Jack Burton .....	Clarence H. Elliott
Speed Warner .....	Harold F. Stearns
Dickey .....	William H. Hurlin
Jackson .....	Ross H. Roberts
Billy .....	Robert Bryant
Betty Armstrong .....	Mae R. Ashford
Mrs. Warren .....	Grace C. Waterman
Miss Bunney .....	Eleanor Stearns
Miss Gordon .....	Mae L. Harris
Sam .....	Wallace A. George
Williams .....	Byron Butterfield
Smith .....	Paul Colby
Pianist .....	Bert O. Eaves

SYNOPSIS

Act I—Olmstead's and Jackson's room at—College. Jackson, Speed, Dickey and Burton playing poker. Burton quits and the others follow. Jackson lectures Burton. "Olmstead! I can't turn around but what his name is thrown in my face." Enter Olmstead heartily greeted by all except Burton. Olmstead and Burton. College songs. Sam the sandwich man. Olmstead tells Jackson about his money. Olmstead and Jackson retire and Burton re-appears.

Act II—Burton's room. Dickey and Billy in bath-ropes. They arrange the room to make it look more homelike. Enter Burton and Betty. "I believe you are keeping something from me." Speed and Miss Bunney. Enter Mrs. Warren. "Your friends, Mr. Burton?" Enter Olmstead. The cross examination. Burton's confusion. Conversation between Olmstead and Burton. "The first thing in the morning I'll see the President." Burton's despair and Betty's help.

Act III—Olmstead's room. Olmstead ready for bed. A late caller. Betty pleads for Burton. Olmstead's determination. "The Other Way." "Make him give up the captaincy." Olmstead's terms. Enter Burton. "The Other Way." An understanding. "A silver lining." Another captaincy.

At the close of the entertainment, promenading will be enjoyed till 12 o'clock; music by Appleton's orchestra. Tickets at Antrim Pharmacy; secure seats early, as the best will go quick.

Church Notes

The second in the series of meetings preparatory to the coming revival services will be held next Sunday, when there will be a general exchange of pulpits by the ministers of our three churches. Rev. O. E. Kendall will preach in the Methodist church, Rev. W. J. Atkinson in the Presbyterian church and Rev. D. Salmond in the Baptist church.

At 6:30 p. m. our churches will unite in an evangelistic service in the Baptist church. Rev. W. J. Atkinson will preach. Do not forget that an offering will be taken at the evening service to help defray the expenses of the coming meetings.

The ministers consider themselves very fortunate in securing the services of such an able and talented Gospel soloist as Miss S. Josephine Wing of Peekskill, N. Y. She will be with us the second of January, and will continue to the end of the meetings.

Let every Christian in Antrim pray for these meetings. And let every Christian man in Antrim come out to the men's prayer meeting in the Baptist church Sunday night, from 6 to 6:30 p. m.

REV. DUNCAN SALMOND, Sec'y.

Not Sorry For Blunder

"If my friends hadn't blundered in thinking I was a doomed victim of consumption I might not be alive now," writes D. T. Sanders, of Harrodsburg, Ky., "but for years they saw every attempt to cure a lung-racking cough fail. At last I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. The effect was wonderful. It soon stopped the cough and I am now in better health than I have had for years. This wonderful life-saver is an unrivaled remedy for coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, croup, hemorrhages, whooping cough or weak lungs. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by

Twenty-fifth Anniversary

O. H. Robb and Wife Observe Silver Wedding

On Saturday afternoon and evening, at their pleasant home on Aiken street, Oscar H. Robb and wife observed in a most delightful manner the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, surrounded by a merry party of relatives and friends; this company was given a house party and five o'clock dinner on Friday afternoon. About thirty relatives were present from out of town, some coming from New York.

A public reception was given Saturday afternoon and evening and a large number of friends called to extend congratulations. Refreshments were served and orchestral music helped to make more pleasant the merry hours.

This worthy couple have been for many years residents of Antrim and are among our most respected citizens. Mr. Robb has been repeatedly honored by town office and was November 8th elected Representative to the General Court. They have two children, Waldo and Bernice, both residing at home.

The Funeral of C. D. Sawyer

Was held on Saturday last at the Congregational church at the Centre, at one o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. John E. Wildey of Manchester, a former pastor and intimate friend of the deceased, spoke comforting words of eulogy to the bereaved. His words were well chosen, very fitting, and showed much feeling. Rev. J. R. Hewitt, pastor of the church read scripture selections and made appropriate remarks.

There was a large attendance, including about thirty members from Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which order deceased was for a long term of years an honored member. At the close of the services the Odd Fellows ritualistic commitment service was read. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, silently testifying to the high respect and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Interment was in the family lot in North Branch cemetery.

Big Corn Crop

Estimates of the department of agriculture give the total 1910 production of corn as 3,121,381,000 bushels, as compared with 2,772,376,000 for 1909; yield per acre as 27.4 bushels, compared with 25.8, the 10 year average; quality as 87.2 per cent compared with 84.4, the 10-year average, and percentage of 1909 crops on farms, November 1, as 4.3 per cent (119,056,000 bushels), compared with 3.8, the 10-year average.

Productions of tobacco was 967,150 pounds compared with 949,357 in 1909, yield per acre 795.4 pounds compared with 81.6, the 10-year average, and quality 85.2 per cent, compared with 86.3, the 10-year average.

Lame back comes on suddenly and is extremely painful. It is caused by rheumatism of the muscles. Quick relief is afforded by applying Chamberlain's Liniment.

Sold by all druggists.

Appropriate Remarks

Made by Will E. Gihney before the Antrim Board of Trade at their recent public meeting

There is one thought that I believe every fairminded person will agree with me on, and that is that the Board of Trade is a good thing for Antrim, and that progress has been made to a wonderful degree since our organization, there is a feeling of confidence permeating the whole town in the work we are trying to do. Even those who, when we started were skeptical and said the same thing has been tried before and failed, what good is a Board of Trade going to do me, etc., are speaking to day in a far different way, and while some of them are not fully convinced that a Board of Trade is of any practical use, they are thinking a whole lot different than they did six months ago, and others are now ready to come right out and say, I think it will amount to something after all.

What has the Board of Trade done? For one thing it has brought together men, who have not worked together harmoniously along any line for years, but they have come together in Board of Trade work, as though they had always been in the harness together, is this not progress?

I called on a gentleman a few days ago in company with our president, who bought a farm in this section, he said that when he first set foot in Antrim he liked the town, and now he loved it; there is an old saying that the mischief would be to pay if we all wanted the same thing, the same job, or loved the same woman, and no doubt this is true, but there is one object that every man, every woman and every child in this town can love, and that is the old town of Antrim.

And there is one organization in the town through which every man, woman and child can work for the object of their love, and that organization is the Antrim Board of Trade. It is said that all love, and all individual acts are based on selfishness, there is not time to go in to this question, I for one am willing to grant that it is a fact, but if there is any one line of work in which selfishness is practically eliminated, it certainly is in an organization in which every one is primarily working for the uplift, and the betterment of the community in which they live; and ladies and gentlemen I believe that is the purpose for which the Antrim Board of Trade as a body, and every individual member are working.

In talking with our secretary I find that he has received since our organization, an average of three letters a week asking about Antrim, and the line of inquiries range, from those looking for summer boarding places, to those inquiring about manufacturing advantages. These communications were the direct outcome and legitimate fruit of having such an organization in town, there has been a good call for the circulars and stickers which we have had printed, some having asked for and received a second supply of them, this shows that the seed has germinated and is bearing fruit in increased advertising of our grand old town. He also says that many of the visitors this summer have called on him personally, and talked with great interest of Antrim, and have seemed to wish to convey to him the impression that as secretary of the Board of Trade, he was in position to give information which could be relied upon, and why? because what ever he told them had the sanction of the Board of Trade, which is a power in any town, in any state, or in any nation.

I have yet in the many people who have visited me to hear of one who has had anything but the best of impressions of the town and her residents, as they ride with me throughout the town, they are impressed with the way the buildings are kept up, and the keynote of their remarks is that Antrim is a prosperous community. What is there in a town if it is not something that is unusually attractive, that will entice such men as Mr. Reese, who has always spent his vacations abroad, or travelling from place to place in this country, stopping only a short time in any place, to locate here and spend the whole of two summers and go away with no thought but to return next year.

What is it if it is not something that is unusually strong, that holds a man's heart to Antrim for over 50 years? I was sitting on the piazza of the Maplehurst Inn, one day in September, and commenced to ask questions about the town, said he left Antrim over 50 years ago, had travelled all over the world, but a few weeks earlier something seemed to draw him irresistibly to Antrim once more, and he told his daughter to pack their grips that he was going to Antrim, and the key note of all his conversation which lasted for fully a half hour was Antrim is good, her people are good, and I feel at home even after a lapse of 50 years.

I know there has been a whole lot said about the advantages of Antrim at our previous meetings, and also at the public meeting held a few weeks ago; all that has been said is true, and it will bear repeating, and when every citizen of this town wakes up to the fact that we have advantages that are second to no town in the state, and repeat this fact over and over again, then the half has not been told. Like gegets like, and birds of a feather flock together, and when we all get filled with enthusiasm about Antrim, we will be able to create enthusiasm in the minds of those who visit us, as well as those with whom we visit, but we have got to be enthusiastic ourselves, and if we look back not over one year ago we ought to be chuck full and running over. There is a story told of a man who had a son who went away from home and succeeded in life far beyond the father's expectations. One day the father was accosted by a friend who said Mr. Jones, your son is making his mark in the world is he not, to which the proud father replied yes sir John is chuck full of ammunition. Ladies, gentlemen, children, lets be chuck full of ammunition, and load our guns to the muzzle if necessary, and go out from this hall to night, aim high and let the report of their discharge be heard around the world in one continuous echo for the Glory of Grand Old Antrim.

Ladies and gentlemen, I will take none of your time, but will close with the thought I gave when I commenced, the good we can do by working together, work, confidence, cooperation are the three things which spell success in any organization, and the Antrim Board of Trade is certainly receiving these three great helps in a far greater degree than we ever dared hope for at the time of our organization, and the word SUCCESS is as plainly written for our future, as was the handwriting on the wall at the feast of Belchazzar.

ARTISTS' EMBLEMS.

In Whistler's Butterfly Could Be Found the Monogram J. W.

The mystic emblem or device of a sort of Whistlerized butterfly was adopted in the sixties by the eccentric genius James Abbott Whistler, who changed his name later to James McNeill Whistler.

Close study will reveal that this peculiar scroll is really a monogram of J. W. The earliest of the etchings to bear the butterfly is "Chelsea Wharf" (1893), but many paintings and etchings after that date are signed "Whistler."

Artists have sometimes signed their pictures in some distinct form instead of their names. It generally was done when the name might suggest some emblem or symbol.

Thus Hieronymus Cock demarked two fighting cocks on his panels; Mariotto Albertinelli signed a cross with two interlaced rings, referring to the sacerdotal duties to which at one time of his life he devoted himself; Martin Rota, a wheel; Pieter de Ryng, a ring with a diamond; Giovanni Dossi, a bone; Del Mazo Martinez, a hammer; Lionello Spada, a sword.

Sometimes caprice dictated the selection, as when Jacopo de Barberi used the caduceus, or Mercury rod; Hendrik de Bles an owl, Lucas Cranach a crowned serpent, Cornelius Engelbrechtsen a peculiar device resembling a weather vane and Hans Holbein a skull.

The Ghost of Clopton.

A gruesome story of Clopton House, Stratford-on-Avon (which Mrs. Gaskell visited as a girl) is told in Mrs. Chadwick's book on the novelist, Charlotte Clopton, who was supposed to have died of the plague, was buried "with fearful haste." She was discovered—when the ancestral vault was opened to receive another victim of the plague—leaning against the wall in her grave clothes; she was, indeed, dead, but in her agonies of despair and hunger she had bitten a piece from her shoulder. "Of course she has walked ever since," as Mrs. Gaskell says.

The Red Shirt.

The origin of the "red shirt"—worn as a blouse by English women in the sixties, when Garibaldi was a popular idol throughout Great Britain—is sufficiently curious. When the celebrated filibuster was warring in the South American republics he was anxious to obtain a distinctive and, above all, economical uniform for his followers. He learned that a local dry goods store had an immense "job lot" of these garments, worn by the "saladeros," or cattle slaughterers, of the great South American cities. The "bargain sale" appealed eloquently to the leader's purse, and he led his men to victory in the butchers' shirts, which are now the accepted emblem of the "risorgimento" of United Italy.—London Globe.

A Little Temperance Tragedy.

"Don't drink any more, John. You've got too much already."
"No, I haven't."
"Yes, you have, and you'll be drunk again."
"Aw, what do you want to worry about that for? It's me that has the headache next morning."
"I know, John, but it's me that has the headache all the time."—New York Times.

The Price of Love.

Says an advertisement in the London Express: "Mary—Waited three hours at appointed spot until questioned by suspicious policeman. If this is the price of love it is too heavy a one for me to pay. Farewell. Potts."

RUEL DURKEE

GEORGE WALDO BROWNE

THIS is a powerful novel describing the life and politics during the past generation as they really were. The main character is already well known to residents of the state both as a man, and as one of the characters of WASHINGTON CHURCHILL'S romances.

Ruel Durkee was a man to be admired for his courage and ability, and while this is mainly a story of his life, it will make a decidedly interesting reading for the particular reader of good fiction.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

BATTLES WITH LOCUSTS.

In 1780 an Army Was Arrayed Against the Ravaging Pests.

Since the days of the pharaohs the locust has been an unmitigated plague. Pliny relates that in many places in Greece a law obliged the inhabitants to wage war against the insects three times a year—i. e., in their various states of egg, larvae and adult.

In 1740 locusts stopped the army of Charles XII., king of Sweden, as it was retreating from Bessarabia after its defeat at Poitava. The king at first imagined that he was being assailed by a terrific hailstorm.

In Transylvania in 1780 the ravages of the locusts assumed such disastrous proportions that the army had actually to be called out to deal with the pests, and whole regiments of soldiers were employed gathering them up and putting them into sacks.

A weird, uncanny looking customer is the locust. The general color scheme of his body is a kind of indefinite green, relieved by pink legs and wings of a whitish color. Two huge, blank, unmeaning eyes give an expression of utter imbecility to the insect's countenance.

To atone in a measure for their destructive proclivities the locusts are edible. The Arabs are particularly fond of them. Camels, to which they are given after being dried and roasted between two layers of ashes, look upon locusts as great delicacies.

The flavor resembles that of crabs, and in Bagdad they are consumed so extensively as to affect the price of meat.—Stray Stories.

RIVERS OF ALASKA.

The Waterway Wonders of This Immense Territory.

Were the rivers not navigable there would be little done in the interior of Alaska today. First used by the prospector in his plying boat and the trader with his little steamer, they have become the means of opening up every camp that has been struck in the interior of Alaska.

The Yukon is very shallow at its mouth, which is about seventy miles in width across its delta. There are places 400 miles from the mouth of the river where the biggest Atlantic liners could navigate with ease, for there are soundings which show a ninety foot channel in a mile wide river. The Yukon is navigable for 2,100 miles. The Kuskoquim, a sister stream, has been navigated only on the lower reaches, but with its navigable branches is believed to have 1,000 miles of navigable water. The Tanana has been ascended for 500 miles and the Koyukuk in excess of that figure. Scores of other streams can be used by small steamers for from twenty-five to 200 miles. Altogether it is safe to say there are 5,000 miles of navigable streams in Alaska. The Yukon opens for navigation the latter part of May and closes the latter part of October.

But with all its wealth of gold, its unheard call to toilers of the soil, its mountains studded with gems of riches—the lodes of veins of copper and other materials—this empire starves for the one thing that would make it thrive.—Collier's.

The Name Noah.

Not many persons are sufficiently acquainted with the Bible to know that Noah was the name of a woman as well as of the patriarch. At an inquest in England a female witness gave her Christian name as "Noah." The coroner remarked that he had never before known a woman to bear the name, whereupon the witness, who was well posted in the origin of her singular prenomen, said:

"It is a Bible name, sir; you'll find it in the last chapter of the book of Numbers."

Reference was duly made, and in the eleventh verse of the thirty-sixth chapter of the coroner found mention made of "Mahlah, Tirzah and Hoglah and Milchah and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad."

Betrothals in Germany.

In Germany an elaborate method of announcing the betrothal practically puts an end to all breach of promise cases. As soon as a couple become engaged the pair visit the town hall and declare their willingness to marry and sign, with witnesses, a series of documents which render a change of mind on the man's part practically out of the question. When either party wishes to withdraw from this agreement the pair again visit the town hall and additional documents are formally signed, witnessed and sealed. The authorities then determine the question of compensation for injured feelings, etc.

Ready For the Storm.

"I intend," the poet wrote, "to continue to storm the citadel of your affections."

"Storm away," she wrote back, "but I've just succeeded in getting in out of the wet by becoming engaged to a dear old man who has $9,000,000."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case." A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill. Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills

are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return the price. Ask him. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

An Ingenious Way of Leaving a Bequest

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

On the South Carolina coast stands one of those imposing colonial edifices for which that state is famous. It was built during the times when the southern settlers, requiring laborers to work on their tobacco plantations, were importing large cargoes of African negroes, who were held as slaves. It is of brick, with large pillars in front, and, considering its age, is in a remarkable state of preservation. This is because a recent owner has put it in repair.

Like other houses of its kind dating back to the seventeenth century, it was built out of the proceeds of negroes captured in Africa and sold as slaves in America. But the slave trade and its twin brother, piracy, were not in that day deprecated as they are, or rather would be, today. He who built the house referred to became one of the most prominent men of his time. Richard Granville was not his name, but in bringing out the antecedents of his descendants it is a far safer name to use than his own. He began life as a sailor, visiting every country where there was trading to be done, and a few of his older slaves, who were house servants and thus enabled the more readily to become conversant with his secrets, handed down a tradition that their master started his fortune in piracy.

Be this as it may, up to the middle of the last century his descendants did not deny that much of his money had been made in the slave trade. In his old age his conscience troubled him, and those who were nearest him said that he desired to make some reparation for his misdeeds. He had a statue of himself made of bronze and set it up on a pedestal in a bay window of his library. The left hand rests on an anchor, and the right holds a sextant—not a mock sextant; a real one, though not of brass, but of the same material as the statue. He left orders that no headstone should mark his grave, and it was supposed that he intended the statue as a substitute for one. At any rate, no one now knows where he is buried.

Different generations of his descendants discussed the statue and wondered at the whim which led their progenitor to erect it. One thing about it excited special attention. Every morning the sun, shining in upon it, strikes the eyepiece of the sextant and, passing through the tube, casts a solar image on the opposite wall. The track of this round spot of light changes with the season, traversing a slightly different path each day. There is another thing that puzzled the owners of the Granville estate. The only inscription on the statue, or rather, its pedestal, is the date of Richard Granville's birth. And not only is the date given, but the hour and minute.

Of all topics connected with the statue probably the giving of this minute information was most discussed. No one who saw it could remember having seen any memorial giving either the hour and minute of a birth or the hour and minute of a death. But one generation after another passed away, and no plausible reason for either the statue or its singular inscription was suggested.

During the civil war Elwood Granville, the owner of the estate at that time, fought for the maintenance of the system in the introduction of which his progenitor took so important a part. Colonel Granville was a religious man and one of those who traced authority for slavery from the Bible. After the war he returned to his plantation and began to run it anew under the system that had been born during the struggle.

A few papers that had belonged to the original Granville were handed down through his descendants. They had been preserved time and again by different persons, but appeared to contain nothing to throw any light on the puzzles connected with the writer or receiver. One day Colonel Granville, while amusing himself with these documents, read a letter from the founder of his house to a clergyman in which the former said that he would like to leave at his death a fund for the benefit of the negro race in America, but the time would not come for perhaps one or two centuries when such a bequest could be utilized.

Probably the statement had been read a hundred times by Richard Granville's descendants without making any marked impression. But Colonel Granville read it at a time when the negro slave had been just emancipated and sailed, in all the ignorance induced by his condition, to citizenship. The meaning of the statement, "The time would not come for perhaps one or two centuries," was plain to him. More than one century had passed and brought the changed conditions. This led Colonel Granville, who was eager to help the negro, now that he had become a freeman, onward and upward, to think of the benefits that would accrue from such a bequest as was mentioned in the letter.

Then suddenly two connected ideas entered Colonel Granville's brain. The first was, Might not the writer have secretly carried out his intention, leaving a fund for the purpose that would turn up a century or two after his death? And might not the statue have something to do with its location?

Though he did not know it, he had made a mental leap bridging a century since his ancestor's death. He determined to make a study of the statue and everything that pertained to it. Every morning he devoted an hour to sitting before the bronze, looking at it and thinking about it. Perhaps he fancied that by thus mentally dwelling upon it through some spiritual process the secret would be imparted to him. The inscription engaged his attention, but he could make nothing of it. And yet there must have been an object in putting it there alone, and especially with the hour and minute of birth.

One morning Colonel Granville was sitting as usual studying the statue. The sun spot was crawling slowly over the wall as it had been traveling year in and year out for 100 years. The colonel was watching it as he had often watched it before. A third new idea came to him. Might not this sun spot have some meaning?

There seems to be two kinds of ideas in the human brain, those that are original or parent ideas and those that are offspring. The present case is an illustration. The conception that the sun spot might have some meaning was in a measure original though everything, after all, is but a link in an eternal chain, and it suggested another idea—viz. Might not there be a connection between the sun spot and the date of birth on the statue?

Colonel Granville sprang from his chair. He was confident that he had made an important discovery. What that discovery would lead to was another matter. He had little expectation that it would work out his first conceptions which had come from the letter he had read, but he hoped it might solve the mystery of the statue and the date inscribed upon it. He was not long in inferring that on the day, hour and minute recorded on the statue the sun spot would rest on a part of the wall which would give some information or injunction intended by the man who had erected the statue.

The inscription gave the year, which could be of no importance since the sun traverses the same apparent path annually; the day, June 17; the hour, 10 o'clock, and the minute, the twenty-fifth. In other words, if this were the true explanation, on June 17, at twenty-five minutes after 10 o'clock, the position of the sun spot would mean something. It could not refer to 10 o'clock at night for an obvious reason.

It was early in April when Colonel Granville hit upon this possible explanation. Nearly two months of waiting would be necessary before the spot would reach a position corresponding with the date. The colonel, too impatient to defer investigation for what seemed to him so long a period, was eager to get a computer to come and calculate where the spot would be on the given day. But he knew of no one at hand who would be able to make the calculation. Besides, he had no desire to suffer the obloquy such an act would cast upon him, for when he stopped to think he was forced to admit that no more chimerical idea could enter the brain of man.

So he was obliged to wait and while waiting planned an excuse for what he proposed to do. He determined to make a hole in the wall where the sun spot rested on the 17th of June at twenty-five minutes past 10 in the morning, and he proposed to tell the household that he was looking for a convenient location for a chimney he was thinking of building. Every day after that the colonel watched the movement of the spot with keen interest, and at the end of a month he could calculate pretty nearly where it would fall on the 17th of June. However, he waited till the date came round.

Now, on the 17th of June the sun stands very high, practically at the highest point during the year. Consequently the spot was at the lowest point. In fact, it rested on the floor. The colonel bored a hole in the flooring, inclining it from the sextant to the point of the spot's contact and, inserting a tube, noted a place in the cellar where the line of vision prolonged would strike. Then one night when the household was asleep he went into the cellar with a lantern, a pick and a spade and began to dig.

He had cut through the cement bottom of the cellar and dug down exactly ten feet when he struck masonry. It was not very well put together, and he soon loosened the upper stones, coming to an open space. In this was an iron box or safe, such as was used many years ago. A blow of the pick knocked off the cover, and there lay a mass of gold coins. On the coins lay a paper, which Colonel Granville read.

His idea derived from the letter written by his ancestor was correct. Here was a chest containing a mixture of English, Spanish and other gold pieces and a will bequeathing the treasure to found an institution for the amelioration of the negro race.

Colonel Granville replaced the earth over the treasure and left it to think out the problem before him. Such a bequest coming from the original testator would be absorbed in legal technicalities. Besides, Granville would not like the notoriety attached to bringing out so many old coins—coins that he knew came from the price of slaves and probably the loot of piracy. He resolved to say nothing about this strange request, but to dispose of it peaceably and erect in his own name the institution for which it was intended. This intention he carried out, and many a negro is now being educated with the money derived from the sale of his ancestors'.

HIS GREAT IDEA.

The Tin Plated Tomato and the Moral That Goes With It.

A good theory that won't work isn't half as good as a poor one that will.

Twenty years ago a young man just out of college had a great idea. He was going to tin plate tomatoes. There was to be no more troublesome paring and cooking and canning to preserve tomatoes throughout winters. It would be necessary only to drop a nice ripe tomato into his tinning solution and it would come out coated with tin and would keep for twenty years. In fact, there wasn't any reason why it should not keep forever! The young inventor figured it would cost him 50 cents a gallon to make this tinning solution. It surely would sell for $2 a gallon. Every one eats tomatoes—that is, nearly every one. Everybody would eat them if they could always have a nice tin plated tomato lying around. He ought to sell a million gallons a year. That would be a profit of a million and a half dol.—Well, no tin plated tomatoes are on the market yet, and the man who invented them is still making only $15 a week.

The moral of this is that whenever you hear of a great idea that is going to reform or uplift the world make sure that it is not of the tin plated tomato brand.—Chicago Tribune.

Eating Four Hundred Years Ago.

Four hundred years ago eating was practically confined to two meals a day, but in many parts the second or evening meal was of such a protracted character that laws were passed limiting its duration. Thus at Berne there was a law against sitting at table more than five hours. At Bale, from 10 o'clock in the morning to 6 o'clock in the evening was the maximum permitted, but the town council was unable to practice its own counsels of perfection and on great occasions finished in private. In Saxony the innkeeper was forbidden to serve more than four dishes at one meal.
