BUT THE NEW TENANT DID NOT CAR-RY OUT HIS PROGRAMME.

He Thought He Could Bluff the Office Elevator Boy, and There is Where He Made an Awful Mistake-The Boy's Story of His Revenge.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.] A few weeks ago, when Mr. Rockaway, the kodak agent, moved into room 68, he took an early opportunity to say

"Sammis, there are owners of skyscrapers, and there are agents and janitors of skyscrapers, but the elevator boy is the real boss."

"Yes, sir; he is," I humbly replied. "If he stands in with the tenant, that tenant is all right; if he don't stand in, then the tenant might as well hunt for another office. I want to stand in with the affairs as that in room 68 cause gos you, Sammis."

"You are a widow's son. Here's half a dollar to cheer your mother's lonely long remain so. Something may bob heart. You are trying to pay off the up at any moment, however, but if it Quarters and halves and dollars will chink and rattle around here and pass from me to you with astonishing frequency. All you've got to do is to look out for my interests." "Yes, sir."

"Should a woman call bere, Sammis -an oldish woman, with red bair and a sharp nose and a voice like a file"-"You are out, of course. She's the woman who wants contributions for the heathen, and you don't want to be bothered."

"Exactly, Sammisi And you are a jewel!" he said as he patted me on the head. "I am always to be out when she calls. You are to discourage her from calling again. You may even hint that I have removed to Chicago or St. Louis. I see you closely scrutinizing my side whiskers, Sammis. Don't you like the color?"

"Yes, sir, but they are false." "Ah, Sammis, another quarter for the gigantic mortgage. 'It's a little notion of mine to wear false whiskers for a few weeks, and nothing need be said about it. What we know we know, but we keep mum about it. You trust me; I trust you. We'll make that mortgage look sick in a month or two. Ta, ta, Sammial I think we understand each

I thought so, too, and it was all right for two or three weeks. Mr. Rockaway didn't come down with any more haives, but I didn't lay that up against him. It was what he said and did that burt my feelings. One day at the fourth floor a lawyer's boy called me a sawed off liar. I stopped the elevator to punch his head and thus was late getting up to answer a call from Mr. Rockaway. He was mad about it, and, taking me by the ear, he said: "You trifling young monkey, but I'll have no more of this! I've a good mind to report you to the agent and have you bounced! What do you mean by such

"That makes no difference. From this time out I shall have an eye on you, and you'll either walk chalk or get the bounce. Do you hear me?" The iron struck home. From that hour I waited and lenged for a redheaded, sharp noved woman to appear.

Luck was with me. On the afternoon of the fifth day she walked in and made straight for me and said: "Bub, I'm looking for a man named Bocksway. I'm his wife." "Have you got business with him?" I

"I have strict business. Is there jush a man in this building?"
"There is a Mr. Reckiway here, but

"(h, he has! Well, I'll pull 'est off in these seconds! Take me right up." I took her up. I als not a bad alove-Sold by C. H. Martin, Druggist, until I saw her enter room 68 and heard the first shock of collision, and then I had business elsewhere. What happened after that was told by the typewriter in Mr. Rockaway's office When the redheaded woman bounced into the room, she first attacked those beautiful side whiskers, and they were wrecked in a breath. Then she started in to wreck things, and her language was English and her tones loud. She had the whole floor alarmed in two minutes, and the people who rushed in found the typewriter girl hiding under the desk and Mr. Rockaway on the floor and mixed up with broken furniture. It was lively while it lasted, and the redheaded woman had breath enough left to explain that the man on his back was her lawful husband, but had run away from her in Buffalo a year before. He had nothing to say in reply, and when the agent came up and told him that he had better look for other quarters he prepared to move. I didn't see him until the remains of his office furniture had been sent away. Then he rang for me to take him down. He had not resumed his side whiskers. There were scratches all over his fuce and neck, a lump on his jaw, and the wildness yet lingered in his eyes. I expected he would threaten or reproach me, but he didn't feel at all that way. On the contrary, there was sadness in he reached out for a farewell shake and said: "Sammis, I cannot blame you. I be gan right, but I did not carry out the programme. I started in to be a father to you and to help lift that gigantic mortgage, but later on I decided that bluff would be the game to work. You saw my bluff and went one better. It was you who brought her up?"

"Yes, sir." "And you gave my side whiskers away?"

"Well, it was my own fault. Office gone, whiskers gone, typewriter gone and the redheaded woman camped on my trail. I am financially ruined, Sammis, and can't say that I have even saved my honor. However, here's my hand, and I bear you no ill will. If I die, I shall forgive you; if I live on, it will be a great moral lesson to me." That afternoon Mr. Rasher, the agent, called me into his office and said: "Bammis, has your wounded dignity been healed?"

"Yes, sir." "Then don't take any more redhead ed women up in the elevator. Such litsip and hurt our business." Just at present our building is a quiet as a graveyard, and I hope it may Utter Failure of a Costly Experiment to Make Spiders Weave Silk. As long ago as the beginning of the eighteenth century the idea of using the thread that the spider spins from its body as a substitute for the thread unwrapped from the cocoon of the silkworm was broached, but with little practical result. An Englishman, Mr. Rolt, secured 20,000 feet of silk thread from, 22 spiders in two hours. Of late some experiments have been conducted by curious persons to ascertain which spider produced the best and largest quantity of silk, for it has been demonstrated that it is an excellent substitute for that of the silkworm. Spiders from Paraguay and Argentina, from India, China and Australia, were tried, but the best results were secured from the spiders of Madagascar.

It was found that after laying her eggs the female spider spins most free ly. Six of these were selected and confined for the test. From one 2,000 yards of thread were secured in ten Hall Carpets, days; from the second, 1,350 yards in seven days; from the third and fourth, 450 yards in four days; from the fifth. 1,400 yards in 11 days, and from the sixth, 4,200 yards in 27 days. A German manufacturer was so de lighted with this test that he made elaborate arrangements for baying ;

Union Convention.

The Twenty-ninth convention of the Contoocook Valley Union, Y. P. S. C. E., was held at the Baptist church in this place last Friday. The exercises opened at 11 o'clock in charge of Rev. B. H. Lane, and at 11.55 an open air service in front of the church, led by Rev. H. A. Coolidge, of Francestown. The afternoon services commenced at 1.80 and were attended by a good number who were much interested in the remarks of the several speakers and inproved the opportunity of listening to the different phases and branches of the work carried on by this organization, and comparing the ideas and methods ad-Samuel R. Found Guilty!

You recall the story of the prisoner who, on being asked if he was guilty, replied, "I guess I am Judge, but I would like to be tried all the same." Now you are guilty of not knowing our "High Grade" coffee. We do not suggest that you be tried on this charge, but that you try the coffee instead. Like the man who made it an invariable rule of his life to take a bath once a year whether he needed it or not, it is a good plan to know something about whether you drink it or not. As a matter of fact, you never can tell when you may drink it. Our own opinion is that you will drink it just as soon as you have tried a cup. The next time you get out of patience with your old coffee, get clean out, - and clear it out ! Buy another brand. What brand that will be depends on how much you know of Chase & Sanborn's High Grade Coffee.

There are a dozen ways to miss this knowledge. There is only one best way to secure it. Buy a pound!

"The question at issue," Charles Shaefer said quietly, "is between this and that."

"This" was a man, a native black his back in the little valley, his unseeing eyes wide onen motionless again Our Loss is Your Gain! ing eyes wide open, motionless save for an occasional twitching of the muscles, his life blood trickling through the hastily applied bandage which concealed the bullet wound in the head. The man was silent, except when his parched lips moved in the inarticulate mutter of delirium.

Charles Shaefer, Reuter's special correspondent in the Transvaal, did not allow his eyes to linger long upon the piteous black figure. His gaze reverted to "that," a small package of papers, evidently of great importance, carefully wrapped in a waterproof covering which he had drawn from his

"Now that we are reduced to two horses only," he went on, his eyes shifting for a moment to the carcass of a third horse which lay dead some 20 vards off, "and seeing that we are in the enemy's country, probably 24 hours' ride from the nearest well of water and that this nigger is a dead weight on our bands'

"You surely don't dream of abandon ing the poor devil?" Tom Barker broke Shaefer glanced uneasily at his companion. Barker was a puzzle to him, a poor man of distinguished literary ability, young, but already a success as a journalist, yet occasionally betraying a vein of sentimentality altogether out of place in connection with his friend of Teutonic origin. Shaefer had had Inconvenient experience of this "too English" peculiarity more than once during the three months' enforced imprisonment in Ladysmith, from which they had just escaped with the invaluable help of the negro runner. "You wouldn't leave him here to die?" the Englishman persisted. Shaefer rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "He's sure to die soon in any case." "I don't think so. If we can get him on my horse and carry him a bit out of

"It's out of the question, Barker. He cannot walk, and these two horses are already tired out, and we cannot

"Besides, the horses are my property," continued the German. "I had to pay a big price for them in Ladysmith, Remember and we've already lost one in our recent encounter with the Boer outposts. I must get my dispatches in at the nearest telegraph station. It's 40 miles off yet, and I suppose you want to get yours in, too, for the London T---. I reckon on selling these beasts when we get safely over the Tugela river, and don't propose leaving one behind." And the German's eyes gleamed angrily, his voice thick with passion. "What's the life of a nigger runner worth?" he growled.

"He's a man, anyway," Tom Barker retorted. "Suppose I refuse to leave the fellow?

"Then"-and now Shaefer became ominously cool-"I shall again be foreed to remind you that your horse is my property. I go, and the horse you ride goes with me. You can come or not, as you please." Barker turned pale. "That is the choice you offer me? Then I say you are a blackguard." "And I say," indifferently, "that you are a fool. Come, will you mount?"

"No." furiously

The Reuter correspondent shrugged his shoulders.

"Have it your own way," he said. "You'll be food for the Boers before morning." And, gathering up the reins of the second horse, he prepared to jump into his own saddle. But here Barker sprang upon him suddenly. "No, you don't," be cried. "You shall leave me one horse, you brute, though it were a hundred times your prop-

"Stand off!" the German cried. Tom Barker's answer was to close with him silently, and there ensued a trial of strength the issue of which seemed for several minutes doubtful. The men were not badly matched. Shaefer was a little heavier, but he was older by 15 years, and Barker's rithe body had known an English public school training. The result of the fight seemed uncertain, when the German suddenly loosed his hold and fell back, leaving the reins of the second horse almost in the other's clutches But Barker, raising his head and about to seize the reins, found himself covered by his antagonist's revolver. "Now, perhaps," the German correspondent observed, "you will listen to reason. I know you haven't got a gun on you, my friend. I know something of your strange English character. There is nothing like being ready for any emergency that may arise."

Tom Barker, under the covering revolver, stood erect and mute. To argue further with a man prepared to commit murder on behalf of a horse and a few news dispatches of no great importance would be simple waste of Keeping the muzzle of the revolver pointed full at Barker's breast, Shaefer jumped into his saddle, and, seizing the reins of the other horse, he started off at a sharp trot. As long as Barker remained in running distance the German occasionally looked back to be sure he was not followed. In five minutes he was but a speck in the distance on the South African veldt. "It's your own fault, remember, if you lose your life and fail to get your news in Monday's London T-," was his final greeting as he disappeared over the crest of the nearest kopje, turning to his right. When he had disappeared, Barker looked around him, reviewing the situation. It was not a very cheering prospect that met his eye. Two hills, or kopies, of some thousand feet rose to the right and left, and he could see the setting sun on the horison between them far beyond on the veldt. The day had been intensely bot. "I don't know what the deuce to do now," thought Barker. As if in answer to the question the wounded guide rolled over on his side, making an effort to

It was too late now to warn the Ger- | n. m. p. m. man correspondent. He was far out of When Tom Barker and the negro guide, the latter resting against the 11 14 Englishman's shoulder, staggered into 11 48 the hut of a friendly Kaffir just before 945 sunrise the next morning, they could | 5 30 obtain no tidings of the German. But they received a rude welcome and a rough shakedown from the long suffering Kaffirs, who had during the war learned to respect the English race. The next day Tom Barker, with a new guide, started off once more for the British camp on the Tugela. They reached it at sunset the next evening, and Barker reported himself to the commanding officer, who was glad to get news of the beleaguered army in Ladysmith, and, although Tom Barker begged for a party to go out in search of the lost German correspondent, the stern general steadily refused to listen to his request. And heaven only knows to this hour what did become of the wretched Shaefer. There were many rumors.
