CLASS OF 1914

Are Graduated and Given Diplomas by Supt.

THE twentieth annual commencement of the Antrim High school was held in the town hall here on Friday, June 19. The hall was very artistically decorated, with the class colors, gold and white, much in evidence. The stage background of green added much to the decorating scheme.

This class is the largest to graduate from Antrim High school in many years, there being fourteen who took part in the exercises. Two members of the class, Miss Marion Shea and Miss Ellen Weston, have attended Antrim High while living in Hancock; Miss Edna Keeser and William Griswold coming from Bennington. Robert Bryant, from Frankestown, has attended school here for several years.

It has always been the custom in late years to have the speaking in the town hall in the afternoon and the reception in the evening, but owing to the size of the class this year it was thought necessary by the School Board and School Superintendent, that a part of the exercises be held in the evening.

The afternoon program included:

Music by the orchestra; prayer, Rev. F. Albert Arbuckle; Salutatory and Essay, "Superstition," Miss Agnes Ellen Weston; "Perseverance," Miss Jessie Marie Butterfield; "Nature, the Incarnation of Thought," Miss Vera McClure; "The Three Great Compromises of the Constitution," Paul Revere Colby; "Madam Montessori and Her Work," Miss Elinor Emily Gibney; "The Influence of Fine Arts," Miss Edna Mae Keeser; "The Growth of the Anti Slavery Movement in the United States," Carl Harold Tewksbury; "Romeo and Juliet, and its Sources," Rose Lillian Wilkinson; "Music," Miss Ellen Gardner Nelson; Selection by the orchestra.

The program for the evening was as follows:

Selection by orchestra; "Myths of the Deluge," Miss Marion Louise Shea; "The Naming of America," Robert Parkman Bryant; "Worth While Ambition," Stella Lillian Mower; "Territorial Expansion of the United States," William Arthur Griswold; Valedictory and Essay, "Pre-Columbian Voyages to America," Miss Mabel Esther Gibson. Presentation of diplomas by Superintendent of Schools, Frederick L. Kendall, A. M.

A short intermission was enjoyed after the speaking, during which time the seats were cleared from the hall, after which the class held a public reception.

It was the vote of the class that there should be no flowers of any kind presented to any member of the class during the speaking exercises but at the reception many beautiful bouquets of roses, carnations, etc., were in evidence.

The three honors were won by members of the class who had taken the regular four year course in three years, and they were the only ones to accomplish this in the class. They were: valedictory, Miss Mabel Gibson; Salutatory, Miss Ellen Weston; Third honor, Miss Marion Shea.

The class officers were: Paul Colby, president; Harold Tewksbury, vice president; Miss Elinor Gibney, secretary; Miss Ellen Nelson, treasurer. The class marshal was Philip Butterfield. The motto, "Onward, Step by Step," was in large gold letters on a background of evergreen.

Mrs. Mabelle J. Prentiss

Wife of Charles W. Prentiss, passed on from this life to one that is fairer and brighter, where there is neither pain nor sorrow, early Monday afternoon, at her pleasant home on Fairview street, at the age of 89 years, 8 months, 23 days. In the prime of life her spirit took its flight, and a husband, two sons and mother, other relatives and friends are bereft of a true and lovable character.

About four years ago her health began to fail and she underwent an operation at the hospital but never regained her former health, in fact failed a bit constantly, yet her firm will and strong desire to do for her family were responsible for her keeping about as long as she did. The last of January she was taken more seriously ill, and grew rapidly worse till two months ago when she again visited

INTERESTING REMINISCENCES

Prepared by Our Fellow Townsman, Hon. George A. Cochran, for Reporter Readers

The sentiments expressed by Atchison, Stringfellow and others were not all political buncombe. Inflammatory speech led to violent deeds: April 30, 1855, the vigilance committee at Leavenworth gave notice to Hon. William Phillips, an active free-state lawyer in that city, to leave the territory. He refused, and on the 17th day of May was taken to Weston, one side of his head shaved, stripped of his clothes, tarred and feathered, ridden on a rail for a mile and a-half, and a negro auctioneer sold him for one dollar. Stringfellow in his paper said: "Let us purge ourselves of all abolition emissaries who occupy our dominion, and give distinct notice that all who do not leave immediately for the East will leave for eternity." Lawyer Phillips was afterwards murdered in his own home, Sept. 1, 1856, by a gang of ruffians led by Ford Emery, his blood spurting upon their garments.

August 16th, 1855, Rev. Pardee Butler was placed on a log and shipped down the Missouri river. He was a free-state man. A flag was placed on the log bearing the motto: "Eastern Aid Express, Rev. Mr. Butler, Agent to the Underground R. R." Butler was told not to return. He did return and was stripped, tarred, and for want of feathers, was covered with cotton. He escaped hanging by one vote. Stringfellow in his paper, The Squatter Sovereign, Aug. 28, 1855, said: "We can tell the impertinent scoundrels of The New York Tribune that they may exhaust an ocean of ink, their Emigrant Aid Society spend their millions and billions, their representatives in Congress spout their heretical theories till doomsday. And his excellency Franklin Pierce appoint abolitionist after free soilers as governor."

Oct. 25th, 1855, Samuel Collins, free-state man killed by Patrick MacLaughlin, murderer not punished.

On the 21st day of Nov., 1855, F. M. Coleman, a pro-slavery man, shot and killed C. W. Dow, a free-state man. Dow was unarmed and passing Coleman's house on his way to Jacob Branson's with whom he lived, when Coleman came out and without provocation, save that he was a free-state man, shot him dead. This produced intense excitement and the free-state men held a meeting where Dow was killed. Branson attended the meeting; Sheriff Jones, instead of arresting Coleman for the murder of Dow, on the following night entered the hospital; this revealed the fact that she was afflicted with cancer and it was then known that there was no help for her, only to make her remaining days on earth as comfortable as possible. Everything was done for her comfort and all that medical skill and trained nurses and loving hands could do was done. She gradually failed and a remarkably strong heart had to cease its action. For a long time deceased was a great sufferer, the pain at times being more than she could bear; yet through it all she was cheerful and bright to the very last hours. Her home to her was the dearest place on earth, and she lived wholly for her family; here is where the loss will be keenly felt. The husband, sons and mother, Mrs. Martha Sawyer, have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their great affliction.

The funeral will be held from her late residence on Fairview street, on Thursday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock. Rev. F. A. Arbuckle will officiate; ladies' quartet will sing. Relatives and friends invited. Burial private.

Branson's cabin, found him in bed, arrested him at the mouth of a revolver. The only charge against Branson was that he attended the indignation meeting of the free-state men. As soon as the arrest of Branson was known a party of about fifteen free state men, led by J. B. Abbott resolved on a rescue and under cover of night intercepted sheriff Jones and his posse, and without either side firing a shot Branson was released by threats and the points of revolvers. Branson, who was very feeble and could hardly walk, was taken to Abbott's house.

Geo. Lane, who commanded the free-state forces at Lawrence, found that they were short of ammunition; he was considerably excited and said to Mrs. C. W. Brown, the wife of the proprietor of the Herald of Freedom, "I do not know what we are going to do, as we have not ammunition enough to make a show of defense." Mrs. Brown and Mrs. S. N. Wood said that they would go to Mrs. Brown's father, twelve miles distant and get a keg of powder; a horse and buggy was engaged. Early the next morning the two brave women started. They arranged a large work basket with medical books, knitting work, etc. These were placed in the rear of the buggy where they could be plainly seen. As they traveled on they were closely watched, their basket and packages examined, but they finally succeeded in reaching their destination.

They borrowed of the mother two small pillow slips, one of which Mrs. Brown tied about her person, under her outside garments. After enjoying a good dinner they started on their return. On their way they stopped at Major Abbott's, where they received a half keg of powder which had been buried in the ground, this they tied about their person, caps and cartridges, bullet molds and gun wipers were put up their sleeves, in their pockets and dress waists. The bars of lead they stood up in their stocking. Again they started homeward. Twice they were stopped and their packages examined. Two men on horse back met them and thinking that they were free-state women, threatened to shoot them unless they would surrender their team. The women told them that they had been to Mr. Burgess' a pro-slavery man, for provisions; the ruse worked, they were allowed to pass on to their homes. The anxious citizens welcomed them with cheer after cheer.

A Special Service

Next Sunday afternoon, June 28, at three o'clock, in the Presbyterian church, there will be a special service, at which Harmony Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Hillsboro, and all Masons of Antrim and vicinity, will be the special guests. Masons are requested to meet in the Selectmen's room not later than 2.45, and march to church. Public is cordially invited.

NOT TOO MANY

Though Antrim Seems to Have All She Requires

NOT many weeks ago we heard a remark which was carelessly dropped and which was substantially this: "Antrim has too many societies," meaning by this word "societies," organizations, clubs, lodges, and everything of a social, religious, fraternal, patriotic or sporty nature. Well, for a town the size of Antrim she does have a lot of societies; take for instance, all the varied organizations connected with the four churches; these if attended to as they should be would keep its membership busy most of the time. Then for a moment consider the lodge interests of the village alone; the demands upon the membership are such as to require much time in this special line of work. Consider next the patriotic societies which are today so popular; they all demand much attention to procure the best results along the lines for which they are organized. And what is said of the above special lines of activity for the betterment and proper instruction of men and women, could truthfully be said of all other "society" organizations which in themselves are good and doing much towards the uplift of humanity and the assistance of worthy members.

We would not for a single moment have our readers believe we are saying anything against the designs or workings of a single organization in town, for they all have their place, and in their way do a world of good; the ones connected with the church we think should have preference.

Possibly if Antrim had a few less "societies" she would be in better condition in some ways; yet upon careful consideration of the subject, what could be well omitted in the "society" life of our town? One person might say that if we only had the church organizations and some one fraternal society—or in this latter place one patriotic society or some club—we would get along much better; there is so much of this sort of thing in a small town with about the same certain number of individuals having about all to do in several "societies." When one stops to consider this subject from every view-point, there does not seem to be much which can be easily "cut out," even if an organization or two are not doing all its membership would wish.

Those who are not friendly to some of the different societies might say that these special ones are making a mistake and falling short of their mission, but in justice let it be said that many people in their earnest and well-meaning endeavors are misunderstood; they are working faithfully for the uplift of their fellows—their efforts will be blessed in the end. No one can truthfully say that he knows best—that would be folly of a high order—for today a man does not have to think and act just as his neighbor or some one else does or says he must in order to be a thinking man of high ideals and one able to accomplish something for his fellowman. In fact it is the wide range of thought along right lines that goes to make the world better, and the summing up of all that is good will show that although men differ in their ideas and ways of doing things, yet they have all been anxious for the best and even working along different lines have accomplished an end which will be approved by the Master Workman. This is what every honest man is working for—what "societies" are organized for—and his labors will be rewarded according to the amount of work he puts into it. Life is worth the living to anyone who does not live for self alone but does something for somebody else.

Mrs. Mary E. Curtis

Died quite suddenly on Thursday last at the home of her son, Allan F. Barker, in Nashua, as the result of a heart affection; her age was 73 years. She had gone to Nashua to attend the wedding of one grandson and the graduation of another; the excitement of the two events so near together was

RUBY-NELL'S LOVE

It Was Hard to Fathom, but Everything Came Out Just as It Should.

By M. COLUMBUS HAMILTON.
 (Copyright, 1914, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
 "A woman's ways are always a mystery," said the squire, thoughtfully, "and no mistake about it."
 "I don't understand Ruby-Nell," said Mrs. Rockwood, petulantly. "I've done all I can possibly do to persuade her to carry out her contract with Roger May, but she's as stubborn as a mule."
 "Perhaps you have done too much!" The squire chuckled as he thus mildly reproached her.
 "That's just it, my dear," interposed Mr. Rockwood. "We have been too anxious. Matters of love are best left alone."
 "Somebody said the wedding was to be this Thanksgiving day," said the squire. He looked inquiringly from one to another.
 "Why, he even had his license, squire," said Mrs. Rockwood, vehemently, "and by giving him up for that plump little city brat Ruby-Nell has crushed the heart of one of the grandest young men this community ever saw!" Mrs. Rockwood emphasized this statement with a sweeping gesture.
 "There's no doubt about that," the squire admitted. "They say Roger never speaks of it though. Not long ago some of the boys he had been running with went to him and offered to tar and feather the dude, but Roger says: 'No, boys, we have no right to interfere.'"
 "The dude is gone now these three days," said Mrs. Rockwood, after a pause. A perceptible sigh escaped her as she glimpsed the snow-clad woodland which stretched away to infinity. "Ruby-Nell has done nothing but lament for him. She has cried until her eyes are red, and she ain't et a bite in two days."
 "Are you sure, dear," said Mr. Rockwood, "that she is lamenting for the other fellow—I mean the one that left?"
 "What else can it be, James? Sister Jennie tried to coax her to make up with Roger and Ruby-Nell looked daggers at her."
 At the mention of her name Miss Jennie, the spinster sister of Mrs. Rockwood, and a recognized paragon of matchmakers, became alert. "Roger's stubborn, too," she said. "He is so polite and good, but he won't budge an inch. I told him a falsehood today, and if the expected happens there'll be an earthquake in this house to-night!"
 "La, Jennie!" exclaimed Mrs. Rockwood, removing her spectacles. The squire shifted uneasily in his chair and cleared his throat. Mr. Rockwood laid his Bible down.
 "A falsehood on Thanksgiving day?" queried the latter.
 "A lie on Thanksgiving day is about the same as on any other day. Brother Rockwood," said the squire. He really meant only to relieve the situation.
 "It's none of your business, Squire Cox. I'll give you to know!" snapped Miss Jennie. She nursed an ancient grudge against this township functionary. He had formerly been a suitor, without success, but when he was chosen justice of the peace she had offered to share his honors and he had refused.
 "Tut, tut, Jennie," said Mrs. Rockwood, raising a restraining hand. "Now tell us just what you told Roger."
 "It is a secret, and I will not tell!" declared Miss Jennie, doggedly. Miss Jennie had long been the autocrat of the Rockwood home and every one questioned the wisdom of further challenge.
 "You should remember, Jennie," said Mr. Rockwood at length, "that this is a matter in which we are quite as much interested as you are, and if you have said or done anything that will embarrass Ruby-Nell we have a perfect right to know it."
 "James Rockwood," she replied, her eyes flashing fire, "have I ever done anything to embarrass you or your family?"
 "No, no, Jennie, but—"
 "According to my way of thinking," the squire hesitated, allowing one look from the spinster to silence him.
 "But this is an occasion, and these are circumstances which have no precedent in our home," said Mr. Rockwood with gravity.
 "It is your duty," said Mrs. Rockwood, sternly, "to be a actin' fair and square, to tell us what you told Roger, and you've got to do it!"
 A sharp click was heard at the door leading into Ruby-Nell's room, and the little group at once became all ears. Ruby-Nell entered and stepped lightly to her aunt, whose distorted face still smothered in her apron folds.

doubtless too much for her. She had resided in town many years, had made many friends, and was highly respected by all who knew her. She had membership in the Presbyterian church, where she was a faithful member, and was connected with the Woman's Relief Corps, which organization attended the funeral in a body.
 While Mrs. Curtis has had a heart affection for some years, a contributing cause of death was hardening of the arteries.
 The remains were brought to Antrim for the funeral services on Saturday at the Presbyterian church, her pastor, Rev. F. A. Arbuckle, officiating. Interment at North Branch cemetery.
 Deceased leaves to mourn the loss three sons, Willis A., Allan F. and Eugene L. Barker, Nashua, two daughters, Mrs. Frank J. Willson and Mrs. Will C. Hills of Antrim, and one sister, Mrs. F. O. Clement of Manchester, besides grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mr. E. H. Calvert, leading man of an eastern stock company, has had varied experience, having played both comedy and drama. He first entered the theatrical profession thirteen years ago. His first part was Captain Hoxman in "Arizona," and he played Messala in "Ben Hur." He played a season in stock at Portland, Maine, season in Pittsburgh, and in "Lady From Lane's," "Coming Through the Rye," "Knight for a Day," and "House of a Thousand Candles," with E. H. Holland. He spent three years in vaudeville, then retired and joined a film manufacturing company. His ability to portray various characters has won for him a host of admirers.

Not Attracted by Pictures

Maurice Costello, who is appearing in "Mr. Barnes of New York," which is being presented at New York, saw his first motion picture in more than two years on the occasion of the opening of this play. Strange as it may seem, Mr. Costello does not care either for motion pictures or the theater, and never did, yet he was an actor in the theater for many years prior to entering the realms of the screen. After the performance, when asked what he thought of the pictures, he replied that he did not know, as practically all his attention had been riveted on the organist.

This Kidney Remedy a Great Healer

Am sixty-two years of age and able to work every day. I attribute my cure to the use of your Swamp-Root.

"Come with me, aunty," she said. "It's no use," said Mrs. Rockwood; "it's no use trying to coerce Jennie. She was always that headstrong!" "Let us leave the matter with the Lord," said Mr. Rockwood, opening again the well-worn Bible.

"Have the boys chunk up the fires. James," said Mrs. Rockwood, rising, "and I will go and help Mary with the turkey. We'll not let these fusses interfere with our Thanksgiving, what little of it there is left."

"It's a new idea, Sister Rockwood," said the squire, jovially. "We don't hear of Thanksgiving supper very often. It's mostly always Thanksgiving dinner. I celebrate twice today. How does that come?"

"It's Jennie's doin's. Just ask her why she did it."

Twilight, with its chores and busy preparations in the kitchen had passed, and deep, dense, snow-bedriven night had settled over the Rockwood household. A few guests had arrived, each offering upon the threshold some cheery word of greeting, and soon the clatter of voices around the great fire arose.

The neighborhood knew well the history of Ruby-Nell and Roger May, their expected marriage on this very day, and the strained relations which now existed between them, and of course no one alluded to either, or offered a word of comment on the apparent absence of Ruby-Nell.

Mrs. Rockwood, in her eagerness to arrange just to taste the sumptuous supper, had almost forgotten the afternoon's experiences; but her husband's face was clouded.

Nervous Miss Jennie divided her time between the guests and the dining room, glancing with a shudder occasionally at the old-fashioned clock.

At a moment when there was no human sound there came a knock—a steady, meaningful knock—at the door. Miss Jennie hesitated, clutching nervously at the hem of her apron. A step forward and another backward, a crimson countenance which she strove futilely to hide from the questioning scrutiny of her friends aroused the alert squire, who bethought him to play the gallant, for here was an opportunity not to be slighted. He advanced to her side and tilted his bald head significantly. She pointed to the door and turned away. Proud, proud for many a long day in the years which followed was the squire of the office she assigned him, for when he opened the door the blast ushered in Roger May!

The guests were speechless, congealed by an icier influence than that of the wintry night—a presence which they could not look upon in any other light under the circumstances, than that of an intruder. They riveted their eyes upon the white, manly face before them, which though drawn and grief-stricken showed not a trace of embarrassment or fear.

A door groaned with startling loudness, and Ruby-Nell, with tear-stained cheek and disheveled hair, came forward and stood for a moment in silence. Mrs. Rockwood had appeared in the dining room doorway and stopped, amazed beyond expression. Roger advanced toward Ruby-Nell.

"I came by your appointment, Ruby-Nell," he said.

"My appointment?" There was genuine surprise in her tones.

"I was told—" he said, as his countenance fell. "I understood—that—that you cared to see me. . . of course . . . it is perfectly . . . all right, Ruby-Nell, but—" A disheartened smile played for an instant on his features as instinctively he glanced at Miss Jennie.

He readily perceived where the trouble lay, but it was not for him to mar the effect of good intention. He turned to withdraw, but paused at the door as if something had been left unsaid. "It is all right," he repeated, "only I hate to have intruded."

Ruby-Nell involuntarily stretched forth her arms. "Roger!" she screamed, and the next moment she was sobbing in his arms, muttering incoherently words of penitence and love. "I knew I was doing you wrong," she was saying, "but I loved you, Roger, and you alone. I have—have suffered too, oh, oh so much! It seems to me that all should be forgiven! Tell me, tell me you love me and forgive me!"

Above the roar of the winds, above the clatter of voices, the squire's piping accents were heard. "I knowed something was going to happen! Brother Rockwood, shake! Roger, have you got them licenses with you? Have you got them? Give them right here to me!"

POLICEMAN WAS A DIPLOMAT

Officer Threatens to Return Baseball Pass Unless Charlie Comiskey Drives His Car Slower.

Charles Comiskey, who runs the White Sox ball club in Chicago, is widely acquainted in that big town and in his day has been lavish with passes to his ball park.

Last year he gave a season pass to a young man he had helped to an appointment on the Chicago police force. Soon after this Comiskey was pushing his automobile a bit beyond the speed limit up Michigan boulevard and was stopped by a policeman. The policeman opened the door of the car and saw Comiskey sitting inside.

"Hello, Bill!" said Comiskey. "How are you getting along since I got you your job on the force?"

The policeman coughed and stutered. Finally he said:

"Look here, Charlie; you'll have to go slower with this car of yours or I'll have to give back my pass!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Welfare Work.

"Have you any part of an automobile that you don't want?"

"I might give you an old tire. What's the idea?"

"You know how our grandmothers used to make crazy quilts for the needy?"

"Yes."

"On the same principle I am trying to assemble an automobile for a poor woman who has none."

A Breezy Western Story.

A lariat tightly binding his legs, the crazy steer was at last brought to earth by the ranchman.

"Humph!" it grunted, endeavoring unsuccessfully to rise. "Now I know where the idea for the modern skirt came from."

Indeed, the steer's efforts to walk were as funny as those of some women.—Puck.

Her Suspicion.

Mrs. Styles—John, I wish you would take me to the opera tonight.

Mr. Styles—I can't, dear. I have an engagement to go and see Julius Caesar.

"John, I do hope that isn't one of those men you played poker with the other night!"

The Once Over.

Bill—Hear that story about George Washington throwing a dollar across the Potomac river?

Jill—Yes, I heard it. But what do you suppose he was trying to do?

"Only trying to put one over, I guess."

THE PITY OF IT.

"It must be a lot of satisfaction to catch a whopper like that one."

"Not a bit. I haven't a camera with me, and not a soul would ever believe it!"

Something Explained.

Church—Gee! This paper says that women spend 90 per cent of $10,000,000,000 annually in the United States for food, clothing and shelter.

Gothaw—Now do you wonder what becomes of your pay envelope?

FILMS AND CHILDREN

British Opinion Concerning Much-Discussed Subject.

Educator Makes Declaration That the Influence of Proper Motion Pictures is Decidedly Elevating to the Youngsters.

In view of statements sometimes printed in which the responsibility for the acts of juvenile delinquents is laid on motion picture shows some facts bearing on the matter which have just appeared in the London Telegraph are of interest.

Sir Francis Blake, chairman of the Northumberland education committee, has made a special study of the matter. He recently presided at the opening of a new picture theater in Newcastle. In his address he praised the influence of motion pictures very highly and stated that the film theater is a notable feature of modern life and one of great importance.

Another comment on the influence of pictures and the rule proposed by certain self-appointed reformers was made by William J. Pringle, chief constable of Blackpool. Mr. Pringle says:

"I venture to suggest that were any statistics available on the subject, cinematograph exhibitors would only be accountable for a very small percentage of juvenile depravity and crime. If you think of excluding children from the cheap and entertaining pastime of watching pictures, you must consider what they will do instead. When you are satisfied that their homes and the street corners they frequent are healthier, morally and physically, and more comfortable than picture halls, exclude them by all means. I am, however, inclined to regard the suggested cure as worse than the malady. So long as the programs at picture halls are decent, and the halls themselves are clean, well-ventilated and satisfactorily lighted and conducted, and children of tender years are allowed to resort there under proper guardianship during reasonable hours, neither their minds nor their bodies are likely to suffer very seriously in consequence."

Miss Marguerite Clayton has every qualification for success, and has already "Made Good."

SURE TO MAKE BIG NAME

Miss Marguerite Clayton has every qualification for success, and has already "Made Good."

Miss Clayton enjoys the distinction of playing opposite that popular idol of the "movie" fan, G. M. Anderson. None of her predecessors have created a more favorable impression than she.

She is unique in her wonderful success in the pictures, as previous to her association with her present company, she has had no experience whatever in any kind of stage work that counts. But what she lacks in experience, Miss Clayton makes up in brains, and though her physical attractions are self-evident, she doesn't rely on them alone for a moment. She is a hard and very earnest worker and takes both herself and her work with tremendous seriousness. Marguerite joined the company about six months ago in answer to an advertisement, which as it turned out, was one of the best investments at nominal cost on record. Her parents live in Utah, and her father is a wealthy retired mining engineer. Miss Clayton will make a big name for herself in pictures. She has a personality as agreeable and refreshing as her looks and her work.

English Photoplays.

James McEnnery of the McEnnery syndicate, London, arrived at Chicago recently from abroad, bringing with him a number of photoplays for exploitation in this country. Among them are "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," "A Blind Man's Secret," "Kleptomaniac" and "For Love and the Crown." These plays are announced to be shown in that city soon.

To Show Amazon Scenes.

Anthony Fiata, noted explorer, who accompanied Theodore Roosevelt on part of his trip through the Amazon region of South America, has several thousand feet of motion pictures, taken on that trip and saved from the bottom of the Amazon, which will be offered in the motion pictures soon.

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo. — "I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it? Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

PRINCESS BEDR'S RING
 By CLARISSA MACKIE.
 Miss Whiton looked rather bored when her mother suggested that they spend their second day in Cairo at the pyramids of Gizeh.
 "Mother, the pyramids are tiresome," said Paula irritably. "We have seen them a dozen times within my recollection. It is much more interesting to sit here on the terrace and watch the crowds."
 Mrs. Whiton laughed comfortably. "Well, do as you please, Paula; but, as this is Eve's first visit to Egypt, I am going to take her out to see the Sphinx and the pyramids."
 Paula smiled tolerantly on her cousin. Eve Raymond was enthusiastic and quite unsophisticated in spite of her twenty years.
 When the morning came and Eve Raymond and her guardian aunt had departed in a carriage for the pyramids, Paula went out on the terrace and looked at the passing crowds.
 A sweet-faced, elderly lady walking on the hotel terrace caught a glimpse of Paula's beautiful profile and came up to her chair.
 "It really is Paula Whiton!" cried the newcomer cordially.
 Paula jumped up and held out both hands. "Dear Mrs. Long! I am so glad to see you! This is the most charming surprise—tell me, when did you come?"
 Mrs. Long sat down besides Paula's chair and told the smiling girl that they had arrived the night before from a trip to Luxor.
 "You know Jack is an inveterate relic hunter, and despite the fact that he did not arrive until late last evening he is off this morning to the pyramids—what he expects to find there in that thoroughly harrowed field, I can't imagine!"
 Paula bit her lips. It was vexatious indeed when she had remained at home in the hope of meeting Jack Long, to discover that he, too, had gone to that hackneyed spot which Eve had been chattering about for several weeks.
 "Oh, Aunt Felice, look at the darling bracelets!" cried Eve enthusiastically after she had exhausted her delight in the wonders of the plain of Gizeh.
 Mrs. Whiton looked indulgently at the dark-skinned Arab who was offering his tray of bizarre jewelry to her niece.
 "The ring of the Princess Bedr—her bring fortune to one who wears it," urged the peddler eagerly. "Love comes to one who possesses the ring as love comes to the most beautiful of Egyptian princesses; 'twas found buried in sand at the feet of the Sphinx."
 As they visited other points of interest, Eve thought again of the ring of the Princess Bedr and of the charm it was said to hold for the unloved.
 "It might be true, after all. Who knows?" she argued to herself, so, on their way back to Cairo, when they passed the white-clad peddler with his tray of ornaments, Eve stopped the carriage and dismounting, ran after the man.
 To her dismay, just as she reached Ahmed, another person hurried breathlessly up to the peddler.
 "I want the ring of the Princess Bedr!" cried Eve impulsively, and as the newcomer drew back out of hearing she brought forth her purse and paid the price demanded by Ahmed.
 Eve showed the ring of the Princess Bedr to Mrs. Whiton and made her promise not to tell Paula the magic of it.
 That evening Eve Raymond was introduced to Jack Long on the terrace at Sheppard's hotel. In five minutes Jack found himself telling Eve all about his collection of Egyptian antiquities.
 "Of course I know half the junk is faked," he admitted naively; "but it's rather fun, you know, to fancy it's all right and to dream dreams about the people of those other days—don't you think so?"
 Eve nodded. "I understand; I suppose that is why I bought the ring of the Princess Bedr," she confessed.
 "The ring of the Princess Bedr?" he echoed.
 "The man called it that—of course I knew it couldn't be genuine—but I liked to imagine it might be!" Eve held out her left hand and displayed the ring of the Princess Bedr on the third finger. The orange eyes glowed dully.
 Jack Long laughed indulgently. He held out his own left hand and there on the little finger was the duplicate of Eve's ring.
 "I also fell a victim to the charms of Princess Bedr's ring—"

ELIMINATE 'TWO SPADES' BID
 Portland Club of London Issues an Auction Bridge Manifesto That Will Cause Argument.
 The Portland club of London is planning a wholesale reform of the game officially known as royal spades auction bridge.
 The card committee of that august body—which lays down the law for all well regulated British players—has now been cogitating the revision of "auction" rules for some two months. The most important decision has already been reached. That is to eliminate the American two-point count for spades altogether and let spades stand at their value as royals, nine points. As a matter of fact, our complicated American schemes for signaling by means of the spade bids have not made much headway abroad. The Portland club rule will therefore register the prevailing practise.
 Nevertheless, loud protests are already being heard in London against the rumored decision, and whether such a change will be followed here is extremely doubtful. Some standardization of the game would be well received. As things go at present, with new bids arriving hourly, to say nothing of such devices as "nullos," only the daily devotees can pretend to keep pace with the game. A little rest would be welcome to all. But standardization without the small spade bid is another matter. Auction has made its way by reason of its science, and any increase in the element of uncertainty will probably have hard sledding.
 For about three weeks after marriage every woman thinks her husband is smarter than any other man of her acquaintance.
What They'll Retain.
 Bacon—I see, according to a German scientist, in 3,000 years all men will be bald, although women will retain their hair.
 Egbert—The idea! Do you suppose those pink and green wigs will last as long as that?
The Favored One.
 "There's a gentleman in the parlor, sir," said the maid.
 "Did he give you his name, Katie?" asked the man of the house.
 "Oh, no, sir; but I think it's the one who wants to give his name to your daughter, sir."
Bruce McRae a Recruit.
 Bruce McRae will shortly make his first appearance in motion pictures. He will be seen in the production of "The Ring and the Man," by Cyrus Townsend Braly. He will take the role of Gormley, the man who fights against a powerful political ring.
 The use of the roe of salmon and other American fish for the making of American caviar is growing rapidly, and as a result what at one time was a very serious waste has been turned into an excellent and valuable food. The principal difference between this caviar and the Russian caviar is, that the Russian article is made principally out of sturgeon roe, while excellent American caviar is made from salmon roe, white fish roe, and the roes of other fish that are handled on a large commercial scale as well as from sturgeon roe. This caviar is made in the same manner as the Russian caviar. The roe of the fish is pressed through screens which allow the eggs to pass, but hold back all the membrane and the egg sacks. These eggs are then packed in a large quantity of salt which draws some of the water and other substances from them. They are then canned or boxed and put on the market.
 American caviar, the specialists of the department of agriculture advise, should be sold for just what it is and labeled to show the name of the fish from which the roe is taken, for example, American caviar from the Pacific salmon should be labeled "Salmon Caviar"; and that made from white fish should be called "White Fish Caviar."
 It is believed that the American caviar industry can develop a big sale of the product on its own merits, and should offer it as an article that its American makers are proud to acknowledge, rather than as an imitation of an imported article.

Summer Pleasures without Summer Discomforts! Indoors it's sticky and moist. On the porch it's cool—when the Vudors are down.

Why not eat, sleep, live there this summer? Thousands do it. The cool air gives appetite and forces you to dreamless sleep because it bathes the nerves while you sleep. It cures them. Vudor Porch Shades cost little. They give air but keep out glare. You can look out through Vudors, but not in through them. They last—they keep "that new look," for they're stained, not painted, nor dipped.
