The Conqueror

It's easy to laugh when the skies are blue
 And the sun is shining bright;
 Yes, easy to laugh when your friends are true
 And there's happiness in sight;
 But when Hope has fled and the skies are gray,
 And the friends of the past have turned away,
 And then indeed it's a hero's feat
 To conjure a smile in the face of defeat.

It's easy to laugh when the storm is o'er
 And your ship is safe in port;
 Yes, easy to laugh when you're on the shore
 Secure from the tempest's sport;
 But when the wild waves wash o'er the storm-swept deck
 And your gallant ship is a battered wreck,
 Ah, that is the time when it's well worth while
 To look in the face of defeat with a smile.

It's easy to laugh when the battle's fought
 And you know that the victory's won;
 Yes, easy to laugh when the prize you sought
 Is yours when the race is run;
 But here's to the man who can laugh when the blast
 Of adversity blows, he will conquer at last,
 For the hardest man in the world to beat
 Is the man who can laugh in the face of defeat.

—By Emil C. Aurin, in the National Magazine.

Postponed One Day

The Old Home committee were requested by many of the town's people to postpone the date of our Old Home Day to Thursday, Aug. 24, on account of the reunion of Francestown Academy.

The several committees have reported fine progress in the program for the day and everything points to a most successful Old Home Day.

The general committee urge every family in town to have their dinner in the grove on that day, as the speeches by the former town's people will be there right after dinner.

Bad Storm July 24

During the thunder and wind storm on Monday afternoon a lot of damage was done in the vicinity of the Dow Clement farm. Some 40 apple and pear trees were blown down on the Clement farm; a barn on the James Tuttle place, and a shed on the Benton Tuttle place, and the large elm tree in front of the Benton Tuttle house were blown down. In fact trees of all kinds in a certain area were laid low. As the storm swept across the meadows, it had full swing until the Crooker farm was reached in Hillsboro, where some 20 apple trees and telephone poles were destroyed—nothing has been seen here like it for many years.

Old Home Week Celebration

Thursday, August 24, 1911, Will be the "Big Day" of all the Week, beginning on Sunday, the 20th

IN a most fitting manner, Antrim will this year observe Old Home Week, and "the day we celebrate" will be Thursday, August 24. Our last observance of this kind was three years ago when the Tuttle library was dedicated, and sufficient time having elapsed it would seem that now it is time for everyone to take hold in earnest and make this occasion one to be remembered; already it is being generally talked, and now that the committees have been named, the necessary preliminary arrangements are being made by the general committee, and it is safe to say that good progress is being made. As fast as any part of the program is completed we shall endeavor to give it in these columns to our readers.

At the opening of the week, Sunday, August 20th, the day's program has been arranged by the ministers; the service will be held at the Presbyterian church, at 10.30 o'clock. The order of service is after the usual style, and for speakers Rev. O. E. Kendall and Rev. D. Salmond will each give 20 minute addresses. Special program of this service will be issued later.

The Antrim band, with possibly some outside help, is supposed to furnish the music on Thursday, the 24th.

The "Old Home" idea is mostly sentiment to be sure, but from the day ex-Gov. Rollins of the old Granite State breathed forth the thought upon a receptive people, it has continued to grow in favor, and to-day not only in this state but all over New England and certain other sections of our country the annual observance of "Old Home Day" is looked upon with much pleasure, and is growing annually in the minds of everyone.

For an occasion to draw back to the old home those who have gone out from it and been scattered hither and yon, there is nothing that near approaches this idea; they look forward to the day with much anticipation and plan for months to return to the old home and meet the friends of former days and in a measure live over again the earlier scenes. They note changes in the home town, and their interest in it deepens from year to year,—they see things differently now and are in a position to greatly benefit conditions by advising along certain lines.

The resident also looks forward with satisfaction to the coming of the former resident, and delights to meet him and shake his hand, and hear from him how he prospers and what is going on in the world at large; he learns somewhat of the size of things and comes to realize more fully that this country of ours is not made up in the main of people traveling in a narrow circle but of men and women of broad minds and deep intellects, who taking advantage of conditions are making a place for themselves and benefiting humanity. It is the duty of EVERY resident to see that the visitor gets a hearty welcome to our town, give him the glad hand and do everything possible to make him welcome and enjoy his stay with us; make him feel pleased that he took the trouble to visit the old town, and assure him that on his next visit you will be just as glad to see him. Apply the golden rule and have it work both ways; you will actually be surprised at the result. Do it!

Street Sprinkling

MR. EDITOR:—
 Anent the article in last week's Reporter under the heading "Progress," I am sorry that you did not explain to the public and make clear specifically a thing or two more regarding the progress and actual status of the street sprinkling proposition. You did not inform us what sort of objection was made by an evidently small minority of citizens that 110 out of 130 should not get what they were willing to pay for.

From what has come to my attention regarding this matter it appears that some few people do not understand the real situation—perhaps some others do not want to understand it. I would like to state a few facts that did not appear in your article:—
 First, the street sprinkling proposition was not contemplated as a town affair or to cost the town more than the original investment of $50 (with the Board of Trade like amount) to purchase a second hand or suitable sprinkler wagon. To this proposition the selectmen consented. Second, the proposition was exclusively and entirely to be a citizen's voluntary movement for their own and the general welfare of others in keeping dust out of residences on thickly settled and much traveled streets, and out of the stores. Each resident and store keeper to contribute a certain small weekly amount should they desire so to do without involving the town or their neighbors in any expense whatever. Third, after a canvas of the store-keepers and residents on Main street it was discovered that out of 130 citizens 20 did not care for the sprinkling. That is all right so far as these good people are concerned; they have a right to do as they choose, why not the 110? Fourth, now comes Mr. Elliott who has horses and knows the business and submits this offer and proposition to the president of the Board of Trade and to the selectmen, namely: That if the sprinkling wagon and water are furnished him he will do the street sprinkling for the whole 130 citizens—including the 20 who do not care to pay for it—for what has been already pledged by the 110 and take his chances in being able to collect more later from appreciative residents.

What is the matter with this proposition? Why the why? Is the town too small and afraid of being larger and cleaner and more attractive? Where does about two inches of the top of the town's best roads blow to every summer?

The writer of this article is no more anxious for street sprinkling than to understand why any objection should be made to it under the circumstances and in view of the foregoing facts.

Progress, Mr. Editor, Progress is truly remarkable. Can you tell us more about it?
 MAY 11 AM 2 PROGRESSIVE.

Peculiar Traits of Human Nature

MR. EDITOR:—
 Among the many peculiar traits of human nature, the one most prevalent is the inordinate desire to pry into our neighbors' affairs,—to saturate ourselves with what does not concern us. If we did this with the right motive of helpfulness it would create a spirit of kindness and brotherly love toward all. As it is, curiosity is the real motive, a desire to make a good story, with the aid of a diseased imagination, to carry from house to house as a peddler carries his wares.

This prying habit is exemplified in an extreme manner by listening at the telephone. Perhaps the listener does not realize how immoral such a habit is and what low tendencies one must have to bring one's self to resort to such meanness. The law is very rigid concerning the opening of letters sent through the mails and the punishment severe for such an offence; why should not one's conversation over his telephone be as well guarded, the principle is one and the same.

It is sad, but true, that there are a few such listeners in this town of ours. Certain lines in the outlying districts are more or less burdened with members of this peculiar class of people.

A word to the wise is sufficient,—let us stop and consider before we again assume the listener's role just where this habit is leading us from a moral standpoint, to say nothing of the annoyance and inconvenience it is to the subscriber who uses his telephone for legitimate purposes only and has something else in life to interest him besides his neighbors' affairs.

Funeral of Mrs. J. S. Nesmith

The last sad rites over the remains of Mrs. Georgianna Nesmith were held on Wednesday last at the Presbyterian church, of which she was for years a member, and the pastor, Rev. D. Salmond, spoke comforting words to the bereaved. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful and completely covered the neat and handsome casket containing the remains of one from whom the family and friends regretted so much to part. The members of Hand in Hand Lodge of Rebekahs, of which deceased was a faithful member and earnest worker, attended the funeral in a body and read the commitment service of the order.

Members of the family and friends from out of town were present to attend these services and in this way show their love and respect of the departed one.

Interment was in Maplewood cemetery.

Mrs. C. Aurilla Skinner

The Springfield, Mass., Republican of Sunday of this week contained the following notice of the death of a native of Antrim, and herewith we give it place in our columns:

Mrs. C. Aurilla Skinner, wife of Allen L. Skinner, died at her home in Lougmeadow about 10.30 last night, following a stroke five weeks ago. Since that time she had not rallied enough to give hope that she would recover. Mrs. Skinner was born in Antrim, N. H., the daughter of Capt. James Wilson. She spent her early life in Antrim, but after her marriage to Mr. Skinner 40 years ago she came to this city and had lived here ever since. She was a member of Trinity Methodist church. Besides her husband she leaves one son, Arthur J. Skinner of the Third national bank; three brothers, George C. Wilson of this city, James Henry Wilson of Lockport, N. Y., and Frank J. Wilson of Antrim, N. H., and one sister, Mrs. James N. Gove of Antrim. The funeral was held on Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT in its "Pure Food Law" does not "indorse" or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the labels, if they are ingredients of the preparations. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

RAILWAYS IN JAPAN.

Filthy Cars and Dirty Stations is a Land of Cleanliness.

"The railway journey from Kioto to Yokohama, despite the fact that most beautiful country is traversed, is not the pleasantest of experiences," declares a writer in the Wide World. "One buys a railway ticket in Japan in installments.

"The ordinary ticket only enables one to go by a train covering the minimum distance in the maximum time, so an extra express ticket is purchased, which means that the engine moves a little more quickly toward its appointed goal.

"Next a platform ticket must be procured to enable one to board the train, and finally one has to fight one's way into a first class carriage. Why do all the passengers in Japan take their luggage into the already painfully small carriage instead of leaving it in the van? And why, again, does a nation that is a passport for cleanliness the world over possess a train service so shockingly dirty in every detail?

"We once in a very moment looked into a station master's room at a large station, and for pure dirt it could have given points to a dust heap. In the train carriages the floors are covered with the dirt of ages, cigarette ends, orange peel, sandwich papers. At intervals a porter saunters in with a brush and leisurely sweeps all the refuse into a corner, having first carefully closed every window, so that no atom of discomfort or infection shall be lost.

"Finally he departs, leaving behind him the rubbish and an atmosphere charged with germs and angry words. Truly a Japanese porter's definition of clearing up is removing rubbish from one place to another."

A TURKEY FEAST.

General Lee Showed His Officers the Way to Enjoy It.

General Lee in the drawing room was a dignified and quiet gentleman, very kindly and gentle, especially with women and children. "On the field," says Major Ranson in Harper's Magazine, "he was the general, the commander in all essential points. But in other points he could be as sympathetic and considerate as he was at home.

"In the latter part of December a barrel was delivered at our camp marked 'General Lee and Staff.' We opened it and found it was packed full of turkeys. We sent word to General Lee, and he rode over to our camp. There was snow on the ground, and we had laid the turkeys out on a board on the snow, the biggest in the middle and the others tapering off to the smallest at each end. There were about a dozen of them.

"General Lee dismounted and joined the group gathered round the present, carrying his unsung and undrawn sword in his hand. He was told that the big turkey in the middle was his. He stood looking down at the turkeys for a moment and then said, touching the big turkey with the scabbard of his sword:

"This, then, is my turkey? I don't know, gentlemen, what you are going to do with your turkeys, but I wish mine sent to the hospital in Petersburg so that some of the convalescents may have a good dinner."

"He then turned on his heel and, walking to his horse, mounted and rode away. We looked at one another for a moment and then, without a word, replaced the turkeys in the barrel and sent them to the hospital."

Gilbert's Witty Comment.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's wit and humor were always ready. He was a fine raconteur and a good after dinner speaker. Rutland Barrington, the old Savoyard, said that "staying in Gilbert's house was like living in a literary fireworks factory."

Barrington played the Captain in "Pinafore." At rehearsal one day Gilbert, who was an autocratic and magnificent stage manager, told him to cross the stage, which represented the deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, and sit on a skylight "in a pensive attitude." Barrington obeyed orders, but unfortunately the skylight had only been rigged up temporarily, and the portly Barrington crashed through it.

"That's an ex-pensive attitude," said Gilbert in a flash.

Wanted to Convert Utopia.

When the "Utopia" was first published it occasioned a pleasant mistake. This political romance represents an island supposed to have been somewhere in the Atlantic, near these western shores.

"As this was the age of discovery," says Granger, "the learned Budaenus and others took it for genuine history and deemed it expedient to send missionaries thither to convert the people."—"Book of Queer Things."

Chattel Mortgages.

A man who gives a chattel mortgage should always examine it carefully to make sure it is not "on demand." Sharp money lenders who loan funds on chattel mortgages often try to have this clause inserted, and when it is the borrower may expect to part with his chattels at almost any moment. It is a trick by which advantage is often taken of the unwary.

CLOTH IN THE MAKING.

The Way the Uncouth Product of the Loom is Finished.

Every woven fabric is made by crossing or interlacing two distinct series of threads together. When the yarn comes from the spinner it is mounted upon the loom in spools, writes Rupert Bowers in Harper's Weekly. So wonderfully automatic are these modern looms that when a bobbin is emptied it is forced out and a full spool is put in its place without stopping the loom. There are all classes of looms for all classes of material, from the thinnest fabrics up to the thickest felts. To attempt to describe one of them or the principles on which they are constructed would involve the reader in a wilderness of technicalities. The power loom is one of the most remarkable and complex of mechanical products, the growth of many years of experience and ingenuity and the crystallization of the inventive genius of many minds.

The cloth in the shop window resembles the cloth as it comes from the loom so remotely that there would seem to be no relationship between them. The first product of the loom is usually uncouth, harsh and anything but inviting in appearance. It has to pass through many processes before it is finished and made ready for the market. It is first mended so as to correct weaving faults as far as possible. Then it is scoured and thoroughly cleaned. Again it is looked over and mended before it passes to the fulling or milling machine which, with soap and fuller's earth, produces the finish that is required. Then it is scoured again.

Tentering is the next process. This sets the cloth at a satisfactory width and straightens it for the operations that follow, the first of which is called raising. The millions of tiny hooks on the gigning machine raise up the fibers on the surface of the cloth and leave them in an upright position. The pile or nap is the result. This produces a remarkable change in the appearance and condition of the fabric. Shearing is the next thing. This cuts off all the raised fibers, leaving them of a uniform length. The required gloss and solidity are obtained by the pressing which follows.

The Eskimos and the Bible.
 Frank Cross, a missionary among the Eskimos, has found considerable difficulty in using the illustration of the Bible in arctic regions. He gives two amusing anecdotes to bear out his statements. First, how his Eskimo interpreter translated a well known text into the following: "Every log that bringeth not up good 'appik' is cut up and used for firewood," "appik" being the Eskimo for dried apples and the nearest thing to fruit that they know. Again, of law, justice and government they have not the remotest notion. Mr. Cross' nearest neighbor had hundreds of dollars' worth of furs deposited in a cache. Wishing to preach on "Where Thieves Break Through and Steal," the interpreter gave up his attempt at translation, for he said such a thing was impossible among them.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Disqualified.
 One west side woman who thought herself an ardent suffragist was surprised to learn that other members of the sisterhood did not share her opinion.

"Why do you doubt my devotion to the cause?" she asked. "What have I done to make you think me less earnest than the rest of you women?"

Their answer was a letter which she had written to headquarters the day before.

"You wrote on your husband's stationery," they said. "No suffragist who is worth her salt will write a personal letter under her husband's letterheads."—Philadelphia Ledger.

On last Saturday twenty-one campers from White Birch Point gathered for a picnic at Bald Mt. The party comprised the following: from Spruce Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. VanNess and Darwin VanNess; from The Birches, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Thayer, Roberta Thayer, Royal Thayer, and Miss M. E. Field; from The Owl's Nest, Misses Ellis, Thatcher, Mackelrie, Brewster, Irey, Endicott, Chamberlain and Miss Patty Chamberlain. In addition to the above who drove to the Mt. five others hiked it thru the woods over Goodhue hill; these were Mr. W. D. Reese, C. N. Gibney, Marcus Ainsworth, Joe Homer and his cousin from Dorchester, Mass. Lunch was most bountifully provided and was eaten at the foot of the Mt. After lunch the party climbed to the summit from which the view is grand, several lakes and villages and numberless hills and mountains being in full sight. After a thrilling descent which some of the bunch claimed as an equal to coming down the Alps, the drive home was started. Instead of going by way of Brimstone Corners as they had come the teams were driven thru Hancock where extra fine ice-cream was served by Prop. Woodward at the Forest House. Gregg Lake was reached again at about half past nine in the evening just as a unanimous vote was passed to have one such drive each week thru the rest of the summer.

Our Visitors Say: "Go Ahead!"

EDITOR REPORTER:
 Having read with considerable interest the articles on progress which have appeared for the last few weeks in your paper, I feel disposed to add a few words for Antrim and its residents. It appears by the tenor of these articles that there are in this town two elements, the "Go Ahead" spirit and the "Stand Still" spirit. This condition is no different than in other towns or cities throughout the world. No important work is accomplished without opposition. Men who are in favor of a new enterprise are usually very much in favor, and those not in favor are very decidedly opposed to it. We are all apt to live and act by extremes. It is human nature.

Antrim should be and doubtless is proud of its many advantages such as schools, water system, electric lights and others mentioned in last week's article. It certainly seems strange to imagine now that anyone should have opposed these improvements. Perhaps it was due to ignorance; perhaps he had been riveted to one place so long that he had failed to realize that something was progressing elsewhere; perhaps he was naturally lazy and too tired to use his brains if he had any; perhaps he was stingy and afraid it would cost him a few cents; perhaps he was what is often now termed a "conservative" man, a modern and polite way of describing a narrow minded individual. It is a fact that there have been and are now men of this size everywhere. Sometimes they get into high positions and thus have a grand opportunity to display their ignorance. They are eventually an object of ridicule to intelligent people in whatever walk of life they are found.

I cannot believe that Antrim has many of such characteristics as I have described, because it does not seem to harmonize with the condition of the place as I have seen it. Everything is so well kept and there are so many advantages that other places lack. It is a delightful spot for the visitor and should be appreciated by everyone.

Of course any intelligent person can readily see that the suggested improvements would be of great further benefit to the town. No town on the map should be without a street sprinkler or some method of keeping its streets clean. A bank is needed here and would add 100 per cent of value to the town within five years.

I am glad that Antrim will observe Old Home Week. It seems hardly possible that anyone could invent a reason for objection to such a celebration. Anyone must be entirely ignorant of the significance of such an occasion and of its broad benefits at home and abroad socially and financially, or else that person has a social or political axe to grind.

Cheer up, you progressive people of Antrim! Go ahead with your new enterprises. Keep something doing all the time. Don't die because somebody who is half dead says "die."

"Live in deeds, not years: He most lives Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

Often The Kidneys Are

Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.
 Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

ANTRIM CENTRE

The lawn party held on the church lawn Friday evening last was a very successful affair; the sum of $17 00 being the proceeds. The committee in charge was Mrs. D. B. Dunham, Miss I. M. Lord, Mrs. Bert Rogers, Mrs. W. W. Merrill and Mrs. Mary Sawyer. Mrs. W. W. Merrill had the candy table in charge; Mrs. Bert Rogers the ice cream; and Misses Emma Merrill and Mildred Holt the lemonade.

Rev. Mr. Sweet of Boston will occupy the Congregational pulpit next Sunday, July 30. He has been engaged to preach here for the present.

Miss Hattie Perry and Miss Harriet Perkins of Hancock were recent visitors of Miss Ellen Nelson of this place.

The young people of Antrim Center and Clinton are planning for a trip to Mt. Monadnock Wednesday of this week.

Kill More Than Wild Beasts

The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs from the system. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Money back, if not satisfied. Only 50c at Antrim Pharmacy.

As seems fit for a midsummer number, the August issue of The Ladies' World is made up largely of fiction, and having read the publication from beginning to end, we can declare it unusually good fiction, too, with a freshness and flavor that is refreshing even in the hottest of days. Two special articles are well worth mention, one an intimate human story of Peter Cooper, in the Philanthropist series, and the other called Getting What You Pay For, in the Household department. There are besides seasonable contributions on all the subjects usually treated in the magazine—[New York; Fifty Cents a Year.]

Escaped with his Life

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but could get no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure." It's positively guaranteed for coughs, colds and all bronchial affections. 50c and $1 00. Trial bottle free at Antrim Pharmacy.

Each Eye

is examined separately and fitted with the lens it requires when you come to us. This is one advantage you get over the ready-made glasses, which are made to sell and not to correct eye troubles.

Don't be reckless with your eyes. They certainly deserve the best care that can be had.

Don't let some slick tongued fakir who peddles glasses thro' the country come into your home and sell you a pair of glasses. They know how to fit a glass that makes you see splendidly to-day, or a few days, but it is an unnatural lens and the eye cannot stand up under the strain. Then you turn to your peddler, —he is gone.

Resolutions

On the death of G. H. Perkins, adopted by Waverley Lodge, No. 59, I. O. O. F.

Whereas, it has seemed best in the providence of the All-wise Ruler of the Universe to remove from our membership, our much respected and highly esteemed brother, P. G. George H. Resolved, that we extend to the family of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy in mailing them a copy of these resolutions; that they be spread upon the records of this lodge, and published in the Antrim Reporter.

The Sea Gave Up a Secret That Made Several Persons Happy

By E. KINGLAND WILLIAMS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Up to a certain date I had always been skeptical of remarkable happenings. I was converted by an occurrence which I told me by my most trusted friend I would not have believed. And my conversion was the more complete since the marvelous episode turned the current of my whole life and made a husband and father of a bachelor. At any rate, I don't care to hear people sneer at improbabilities or at persons who vouch for them.

I was thirty years old and a confirmed bachelor. In fact, I considered myself especially fitted for single life. Whether or no I was fitted to be married never occurred to me. Doubtless if I had thought of that side of the proposition I should have considered that if I had chosen to marry I would make a model husband. But no marriage for me! Why should a man give up his freedom to suffer the annoyances of matrimony?

But it doesn't make any difference what a man's opinion is of matrimony. If he happens to be struck by matrimonial lightning he succumbs like any one else. It was at the seashore that the bolt fell upon me, and I forgot all about my prenuptial prejudices. Indeed, I began to worry and fret and fume for fear that matrimony would be denied me, for there was just one woman in the world I wished to marry, and if I didn't get her life would no more be worth living.

I was standing on the beach one bright morning where the blue waves were rolling in merrily looking at the bathers. A lady, young, rather pretty and whose superb figure was shown to advantage by a becoming bathing suit, walked leisurely down to the water's edge and stood looking out upon the scene before her. Each wave that came up sent a line of white froth to clasp her ankles. A breeze played with her skirt. Then she walked out to a greater depth, dived under an incoming wave and appeared beyond it swimming like a dolphin.

I watched for the lady when she came out of the ocean and saw her go into a little cottage built up against the dunes. The door closed behind her, but her image had been left with me. I saw her again the same evening supporting an old lady, doubtless her mother, on the board walk. This time I had a good view of her face, and a melancholy resting upon it only added to my suddenly awakened interest. Possibly any other expression would have served the same purpose, for when a man's imagination has been kindled by the spark of love any trait the fair one possesses is either thrilling or delightful and usually both.

I secured an introduction to Miss Henrietta Chamberlin and was graciously accorded permission to call at the cottage, where she lived with her mother and a younger brother. Every member of the family seemed to be under a melancholy induced by some misfortune. The natural disposition common to them all I judged to be genial and happy. But if at any time any or all became exhilarated some closet skeleton would thrust itself in upon their merriment and hush it.

Thinking to learn something about them, I questioned persons with whom they were acquainted. But no one knew them any better than I. When the Chamberlins were asked where they hailed from they gave evasive answers, stating usually that at present they were unsettled. Of all the persons with whom they became intimate during their sojourn at the seashore not one could give any account of them.

For a time this mystery put a damper on my enthusiasm with regard to Miss Chamberlin. But it was taking one step forward to two backward. I was becoming rapidly enthralled and soon got beyond any question of expediency. Then, too, the seashore is a dangerous place for those who wish to keep out of love's whirlpool. Though the waters look cool and tempting, there are sea pussies that are able to whirl one beyond one's depth.

Miss Chamberlin and I were standing one moonlight night just above the highest line of foam when one of these pussies came up and carried up into a boundless ocean of torture—or was it a water fay that did the damage? At all events while we were looking at the moon's shimmer on the water, changing with the light clouds that loomed lazily over her face, something took away all my caution, and I poured forth an unpremeditated story of love.

Instead of exciting pleasure I saw under the moonlight shining full in her face the melancholy she usually wore intensified.

"I have been weak," she said. "No woman can fall to see love before it is expressed. I should have repelled you."

"Why?" I asked, overwhelmed by a grievous disappointment. "It's a secret."

"Tell me."

"There's a stain on our family name. Ask me no more."

I learned nothing further from Henrietta Chamberlin. I did afterward learn the secret and in the strangest of all ways. But not then. Several years passed when it was given to me—by what?—the boundless ocean. I could not move her, and beyond being allowed to call myself her friend I was permitted to come no nearer to her. I learned that the family were very proud and sensitive and that whenever they met any one who revealed their identity they left the place where they were immediately.

Miss Chamberlin and I parted as friends, but we were really lovers.

One summer I was yachting off the New Jersey coast when Joe Shedd, one of the crew, came to me with a bottle he had taken out of the water.

"I don't want it," I said. "This coast is covered with bottles that young people have thrown out with fake accounts of shipwreck in them."

The man went away, but presently returned with a paper, which he said might mean something real. It read:

Whoever finds this take up floor N. E. corner of sawmill one mile west of D. Conn.

"It's one of these children's messages," I said to the man, "to fool persons." Then I handed it back to him.

During the next autumn Shedd came into my office. He said that he couldn't get it out of his head that the message he had picked up at sea was a bona fide one. He would like to go to D. and look into the matter, but he had no money for the purpose. I tried to persuade him to dismiss the subject from his mind, but when I was satisfied that he wouldn't do so till he had proved the truth of my position I advanced him the price of a ticket to D. with something to spare.

"Whatever I find," he said, "I'll bring to you."

"You'll not find anything to bring. But don't worry about repaying the amount I have advanced. It's not a loan; it's a gift."

He made no reply to this, but left me, and that's the last I thought of the matter for a week, when he paid me another visit. I saw in a moment by his expression that he had found something.

"Well," I said jocularly, "did you get a big diamond?"

"We were alone, and he closed the door before replying. Then he said: "No, but I got a hundred $1,000 bonds."

I wondered if the man had gone daft.

"I consider the find yours, sir," he continued, "so I didn't disturb anything I found, putting back the flooring. Nobody knew about my being there."

"Do you mean to tell me you found a lot of bonds placed where that paper you picked up indicated?"

"I do."

"What else?" I asked after drawing several long breaths.

"This."

He handed me a paper, on which was scrawled in lead pencil:

Cashier didn't do this. The man as did is where he can't be reached.

Notwithstanding that this paper had a genuine look, some time was required for Shedd to convince me that it would be worth while to go with him and have a look at his find.

"You see, sir," he said, "the bonds must have been stolen property, and I'm afraid to touch 'em for fear of getting myself into trouble."

"Very well," I said at last. "I'll go with you, and if you've found some missing securities and there is a reward offered for their recovery I'll see that you get it."

We reached D. in the afternoon, and Shedd having provided himself with tools and a lantern, after supper we walked out to a deserted sawmill. It was some distance from the road and stood alone. Going to a corner of the mill, Shedd removed some rubbish and took up a plank of flooring. Between two joists lay a bundle, the wrapper being a newspaper. Shedd handed it to me, and unrolling it, there sure enough were a hundred $1,000 bonds of a railway company. I saw at a glance that they were not negotiable by the thieves. The date on the newspaper indicated that it had been printed nine years before. Shedd had taken the only thing besides the bonds—the scrap of paper—that had been left in the place of concealment.

Having replaced the flooring, we returned by an early train the next morning, and, going to police headquarters, I reported the find.

I was informed that nine years before a certain bank had missed the bonds, and the cashier whose accounts were short had been convicted of making way with them. And here came the surprise of my life and an explanation of a mystery that had kept me from the woman I loved.

The name of the cashier was Vincent Chamberlin.

There had been just enough shortage in his accounts and circumstantial evidence against him to convict him of having taken the bonds, doubtless for the purpose of speculation. Their finding, with the note accompanying them, was a vindication for the cashier, and he was released from prison.

The happiest day in my life was when, having gone to my Henrietta with her brother's vindication in my hands, I saw the look of mingled wonder and delight in her eyes as she read the words that were to take away the great stain and make him a free man. She stood for awhile looking at nothing, as if wrapped in a happy dream. I refrained from interrupting this joyous sense of relief as long as I could contain myself, then took her in my arms. I said nothing, nor did she. Her head fell upon my shoulder, and this was the only sign I asked for to know that my season of disappointment had ended.

WALL STREET.

The Human Side of New York's Great Financial Quarter.

To the man who looks from without upon Wall street it seems a place of deep and dangerous mystery, a region of dens and caves and labyrinths full of perils which threaten loss and perhaps ruin to him who enters there. And such in too many instances it has proved to be. But nevertheless there is a decided human side to Wall street. It is perhaps the most "two faced" street in the world. Here men who occupy the highest pinnacle of financial success and who are powerful kings, in fact, daily brush elbows with office boys and bank messengers, "get-rich-quick" highwaymen, silly and pretty girl stenographers, curb brokers and curb merchants and sharp tongued and ready witted "newsies"—with all the motley tide that flows into "the street" each morning and ebbs back again at night.

Wall street may be said to be the most democratic street in the world, for all its vast wealth. There is no street where a crowd will gather more quickly than there, even upon the smallest pretext. It may be a street faker selling some newfangled toy or a man guiding the ball on a flagpole 500 feet up in the air. A suffragette making a speech would transfer practically the entire population from a dozen skyscrapers to the "standing room only" in her immediate vicinity. But unless one hurries he will not get a good view of the fair creature, for soon she is lost from view in tangles of ticker tape tossed in reels from the nearby office windows, a favorite sport among the brokerage house clerks.

This sort of thing usually takes place during the noon hour, and at that time all work is suspended at the first sound of a band in the distance. Everybody flies to the curb. Business can wait in this busiest of streets for most anything before 2 o'clock, when the chiming of Trinity sound the afternoon session and "the street" settles down to its serious business of making financial history.

Such is the everyday "outside" little crooked street, "with the river at one end and a cemetery at the other," which has sent scores upon scores to one or the other—the street with a destiny.—Strand Magazine.

Inquisitiveness.

"One half the world doesn't know how the other half lives," quoted the wise guy. "That's right," agreed the simple mug. "Men are not so inquisitive as women."—Philadelphia Record.
