A LITTLE SPACE.

A little space to sing and say. A little low sweet holiday. And then to sleep—to draw away! A little space; the gold is gray. And life is sad, sweet yesterday. No eyes to weep, no prayers to pray. Gather the violets while you may! They will be needed for love's day! On the green grave of yesterday!—Atlanta Constitution.

TRYING TO KEEP COOL.

A Story of a Summer Family

"This is insufferable," said Briggs to his wife, "absolutely insufferable. I don't see how you stand it or why you stand it. If I didn't have to be down town all day I'd have the children out in the park or in the country such a day as this. I certainly wouldn't stay in an oven of a house when there are trees and grass and breezes to be found if you only go in search of them."

"But there surely is more comfort in remaining quietly here than there is in preparing for an outing and then tramping all over the country looking for a bit of unappropriated shade," protested Mrs. Briggs.

"Nonsense," replied Briggs. "Of course there is some work in getting ready, but the luxuries of this life are not to be had without labor. I tell you the country is the place, and we'll go to the country today. Just hustle around and get the children ready and we'll start."

"But where'll we go?" asked Mrs. Briggs.

"Anywhere," answered Briggs.

"The park?" suggested Mrs. Briggs.

"That's comparatively near, and," "That's nothing," interrupted Briggs. "We can run over to the park any afternoon when I happen to get home early, but I don't get a full holiday very often, and we want to take advantage of it. We'll get out where the can get a train to Mulligan's grove at 10 o'clock, and some of the boys at the store are going out there with their families—nothing formal, you know; just an outing. I'll show you how to keep cool if you'll just hustle and put up a little lunch."

There was an hour or more of good hard work, as any one who ever has tried to start for a little outing knows, and some of the work fell to the lot of Briggs himself. He acted under the orders of Mrs. Briggs, who became general superintendent of the party, and as a result when they were ready to start he had to change his collar and his negligee shirt.

"When," he exclaimed, as he put a hammock over his shoulder and grabbed a lunch basket, "I didn't realize how hot it was. I'd have been a corpse before night if I'd tried to stay in this stuffy house."

"You wouldn't have been as hot as any time during the day as you are now," returned Mrs. Briggs, who was going on the outing under protest and didn't care who knew it.

"Perhaps not," replied Briggs, "but I wouldn't have been as cool and comfortable as I will be an hour from now, either. The trouble with you women is that you don't look far enough ahead. There comes our car," he added a few minutes later. "Hurry, or we'll miss it."

Briggs grabbed one of the children with his disengaged hand, and with the lunch basket in the other hand and the hammock over his shoulder started on a dog trot to head off the approaching car at the corner.

"When," he gets hotter every minute," he exclaimed as he hung to a post and mopped his face with his handkerchief. "If I go you would just have smothered in that house today. Why, my clean collar is melted already."

He looked around for a seat, but a whole lot of people seemed to be taking an outing that day and there wasn't one to be had. Mrs. Briggs and the children were uncomfortably wedged in between hot and perspiring individuals and looked as if they thought he had rather the better of it standing up.

"Just about sweat myself to death in the crowd on the footboard," said Briggs when they were on the street again and about to take up the rest of their journey to the depot.

"How far have we got to walk now?" asked Mrs. Briggs.

"Only four blocks," answered Briggs. "Then we may hope to be decently comfortable. Come along! We've no time to waste."

Ten minutes later they were on a car with others going for an outing, a good many others. They had sweltered at the ticket office, sweltered in the crowd at the gate, and had been pushed and jostled and stepped on in reaching the car, but they all got seats—after a fashion. It is warm under a train shed in the best of climates. There is little circulation of air there, and when it comes to sitting next to a fat man or woman and holding a child in one's lap, a very fair imitation of the tortures of the infernal regions is experienced.

"This negligee shirt of mine," said Briggs, "looks as if I had worn it in swimming, but we'll have some comfort as soon as we get under way."

"If we don't start soon," returned Mrs. Briggs, "I shall faint. I simply cannot stand this stifling atmosphere."

And one of the children began to cry. They left the train with a sigh of relief. Before it started even the air was partly filled up, and everyone knows what enforced contact with sweltered humanity is in a closed car.

"At any rate," we're here," said Briggs as he looked toward the depot. "Now for a cool spot. By Jove!" he added, as he saw half a dozen parties scurrying away in the direction of the grove, "we'll have to run for it or all the best places will be taken."

"Well, you'll have to do the running," returned Mrs. Briggs with decision. "I don't intend to kill myself. I'll look after the children and you take the hammock and the lunch basket and go on ahead."

So Briggs ran a quarter of a mile, carrying weight for age, and succeeded in pre-empting a spot where two scrawny trees somewhat filtered the sun's rays, and even then he came near having to defend his location with physical force.

"Now, I'll go hunt up some of the boys I know," he said, when Mrs. Briggs and the children arrived.

"You'll do nothing of the sort," replied Mrs. Briggs promptly. "You'll put up the hammock first."

So he put up the hammock, not without some difficulty, for Dame Nature hadn't placed the trees as conveniently as she might have done.

"Now," he said, "I'll—"

"Now, you'll take this little tin pail and get some water," put in Mrs. Briggs. "We're all nearly dying of thirst."

"Now," said Briggs when he had brought the water, "I'll—"

"Now you'll help me put out the lunch," interrupted Mrs. Briggs. "It's nearly 1 o'clock, and the children are almost starved."

So he helped arrange the lunch and drove the ants away from it, and of course they found some things were lacking. Then he helped gather the remnants and the dishes together and put them back in the baskets, and after that he took the children over and bought them some pink lemonade and peanuts at a stand at the other end of the grounds, and gave them each a turn in the swing they found, and then finally he settled himself in the hammock.

"Now, this is what I call comfort," he said, as he slumped at the flies and the mosquitoes. "I'll rest here a little while and then I'll hunt up some of the boys I know. I didn't tell them I was coming, so they—"

"You'll rest there a little while," interrupted Mrs. Briggs in her annoying way, "and then you'll take the hammock down and start for the train. It leaves in three-quarters of an hour."

Briggs drew an armchair up in front of an open window and dropped wearily into it when he reached home.

"By George!" but this is comfort," he said. "There's a right cool breeze blowing through here."

"Yes," returned Mrs. Briggs dryly. "It's comparatively comfortable between two windows most of the time if one only keeps still long enough to notice it." Chicago Evening Post.

Their First Lesson.

A sister of the late E. P. Roe tells an amusing story of the first lesson which she and her brother ever received in Roman history.

Among one most loved and honored guests, during our childhood, was Dr. Samuel Cox, for many years a prominent clergyman in New York. At times our conversation turned on his story, and I remember, on one occasion, he asked E. P. and me if we could give him the names of the first Roman emperors.

At this period of our existence the name "Caesar" was associated exclusively with an old colored man, whom we often visited and who lived upon a lonely road in the neighborhood. We were vastly astonished, therefore, to learn that the name had ever been borne by a more illustrious person than our dusky friend, but we listened entranced to the story of the rivalries of Caesar and Pompey for the empire of the world.

Unhappily the good doctor could not remember the name of the third triumvir, and the lack troubled him greatly. That night, about 2 o'clock, I was startled by a loud knock on my bedroom door, and Dr. Cox called out: "Mary, are you awake?"

I replied that I was, as I indeed was every one else in the house by that time.

"It's Crassus," said the doctor, and then he returned to his room greatly relieved. Neither Edward nor I ever forgot that first lesson in Roman history—Youth's Companion.

Army Officers in Italy.

In Italy the officers, at least, are immaculate and picturesque. The common soldiers are, perhaps, not so impressive. They are short, stocky little fellows, bow legged to a man, and in any clothes would not present a very martial appearance. But the officers are big, fine looking men, and their uniforms rival the women's hats in brilliancy. The colors used are very unimpressive, pale blue and silver, gray with green stripes, yellow and scarlet and gold.

The -Heraaglieri or sharpshooters, with hats over one ear and a huge bunch of cock feathers flying out in the wind, are as striking as any, though the King's guard, with brass helmets and horse tail plumes, are by no means insignificant.—Harper's Bazar.

Old Friends.

Snarley—Old friends are the best. Yow—They are if they don't get rich before you do.—Syracuse Herald.

Wealthy, but Couldn't Write.

"Hotels entertain a good many people who can't write," said the clerk of a large hotel, "and the bad pen comedy is enacted quite frequently. Of course the clerk has to be very careful not to let the guest suspect that he is on the dodge, for such folks are very sensitive about their educational infirmities."

"I once knew a man who paid $1,200 a year solely to keep hotel clerks from knowing that he couldn't write his own name. He began life as a day laborer, drifted out west and made a fortune through leasing a supposed worthless mine in Montana. When he accumulated about $150,000, he sold out and started in to travel and have a good time. He was naturally shrewd, but he had never had a particle of schooling, and dodging registers at new hotels became the chief worry of his life. "At first he used to tie up his hand in a handkerchief and pretend it was hurt, but he realized that the trick was pretty transparent, and at last he employed a young newspaper man at $100 a month to travel with him as his 'secretary.' The ex-miner never sent or received any letters, he didn't care for reading, and the secretary's one and only duty was to sign hotel registers. They would walk in together, and the young chap would say deferentially, 'Shall I do the registering for us both, colonel?' 'If you please,' his boss would reply, and he would thereupon write, 'Col. — and secretary, Montana.'—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Mines That Burn For Years.

A number of good sized mines are now on fire in the United States and have been for years. The Vulcan mine on the Green river, opposite Newcastle, in Colorado, has been on fire since the great explosion several years ago, when about 80 persons lost their lives. All efforts to quench it have proved fruitless. In Butte there is a mine which has been afire since 1884. It has been treated with carbonic acid gas generated on a large scale, quicklime and acids and all the stifling devices that genius and experience could devise, but so far without effect.

In Pennsylvania there are several steadily burning mines, and in one place where the outlet of natural gas is very great the spectacle it affords is of surpassing interest. For miles around a great tower of fire may be seen day and night, and the dense black smoke which it gives off settles upon the surrounding country. How a mine gets afire is easily explained, even though the greatest precautions are taken to prevent it. Coal seams exude a gas varying in quantity according to the pressure and the quality of the deposit, which gas when mixed with air in certain proportions is about as explosive as gunpowder.—New York Post.

Funny Freaks of Yvette Guilbert.

Mlle. Yvette Guilbert in the heyday of her American success was in splendid spirits. In crossing a certain district on Sunday she was unable to get a bottle of claret.

"If I give it to you, madame," said the waiter, "I shall have to go to jail."

"Then go," said Mlle. Guilbert cheerfully, "but first get me my claret."

One afternoon in Chicago two blank cards were sent up to her by callers as she was signing her autograph. On the one she wrote, "Yvette Guilbert is a very good singer," and on the other, "Yvette Guilbert is a very naughty singer."

"Now," she said airily as she dropped them on the tray, "let them choose which is wisest."

Her wisdom was of a worldly description. "For who will give me bread when I no longer please by my songs, the dear public? No. Therefore I come to America, and I come high."—Saturday Evening Post.

The Source of Wisdom.

"I wonder how Solomon became the wisest man on earth?"

"That's easily explained," replied the man with the intellectual but worried face. "You see, Solomon had a large number of families, and of course his children asked questions, just as all children do. I have no doubt Solomon was like anybody else and had a certain dislike to exposing his ignorance. When one of the children would ask him something he didn't know, he'd make believe he wanted a drink of water, and then go out and look in the back of the dictionary. I shouldn't be surprised if he were compelled to do this 50 or 60 times a day. Under such conditions a man couldn't help getting wise."—Washington Star.

An Awful Loss.

At a fire in Cambridge, Mass., an occupant of the damaged house was bewailing the loss of her purse. Several firemen joined in a search for the missing pocketbook, but after spending some time in their quest were still unsuccessful. Finally the chief said to the woman:

"How much was in the pocketbook?"

As she answered, "Fifty cents," the look of disgust on the chief's face was too evident to be mistaken.

The Masculine View.

Gentleman—My wife has lost her water-proof, and she wished me to stop in here and order another sent up at once, as it looks like rain.

Dealer—Yes, sir. What sort, sir?

Gentleman—Um—I've forgotten the name, but it's one of those that make a woman look better dressed in wet weather than she is in dry weather.—New York Weekly.

To Philip Sober.

When a woman who asked Philip of Macedonia to do her justice was scrubbed by the petulant monarch, she exclaimed, "Philip, I shall appeal against this judgment."

"Appeal!" thundered the enraged king. "And to whom will you appeal?"

"To Philip Sober," was her reply.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 19, 1900.

Forest fires have been raging down on Cape Cod, Mass., during the past week, and much damage was done.

It is said that wells in this section which were hardly known to "go dry" before, are at this time without water. It will take a large rain-fall before a winter set in to fill up the springs.

Galveston, Texas, had a most peculiar visitation in its recent disaster. In short a time the water arose and seemed to almost sink the city for a time, and in a few hours it had gone down leaving nothing but a wrecked city, with great loss of life and property.

The tail of the Texas gale doubtless visited this section last week, and while it did but little damage in the way of uprooting trees, blowing off roofs, etc., yet the damage to the apple crop was quite large, and very likely will help to keep up the price on what remains.

Col. Chester B. Jordan of Lancaster was the choice of the Republican state convention last week for candidate for Governor. The congressional delegates chose Frank D. Currier of Canaan as candidate for Congress in the second district, and after a hot fight in the first congressional district and five ballots had been taken, Hon. Cyrus A. Sulloway of Manchester was nominated by acclamation. An other case where the unexpected happened!

The agreements and treaties of the peace conference at The Hague have been ratified and placed in the foreign office archives. President McKinley has appointed ex-President Harrison a member of the Permanent Board of International Arbitration recommended by the conference. Ex-President Cleveland was also appointed, but declined to serve. The hope is expressed by Dr. DeBeaufort, Minister of Foreign Affairs, that the work of the conference may result in lasting benefit to mankind.

THREE REPUBLICAN CONVENTIONS

Hold This Week, and the Following is the Result of Each.

Eighth Senatorial District
The convention was called to order at 12.15 by S. S. Sawyer a member of the state committee, a resolution was read by C. W. Cummings that Hon. T. Nelson Hastings of the convention and clerk, this resolution was adopted by the convention.

Sen. Hastings was escorted to the chair and made a short speech of acceptance; the convention then got down to business and a committee on credentials was chosen, which consisted of C. H. Dutton of Hancock, G. H. Shed of New Boston and John A. Balch of Antrim, they reported 38 delegates entitled to vote of which 36 were present. On motion of S. S. Sawyer amended by George W. Cummings it was voted that the delegates ballot by towns.

Three tellers were appointed by the chair which consisted of Cummings of Walpole, Sawyer of Antrim and Seabury of Walpole. The first ballot resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes cast 36
Necessary for choice 19
J. W. Hanson of Walpole 11
Geo. W. Newman of Alstead 8
E. W. H. Farnum of Frances-town 17

There was no choice on this ballot.

Mr. Newman's name was withdrawn by S. S. Sawyer; Mr. Atwood of New Boston made a few remarks, recommending that the convention nominate J. W. Hanson of Walpole; Mr. Cummings of Frances-town in a strong speech advocated the nomination of E. W. H. Farnum of Frances-town. The second ballot resulted in the following:

Whole number of votes cast 36
Necessary for choice 19
J. W. Hanson of Walpole 11
Geo. W. Newman of Alstead 8
E. W. H. Farnum of Frances-town 17

Resolved: that we Republicans of the 8th senatorial district of New Hampshire, do affirm and most heartily endorse the declarations of Republican principles contained in the platform of the Republican convention at Concord, Sept. 11th, 1900.

The committee soon returned with Mr. Farnum who was escorted to the platform and was presented to the convention by the chairman, and was received with much applause. He made a few brief remarks expressing his thanks for the honor, he had received and pledging himself to the Republican principles, and in closing invited the delegates to dine with him at the Antrim House.

The Democratic Senatorial convention will be held at the Town hall Antrim on Monday next at 11 o'clock.

Prevented a Tragedy.
Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long of New Straitsville, Ohio, saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her; and she writes, "This marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of its power to cure all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed. Trial bottles free at the Antrim Pharmacy."

Funeral Services.

Of Mrs. Anna M. Woodbury at the Methodist Church.

The last sad services over the remains of Mrs. Anna M. Woodbury, whose death we noted in our last issue, was held at the Methodist church on Wednesday afternoon last at 1.30 o'clock, following prayers at her late home.

Rev. J. H. Trow, pastor of the church, had charge of the services, and prayer was offered by Rev. W. R. Cochran, D. D., of the Presbyterian church. Rev. Trow read the scriptures and made a few remarks, leaving the principal address of the occasion to Rev. Felt of Lancaster, who was pastor over the church here about twenty years ago. The speaker made reference to the deceased in a most touching manner of his acquaintance with her at that time, of receiving her into the church on probation and administering to her the rites of baptism, and later by the courtesy of Rev. G. M. Carl, who was then pastor, he was permitted to be present when she was received into full connection with the church, and the right hand of fellowship was ever extended to her. Rev. Felt's remarks were interesting and very fitting, and after a few things had been said of the many which might have been mentioned, he closed with loving tribute to her memory.

The remains rested in a black casket lined with black, and amid the profusion of the most lovely flowers ever seen on such an occasion the appearance did not seem to be so appalling as it often is; while her life appeared all sunshine, and she cared much for flowers, this handsome floral display was most appropriate, and the arrangement was very tasty.

The progressive nations are the great food consuming nations. Good food well digested gives strength. If you cannot digest your food, you need Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat. You need not diet yourself. It contains all of the digests combined with the best known tonics and reconstitutes. It will even digest all classes of foods in a bottle. No other preparation will do this. It instantly relieves and quickly cures all stomach troubles. C. H. Martin, Antrim, Eaton Bros., Hancock, G. O. Joslin, Bennington.
