Another and Better Way

From an Exchange

It doesn't pay to be a grouch, It doesn't pay to wear a frown; Nobody ever made his pile By knocking every one in town. There are some better reasons why A man should smile upon his way, But here is one, financially A gloomy visage doesn't pay.

There's money in a cheerful smile, A fortune in a cheerful word, And money often reaches souls That finer things will leave unstirred. And so I put it up to you, Don't mope and whine along your way, If it is money you desire, A gloomy visage doesn't pay.

Twere better that you smile, because You wish to cheer your fellow man, And speak the cheerful word, to help A weaker brother, if you can. But if these reasons don't appeal To you, I write it down today, There's money in a happy face; A gloomy visage doesn't pay.

An Old Home Day

Moderator Cram has appointed the committee on Old Home Day observance as instructed in March meeting. Voters in town meeting assembled took this action:

Voted that the town observe Old Home Day and that the sum of $100.00 be appropriated for this purpose, and that a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to make all necessary arrangements.

The committee are F. C. Par-Thenter, C. S. Abbott and W. W. Merrill. It would seem that with a vote of the town that those voters at least desired such an observance. Antrim has had several such occasions and they have proved a good thing, and there seems no good reason why a special observance this year would not be the right thing to do. Three years have elapsed since Old Home Day in town was observed and there are a number of our people who think this a proper time and a proper observance. Let's hear from a few on this subject; articles on this matter for the Reporter in our next issue will be welcomed.

Ice Wagon New!

On Wednesday last, our local ice dealer, G. H. Hutchinson, appeared on our streets with a new ice cart all painted up in fine shape and suitably lettered. This is certainly the best one that the ice man has put into service in the years he has been in business, and we know he feels just ly proud of his new possession; it is a good one.

Auction Sale

By W. E. Cram, Auctioneer, Antrim

About 50 tons standing grass will be sold, on Saturday, July 8, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, belonging to Frank W. Butterfield in West Deering, on the premises; sold in lots to suit purchasers. For particulars read posters

The chief feature of The Ladies' World for July is a most interesting paper on Thackeray whose hundredth anniversary occurs during the month. Being a summer issue fiction naturally is predominant, and in the shorter fiction there is variety enough to please all tastes, every story being excellent of its kind. The departments are, as usual with this publication, full of good things, and in themselves are fully worth the subscription price.-[New York; Fifty Cents a Year.] do toward hastening the end.

GOES ON RECORD THIS WEEK THROUGH THE REPORTER OF SETTING FORTH FEW OF THE

Many Advantages for Residence and Business

Ti is the purpose of this article to put before our readers and the public generally a brief statement of what Antrim, as an up-to-date town enjoys, and a few things she needs; for a town our size it is acknowledged by everyone that she stands in the front rank as a place of residence and to do business in,—a grand place in which to spend a summer vacation. Incidentally is noted the amount of money spent for support of schools, highways, bridges and sidewalks, and what part of the money raised by taxation goes for these worthy objects. The town valuation having been increased a bit and somewhat equalized the past year looks well for a lower tax rate in the near future,—another improvement to benefit the town.

Antrim has silver plating works. Antrim employs eleven teachers. Antrim has 320 dwelling houses. Antrim has a live Board of Trade. Antrim has five saw and grist mills. est lakes in this locality, bordering are some of the prettiest shore lots for cottages and bungalows.

While Antrim has these many things, there are a few things she yet needs, among them being a bank, a sewerage system, and a few cottage houses for rent always are a paying investment. These and other improvements are sure to come in time; we shall enjoy them, as they each in turn are launched upon us.

George H. Perkins

Probably no man who has removed from Antrim in recent years was better or more favorably known among our people than George H. Perkins, who a few years ago removed from here to Sunapee and about two years since removed to East Walpole, Mass., where he and his son, Carlton, have been conducting a very successful grocery business.

The news of his sudden death on Monday, this week, was a great shock to our people. While definite details are missing, it seems that he had been a bit indisposed nothing was thought of it, and about 7 o'clock suddenly passed away while at his store; possibly the extreme heat had something to twelve, and will be an Odd Fellows funeral; inter-

Mr. Perkins was born in East Wilton October 15, 1852, and married Ella E. Little of this town: two children, Carlton and Mary, with the mother are the survivors, who have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their affiction. Deceased was for many years employed by Goodell Company and at times followed the trade of painting; was Antrim's tax collector, and served several vears as Deputy Sheriff. He was a Past Grand of Waverley Lodge, No. 59, I.O.O.F.. having had membership here for some 24 years. Among those best acquainted with the deceased, he was known to be an upright and good man, and his long connection with the Methodist church here will be remembered by many with much pleasure.

Funeral services will be held from the Methodist church in this place Thursday at half past ment at Maplewood.

Whittemore-Cummings

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized at eight o'clock last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs Anna W. Whittemore on Main street when hex only daughter. Martha Elizabeth Whittemore, was united in maxriage with Erwin Edwin Cummings of this town. They were attended by Miss Mary E. Barrett of this place an intimate friend of the bride, and by Edwin J. Whittemore, the bride's elder brother. The home was tastily decorated for the occasion and following the ceremony a short reception was held. The guests included members of the immediate families and intimate friends. Mr. Commings is employed as clerk in the store of Grant & Boyd. After a short. wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Cummings will return to Antrina. where they will make their home with the bride's mother.

Buffum-Davison

Alabama Farm was the scene-Wednesday afternoon, the 28th, of one of the prettiest of Jone weddings, the contracting parties being Miss Lottie Etta Buffum of Autrim, and Mr. Hugh Cleon Davison of News Boston.

The ceremony took place on the lawn, beneath the big maples, the bridal party advancing from the arbor through an aisle, formed by rustice standards trimmed with evergreen and laurel.

The bride was escorted by her uncle. Joseph Turner of Gary. Inda., and attended by her sister, Mise-Viola Buffum; the groom was attended by his cousin, Hermann Perry, and Rev. O. E. Kendall offi fiated.

The bride was dressed in a simple: gown of white silk with white sweek peas in her hair and carrying a, bouquet of the same.

After an informal reception, refreshments were served from the tent. on the lawn. Mr and Mrs. Davison left Antrim on the Concord train for their home in New Boston. They were the recipients of many usefuand beautiful gifts.

DUCKING A SCOLD

A Custom Quite Popular at One Time In This Country.

WOMEN ALWAYS THE VICTIMS.

In Colonial Days Ducking Stools Were Common In Maryland, In Virginia the Penalty Was Ofton Inflicted, and Georgia Sinned as Late as 1819.

Nowadays if a woman forms the habits of talking too loud and too long or insists upon saying unpleasant things in wrong places and at wrong seasons there are several things which may happen to her. If she is a person of some social standing her husband may get a divorce, or if she belongs in one of the lower strata he may leave her without that little formality. If she makes life too unbearable for the neighbors she may possibly be arrested and fined. If she lives in England and interrupts the proceedings of parliament, calls names, chases dignitaries to cover whenever they show themselves in public and knocks off policemen's belimets she is called a suffragette and sometimes imprisoned. But even the most "obstinately opprobrious and virulent woman," to quote the stately Addison, may be confident that she will escape the punishment meted out to her sister of oid. Whatever happens, she won't be sentenced to the ducking stool. In many ways modern life is tame and lacking in dramatic incident for a self assertive lady, and even the English suffragettes complain that they are not taken seriously enough.

No such claim could have been made in the past, say between the fifteenth and eighteenth centuries, when far more rigid views prevailed on the subthose days magistrates were unanimous in the conviction that "meekness is ye chojsest orniment for a woman," and it was held a crime to speak "discornfully" of those in authority, civil or ecclesiastical. A woman must not even indulge in too great freedom of speech in the privacy of her own home and neighborhood. Sometimes she did. and then she was attended to in a simple yet spectacular manner.

She was bound securely to a stout chair firmly fixed to the end of a long beam, arranged to work up and down on the principle of the seesaw, on the edge of a river or pond. On the bank at the other end a man worked the contrivance by means of a strong chain, and she was given a ducking. which lasted until justice was satisfied or reform was promised, the populace of course gathering in large num bers to assist at the function.

In England the practice was so generai that each town had its ducking pond conveniently located where petty offenders of various kinds were disciplined. The poud for the western part of London was what is now a portion of Trafaigar square. Charing Cross Many of the old ducking stools are still in existence as curlosities. In the days of their activity they were kept in the church porches, where they doubtiess pointed a moral as to the haughty spirit which goeth before a fall. The first colonists brought the institution to this country, although it nev er flourished in New England In fact. there are no authentic records of the actual use of the ducking stool in these colonies, although a number of women were sentenced to be so punished. They had, however, other methods of treatment for ladies of a shrewish disposition, one of these being the wearing of a cleft stick upon the tongue.

In the central and southern colonies the custom was quite popular. In the seventeenth century ducking stools were in every county in Maryland, and in 1775 one was placed at the confluence of the Ohio and Monongahela rivers. In Virginia the penalty was often employed, and in 1634 a Thomas Hartly of that colony wrote, it is said, to Governor Endicott of Massachusetts. giving a detailed account of a ducking administered to "one Betsey, wife of John Tucker, who by violence of her tongue had made his home and ye neighborhood uncomfortable." describing the machine he adds: "Ye rope was slackened by ye officer, and re woman was allowed to go down under ye water for ye space of half a minute. Betsey had a stout stomach and would not yield until she had al lowed herself to be ducked five severall times." After she promised to "sin no more" Betsey was untied and allowed to "walk home in her wetted clothes. a hopefully penitent woman."

The ducking stool prevailed longer in America than in England. In the old country it does not seem to have ject of feminine self repression. In been used later than 1809, but in Georgia women were ducked for scoiding as late as 1819. It is interesting to note that in 1824 a woman in Philadelphia was sentenced to be ducked, but the decree was not carried out, as it was "deemed obsolete and contrary to the spirit of the times." A writer on colonial customs states that one of the last indictments for ducking in this country was that of Mrs. Anne Royall in Washington, a lobbyist, who "became so abusive to congressmen that she was indicted as a common scold before Judge William Cranch and was sentenced by him to be ducked in the Potomac. She was, however, not subjected to the ducking indignity, but was released with a fine."-Bellman.

Women as Well as Mon are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lesseus ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerful-ners soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an: age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the diffi-culty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a. habit as most people suppose.

Women as will as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fiftycent and one-dollar size bottles. You may

Support Home Industries

[From The Implement Age]

Whenever a plan is suggested for the development of a town the first suggestion invariably is, "Bring in more industries." It is customary to throw out all sorts of inducements for the location of factories, including exemption, from tixes for a time, free sites and bonuses, and these methods have contributed so much toward building up hundreds of prosperous municipalities that their wisdom cannot be questioned. Anything that will add to a population, that will give employment to men who support families and thus contribute to the general welfare, is at all times desirable.

But the people who join heartily in the work of bringing in new industries, and who show the greatest enthusiasm over this feature of the public work in which all good citizens share, sometimes are the first to forget that the new industries brought in and the old ones already there require continuous support and, failing to get it, become a hindrance rather than an aid to development.

We are apt to overlook, too, the fact that the home merchant is entitled to as much consideration as the factory which has been obtained by sp-cial effort. The merchant is a necessity-even more so than the factory; for who cares to live in a community where there are no stores, or where the stores are closed and barred and the merchants have moved away, forced to other fields by lack of patronage?

The retail store, properly conducted, is an industry that should have the support of every loyal citizen. Pride in the home town is measured by willingness to support its merchants and its industries.

It is not necessary to build a Chinese wall around a community-to refuse to buy outside when it can be done to advantage; but the man who will send away for something that he can buy at home on as good or better terms needs education and lacks loyalty. Sometimes unfortunately, the very one who should be least liable to this criticism, the local merchant, is given to sending abroad for things which he ought to buy from his neighbors. Then, again, there is the farmer who finds it easier to mail his order to a big city than to go to town. Often he is handicapped by bad roads, and thus has a valid excuse. But he ought to be able to buy by mail from his local merchants as safely and as advantageously as from some one at a distance with whom he has no acquaintance.

OLEY'S ORINO LAXATIVE

SECOND SIGHT.

An Apparition That Was a Messenger of Death.

The third Lord Templetown used to tell of an extraordinary and really authentic case of second sight. His brother. Henry Upton, the second viscount, was with his regiment abroad when he and several brother officers saw an old friend wearing trousers and shirt only pass through the mess room to another room from which there was no outlet. They followed and saw nobody, and the sentry persisted that no person had entered.

Henry Upton wrote to his brother. afterward third viscount, to request him to go to their friend's lodgings in London and find out what he was doing at such and such an hour on a certain day. The brother in London complied and found that their friend had died, but not on the day he had been seeu abroad.

Later the landlady was asked on onth as to the date and hour of death and whether he had died in a white shirt with a blue check. After some demur she confessed that her lodger did nor die when she first stated, but on the day when his friends and seen him pass through the mess room.

It seems the date of demise had been faisified on account of ms pension, which was almost all his family had to depend upon. And he died in a white shirt with a blue check, his landlady having tent one of her husband's to him on the morning or his death.-London Court Journal.

SHE WANTED LIGHT.

And So She Had the Windows Fixed

Exactly to Her Taste. The architectural feature of the new house that caused a decided domestic rupture was the windows. The man was in favor of medium sized windows, with small panes to match the rest of the house, but his wife insisted upon enormous sheets of plate

"You are away all day and do not know whether I can see my hand before me at noontime or not." she said, but I am in the house most of the time and must have plenty of light and sunshine."

So they had big windows. Before the carpenter left she ordered inside shutters put up. The family's first night in their new home was celebrated by adjusting two sets of window shades, one white, the other dark green, which served as a background for two pairs of curtains, one of silk. the other of face. On the third day the man helped his wife to hang addi tional sash curtains, and on the fourth day he found a man tinkering with the outside of the window ledge.

"He is just getting ready to put up the awnings," she explained.

Her husband looked at the shutters, the two shades, the two curtains and the sash curtains and the arrangements for the awnings at each window, and then he laughed, but she could not understand why .- New York

Superfluous Verbiage.

It was Sunday evening and likewise his first call. She was entertaining him at the plane, and he was not fond of music. Of course she couldn't be expected to know that, poor girl! She was not particularly accomplished, but she didn't know what else to do, and from sheer weariness and to make conversation she turned to him and said:

"Papa thinks it is wicked for me to play the piano on Sunday."
"Papa is certainly right," he replied

wearily. "But why does he—er—specity Sunday?"

It is perhaps needless to record that he was never again invited to that little flat.-Philadelphia Ledger.

The Beautiful Bridge.

Popular love of art may be carried too far. The author of "Charles Bourbon, Constable of France," tells us that on the occasion of the sack of Rome the citizens refused to secure their safety by taking the advice of their captain, Reuze da Ceri, and cutting the bridges Ponte Quattro Capi and Ponte Sisto. The people declined on the ground that they were "too beau tiful.'

A French Naval Officer's Daring Expedient at Monte Carlo.

Those who have visited Monte Carlo have heard of if not seen the pitiful ruin of many an unfortunate person who has lost his last franc in playing nev and Edgar Blake. The growth at roulette in that palatial gambling den. All are not so fortunate as to have an armored cruiser at their disposal, as was the case with a French naval officer some years ago. He had gone ashore in the morning with naught in his pockets but his own earnings. By noon it was all gone.

If he but had another 500 francs he was sure of winning. During those morning hours of failure he had worked out a system, and with just a few francs more success was certain. He would use the ship's money. Perhaps it was not just the right thing to do. but in another two hours he would be lons have been repeated in the last able to return it, would have recouped his own loss and have won who knows what fortune besides.

At sunset he returned to his ship a ruined man. The system, like all systems of the sort, had failed. What was to be done? To return home would mean a dishonorable discharge. lifelong disgrace, if not even more severe punishment. Death seemed the only alternative. But no; he would make one final attempt to save himself. He would force the authorities of Monte Carlo to return to him what he had lost or he would blow up their gainbling palace!

As soon as he was again on board his order was: "Clear decks for action, them point toward the heights of Mo-

Whatever the sailors might think of such an order mattered little; obey they must. With all baste a messenger was sent ashore with a note, and the captain meanwhile paced the deck in silence awaiting the reply-a reply which meant life or death to him.

Finally the messenger returned carrying a bag of gold coins. That night the French cruiser weighed anchor and quietly steamed out into the Mediterranean, her captain happy that he had fared no worse and the authorities of Monte Carlo only too glad to be rid of so dangerous a visitor.—Washington

England's Uncrowned King. Of the long line of kings which have ruled England since the days of William the Conqueror, nearly 900 years ago, there has been only one uncrowned king. King Edward V., the boy king, who met an untoward fate in the Tower of Loudon in 1483, is the only monarch who reigned without receiving the church's blessing or the formal homage of his subjects. Some people include Lady Jane Grey among England's monarchs. If this doubtful claim is allowed England's only uncrowned queen ranks with Edward V.
