WIND ON THE SEA.

The loneliness of the sea is in my heart, and the wind is not more lonely than this gray wind. I have thought for thoughts, I have loved, I have loved, and I find I have gone, thought weary, and I, also, left behind.

THE SACRED ARMCHAIR.

Story of a Soldier's Return.

Captain Carus Bentley of the Eleventh artillery regulars slipped down the gangway from the transport and stepped on pier 19 with the vague, indefinable satisfaction that after a year in the tropics he was getting back to God's country. He awayed a moment as he reached the dock and looked up at the ramparts of buildings along the river. No one met him at the door of the steamer. There were no doleful eyes brilliant with joy and tender arms to crush him with happiness.

Regularly and faithfully, with the devotion of her sex, she had written to him, and at the end of ten months, having received no reply, she had ceased. Some of the letters which she had written he carried with him. His hospital nurse had let him have them when she thought that he had the strength to comprehend their contents. Each was an unhappy, passionate cry from a wounded soul, an unconscious rebuke to him, and each revealed the pain resting heavily in the bottom of a neglected woman's heart, the pain which she could not express when the natural warmth of her heart was repulsed by persistent silence.

Bentley crawled into a cab and drove to his rooms. He had called his housekeeper from Cuba before the transport had sailed, and he knew that his apartment would be in trim order when he arrived, that his bath would be prepared, the fire burning gayly in the grate, the deserted hearth and dinner table hot and steaming when he wanted it.

When he reached the door, he fumbled in the pocket of his uniform for the key, and he felt puzzled when he found that it was gone. He touched the electric button. It seemed funny to him to have to ring his own doorbell before he could get in.

Presently the housekeeper opened the door, and Bentley's coat was still at her heels. Mrs. Blossom could only ejaculate incoherent sentences in the exuberance of her surprise and joy and look at her returned soldier with all the tenderness of her devoted old age.

"Happy and improving, your nurse wrote last," she said, "so I had no fear for you."

"Happy and improving," Bentley echoed under his breath. "I wonder if she, too, heard that." He had sunk down into a big armchair before the fire. He was depressed and silent and still weak from the wound in his arm.

"Let me alone to think now," he said to the woman, who stood waiting for orders. So she quietly and unceremoniously withdrew and left Bentley alone with his dreams. The collic, too little noticed after the long separation, leaped on his knees and whined pitifully, and lay her gentle head against the faded, shabby sleeve of his coat.

Bentley took her head between his hands and as he looked at the quiet, faithful eyes two tears came into his own.

"Little old woman," he said, "you've been lonesome, haven't you? So have I. I've wanted to be back here millions of times. Yes, I have, little woman. And I had hoped when I did come that we might not be alone any more and that the heart might not be so dreary. Yes, Jess, I actually began to imagine that some one would sit in that chair opposite and would answer me when I spoke and understand me when I was silent and love me always."

"Why, little woman, that empty chair has stood there opposite mine for ten years now. Yes, ten years. You haven't kept such close watch of the time as I have." He drew the collic close into his arms, and she lay there, complacently, blinking into the fire.

"We used to think that she came and sat there and made us happy with her laughter and her bright talk. She was always a kind of airy ideal of ours, wasn't she, Jess? But she was real for us—yellow hair, blue eyes, low voice, slender figure and all, and she used to come and sit there and rest her elbows on her knees and talk to us and we contemplated the burning embers just like a real woman. And then she used to jump up suddenly in her sweet, impulsive way and say and then we, Jess—yes, you on the white sofa and me on the right on the green sofa and she grew thin—and she was never the same. Yes, Jess, I was in the glory days, that dream of my life."

"Yes, little woman," he continued

musically, "I am going to tell you a secret. Don't get angry and bark, will you? I haven't told you before because there wasn't time before I went away. But I met her at Mrs. Mantion's ball three weeks before I sailed. Yes, her, her, Jess; just think of it, the embodiment of our dream—blue eyes, womanliness, grace, ah, everything that you and I had yearned for all these years."

"I know her, three weeks, and just think of it, Jess, she said she loved me, and she promised to come and sit at the other side of the fire and to tease us and kiss us and make tea for us. Ah, little woman, I began to believe that our dream was coming true." The collic lifted herself with a quick spring and stood upright on her knees and picking up her ears to listen began to bark furiously at the farther door of the room.

"You are nervous, little woman," Bentley said. "Now settle back and let me tell you the rest. I have wanted so much to tell somebody. It has been rather hard to keep it shut up in one's heart without even the comfort of a friendly, patient ear. I went away with her kiss burning on my lips. I hated to go without her, but it was war, and that meant duty, and it was the one thing for which I had worked and studied and fitted myself for 20 years. She wrote to me, Jess; yes, grand letters; and, lame minded dog that I am, I didn't know how to answer her in the way she wanted. I couldn't even grasp what she was driving at, and I used to think at times that she was aiming at a sunship. Well, then I fell ill and couldn't write at all. But she wrote and kept on writing for months, but I didn't get the letters. I don't know what they were thinking of down there to hold them back. Here they are, Jess, in my hand, and the last one is awfully bitter; yes, awfully bitter, little woman, and I guess the jig is up. God, I don't blame her. Six months without a word, and then she wrote and said she hated me and loathed me and detested me and that I was a coward and that I could never see her again."

Again the collic sprang up and barked still more furiously. Then Mrs. Blossom came in and asked him if he would not go and look at his room and see whether or not everything was all right.

"I think there is something which annoys the dog," he said, as he got up to do her bidding. But she had disappeared again.

Bentley went to his room and stood at the door and looked in. It seemed dreary to him. He did not have the strength to inspect Mrs. Blossom's arrangements. He turned again to go back to the fire. As he reached the door of his den he glanced toward the chair at the other side of the hearth and then stepped back suddenly and steeled himself against the door frame. For a moment he felt dizzy. He ran his fingers across his hot eyes to shut out the vision. A slender, girlish figure leaped back in its dreamy daze. Bentley looked again, and the vision seemed fuller, to his tired, surprised brain.

"Louise," he whispered audibly. A yellow head turned and smiled at him in an old, familiar way. He stole over to his chair and sat down, looking at the quiet, graceful girl.

"Louise, Louise," he whispered feebly. "The collic sprang at the door and barked indignantly. A strange being filled the depths of the sacred armchair, which Jess had been taught never to use herself and to protect with religious vigilance against intruders. Now it was occupied.

Bentley watched her curiously. She smiled again and dropped her head in her hands and watched the fire critically.

"Louise, is it you, dear?" "Yes, it is," she answered calmly. "The newspapers said that you had been mortally wounded, but the surgeon called other news, and I concluded that he knew. I came today to inquire for you of your housekeeper, and you surprised me here."

"Louise, do you love me?" "That is not the question we ought to consider. I have proved my love," she said firmly.

"Louise, I love you, and you know it!" he cried out wildly. "Won't you come and occupy that armchair always?" "Some time," she laughed exultantly, with sudden gaiety, as she got up to run toward the door. She stopped in the middle of the room and came back and leaned over to kiss the spot on his head devoid of its silken gray hairs and then the sunburned cheeks, scathed with lines of long suffering, and then the dear limp arm with its glorious wound.

"Yes, some time," she laughed happily.—Exchange.

Withdrawing a Juror. One particularly amusing incident characterized Congressman Burton's early experience at the bar. For some reason it became necessary to request a continuance in a case in which he was counsel. After Mr. Burton had explained why there should be a continuance the court told him simply to withdraw a juror and the case would be marked continued. For the moment the young attorney was nonplussed, but after glancing at the court to settle by himself that the juror was in earnest he walked over to the jury box, eyed the jurors for an instant and then firmly seized a large, portly German and endeavored with no little effort to drag him out of the jury box. In the midst of the general laugh which followed, the court came to the rescue of the discomfited young barrister by explaining that the term was simply technical and need only be written on the docket.—Saturday Evening Post.

Effect of Paternal Example. Mr. Tucker, who sometimes goes grunting, was trying to teach Tommy the meaning of the word "brace" as applied to game.

"Now, Tommy," he said, "if you should go hunting and kill 20 pheasants, for instance, how many would you say you had bagged?" "Fifty," replied Tommy.

Counterfeit Coins. One of the best judges of counterfeit money employed in the cashier's office in the custom house was talking with friends when he met in a cable car about the skill of counterfeiters and the large number of counterfeit cents which were in circulation. When the conductor came around to collect fares, the friend pulled out a handful of Skirts, here's your chance, if you and your friend want Skirts you get one for both of you for 79c. Remember if you buy only one you can get it at the first mark down for 59c.

As It Seemed to Her. A little girl who was in the habit of tearing her dolls to pieces to see what was inside somewhat surprised her Sunday school teacher.

"What was Adam made of?" asked the teacher.

"The dust of the earth," glibly answered the child.

"What was Eve made of?" After a moment's hesitation, "The sawdust of the earth."—New York Tribune.

Arrests Avalanches. Thickly planted trees are the best protection against avalanches. The snow which has fallen in the woods cannot well shift its place, and when the masses of snow from the slopes above dash against the timber they are unable to break through so strong a barrier, and after overturning some of the first trees their progress is arrested.

Headache. Is often a warning that the liver is torpid or inactive. More serious troubles may follow. For a prompt, efficient cure of headache and all liver troubles, take Hood's Pills.

Hood's Pills. While they rouse the liver, restore full, regular action of the bowels, do not irritate or inflame the internal organs, but have a positive tonic effect. 25c. at all druggists and by mail of C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Best for the Bowels. If you haven't a regular, healthy movement of the bowels, you are in danger. Hood's Pills are the best for the bowels. 25c. at all druggists and by mail of C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

LIVERITA. THE UP-TO-DATE LITTLE LIVER PILL. Cures Biliousness, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Sick-Headache and Liver Complaint. 100 PILLS. Sold by all druggists. Sold by mail of C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 1, 1900.
Entered at the Post-office at Antrim as second-class matter.

The City Boarder's Welcome.
Here's a greeting to our summer friends who have kindly come to town! You will find us all as usual, and bring us your news, and we will be glad to hear from you. We're waiting now expectant to receive our summer guests.

From the hot and dusty city the anxious parents and mothers are bringing their children upon the loaded cars. Some are as familiar, some we've not seen before, and some we've not seen since we were young.

Welcomes little children with your merry laughing eyes, bringing in the nectar from the sun, the air, the flowers, the birds, the bees, and the golden locks of corn, wheat, and the zephyrs, and the breeze.

Happy children, childhood, we give the for the day's pointing upward, and soon it will be noon. Then over the short and fleeting space of innocence and joy, they will step forward to their life work, one by one.

Our town has some attractions that will please and rest you. We need not now recount them, when you find them, they are all welcome, we stand with outstretched hand. To you, you find these groves, those mysteries in our land.

Rise at sunrise, scale the mountains, or with line and hook, wading up the North Branch, or fish along the brook. Roll the ball, or dance, or even run. Do whatever you're a mind to, only just "go in for it."

Let your fingers and typewriters take the message, and all that gives you freedom and ease. Let the North Branch, or fish along the brook. Roll the ball, or dance, or even run. Do whatever you're a mind to, only just "go in for it."

Drink in the freedom, the expansion of the mind, and all that gives you freedom and ease. Let the North Branch, or fish along the brook. Roll the ball, or dance, or even run. Do whatever you're a mind to, only just "go in for it."

Young and old we cordially greet you. Open doors and hearts to all. Hope you will increase our bank notes, and remain with us till Fall.

Don't Miss This.
Go where you will you can't find a more beautiful spot of water than Lake Sunapee. Its position is incomparable. Its atmospheric conditions tend towards health, and the delightful opportunities for recreation are without number. Several steamers ply to the various landings on the lake including Burkehaven, Georgia, Lakeside, Blodgett, and it is in connection with these steamers that the Boston & Maine Railroad is to run its low rate excursion to Sunapee on Sunday, Aug. 5th, by special train. Tickets will be on sale to Lake Sunapee, and for a small expenditure of money this is one of the best trips imaginable. See poster for time of train and rates.

Mothers endorse it, children like it, old folks use it. We refer to One Minute Cough Cure. It will quickly cure all throat and lung troubles. Chas. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

Steam Mill Notes
Mr. Frank Amidon has furnished three nice pairs of horses and six men to work at the steam mill in West Antrim. Mr. Currier is now well equipped to run his mill at its fullest capacity. The new men board with Mr. Chester Conn. Pleasant homes are to be found in West Antrim. N. W.

Closing out Sale.
All Hats must be closed out to make room for Fall goods. Chiffon and Flowers also marked down. Come early and get choice of good assortment.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the use of the Kneading Tube. When this tube is got into the ear, it creates a vacuum, and the perfect hearing is restored, and the deafness is cured forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by induration of the membrane of the middle ear, and this can be removed by the use of the Kneading Tube. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sent for circulars, free.

Selections of Notice.
The Selectmen of Antrim hereby give notice that they will be in session the first Saturday in each month, at their rooms in Town hall block, to transact any and all town business.

Per order,
SELECTMEN.
The Collector of Taxes will meet with the Selectmen the same day.

It will surprise you to experience the benefit obtained by using the dainty and famous little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Chas. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

Story of a Slave.
To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting, and dizzy spells. It is a goddess to weak, sickly, run-down people. Care guaranteed. Only 50c. Sold by C. H. Martin, drugist.

When you are feeling tired and out of sorts you will find Hood's Sarsaparilla will do you wonderful good. Be sure to GET HOOD'S.

"He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last."
A hearty laugh indicates a degree of good health obtainable through pure blood. As but one person in ten has pure blood, the other nine should purify the blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then they can laugh first, last and all the time, for Hood's Sarsaparilla never disappoints.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

Hot Weather
Does not lessen the liability of your watch getting out of repair, or some of your jewelry becoming broken. Lots of things happen that for your convenience and comfort should have immediate attention and save annoyance and vexation, which are as irritating as the weather. My Repair Department can end your annoyance right off and it will only cost as much as the work requires.

Death of John Clark.

John Clark died late Sunday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Chas. W. Richardson, on Depot street, with whom he had made his home for the past several years. He was born in Ireland in 1816, and consequently was 82 years of age; the cause of his death was practically old age, although it was hastened somewhat by a disease of the bladder.

When quite young Mr. Clark came to this country and during the Mexican war enlisted under Gen. Scott, in 1847 and served faithfully, as also did he in the Civil war, enlisting as early as '62. He was wounded in battle of Drury Bluff. Deceased was a veteran of two wars, without doubt the only man in town that enjoyed this distinction. He was a quiet, unassuming man, and was always seen with Ephraim Weston Post on public occasions, hardly ever failing to take part in the Memorial Day celebration and parade.

Short funeral services were held from his late home Tuesday morning conducted by Rev. Fitzgerald of Hillsboro, with singing by the Presby-terian choir. The remains were taken to Windsor Locks, Conn., Tuesday, for interment, beside his late wife and children, accompanied by C. W. Richardson and his two sons.

Besides the daughter mentioned above, deceased leaves two sons, Bernard and Michael, of this town, and other relatives in Boston.

Letter to Alex. Caldwell, Honington, N. H.

Dear Sir: Did you know that there is twice as much paint in a gallon of Devco lead and zinc as there is in a gallon of some of the mixed paints?

Ferguson & Thompson's store, Delhi, N. Y., was painted some years ago with a mixed paint—look 32 gallons. Repeated last spring with Devco.

Mr. Lynch, our agent, said 16 gallons would be enough. They had 3 gallons left.

Yours truly,
F. W. Davox & Co.

Naturally, Russia wants the lion's share in China, and it is suspected that she even wants the British Lion's share.

Distinguished men continue to flop out of both parties, but usually they land in some intermediate stage instead of going the whole way across the chasm.

In India, the land of famine, thousands die because they cannot obtain food. In America the land of plenty many suffer and die because they cannot digest the food they eat. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. It instantly relieves and radically cures all stomach troubles. Chas. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

No white man has ever seen the Empress Dowager, nor has her picture ever been taken. This fact may account for the wonderful multiplicity of her portraits as published in the up-to-date American press.

You never read of so many great cures elsewhere, as those effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla, did you? It is America's Greatest Medicine and possesses merit unknown to any other preparation. It is a wonderful invigorator.

You will never find any other pills so prompt and so pleasant as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Chas. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

Benjamin Harrison, T. B. Reed and Grover Cleveland make an interesting trio, which is now perched upon the fence watching the two big progressions go by without showing any particular inclination to jump down and join either of them.

LIKE MANY OTHERS
Clara Kopp wrote for Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Tells what it did for her.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have seen so many letters from ladies who were cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies that I thought I would tell you what I have done for myself.

I have been doctoring for four years and have taken different patent medicines, but received very little benefit. I am troubled with backache, in fact my whole body aches, stomach feels sore, by spells get short of breath and am very nervous. My menstruation is very irregular with severe bearing down pains, cramps and backache. I hope to hear from you at once."

CLARA KOPP, Rockport, Ind., Sept. 27, 1898.

"I think it is my duty to write a letter to you in regard to what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I wrote you some time ago, describing my symptoms and asking your advice, which you very kindly gave. I am now healthy and cannot begin to praise your remedy enough. I would say to all suffering women, 'Take Mrs. Pinkham's advice, for a woman best understands a woman's ailments.' Mrs. Pinkham, from her vast experience in treating female ailments, can give you advice that you can get from no other source."

CLARA KOPP, Rockport, Ind., April 13, 1899.

Prevented a Tragedy.
Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had steadily grown worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at the Antrim Pharmacy.

One of New Hampshire's veteran lumbermen, Nathan R. Perkins, died last Thursday at his home in Jefferson at the age of 72 years. Probably no man in the North Country would be more generally mourned than will this man, he being widely known and highly respected.

The quicker you stop a cough or cold the less danger there will be of fatal lung trouble. One Minute Cough Cure is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. You will like it. C. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

Charles H. Hoyt, the playwright, known by many in this section as a former resident of Charlestown, this state, but now of New York, has been taken to the Retreat for the Insane in New York. His nerves are in bad shape and his mind is said to be affected. He has not been able to do any work for some time.

You Should Visit Them.
Of the resort sections of the country few of them are more widely known than the White Mountain Region of Northern New England. The main features that have brought this section so far forward are its magnificent scenery, its exhilarating atmosphere and its social qualities.

Of the first mentioned, some of the most widely known features, outside the Presidential Range and Mount Washington, are in the Crawford, Franconia and Dixville Notches. Each contributes far different attractions, any one of which is well worth seeing, though taken together they present a series of Nature's workings unlike those to be found anywhere else. There are wonderful rock formations like Table Rock in Dixville, and the "Old Man of the Mountain" and the "Plume"; then there is White Horse Lodge and Elephant's Head and Crystal Cascade and "The Basin" and Echo and Profile Lakes and Lake of the Clouds. These are but a few of the interesting sights to see.

As you know, the Boston & Maine Railroad traverses this great Mountain Vacation Region, and this mountain literature issued by its Passenger Department comprises an encyclopaedia of New Hampshire's Mountains, which you can obtain by sending a two-cent stamp to the General Passenger Department of the Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston, and with it will be sent you a book of tours, which you will find to be complete with the information you are looking for regarding vacation. Send for them.

The wolf in the table put on sheep's clothing because, if he traveled on his reputation he couldn't accomplish his purpose. Counterfeiters of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve couldn't sell their worthless salves on their merits, so they put them in boxes and wrappers like DeWitt's. Look out for them. Take only DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It cures all skin diseases. Chas. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

Charles Wilder, of Peterboro, the maker of barometers which was preferred by the U. S. Government to those of foreign manufacturers, died at his home last Thursday after a short but painful illness, aged 64 years. He was one of Peterboro's foremost citizens.

Chinese are dangerous enemies, for they are treacherous. That's why all counterfeiters of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve are dangerous. They look like DeWitt's, but instead of the all-healing witch hazel they all contain ingredients liable to irritate the skin and cause blood poisoning. For piles, injuries and skin diseases use the original and genuine DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. C. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.

One of the best known men in this section, Judge J. G. Bellows of Walpole, has been stricken with apoplexy and lies critically ill at his home.

HEALTHY HAIR
A man with a thin head of hair is a marked man. But the big bald spot is not the kind of a mark most men like.

Too many men in their twenties are bald. This is absurd and all unnecessary. Healthy hair shows man's strength. To build up the hair from the roots, to prevent and to cure baldness, use—

REUNITED.

Let us begin, dear love, where we left off. The up the broken threads that all dream. And go on happy as before and soon. Love's again, though all the world may cease.

Let us forget the cold, malicious hate Who made our loving hearts his foe. And once more meet in the sweet old joys of happy love. May, it is not too late!

Forget the deep plowed furrows in my brow! Forget the silver gleaming in my hair! Look only in my eyes, O darling, and see The old love, no longer than that now!

Like up the broken threads and let us go. Like reunited lovers, hand in hand. Back and yet onward to the sunny land- Of our To Be, which was our Love Ago. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

PERFUME AND DISEASE.

Nature's Fragrant, Not Poisonous, Perfumes prevent people from taking certain diseases. During an epidemic his attention was attracted to the fact that persons who constantly used perfume escaped contracting the disease. But he found that the more delicate perfumes, like violet, lavender, attar of rose, were more efficacious than musk and strong, rank essences.

Beccaria, the famous Italian botanist, long ago advised his officials to plant trees and shrubs with odoriferous blossoms or fragrant leaves along the highways, courts and parks of cities, because these strong odors produce ozone, and thereby purify the air and make the city more healthful.

Who of us can resist the charm to the scent of great masses of white and purple lilacs with countless bees murmuring round the fragrant spikes of blossoms—the pure, delightful perfume not too strong in the open air under the radiant sun of May? And lilacs are no vigorous, are easily grown and they bloom in the early summer.

Only an expert could tell how old some lilacs on a great-grandfather's old place are, with the gnarled trunks and vigorous masses of green and blossoms in May. —Boston Transcript.

BLAMED THE GOVERNMENT.

But Had the Letters in His Pocket All the Time.

"See here, young fellow," shouted an angry visaged business man with his head up close to the stamp of the postoffice. "You are a pretty lot of incompetents that the government hires to transact the nation's mail business."

"What's the matter, sir?" asked the clerk, calm by long familiarity with such outbursts.

"Why, I mailed a letter to Cleveland last week that was of the utmost importance, and it has not reached its destination yet. I have come here to kick, and to kick right hard."

"You're in the wrong pew, my dear sir. Go to the superintendent of mails, and he will fix you up."

The indignant "business man" was passed on from department to department until he finally ran up against the authority competent to handle the matter.

"Such things do sometimes happen," he was informed in the conciliatory words of the superintendent. "We'll send our tracer after your letter. To whom was it addressed? Tell us where and when you mailed it."

"It was a plain envelope," explained the still angry customer. "I usually use a 'return' envelope, but had reason for using a plain one in this instance. Here is one (tumbling in his pocket) like it. By George, let me look at that again. I'll be hanged if that isn't the very letter. I haven't even addressed it yet."

As he vanished down the corridor there was no suggestion of apology left behind. —Detroit Free Press.

Something He Couldn't Wear.

A wealthy American who became a convert to Rome was very generous to Pope Leo XIII in money matters. He had done many generous things, and the pope had rewarded him with orders and medals galore.

One day the pope made a pilgrimage to some where he was kindly received by the holy father as a son and generally, until the orders were exhausted, each time was bestowed with some fresh honor. On such occasions all these brave metal pieces were attached to the rich American's breast.

"I'll soon get out," the pope remarked to a confidante who was at his side during the levee. "Next time I shall give him a snuffbox," which he did, and a beautiful jeweled box it was.

The following year the meretrician turned up again and was granted an audience, when to the holy father's consternation the faithful son of the church appeared not only with all his medals, but with the snuffbox attached to his waistcoat.

"The next time," the pope said, with a contented smile, "I shall present him with a marble topped table. It is the only thing I can think of that he can't tie to his waistcoat." —Chicago Times-Herald.

65,536 Versions of Jack and Jill.
An English clergyman has written the history of Jack and Jill on a new and original plan. The first four pages of the book are numbered 1, the next four 2, and so on up to page 8. The stories are so arranged that any page marked 2 can be read after any number 1, making good sense. In the same way page 3 can be read after page 1 or page 2, and so on through the eight. Application of the laws of permutation shows that the book thus contains 65,536 stories of Jack and Jill.

Not an Old Acquaintance.
"Do you mean to say that the horse ran away with you?" said Mr. Meek.

"Yes," answered his wife. "And wouldn't stop when you told him to?"

"Of course he wouldn't."
"Well, Henriette, I don't know what to say except that the horse wasn't acquainted with you or else he wouldn't have dared to act in that manner." —Washington Star.

Identified at Last.
Glen Miller, a United States marshal in Utah, was sitting in his office at Salt Lake City one day when a well dressed and intelligent looking man entered and addressed him. "I was confident that I knew the man," said Glen in recollecting the circumstances, "but I was not able to place him. As we conversed pleasantly it gradually became impressed upon me that he was an old Kansas acquaintance, perhaps some one I had known at the university, but he spoke so cordially and with such an assumption of his knowing me and my knowing him that I did not have the nerve to ask him who he was."

"In Salt Lake," continued the smiling marshal, "we have the same fashion of doing the square thing by a friend that used to prevail in Kansas. There is no prohibition law in Utah, and we found a place near by that was sufficient upon our purposes. After I had said something, and he something, we quickly got along to the stage where I invited him to my house for dinner, but all the time I was taxing my mind to learn his identity and watching for a chance word that would give me a clue."

"By the way," I said at last, "when did you come?" "Meaning from the States, of course. 'Oh, I got out last night. You see, they cut off nine months for good behavior.'"

"Then it broke over me. My guest was Pete Curry, a celebrated mall robber, whom I had taken to the penitentiary just two years before." —Kansas City Journal.

Her Last Drink.

In Hyde Park lives a young matron who is of such a nervous temperament that if she drinks the smallest amount of alcoholic stimulant before going to bed the result is sleeplessness for the remainder of the night.

Some nights ago a number of friends dropped in for the evening, and the husband, who, by the way, is a southerner, suggested that he make a mint julep for each of the company. The suggestion was received with delight, and the juleps were promptly mixed.

In his wife's glass, however, he put only enough whisky to favor the water, probably not more than a teaspoonful. The result, however, was the most surprising.

She was troubled with insomnia all night long, and it was not until 5 o'clock in the morning that she dropped off to sleep, and as a consequence, was not called for breakfast.

At 10 o'clock she came down stairs, and hearing the voices of children on the front porch stopped to listen. Her heart filled with motherly pride as she heard her elder son, a boy of 6, telling seven or eight children from the neighborhood that they must not make too much noise as his mamma was asleep.

"I thought her horror, too, as the young hopeful added: "She drank so much whisky last night that she couldn't come down to breakfast this morning." —Kansas City Star.

A Misunderstanding.
"My dear," said a gentleman to his wife, "where did all those books on astronomy go from the library come from? They are not ours."

"A pleasant little surprise for you?" "My dear," he then said slowly, his voice husky with emotion, "I never said we must study astronomy. I said that we must study economy." —Pearson's Weekly.

WALL PAPER AND MOULDINGS

We have samples from six of the largest wall paper houses and manufacturers in this country. We have made arrangements whereby we can make wholesale prices on large orders and good, fair discounts on small orders. This is true.

We have twenty-five large sample books containing three thousand patterns of all the latest styles, tints and colorings of those beautiful reds and greens which are so popular this year. We would be pleased to show them to you.

We shall trim both edges, roll down the seams and do our best job for fifteen cents per roll. This price includes CEILINGING as well as side walls. Ordinary papering, 12¢ each side per roll.

We make a specialty of inside painting and paper hanging, glossing, graining, hard wood finishing, whitening, etc. Try us.

Straight Pointers.

We will give from three to six months (if time to parties wishing to get time later).

Yes, you can know to a cent what a job of work will cost before it is started. Then there will not be heard a murmur that "it cost a little more than we expected."

Do you believe this? We can show you fifty times more patterns store in Boston, and ninety times more than your local dealers can carry in stock. It's a fact.

A LIFE.

I saw the little maiden moon,
She was so shy, so shy,
She hid herself behind a cloud
Till all the stars went by.
As pure as sea foam was her robe
And white as foam,
And like the foam she floated on
The blue sea of the sky.
I saw the moon, the full grown moon,
Leap from the ocean's hold
And have her beauty to the sky,
Piercing, glorious and bold.
And crimson was her flaming robe
And red as sin, she shone
And pearly beads that blow on earth
Hailed violet heads to see.

I saw the moon, the dying moon,
Falter across the sky,
White-faced she fell before the morn
That smiled to see her die.
No wave that kissed her feet of old
But mused her misery.
Only the war, blown leaves of earth
Might mourn for such a sight.

WHO WAS HE?

For two weeks we had been playing to crowded houses. The fame of our particular star had preceded us to the Pacific coast, and the welcome we received was very enthusiastic, inciting the company to greater exertions and a deeper interest in the noble profession they had chosen.

"For heaven's sake, Graham, don't sell another ticket!" wailed the message sent up one night to the manager. "Every seat is filled, and there is no standing room."

I was about to close the office when a voice from the crowd attracted my attention. A tall, strange looking man was making his way toward me. His face was strikingly intelligent, but there was a look of sorrow and care that was quite affecting. His clothes, once fashionably cut and of good material, were now patched and threadbare, while his hat, all dusty and jammed, I never saw again. As he pushed his way through the crowd, heedless of the angry words and looks that greeted him on every side, I noticed that one above hung empty at his side. The way he used the whole arm, however, convinced me that he was abundantly able to do duty for both.

"I beg a favor of you," said he. "I want to enter the theater for just a moment. I care nothing for the play, but I must see Miss Una Howard."

"I am sorry, but Miss Howard cannot give you another until tomorrow."

"No, sir, I do not wish to speak to her. I only want to see her—to look at her."

"And even that I cannot grant. Here are scores of people all about you whom I have refused within the last ten minutes. I cannot issue another ticket tonight. Come tomorrow evening."

He looked around him and then leaned toward me as if to speak; but, seeming to suddenly change his mind, he turned abruptly away and was soon lost to sight.

The following evening his pale, care-worn face was the first that met me when I threw up the shutters.

"Can't I go in now?" he asked eagerly.

"You are entitled to the first ticket, sir. One dollar."

"I have no money," he replied, in a whisper, "but I must see Una. Will you give me a ticket?"

I could not. The rules of the company forbade, and giving a firm yet kind negative, I turned my attention to the eager crowd and soon forgot him.

When at last I had a moment's respite, I met his deep, black eyes once more.

"I must see Una," said he. "Cannot you get one for me from your customer? I am poor, as you may see," and he pointed almost contemptuously at his apparel. "I have walked 300 miles to see her, and I must."

He waited for my answer, but I could only disappoint him. There were at least a score of persons who asked me the same and now stood waiting for my answer to him.

"I cannot blame you," said he sorrowfully, "but I must see Una. Will you be so kind as to wait one-half hour?"

I cheerfully promised, and I think I had waited but a moment longer I should have given him a ticket, regardless of the displeasure of former applicants.

He returned sooner than he promised. All breathless with haste, his hat gone and the empty seats far away, he pushed his way to the delivery. Without a word he threw a half eagle upon the board and, snatching a ticket, was off before I could pass him the change. Wondering what this strange man could know or want of the people less Una Howard, I closed the office and entered the theater.

This was the happiest hour to me of the whole 24. Night after night I sat there gazing at Una Howard.

And, with the rest, I worshipped her, but without a single ray of hope.

When I entered, Una had just come upon the stage, and the applause that greeted her was still echoing through the hall. With exquisite grace she acknowledged the tribute and bent her beautiful head as the showers of fragrant flowers and costly presents fell at her feet.

She raised her eyes, and I was started by the change that came over her face. Her gaze was riveted upon some object directly in front. There stood the one armed man, his tall form towering far above the rest, his long, scanty, unkempt hair falling about his shoulders; his burning, devouring eyes looking full upon Una.

Whiter and whiter grew Una. With a faint cry she tottered and fell toward the blazing lights. With the strength of a giant the one armed man leaped upon the stage, caught the fainting woman in his arms and snatched her away just as the flame began to lick up her light drapery.

"Oh, Una, Una, I have saved you!" he cried, frantically kissing her pale lips. "Look upon me, Una, once more—only once more, and then I am gone forever!"

"Silence!" said a rough looking man who had just come upon the scene, at the same time firmly grasping the only arm the poor man had. "Come with me, my man."

"As an epic shake off the grasp of a babe did the strange being shake off the grasp of the officer.

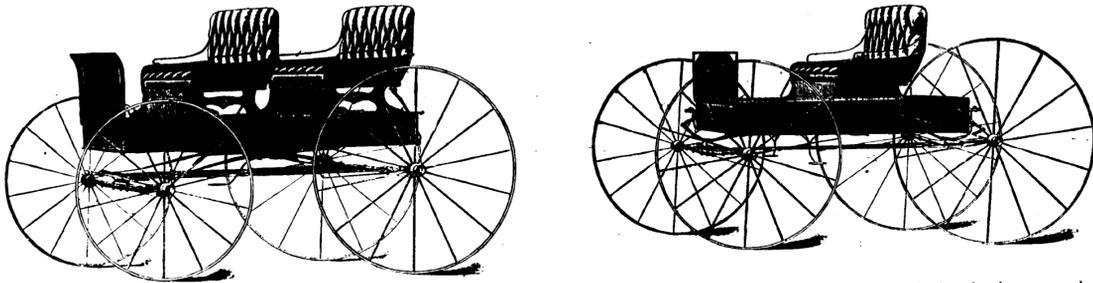

"Touch me not!" he exclaimed fiercely. "I took the money—stole it, if you will—and I will go with you soon! But not now. Stand off, or I'll sting you off the stage!"

He knelt by the side of the unconscious Una and in the most imploring accents entreated her to look upon him "just once more." His prayer was answered. The beautiful eyes opened and a look of recognition played about her lips.

"With a cry of joy the strange man came to his feet.

THE MILD POWER CURE HUMPHREYS'
That the disease of domestic animals, BOWEN'S, CATTLE, SHEEP, DOGS, HOGS, and PIGS, are cured by Humphreys' Veterinary Specific, is as true as that people die of rattlesnake and moccasins, by a scratch, or saw with sewing machines. It is as effective for both, and is a blood purifier in order to cure them, as it is to take passage in a dog from New York to Albany. Used in the best stable and recommended by the U. S. Army Cavalry Officers.
$1.50 PAGE BOOK on treatment and cure of Domestic Animals, and stable chart mounted on rollers, sent free.

VETERINARY HUMPHREYS' SPECIFIC No. 28
In use 50 years. The only successful remedy for Nervous Debility, Vital Weakness, and Prostration. From overwork or other causes. Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price. HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO., Corner William and John Sts., New York.
