English Sea-side Life

By Wyman Kneeland Flint

Just as English Country life is typical alone of England so is English sea-side life wholly unlike any other sea-side life of any other nation. The natural geographical position of Great Britain has made the sea-shore the natural playground of its people, and has given them the chance of enjoying it during nearly the entire year. With quick railway trains and popular excursions in all directions during the summer months, one is able to travel from one end of the island to the other and to enjoy it all from the rocky coasts of Devon to the chalk cliffs of Kent; and the British public recognizes these advantages and enjoys to the full the delights of the coasts.

It is only within the last few years, comparatively speaking, that the great sea-side places have become popular resorts; for although many and indeed most of them have existed as such for many years, yet within the last ten years they have all developed wonderfully until now they rank among the finest in the world.

Here on our American coast we have been accustomed to the large frame hotel buildings with their limitless extent of porches but almost entirely without any of that refinement of environment which is to-day the principal characteristic of the English resort. But in England, however, the sea-side resort is unlike anything we have in America: for it can be divided into two separate and distinct classes—one, the ultra-aristocratic small town by the sea, and the other, the large city by the sea with a population exceeding many of our American cities.

Class distinction is of course the underlying principle of English life and to the average American this is almost incomprehensible, but nevertheless there it is the important factor of life and naturally sets its mark even upon the holidays of the people. This very class distinction has produced the magnificent places along the coast of Devonshire, Cornwall and Pembrokeshire, now known as the "Cornish Riviera," and has at the same time made possible Margate, Broadstairs and Ramsgate on the Coast of Kent, and Llandudno on the Coast of Wales. All of these latter places are cities with a population varying from twenty to thirty thousand people; and as the first three of them are within easy access of London both by rail and steamer, and the latter from Liverpool, the number of so-called "day's trippers" is enormous.

Of course in the other class of sea-side resorts these crowds are absolutely unknown, for there the places are either magnificent estates of the wealthy class, or else small, well-built towns where every house is a permanent home for some family that can afford its town house as well.

Within two miles of Margate, high up on the chalk cliffs overlooking the North Sea, is situated one of these typical English towns by the sea, where every street has its beautiful stone houses each surrounded by its own wonderful English garden and with its perfectly kept lawn.

Here at Westgate-on-Sea on the Isle of Thanet, one may see and enjoy the English sea-side life that one reads about all through English literature. No steamers and few trains stop at this beautiful little town and not a tram-car is allowed to enter its streets. Everywhere is that dignity of good breeding in its life, where nothing is done ostentatiously or in a hurry; but where the people can come to have a holiday with moderation in all things. At Margate two miles away, one may at any time of the day or night see the sands crowded with men, women and children all intent upon having a hilarious good time; vaudeville performances are in progress on every side and the whole general atmosphere is one of riotous excitement. But at a place of which Westgate is but a type all is different and one day resembles another in the orderly arrangement of its amusements.

In the morning when the tide is out the sands are well peopled and here and there children are building sand castles and wading into the shallow water with their crab-nets. Low comfortable chairs are let for a penny and one sits dreaming over one's book most of the morning, or looking at the far sails of the North Sea fishing-fleet, or at the play of lights and shadows on the white chalk cliffs.

Charles Dickens' favorite retreat was at Broadstairs only a few miles from Westgate, around the North Foreland, and it was there that much of his best writing was done and which in every line shows the inspiration of the ever-changing sea.

The whole coast of Kent was the stage of the earliest scene of the great drama of English history, and with Canterbury as its center even to-day remains the richest historical ground of all England. On every side one sees the ruins of early Saxon days when civilization meant little more than the survival of the fittest, and culture as we understand it, was entirely unknown. But even these rude and primitive people seem to have been influenced by the sea for they built their buildings for all time and devoted themselves to the gradual uplifting of their native land.

To us who are more accustomed to the busy sea-side life of our Atlantic Coast, the English sea-side life with all its well-regulated amusements, seems at first somewhat colorless, but as one learns the better to understand it, one begins to appreciate the fact that in it there is an element of a higher development which our own more superficial holiday pleasures lack.

Golf, riding and tennis may seem monotonous when indulged in every day, but in the end it is not the body and mind the better for them when not followed by the nightly "hop" of the average American sea-side resort?

In the afternoon at five o'clock one sits in the garden and drinks the national cup of tea; and in the wonderful twilight of mid-summer, one walks on the cliffs after dinner and listens to some good music.

According to our American standard, it is truly "slow," but is it not really the attainment of a higher ideal than we have as yet known in this country? Is it not the influence of the older civilization upon its people making them understand,

The Class of 1903

Was preached to on Sunday evening last at the Presbyterian church. A large company was present, though quite a hot night, and at 7 o'clock the class, escorted by members of the High school, marshalled by William H. Hurlin, '11, took their seats and the exercises began. Miss Grace Whittle presided at the piano. Music for the occasion was furnished by a chorus choir and L. H. Carpenter sang a solo very acceptably.

Rev. Mr. French read scripture. Rev. O. E. Kendall offered prayer, and the sermon was preached by Rev. Alba M. Markey, pastor of the M. E. church. The speaker directed his remarks particularly to the graduating class, although what he said would as well apply to all young people, and to many not so young in years. He laid much stress on high ideals, concentration of thought and effort, and solid foundations. It was a service pronounced by many as one of the best ever held on a similar occasion, and the speaker's efforts were crowned with success, the address being very kindly received and most favorably commented upon.

Our Interests at Panama

The United States Government has a small army of marines on the Isthmus of Panama, primarily for the protection of the Canal Zone, and this little army is being reinforced by two hundred more in view of election troubles. The Republic, so-called, of Panama, is about to elect a President. The election of a President in most Central American countries means a revolution, more or less bloody. The position of our Government with relation to the Cuban, Central American and South American Republics is an extremely delicate one. Our anti-conquest attitude with our behest to keep the peace in this hemisphere, is very difficult because it compels us to control the country while pretending to maintain its independence. We are trying to let go of Cuba, although every substantial interest in the Island and every respectable citizen is anxious that we shall remain. Desertion by our army invites insurrection by marauders and thieves and a repetition of the same conditions that made it necessary for us to interfere there. We have greater interests at Panama than in any other locality outside this United States and if it was not for the criticism it would be sure to arouse, it would be to the interest of Panama, the world and ourselves for us to absorb and give stable rule to the rickety little republic.

The Littleton Courier has been sold to Maitland P. Foster of Bridgeport, Conn., who took possession June 1. Mr. Foster is not unknown in this section of the state; he at one time was publisher of the Milford Cabinet. The REPORTER wishes him success in his new undertaking.

Dealers in dog muzzles are expecting a lively demand this year for their goods. Every man without a dog is demanding that his neighbor with a dog shall buy a muzzle.

Speaker Cannon has been contemplating the battle field at Gettysburg. He will see his Waterloo some time after the 16th of this month.

Base Ball.

The fifth game of the season, was played at Bennington Saturday, and resulted in another victory for Antrim.

There was very little excitement until the 8th inning, then but for Bennington's poor base running she would have won the game.

The Antrim boys have a mate for Andy's famous, "Letter". This year it is Lon's "Rabbit-Foot".

as we have not yet learned to understand, that in moderation one really reaches the highest plane of enjoyment? Excess pleases but for a limited time and true happiness must be the result of moderation.

English sea-side life is a part of the national defense for it gives to the people both rich and poor, the opportunities of storing up renewed energy, and enables them to maintain their national stability.

Many a boy has won a national reputation in after life by having learned the lesson of perseverance from castle-building on the sands of Kent and Cornwall.

Trade Report

The past week has seen a marked improvement in the industrial conditions of this section of the country. It is estimated that thirty-five thousand people were given work by the starting on full time of many of the mills which have been closed for the past few months. One bad feature is that they start on reduced wages. This cut was made before the mills shut down. In the cotton industry wages are at a very low limit, too low for the workers to make more than enough to provide the bare necessities of life. Reports from the west indicate large crops again this year, the estimate being no less than seven billions, seven hundred and fifty millions of dollars. This large amount of money can but cause an increase in all lines of trade and manufacture. If the American people can learn lessons of economy from the past it may not be in vain that we have had the present depression. We are too prone to crowd when business is good, and thus it is soon overdone. There are few concerns who are satisfied unless they can make a better showing with each succeeding year. If they could be satisfied to let well enough alone, and keep on doing a safe business and not try to branch out and so produce an over supply, which gluts the market, we might have good business and avoid these hard times. The boy who eats too much Thanksgiving dinner must suffer for it, and the country which produces more than it can use or sell must pay the penalty.—Journal-Transcript.

Old Home Week in Antrim

Wednesday, August 19th, is the day set apart for "Old Home Day" and the several committees in charge trust to have the hearty support of all in making due preparation for this day of Good Cheer. They particularly wish to have all families having absent friends, to concur with the Secretary in notifying such, that record may be taken for future action.

Printed invitations to absent friends will soon be ready and those wishing for the same will please hand their name to the Secretary, also Old Home Day stamps are ready for distribution and can be had of

C. W. PRENTISS, Secy.

As the present year marks the one-hundredth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. John Whiton, D. D., the towns first minister, whose relatives intend to observe the occasion in a fitting manner, the occasion of Old Home Week in Antrim will have more than ordinary importance. The observance will be during the week beginning August 16; the dedication of the Tuttle library will be the 19th, "the day we celebrate."

Now is about the time when the country newspaper men are receiving letters from men they do not know, and possibly never heard of, stating the writer is a candidate for some state office and any aid the editor can bestow will be greatly appreciated, says an exchange. Yes, no doubt it would. On the other hand any aid these politicians can bestow the editor to recompense him for space used in his paper would be appreciated. If politicians want to advertise their business they should include a check as evidence of good faith, for the advertising they desire. If there is any business in a newspaper man giving away his space any more, than a merchant giving away his goods we are unable to see where it comes in.

In the first three months of this year the value of liquor manufactured in this country sprang twenty-five million dollars, of which sixty per cent was in whiskey production, and forty per cent, or nearly ten million dollars was in beer.

Why You Should Take ZION'S HERALD

I—Because by means of its strong editorial force and correspondents in all important centres it furnishes needed information on world-wide movements from a Christian standpoint.

II—Because it keeps its readers posted on the doings of the Methodist church and of the religious world at home and abroad, and the results of such activities.

III—Because it is the best religious newspaper for Methodists published in America, with departments that suit all parts of the family life, encouraging deeper religious life in the elders, and aiding the young to become of spiritual value in the church and world.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

False Hair.

False hair was first regularly worn in England by Queen Elizabeth, who had upward of fifty wigs of different kinds for her private use. After her death a few women adopted the French fashion of wearing wigs, but it was not until the restoration that wigs, or, more correctly speaking, periwigs, came to be extensively worn by the sterner sex. These were introduced in the court of Louis XIV, where a natural head of hair was not considered sufficiently luxuriant for the artificial tastes of the times. The term "periwig" is a corruption of the French perruque. Wigs were originally adopted not as a remedy for baldness, but in the interest of personal cleanliness. The laws of ancient Egypt compelled all males to shave the head and beard. This explains why turbans were not worn by the Egyptians, the bushy artificial hair being regarded as a sufficient protection against the heat of the sun. The Romans, on the contrary, wore wigs because they were naturally bald.—St. Louis Republic.

What Displeased Him.

Two hunters were making their way across a lush meadow after a rain. The ground was moist and soggy, but their feet by quick stepping could be prevented from sinking more than ankle deep.

Suddenly the one in advance disappeared up to his neck in a narrow stream that, owing to the luxuriant growth on the bank, he had observed only as he stepped into it. With difficulty he pulled himself out and began wringing the water from his garments. "Well, darn a country," he remarked, with feeling, "where they set their creeks up edgewise and hide 'em in the grass."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dreamers.

There was never so much need for real dreamers as there is today. The business man, caring only for "his beef, his beer and his pew in eternity," will laugh scornfully and want to know how his balance sheet would appear did he give way to dreaming, forgetting that his operations originated years ago in the vaguest visions; also that happiness is not a necessary compliment of a heavy cash box.—London Academy.

Can't Afford Him Now.

Lily Bell—No, Rufus. Ah can't marry yo' jest yet awhile. Y'll hab to wait. Rufus—Why for mus' I wait. Lily Bell? Lily Bell—"Cause three of the families mammy washes for done quit her, an' now she sca'cely makes nough to support me an' paw.—Judge.

The Source Told All.

"What'd Jimmy give yer fer yer birthday?"
"This here brass ring."
"How'd yer know it ain't nothin' but brass?"
"He give it ter me."—Cleveland Leader.

There are nettles everywhere, but the smooth, green grasses are more common still.—Mrs. Browning.

OXYDONOR

at any reasonable hour, in all probability you will be restored to health. By the use of Oxydonor, the human body is Revitalized by oxygen from the air. Oxygen is a Vital Necessity. Oxygenation of the whole organism reaches and remedies all diseased conditions. Oxydonor has brought health and happiness to hundreds of sufferers with Nervous Prostration, and all Nervous Trouble, Rheumatism, Sciatic, Muscular, Inflammatory, Stomach trouble, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Bright's disease, Liver Kidney, Bladder Trouble, Bronchitis, Throat and Lung Trouble, La Grippe, Colds, Spinal Disease, Blood Poison, Dysentery, All Fevers, Diseases of Women and Children.

Rev. Joseph A. Ticknor writes the following strong endorsement after many years' successful use of Oxydonor.

Dr. H. Sanche & Co., New York,
Dear Sirs:—

I rejoice to have the chance given me to answer your question, Has Oxydonor given entire satisfaction? It has!

I hold it to be one of the greatest discoveries of the 19th century. For three years I have used it with ever increasing sense of its value. At the start it wrought a permanent cure of Rheumatism in my left shoulder; next of Tonsillitis in my youngest child, and it has since easily and successfully combated whatever ills have assailed my family. Its potency in dissipating an attack of Grippe is especially to be noted.

Wishing that every family in the land might have an Oxydonor, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
Joseph A. Ticknor,
Rector of Union Church.

Seven Years Later.

Dr. H. Sanche & Co., New York
Dear Sirs:—

It gives me great pleasure, after a further use of nearly seven years, to again testify to the worth of Oxydonor. Two of the instruments are kept on hand for family use. Having learned to apply Oxydonor at the first signs of serious trouble (without knowing oftentimes what such may indicate) we keep free from disease, and this is about all that there is to it now, so far as we are concerned.

Very sincerely yours,
Joseph A. Ticknor,
Minister in charge St. John's church

A Correction?

Mr. Editor:— I would like to make a little correction. In the issue of the Reporter for June 3d, it says, Article 3d of the Warrant calling the special town meeting "asked for a path around the pond". It asked for a path from Main St., in a straight line to Jameson avenue, and had nothing to do with the proposed path around the pond.

Neither did the Improvement Society cause the article to be inserted in the warrant, that was done by parties living upon the west side of the stream, to whom such right of way would be a great accommodation.

If you will kindly make this correction you will oblige.

C. W. PRENTISS, Sec'y
Antrim Imp. Society

We plead guilty only in part to the first-mentioned matter, but if the path wasn't to be around a portion of the pond, will someone please tell us where it was to be!

In regard to the latter, will simply state that the article for this warrant was passed in to the Selectmen by one holding office in the Improvement Society (by the way he does not live "upon the west side of the stream") and we are still of the opinion that the idea "had its birth with the Improvement Society," just as we stated. Were it necessary at this time we could give further proof why we entertain such an opinion.

"The Wonder of the Age"

When the Boston Retail Grocers' Association decided to give their seventh Boston Food Fair and Liberal Art Exposition in the Park Square Coliseum from Sept. 28 to Oct. 31, they laid down one very important principle which would cover all their operations in the most general sort of way. That was to have the very best of everything. Whether in the matter of food exhibits, liberal art displays, decorations, amusements, music, big attractions, entertainments, etc., this principle was to apply to them all.

Their first step was to secure the most popular and most famous band in the world, Sousa's Band, to give concerts both afternoon and evening.

The management announces that after protracted negotiations and at an expense which would stagger a world's fair management they have secured a sensational attraction as one of their big amusement features, which the most captious critic must acknowledge to be the "wonder of the age." The management will disclose the nature of this attraction in due time. It is sufficient now to know that it will make its first appearance in New England at the Boston Food Fair next fall at the Park Square Coliseum.

Mrs S. L. Bowen of Wayne, V. Va., writes: "I was a sufferer from kidney disease, so that at times I could not get out of bed, and when I did I could not stand straight. I took Foley's Kidney Remedy. One dollar bottle and part of the second cured me entirely." Foley's Kidney Remedy works wonders where others are a total failure.

Resolutions of Respect

Resolutions adopted by Antrim Grange No. 93, P. of H. on the death of Clara A. Buchanan.

Whereas, The Great and Supreme Ruler of the Universe has in his infinite wisdom removed from among us one of our worthy and esteemed sisters, Clara A. Buchanan, and, whereas the intimate relation held with her in the discharge of her duties in this society makes it eminently fitting that we record our appreciation of her, therefore

Resolved, that the wisdom and ability which she has exercised in the aid of our organization by service, contributions and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved, that the removal of such a life from the locality where she has lived will be deeply realized by the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a loss to the community and the public.

Resolved, that with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the records of the grange, a copy printed in the Antrim Reporter, and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

SPENDING STATE MONEY.

How It Should Be Done as Viewed by Governor Johnson.

As an example of Governor Johnson's straightforwardness an incident may be cited that recently occurred at the capitol. A commission had been appointed to select and present a silver service for the battleship Minnesota as a gift from the state. The legislature appropriated $10,000 for the purpose. Those who have been concerned in similar undertakings will admit that usually when appropriations of this sort are made part of the money is expended for the silverware and the remainder for the junket, say $5,000 for the gift and the balance of the $10,000 for champagne, railroad fares, hotel bills and expenses of those concerned.

When the commissioners met for the first time they immediately agreed that not one dollar of the state's money should be expended for expense, but that every cent of the appropriation should go into the gift. The commissioners also decided that, should it be necessary for them to attend the formal presentation, they would consider it their duty to pay their own hotel bills and traveling expenses.

Just then Governor Johnson came into the room. The commissioners told him of their agreement, subject, of course, to his approval. The governor replied in effect: "Gentlemen, I quite approve your ideas, but I would also like to call your attention to another condition. The legislature has given us $10,000 for this purpose. While the bill was being considered I talked with several legislators opposed to it. They thought $10,000 was a large amount to spend for silverware. I told them I did not know about this, but that Minnesota should neither be wasteful nor shabby, and I promised them that should the bill pass I would see that no more of the appropriation was expended than was necessary to do the proper thing. They voted for the bill, and it passed. Now, I would propose that we go ahead and get a suitable service for the battleship; that we do the proper thing in the right way. Let the incident be a credit to the state, by all means, but when this is done, and well done, turn the remainder of the appropriation back into the state treasury. Do not think that you are obliged to spend $10,000 because that is the amount appropriated."

JAPANESE PAGODAS.

Enormous. Pendulums Render These Old Structures Earthquake Proof.

The only old structures in Japan which seem to be earthquake proof are the pagodas, which were erected before the temples. There are many which are 700 or 800 years old and as solid as when first built.

There is a reason for this, and it lies in their construction. A pagoda is practically a framework of heavy timbers which starts from a wide base and is in itself a substantial structure, but rendered still more stable by a peculiar device. Inside the framework and suspended from the apex is a long, heavy beam of timber two feet thick or more. This hangs from one end of the four sides. Four more heavy timbers, and if the pagoda be very lofty still more timbers, are added to these. The whole forms an enormous pendulum, which reaches within six inches of the ground.

When the shock of an earthquake rocks the pagoda the pendulum swings in unison and keeps the center of gravity always at the base of the framework. Consequently the equilibrium of the pagoda is never disturbed, and this is the explanation of the great age of many of them, when from their height one would suppose them to be peculiarly susceptible to the effects of the earthquake.

A POOR GROCER.

Audubon's Lame Attempt to Succeed as a Merchant.

It is not generally remembered that the worldwide reputation of Audubon as a naturalist incidentally is due to his failure to establish himself permanently as a Missouri grocery merchant and dealer in the best brands of Kentucky whisky.

In 1810 he and Ferdinand Rozler of St. Genevieve loaded a keel boat at Louisville, Ky., with 310 barrels of whisky and groceries and started down the Ohio and Mississippi to St. Genevieve to open a grocery store. The trip was made during the winter, and the streams were so full of ice that the boat was drawn up against the bank and winter quarters were established just below Cape Girardeau. When St. Genevieve was reached, after the opening of navigation, the firm of Audubon & Rozler opened their store and did a prosperous business. But the business was done by Rozler, for Audubon preferred the woods to the counter and devoted more of his time to sketching and stuffing birds than he did to marketing the 310 barrels of Kentucky bourbon or any other groceries. This led to a dissolution of the partnership. On April 11, 1811, Audubon, convinced of his unfitness for business, sold out to Rozler and took up the work for which he was better fitted than any one who had lived before or who has lived since and from a fourth rate grocer became the great ornithologist. The grocery business which Audubon abandoned grew until finally it "extended throughout all of upper Louisiana."—Kansas City Star.

A WOMAN OF QUICK WIT.

Susan B. Anthony Never Lacked a Ready Reply.

Few lives so lend themselves to dramatic narration as Susan B. Anthony's, says the Delineator. It ranged from tragedy to comedy, with scattered bits of melodrama, she ever in the center of the stage. With her everything was always intensely realistic—not acting.

Miss Anthony had a peculiar faculty of condensing a whole speech into a single sentence. For instance, when she heard men lamenting that the profession of teacher was not respected as much as the other professions, "Do you not see that so long as society says woman has not brains enough to be a doctor, lawyer or minister, but has plenty to be a teacher, every man of you who condescends to teach tacitly admits before all Israel and the sun that he has no more brains than a woman?" And when Horace Greeley said to her at Albany, "You know the ballot and bullet go together—if you vote, are you ready to fight?" Instantly she retorted, "Yes, Mr. Greeley, just as you fought in the late war—at the point of a goose quill!" Again, when she was talking on divorce and the Rev. A. D. Mayo, thinking to annihilate her, said, "You are not married; you have no business to be discussing marriage." "Well, Mr. Mayo," she answered, "you are not a slave; suppose you quit lecturing on slavery!"

His Support.

A young colored man in Washington who passed with credit a civil service examination was immediately certified for appointment to the treasury department. His old mother, a darky of the antebellum type, insisted upon accompanying him to witness his taking of the oath of office. When the official charged with the swearing in of the new clerk put to him the usual formula with reference to "supporting the constitution of the United States" the old lady's eyes were seen to bulge with astonishment. But she said nothing till she and her son were outside, when, turning to him, she solemnly observed: "I didn't want to say nothin' in there, Joe, but 'deed, honey, I don't see how youse goin' to suppo'te de United States when you ain't been able till now to suppo'te your folkses."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Bird Structure.

Birds belong to the vertebrates, or backboneed animals. They are distinguished from the rest of the vertebrates by the graceful outlines of their bodies, by their clothing of feathers, toothless jaws and the fore limbs, or wings, being adapted to flying. Nature has made many wonderful provisions in the bird, especially in the formation and arrangement of the bones. These are compact and in many cases hollow, thus combining lightness with strength. The first bone of the backbone is so freely jointed to the skull that birds can turn their heads around and look directly back.

Alms From a Tomb.

A remarkable custom which has been uninterruptedly in force for 300 years is yearly observed at Ideford, a secluded parish a few miles from Chudleigh. It is that of picking up alms from the donor's tomb in the churchyard. The rector and churchwarden stand at one end of the tomb, upon the flat top of which they place coins. The recipients of the charity come up one by one to the other end of the tomb and pick up the money.—London Standard.

A BURMESE RAT TRAP.

The Rodents Will Eagerly Enter It and Cannot Get Out.

Rats may readily be lured to jump or drop into any receptacle, especially if it affords them adequate concealment, and they do this without one lingering suspicion of their inability to reach the only existing outlet when the time for retreat approaches.

Thus traps on this principle may readily be designed and are obviously preferable to our rat traps where the animals are numerous.

In Burma, where the rats are a perfect pest, they use a jar trap, which is thus described by a traveler:

"The common Pegu jar I used was about one and a half or two feet deep and fourteen or fifteen inches broad, and a hole was punched in the shoulder just large enough for a rat to enter. There was about six or seven inches of paddy (rice in husk) in the jar, which was then buried to within about eight inches of the top. The mouth of the jar was then closed with a board and a stone.

"A quantity of old timber joists and straw were in the outhouse and no end of rat holes everywhere around."

With this contrivance he caught seventy-two rats in one night. The rats can readily enter, but they cannot climb the smooth sides of the jar to escape.—London Family Herald.

A FIREPROOF TREE.

The Chaparro, One of South America's Natural Curiosities.

On the vast plains of Colombia and the north of South America, called savannas, which are parched with heat except during the rainy season, there is one of the greatest of natural curiosities, a tree called the chaparro, which is fireproof.

It is the custom of the Colombian herdsmen to clear the ground by means of fire for the new vegetation, which springs up so luxuriantly in these regions after the rainy season. But not even the intense heat of a prairie fire affects the chaparro tree. It survives the flames to afford a welcome shade in an otherwise treeless country.

It is a small tree, seldom growing to more than twenty feet in height, with a girth of about three feet. It owes its curious immunity from fire to the nature of its hard, thick bark. The bark lies on the trunk in loose layers, which do not readily conduct heat to the more delicate parts of the structure.

The natives believe that this tree grows only where gold is abundant in the soil below, and it certainly is common in auriferous districts.—Westminster Gazette.

They're All Old.

"I am about," said the speaker, "to tell a story which I believe is new to most of you."

"Gee," interrupted a little man at the end of the banquet hall, "that fellow would believe anything!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

This woman says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved her life. Read her letter.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words. For years I suffered with the worst forms of female complaints, continually doctoring and spending lots of money for medicine without help. I wrote you for advice, followed it as directed, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored me to perfect health. Had it not been for you I should have been in my grave to-day. I wish every suffering woman would try it."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Saving the Company.

By CARLETON HAZZARD.

Copyrighted, 1928, by Associated Literary Press.

After a long line of incompetent stenographers Bradley congratulated himself when Alice Fuller took her place at the typewriter desk, and as though by magic the crooked places were made straight.

So quietly did the girl slip into the routine of the office and so unostentatiously did she accomplish results that Arthur Bradley did not realize all that she was doing. He had only the pleasant feeling that at last the office was running straight, and, manlike, he took the credit to himself.

It had been a struggle to get the office going at all, for the firm was in opposition to the trust, and everything possible was done to break up the newly established branch office.

More than once Bradley had narrowly escaped some trap laid for him, but for every blow struck at him he gave back as good. The letters from the home office were encouraging and intimated that if he would round out the first year there would be an increase of salary as well as the present of a block of stock.

The biggest feather in his cap was when the home office turned over to him the task of securing a contract for some $2,000,000 worth of material.

"Such big contracts are usually handed from the home office," he explained to Alice Fuller as he gave her the letter with instructions to place it in the private letter file in the safe. "If they turn this matter over to me it is a sign that they have faith in my judgment. It's going to be a ticklish matter to figure on all that material at a price that will be low enough to capture the contract and still give us as much of a profit as possible."

"They probably realize that you are close to the contract, and they know that they can trust you," answered Alice. "It shows that this branch is becoming important."

She went quietly about her work, but there was a happy light in her eyes, for she was as much pleased at this sign of confidence as was Bradley himself.

Alice was not a girl of impulses, but she had come to have more than a liking for Bradley, and she took a pride in his success.

The week that followed was a busy one. Bradley figured far into the night on the problems of cost, and each morning he gave to Alice the results of his work, to be tabulated on the machine and filed in the safe until the figures should be complete. It was weary work with all the specifications and blanks, but at last the estimate was complete, and Bradley took it on to New York in person for the approval of the home office.

He was jubilant on his return. The president of the company had congratulated him on the excellence of his work and had hinted that the new London office might be opened soon with Bradley in charge.

But the jubilation was short lived, for two days later a long letter came from the New York office instructing the branch to alter the estimates in accordance with a set of figures some 10 per cent in advance of the original estimate.

"Here's a job for you," growled Bradley as he took the paper to Alice's desk. "I'll have to do as the home office says, but it's throwing away the contract and my chance of promotion."

"Are you certain that it is the order of the New York office?" asked Alice as she took up the sheets. "You know that this contract will mean a great deal to the trust if they are able to take it away from us. It means a great deal more to us to retain it."

"That's just it," complained Bradley. "They know that if we lose this contract we lose our fight for an independent existence and shall have to sell out to the trust at their own price. If we get it, it will mean that we can beat them and hold our own. Yet they raise my figures."

"And it would be worth a great effort to beat us," went on Alice. "Suppose that the trust people had some one planted in the home office who could copy the figures and send them to the trust officers. Suppose, too, that they supplied the people with our letter heads and envelopes. We would be unsuspecting and change the bid in accordance with instructions, only to find out that we had been duped after the bids had been opened and the contract awarded to the trust. I think you will find that they have bid only slightly lower than this, but much higher than your original figures."

"That's possible," admitted Bradley. "I'll wire the home office and find out."

"And warn the traitor in the office that his plans have been discovered?" reminded Alice. "They will then bid below your figures and get the contract anyway. It would be best to hold on and take chances by yourself. It will be the only way to hold the contract."

"If I only could be sure," exclaimed Bradley. "But I can't act on mere guesswork."

"This is something more than guesswork," insisted Alice. "In the first place, this letter is mailed from the Madison square station. That is in the building in which the trust has its main office. Our letters all come from the Wall street station, four or five miles away and nearest our office. They are using the same make of typewriter President Hammond's stenographer uses, but it is not the same machine. On the letters from our office there is a piece crooked from the cross of every 't'."

"I think you are right!" cried Bradley as he compared two letters. "We'll pop in the original estimate, and when they come to open the bids our trust friends will have a dozen fits."

"But answer this letter and say that changes have been made in the bid in accordance with instructions and that the bid has been submitted," directed Alice. "Then the traitor will not become alarmed and notify the trust to put in the lower bid."

"You're the general," cried Bradley admiringly. "I am only the second in command until this is straightened out. Do just as you please."

That evening a letter went to the home office reporting that the changes had been made as directed, but Bradley personally took to the office of the contracting company the original bid.

Two days later a long telegram arrived from the head office demanding the explanation of the changes to which Bradley made reference. It was Alice who wrote the telegram in reply, explaining what those changes were, and who wrote the second message declaring it to be impossible to alter the bid to the old figures, as they directed by wire.

The next morning President Hammond stamped into the office shortly after Bradley had come in.

"I came out on the fast train to see what it all means," he cried. "You have ruined the company by letting yourself be fooled in this fashion."

For reply Bradley brought out the letter he had received. It startled Hammond, for beyond question it was on the paper of the company and not on a cheap imitation. He sighed as he laid it down.

"I suppose that you cannot be blamed," he said dispiritedly. "but it means that the company is smashed by a trick of the trust."

"Not yet," declared Bradley, with a laugh. "Miss Fuller's quick eyes saw through the trick. We took a chance and put in the original bid. I think you will find that we are the lowest bidders, for the trust felt safe in keeping up their bid."

"If we win, you can have the London office next month," declared Hammond.

"Excuse me a moment," said Bradley as he slipped out to the outer office. "It's a go," he announced beamingly. "Miss Fuller says that she will come— as Mrs. Bradley."

"Rather sudden?" asked Hammond. "It's sudden only in the recent realization that I have loved her ever since she came into the office," explained Bradley. "It took this crisis to force the fact home."

Alice looked in at the doorway.

"The Wallington people telephone that your estimate has won the contract," she reported demurely, and to her great embarrassment Bradley kissed her under the approving eyes of the president of the company.

"We've tricked the tricky trust," he cried, "and we're going to London on our honeymoon."

"On my yacht," added the president. "We can't do too much for the girl whose clever brain saved the company. You're a lucky man, Bradley."

"Don't I know it?" cried Bradley. "I knew it first."

Lungs and Long Life.

One of the most remarkable cases of longevity on record was that of an Englishman born in 1483, whose delicate appearance made all the doctors give him up when he was in the cradle. His chest was so narrow, says the report, that he seemed to have difficulty in breathing. Well, this young moribund, condemned by the doctors to die in short order, died in 1651 at the age of 169. He saw the reign of ten kings. Secundi Hango, consul of Venice at Smyrna, measured only fifty-seven centimeters around the chest, and one of his lungs was diseased. Nevertheless he lived to the age of 115 years. He was married five times and had forty-nine children. When he was 100 years old he got his wisdom teeth. When he was 110 his hair turned black again. At 112 his eyebrows and his beard turned black.

Lucky in One Way.

"The late Valerian Gribayedoff," said a Chicago art editor, "was one of the first American newspaper sketch artists. On that account he leaves behind him a famous name. As Gribayedoff said himself the last time I visited him in Paris, his fame was due not to his great artistic skill, but to his luck in coming first. And he added, with a laugh, that it was always lucky to come early and avoid the rush, instancing the case of a restaurant on the Boulevard, in the Latin quarter, where a young poet had a large tureen of soup spilled over his coat one evening. The waiter, in response to the savage outcries of the poet, said good naturedly:

"Oh, well, you needn't alarm yourself, sir. There's no harm done. Our soup never stains after half past 7."

All in Red.

The playwrights over their supper of lobster boasted, "I," said the greatest of them, with a complacent glance at the two pure pearls in his shirt front, "decrease the color of every actress' frock."

"That is carrying the regard for detail too far," said a playwright who had failed.

"Not a bit of it," said the other. "If I didn't decide on the color of the dresses the stage manager would. Why, that must always be done. Otherwise, in their overmastering desire to draw all eyes to themselves, every actress would wear bright red. In my first play the frocks were forgotten in the general excitement, and at the first dress rehearsal all six actresses came on in the discovery scene in scarlet gowns."—New York Press.

The Senate Band.

The press gallery of the senate does not look unlike a band stand, with its elaborately decorated front, and it is never occupied by the scribes prior to the opening of the proceedings. A young lady seated in the gallery opposite the press gallery had been looking intently at the empty seats for quite a while. Her curiosity got the better of her, and, going to the doorkeeper, she said, "Mister, will you please tell me when the band begins to play?" The doorkeeper was amazed. "No band will play, miss," said that gentleman. "There is no band. Why do you ask?" The young lady looked disappointed and embarrassed when she said, with hesitation, "Isn't that the band stand?" pointing to the press gallery.—Washington Herald.

Bray's Mythical Vicar.

It is curious to reflect that there are scattered about the world many scores of places whose chief claim to distinction consists in their association with some famous ditty or other. Take, for example, the village of Bray, in Berkshire, always associated with the most famous "Vicar of Bray." The most curious part of the business is that, though Fuller, in his "Worthies of England," asserts that the cleric who is the hero of the song was one Simon Alleyne, careful search of the parish registers has failed to substantiate the story.—London Musical Home Journal.

A Strenuous Task.

"Your honor," said the witness, "can't you order a recess?" "A recess?" "Yes, sir. I've stood on this stand and told the whole truth two hours on a stretch, and I'm teetotally wore out. I never told the truth that long before—not in all my life!"—Atlanta Constitution.

MRS. VIXENHEAD.

The Story of a Berlin Shrew and Her Likeness in Stone.

This quaint equivalent of the German term neidkopf is applied by travelers to an effigy carved in stone and fixed in a niche in the second story of a house in the Helliggeiststrasse in Berlin not far from the emperor's palace. The neidkopf represents a hideous, harpy faced woman with snakelike curls and tongue protruding in mocking derision.

One day some 200 years ago, the legend runs, Frederick William of Prussia, more familiarly known as Old Fritz, was walking about the streets of the city in the unconventional way he affected when he chanced to look through a window and observed a hunchbacked goldsmith hard at work. The king entered the little shop for a chat.

The result of his interview was an order for a gold table service for the royal household, an order that made the fortune of the hunchback. Later his majesty made other visits to the shop to see how the work was advancing, and on one of these occasions he observed a woman in the window of the opposite house contorting her face in the most hideous grimaces and pointing with derisive finger at the crippled workman.

To the king's query as to what ailed the old woman the goldsmith replied: "It is envy, sire. She is the wife of a rival goldsmith, and ever since your majesty so graciously gave me this order she and her daughter have reviled me."

Frederick William, paternal in punishment as well as in reward, at once investigated as to the ownership of the house in which the shrew lived. He found that it belonged to her husband and therefore reasoned that there was little likelihood of the family moving, an idea that seemed greatly to please his majesty. His next move was to consult a sculptor, whom he commanded to make the bust of a woman with the most shrewish, Xantippe-like face he could imagine. The king then bought and renovated the house in which the hunchback had his workshop, presented it to him and caused the bust to be placed conspicuously above the workshop window. Thus whenever the envious woman across the street looked forth from her casement the first object on which her eyes fell was this intended portrait of her amiable self.

For more than a hundred years the neidkopf—spiteful vixen head, as one would say in English—stood in proud prominence, a reproach to the envious woman and her descendants. It afterward mysteriously disappeared, but in 1840 or thereabouts it was found in a forgotten collection of bric-a-brac. Frederick William IV, bought the bust for a large price and had it replaced in its original niche, where it stands today.—New York Tribune.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

Waste and Carelessness That Enrich Uncle Sam.

"If we waste other things the way we do stamps," said a stamp clerk the other day, "we Americans are just about the most wasteful people on the face of the earth."

"Uncle Sam is much more than half a million dollars in pocket every year as a result of carelessness in the use of stamps. The government never loses anything by such carelessness and always gains."

"How many stamps do you put loose in a drawer of your desk or in a corner of your pocketbook and never think of again until you come across them, aged and torn, while rummaging about months later? Then they are tossed into the wastebasket."

"Lots of people are careless about putting stamps on envelopes and paper wrappers. The result is that often before the stamp has been canceled it has fallen off and the letter is held up at the other end of the line until postage is paid."

"A great many more folks put on too much postage. They slap on two or three stamps to a package that requires only one. They are too busy or too indolent to take the trouble to have the package weighed and find out how much postage the package requires."

"If too little postage is put on a letter, Uncle Sam simply holds it up at the other end until the postage due has been paid. But if too much is put on Uncle Sam simply pockets the excess to which he is not entitled and says nothing."—Chicago Tribune.

WATCH THE CELLAR.

If Not Clean It is a Breeding Place For Sickness.

Underground cellars ought to be done away with. They are relics of a dark age. More sickness originates in them, physicians claim, than anywhere else about the place. They cannot be kept in sanitary condition while vegetables are constantly decaying there. The place for a cellar is above ground and outside the dwelling. Leave the basement for the furnace, the coal bin and a general storeroom. An above ground cellar is more convenient in every way. Your vegetables can be stored with less than half the labor when you do not have to go up and down stairs with them. You can keep an above ground cellar clean with but little trouble, while the underground one, being difficult to get at, will be neglected nine times out of ten and allowed to become a source of infection to the family above it.

Ventilation and temperature are much more controllable in such a building than in an old fashioned underground cellar, which obliges the housewife to use up so much strength in climbing stairs. Locate it convenient to the kitchen, with which it can be connected in winter by an inclosed passageway. Watch the cellar. Remember, the doctor who immediately asked, when called to treat a case of typhoid fever, if there was decaying cabbage in the cellar. There was. Keep the cellar sweet and clean and see that it is frequently aired.—Suburban Life.

Outspoken.

About Advertising

It costs money to advertise in a paper of circulation and influence in the community. Every business man who seeks to enlarge his trade, recognizes the fact that advertising is a legitimate expense. It is not the cheapest advertising that pays the best. Sometimes it is the highest priced newspaper that brings the largest net profit to the advertiser.
