DR. P. S. HENSON, * Pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston. Subject: "FOOLS"

"He is a charming speaker, with great dramatic action and wonderful facial expression.—Assembly Notes.

"Nearly one thousand people listened last evening, between peals of laughter and bursts of applause, to Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson's lecture on "Backbone."—Minneapolis Tribune.

"Dr. Henson, as a lecturer, ranks second to no man on the American platform."—Hon. H. W. Grady.

Monday Evening, December 5

The Temple Quartet Concert Co. And Miss Catherine Cole, Reader.

The Temple Quartet, of Boston, is undoubtedly at the head of American male quartets. Of all similar organizations it is the best known and most popular throughout the entire country.

The Club has ever been fortunate in presenting readers of ability, and Miss Cole's success has been phenomenal, due in part to her magnetic personality.

We were fortunate indeed to secure this favorite company for the last but one open date in the limits of the course.

Saturday Evening, December 17

PROF. A. W. HAWKS, of Baltimore. Subject: "Sunshine and Shadow"

In the entertainment given by A. W. Hawks, the laughing philosopher, tears follow laughter. He is without a peer, his facial expression is wonderful; no costume, no makeup; he wears his store clothes and makes his own faces.

"Hawks beats a concert company, and he thoroughly delighted our people."—W. Carl Wyatt, Secretary.

"No man has appeared on our platform that has been so popular with all classes as Hawks. His wit, humor, pathos, and common sense reaches all hearts."—Wm. Orr, Pres. Clarinda Chautauqua.

Wednesday Evening, January 11

George Channing Darling

Cartoonist and Sculptor in Clay.

Mr. Channing captivates his audience with his skill as a caricaturist, his magnetic presence and graceful bearing. He has studied under the best masters, and for ten years been active in newspaper work.

He will strike any amount of marvel out of a bunch of cold, gray clay—it laughs, and cries, and almost speaks—while the audience screams, and all the time Mr. Darling is telling you how it happened in his own irresistible way.

His work is accompanied by a running fire of bright remarks, apt quotations and jolly stories that keeps his audience in a state of unflagging enjoyment.

A Physician healed, now prescribes it daily.

Dr. Geo. Ewing, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure: "For years I have been greatly bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I commenced to use Foley's Kidney Cure. After taking three bottles I was entirely relieved and cured. I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles, for I can honestly state I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success."

Wm. F. Dickey, Town Hall Drug Store, Antrim, N.H.

I Used

Dr. Miles' Nervine and Anti-Pain Pills.

Cured Grip—Did Full Day's Work.

Anti-Pain Pills, the Best Headache Remedy.

"I wish to say I have used your Anti-Pain Pills and Nervine for La Grippe and knocked it out and kept up my full day's work. I have also used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills many times during the past year for headache and always with most gratifying results. I consider them the best of headache remedies. I have also used your New Heart Cure in my family with excellent results. Actual experience with these three of your remedies have proved so beneficial that I cheerfully recommend them to others."—MERRIT M. DAYTON, Business Mgr. Ithaca Publishing Co., Publishers Ithaca Daily and Weekly News, Cornell Daily Sun, Cornell Alumni News, 202 N. Tioga St., N. Y.

In itself La Grippe is very dangerous, but in its after effects it is one of the most deadly scourges that afflict mankind. It shatters the nervous system, weakens the heart's action, and lays the foundation for heart disease. The accompanying fever consumes the vitality and renders the patient susceptible to pneumonia, bronchitis and catarrh. The best treatment consists of Restorative Nervine which quiets the nerves, soothes the brain, restores strength and vitality to the entire system; Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills, a nerve tonic acting directly on the nerves of the digestive organs causing them to act in a natural and healthy manner, and Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills which speedily relieve the torture of headache, backache and soreness, the most common symptoms of Grip.

THE BOSTON GLOBE'S GREAT $25,000 EDUCATIONAL FUND

For All Its Readers, Men and Women, Boys and Girls.

Everyone remembers the famous contests which the Globe has conducted among its readers in the past—the greatest and fairest ever held under the auspices of a newspaper. The Globe now intends to beat its own record with a $25,000.00 contest, open to every one in New England, and in which more than 500 readers of the Globe will win.

The handsome sum of $25,000.00, the largest ever devoted to such a purpose, is termed an educational fund, because the Globe wishes it to serve an educational purpose. While the awards will be made in cash, and subject to conditions, they have been chosen as suitable in amount for a summer in the old world for 25 readers of the Globe, all expenses paid. This offer is open to every school teacher, every mechanic, every public employee (national, state or city), every railroad employee (electric or steam), every clerk (in store or office), every wage earner (man or woman) and every reader of the Globe.

For those who may be unable to take an extended trip there are numerous other means of utilizing an educational fund. A parent may apply it to the higher education of a son or a daughter, or it may serve the same purpose for a younger brother or sister. A young man or woman, struggling for his or her own education, would welcome the assistance which any one of the awards from this fund would afford. For anyone it would serve to buy an excellent private library, containing every indispensable book in the world. In any case the awards will be paid in cash and may be disposed of in any way that the recipients think best.

This great fund of $25,000.00 is placed absolutely at the disposal of the readers of the Globe, all of whom are invited to take some part in the selection of the beneficiaries.

In elections of this kind the young readers of the Globe are always the most active participants. As an incentive to them the Globe offers a chance for 500 boys and girls to win valuable rewards. Please read the conditions in the Boston Globe.

Evening Herald Prize Proverb Contest.

All the Poor Richards of New England are invited by the Boston Herald to get out their almanacs and enter its Proverb Contest just launched. Every evening an illustration is published which represents some old, well known proverb. The prizes for correct solutions range in value from a residence lot worth $2000 to a $5 check, and include autos, pianos and other valuable articles.

You cannot cure piles by external application. Any remedy to be effective must be applied inside, right at the seat of the trouble. ManZan is put up in a collapsible tube, with a nozzle, so that it reaches inside and applies the remedy where it is most needed. ManZan strengthens the blood vessels and nerves so that piles are impossible. ManZan relieves the pain almost instantly, heals, soothes, cools and cures.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. MOUNT CROTCHET.

Behold, above fair Antrim's tree-clad vale,
Old Crotchet lifts his crest athwart
the sky;
Long slopes of woods and pastures mounting high
To greet the clouds whose shadows o'er them sail.
That rugged peak once marked the
settler's trail,
And now it fills with joy the wan-drer's eye
When here returned to share old home weeks' tale,
It lifts his thoughts to Heaven, and God seems nigh,
To-day the summit looms through August haze
As miles away; anon with frost-clear air
It calls all lives to mount, and share its view.
Oh Crotchet, highly blest are all the days
Spent neath thy benediction, free
from care;
Our souls with peace and grace thou dost imbue.

REPUBLICAN SENATORIAL CON- VENTION FOR THE EIGHTH DISTRICT HELD HERE TO- DAY. BENNINGTON MAN HONORED.

The Republican Convention for the 8th Senatorial District was held in the Town hall here today and a goodly number of delegates were present.

At noon the convention was called to order by W H Perkins of Marlow and on motion of S D
Atwood of New Boston, Chas H Shedd of New Boston was chosen as permanent chairman and E W
Baker was chosen as secretary.

The committee on credentials was chosen as follows, M I Colburn of Frankestown chairman,
Ed Breed of Weare and F A Blanchard of Greenfield.

A motion to adjourn for dinner was carried.

At 1.30 the chairman called the meeting to order and the committee on credentials reported 22 delegates present and entitled to vote.

S D Atwood was recognized by the chair, and in a speech well chosen and emphatic he placed before the convention as a candidate for senator the name of Fred H Kimball of Bennington.

This motion was seconded by Perkins of Marlow and the nomination was made by acclamation and the result was received by the delegates with applause.

Mr Atwood of New Boston at this time addressed the gathering in a speech filled with telling points and commanding the closest attention of the delegates, and a hearty round of applause greeted his remarks.

Mr Kimball being out of the state at this time the secretary was instructed to notify him of his nomination.

FRED H KIMBALL

Fred H Kimball who was nominated here to-day by the Republicans as their candidate for senator in the 8th District is a resident of Bennington and is one of its leading citizens and one of the solid business men of the place, being a member of the O

J Kimball Company.

He has held many important town offices and has represented his town in the legislature. Mr.
Kimball is a staunch Republican and is well and favorably known throughout this section.

Several of the leading politicians of this district were in attendance at the Greenfield Fair last week.

The Democrats opened their state campaign last week in Manchester, the principal speakers were Hon H F
Hollis and Gov Garvin of R I.

Summer Ball of Washington, a former editor of the Antrim Reporter is a candidate for county commissioner on the Republican ticket in Sullivan County.

Monday afternoon the Young Men's Republican Club unfurled a banner bearing the pictures of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. It is suspended across
Main street in front of the Goodell Block. It is very attractive and it is said will withstand the elements much better than a flag.

At Variance.

The milk contractors and the Cooperative Milk Producers Union have been at variance over the conditions that shall govern the winter arrangement. The price of 37 1-2c per can in Boston has been agreed upon but the trouble comes over the question of the quantity to be sent, the producers wanting last winter's arrangement to stand. J E Perkins, one of the directors was in Boston the first of the week attending a meeting of the officers of the Union.

Greenfield Fair.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week were the days of Greenfield Fair. The middle day drew the largest crowd and those who attended enjoyed themselves. The attractions were many and the exhibits good, that of stock being particularly so. The weather was cold which was the only drawback.
Many attended from this place.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y. Press Correspondent New York State Grange

AN INTERESTING OCCASION.

O. H. Kelley, the Founder of the Grange, at Chautauqua.

There was a large attendance of Patrons of Husbandry from Chautauqua and adjoining counties at Chautauqua Lake on grange day. The exercises were held at the new grange temple, and the chief address was made by O. H. Kelley, the only living member of the seven founders of the Order. He reviewed the early history of the grange, mentioning some of the difficulties they had to contend with in getting the organization started in Washington. Fredonia grange, Chautauqua county, N. Y., was the first duly organized grange in the United States, the date of its organization being April 6, 1868. He then reviewed the work briefly between that time and 1873, at which time the national grange became an incorporated body. Mr. Kelley is both a life and an honorary member of Fredonia grange. He said that when in 1867 he put the postage stamp on the first letter he ever sent out in the interest of the Order—it was addressed to Anson Bartlett of O. H. he made the first investment in the national grange, and six and a half years later he had deposited in the Farmers' Loan and Trust company in New York $110,000 and there was not a cent of debt. If $30,000 of that amount had been invested in Washington property which Mr. Kelley said was offered to them at that time, it would today be worth $275,000. "From the time of the founding of Fredonia grange," said Mr. Kelley, "over 24,000 subordinate granges have received charters, surpassing any other organization ever established in this or any other country." At various times there were nearly 2,000 deputies at work in the field. The first year's work of organizing resulted in ten subordinate granges. "Compare that record," he continued, "with that of two days in February, 1874, when we received 165 applications each day, with $15 dispensation fee with each application, or a total of $2,475 per day." In closing the speaker said: "One last word of advice. Don't permit our Order to be made an incubator for hatching political eggs. If you do, you will raise a brood of chickens that will play havoc with the flower garden."

O. H. KELLEY.

A Worthy Tribute. Mrs. B. B. Lord, past lecturer of the New York state grange, pays a very worthy tribute to the work done by Miss Hall in the early days of the Order. Mrs. Lord says that "when the dark clouds of discouragement and depression settled heavily upon our Brother Kelley in his pioneer work she it was who upheld his hands, giving of her time and means freely and above all, putting her very soul into the work, toiling in season and out of season, early and late, visiting farms for the Order and attending to the details of office work, cheering and encouraging, doing the thousand and one nameless things that help to buoy up the sinking ship, thus carrying the work over the shoals until success finally perched upon their banner. The time has come when her seed sowing has brought its harvest of golden sheaves, and the edifying current of her influence has been felt in every movement for woman's advancement. Hers was a brave soul, and I only voice the sentiments of thousands of women who gladly render thanks to the Great Master that she has been permitted to live to witness the results of her labor."

Careless.

"It was careless of me to say that I admired Bacon," remarked the young woman with glasses.

"Did you offend some Shakespearean student?"

"No. It was a Chicago pork packer. He frigidly remarked that he didn't care to talk shop."—Washington Star.

GRANGE LIFE INSURANCE.

Worthy Master Hill of Pennsylvania Favors It.

(Special Correspondence.)

The grange came into existence to meet the wants of rural people. It continues to exist because it has been meeting the wants of the farmers. Should it fail to meet the wants of the farmers and their families the grange would either vanish entirely or give way to a different organization that would meet existing needs. Changing conditions of civilization are constantly bringing forward new wants. The luxuries of even ten years ago are now wanted—not always as luxuries, more frequently as necessities.

Less than ten years ago free rural delivery of mail was enjoyed as a luxury by the few. Today it is enjoyed by over 12,500,000 people in rural districts as a necessary factor to make farm life more satisfying. In which class shall we place life insurance?

Business rules and custom are fast making life insurance another of the necessities of our age. Policies are now treated as negotiable paper in the business world, and they represent a definite form of property. If they were all put together it is estimated that policies now in force would represent nearly $18,000,000,000. Policies in the old line companies number 18,000,000, while 5,000,000 members of fraternal orders have the balance. I presume that 55,000,000 of our population have an interest in this property, as shown in the policies carried by one or more members of the family. Talk about co-operation! Here it is developed to the greatest success and having more money and people connected with it than any other private enterprise that I know anything about.

Life insurance is increasing at a tremendous rate. I will not risk to give the number of millions of dollars' worth of it that are said to be taken out in new insurance each week. It makes the capitalization of the trusts look small. Thousands of farmers are now carrying insurance. Many more want to do so. They want insurance that will be within reach of their pocket-books, safe and suited to their conditions. The grange has a chance to provide the medium for life insurance of such of its members as want to take it just as it has so successfully provided fire insurance for them. Then it will no longer be necessary for farmers to join other orders or to go outside of the grange to get either form of insurance.

But, like any commercial enterprise, this must be established on a sound basis, have a simple, safe working plan and be intelligently directed locally to insure its supremacy. The national grange in 1902 provided for a committee to take this subject up, but it is probable that its work will be only of a suggestive character. It has not been the policy of the national grange to itself conduct an enterprise. It can, however, blaze the way so that members of the Order in different states and Pomona grange districts will be able to establish companies based upon such ideas and suggestions as are put out to the membership with the indorsement of the national grange.

Eight Thousand Farm Boys Compete.

Corn worth $10 an ear is exhibited in the Palace of Agriculture at the world's fair by Illinois. This corn was raised by 8,000 farmer boys of Illinois. To each one of these boys were sent 500 grains of corn last year. Each boy grew his corn according to an outlined plan and sent ten ears each to be exhibited by the state. Premiums amounting to $3,500 have been offered upon this corn, and the boy winning first will receive $500. There's material in these Illinois boys for the making of good grangers.

The answer can be found in The Boston Sunday Herald only.

WHAT DID THE WOGGLE BUG SAY?

PRIMITIVE MINING.

The Way Rubies Are Found, Washed and Sold in Burma.

The system practiced for obtaining rubies in the mining districts in Burma is of the most primitive description. The mining shafts are simply holes about two feet square sunk to a depth varying up to fifty or sixty feet. The shoring up of the walls of the shafts is most crude, the sides being supported by posts at the corners and branches of small trees secured against the sides by stout sticks.

The miner carries a tin pot similar in shape to a blunt ended cone on his head. He squats down in one corner and digs between his knees in the opposite corner. The earth, or byon, as the ruby bearing earth is called, is conveyed to the top as fast as it is excavated in small buckets let down from above. The apparatus for raising and lowering the buckets is simple in the extreme. A stout bamboo post about twenty feet high, called a maungdine, is fixed upright in the ground at a convenient distance from the pit or dwin and a long, thinner bamboo pivoted horizontally into the upper end of it so as to project an eighth from the mine and the long arm of the mine.

From the end of the long arm a long cane fastened to a basket of bamboo, the latter ending in a hook, and from the short end of the basket of stones. The baskets are raised by the inner arm of the hook, while the stones counterbalance the weight. Usually three men work in a dwin—one down below, one hauling up the baskets, and the third operator piles up the byon as it is received. The byon is excavated by means of a straight, strong tool about two feet three inches long, with a broad blade. The baskets are shallow and circular, with loop cane handles.

When enough byon has been piled up it is taken off and put into a stone paved circular inclosure resembling a bath under a fall of water and shored about with a mattock till the mud and clay are washed away and the stones are all collected in a deep hole at the end of a narrow channel. These are then strained, sieved and finally sorted and all rubies and sapphires placed in a little bamboo cup full of clean water till the wash is over. They are then transferred to a little calico bag, which every mine owner carries, and are finally transferred to the unclean hands of the money lending fraternity, who flock around in crowds on the bazaar days to buy any stones found during the week.—Scientific American.

They All

and in a short time go out of sight entirely, to be heard from no more."

"Why is it?" "O, simply because Hood's Sarsaparilla has more real curative merit than any medicine I ever sold."

This is of daily occurrence in almost every drug store. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the standard remedy which has cured more sickness, relieved more distress and made more happiness by bringing people

Miss Whittaker, a prominent club woman of Savannah, Ga., tells how she was entirely cured of ovarian troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, Miss EAST WHITTAKER, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga. — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women prove beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

Grange Field Meetings.

Hon. Aaron Jones, master of the national grange, has been addressing large grange meetings throughout Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the New England states this month and last. Five enthusiastic field meetings were held in Pennsylvania. The Order is growing very rapidly in that state—3,000 members have already been added since Jan. 1, and they expect to increase the membership 7,000 or 8,000 during the year. Hon. W. F. Hill is master of the Pennsylvania state grange. The growth of the Order in New Jersey is also remarkable for the size of the state—1,500 new members have been added in the last six months, and the number will doubtless be doubled before the end of the year.

Massachusetts Patrons.

The Massachusetts state grange will run an excursion to the world's fair by special train on Oct. 4. The route will be over the Boston and Albany, New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four railroads. They will be at the exposition eight days and on their return will stop off for a day at Niagara Falls. The cost of the trip, including all necessary expenses for twelve days, is $58 from Boston. They invite Patrons from the other states along the line of the route to join the party. Charles D. Sage, North Brookfield, Mass., is in charge of the excursion.

The Humbling Of Jane

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1904, by Belle Maniates

"Come, pa!" commanded Jane Tivy in bright, sharp tones.

Titus Tivy, a meek, undersized man, responded to the summons and stood unresistingly before his daughter while, in accordance with her biweekly custom, she prepared him for his trip to town. First she deftly folded a muffler about his neck, buttoned his great coat snugly over it and then put on his cap, tying the earflaps in place. She next handed him the memorandum for groceries and a letter to mail, with instructions to carry it in his hand all the way "lest he forget."

When he had taken his seat in the wagon amid the molasses jug, kerosene can and butter crocks, she put a soapstone at his feet and tucked about him a heavy blanket shawl in lieu of a lap robe, albeit the day was bright and sparkling.

When he had driven away she went serenely into the house to put the finishing touches to the toilet of her sister Rose, a girl of fourteen years. Rose did not submit to her costuming as meekly as her father had done. She pouted at the hanging braids of hair, bucked against the white apron and begged for a dip to her blouse. Jane authoritatively silenced and overruled these objections, and Rose went sullenly to school.

For five years, since the death of her mother, Jane had held a tight rein over the household, and its members were strictly under Jane rule. She was a woman of convictions. One of them was that her duty clearly lay in managing the affairs of others. People were afraid of Jane. They submitted to her domineering or avoided it. There lived a man on an adjoining farm, however, who was not afraid of Jane. For some time he had resolved to introduce her to her true self, and he had chosen this morning to do it. He appeared amid the pots and kettles and Jane.

"Drop your work, Jane, and sit down. I want to talk to you."

"Well, Joel, I guess you'll have to choose some other time for visiting. I'm no lady of leisure. This is my time to work."

"Jane," said Joel, with a new, quiet ring in his voice, "you are going to listen to me now. I have waited your convenience just as long as I am going to."

Jane's nostrils dilated dangerously, but her heart beat faster than it ever had before, although she had "kept company" with Joel for six years.

"Joel Dixon," she replied, snapping off her words as if she were biting thread, "that isn't the tone to take with me. It doesn't go! I have no time to listen to you now."

Joel's stock of patience had endured for six years. It was now exhausted. He recalled the vision he had encountered on his way hither of Titus Tivy driving to town. He gave a short laugh at the recollection, squared his shoulders for action and crossed the kitchen to Jane. He took the dishcloth from her, threw it on the floor and, taking her arm, marched her into the sitting room and seated her on the plush sofa.

"Now we'll talk business," he said decisively.

Jane was silent from sheer surprise.

but into her being were inoculated the germs of fear, respect and liking for Joel—tiny germs, it is true, but destined to flourish.

"I have waited six years for you to name the day, Jane. If you don't do it, I shall. After your mother's death it was reasonable to expect to wait a year or maybe two, but I'll wait no longer."

Jane was returning to her normal condition.

"We must wait a year," she decreed. "The mortgage will be paid then. Rose will be through school."

"You'll marry me a month from today or not at all," he said composedly. Jane jumped to her feet.

"Indeed! Well, I am not going to be forced or threatened by you. Joel Dixon, I'll not marry you until I see fit!"

"Jane," he replied coolly, "you are acting under the mistake of thinking you are necessary to your father and Rose. They'd get along a great deal better without you—or more to their liking anyway."

"What do you mean?" she cried in surprise.

"What I say. You haven't been so successful running things here as you think, and there's going to be no petticoat rule at my house. Today's Wednesday. You just think over what I have said, and Saturday about this time I'll come over again and prove up what I said."

Having thus spoken, Joel departed, and Jane returned to the abstracted washing of dishes with new food for thought.

When her father was unfolding the Wingville Weekly that afternoon she astonished him by saying:

"Pa, haven't I managed the house well and kept up things since ma died?"

Titus Tivy peered at her over his spectacles and paper. He did not answer with the alacrity she had expected.

"Well, Jane," he finally said, "I guess you're the best cook and housekeeper in these parts. There ain't a lazy bone in your body."

Jane was not satisfied.

"That is not what I mean. Haven't things been as you liked? I've always done what I thought was for the best."

"Why, Jane—he hesitated—"your way may be the best, but folks don't always want the best way. They want their own way."

Jane said no more then, but when Rose came in from school she said to her:

"Rose, don't you wear the best clothes of any girl in school?"

"Maybe I do," replied Rose a little crossly. "But what's the pleasure in good clothes if you can't wear them as you want to?"

Again Jane was silenced.

"They say," continued Rose pertly, "that Joel Dixon's sweet on the new teacher."

A great fear smote Jane. Then she rallied. If Joel Dixon wanted a little, meek, clinging vine woman for a wife he could take Lucy Wicks and welcome. But Rose's speech rankled and lingered in her memory through the week, and she anxiously awaited what Saturday might bring forth.

It brought Joel just as she was starting her father for town. As Titus gathered up the reins Jane intercepted the exchange of winks between her father and her lover. This troubled her, and she was in a puzzled rather than an antagonistic mood when left alone with Joel.

"Come with me," he said, taking her by the arm and marching her out of the house. Surprised, she suffered herself to be led or rushed through the orchard, down the hill to where the road wound its way.

"Now, stand behind this tree and watch out," he said.

Wondering if he had gone crazy, she did as he directed. She saw her father drive jogging Fleetwood up to a zigzag corner of the rail fence, get out, take the soapstone, wrap it in the shawl and pitch it behind a stump. Then he unbuttoned his coat, threw his muffler under the cushion, took off his cap, doubled back the earflaps inside the crown, put the letter and memorandum in his pocket, got back in the buggy and drove away.

Jane looked at Joel, a light of new intelligence creeping into her eyes.

"Has he?"

"He has. For five years. He knows what he wants and has had his own way right along, only he thought it was easier to let you think you were having yours."

She turned back toward the house, Joel accompanying her.

"And has every one about here known it?" she asked faintly.

"Yes; they have thought it a good joke on you, and they liked your father too well to give him away."

She looked so utterly miserable that he almost but not quite relented.

"No, don't go in the house yet," he said. "There goes Rose down the road. When she's out of sight I want you to follow."

"I don't need to," replied Jane quietly. "I suppose she stops and remakes her toilet too."

"Yes, she hides her apron under a stone, perks up her front hair and jerks up the braid to meet it and pulls down her shirt waist."

She sat down on the stone

"Then all these years," she said bitterly, "I've been a failure and a joke."

"No, Jane. You have simply made the mistake a great many competent women make—of wanting to boss."

She was silent. Joel thought he saw an effort to hide a tear and felt encouraged. He sat down beside her and put his arm about her.

"A month from last Wednesday, Jane."

She turned her head away.

"Oh, you'd better take Lucy Wicks. She'd never try to boss you. You need a woman with no will of her own."

"No, Jane," he said gently, turning her face toward him, "I need you."

A Fatal Oversight.

An American was showing an English friend about the capital.

"Our government is very economical," said the American. "When we've an extra thick fog, they suck it into a big cistern and convert it into paint for the warships and buildings."

"Really?" said the Britisher. "Talking about fogs reminds me that my brother invented a machine for compressing London fog into bricks, and one thick November day he turned out enough material to build a country house."

"Yes, he did. He moved into this new home the next April and was a happy man for two weeks, until one morning he found himself, also his family, lying out on the cold, damp ground, in company with some bits of furniture and miscellaneous joinery. The house had gone, but it was the thickest morning ever seen in those parts. Of course you can guess what had happened. In the night those fog bricks had somehow gone back into their original element."

"Well," drawled the Yankee. "I reckon yer rel'itive ought to have glazed them bricks."—Titt-Tits.

Sharp Point of Letters.

"If people must stick pins in their letters I wish they would cover up the points so they wouldn't push through," said a mail clerk whose hands were disfigured by tiny scratches. "I'll bet I get a hundred digs a day from pins that systematic folks use to hold their correspondence together. I never could make out anyway why so many letters need to be finished off with a pin."

"Of course I understand that about half of those written by women have a postscript in the shape of samples of dress goods or newspaper clippings, which perhaps require a pin or two to hold them in place, but even that habit cannot account for the large number of letters that come through the postoffice with a pin sticking out of one corner."

"I have come to the conclusion that many writers so mail their manuscript with malicious intent. It may not be us fellows in the postal service against whom they hold a grudge, but we are the ones that usually get the benefit of those pins."—New York Times.

Pin Money For the Rich.

The devices of the daughters of rich men to make their own money are perfectly well known to the managers of women's exchanges, which are established solely to help poor women put their work on the market. One day I was in an exchange when a woman, evidently a lady's maid, came in and registered some embroidery in her own name. The superintendent took up the work and in a casual way asked the supposed artist to show her how to do a particular stitch. The woman pleaded lack of time and went out embarrassed and guilty looking. "I thought so," said the superintendent. "She brings her mistress' work. Her mistress is the daughter of a very rich man, but she has no pocket money, and the poor thing has to cheat the exchange by selling her work here under her maid's name."—Everybody's Magazine.

What Did the Romans Smoke?

At a depth of nine feet underground at the old Roman fort of Aliso, near Hatter, the surface of which was proved to have remained undisturbed since the Roman occupation, fifty-four fragments of various clay pipes were found. Their shape was almost uniform, and they could be divided into three groups, one of which was characterized by clumsy and very rough workmanship. The other groups were of much finer make and decorated with figures and Roman characters. From marks found on all of them it was evident that they had been used for smoking.—London Standard.

How He Won Her.

A Frenchman whose wife deserted him amused his neighbors by telling how he got her back without trouble.

"Did I run after her and beg her to come back?" he dramatically asked. "No; I did not run after her. I zhust publish in ze papaire zat I have drawn fifty thousand francs in ze lottery, and she vas back much quicker zan in no time."

Painful Points Too.

"You're a queer looking thing to want to fight with me," said the young bulldog contemptuously. "You're not in my class."

"Perhaps not," replied the porcupine quietly. "But I think I can give you a few points."—Philadelphia Press.

SOCIETY IN ENGLAND

POWER OF CASTE AND INFLUENCE OF THE LANDOWNING CLASS.

The number of things that a "Gentleman" cannot do without leading social prestige is too great to list in a catalogue.

An interesting book might be written on the influence of the English landowning class. Even in these days of ubiquitous manufactures, when to look at a map of England is to wonder how it is possible for a landowning class even to exist, the social and political influence of that class is something more than maintained.

The ambition of every successful Englishman is to have "a place in the country," to get a foothold on the aspiring territorial ladder, and the ranks of the landed gentry are continually being re-enforced, more so perhaps today than ever before, by recruits from the industrial army. The immense utility of the English country gentleman will not be questioned by any one who really knows England.

But at the same time it is equally indisputable that the sort of life he affects—the endless indulgence in sport, the salmon stream, the grouse moor, the hunting box, the pheasant preserve and so on—is on the whole one of more or less harmless and often irresponsible idleness and that the neighborhood in which he lives is rarely apt to regard him as an apostle of strenuousness.

The "country" everywhere stands for leisure, and so long as the "country" continues to represent the supreme object of an Englishman's ambition and his social ideal so long will England be leisurely.

Again, in an old and stable land, with social standards as fixed as the social foundations and governed by a monarchy, the conventions play an enormous part, and the conventions in England are all against hard work. It is the leisure class that rules, that makes up society, that holds all the positions men naturally covet.

A sort of "Four Hundred" atmosphere permeates England. In America one gets a whiff of it on Fifth Avenue and at Newport, but in England one is never away from it. The number of things, for instance, that a "gentleman" cannot do without losing social caste is, in England, so prodigious as to form almost a schedule of forbidden industries. There are some trades and professions that are "respectable" and those that are not.

Only an Englishman knows which is which, why a doctor ranks socially above a dentist, why a man who sells should be irretrievably below the man who manufactures, and he, the Englishman, knows it by an instinct which is born in him and which he never examines and so cannot define. Any one who can tell why the merchant should consider himself and be considered by others the social superior of the biggest storekeeper in the kingdom will be well on the way toward understanding England.

The daughter of a wealthy manufacturer of kettles marries the owner of the largest dry goods store in London. Why should she be thought and spoken of as having married a little, though only a little, beneath her? Personally, I do not know. I merely observe, without attempting an explanation, that the man in the wholesale business is more looked up to than the man in the retail business, that while the former is not averse to talking about his affairs, the latter is only too anxious to "sink the shop," and that social position in England is regulated by a host of perfectly factitious and conventional considerations more readily felt than expressed.

Such graduations exist of course to some extent everywhere, but nowhere are they so stereotyped, nowhere do they strike so deeply, as in England. I have never yet been able to discover an Englishman who had not the social privilege of despising some other Englishman, and the lower one penetrates in the social scale the more complex and mysterious and the more rigidly defined do these lines of demarcation become.

The point is that throughout England the sense of the nobility of work for its own sake, if not actually lost, has become so confused by the intrusion of quite alien factors that the sphere of action open to a young man of whatever rank is sensibly circumscribed. The country, while democratic in form, is not democratic in spirit. It has not accepted and does not subscribe to that gospel of work which lies at the root of American strength, American success, American democracy.

Any one who has looked into English trade unionism must have realized how largely it is mixed up with class spirit. The workingman who knows that his employer drives down to the office at half past 10, takes a couple of hours for lunch, is home again shortly after 5 and thinks himself somewhat of a "hustler" if he is content with three months' holiday in a year is not likely to have a keen appreciation of the dignity of labor. His ideal inevitably becomes that of doing as little as he can.

Alfalfa and Omega.

At the Chicago live stock show a few weeks ago Secretary Wilson of the agricultural department, at Washington and Norman J. Coleman, the first secretary of agriculture, were on the platform together. After Secretary Wilson made an address there, was a lusty call for Mr. Coleman by an old Nebraska farmer, who referred to the latter as the "alfalfa and omega of agriculture." He got his Greek and his agriculture slightly mixed.

Fruitland grange, Delaware, has a committee appointed to consider the advisability of the grange purchasing several acres on some public approach to Camden and erecting thereon an ideal grange home. It is also considering the feasibility of building a warehouse and cold storage plant at Wyoming.

The number of the last grange organized in New York state is somewhat over 1,000. But that doesn't signify that there are so many granges in existence now. Would that it did.

The study of the rudiments of agriculture in the secondary schools is a thing to be desired and worked for.

Election of United States senators by popular vote is one of the reforms the grange is after.

joined, in his presence and power upon the quality, flavor, twang and manner of curing, fixing a price accordingly, from which there is never any variation and which the tea grower must accept or go elsewhere to dispose of his wares. In a single tract of tea land like the one cited above the price has ranged from 14 cents, the lowest, to 48 1/2 cents, the highest, per pound among sixty-one different tea producers. A matter of great moment that also figures in the price of tea is that very often tea from the same district will have the various "chops" blended together in order to produce
