Mr. Tompkins' Will

He lived in an at the bed. old homestead not far from a well known city up the state, and his wants were attended to by an elderly bousekeeper and several servants, male and female. After I became a lawyer it prise and approached the form, wonwas my duty to see Mr. Tompkins | dering how the sick man could have quite frequently in relation to his property and so forth. He was a kindly having observed him. I did not lose man, somewhat reserved, and, when I my presence of mind, but took a step first knew him, probably 65 years of toward the dimly outlined figure. not well be forgotten. Mr. Tompkins was in the habit of spending a good deal of time away from home, and the impression of my father and myself was that he was recuperating in Florida. He went and returned without notice, and his domestics, being used to his ways, never troubled themselves at his absence, day with the undertaker. while at the same time they were exceedingly careful to have everything ready for his reception whenever he might return. Neither to me nor to my father did he ever utter any explanation of his absences from home or make any allusion to them whatsosver. "One day Mr. Tompkins came to our office and asked for my father. He kins sat down and talked with me. He asked me how I had spent my time at college and about my associates and a pause which lasted some moments

"I looked out of the window and saw my father coming toward the office.

"My father is coming," anis.
"Mr. Tompkins are see and glanced to ward the street. Then he stepped to one side and appeared to me to be brushing something of his coat pleave. The next instant he wheeled right, round, staggered and fell. My father entered just at the time, and both of us hastened to raise Mr. Tomptins and place him on a chain- We seak for his physician right away, and when he came he said that Mr. Temphine wee suffering from an attack of apoplexity He was conveyed to his home, and the best attendance was procured for him.

"My father's impression was that hip ! client had come to see him of sould imthe effice unless a matter in which he was deeply and anxiously interested impelled him to de so. His sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom was to consider the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould custom was to consider the sould custom with the sould cus tom was to send his carriage for my father when he desired to consult him What the subject could be which induced Mr. Tompkins to visit the office if you haven't that morning neither my father nor I

"We talked over the incident long and carefully, and in the course of the conversation I mentioned to my father some facts which it had not struck me before were of sufficient importance to mention. It was not often that at that time in my history I visited New York. In fact, up to the time of which l speak I had been to the city only twice.
It was a circumstance which secured on my last visit that I mentioned to my father. The business that took me to the city was in relation to some documente affecting wooded lands up the KEEP YOUR BLOOD GLEAN state in which a client was interested. I met an old college friend, and one day he and I went down to Long Branch together. After taking in the sights; we were naturally hungry and went to the best botel we could select. Seated at a table near to us was a party consisting of an elderly gentleman and lady and several young people of both sexes, ranging from 5 to 16 years.

The gentleman was sested with his back to me, and it struck me that I was familiar with the contour of the head, I tried hard to get a night of the face, But did not succeed until I was leavies when I so managed as to precure in pretty doed thew at the godtle-man' Countednice.

"I faced round and looked the gentieman square in the eye, but he never winced or gave the slightest indication of recognition. Then I went away with my mind in a turmoil. If I had been called upon to swear to the man's identity in a court of law, I would have Cone so without hesitation but for the fact that, though returning my glance with one as prelenged and steady as my own, he had shown ito sign of recognition. "Now, I needn't tell you how my father and myself began to speculate or what thoughts were exchanged. Suffice to may that none of our surmises approached the truth.

"And now, to go back to Mr. Tompkins' sudden seizure and the events which followed. Of course our inquiries after the sick man were frequent, and my father called several times, but Mr. Tompkins did not for some time recover consciousness. At length he began to evince some slight intelligence, and my father or myself was thereafter with him day and night, so that if he recovered his senses we might be ready to do anything for him he might desire in relation to the arrangement of his affairs. He had no relatives near at hand and, in fact, none with whom he ever directly communicated. He had a younger brother who had disgraced himself and been a convict and was occasionally helped through us by Mr. Tompkins, but always in so indirect a manner as to prevent his discovering the whereabouts of his benefactor. So far as we knew, Mr. Tompkins had made no will, and yet we knew that he must be worth over $1,500,000.

"But I will come to the occurrence to which I alluded at the outset. I was sitting in the sick man's room one night reading before the fire. He grew restless, and I arose and saw that he was moving and struggling as though trying to rise. I spoke to him, and he tried hard to respond and gripped my band with extraordinary vigor for s every exertion to sit up in hed, I helped easily, I resumed my place at the fire side, once and again casting a glance

"Suddenly I experienced a strange sensation, and, on looking up, I saw a spectral figure standing right opposite me. I rose with an exclamation of surleft his bed and passed me without my as to appearance and character. He ward a small, old fashloned desk which ity, and by the time you read stood on the top of a bookcase. I turned, ex Goods, I knew him, it had turned to gray, but pecting to see the figure moving to ward the bed. Nothing, however, was visible. I went to the bed and gazed upon a corpse! "The man was dead beyond question. I summoned the housekeeper and other attendants, and when the body was properly disposed all of us quitted the room. I locked the door and gave the key into the custody of the housekeep er, directing her to allow no one to enter the room until my father came next

"Next morning I accompanied my father to the house. I had already informed him what had occurred, and as soon as some other matters were arranged my father took the desk, and we retired to another room. On opening the desk there was apparently nothing in it but a quire of note paper. We made a close examination; but, as was not in just then, and Mr. Tomp- it was simply a desk to be carried in the hand or in a trunk, we found nothing that would indicate any secret drawer. I took up the note paper and my age and many other things. After carelessly turned over the sheets. A surprise was in store, for on the inside sheet there was writing. Memorial Day. On Monday evening of this week the occasion was celebrated work the past week on Summer street by the members of Waverley and Hand in Hand Rebekah Lodges of Antrim, in their hall, commencing at 8 o'clock. The service was in charge of a committee from month, has gone to Bristol, this state, the Subordinate and Rebekah where he has employment. Lodges, and was presided over by H. W. Eldredge, Noble Grand of Waverley Lodge. The program was practically as adopted by the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and consisted of prayers and reading of ritual by Chaplain, L. D. Cole; singing by mixed and male quartettes; remarks by Noble Grand with reading of order from aita al; reading of names of deceased members by Secretary, J. R. Pet ney; biographies and eulogies prepared by members, with remarks suitable to the occasion.

About fifty were present and enjoyed the exercises as well as those of this nature could be. It is a most fitting observance to Guard Your Sight With a Pair of departed brothers and sisters, and these tributes of respect are an honor to the memory of those who have been identified with the fraternity and now gone to join the great lodge above.

A table was placed at the upper end of the hall on which were placed the photographs of deceased members, Brother Frank Cramand Sisters Mary Cole and Abbie Tuttle. On this table were also placed bouquets and cut flowers, and at one side of the table stood a cross made of evergreen and at the other side an anchor, in addition to potted plants; other decorations were about the hall. It was a very neat and tasty arrangement.

The New Steam Mill.

The centre of interest to-day is at Mr. Walter Buchanan's in West An trim. The attraction there is Mr. Currier's plant for sawing lumber. The mill is located on Cold Brook, close by the road on Mr. Buchanan's farm Mr Frank Amidon of Richmond, this state, has bought several lumber lots near here, and it will furnish work for some months to clear it away. He sold this lot to Mr. E W Currier of Hillsboro Bridge.

Mr Currier has brought to West Antrim, a new industry, he has a new Steam Mill and everything about the place up to date and first class, the whole cost of the mill is about twenty six hundred dollars; everything about the plant is progressing finely, between 12 and 14 M. ft. of lumber are sawed daily, the quality of the lumber is above the average. Mr. Currier is a pleasant man to meet and one who understands his business. Near the mill are two cottages built, one for Mr. Rogers, who works in the mill, and the other one Mr. Currier had built for himself. I called there and met Mrs. Currier and her little daugh-

Mr. Walter Buchanan lives on the other side of the road, 1 of a mile east of the mill. He has a fine location, a nice large house overlooking the North Brauch river and a fine view of the mountains. If a city person desired a quiet rural retreat, this would be a good place to spend the hot August days. Mr. Buchanan makes his boarders welcome. Ten men sit down every day to a table where everything is furnished nicely, and in abundance; Mrs. Buchanan makes a cantal hostess. Oue-half hour spent in this courteous neighborhood is time well improved.

The Antrim Reporter extends its best wishes to Mr. Currier and hopes that he will find success in this new N. W.

The High Schools in Antrim.

In Historic Article Which Will be Interest to the Older as Well as the Younger People.

Antrim people have always been hard thinking, deep minded race. This element shows itself in their mental and moral growth. The aim of this article is to show how ready the people were to consecrate their best powers to learning. Nearly structure from whose dome is the one-half a century ago, from humble surroundings, arose a cortege of young gentlemen and ladies who dedicated their young lives to mental ad- plies, I close. vancement. They stand high fo-day as an outgrowth of Antrim's Select Schools. I shall not try to describe every such school taught here in former years, but only such as come within the range of memory.

They were called Select Schools in 1850. The name was appropriate, are in Lyme, called there by the illness for there were chosen from this and adjoining towns an ambitious band of Bass are biting very freely at Gregg young people ready to study hard and improve all the advantages of a Select School. These schools were started by "subscription." If the paper circulated contained twenty names, a school house was hired and a teacher found. The first Select School I recell was taught in the Autumn of 1858, Dr. S. M. Dinsmoor as teacher. He taught again, at North Branch in the fall of 1860. The school had Granville Whitney and Tom Brooks nearly 40 scholars each term. These terms were a great uplift to the cause of education in town. Dr. Dinsmoor made his pupils see things as he saw them; a gift that few teachers possess. When he left the school-room for the study of medicine some college lost a good professor. Daniel Barber taught a Select

School at North Branch, I have not the date but he was a Methodist minister stationed here to preach. He was a fine teacher and an inspiration for good wherever he lived. The next term taught at North Branch was in the fall of 1863, Augusta Barber as teacher. Miss Barber was the daughter of a Universalist minister; a tall, large woman with will-power News has reached Antrim that enough to command an army. She taught three torms. These schools were large, more than twenty-five pupils came from out of town. She brought her scholars out a great ways in advance in all the branches taught. At the close of school Mr. Kirk Pierce, Mr. John Bickford and Mr. Fawn Wallace were our "Examining were obliged to admit that they could transact any and all town business.

> Then Mr. Frederick Little taught at Antrim Centre. It was a large school with higher English; Mr. Little taught music. He was a fine teacher, those of his pupils who are living to-day will attest the truth of this statement. Dr. Dinsmoor is now living in Keene, also because he is the only Ex-High Gilbert. We mourn for John Bickford to-day.

In 1868 Prof. James E. Vese opened a Select School at Autrim Centre. He taught three terms at the Centre and then the school was moved to "Waverley Hall," South Antrim. Mr. Vosc had a school of seventy-five pupils in the spring of 1873 at that Clay is whitewash; it is to paint what place. This was a very successful term and the last of Mr. Vose's labors in town. Sunday last was celebrated by the Baptist people at their church as children's Sunday. In the morning Rev. B. H. Lane preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion to a good sized audience. In the evening a large company assembled to listen to the concert given by the children, which had been prepared in a most painstaking manner, and proved that the committee in charge did their work in a thorough manner and heir efforts were rewarded. The children took their parts well, whether speaking or singing, and the hour taken up in this way was very interesting and it is hoped was instructive to all pre-

Why So Many Young Men Fail.

"One trouble with many young men who start out in business is they try to do too many things at once," says Hetty Green. "The result is that they don't know as much as they ought to about any one thing, and they naturally fail. The trouble with young men who work on salaries is that they're always afraid of doing more than they're paid for. They don't enter into their work with the right spirit. To get on and be appreciated a young man must do more than he's paid to do. When he does something that his employer has not thought of, he shows that he is valuable. Men are always willing to pay good salaries to people who will think of things for them. The man who only carries out the thoughts and ideas of another is nothing more than a mere tool. Men who can be relied upon are always in demand. The scarcest thing in the world oday is a thoroughly reliable man."

Colonel Bunker Tells How the Cod-Was Outraged In the Preliminaries and How a Sanguinary Outcome Was Happily Averted.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewie.] "I had gone to a small town in Mississippi to rest and recuperate, sub,' said the colonel as he restored his glass to the table, "to rest and recuperate after my hard work in the state senate. I hadn't been there a day when I met up with a person who called himself General Blum. He didn't have the look of a general, suh, but I didn't start in asking questions. I accepted his word that he had been a generalaccepted his word as a gentleman does, and he invited me into the near est barroom to imbibe a cocktail. We didn't imbibe. When the general called for drinks for two, his order was not taken. In other words, suh, as he didn't put down his money the cock tails remained unmixed. The general looked at me appealingly, but I turned away. I would not hurt his feelings by offering to pay for the drinks.

"Had General Blum stopped there all would have been well, but he did not stop. Next day he called on me to talk over the late wah. It wasn't ten minutes, suh, before I began to doubt him. I found that he didn't know the difference between a charge of cavalry and a drove of mewls. When he had related how he led his division at Gettysburg, dashed forward at Spottsylvania and received three wounds at Petersburg, I rose up I rose up to my full height, suh-and, looking him straight between the eyes, I said: 'General Blum, yo' will excuse me, suh, but where can I find yo'r wah rec-

"'Nowhere,' he replied. "They were so jealous of me that it has never been written up. "We had a few other words, suh, and I felt that it was due to my dignity to challenge him. He received the challenge coolly and sent his friend to arrange matters. Claiming to be a soldier and a gentleman, he selected pickaxes as weapons. Think of it, suhthink of a gentleman taking such a course! I refused, of co'se. Then he turned to plantation hoes, to cotton hooks, to ball clubs and to long handled shovels. It was my duty under the circumstances to preserve my dignity, and it has gone down in history that I preserved it. I insisted that we fight with sword or pistol, and I refused to dignify him by debating his proposals. Then General Blum himself called to see me. He found me frigid and determined. 'Colonel Bunker,' says he, 'yo' have doubted my veracity, and I desire to shed yo'r blood. I desire to shed it by the quart and the gallon. If yo' are not a coward, yo' will meet me at sunrise across the river across the river, suh! As the challenged party I have the choice of weapons. I will name scythes, suh-scyther -at two paces! The scythe is an emblem of time, Colonel Bunker, and it was with a scythe I mowed down scores of the enemy at Appomattox." "I stood on my dignity, suh-stood on my dignity and rejected the weap-No gentleman had ever fought a duel with a scythe in his hands. It would degrade the code-degrade the code, suh, and make me a public laughing stock. I stormed at that man, suh. I begged and entreated and even sought to bribe him to meet me with pistols or swords. But he was firm. He was settled on scythes and would not budge. I bowed him out and appealed to the public. And on my honah, suh, on the honah of the man who led the desperate charge at Cedar Mountain, the public agreed with General Blum! Yes, suh, the public contented that it was my duty as a with to engage in a duel with 1 brought forward the code

"A duel with scythes, suh-a meeting on the field of honah with farmimg implements! No gentleman's dignity would permit of it. I argued and protested and disputed, but General Blum and the public were firm. In standing to my guns I lost prestige. At the end of three days scarcely a man in town would nod to me, and the newspapers were asking if Colonel Bunker was afraid. It was then, suh, and only then, that I resolved to fight the general with his own weapons. I must do it to save my prestige. The public was with me at once. I had my pick of 20 different scythes, and I was determined from the first that I would begin at the general's heels and gradually cut him down to his neck. No mercy should be shown in such a case. Public excitement ran as high as if a state election was be ing held, and when the morning of the duel came there were hundreds on the ground to see. I set fo'th with my scythe on my shoulder and was first on the ground, but the general was only a few minutes behind me. I had planned to begin at his heels, but his plan was to begin at my head. I saw it in his eyes as we stood there. Yes, sub, he meant to decapitate me at the first sweep. Mo' than that, he had sent to New Orleans for a special scythe, and he had secured one about

The word was about to be given, and in another moment the emblems of time would have been swishing through the air, when a mewl who was chased by a nigger came galloping that way. He busted through the people, sub-he busted his way right slong-and he struck the general and knocked him into a ditch and then planted both beels on my stomach and rendered me unconscious for half an hour. The duel didn't go on. When I got my breath again, I offered to proseed from a sitting position, and, although the general was telescoped by the collision, it is due to him to say and fought it out. THE DEATH OF THE WORLD. leientists Fall to Agree as to Her the End Will Come, Scientists seem to agree that the earth some day is to be destroyed by a gigantic cataclysm, but fail to agree upon the "how." Dr. Henry Smith Williams, in writing in Harper's Monthly on "Some Unsolved Scientific Problems," says:

"If so much uncertainty attends these fundamental questions as to the earth's past and present, it is not strange that open problems as to bee future are still more numerous. We have seen how, according to Professor Darwin's computations, the moon threatens to come back to earth with destructive force some day. Yet Professor Darwin himself urges that there are elments of fallibility in the date involved that rob the computation of all certainty.

"Much the same thing is true of per haps all the estimates that have been made as to the earth's ultimate fate. our day will become month long and space, leaving our earth as dry and as devoid of atmosphere as the moon, and, finally, that other friction, if it exists, or, in default of that, meteoric friction must ultimately bring the earth back to the sun.

"But in all these prognostications there are possible compensating factors that vitiate the estimates and leave the exact results in doubt. The last word of the cosmic science of our century is a prophecy of evil-if annihilation be an evil. But it is left for the Department science of another generation to point out more clearly the exact terms in out more clearly the exact terms in which the prophecy is most likely to be fulfilled."

> Found the Ends. An Irishman who was out of work went on board a vessel that was in the harbor and asked the captain if he could find him work on the ship.

"Well," said the captain, at the same time handing the Irishman a piece of rope, "If you can find three ends to that rope you shall have some work.' The Irishman got hold of the rope and, showing it to the captain, said, "That's one end, your honor." Then he took hold of the other end and, showing it to the captain as before, said, "And that's two ends, your honor." rope, he threw it overboard, saying, "And faith there's another end to it, your honor."

He was immediately engaged.-London King.

A Whistler Story. "A Colorado millionaire--extremely millionaire—one who was getting up an art gallery, went to Whistler's studio in the Rue du Bac," says Vance Thompson in his Paris letter to The Saturday Evening Post. "'How much for the lot?' he asked with the confidence of one who owns

"'Four millions,' said Whistler.

"'My posthumous prices.' And the painter added, 'Good morning.' "
