ANTRIM

Has First Chance—We Think She's Take It!

The utilizing of the water powers on our rivers for the generating of electricity that can be carried many miles, there to turn the wheels of industry, is a step in the evolution of the times that is tending to concentrate all manufacturing business in the cities favored with good railroad facilities. The time was when good undeveloped water power was regarded as a sure indication that at some time in the future such water power would be the centre of some thriving industry that would largely increase the population in its immediate vicinity, and many a village has lived in the hopes that the elements of growth within its limits would change the village to a more populous town or city. Now the advent of the commercial use of electricity is so changing conditions that if our water powers are utilized it is for the advantage of some distant city rather than the immediate vicinity where the water power exists.—Exchange.

Let this not be true of Antrim! With the large new power plant of the Goodell Company, with about 400 horse-power available for additional manufacturing purposes, and all at our very door ready to be made the best use of, it is an imperative duty which every one of us will be held responsible for if we fail to do our utmost for ourselves, the town, and the rising generation dependent in a large sense upon us.

The statement made by one of the speakers at the hall on the evening of the formal opening of the plant is very true, and none but the most pessimistic can deny it, that Antrim can have 2500 or 3000 population just as well as what she now has, if our people are in earnest and go after it; success will most certainly crown the persistent efforts of the hard systematic worker, and it will be the same with us as a town, provided the necessary work is put into it.

Antrim offers many inducements for the locating here of manufacturing industries, and capitalists looking for investments or opportunities should investigate what Antrim offers them. We have here undeveloped water power, idle water power, openings for mechanical establishments, facilities for various kinds of manufacturing, etc., good hotel, unsurpassed locations for summer hotels and boarding houses, delightful scenery, hundreds of desirable camp and cottage sites; desirable farms for cultivation and summer homes; in fact many attractions and inducements no other town possesses Antrim has. Come here and invest money for returns.

Choosing a Christmas Present

When you make a present of a periodical to a friend or a family you are really selecting a companion to influence for good or ill during a whole year. If the acquaintances of your sons and daughters were to talk to them aloud as some periodicals talk to them silently, how quickly you would forbid the companionship! In the one case as in the other, the best course is to supplant the injurious with something equally attractive and at the same time "worth while." A food can be wholesome and utterly distasteful. Reading can be made so, too. But The Youth's Companion not only nourishes the mind, but delights it, just like that ideal human associate whom you would choose. The Youth's Companion fills that place now in more than half a million homes. Can you not think of another family in which it is not now known where it would be joyfully welcomed?

If the $1.75 for the 1910 volume is sent now, the new subscriber will be entitled to all the remaining issues of 1909. If desired, the publishers will hold these back or send them at Christmas time, together with the Christmas Number and The Companion's new "venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold.

THE PEOPLE

Are Being Heard From—Read What They Say!

TO THE EDITOR:—

I am pleased to endorse your very timely and interesting articles in last week's REPORTER regarding the business interests and possibilities of Antrim and the Board of Trade suggestion.

There certainly can be no reasonable objection to the organization of a Business Men's Club, Citizen's Board of Trade or any similar institution for the natural and inevitable good sure to result therefrom. Such an organization always commands respect and has an influence that is recognized as far as the town is known, and is bound to establish a character and reputation of great value to the town. In Antrim, as in other towns, it would have all the possibilities and prospects of the town closely at heart and as a concentrated force with singleness of purpose, ever watchful for the welfare of both old and new enterprise, would prove a power for good to all.

I am a comparatively new man here in town but as a property owner and probable permanent resident, feel interested in seeing things go forward. I have been here long enough to know that we have a plenty of able business men in this town to perfect an organization unsurpassed by that of any other town of its size in this state.

We have advantages and good things enough to fill the Antrim REPORTER every week the year around. Keep up the blowing of the trumpet Mr. Editor till the business men get together!

W. D. F.

The article in the REPORTER last week, regarding a Board of Trade, was well timed. It certainly is what is needed: we have now got in town that which is one of the essentials in the growth of any community—plenty of power for manufacturing purposes. It now remains for those who wish to see this power utilized for the benefit and growth of our town, to prove by a combination of effort that they have at heart the interests of Antrim, the welfare of her people, and a realization of the opportunities which have been placed in their grasp.

In no more satisfactory way can this be accomplished than by organizing a Board of Trade, whose duties in part shall be to ascertain the best methods of informing outside people of the advantages we have in Antrim, and of what we want. If we as individuals want anything we have to ask for it, or work for it, and generally both. It is the same with Antrim (and we are Antrim) therefore we must ask for the things we want, and work for them, and the only way to do this is to have some authorized organization that business men will have confidence in. We also need a bank: it would surprise us all if we knew the amount of money that is sent out of Antrim to the banks every week. The writer has talked with many business men during the past summer and they all say "You need a Board of Trade and a bank," but they also say, "Your people seem to have no particular interest in either one of these projects." If you will wake up to your opportunities and get a good live Board of Trade, established, a bank, new industries, and increased business all along the line will surely follow.

Now what are we doing? What are we going to do? To do anything or even to start, money will be needed, and the Editor has kindly consented to receive pledges for a fund to be raised by unsolicited subscriptions, and when pledges to the amount of $100. have been received a meeting will be called, and at least those who have pledged their money will be interested enough to attend and help to organize a Board of Trade, which will have money enough in the treasury at the start to get to work.

The writer of the above article has pledged himself to be one of twenty to give $5.00 for the above purpose. Or the same will be counted toward $100 and the same may be pledged by subscriptions of any amount, provided that the full amount of $100 is pledged on or before December 10th, 1909. No money to be paid unless a Board of Trade or similar body shall be fully organized on or before Jan. 1, 1910.

High School Department.

Reports again last Monday.

The French II class is now reading "Un Saltambique" the last selection in Francois and Giroud's "Simple French."

Physical culture especially adapted to vocal training is suggested to some of the French I and Medieval History classes.

On the 19th of November an entertainment will be given in the town hall. Bryant, the gifted young magician who appeared here so successfully last season will again be present with new tricks and added features of ledger domain in the interest of the Senior Class. To vary the entertainment, concert numbers, rendered by the best local talent, will be introduced; also promenading will be enjoyed at the close.

The opening basket ball game of the season was played at the town hall last Friday evening between Peterboro and Antrim high school teams. It was a very good game considering that it was the first one of the season, both sides showing up well. Antrim has a strong team and has arranged for games with many teams in this section.

A CARD!

To The People of Antrim and Vicinity.

I have sold my business in the town hall block, Antrim, to W. D. Farnham & Son, who will continue the business. It is with regret that I part with this business, because I have had the most pleasant relations with the people. Little differences will always come up, no matter who conducts the business, but I can truly say that in no instance have I ever, in all the years that I have done business in Antrim, Done Different From What I Advised To Do! If anyone can truly say that I have, now is the time to speak of it,—but being interested in one of the Largest Importing Houses in New York and Europe, it was impossible for me to devote the time necessary to this business. Mr. Emery has conducted this business as few men could (for another) but for all I gave it but little personal attention, it must be admitted that it could not help but be a care. I take this time to thank you all for past favors, and I Can Assure You that at this—The Greatest Price Cutting Reduction Sale Antrim Has Ever Known—You Will Get the Greatest Bargains in the history of this store!

RAILWAY CONDUCTORS.

The Many and Varied Duties They Have to Perform.

As a conductor he will probably begin in the freight service. His caboose will be a traveling office, and more than that, it will carry all the gossip of the division up and down the line. It may be a homely little car, but it is just as sure to be a homelike place. From its elevated outlook he may command a good view of the train away ahead to the engine, and he will be supposed to know all the while that the brakemen are attending to their duties, that the train is in good order, particularly that there are no hot boxes smoking away and in imminent danger of setting fire to the train and the valuable contents. There is a deal of bookkeeping to be accomplished in that traveling office. The conductor will receive the waybills of the cars of his train and their contents, and he is held responsible for their safe deliveries to their destination or the junction points where they are to be delivered to other lines.

When he comes to the passenger service there will be still more bookkeeping to confront him, and he will have to be a man of good mental attainments to handle all the many, many varieties of local and through tickets, mileage books, passes and other forms of transportation contracts that come to him, to detect the good from the bad, to throw out the counterfeits that are constantly being offered to him. He will have to carry quite a money account for cash affairs, and he knows the mistakes will have to be paid for out of his own pocket.

All that is only a phase of his business. He is responsible for the care and safe conduct of his train, equally responsible in the last respect with the engineer. He also receives and signs for the train orders, and he is required to keep in mind every detail of the train's progress over the line. He will have his own assortment of questions to answer at every stage of the journey, and he will be expected to maintain the discipline of the railroad upon its trains. That may mean in the one instance the ejection of a passenger who refuses to pay his fare—and still he must not involve the road in any big damage suit—or in another the subjugation of some gang of drunken loafers. The real wonder of it is that so many conductors come as near as they do to the Chesterfieldian standards.—Edward Hungerford in Outing Magazine.

Waiting For the Children.

An old woman bobbed up to the conductor of the train and said excitedly: "Vendt you to please holdt on yet, Meester Gonduckitor, vile my two grandchilder comes by the drain? I runs off midout dem undt dey is gong so vast dey can, yes."

The conductor looked impatiently at his watch, then at the woman's pathetic face. Then he consented to wait a little, as the train was on time. Five minutes later two blue-eyed, bubbly children came on the train, rushed up to their grandmother, kissed her, helped her on the train with her baggage and basket and then hurried away.

What the conductor thought is none of a refined person's business.—Chicago News.

Selling Baked Potatoes.

The baked potato merchant is a comparatively modern institution in the London streets, the first potato can having made its appearance, according to Henry Mayhew, about the year 1846. Fifteen years later, when Mayhew published his "London Labor and the London Poor," he estimated that there were 200 hot potato vendors in London, each selling on an average 200 halfpenny potatoes a day. "In cold weather," adds Mayhew, "the potatoes frequently are bought to warm the hands. Indeed, an eminent divine classified them in a public speech among the best of modern improvements as forming an excellent medium for diffusing warmth into the system by being held in the gloved hand.—London Chronicle.

A Bushel of Cents.

It beats all what odd questions reach some of the departments of government in Washington. Not long ago the treasury received a letter from a man who had made a bet asking "How many cents are there in a bushel?" The answer was not easy to offer. If the man had asked about pounds he might have received a definite answer. As it was, he got in reply a guess from a clerk that "roughly there is something like $320, or 32,000 pennies."

Peary as a Student.

When Robert Edwin Peary was a student at Bowdoin college, as a member of the class of 1877, the professor of civil engineering, George L. Vose, directed him to a difficult problem. A large, complicated covered wooden bridge had been constructed across the Saco river without due respect for scientific principles. When the bridge threatened to fall, the designer telescoped another bridge into it in such a curious way that the fall of the whole structure was even more imminent. Peary was sent to make a drawing, showing just what beams and pins would give way first and just how the strain would feel its course from weakness to weakness. It was an extremely complicated problem, involving test after test and persistent calculations. Yet, shortly after Peary made his full report, the bridge collapsed precisely as he had predicted.—Professor W. T. Foster in New York Post.

Limited Responsibility.

Little Septimus had been very good and had recited "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck" with admirable feeling for the benefit of his Uncle Robert.

"He's a wonderful boy!" exclaimed that gentleman enthusiastically. "And he deserves to be rewarded."

So saying, he plunged his hand into his bulging pocket and with much difficulty—for he was rather portly—extracted a penny, which he offered with great importance to his good little nephew. "Remember, my boy," he said, "that if you take care of the pennies the shillings will take care of themselves."

Poor little Septimus looked rather dubious. "I do take care of the pennies, Uncle Robert," he answered sadly, "but as soon as they get to be shillings my papa takes care of them for me."—Washington Herald.

Attempting a Diagnosis.

Mrs. C. was overhauling a lot of old clothes, and her little daughter Rebecca, aged four, was an interested spectator. When one garment was brought to light the little girl asked what were the "green speckles" on it. Her mother explained. Some days later a friend called whose little girl was somewhat freckled. After their departure Rebecca was thoughtful for some time and then inquired, "Mamma, was that little girl's face mildewed?"—Woman's Home Companion.

Hillsborough, ss.

To the Superior Court:

Michael J. Corliss of Antrim in the County of Hillsborough, and State of New Hampshire, complains against Nellie A. Corliss, late of Glastonbury, in the County of Hartford, and State of Connecticut, and says that she was lawfully married to him at Hartford, in said State of Connecticut, on the thirteenth day of February, A.D. 1889, by the Rev. Fr. Gleason, a minister of the Gospel, and resided with him at said Glastonbury and at said Antrim, from the date of their said marriage until some time in October, A.D. 1902, and your said libellant has resided in said Glastonbury from some time in October, A.D. 1902, until March, A.D. 1906; when your said libellant moved to said Antrim where he has lived ever since, and has always behaved as a faithful, dutiful husband. Yet the said Nellie A. Corliss, wholly regardless of her marriage covenant and duty, at said Glastonbury, some time in the month of October, A.D. 1902, and more than three years before the filing of this libel without sufficient cause and without his consent, abandoned the said libellant and now refuses, and during all the time since her said abandonment, has refused to cohabit with him: The last known residence in this state of the said Nellie A. Corliss was said Antrim, and the last known Post Office address of the said Nellie A. Corliss was, Nellie A. Corliss, Hotel Belvin, New Britain, Connecticut. The name and address of a friend of the said Nellie A. Corliss is that of her mother, Minnie Friend, Glastonbury, Connecticut.

Wherefore the said Michael J. Corliss prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony between himself and the said Nellie A. Corliss may be decreed and for such other relief as may be just.

FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGE

By Peaceable Entry and Publication.

I, Mary Butler Jameson, of Battle Creek, in the County of Calhoun, and State of Michigan, depose and say, that, on the thirtieth day of October, 1909, in the presence of Anson Swett and William E. Cram, I made a peaceable entry upon a certain tract of land, with the buildings thereon, situate in Bennington, in said County of Hillsborough, and bounded and described as follows: Beginning on the north side of the highway leading from Bennington Village to the Paper-Mill, at a large stone in the wall, at a stake and stones, it being the corner of land formerly of George Alfred Whittemore; thence easterly and northerly by the wall and the said Whittemore land, about eleven rods, to a Maple tree by a stone wall; thence southerly, about nine rods, to a small Elm tree; thence west, in a straight line, to the aforementioned highway; thence northerly by the highway to the bounds first mentioned, containing one half acre more or less. The land on the east and south of said tract is now, or formerly was, owned by T. C. Whittemore; for conditions broken, and for the purpose of foreclosing the right of the said mortgagor, the late John Cody, and all persons claiming from, by or under him, to redeem the same; and at the same time I publicly declared that such was the purpose and object of said entry, and of the possession so taken. This being the same tract of land which was conveyed in mortgage to the said Mary Butler Jameson by said John Cody, by mortgage deed, dated April 10th, 1895, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for the said County of Hillsborough, Volume 551, Page 205, and by a second mortgage deed dated April 20th, 1896, recorded in said Registry, Volume 551, Page 581.

Giving Him Her Trade.

There was a new clerk at the corner drug store.
 "Will you please let me have a stamp?" smiled the woman.
 The clerk laid one on the counter and took the money.
 "I wish," said she, "that you would weigh this letter. Maybe it takes more than 2 cents." He weighed it.
 "Only 2 cents, madam," he said.
 Then, taking the stamp up from the counter where she had left it lying, he added politely, "Allow me to put it on for you," and he did.
 "You are so nice," said she, "that I'm going to begin to buy my postcards here too."—New York Press.

The Flying Idea.

The first man who got the theory of the flying machine right was no less a person than the painter Leonardo da Vinci. He pictured it as heavier than air, provided with wings and uplifted, in spite of its weight, by the rapid revolutions of a propeller. Leonardo had an idea that the propeller might be turned by clockwork or by setting a number of laboring men to turn a handle, but in that respect he was mistaken.—Fall Mall Gazette.

STENOGRAPHERS' NOTES.

Perfectly Intelligible Only to the One Who Wrote Them.
 "My stenographer was taken ill suddenly," said a well known business man the other day, "and as I had dictated some important letters to him which I wanted written at once I took his notebook to a stenographic institution and asked for a man to translate the notes. Judge of my surprise when I was informed that no matter how good an expert a stenographer may be he cannot read the notes of a colleague."
 "This is a common complaint of men who know nothing of stenography and have never studied it," said a shorthand reporter recently. "It is true, however, that no stenographer can accurately translate another's notes. This does appear strange, but it must be remembered that stenography is by no means a perfect science. In fact, it is most imperfect, and there is great room for improvement. Therefore every intelligent person who studies stenography after he gets through the rudiments of it begins to improve it in his own way, invents word signs and characters, and changes or alters those he has learned. As a result every stenographer's notes are stamped by his own individuality, a mystery to another, and therefore, with the exception of words most commonly used, it would be impossible to read another's notes accurately."—New York Herald.

The Longer It Looks the More It Sees Within Certain Limits.
 Often the eye of the camera will decipher documents of which the writing had been substantially obliterated by age, says a writer in Van Norden's Magazine. I have successfully copied with the camera the utterly faded photograph of a classmate of forty years previous.
 Changes in the pigment of the skin, undiscovered by the eye, appear with distinctness on the sensitive plate, and it is said that ample warning of approaching disease has been thereby given.
 The camera takes pictures of subjects which cannot be made to appear on the ground glass and of those which the eye of man has never seen. The human eye can penetrate space no farther in an hour than in a single instant. Yet the eye of the camera will gaze into the sky for hours, looking deeper and seeking more with each second that passes.
 Through this attribute of the camera a great chart of the heavens is now being made. In this work distinguished astronomers and photographers throughout the world are co-operating. Yet not one in a hundred of the stars already plainly pictured by them was ever seen by the unaided eye of scientists.

A Verbal Speedometer.

Every calling has its technical vocabulary, and those who are familiar with it are often surprised and irritated at the difficulty other people have in understanding it. A writer in the New York World tells of an old horseman in Maine who had run over a man and was being sued for damages.
 The court asked the defendant if he was driving fast. He answered, "I was going a pace." The court then said, "Now, kindly tell the gentlemen of the jury just how fast you were going."
 "Well," said the defendant, "I reckon I was going a clip."
 "Well, will you tell the jury how fast a clip is?"
 "Well, it's going a dite."
 "Now, will you tell the jury how fast a dite is?"
 "Well, a dite's a dite. Anybody knows what a dite is."

In England and all the English speaking countries the kissing of the book before the oath comes from the practice of touching a "hildame," or sacred object, as the old Roman touched the altar or Harold the casket of relics. The form "So help me God" is inherited from ancient Teutonic-Scandinavian law, under which the old northmen, touching the blood daubed ring on the altar, swore, "So help me Frey and Niordh and the Almighty God"—that is, Thor. The first and last of these are the two old English gods, whose names we keep up in Friday and Thursday.—New York American.

These women are only a few of thousands of living witnesses of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. Not one of these women ever received compensation in any form for the use of their names in this advertisement—but are willing that we should refer to them because of the good they may do other suffering women to prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a reliable and honest medicine, and that the statements made in our advertisements regarding its merit are the truth and nothing but the truth.

The Delegates

A Jolly House Party and a Disappointed Storekeeper
By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1900, by American Press Association.

The one daily train between Pinery and Sexton was snowbound at Chestnut Gap, with snow still falling. It might get through in twenty-four hours, and it might not in a week. All depended on the length of the storm and the energy of the four or five men who constituted the repair and emergency force of the short narrow gauge road.

Ordinarily it would have made little difference, for passengers were rare and speed unimportant, but on this day it happened there were seventeen delegates converging from various parts of the state to a church convention appointed at Pinery because the small church there was the oldest in the state and this day the anniversary of its building. Moreover, there were the proprietor of the one little grocery store and the energetic wife of the aged pastor, both returning from Sexton with various supplies for the sustenance and entertaining of these same delegates during the three or four days of their proposed stay. So it was a matter of perplexity and consternation to the engineer and conductor or when the wheezing train ran its head into a snow bank at the gap and came to a standstill.

The country along the railroad was wild and sparsely settled, with Chestnut Gap at its most desolate point. Twenty or more rods back from the road, with only a winding path leading to it, was the only house in ten miles, a one room cabin and loft, with wooden shutters for windows and a mud and stick chimney built at one end. To this the delegates plowed their way through the snow, the men kicking out a path as well as they could for the women, who struggled in Indian file behind.

A girl of fourteen or fifteen opened the door, eager eyed and excited at the visitors that she had seen in her life. An old man was bending over the fireplace, but rose and hobbled forward at their entrance.

"Come in, come right in," he cried hospitably. "Just make yourselves to home. Kinder winty out, ain't it? What! Wimmen too? Here, crowd close to the fire an' warm up an' dry up. Wimmen first."

They did so laughingly, though most of them were shivering. A young man quickly gathered up all the wood the cabin seemed to contain and threw it upon the fire, turning apologetically to the host after he had done so.

"We need thawing out first," he explained, "and you invited us to make ourselves at home. But never mind the fuel. There are eight men in our party, and we will soon have more. The conductor tells us we cannot get away under two days and perhaps not under a week. Now, what can you do for us?" with a quick and rather quizzical look about the cabin. "What sort of accommodations and provisions can you furnish?"

"Plenty o' both," heartily. "They's a loft overhead jest the size of this room, 'cept for the roof bein' slantin'. Wimmen can have one an' men 'other, an' I raised a heap o' turnips last fall—more'n four acres. I did fegzer to sell 'em, but price was so scandalous low that Bet Ann an' me berried 'em in a hole under the floor. Lucky, too, now, ain't it? But say! What might your name be? I'm Lem Tucker."

"Thank you. My name is Tom Ashley. I am glad you have so many turnips. Now, what sort of other provisions have you to go with them?"

"Why, nothin'," genially. "Ye see, my land's too poor to raise other stuff. But turnips is mighty good an' healthy an' digestive, an' Bet Ann an' me eats 'em right along. We like 'em. Bet Ann has some snares out back o' the house an' now an' agin catches a rabbit for relish. Ye see, I'm too roomatly for goin' out in weather. But of course one rabbit wouldn't be much relish for all your folks."

"No, I suppose not," agreed Ashley. He turned to his companions. "You hear what our best says. I am glad you all love turnips."

There was a slight shiver through the group. Then one of the women rose bravely to the occasion.

"We always have turnips with our Christmas dinner at home," she said cordially, "and occasionally at other times, I believe. This will be such a nice chance for us to familiarize ourselves with its possibilities. Of course they can be cooked in different ways,

Now, Mr. Tucker, are we to have the upstairs room or this? I think many of the ladies have wet feet and might like to change. We brought our bags from the train."

"Why, jest take your ch'ice," benignly. "It's all yours. Make yourselves to home. But folks 'll have to be goin' in an' out this room, fixin' the fire an' doin' things, so mebbe the loft 'll be best for the wimmen. Bet Ann 'll show ye. Go right up through that hole in the corner, an' don't be skeered o' the ladder. I made it myself, an' it's strong an' stiddy."

When they came down, one by one, they found a great pile of firewood beside the hearth, which the men had gathered, and Mr. Ashley was out behind the cabin examining Bet Ann's snares and preparing more. There was no gun in the cabin, and naturally none of the party had one.

The woman who had spoken of familiarizing themselves with the possibilities of turnips soon possessed herself of all the information her companions had on the subject and then, with Bet Ann as grinning and delighted chief helper, set about preparing two bushels or more of them into as appetizing dishes as the scant accessories of salt, pepper, hot water and fireplace would allow. But, though they were all hungry, the first meal was not a very hearty one.

Among the delegates was amateur talent of various kinds, and the long evening was devoted to singing, to impromptu lectures and informal talks, to charades and tableaux and games and sleight of hand performances, the latter given by some of the more versatile young men.

The next day it was still snowing, with the depth and drifts too formidable to attempt to escape from the gap, and the evening's diversion was continued, with only such breaks as turnip cooking and mixing through the snow to Bet Ann's snares and animated but desultory conversation.

On the fourth day a rabbit was caught and went into the making of a memorable broth that was to soothe the twenty-six voracious appetites. After that the rabbits seemed to have an inkling of the abnormal cabin appetite, for no more ventured to even approach the loft that Bet Ann and Mr. Ashley strowed about the snares.

These days had been a season of continuous and bewildering delight to Bet Ann, and even her father's face had beamed as it had never beamed before. Lem Tucker was a recluse who did not believe in people because he had never known much about them and who condemned education because he had none of it himself. People were wicked, and to be able to read was to find things in newspapers that were lies. So Bet Ann had never learned her letters.

But a week with the earnest, jolly, delightful party of delegates had given a new expression to Tucker's eyes. When the sixth day brought a snow-pull through the drifts and the party began to make preparations for departure his face showed real regret. Bet Ann was voicing her grief noisily.

"We've had the best time of our lives," Tucker said as he hobbled to the door to say goodby. "Mebbe I've been mistook 'bout folks. There ain't none o' you wicked, an' all them things you read was real grand; I've been thinkin' it over, an' I guess I'll move down to the village an' give Bet Ann a chance for schoolin'."

"That will be nice for both of you," commended one of the women heartily. "And be sure you let me know at the address I gave you. We will send some books and other things to Bet Ann and you. Now, goodby."

When they reached the train the only discontented one seemed to be the storekeeper. He muttered to himself for awhile, then blurted out:

"Ye paid an outlandish price for them turnips."

"Oh, I don't know!" laughed Mr. Ashley. "We are perfectly satisfied. We were glad to pay well for them and for the accommodation. And you should remember Mr. Tucker did not really charge anything. It has been a jolly week. The only drawback I can think of is that we could not get to a store to buy some provisions."

"If I'd knowed things was to be paid for I could 'a' let ye have plenty," the storekeeper grumbled.

"But your store is too far away."

"Oh, I've got plenty right here on the train," discontentedly. "Only bein' delegates I thought mebbe ye'd have to be look care of free. I wish I'd—"

But the look on Mr. Ashley's face suddenly silenced him, and he slunk away to a seat by himself. And at that moment came a series of jerks and bulps which were preliminary to getting the cars in motion; then the train started.

Little Dorothy was playing "house" with her small friend Elizabeth, when suddenly she said, "I guess I'll have to go home."

"What for?" asked Betty, with a good deal of concern.

"To ast my mamma if I can turn back again," answered Dorothy.—Woman's Home Companion.

BENNINGTON

Mrs. Sarah Rogers is quite ill with the prevailing cold.

Miss Effie Ross is restricted to her home by illness.

Harry Knight and wife spent Sunday with relatives in Lowell.

Mrs. Kidder of Lowell was in town to attend funeral of Mr. Strong.

Mrs. Harriett Burtt passed away Monday morning. Funeral—this Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary Anderson Reid Milne, a former resident of Bennington, died at her home in Barre, Vt., Oct. 15, after a three weeks illness of typhoid fever.

Scott Eaton of this town and Miss Pearl Lacey were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. C. H. Lacey, in Hillsboro Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, by the Rev. W. F. Whitney, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The decorations were very pretty and attractive and the ceremony was followed by a wedding lunch. Mr. and Mrs. Lacey left for a short trip and will reside in Hillsboro.

The funeral services of the late Ira Strong took place at the home, under the direction of F. Grimes Saturday afternoon of last week. Rev. G. H. Dunlap was officiating clergyman. The choir of the Congregational church rendered very effectively "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer My God to Thee." Mr. Strong has lived in town but three years, but in that time has made many friends and won the respect of all by his quiet and respectable life. He was born in Smithfield, R. I., Dec. 1827. His employment in his younger days was that of a railroad engineer, afterwards running a stationary engine. Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. Strong, who is left entirely alone, having no children and but one near relative.

A Card

I sincerely thank my friends and neighbors, and also the Odd Fellows, for their sympathy and kindness, during Mr. Strong's illness and death.

MRS. J. P. STRONG.

DOCTORS FAILED. RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me."

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."
