A Simple Prayer

My life bark swings on the willow
That rides over a boundless sea,
And the sea-gull rocks on the pillow
That is only for him and me,
My vessel is old, foggy and flat,
To a land that is dim and gray,
O'er a tide that is shifting, shifting,
But aye to myself I say:
Hope for the long tomorrow;
Strength for the brief today;
Faith to guide o'er the waters wide,
And love in my heart alway.

I know not the final haven,
Nor whither the journey tends,
And my soul at times is craven
When the storm-wind raves and rends.
Then a whisper comes to cheer me:
"Peace! For 'tis within thee,
The One who is ever near thee!"
And again to myself I say:
Hope for the long tomorrow;
Strength for the brief today;
Faith to guide o'er the waters wide,
And love in my heart alway.

'Tis a simple refrain only,
Unknowing the school-boy's lore,
Yet still where my heart is truly
It hauntheth me more and more;
Till I turn to the one who leads us,
Where he sits in the blue divine,
And tenderly guides and leads us,
And he knows that the prayer is mine:
Hope for the long tomorrow;
Strength for the brief today;
Faith to guide o'er the waters wide,
And love in my heart alway.

Funeral of Mrs. F. C. Ongley

The last rites for the remains of Mrs. Frank C. Ongley were held on Wednesday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal church, which were attended by relatives and friends. Rev. G. B. VanBurskirk, pastor, officiated, at the services and spoke comforting words to the bereaved. A large number of floral tributes were sent, proving the esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. Interment was in Maplewood.

Mrs. Lottie Marie Ongley was daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Blair of Harrisville and married to Antrim in September, 1912, after her marriage to Francis Charles Ongley of this town. They occupied a tenement in Antrim, and she died at 3:15 p.m. on Tuesday, April 2, 1913, at the age of 22 years, 7 months and 5 days. The funeral services were held at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, April 3, at the home of the bereaved. The services were conducted by Rev. G. B. VanBurskirk, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, and were attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Interment was in Maplewood.

GREYSTONE LODGE

New Hotel Building on the Goodell Mountain

"Greystone Lodge," the modern summer hotel which is being rapidly erected on the summit of Goodell mountain, was the center of attraction for about 75 visitors Sunday. Although the road up the mountain was hard to travel, the visitor was well rewarded after reaching the top, by the magnificent vista which is obtained from this elevation. The surrounding mountains and lakes are numerous and beautiful, offering a panorama which is difficult to duplicate for its excellence.

This hotel is being erected by Birch Farms Company, of which Alford R. Hazard is president and James McGee is Treasurer. They are employing several men, and the work is being pushed forward to completion as expeditiously as possible.

The cellar has been excavated, the walls of grey stone have been built up as high as the second story, and the first floor has been laid. Arrangements have been made to have the rooms flooded with an abundance of light, and the windows are many and of good size. Ample piazza room will be provided.

A company of men are now constantly at work in drilling an artesian well, and have reached the depth of 70 feet. The engine which is being used for driving is of much interest to visitors.

It is the plan of the proprietors to furnish their own supplies for table use as much as possible. For this purpose a farm is being developed along scientific lines, and is situated not far from the Lodge. As yet, not much attention has been paid to this part of the undertaking, but as time progresses more and more will be made of it.

The building of this hotel, on one of our most beautiful and appropriate sites, shows business enterprise which should be (and we believe is) encouraged and assisted in every way possible by the town's people. It is sure to attract many summer residents to our borders, and will help in "Advertising the Advantages of Antrim."

Union Missionary Meeting

The third missionary talk which had been arranged by the Women's Missionary Alliance, was given at the Methodist church on Sunday evening, the speaker being Miss Florence Nichols, of Lucknow, India.

Mrs. D. H. Goodell presided at the meeting which was well attended; Mrs. G. B. VanBurskirk read the scriptures, and Mrs. W. J. B. Cannell offered prayer.

The speaker succeeded well in interesting her audience in the customs and educational advantages of that far away country where she had spent much time in missionary work. Our people gained from her a good bit of information concerning this section of missionary ground, which said we know anything about it is always pleasing to hear of another country which one feels the speaker knows from experience what she is talking about.

Bicycle Riding on the Sidewalks

As the roads are now in a more or less muddy condition it is a great temptation for the bicycle riders to ride on the sidewalks. This is an offense in the eyes of the law and is punishable by fine.

During the past week we have noticed that there has been some transgressing of this sort, and we would recommend that bicycles should remain in the place generally assigned them, and not make the safety of pedestrians hazardous by venturing to invade the sacred precincts of the sidewalks!

THEIR 5TH ANNUAL

The Paper Makers of Bennington Hold Forth

The employees of the Monadnock Paper Mills at Bennington held their 5th annual concert and ball Friday evening, April 4th, at the town hall in that place. This was the most successful event which they have yet held, and was more splendid and magnificent than any of the others which have preceded this one.

About 200 couples bought tickets, and there were between 350 and 400 people in attendance. The capacity of the hall was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the crowds from Antrim, Hancock, Franconstown, Greenfield, and Peterboro, besides the many from Bennington.

The decorations were especially attractive this year. The colors used in the decorative scheme were white and purple. Crepe paper in streamers and other forms was skillfully handled to produce, results desired, and many complimentary remarks were passed concerning the pleasing effect produced.

Flanagan's singing orchestra of Marlboro, Mass., consisting of eight pieces, furnished the music during the evening. A concert was given by the orchestra at eight o'clock which was well received and of a high order. The program included selections by the entire company, piccolo solo, vocal trio, and a selection which was made up from the popular airs of 1912-1913.

Following the concert the hall was prepared for dancing and in a short time nearly 175 couples were on the floor. The grand march was led by Major A. J. Pierce, president of the Monadnock Paper Mills, and Mrs. Pierce. During the intermission a hot turkey supper was served at Engine hall by the Page Catering Company, of Lowell, Mass. This company has a well earned reputation for giving satisfactory service in their line of business, and this reputation was well sustained in this instance!

The dance orders were adorned with a photo of the exterior of the office of the mills, and one of the trucking teams with its pair of large, black horses. The several dances were dedicated to the employees and the jokers at their expense were the occasion for many jests as well as inquiries as to the information. When one of the dances, "The Motor and Automobile" is charged with deciding a wash boiler for an automobile, model 1912; when a waltz is dedicated to benefactors; when the title of one dance reminds you of that song "I want a girl just like the girl that married dear old Dad"; when the public is informed that a number of clocks are now for sale; and some one suggests that "well all come to Ben's," it was a bona fide offer for the public to arise and demand that the full and complete explanation shall be made by the employees. Some of them are well known to the community.

The several committees have good reason to feel proud of the success which their untiring efforts produced. The Paper Makers' society is an event long anticipated by many, and it is gratifying to record that the expectations are satisfied and met.

The floor director was Herbert Lindsey, assisted by E. Bell and Ruel S. Cram acting as assistants. The committee of introduction included E. G. Draper, Robert Knowles, Jr., and Walter Knowles. The committee of introduction included E. G. Draper, Robert Knowles, Jr., and Walter Knowles, Sr., Walter Backford, Andrew A. Lee, Patrick J. McGrath, Joseph D. McDonald, Arthur Dromond, William F. Cuddehe, F. S. H. Harry Clavin, F. S. Sheldon, and William J. Geman. Arthur F. Bell was chairman of the committee of arrangements, and was assisted by Justin Root, Ruel Cram, William Wallace, John Kehay, George Edwards, and Herbert Lindsey.

evening. This furnishes a very strong program prepared with much thought, and will doubtless attract the large number that it should. A cordial invitation is extended to every one to attend any and all of these services.

Choral Society Concert

The event of the season, musically speaking, falls on this Friday evening. The sale of reserved seats has been so large as to assure one of the largest audiences in the history of our town hall, and the large chorus and exceptional soloists are entirely keeping with the idea of a "big night."

The concert will open with the "Carnival Songs" for full chorus and orchestra. W. C. Greene, cellist of the Hillsboro school, will play a "Romance" for cello, followed by a group of songs by Grace Buzzell Brown, soprano. The first part of the program concludes with "Beautiful Night" (famous barcarolle from "Tales of Hoffman") to be sung by the ladies' group, with violin and cello obbligato.

Gaul's "Joan of Arc" will then be sung, with the following solo parts: Joan of Arc Mrs. Brown; Philip, Joan's lover Mr. Hipson; Robert de Baudouinart and Jean de Noyepont Mr. Artuckle. The concert will be under the direction of Ralph G. Winlow.

Last Call, for "Joan of Arc"

The committee have taken every precaution to make the large crowd on Friday evening of this week, at the town hall. Remember to be in your seat before the first martial strains are heard, it will be to your pleasure and be more interesting to others who are there on time.

You can purchase your ticket at Lane & Weiss Drug Store until 7 o'clock Friday evening; after that time at the town hall office.

A group picture of the chorus will be taken at this time.

To Antrim, T. A. and I. are the chairs of the "Joan of Arc."

CONGRESS GETS WILSON MESSAGE

Brief Document Tells Purpose of Extra Session.

MUST ALTER TARIFF DUTIES

Lawmakers Asked to Square the Schedules With the Actual Facts of Industrial and Commercial Life.

Washington, April 8. — President Wilson's message, read today to the senate and house at the beginning of the extra session, was a brief, pointed document setting forth in general terms what congress is expected to do in the matter of tariff revision. The message was as follows: To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have called the congress together in extraordinary session because a duty was laid upon the party now in power at the recent elections which it ought to perform promptly, in order that the burden carried by the people under existing law may be lightened as soon as possible and in order, also, that the business interests of the country may not be kept too long in suspense as to what the fiscal changes are to be to which they will be required to adjust themselves. It is clear to the whole country that the tariff duties must be altered. They must be changed to meet the radical alteration in the conditions of our economic life which the country has witnessed within the last generation.

While the whole face and method of our industrial and commercial life were being changed beyond recognition the tariff schedules have remained what they were before the change began, or have moved in the direction they were given when no large circumstance of our industrial development was what it is today. Our task is to square them with the actual facts. The sooner that is done the sooner we shall escape from suffering from the facts and the sooner our men of business will be free to thrive by the law of nature (the nature of free business) instead of by the law of legislation and artificial arrangement.

Business Not Normal. We have seen tariff legislation wander very far afield in our day—very far indeed from the field in which our prosperity might have had a normal growth and stimulation. No one who looks the facts squarely in the face or knows anything that lies beneath the surface of action can fail to perceive the principles upon which our tariff legislation has been based. We long ago passed beyond the modest notion of "protecting" the industries of the country and moved boldly forward to the idea that they were entitled to the direct patronage of the government. For a long time—a time so long that the men now active in public policy hardly remember the conditions that preceded it—we have sought in our tariff schedules to give each group of manufacturers or producers what they themselves thought that they needed in order to maintain a practically exclusive market against the rest of the world. Consciously or unconsciously, we have built up a set of privileges and monopolies from competition between which it was easy by any, even the crudest, forms of combination to squeeze men out, until at last nothing is normal, nothing is obliged to stand the tests of efficiency and economy in our world of big business, but everything thrives by concerted arrangement. Only new principles of action will save us from a final hard crystallization of monopoly and a complete loss of the influences that make men enterprising and keep independent energy alive.

It is plain what those principles must be. We must abolish everything that bears even the semblance of privilege or of any kind of artificial advantage, and put our business men and producers under the stimulation of a constant necessity to be efficient, economical and enterprising, masters of competitive supremacy, better workers and merchants than any in the world. Aside from the duties laid upon articles which we do not, and probably cannot, produce, therefore, and the duties laid upon luxuries and merely for the sake of the revenues they yield, the object of the tariff duties henceforth laid must be effective competition, the whetting of American wits by contest with the wits of the rest of the world. Development, Not Revolution. It would be unwise to move toward this end headlong, with reckless haste, or with strokes that cut at the very roots of what has grown up amongst us by long process and at our own invitation. It does not alter a thing to upset it and break it and deprive it of a chance to change. It destroys it. We must make changes in our fiscal laws, in our fiscal system, whose object is development, a more free and wholesome development, not revolution or upset or confusion. We must build up a sound, especially foreign trade. We need the outlet and the enlarged field of energy more than we ever had before. We must build up industry as well and must adopt the place of artificial stimulation so far as it will build up industry. In dealing with the tariff duties, a matter of judgment, we must be guided by the facts as they are, and not worked out as if we were beginners. We are to deal with the facts of our own day, with the facts of no other, and to make laws which square with those facts. It is best, indeed it is necessary, to begin with the tariff. I will urge nothing upon you now at the opening of your session which can obscure that first object or divert our energies from that clearly defined duty. At a later time I may take the liberty of calling your attention to reforms which should press close upon the heels of the tariff changes, if not accompany them, of which the chief is the reform of our banking and currency laws; but just now I refrain. For the present, I put these matters on one side and think only of this one thing—of the changes in our fiscal system which may best serve to open once more the free channels of prosperity to a great people whom we would serve to the utmost and throughout both rank and file. WOODROW WILSON. The White House, April 8, 1913.

To some not accustomed to the excitement and responsibilities of greater freedom our methods may in some respects and at some points seem hard, but remedies may be heroic and yet be remedies. It is our business to make sure that they are genuine remedies. Our object is clear. If our motive is above just challenge and only an occasional error of judgment is chargeable against us, we shall be fortunate.

We are called upon to render the country a great service in more matters than one. Our responsibility should be met and our methods should be thorough, as thorough as moderate and well considered, based upon the facts as they are, and not worked out as if we were beginners. We are to deal with the facts of our own day, with the facts of no other, and to make laws which square with those facts. It is best, indeed it is necessary, to begin with the tariff. I will urge nothing upon you now at the opening of your session which can obscure that first object or divert our energies from that clearly defined duty. Honest Statement of Well Known Citizen.

An advertisement of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which I saw in the St. Albans Messenger some time ago, induced me to give your remedy a fair trial. I was then suffering from terrible pains in the small of my back. The pain was usually greatest during the morning, and often when I attempted to arise from my bed to go to work, I found I could not do so without the assistance of some member of the family. I am very grateful to the good your remedy has done for me.

I thought I would have to use much more Swamp-Root than I did, in order to get well, but am absolutely cured of my kidney trouble and now without the slightest pain, after using only seven bottles. Was cured after six months' agonizing illness. I have since worked in the city where I have been employed for the past forty-four years, have had no recurrence of the trouble of pain in the slightest degree.

I am doubly thankful for this, and am now a well man, and feel the strength of my old limbs. I am very grateful to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Many others also as to the good your remedy has done for me.

BUMPING INTO IT

Two Grouches That Counted for Naught With Dan Cupid on the Job.

BY CLAUDE SISSON.

Mr. Charles Darrow was twenty-six years old, and carried a grouch. Miss Evelyn Tyson was twenty-five years old and carried another grouch. Mr. Darrow had an income that enabled him to loaf around and call himself a sculptor.

Miss Tyson had an income that enabled her to idle (not loaf) around and call herself a landscape painter. Mr. Darrow's grouch arose from two causes. He could not sculpt for shucks, and the public knew it and he knew it. He had a rich uncle who was going to leave him a lot of money when he died, but he meanly persisted in hanging on and even growing fat over it. As soon as he pegged out and the yellow-backs were turned over, then the sculptor would sculpt no more.

Miss Tyson's grouch also arose from two causes. She had a rich aunt who was going to leave her a jolly lot of cash when she became an angel, but that aunt went right along being satisfied with this sad world instead of taking the slightest step towards helping herself to climb to azure heights and begin her lessons on the golden harp tagged with her initials and waiting for her. As soon as that money was hers she would cease to paint and tell the public to go to the second-hand stores for its Corots.

One morning, early in this twentieth century and the reign of graft and virtue, Miss Tyson awoke with a hunger for fried eggs. As she had an apartment and a cook and a maid and a dozen eggs under her artistic thumb, all she had to do was to send word to the kitchen that she wanted fried eggs for breakfast, and she wanted them fried hard, and that if there was any throw-down about it some one would lose her job.

Alas for poor human nature! It is always wanting somebody else's eggs. Miss Tyson's longing was not for the eggs in the house, but for those out of it—at a restaurant three blocks away. It was raining. She didn't care a snap. She would have to wear a raincoat and carry an umbrella. She didn't care the snaps. Her artistic soul cried out for restaurant-fried eggs that had emerged from cold storage nests after a year of rest—and that soul should be satisfied.

Mr. Darrow had slept well and dreamed that his obdurate uncle had turned up his toes at last. Therefore, he awoke hungry. Therefore, he found himself craving for sausages—perk sausages, ham-made country sausages made by Aunt Mary and brought to town by Uncle Rube, b'gosh!

Mr. Darrow had a studio and a valet and a kitchen. That valet could cook a ham home in seventeen different ways. Just a sleepy nod to him and he would have ascended the fire escape like a monkey and been back in five minutes with a dozen sausages gently linked together so that none might stray. But no—just as Miss Tyson wanted restaurant eggs, Mr. Darrow wanted restaurant sausages, and he would have them or perish. With rubbers and raincoat and umbrella he set out at almost the same moment Miss Tyson did.

She was intent upon fried eggs. He was intent upon fried sausage. He carried his umbrella tipped forward to shelter his toes.

She did the same. They were coming head-on, and they met. Two umbrellas were put out of commission, and one girl artist was compelled to sit down in the mud on the crossing.

"Madam, it was your fault!" "Sir, it was yours!" "You don't know how to carry an umbrella!"

"It's you that should take lessons, not only in that, but in manners as well!" "You bumped into me!" "It was the other way!"

Mr. Darrow picked up his broken umbrella and returned to his studio in disgust to breakfast most likely dry toast.

Miss Tyson picked herself up, saw a boy disappearing with her wrecked umbrella, and she returned to her apartment with her appetite for fried eggs completely gone.

"Henry," said Mr. Darrow to his maid, "what do you think of a woman who carried an umbrella down to her knees in a storm like this?"

"A very doubtful person, sir." "And shuts her eyes and staves ahead?"

"It isn't society manners, sir." "And bumps into a man?" "No, polish there, sir!"

"And then knocks him and herself down and calls him a blunder-head?" "Why, sir, we can't afford to make with no such parvenew, and I hope we are not going to."

"Helen," said Miss Tyson to her maid as she sipped at her coffee and nibbled at her chop, "what do you think of a man taking up the whole street with his umbrella such a day as this?"

"He's a hog, miss!" "And bumping into a woman?" "He's a loafer!"

"And knocking her down?" "It ought to be the cop for him!" "And telling her it was all her own fault, and walking away without a word of apology and leaving her sitting in the mud?"

"I will go to the police, if you say so, and have him trailed to the ends of the earth!"

A week later Mr. Darrow went to the store to buy a velvet jacket. He had never worn one, though he had been a sculptor for three years. He had at last been told that his non-success with mallet and chisel and the refusal of his uncle to expire were owing to the absence of the right sort of jacket. He found his fit and bought it.

On that very morning one of the pockets of Miss Tyson's apron became entangled and was torn off and she realized that she must do some shopping. She was just entering a store and wondering about bargains, when Mr. Darrow came out. Both were stepping lively when the head-on collision occurred that crumpled them up. They went down. They were mussed up. They were humiliated and angered.

"It's you!" gasped Miss Tyson as somebody helped her up.

"And you!" exclaimed Mr. Darrow as he reached his feet and knew that his dollar suspenders had busted under the shock.

"You were gawping at something across the street, sir!" "And you were ogling your toes!"

"This—is this is the second time!" "I know it!"

They got away before the police came, and on arriving home, and to explain his condition, Mr. Darrow said to his man:

"Henry, I have had another encounter with that—that person." "Yes, sir. They do be around." "She bumped into me again."

"You will have to carry a gun, sir." "And down I went, Henry, and again she laid it all to me."

"They always does, sir—they always does." "And when Miss Tyson reached her apartment she said to her maid:

"Helen, there has been more bumping, and with that same man!" "The assassin! was hissed." "It must cease, Helen—it must!"

"It must, Miss—it must!" "Or I shall have to take strong measures."

"Very strong!" "It was two weeks later this time when Mr. Darrow was on the street as a fire alarm sounded. So was Miss Tyson. He started around a corner in haste to see where the fire was. She started around the same corner, in the same haste, to get clear of the mob.

A third head-on collision and two falls! Nothing new about the language they scattered around as they arose. Nothing tearful about their parting. Again at home Mr. Tyson said to his man:

"That person again, Henry." "Yes, sir. They do hang on." "But I can't stand being bumped about like a pumpkin."

"Yes, sir. You will have to carry a knife and a gun." "And Miss Tyson said to her maid:

"That man again, Helen!" "And more bumps, Miss?" "Yes, more bumps. I must see a lawyer or somebody."

"You must, Miss. This cannot go on forever." "It did not. Four weeks later Mr. Darrow visited a picture gallery and was on the second floor with a hard finish stair to climb and descend. He was just ahead of her when she slipped and grabbed his coat-tails, and together they bumped down fourteen steps.

"Sir, my name is Miss Tyson, and this must cease!" she said as they sat up.

"Miss Tyson, my name is Darrow, and I too say it must cease!" "But how?"

"By our getting married. Married folks never bump into each other." "And two hours later Mr. Darrow said to his man:

"Henry, I am going to marry that—that Miss Tyson the bumpers." "Quite correct, sir—quite!"

"And Miss Tyson said to her maid: "Helen, I'm going to marry Mr. Darrow, the bumper."

"Perfectly proper, Miss, perfectly!" (Copyright, 1912, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Fish in Ocean Depths. When a disaster occurs at sea, and people read that some leviathan vessel has gone down to the utmost depth of the ocean, imagination is stirred in wondering what conditions surround

According to Sir John Murray, one of the greatest authorities on oceanography, the bottom is a desert of pitch-black darkness, penetrating cold and eternal silence. Worms, sea mud-dings and coral helms miserably crawl or sway in the almost currentless depths, and only two species of fish, both of them small, with much head and little body, have been found deeper than a mile and a quarter down.

The range of fishes in the sea is as though it were divided into layers one above the other, and no fish can live above or below this layer. Thus, many of the deeper fish—the species of a mile below the surface—have been found floating at the top. They had swallowed a fish as large or larger than themselves, and the buoyancy had lifted them out of the strata to which they were accustomed.

New Maps Increase Greenland's Area. A series of maps has been published presenting the results of the surveys carried out by the U. S. started Julius Erichsen expedition of 1906-9 to northeastern Greenland. These show that Greenland extends much farther east than was formerly supposed, and add about 150,000 square miles to its area.

Widow Weeds—Sure, an it's mighty hard to be left a widow! McCarthy—Faix! an' it's meself that knows it, ma'am. Didn't Dan Doolan lave me his? Bad cess to him!

About Advertising

It costs money to advertise in a paper of circulation and influence in the community. Every business man who seeks to enlarge his trade, recognizes the fact that advertising is a legitimate expense. It is not the cheapest advertising that pays the best. Sometimes it is the highest priced newspaper that brings the largest net profit to the advertiser.

DIFFER AS TO HEIR'S BRIDE

Alexandra and Mary Disagree Over
Wife for Prince of Wales—Ban on German Princess.

London.—The engagement of the Kaiser's only daughter, Princess Victoria Louise, to the son of the duke of Cumberland came as a great relief to Queen Mary, who has always dreaded that a marriage should be arranged for political reasons between the princess and the prince of Wales. Typically English as the queen is, she would prefer her oldest son to marry an English girl if there were one of equal rank to be found within this country, but as this is not the case, she knows, of course, that the prince of Wales will eventually have to marry some foreign princess.

She has become quite resigned to this idea, but she still draws the line on German princesses, and hopes that the future king of England will eventually marry one of the czar's young daughters. On this point, however, she meets with strong opposition from Queen Alexandra, who maintains that it would be fatal to the best interests of coming royal generations to allow a union of two young people who are not only as closely related as are the prince of Wales and a daughter of the czar, but whose fathers are exact doubles of one another physically, as well as mentally, and both very far from being robust. Queen

Queen Mary.

Alexandra also fears that her young Russian grandnieces may have inherited a strain of the melancholy of their beautiful and lovely mother.

As the young prince of Wales is of a very shy and rather effeminate disposition, Queen Alexandra maintains that the proper wife for him must be a strong, vivacious and spirited princess, and her favorite candidate is the oldest daughter of the king and queen of Italy, in whose veins flows the vigorous and healthy blood of the Montenegrin princes who, although now of royal rank, are only a few generations removed from strong peasant ancestors.

Queen Mary's principal objection to the Italian princess favored by Queen Alexandra is that England's future queen ought to be a Protestant by birth.

ITS AGE IS TWO CENTURIES

Elliot School, Boston, Mass., Celebrates 200th Birthday—Has Occupied Four Buildings on Site.

Boston.—The Elliot Grammar school of Boston held exercises in celebration of the rounding out of the second century of its existence. The school was founded in 1712, when the sturdy fathers of colonial Boston voted to establish a school at the north end of the town to accommodate the growing population in that section. One year later the little edifice was completed and its doors thrown open. The school is the oldest elementary school in the city and the second oldest in the state of any kind.

The original building lasted through the period of the revolution and was torn down in 1792. The second building lasted until 1837 and the third persisted until 1860, when the present edifice was erected. All have occupied the same site, which is within a stone's throw of Christ's church, where Paul Revere's lanterns were hung.

Many famous men received their elementary education at the old Elliot school, among them Edward Everett, the famous statesman and orator, and Rev. Samuel S. Smith, author of "America." The last quarter of a century has seen great changes in the section of the city where the school is located, and today 90 per cent of its pupils are the children of Italian and Jewish immigrants.

FOLLY'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR BACKACHE, KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

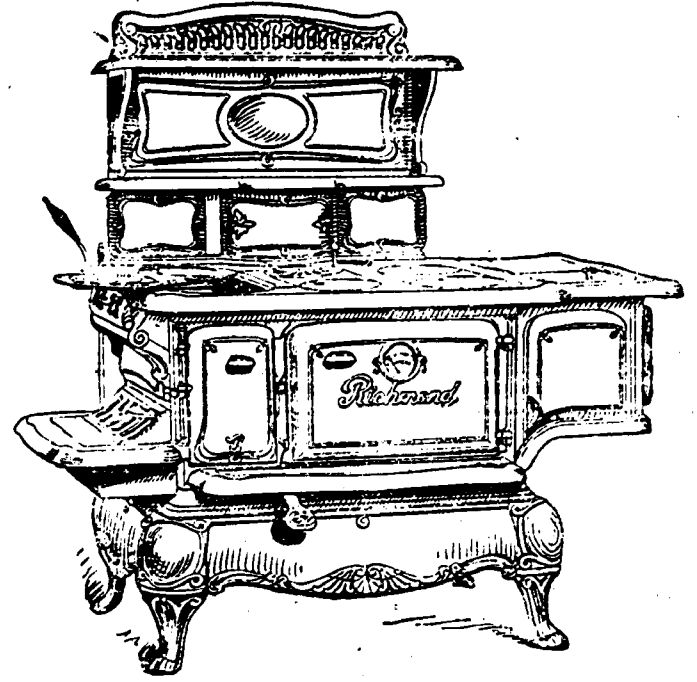

Coughs and Consumption

Coughs and colds, when neglected, always lead to serious trouble of the lungs. The wisest thing to do when you have a cold that troubles you is to get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. You will get relief from the first dose, and finally the cough will disappear. O. H. Brown of Muscadisce, Ala., writes: "My wife was down in bed with an obstinate cough, and I had given up hope. I got relief from Dr. King's New Discovery, she would not be living to day." Known for forty three years as the best remedy for coughs and colds. Price 50c per bottle. Recommended by Antrim Pharmacy.
