that sort of stuff and then make fun of me for mentioning that Squire Jim Brown has painted his barn."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MRS. KATE ETTER wrote from Neshio, Mo., in March last. "Two years ago I was severely troubled with my stomach and kidneys, and a great affliction so unremoved that my condition became alarming. The telegraph brought a prominent physician in a consultation which resulted in no benefit. I went to Wyoming for change of climate without benefit, was brought back to Atchison where nurses worked with me night and day to keep me alive to reach my friends here. There is plenty of human nature in all localities. But the men who stood in our New England pulpits a generation ago cannot but feel proud when they receive tidings from one and another who drank in their faithful messages of spiritual truth until their souls had grown as sturdy against the assaults of the rank temptations of life as the rock-ribbed hills against the wintry blast. And if those same devout, noble men can ever have the gratification of knowing how their sweet lives and kind influences have followed the various bundles of human nature that faced them in the pews, they will not need a more enduring proof that the memory of the just is blessed.

Yes, old Antrim has done well by the generation with whom I have had the acquaintance of growing up in your midst. She is doing no less, I hope, by the boys and girls who are descended from them. And though the ranks of 1872 have seen many a sad gap among them, there are many who "Though dead are yet speaking." I believe there is no truer growth than the extension of the right influence as it blossoms forth in the development of those lives into which it has taken root.

We were pleased to greet at our office on Friday afternoon last S. Anson Brown, a former owner and proprietor of the Antrim Reporter. He had a good word to say, as usual, for the people of Antrim and the patrons of this office.

Col. J. W. Convey, postmaster of Boston, died of pneumonia at his home in Cambridge, Mass., on Thursday last, after an illness of only a few days. Postmaster Convey proved to be one of the best and most popular officials who ever held the position.

The Republic has again showed itself grateful to the memory of the great captain General Gysseus S. Grant—who preserved its integrity when threatened with industrial disruption. The city of New York has provided an appropriate mausoleum, the body of the dead hero has been transferred to it, and the dedicatory ceremonies were attended by the President and his cabinet, the judges of our highest court, ambassadors from foreign lands, congressmen, state officials and legislators, and leading citizens. Hundreds of thousands of spectators were present to witness the parade of military and civic organizations, and the funeral.

The tomb of General Grant has been five years in building. It is located in Riverside Park, high above the Hudson, and conspicuous from many parts of the city. The lower portion is a square of the Egyptian Doric order, 100 feet on each side, this is surmounted by a circular cupola of 72 feet in diameter, with a pyramidal top 100 feet above grade. The interior is of the Ionic order. The material used is the finest granite. Directly beneath the center of the dome is the sarcophagus, made of red porphyry. An additional one will be provided to receive the remains of Mrs. Grant. The cost of the structure was about $500,000, contributed by about 90,000 individuals. This memorial, in its massiveness and simplicity, is every way worthy of its high purpose.

Rights of Man.

A paper in Harper's by Professor Francis N. Thayer shows the trend of modern economic thought. The paper is entitled "The Hundred Years' Campaign." It deals with the issues in our political campaigns for the past century.

How the issues have changed is well indicated in the following paragraphs: The new industrial doctrines which had triumphed over the doctrine of 1789 were laid forth in President Lincoln's first inaugural address. "The Union is much older than the Constitution. It was formed, in fact, by the articles of association in 1774. Ever since that time we have been in a constant process of evolution. It is not a mere parchment, but a living organism, which grows and changes with the times. It is not a mere parchment, but a living organism, which grows and changes with the times. It is not a mere parchment, but a living organism, which grows and changes with the times."

Laws against child labor and child giving have not been strictly enforced. Efforts to enforce them. How would it be to amend laws punishing the breaker there would then be a mass of lawyers to run to and fro, and the legislature would be a mere machine for passing money for his vote would be the only ground for his election. If the one who gives the vote were allowed to give his vote.

Spain has simply a right to fight against the patriots in the past two years 272, 483 soldiers, according to her own official statistics, and yet the revolution is no nearer being quelled than it was when she began. At the same time Spain has had on her hands the revolutions in the Philippines and in Puerto Rico. It looks as if she would begin to feel discouraged by this time.

The carrier trouble for delivering light packages is already seen in our large cities. It is something which can be used in every village and on every farm in the land.

A great life never dies, great deeds are imperishable, great names immortal," said President McKinley at Grant's tomb.

The losses of sheep and cattle upon the great western ranges the past winter were probably exaggerated in the reports, but even so they were something appalling. An individual whose loss is not to make necessary any more than the necessary condition that the Utah cattle amounted to 100,000 head, or 100,000 to say, had ten times as much as he had in the winter. It was a hard and hungry winter and he lost four of them to die. What kind of an economist would such a man be?

In the estimation of many persons the loss of all these cattle and an equal number of sheep arises from sheer wanton cruelty. The man who would willingly let a dumb brute that cannot help itself starve and freeze to death must be of a peculiar metaphysics. He sits down and calculates in cold blood whether it will be cheaper to provide food and shelter for his cattle and sheep in winter or let a certain percentage of them perish with cold and hunger. He usually takes the risks and decides that the number which die this awful death will not amount in value to as much as it would cost him to feed and shelter them. He is sometimes left in his calculations, as was the case last winter.

In seasons of unusual severity snow covers the wild grass so deep that the cattle can no longer find any food with their feet and noses to get the dried herbage which is all they have to keep them alive. Then they simply run up their backs and huddle together till they die of starvation and hunger. To a human mind there is something awful in the thought of this murderous system. These animals that probably became hardy and strong under the Shaver of the Minnesota Agricultural College call on the United States government to interfere and pass a law compelling these who use the public ranges to provide winter feed and shelter for cattle and sheep. This would be done if the animals were divided into smaller herds and among a greater number of owners.

At any rate the evil will in time cure itself. As the great grazing grounds are more and more reached with stock the wild grass will gradually be so slowly cropped that the losses will be so great that the range will be so much in its own interest to winter stock on a farm.

We have seen in the past where a poor man has made his fortune his ability, and he has made it for a foreign country of any importance. The salary was paid, although it was $75,000 a year in first class expenses, it is still sufficient to cover expenses. This is such a circumstance it would not be a bad idea to establish these ornamental emblems. They are only so-called emblems. The ocean and the safe steamship and railway, the rapidly growing treaty of agriculture and the telegraph newspaper correspondent have done away with the need of the minister at a foreign capital. There is really little work for him except to make poetry after dinner speeches and to present American gifts at foreign courts.

Great as the progress is in the United States, it is not so great in the rest of the world. The number of the population and the amount of land as well as the amount of the year in our history is not so great, when the peak of the population is reached high in the air. In the case of the Ohio river for our farmers and livestock men it is a great loss. They raised 1,000,000.

What is the result of the new theories to be tried? The result is to be and influence to be tried. They are always tried out. The taking of unclean money is always brought home to them, and they are always tried out with infamy. There is no one of living who is not a part of the new theories of men who are not a part of their own nature. It is a part of their own nature with the new theories.

Laws against child labor and child giving have not been strictly enforced. Efforts to enforce them. How would it be to amend laws punishing the breaker there would then be a mass of lawyers to run to and fro, and the legislature would be a mere machine for passing money for his vote would be the only ground for his election. If the one who gives the vote were allowed to give his vote.

Spain has simply a right to fight against the patriots in the past two years 272, 483 soldiers, according to her own official statistics, and yet the revolution is no nearer being quelled than it was when she began. At the same time Spain has had on her hands the revolutions in the Philippines and in Puerto Rico. It looks as if she would begin to feel discouraged by this time.

The carrier trouble for delivering light packages is already seen in our large cities. It is something which can be used in every village and on every farm in the land.

A great life never dies, great deeds are imperishable, great names immortal," said President McKinley at Grant's tomb.

BENNINGTON.
Work continues very dull in the Goodell shop.

Geo. L. Herrick is thoroughly renovating the interior of his house.

Arbor day passed here, as did East Day unobserved.

Miss Maud Philbrick is quite ill with a throat trouble; Dr. Cheever of Marlboro' attends her.

Don't go fishing next Sunday, boys. The eyes of the Fish Warden are upon you.

Mrs. A. N. Russell and Miss Lillian have returned to their home at Shelburne Falls, Mass.

Miss Sophia M. Swett, of Lowell, Mass., has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Eugene Scarbo, for several weeks, and is now visiting friends in Pittsfield, N. H.

Frederic Holt has returned from the asylum at Concord, he is in good health and his friends hope he may continue so.

The Benningtons defeated the Hancock at Base Ball, on home grounds last Saturday, by a score of 16 to 13.

To-day (Wednesday) is Christian Endeavor Day in Bennington. Interesting meetings are being held and largely attended. Special trains are run to and from Peterboro, so Endeavorists can attend any and all meetings.

Miss Clotilda Carlen is at home from Detroit, Mich., where she and Mrs. Carlen have spent the winter with her father, Mr. William Carlen.

Isaac Balch went to Boston Tuesday.

Mrs. E. M. Herrick has moved her stock of millinery and fancy goods. Notice her advertisement in another column.

Mrs. Eliza Proctor and Miss Eva who have been in Keene for nearly a year have returned to their home here.

Quite a number in this town had deposits in the bank of the New Hampshire Banking Company at Nashua, which was quarterly closed its doors last week. Nearly all of them are confident that they will, in time, receive the full amount on deposit.

The Annual Ball of the Home Benefit Association drew a large gathering last Friday evening. The Wahnetals furnished music; about $29. was realized for the Association.

About twenty, mostly strangers, from here attended the Masquerade given by Oak Hill Grange at Franconstown last Thursday evening, and passed a most enjoyable evening. The hospitality of this grange is well known to visiting patrons.

Quincy Kossel has gone to New Haven, Conn., where he expects to receive employment. Thus one after another are forced to leave town for brighter fields.

The Misses Marguerite Cashion and Mary Flaherty of Manchester visited in town last week.

Of course fishing was begun early Saturday morning and has steadily continued since, excepting of course the 21 hours between Saturday and Monday. Some good strings have been caught; C. E. Sawyer and Harry Ross got to good ones on their string, but for the most part, stories are large and fish small.

We wish to state that there are three yoke of oxen in town instead of one as reported a short time since. As the owners of these cattle did not know which yoke was referred to as the one we would say that Harold Durrah, Geo. Dodge and James Favor are the proud possessors of these animals. It is easy to make mistakes.

There is nothing just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, so demand it and do not permit the dealer to sell you some substitute. He will not learn there is anything better, but in order to make more profit he may turn something else to be just as good. You want Dr. King's New Discovery because you know it to be safe and reliable, and guaranteed to do good or money refunded. For Coughs, Colds, Consumption and for all affections of Throat, Chest and Lungs, here is nothing so good as Dr. King's New Discovery. Trial bottle free at Antrim Pharmacy. Clinton Fowler is moving onto the L. B. Buttman Farm.

About 70 of their friends, including Bradford Band, visited Mr. and Mrs. Rogers Presby on Saturday night, to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their wedded life. Many valuable presents were left in remembrance of the occasion. Cake and coffee were served and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Mr. Presby has been a member of the band since its organization several years ago.

Franconstown. Mr. Samuel Newton fell from a chimney on Mr. Balch's tenement, finally stopping with his face in the mortar bed. His face was badly cut, his nose was broken and some bruises inflicted. He was taken to his daughter's, Mrs. Brown's, where he has been tenderly cared for. He is doing finely, although it was rather risky for a man eighty years old.

Mrs. Edith Woodbury Whiton has returned to her home in Quincy, Mass.

Could Not Help Myself for Three Months—Impure Blood Causes Great Suffering—How Relief Came—Better than Ever Before.

"I have been in poor health owing to impure blood, weak stomach, biliousness and sick headaches, ever since I was a child eight years old. I have suffered everything for the past 17 years. I got so low that I could not help myself for three months, and was pale and thin. My neighbors did not expect me to live through the winter. I asked my doctor if I could take Hood's Sarsaparilla and he said that I could take as much of it as I liked. I very soon found it helped me very much. I continued its use until I had taken six bottles, and at that time I looked better than I ever did since I can remember. I shall never be without Hood's Sarsaparilla as long as I can get it. It helped me more than any other medicine that I have ever taken. I advise anyone who is in poor health to try this great blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla. I owe my life to this medicine." A pain in the chest is nature's warning that pneumonia is threatened. Buy a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bind over the seat of pain and another on the back between the shoulders, and prompt relief will follow. Sold by Putney & Little, Druggists.

Everybody Says So. Chamberlain's Candy Cathartic, the most wonderful medical discovery of the age, plus an anti-poisoning and refreshing to the taste, and positively on kidneys, liver and bowels, clearing the entire system, abating colic, cure headaches, fever, habitual constipation and biliousness. Please buy and try a box of Chamberlain's Candy Cathartic. Sold and guaranteed to cure by all druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICES. A child was cured of cramp by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

"Better to wear out than to rust out," should not hold true with camom.

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favorable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

Who so loveth not his brother is an ass; he may want to borrow money of him later.

Avoid alcoholic preparations for the hair; they injure it. Hall's Hair Renewer contains no alcohol; its components are natural food to produce healthy hair.

A weedless garden is always a hoe made affair.

Not Exactly Right is the way thousands of people feel. It is because their blood is poor. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier, will promptly set them right.

No one but a monster will thoughtlessly load the overworked horse on the underworked road.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or gripe. All druggists, 25c.

Horses rarely die of old age and yet all horses die.

PURE BLOOD is the foundation of health. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure, rich and nourishing, and gives and maintains good HEALTH.

R. H. Wilder PETERBOROUGH,

Brush fires have been raging in several places in town recently. Sunday, Apr. 25, a fire started on the Wm. L. Savage place and swept down the hill to very near Millard Wilson's house. It did a good deal of damage to building timber. Monday following at about 3 p. m. a fire started at the railroad crossing on the plain near the old fair ground, and with a strong wind to fan the flames it soon spread over the plain at a rapid rate. The fire alarm was sounded and a good number responded quickly, until nearly every man was fighting fire, but they could not get it under control. A telegram was sent to Nashua for help and at about ten o'clock at night a special train arrived with fifty or more men, but the wind, which blew a gale all the afternoon, had somewhat died down and the fire was pretty well under control before the relief arrived. However they went to work with a will and helped to subdue that which is a good servant, but a cruel master. A good many people in the village were badly frightened for fear it might take the houses as well as the brushwood and timber. Some packed their best cloths and silverware in grips ready for transportation to a place of safety. It did look serious for the safety of the village at one time. The plain was burned over five years ago this month.

John H. Holt came home from work on the Fitchburg railroad for a few days rest and to nurse a lame ankle made by jumping from his engine.

The selectmen have repaired the town hall, according to the vote taken at the March meeting. The old tumble down horse sheds near the church have also been righted up and shingled.

C. H. Hopkins and G. F. Russell have bought a pine timber lot in Bennington. Mr. Russell will soon move his mill from the south part of Greenfield to that place.

Fred A. Smith and family have moved back here and now occupy their house near the soapstone mill. Fred is going for G. F. Russell.

Rev. P. R. Crowell preached his farewell sermon Sunday, Apr. 25. The day was fine and a good number was out. The text was from 1st Samuel, xiv, 21.—Transcript.

The Ins and Outs of It.

If you get best wear out of a coat, best work must have gone into it. You can't get good bread out of poor flour.

Moral: You can't get the best out of anything, unless the best is in it; and the best has to be put in before it can be taken out. Now, we have a rare to test those sarsaparillas with a big "best" on the bottle. "Tell us what's put in you and we'll decide for ourselves about the best." That's fair. But these modest sarsaparillas say: "Oh! we can't tell. It's a secret. Have faith in the label." . . . Stop! There's one exception; one sarsaparilla that has no secret to hide. It's Ayer's. If you want to know what goes into Ayer's Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor to write for the formula. Then you can satisfy yourself that you get the best of the sarsaparilla argument when you get Ayer's.

Any doubt left? Get the "Curebook." It tells the story of our cure docters. Address: J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
