HARVEST

Supper, Fair and Entertainment on Friday Evening

The ladies of the Presbyterian society held their annual harvest supper and entertainment on the evening of Friday last at their vestry. It was a decided success in every way and a most enjoyable occasion. A large number of our town's people were present. The nice display of articles on the fancy table, as well as the goods displayed at the different booths, found a ready sale. The supper was abundant and served in the accustomed good taste.

The display of fruit and vegetables was good and some excellent products of the farm were admired by all present. Those receiving prizes in this display were:

Mrs. Charles Gibson, Mrs. E. M. Cutter, Harry Deacon, Morris Christie, N. C. Jameson, H. B. Tuttle, apples; M. D. Cooper, carrots; Will C. Hill, lettuce, largest pumpkin, and best general display; George Perry, Mangel Wurzel beet; S. M. Thompson, beets; Mrs. J. M. Duncan, endives and leeks; H. E. Tuttle, cabbage; I. M. Lowell, potatoes; Mrs. Charles Gibson, pears; George P. Little, bell squash; M. D. Cooper, turbin squash; Mrs. George Miner, parsnip; S. M. Thompson, cucumber pumpkin; Henry Rogers, pie pumpkin; Eva Thompson, gourds; N. C. Jameson, corn; Mrs. George Miner, canned fruit; Eva Thompson parsnips.

The entertainment was mostly musical, consisting of vocal solos and duets, piano solos; readings; and music by Appleton's orchestra.

Year Book of the New England Farmer

The publishers of The New England Farmer, Brattleboro, Vt., are publishing a valuable book for farmers under the above title. This work will contain: A Farmer's Almanac; Daily Memorandum and Cash Book; Directory of Agricultural Organizations; Fish and Game Laws; Milk Standards and other Dairy Laws and Regulations; Dog Laws; List of Fairs; Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations; Gestation Tables; Weather Forecasts; Common Laws of Wills, Deeds, Contracts; Estimating Tables; Weights and Measures; Interest Table; Breeding Tables and much other information valuable to farmers and others. This will be a book which every farmer in New England should own. The price is 50 cents per copy, prepaid. If taken in connection with The New England Farmer the price will be $1.25 for both. Orders may be sent to the office of the publishers, Ullery & Co., Brattleboro, Vt.

Don't Put Them in Waste Basket

If you receive from the office of the Antrim Reporter within the next week or two a gentle reminder that your subscription is either due or over due don't throw it in the waste basket. We shall watch the mail closely from now on trusting we may receive your kind consideration.

NO FALSE PRETENSE has marked the career of Ely's Cream Balm. Being entirely harmless, it is not responsible like the catarrh snuffs and powders, for minds shattered by cocaine. The great virtue of Ely's Cream Balm is speedily and completely overcomes nasal catarrh and hay fever. Back of this statement is the testimony of thousands and a reputation of many years' success. All druggists, 50c., or mailed by Fly Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

Antrim Creamery Corporation

The foundation of the new Creamery will be laid by November 1st. The contract for the erection of the building has been let. There are a few shares of the company stock to be had at par, $25.00 per share.

Why not become interested in a home industry that is to be managed by people that are well and favorably known to you? There is always a ready market for the product of a Creamery. We expect this company to be a success from the start, as we have associated with us men who have had many years of experience in the Creamery business. If you have a little money to invest send in your subscription at once to

Baptist Roll Call

The annual roll call of the First Baptist church of Antrim was held on Thursday last, and largely attended; the gathering was one of the most enjoyable and profitable yet held. At the roll call, each member present responded with remarks or a passage of scripture; a number of interesting letters from former pastors and absent members were read. A feature of this annual gathering is the supper which is always served by the ladies in their social hall, this year at 5.30 o'clock. It was fully equal to any of its predecessors.

This day's gathering will long be remembered as one of the bright spots in the history of the society.

250 Good Stories

The Youth's Companion abounds in stirring stories of adventure and heroism. One may describe an escape from accidental peril, another a strange encounter with wild creatures, man or beast.

Many of these stories are true as to facts, and only disguised as to names and places. A score or more of such stories will be published during 1910 in addition to nearly 200 others—250 good stories in all, and no two alike. And this is not counting the serial stories, which it is believed will be considered by old Companion readers as the best ever published.

Every new subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $1.75 for the new 1910 Volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909, from the time the subscription is received.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
Companion Bldg., Boston, Mass.

C. R. Klinger, the Jeweler, 1060 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my backache and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now tend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed".

The fifteenth annual meeting of the New Hampshire Horticultural Society will be held at Peterboro, on Oct. 27, 28 and 29, 1909.

High School Department.

The schools were not in session last Friday, owing to the state convention at Concord.

A comedy is being rehearsed which will soon be presented by the members of the high school.

If absence makes the heart grow fonder, certain ones must be dead in love with school by this time!

We have learned from good authority that unless the lower stops are out the lower notes of an organ will not sound.

Last Wednesday afternoon several of the interested ones attended the opening of the Goodell Electric Plant at North Branch.

Manager Elliott has arranged for basket ball games with Milford and Peterboro high schools. The complete schedule will be announced as soon as possible.

Miss Marjorie Barberick from Bennington has completed her school duties at the Antrim high. She was a member of the Junior class. We understand from good authority that she is to make a special study of music.

On Monday afternoon an athletic meeting was called to take action concerning the silver cup, for the possession of which Antrim tied with Henniker last May. This cup has since been in the care of Antrim the greater part of the time, and it was voted to return it to Henniker pending the dissolving of the tie.

"Satan finds some mischief still
For idle hands to do."

Some of the Sophomores and Freshmen feel that this old couplet should be changed a little and read thus:

"Satan finds some mischief still
For idle hands to do,—if Miss Neville don't see you first!"

State Trade Report

Reports to Bradstreet's show an increase in retail trade, owing partly to the colder weather. Manufacturing business is generally good although there are some plants which are quiet. The lack of water for power purposes continues to be a serious proposition, as lakes are very low and so far the fall rains have not filled them up to any extent. Farmers are nearly through harvesting and crops will be below the average, although some sections report them as good; the quality is good and prices are high. Wholesale trade is of good volume and collections are fair.

After a courtship of a fortnight Clayton S. Ogden of Penacook and Miss Mary E. Hodge of Claremont were married by Julius C. Timson, a notary public. This is termed rapid-fire courtship.

Flour Lower?

Can you believe the statement that flour will soon be lower? It seems almost too good to be true, but the following statement was last week given out by a prominent merchant in a near-by city:

"Flour is lower and is to be lower still. During the early spring months top notch prices were the order of the day but this is passed and the tide has set in the other direction. With the coming in of the spring wheat flour is $1 per barrel less than at the time of the top notch prices several weeks ago."

A Service of Song

An unusual service was held at the Woodbury Memorial M. E. church on Sunday evening last; it was a special song service, prepared and rendered by the choir of the church, under the able management of their leader, W. A. N. Scott. The service was entirely of song, excepting the offering of prayer and reading of scriptures by the pastor, Rev. A. M. Markey.

A large audience was present and greatly enjoyed the several numbers of special music.

ANTRIM CENTRE

Morris Wood had a husking on Thursday evening last; about 30 were present, husking out about 100 bushels corn. Supper was served. All present enjoyed the occasion, a goodly number of red ears being found.

Antrim Grange goes to Hancock this week Thursday evening to visit John Hancock Grange.

Warren W. Merrill and son are re-painting the farm buildings of Mrs. Clara Tenney.

M. H. Wood was in Nashua on Friday on business and also visited his mother in that city.

Ira Hutchinson and M. H. Wood took 23 members of the Y. P. S. C. E. to Hillsboro on Saturday.

Frank E. Bass has had a furnace put into his house and now it is heated by steam.

The Loring's have closed their house and returned to their city home.

Mrs. Arthur L. Smith is confined to her home by illness; Miss Nina Boutelle is stopping with her.

The Grange Hall is undergoing repairs; dormer windows have been put into the roof which has been newly shingled. On the interior a dining hall will be finished off up stairs; the whole being a much needed and decided improvement.

From an acre of ground, M. H. Wood raised 60 bushels potatoes, one bushel beets, cart-body full pumpkins and squashes, 161 shocks corn fodder and 100 baskets corn, eight stacks beans (probably about three bushels). This is "going some;" others are now in order.

There is much of the Thanksgiving spirit in the November Designer. The autumn fashions are reviewed at length and illustrated in beautiful color pages. The stories and miscellany are exceptionally fine.

Francestown

Personal and Local Gossip From a Nearby Community

Oak Hill Grange held its regular meeting at the town hall. It was harvest night, and there was a fine exhibit of fruit, vegetables and fancy work of all kinds. Prizes were awarded as follows: First prize to Henry T. Miller for best collection of vegetables; second prize to Mrs. Lord. For fancy work, first, Miss Marion Prescott. The fourth degree was exemplified for Deputy Orin Dow's inspection, after which the following program was given: Vocal solo, Geo. E. Pettee; essay on, "History of corn from its Earliest Days," Mrs. Lenna Miller; vocal solo, C. R. Weddleton; reading, Mrs. Stella Duncklee; vocal solo, Miss Marion Prescott; song, George E. Pettee. A supper was served.

T. E. Bixby and children have returned to their home in Quincy, Mass.

Mrs. George Duncklee and daughter, Miss Sadie Duncklee of Nashua, are visiting in town.

NORTH BRANCH

The Flint family left Monday morning for Milwaukee; they expect to return for a few weeks next May, before sailing for Europe, where they will spend the summer touring the Continent with their own auto. They will visit Oberammergau during the "Passion Play".

Last week was a notable one for North Branch. More distinguished men were present than ever congregated here at any one time; it was an ideal day for the occasion.

Mrs. McClary, Mrs. I. G. Anthoine and Mr. and Mrs. Farley of Nashua were guests of Aunt Achsah last week.

Mrs. Simonds and son visited her children in Somerville, Mass., last week.

The Harvest Supper will be served at North Branch Thursday evening of this week.

EAST ANTRIM

Mrs. Ayer of Cambridge, Mass., is stopping at "Butternut Lodge," G. F. Trask's.

Robert Dickie has returned from his trip to Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Mary Wilkins is in poor health, requiring the attendance of a doctor.

A husking bee at Walter Gould's was scheduled for Thursday evening of last week, but the rain prevented many from attending. Some 25 were there, and most of the corn was husked. Refreshments were served at the close.

Every one is invited to the Harvest Supper at the Branch on Thursday evening of this week.

The Delineator for November is among the best numbers; it is replete with Thanksgiving material, both in regard to stories and the beautiful fashion plates. This issue is exceptionally valuable in that it is very much of an educational number, and these instructive articles should be very widely read.

Nothing else is as safe and certain in results.

HOW TO MANAGE A MAN.

Your wedding, dear, is very near. Come, listen to a word From one who's had her number two And fishes for a third.

Don't ever try to boss your man Nor use that big word must, For just as surely as you do Those wedding bonds will bust.

Now, when I got my number one I tried that shell worn trick, Then didn't be to the courthouse run And get a divorce quick!

But when I caught my number two I tried another plan, And now I'll tell you how, my dear, To manage any man:

Man has a stomach. Hear that, dear? The secret of success is here. His stomach and his heart are one. To manage him, you see, is fun.

Is it a summer trip you wish? Just get him up a special dish. Fill him with tender chicken fry, Ice cream, sweet cake and apple pie.

Is it a diamond, hat or coat, Auto, sweet house or pleasure boat, A trip across, a Paris gown, A string of pearls to stun the town?

Well, turkey roast will fill the bill And pumpkin pie with flaky trim. Then while he eats just soo and bill, And lovey dovey around and trim.

And when that turkey is a wreck And he has stuffed about a peck, Just throw your arms around his neck And you will get a big fat check.

But this last word and I am through—Dyspepsia killed my number two. So keep the stomach bitters round Or you may put him underground. C. M. BARNITZ.

A CEYLON PLAGUE.

The Land Leeches Are Worse Than the Snakes or Mosquitoes.

It is nearly always the case that exceedingly beautiful countries are overrun by different kinds of pests. Beautiful Ceylon has mosquitoes said to be the most droll and audacious in the world and snakes and a thousand more plagues of poor human beings, but the worst of them all is a species of leech. The Ceylon land leech is a thin creature about two inches long and very nimble and flexible. It will crawl up a man's leg and, traveling underneath the clothing, will climb as high as the throat. These leeches do not crawl like the leeches that are known to medicine, but rear themselves up on their tails to watch for prey and walk off to attack it with amazing rapidity. In walking through the jungle hosts of them may be seen by the roadside where they wait to victimize cattle. Hence, it is said, are driven half wild by them, as also are palanquin bearers and coolies, whose bare legs are their favorite resort, the men's hands being too engaged to pull them off. The leeches may be seen hanging round their ankles, from which tiny trickles of blood run over the foot.—London Standard.

Balloons and Eagles.

A book has been discovered in Vienna bearing on its title page this legend: "About the invention of air navigation by means of balloons and eagles, by Jakob Kleserer; published at the expense of the author by Herr Loeschekohl, Kohlmarkt, Vienna, 1801." It is an elaborate treatise on aviation in which a balloon is steered through the air by eagles which have been "trained and deprived of their talons." Minute instructions are given as to how the birds should be harnessed, and suggestions are made as to the employment of double teams and relays. The author-inventor expresses the hope that his idea may be employed first to expedite the delivery of letters and dispatches and that persons competent as trainers of giant birds will carry his "wonderful idea" into execution.

The Eternal Marathon.

"Mar," declared the old fashioned preacher, "is a worm."
 "And," said a man who had been married three times and who was occupying a small space in a rear pew, "woman is the early bird."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Expensive Education.

"Do you think you could learn to love me?" asked old Gotrox.
 "Oh, I don't know," replied Miss Youngblood. "How much are you willing to spend on my education?"—Chicago News.

No Better Half.

She—So the fortune teller told you that you would never marry. He—Yes—that is, indirectly. She—What did she say? He—She said I was born to command.—Exchange.

MOORISH SOLDIERS.

Their Methods in Battle and their System of Signals.

At fighting on horseback the Moors are adepts and extremely mobile. But they are incorrigibly lazy and seldom indulge in night attack. When they attack in force the horsemen usually give a lift to the foot soldiers who accompany them or allow them to run alongside and hold on to a stirrup iron. The mounted men then make a charge, wheel round and retire and make way for the footmen, who crawl along the ground, almost invisible, and who rise to the attack if they come within striking distance of the enemy. As a rule, the Rifians prefer to lure detached parties into an ambush or defile and thus inflict heavy loss upon them. The mounted men seldom dismount to fire, and their firing, being from the saddle, is very inaccurate. Should the advance of the white troops be slow or hesitating the Moors effect a bold combination between horsemen and footmen and generally succeed in inflicting heavy losses on their enemy.

The prime tactics of the Moors are to delay the advance of an enemy as much as possible by mounted rifle fire until they can discern its extent and direction and subsequently to try enveloping the advancing force. The tribes also indulge in sniping, but not to a very great extent, and they also fight individually. They do not neglect opportunities for stratagem and can effect some very clever ruses. They are also guilty of abusing the services of the white flag in action.

The Moorish intelligence system is an excellent one, and the tribes are seldom without information regarding the movements of an enemy. They have also an excellent system of signaling at night by means of small fires dotted about the hills and ravines, which are obscured and revealed in accordance with an ingenious code of signals known to themselves.—Chicago News.

DREAM INSPIRATION.

Intellectual Achievements Born of Visions in Sleep.

It is well known, says H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine, that dreams have stimulated men to remarkable intellectual achievements and have even supplied the material for these achievements. Thus Coleridge composed "Kubla Khan" in a dream. Tartini got his "Devil's Sonata" from a dream in which the devil appeared and challenged him to a musical competition. It was a dream that gave Voltaire the first canto of his "Henriade," and Dante's "Divina Commedia" is likewise said to have been inspired by a dream.

Many novelists on their own admission have obtained the plots for some of their best works from materials provided in dreams. A particularly impressive instance is that of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose "Chapter on Dreams" in his book "Across the Plains" should be read by all who would learn what dreams can do for a man intellectually. The solution of baffling mathematical problems, the ideas necessary to complete some invention, have been supplied by dreams. Occasionally the dreamer has been known to rise in his sleep and jot down the information thus acquired.

In such cases he usually forgets all about the helpful dream and on awaking is greatly surprised at finding the record he has made of it, which shows that—as with the visions so potentially influencing health—it is possible for dreams to aid a man in an intellectual way without his being consciously aware of them.

Bird's Milk.

"I fed him with bird's milk." This curious expression was used by the old sultan of Turkey, while a prisoner on his way to Saloniki, with reference to his brother Mohammed, his predecessor on the throne. Abdul Hamid was lamenting his own fate and telling his captors how little he deserved it and how kind he had been to his brother. "I fed him with bird's milk," he said, as if that were the greatest kindness he could show. What is bird's milk? Not the Turkish equivalent of the milk of human kindness, but a European brand of condensed milk bearing on the can a picture of a bird on a nest.

His Conundrum.

"Mistah Walkab, kin yo' tell me de diff'ence 'tween a cold in de head an' a— a chicken coop wit' a hole in de rufe?"

"No, Sam; that's a hard one. What is the difference between a cold in the head and a chicken coop with a hole in the roof?"

"De one am a case o' influenza, an' de udder am a case o' out flew hens, sub."

"Ladies and gentlemen, the vocal wonder, Professor Wabbles Izzers, will now sing the popular ballad entitled 'The Lips That Carass a Stogy Shall Never Touch Mine.'—Chicago Tribune.

STUDY OF JAPANESE.

Difficulties of the Spoken and the Written Language.

Army officers who are thinking of taking up the study of Japanese should pause before they attempt the task and ask themselves whether they have a peculiarly strong linguistic aptitude. Even the Japanese find their language very difficult. The Anglo-Saxons who growl about the difficulties of our spelling and favor the simplified system would never live if they had to undergo what the subject of the mikado suffers in the matter of language.

It takes a Japanese child seven years to learn the essential parts of the alphabet. There are 214 signs which serve the same purpose as initial letters in English dictionaries. Then after you have tracked down in one of these 214 signs some part of the character for which you are about to make a search you still have a veritable darkest Africa ahead of you. The pompous first personal pronoun is avoided whenever it is possible in speaking Japanese. If it must be used it is introduced casually, but generally the abstract noun "selfishness" serves in its stead.

For example, a Japanese would not say, "I don't drink wine," but "Wine don't drink," or, if this is not clear enough, "Selfishness wine don't drink." Reference to your possessions must be deprecatory. Thus if a man wishes to point out his own residence he says, "That miserable house," which, of course, could refer to no other than his own.

On the other hand, "That beautiful house" would easily identify the house as belonging to some one else. Moreover, any one who wishes to learn Japanese must be prepared to learn two languages—the written and the spoken. The one differs so materially from the other that if a Japanese is reading a book or newspaper and wishes to do so aloud it becomes necessary for him to translate the written words into the colloquial. To be able to read any of the higher class Japanese newspapers it is necessary to master at least from 2,500 to 3,000 ideographs.—Army and Navy Journal.

PROMPT TO ACT.

A Man Who Seemed Always to Be Ready For Emergencies.

To be ready for emergencies was one of the gifts of Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, the great teacher of the blind, writes his daughter, Mrs. Laura E. Richards, who has edited his "Letters and Journals." She gives several instances in which his quick action prevented serious accidents.

Once at Green Peace my father was going to drive with my mother and my sister Florence in a closed carriage with a large window in front.

As the driver was mounting the box he dropped his whip and got down to recover it. This startled the young horses, and they bolted down the driveway.

My father tried to open the big window, but it stuck fast. He flashed through the plate glass as if it had been paper and, catching up the reins, stopped the runaways in less time than it takes to tell it.

When Thomas came running up, white and breathless, he found "doctor" quietly shaking the bits of glass from his coat and hat and explaining to my terrified mother that he "went so quick there was no time to get cut."

Still another memory of my mother's shows his quickness in a different way. He was walking along Washington street one day when a furious dog rushed at him and bit his hand severely.

There was no Pasteur Institute in the forties. My father instantly raised up the skin and flesh of the bitten part and, holding it firmly, entered the nearest apothecary's shop.

"Cut this piece off," he said briefly.

The apothecary exclaimed in horror. He could not, he would not, without a surgeon's order. It was out of the question.

"I am a surgeon," said my father, "and I command you to cut it off."

It was cut off. My father dressed the wound with his other hand and went about his business.

What's In a Name.

Returned Traveler—By the way, Mr. Mann, your daughter, Miss Etta, is married, isn't she? Old Resident—No; she could have married a fine young fellow once, but she threw him over on account of his name. She said it was bad enough to be Etta Mann, but she drew the line at Etta Knox.—Chicago Tribune.

No Economy There.

Bronx—In Russia they never say, "What's in a name?" Lenox—Why not? Bronx—It's taken for granted that it's the whole alphabet.—Lippincott's.

And Went.

"When I leave you tonight"—began Mr. Stoptate.

"Goodness!" interrupted Miss Ter-sleep. "Are you coming again tonight?" He glanced at the clock and apprehended her meaning.—Exchange.

The Important Thing

What That Was the Doctor Told Mary Trenton.

By JEANNE O. LOIZEAUX.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Dr. John Trevor lifted his big rumped black head from his book and, with his mind still full of "Minor Surgery," scowled on his friend who had for some time been talking unheeded. He concluded to give Morton a minute's attention and then if necessary put him bodily forth from the office and be rid of him.

"Come out of your hole for once and help a fellow in a pinch," Morton was saying in evident continuance of a (to him) interesting subject. "Be human. You used to be occasionally decent to a girl in college. I need you—honest, Trevor. Miss Dell is here at the Kings' with her cousin. You knew her at school—Mary Trenton. It seems that one will not stir without the other. I wish to goodness you would take Miss Trenton to the club dance tonight."

The doctor looked his friend over with good natured contempt. He was a snapshot diagnostician. No need to look at Morton's tongue. It always proclaimed its owner's ailment in time.

"Again!" he remarked caustically. "The hundredth time since I have known you! It's Miss Dell, I take it. Morton, it occurs to me to inquire why in thunder you don't marry and have done with your sufferings. Why be the eternal target? What is the important thing in your life anyway? If the law is like medicine you should give some time to your profession, and it looks to me as if you do nothing but trail about after some pretty bundle of skirts. It's well enough, but you don't seem to be lauding anywhere in particular."

"Well, it's serious this time. If I thought she would—have me I'd—do—anything! I'm hard hit. I think she likes me too. But how much? I can't get her alone if you don't help me. Nobody else in this empty town is fit to amuse that little cousin of hers. You remember her? Little and blond and—awfully sweet, you know."

The doctor tried to call up Mary Trenton's face.

"Seems to me I do," he said thoughtfully. Morton groaned.

"To think of any human man having to remember Mary Trenton—that is, unless he had seen her cousin! Are you going to be decent the next two weeks, Trevor?"

"Sure thing, boy! Make your plans, and I'll play dummy, anything to do you a good turn. But let me tell you this—the important thing with me is to build up my practice and ground myself at every turn in my profession. I want another year ahead; I want the best piano money can buy, for I miss my music; I want a pedigree Boston motor and a motorcar that can't be hurt. But I don't want a wife—not now. I can't more than support myself yet in the style to which I have been accustomed, and I don't want to touch what Aunt Joanna left me. I want to make good myself. I tell you this because you are a vile matchmaker and because you are as well know now that if you have anything up your sleeve about me and Miss Trenton you can shake it out now and have done; that's all. Call around, and I'll be in gain togs and do your bidding. Now get out!"

Morton obeyed. That was the beginning of two weeks unparalleled in the history of John Trevor, M. D. Morton tried his complaisance to the utmost. Constantly every evening, many afternoons, every spare minute and many minutes that really could not be spared he glanced attendance on Mary Trenton, while his friend won his labored way to the heart of Eleanor Dell. Mary was used to starchy attentions, and this great rugged, bluff, brilliant, totally delightful man of science plucked her pride, stimulated her interest. He was beneath his perfect courtesy indifferent, wary—may, he seemed at times even disapproving. She felt for the first time in her spoiled young life inadequate and futile. It seemed that even her great beauty did not blind him to her little faults.

Dr. Trevor began to be interested, to think that with a little training the girl might really concern herself with the real things of life. He took her through the hospitals, and she found a new life of helping open to her vision. All these poor sick minds and bodies were to be healed! She felt more than ever silly and futile, more than ever humble and admiring. The doctor explained everything to her, told her of the physician's life, its hard work, its high aims, its stimulus to better conditions for the world.

The girls began to speak of returning to their own house in another week, and summer festivities began to multiply in their honor. The doctor actually neglected his practice, and his research work was forgotten. He did not realize what was upon him until one night he woke from a dream of setting a broken arm without giving an anaesthetic and found it was Mary Trenton's round little arm. It seemed a horrible thing to hurt her. He was cursing himself for a brute when at last he found himself sitting straight up in bed. Then he cursed himself for an utter fool that he could let a tiny yellow headed slip of a laughing girl disturb his scientific peace even in a dream! He resolved to get out of the danger zone. He was glad she was going away.

But the next night was even worse, for he could not sleep. He now knew, with a sort of terror, that he was in love. His prognosis was guarded. Did it always hurt like this—love? He would, save that shame deterred him, have asked the experienced Morton, now safely havened in an engagement to Miss Dell. But he, John Trevor, M. D., would not weakly settle into mere happy domesticity. He would devote every energy to his noble profession. He would fight off this weakness.

He prescribed a dose of absence for himself. In the morning he phoned to Morton that he had an important case and would be busy all day and evening. Sorry, but it could not be helped. Then in his private office he proceeded by the light of his reason to convince himself that it was but a senseless fancy. Men often got over worse ailments. Then there came again before his vision her little fair face with the new sweet, helping look in the deep blue eyes, the serious attention to his words—as if his words mattered. He could not help wondering whether he could not have made her care. He supposed Hilton, the idiot, would take his place in the moonlight picnic party "on" for that evening. He went into his laboratory and began to toil.

Long past noon he snatched his forgotten lunch. He was restless. Well, hot as it was, he would have a walk. He had a theory that plenty of fresh air and stiff exercise would cure any known form of temporary insanity. He started out. But the girl went with him. Coming back, perspiring and disgusted, he determined firmly not to pass the King house. In the first place it was out of his way, and she might be in the big old garden or on the veranda, and he would have to go in a minute and be decent. No, he would not see her. Still—well, he would go past; for really he should see old Mrs. Patton across the way and ask about her hay fever. His step quickened. He made his call, talking with his lazy, comfortable old patient on the porch. As he left her she pursued him with gossip.

"Ah, there goes Percy Hilton!" she exclaimed. "I suppose, as usual, he is going to see Mary Trenton. Elizabeth King would be delighted to have her cousin marry him. Isn't it a pity that money and brains don't always go together?" He laughed and got away. But his blood boiled. Hilton, that degenerate son of the overrich—it would be hideous! He did Hilton injustice, however, for he really was decent enough in his way. The doctor decided to call at the Kings' just for a moment. As he turned the corner he saw the other man swinging along, evidently bound for the same goal.

And, like a flash, John Trevor knew that there was but one important thing in the whole world, and that was to get to Mary Trenton—fast. Surely that fellow would not have the unbelievable impudence to propose to her! Surely she would never accept him if he did! As he came to the foot of the long garden, walking in his restless, headlong fashion, something twitched at his coat sleeve. He turned to see Mary Trenton. The girl was leaning over the green hedge, smiling up to him, her great garden hat pushed back.

"Is it so important as all that, your case?" she queried, mischief in her eyes. "If somebody is really dying I will not detain you; otherwise it is too hot to race like that—past your friends especially." He looked down on her, helpless.

"The only important thing in this world is—you," he said suddenly, while she trembled and blushed at his tone.

"Happy to be even—a thing—to you," she murmured, mischief still in her eye. His look rebuked her.

"Do you—can you—Mary—I adore you! Will you marry me? Will you?" It was sufficiently precipitate, and the sun was very hot, and she saw Hilton looking over the lawn for her.

"Tell me—will you?" The girl's face was very happy, but she was yet a woman and would not be too ready with a reply.

"Come—over into the shade," she said. "I don't want—that man to find me." The doctor cleared the hedge, and like two naughty children they sneaked behind the shrubbery to safety in a tree hidden corner. Then he faced her inquiringly. Tears suddenly filled her eyes, and she laid her arm up across her face like a child. He took it down and drew her close.

"Dearest, dearest, what is it? Won't you tell me?" She drew away and looked at him seriously.

"I was—afraid—you—weren't going to ask me!"

Was ever anything so foolish? He straightway informed Mary Trenton—and thought he was telling the truth—that from the first time he had set eyes on her he had loved her and would have followed her round the world to "ask her." The really foolish thing would have been to devote a big warm heart to a mere profession. Love was the important thing.

Beginning at the north-west corner of the premises on land of Lizzie A. Hills and A. A. Ramsey; thence southerly, crossing the highway by said Ramsey's land and the land of Willard Manning to land of David H. Goodell; thence easterly on said Goodell's land to a large rock near the brook; thence southerly by said Goodell's land to land of Nathan C. Jameson; thence easterly on said N. C. Jameson's land to the south-east corner of the premises on land of Charles R. Jameson; thence northerly on said Charles R. Jameson's land and land of Frank F. that's calling in the wind." That was Tennyson's first line of poetry. The first poem he ever composed was written upon a state one Sunday morning at Louth. The subject, set him by his brother Charles, was "Flowers," and little Alfred covered his slate with blank verse after the model of Thomson's "Seasons." His next attempt was an elegy upon his grandmother, who had just died, written at the request of his grandfather. When it was written the old man put 10 shillings into the boy's hand and said, "There, that is the first money you have ever earned by your poetry, and, take my word for it, it will be the last."—Westminster Gazette.

Opening an Oyster.

"The Cook's Oracle," a book which was never far from the kitchens of our great-grandmothers, is very precise in its directions as to the proper manner of preserving and eating oysters, says an English journal. "The true lover of an oyster," writes the author, "will have some regard for the feelings of his little favorite and will never abandon it to the merces of a bungling operator, but will open it himself and contrive to detach the fish from the shell so dexterously that the oyster is hardly conscious he has been ejected from his lodging till he feels the teeth of the piscivorous gourmand tickling him to death."

This Was In Denmark.

An Englishman having business in a certain Danish town arrived at the railway station. He inquired of a group of men standing near the way to the house he wanted, whereupon one of them offered to go with him and show him. With recollections of what such a service meant in England he said, "I don't want a guide." "But surely you asked us to show you the way," said one of them. "Yes, but I don't want a guide." "My dear sir, I am not a guide; I am the bishop."

Romance In High Life.

"So that helress is engaged to a nobleman."
"Yes."
"And you say the affair was romantic?"
"Oh, very. Why, the duke was even too poor to hire a lawyer."—Kansas City Journal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contains Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. PLAYING THE STOCKS.

He Who Has Knowledge and He Who Gambles on Gossip.

Of the many popular delusions touching Wall street and its people none is more persistent or more dangerous to the outsider than the belief that from nothing great permanent fortunes have been made by shrewd and lucky speculation in prices. It isn't true. We differentiate here between speculation in prices only and the kind of legitimate speculation which seeks to anticipate great economic changes. Legitimate speculation has its translation into prices, too, but it takes, first, original capital in some reasonable proportion to the profits expected and, secondly, the treatment of exceptional opportunity with correct imagination. Its risks at best are very large. Among our Wall street acquaintances are several hard headed men who succeed in making $25,000 a year by speculation. Not one of them has a capital of less than $250,000. They make it earn about 10 per cent.

Take Blank, one of the ablest speculators we know. He has made half a million dollars during the past five years. Very handsome return, you say. Let us look at Blank. He was the chief accountant of one of the big railway systems when an uncle, dying, left him $20,000. Mind you, he was an expert railway statistician and an exceptionally able young man to boot. He knew his own road like a book, as well as some other things that only the directors were aware of. The stock of the system looked cheap to him, and he used his $20,000 to margin 4,000 shares. A bull market was beginning, and within a month or two Blank's capital had increased to $60,000. He was content with a ten point rise, though the stock advanced ten points more. That was the first of Blank's deals. Twelve months later he won again. He thought that the stock of a certain western system was selling below its value and set about an investigation to find the facts. He hired a first class engineer and a retired traffic manager to travel from one end of that railroad to the other, and he himself analyzed the accounts. When all the reports were in it seemed to him that the system was earning enough money to justify an increase of its dividend, and he plunged once more. He waited six months for his point this time, and his investigation had cost him $5,000. He made $50,000. Good interest, you say, but think of Blank's special equipment for the game and the trouble he took to be right. You, Mr. Thinmarginist, after reading the Wall street gossip in your daily paper, adventure your thousand or two thousand dollars and expect to double your money. Mark the difference.—John Parr in Everybody's Magazine.

Antrim, - - New Hampshire

BENNINGTON

Mrs. Jennie Knight of Milford is visiting friends in town.

Henry Wilson and Fred Graves were in Fitchburg, Mass., recently.

Mrs. Hannah M. Collins of Manchester is a guest in the family of Dr. J. F. Dodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Knight have been visiting relatives in Keene, Alstead and Marlow.

The scenery for the Grange hall has been placed in position, and it certainly is all right.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Downes of Brooklyn, N. Y., have been here for a few days. He is in the employ of the Government as a meat inspector.

Congratulations are extended to Captain Charles H. Dutton of Hancock and Mrs. Nellie Rice Goodale, who were united in marriage by Rev. George H. Dunlap, at the Congregational parsonage, Oct. 23.

Mrs. James Griswold, Mrs. Henry Wilson, Miss Edith Lawrence and Miss Annie Kimball attended the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society Auxiliary to S. of V., held in Nashua Saturday evening. Mr. Veine carried the party in his auto.

Yes, you can have your chickens fat and healthy all winter long. It is not the winter days, but the winter feed that counts. Buy the best feed for your chickens.

Now, John, you know if a man doesn't exercise he becomes a fatty jellyfish, and a hen whose head doesn't cut capers around her egg capacity is a mutt.

Don't show absence of gray matter by buying poultry secrets on how to tell a layer and make hens lay and earn you a living off a 10 by 10 lot. Their hen hypochondria is mysticism and will give you pessimism.

Chiropractize your hens. You're short on long green because your hens are long on toe nails and short on egg records.

Those long nails are the nails in the coffin of your poultry funeral.

Make them scratch off those nails. Big up a scratch door, provide deep litter, make them dig for their grain.

They'll sing merrily, they'll lay, lay, lay, and you'll never again hear wifey say, "Didn't I tell you chickens don't pay?"

Pertaining to Fish. Blessings on them, "the man" of a-fishing when you can. Never mind the teacher's rule not to run away from school. Take your bait and a side pot and then hunt the dearest hole where the wary troutlets hide by the canyon streamlet's side. You'll get hooked at home, of course, and you'll suffer most remorse, but when daddy sees your string he'll gasp and say, "By jing!" And his red and red he'll snatch and start out to make a catch when your jacket he'd catch. Blessings on you, little man!—Los Angeles Express.

CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Those who are looking for a location where feed is cheap will be wasting time. About the only thing that hasn't advanced in this locality is a marriage license.

The Louisiana railway commission has ordered all express companies in the state to make half rates for poultry shipped to the fairs. Fancliers are pleased in every state. But every fellow who has committed to order remission.

The West Fargo Express company has boosted rates 25 per cent on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and it costs all the profit on a rooster to get him to a customer.

O Shylocks, do not lift the lid. But keep your sniffling face well hid. If you snore dare to come above ground And snore! by the express be found Its big front that would squeeze you so You'd turn to an unseen zero.

A funny thing about our customs is that we can import hogs free, but must pay 3 cents a pound on poultry and 20 cents a setting on eggs. If our harebrained legislators can't see the inferiority of a hog to a hen, what do they know about anything then?

The government food report advises us not to accustom our stomachs to food that is too easily digested nor to light meals. Thus the three-cent-a-meal man gets one in the eye and the knocker at tough hen must chew her down or die.

When cold fall rains arrive there is nothing gained by letting chickens get soaked for the little they pick up. Cold thus contracted end in ravages of roup and deadly diarrhea.

Squire Littleton of Georgetown, Del., at one meal ate thirty-seven sparrows, shot from one tree, and expects to eat all the sparrows in town. If his gastronomical powers are equal to the test, we hope he'll keep at it and clean up the pest.

New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are the chief duck producing states in the Union. The failure of the corn crop in these states puts the duck producers in a predicament, as corn is the main feed for fattening the fowls.

Some poultrymen think that word "specialist" simply refers to the man who keeps a single breed. But that single breed may be cull and their owner may be numb dumb skull.

Don't kill the woodpecker, he gets the boring grub; nor the cuckoo, he gets the caterpillar; nor the lark, he gets the grasshopper; nor the bobwhite, he eats the potato bug. The farmer's wife doesn't run high hat bills, but the fashionable feather fiends just cost him $200,000 damage annually that could be prevented by the birds killed for feathers.

A citizen of Indiana inserted this ad: "Every person who has not the means to provide sufficient feed for his horse or mule can obtain feed from me free of cost." Pity he doesn't live in Pennsylvania and neighboring states where the corn and oats are dried up by the drought. We would turn our roosters loose on him.

L. M. Barnitz.

Clothes and the Man.

Man is in some sort a slave to his clothes, and there are many men who dislike wearing the same clothes on two consecutive days, more particularly the necktie. For the first two or three things you look at when you meet a man are his eyes and his necktie. And there is a sort of underlying consciousness as you face the morning world that your tie must be straight and clean and new. But to this end you must buy the cheap tie and throw it away with your sins before going to bed.—London Chronicle.

She Was Pleasantly Surprised

Miss H. E. Bell, Wausau, Wis., writes: "Before I commenced to take Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe pains in my back, could not sleep, and was troubled with headache. The first few doses of Foley's Kidney Pills gave me relief, and two bottles cured me. The quick results surprised me, and I can honestly recommend them.

Fall colds are quickly cured by Foley's Honey and Tar, the great throat and lung remedy. The genuine contains no harmful drugs.
