Selected Poem

Morning Prayer

Oh, may I be strong and brave, today,
And may I be kind and true,
And greet all men in a gracious way,
With frank good cheer in the things I say,
And love in the deeds I do.

May the simple heart of a child be mine,
And the grace of a rose in bloom,
Let me fill the day with a hope divine
And turn my face to the sky's glad shine,
With never a cloud of gloom.

With the golden lovers of love and light
I would lift the world, and when,
Through a path with kindly deeds made bright,
I come to the calm of the starlit night,
Let me rest in peace. Amen.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

Young Man From Winchendon, Mass., Died After Being Injured

A frightful auto accident occurred last Thursday night at the entrance to the covered bridge on the road between Bennington and Antrim. A seven passenger Packard car said to be loaded with more than its capacity en route from Winchendon, Mass., to Hillsboro, to attend a dance, skidded just before entering the bridge. Charles W. Morlock of Winchendon was riding on the running board on the right side of the car and when the machine swerved to the right and hit the railing and side of the bridge with great force, Mr. Morlock received a part of the force of the impact on the lower part of his body. Both legs were broken in several places and he also received internal injuries.

The injured man was placed in the auto and taken as quickly as possible to the office of Dr. A. A. Chesnutt on Depot street; Dr. Chesnutt summoned Dr. Grimes from Hillsboro to assist him with the case. Although everything possible was done, Mr. Morlock died within two hours after the fatal accident.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morlock of Winchendon, Mass., and was 17 years, 11 months and 10 days old. The parents were notified, and James J. Hunt, an undertaker from that town, was here Friday morning and took the remains by auto to Winchendon for funeral services and burial.

The car was driven by Allen White and was considerably damaged in the collision; the party was composed of all men. The accident was doubtless due to the car being overloaded and attempting to take the curve at too high a rate of speed. One of the other passengers received injuries on the head and shoulders, and all narrowly escaped serious injuries and possible death if the car had broken through the side of the bridge and fallen to the rocks below.

Second Annual Picnic

The second annual picnic of the White Birch Point Improvement Association and the Antrim Board of Trade was held Saturday at Gregg lake. It was a town affair and very largely attended. The committees from the Association and from the Board of Trade worked together for the success of the day and have every reason to feel proud of their efforts.

In the forenoon there were swimming and canoe races, diving exhibitions and quoits. The basket lunch was enjoyed at noon at Thayer's grove at the Point. In the afternoon, there were various athletic sports with prizes for each.

GAVE RECEPTION

To Pastor and Bride of the Centre Church

A reception was given on Tuesday evening last to Rev. Charles F. Jones and bride, at the Antrim Centre Congregational church, of which he is the pastor.

The church was attractively decorated with evergreen, crepe paper and flowers. Dea. John E. Tenney and Dea. Charles F. Holt and wife assisted in receiving. The ushers were Misses Bertha Merrill, Amy Butterfield and Kate Brooks.

In behalf of those present, Arthur L. Smith presented the pastor and wife with a purse of money. Remarks were made by Rev. G. B. VanBuskirk and Rev. F. A. Arbuckle, pastors of two of the village churches.

A feature of the evening's program was a farce entitled "A Musical Romance." Mrs. G. A. Sawyer was the pianist, and the various parts in the cast were taken by young people of the society.

A social season followed the reception, during which ice cream and cake were served.

Made Rapid Progress

Never in the history of the world has a war involving so many millions of people and so many Nations been begun and waged with such suddenness and swiftness as the present German-Russian-French mix up.

This whole war, only about two weeks old, dates back to June 28, when the heir to the throne of Austria, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, and his wife, were assassinated by an obscure Serbian in Bosnia, this being a province taken from Turkey.

Austria blamed Serbia and the Servian patriotic societies for the assassination and demanded an apology, the suppression of the patriotic societies, the arrest of the officers of these societies and their trial by Austrian army officers. The reply was not satisfactory to Austria; so with great rapidity Nation followed Nation till the present great war is on.

It seems that what the Nations were waiting for was for somebody to start something. It is hoped that e'er long peace will be declared with the same degree of swiftness.

Death of Gov. Smith

John B. Smith, governor of New Hampshire in 1898 and 1894, died at his home in Hillsboro Monday after a long illness. His age was 78 years. Gov. Smith was prominent in business for many years as owner of the Contoocook mills in his town, and was president of the Hillsboro Savings bank at the time of his death. A wife and two sons survive him. Funeral Thursday from Smith Memorial church.

A ten per cent average reduction in interstate express rates has been prepared by the public service commission and promised to go into effect Sept. 1.

A COVETED POSITION

How a Queen Selects Her Maids of Honor.

Candidate Must Possess Many Accomplishments—Woman Who Attends Royalty Has Many Privileges and a Courtesy Title.

Dating back to the end of the sixteenth century, when James I appointed four "damsels of clean birth and good breeding" to attend on his consort under the direction of a "dowager of discretion"—a person often called "the mother of maids," a post long since abolished—the position of maid of honor is a much coveted one. Indeed, the Hon. Sybil Cadogan, who has just been appointed a maid of honor by Queen Mary, was one of over 100 girls who were hopefully waiting to be chosen to fill the vacancy, says London Tit-Bits.

The privileges and advantages attached to the position are many, but a maid of honor must of necessity be an exceedingly accomplished young woman. In the first place, she must be a granddaughter of a peer, if not nearer in blood; for, unless some special provision is made, the office cannot be held by any one below that rank. Secondly, she must be a good linguist, not only because of the foreigners she will meet at court but because she will be called upon to deal with some of her majesty's private correspondence.

Her conversational powers must be considerably above the average, brightness and vivacity, too, being a distinct recommendation. A talent for music and singing and an ability to read aloud with clearness and expression are also qualities which are taken into account in appointing a maid of honor.

Above all, however, a candidate must be a model of discretion and tact, who avoids gossip as she would the plague. To a maid of honor court secrets are a closed book. It is a rule that she must not keep a diary, which recalls the witty reply of one maid, who, when a female acquaintance remarked that if she were a maid of honor she would keep a secret diary, promptly said:

"Then you would no longer be a maid of honor."

One of the curious privileges of the post of maid of honor when in waiting is that of being allowed to wear a charming miniature of the queen set in diamonds on the left shoulder. This ornament, which bears the date of the coronation at the back, is surmounted by a flat bow of red and white ribbon, and when the owner is in waiting is worn on the left side of the corsage, like a decoration. But at other times it can be worn as a brooch or a pendant.

A maid of honor is not expected to give up her badge when she marries or if she resigns her post, but may retain it to the end of her life, and would wear it on any future occasion when she happened to find herself in the presence of their majesties.

The courtesy title of "honorable" is also hers, whether single or married, until the end of her existence. This title is only bestowed upon a maid of honor a few days before she takes up her new appointment. She receives a formal letter from the lord chamberlain intimating that the sovereign deems it advisable that this style and title should be afforded her, and that she will henceforth be known under this designation.

Every one may not know that a maid of honor is expected to have a home of her own in London when the court is at Buckingham palace. A royal carriage is, however, sent every morning to convey her to the scene of her duties.

The usual rule is for a maid of honor to be in close attendance upon the queen from ten to eleven o'clock in the morning, until four or five o'clock in the afternoon, and again in the evening every day for two months in the year, the position carrying with it an allowance of £400 per annum. The late Queen Victoria had eight maids, but the number was reduced to four by Queen Alexandra and is maintained by Queen Mary.

Actress Also Ventriloquist.
Billie Rhodes, an actress, counts a wonderful ventriloquistic ability among her many accomplishments.

AIDING THE FARMER

Moving Pictures Used by Department of Agriculture.

Used to Show Progressive Methods and Authorities Are Convinced They Are Destined to Do a Great Work.

Moving pictures are being used to instruct farmers throughout the United States in progressive methods of agriculture. They are being presented together with explanatory lectures by officials of the department of agriculture. At the same time private lecturers in the employ of motion-picture companies, but working with the approval and co-operation of the department, are talking to farmers north, south, east and west, and with the aid of pictures are also showing them just how to obtain the best results. It is believed that this new method of demonstration will be vastly more effective than the old plan of distributing printed bulletins conveying the same information.

The importance to the country at large of this new work of the department of agriculture must appeal to the imagination of everyone. The scope of what the department may be able to accomplish in the way of providing subjects for the moving-picture plan of education is almost unlimited. Not only does the department itself demonstrate by direct appeal to the eye what improvements are possible to agriculturists and stockmen, but it broadens its field by aiding private moving-picture concerns to present its films for the benefit of the public in cities and towns, as well as in rural districts. Educational institutions such as agricultural colleges, universities and public schools are to be provided with films.

At present the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture is using six moving-picture films in connection with the lectures of its demonstrators and field workers, who travel from place to place instructing producers in the best and most progressive methods of raising stock and preventing cattle disease. Proper methods of dairying and the shipping of milk and other cattle products are also included in this educational movement.

How a Ship Passes Gatun.

A vessel passing through the locks of the Panama canal will have all its movements controlled in much the same manner that the movements of a train are controlled in entering a complicated railroad terminal, states Popular Mechanics. At Gatun, Pedro Miguel and Miraflores an operator standing before a control board will open and close the gates, fill and empty the lock chambers, and perform every other operation necessary for letting a ship through, simply by throwing a succession of switches, and will know at any instant just what is happening in the locks without ever having to look beyond the indications shown on the board before him. Furthermore, the mechanism is so interlocked that it will be impossible for him to set any machine in motion except in the proper order and at the proper time. The triple flight of locks at Gatun extends for a distance of 8,200 feet, while the operating machinery is scattered over about 4,000 feet of this distance. This is all controlled from a board 64 feet long, which is virtually a miniature of the locks and the operating machinery, and is located in an operating tower at the foot of the upper flight of docks.

Last of Famous Company.

Cleo Madison, leading woman with the Gold Seal company, has been invited by Walter Brookins, veteran aviator, to accompany him on a passenger-carrying altitude flight. Brookins is the only survivor of the original corps of Wright flyers. With Ralph Johnstone, Arch Hoxsey, Phil Parmelee and Galbraith P. H. Jones, he first demonstrated the flying capabilities of the Wright machines. All the others have been killed.

NET AROUND WORLD

Navy's Wireless Reaches Every Point in Seven Seas.

Warship and Shore Equipment Flashes Weather Reports and Warning of Storms That Are Land and Ocean Perils.

Washington.—Capt. W. H. G. Bullard, in charge of the naval radio service, who has his headquarters under the shadow of three great steel masts which form the center of the naval wireless system at Arlington, Va., seven miles from Washington, has presented to the Naval Institute an interesting review of the development of naval telegraphy.

The leaps and bounds of this development are brought pointedly to notice when it is recalled that during the Spanish-American war such a thing as wireless telegraphy was unfound in the United States navy, or any other navy.

It was in 1899 that the British navy became the first to try the new means of communication upon the three warships Alexandria, Europa and Juno. These ships succeeded in communicating up to a distance of 74 miles.

Today practically every vessel in the United States navy is equipped with apparatus for this aerial communication, and it is so successfully operated that there is scarcely a point in the seven seas at which the bigger battleships would be out of touch, through relay, with the three great masts towering over Captain Bullard's headquarters at Arlington.

The first trial of wireless on American warships was made late in 1899. Within six years more than thirty more ships were equipped and 50 shore stations established or projected. Meanwhile, in the spring of 1905, the naval system inaugurated what have proved valuable daily features of its service—flashing the noon time signal, storm warnings and other meteorological observations.

In 1907-08 the development of the wireless seemed to warrant the erection of high-powered stations at Washington, on the Pacific coast, at Hawaii, Guam, Samoa and the Philippines, so that, wherever it might be, the United States fleet would at all times be in communication with Washington.

The success of long-distance communication was established in 1908, when the Hawaiian islands exchanged extension to take the place of interrupted land lines and for exchanges with the ships.

There are now 48 naval shore stations, those at outside points being three along the Panama canal, one at Guantanamo bay, Cuba; one at San Juan, Porto Rico; seven in Alaska and outlying islands, two in the Philippines, one at Hawaii, one at Guam and one at Peking, with other projected stations in Samoa and elsewhere rapidly nearing completion.

Incoming ships are compelled, under the London safety convention, to report information concerning ice and derelicts; this goes through the hydrographic offices to the Arlington station, and then seaward and to other stations.

This information, being of an urgent character—icebergs, derelicts, cyclones and typhoons—is sent under a special signal, called the safety signal, repeated at short intervals, ten times at full power—(T. T. T.). On receiving this all radio stations are required to keep silent in order to let the danger warning go broadcast.

More recent developments of the naval wireless work are the fog signals and direction finders, by which the dangers attending fog are overcome.

OBJECTS TO DEBATE RULE.

The rule of debate, oftentimes applied in the house, limiting a speaker's time, does not meet with the approval of Representative Walsh of New Jersey, who thinks such a short-time speech utterly valueless.

"It is impossible for a man to say anything worth while on any subject worth while in such a limited space of time," he criticized. "A speaker with a head full of ideas upon the subject vainly tries to get in a word on each one into his five minutes. The result is a befogged intellectual patchwork that looks—or sounds—like a mental crazy-quilt. His speech is, generally, about as edifying and coherent as the small boy's composition under somewhat similar circumstances.

"Johnnie," said teacher, "write a composition on Patrick Henry and make it just as short as you can. Put in something about everything that happened to him in his life—but be sure to make it short. Don't forget that, Johnnie, make it just as short as you can."

"And Johnnie, bound by this restriction, after half an hour's arduous toil, handed teacher the following:

"Patrick Henry was born in Virginia. He was an eminent lawyer. He married a wife and said: 'Give me liberty or give me death!'"

GREAT COFFEE DRINKERS.

During the year 1913 the United States imported $52,529,498 pounds of coffee, having an entry value of nearly $105,000,000. To the average reader this may not appear very startling, but a little calculation will bring to mind the significance of these figures. One pound of finely ground coffee will make no less than three gallons of a reasonably strong beverage. Our 1913 imports, therefore, made at least 2,357,500,000 gallons. A standard gallon contains 231 cubic inches, or putting it a little differently, would fill a cylindrical coffee pot seven inches in diameter and six inches high. The coffee imported in 1913 would therefore fill a cylindrical seven inches in diameter and 342,357 miles high. Could such a cylinder be erected it would be necessary to take care not to build it in the direction of the moon's orbit around the earth, for that satellite's average distance from our planet being but 238,500 miles, it might knock off from the top of our extended coffee pot some 2,324 miles. Were the cylinder flexible and the base well anchored, however, it might topple over and wrap itself nearly ten times around the earth at the equator. All of which is mentioned merely to show that we drink some coffee in this country.

The Beautiful Cypress.

Of all the trees in America the cypress is in summer the most beautiful. Ever fresh and green, its tiny leaflets resemble the choicest ferns. Young, it is a thing of charm; mature, it becomes majestic, towering, with a long, straight, thick trunk, which makes the best of durable lumber. It is a tree of rapid growth. It is hardy anywhere in the corn belt, and southward it has no insect enemies or diseases. A man could plant a cypress tree in his lawn, enjoy its wonderful presence during his life, and his son might cut it and with the proceeds send the grandson to college for a year. What other tree will afford shade, add beauty and make fine lumber at the same time? Cypress trees transplant easily, though they should be mulched the first year and looked after occasionally. Once established, they are able to forage for themselves. Cypress leaves have been found uncharred in blocks of coal deep down in the earth.—Breeder's Gazette.

NORTH BRANCH

There will be a Lawn Party and Food Sale Friday afternoon and evening by the W. R. C. at Monument square, Antrim. Band Concert in the evening.

The village has been flooded with visitors the past week, every family receiving its compliment; among them we notice: D. P. Bryer and wife, Walter Bryer and two children; the Coles from Keene; Miss Louise S. Flint, Frank Flint and wife of Belkows Falls, Vt.; Wm. Lovell and wife of Watertown, Mass.; and new arrivals at Hillside.

Through the exertions of Mrs. Hunt, Mr. Flint and Mr. Caughey and his gang of Italians, the unsightly old trees and decaying brush have been removed and burned along the banks of the river and flowage; it certainly looks better and must prove a big benefit sanitarily. There are other places that might be improved.

Harry Drake and son Hollis showed their skill in fishing last Saturday afternoon, by catching a good string; among them a 4 lb. pickerel, 27 in. long—by weight and measure, not by guess work.

Rev. F. A. Arbuckle held service at the chapel on Sunday afternoon.

More autos passed through the village Sunday than ever before.

U. S. WITHOUT MERCHANT MARINE

War in Europe Likely to Impair Our Productive Capacity Because We Have Long Neglected Our Merchant Marine. Danger of the Remedy Proposed by the President.

A war of the magnitude of that which threatens in Europe is an embarrassment even to neutral nations, but its effect upon the United States is likely to be peculiarly serious because we are dependent upon foreign ships for our over-seas carrying trade. Ninety-two per cent of the steamships sailing from our shores to foreign ports, and ninety-eight per cent of the steamships sailing from here to Europe are under foreign flag, all likely to be withdrawn from the merchant service if the war in Europe becomes general. For sixty years efforts have been made to revive our merchant marine, seriously impaired by our Civil War, but the refusal of our Government to meet foreign competition with the same kind of support that has given to foreign ship owners the monopoly of the ocean carrying trade has seen our merchant marine, except in the coastwise service, dwindle into insignificance. We are dependent upon Europe and Asia for materials used in our manufacturing and upon the markets of the world to sell our surplus products. In spite of all warnings that have been given, we now find ourselves without the ocean transportation essential to the life and prosperity of our industries.

Revival of Merchant Marine Defeated. Only a decade or so ago, strenuous efforts were made in Congress to revive our merchant marine, but the hostility of the Democratic party to subsidies, and the indifference of the South and certain parts of the Central West to the importance of a country being independent in its carrying trade defeated these efforts. Every nation of the world that has engaged in foreign commerce, except the United States, has built up its ocean-bound shipping by means of subsidies. In refusing to give American capital encouragement in a field where on equal terms American enterprise has shown itself able to excel, we now find ourselves in our present deplorable condition. The responsibility for our present embarrassment rests upon the party that has persistently refused to come to the aid of our merchant marine.

A Dangerous Remedy. An emergency measure has been introduced in Congress at the suggestion of President Wilson, opening the doors more widely to American registry of foreign ships in an effort to remedy Democratic default of the past. This measure in the words of the Boston Herald, is likely to prove "a delusion and a disappointment" even if it does not lead to a catastrophe. Such transfers of merchant vessels from a foreign to a neutral flag after war has begun are looked upon with suspicion by belligerents. They are condemned by all the rules of international law. Our laws already permit the honest registration of foreign ships less than five years old, properly inspected and certified as seaworthy, but the extraordinary bill before Congress which President Wilson endorses removes these safeguards and suspends the prudent requirement that the principal officers of a naturalized ship shall be American citizens. Of this measure now before Congress the Boston Herald says:

Premiums on Foreign Ships. This proposition which the South and West have framed and the President favors puts an actual premium upon the use of foreign ships as against American ships, under the American flag, in the ocean trade of the United States. It is only these foreign ships that on hoisting the American flag are relieved from the requirement to carry well-paid American officers and to comply with our inspection laws. Is there another nation in Christendom, except this our own, where such a scheme could be introduced by a national administration without instantly and utterly destroying it?

Would Be Confiscated. There can be no reasonable doubt that a foreign vessel offered by foreigners, governed only by foreign inspection and registered in the name of a suddenly created Jersey corporation would be seized and confiscated, ship and cargo, wherever found. In spite of the fact that a brand new American flag—the only real American object aboard—was flying at the masthead, deception would inevitably bring disaster. The only American ships that are going to be respected in this terrific world-staking conflict are the ships that were American before the war began.

Ships Available. There are such ships—there are many of them—mostly in the coastwise trade; many owned in Boston and offered by thorough-going Yankee sailors from Maine and Massachusetts Bay. Why should not these real American ships have a chance to carry western wheat and southern cotton? Why should "whitewashed" foreign tramps be encouraged to steal the flag and rob them of this neutral business? This is not the way to seize the present opportunity to create an American merchant marine. It is the way to destroy it.

Would Involve Us in War. Nothing is more inevitable than that, if Congress adopts this back-stairs method of securing foreign ships, condemned by international law and morality, it will involve the United States in this awful war before a month has ended. No belligerent navy will honor a stolen flag. There are German cruisers hovering on our coast and in the West Indies hunting French and British liners. Will the power that rushed through Luxembourg and Belgium halt because a familiar Royal Mail or a Messageries Maritimes steamer is masquerading under the stars and stripes? A quick broadside, a sunken ship, a wild cry for revenge, would be the answer. Our export and import trade is important—but it is still more important that the United States should be honest, with the world in arms.

Being True to Nature.

The lady had been out shopping. She returned home with a handsome sable scarf. As recorded in London Opinion, she remarked to her sister, who was admiring the purchase: "That stupid salesman tried to get me to buy a fur with two heads. I cannot tolerate the unnatural in anything. Who ever heard of an animal with two heads?" Her sister looked critically at the scarf. Then a smile of amusement lit up her face. "Yes," she remarked, "you didn't buy a fur with two heads; but you have bought one with thirteen tails."

That's Different.

Re-enacting Gettysburg.

The film depicting the battle of Gettysburg was made on the historic field. Parts of the great conflict were re-enacted by 2,500 men, dressed in old Civil war uniforms and dragging Civil war guns. Hundreds of horses were used. Thousands of dollars' worth of powder was burned. An old soldier went to see the battle film. He sat rapt, as the pull of smoke half concealed Pickett's famous charge and the men and horses went down in realistic heaps. His friends looked at him to see how he took it. "Do you know," said he, "I didn't know they had these machines as long ago as war days?" Profits of the moving picture are enormous. The total business last year was upward of $300,000,000, involving five billion paid admissions to 20,000 shows.

"FIVE FLUSH" HAND WINS.

What Representative James W. Bryan of Washington knows about the national indoor game, draw poker, was demonstrated to the house when Mr. Mann, minority leader, threatened to make a point of no quorum to force adjournment at six o'clock.

"Let's go ahead with this bill, so we can get to other matters on the Wednesday calendar," said Mr. Bryan. "Why does the gentleman from Washington four-flush?" retorted Mr. Mann.

"If I'm four-flushing, you're five-flushing," Mr. Bryan went on. "Hey! Let me get into this!" exclaimed Mr. Gardner of Texas. "What do ye mean by a five flush?"

"I confess I don't know anything about poker," said Mr. Bryan. "Well, a five flush is a pretty good hand down my way," said Mr. Gardner.

"The gentleman is from Texas, and he ought to know," said Mr. Bryan. "Well, I've got a good hand, and I insist that we adjourn," said Mr. Mann, and Mr. Mann won.

Big Victory for Women.

The women of Louisiana won a notable victory. A bill had been introduced in the legislature of that state to legalize horse racing—and, incidentally, to license the bookmakers and sure-thing gamblers who follow the noble race horse in his rounds. Every "sporting" interest in the South favored the measure, and it had, besides, the aid of that section of the commercial world which still imagines that the free spending of successful gamblers is "good for business." But the women beat it. Though destitute of votes, they descended on the Louisiana legislature, and coaxed, persuaded, wheedled and encouraged the solons to defeat the obnoxious bill. Plainly, the women of the South are as much interested in public questions as their sisters north of the Mason and Dixon's line. It will cause no surprise if the next recruit to the list of "suffrage states" should come from Dixie.—Chicago Journal.

messages with Farallon Islands, California, and, later, during the cruise of the Atlantic fleet around the world.

The Titanic disaster of April, 1912, riveted the attention of lawmakers anew to the necessity of government control over radio apparatus and its operation. Further laws were passed and the president proclaimed the Berlin Wireless convention, since succeeded by the London Wireless convention, establishing general rules for wireless as to ships throughout the world.

Some of the latter extensions of wireless were the establishment of the stations on the ground of the American legation at Peking, China, for communication between officials of the United States legation and vessels of the Asiatic fleet, and the Panama canal station. The latter is to be unusually powerful, with three 600-foot steel towers to support the antennae.

Who Can Doubt Sworn Testimony of Honest Citizens

Some time ago I began the use of your Swamp-Root with the most remarkable results. For years I was almost a wreck and was a great sufferer. The doctors who treated me made me believe that my great sufferings were due to female trouble. I was so bad at times I would faint away and had sinking spells. Finally a new doctor was called in and he said that I had kidney trouble and gave me medicine, of which I took several bottles. I obtained some relief from this but I was getting weaker all the time; I could not sleep and suffered so much pain that my husband and children had to lift me in and out of bed. After this time two friends sent me word to try Swamp-Root, which I did, and I am glad to state that the first dose gave me great relief. After taking the third dose I was helped into bed and slept half of the night. I took several bottles of Swamp-Root and I feel that I owe my life to this wonderful remedy. The two family doctors said that I could not live three months. I would have to be helped in and out of bed ten to twenty times every night. After taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for two days I was entirely free from getting up and could sleep soundly.

MRS. D. E. HILMAN,
Tunnelton, W. Va.
Personally appeared before me, this 11th of September, 1909, Mrs. D. E. Hilman, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

The TWO FLYERS

John Jenkins was a poor young man who had to earn his bread; He had no friends at court, but there was gray stuff in his head; He shunned the haunts where foolish men their precious leisure spent, And people gave him praise, because it didn't cost a cent.

Van Buren Spriggs was fortunate; he was his uncle's pride And got a lot of millions when that childless miser died; Society then took him up; he dined with dukes and earls, And in a little while he knew a score of chorus girls.

John Jenkins figured out a plan whereby, with spreading wings And bags of gas and pulley wheels and many other things He would enable men to soar above the tallest trees, To navigate the atmosphere with safety and with ease.

With rule and chalk he worked it out; he labored night and day; He spent his hard-earned savings and from pleasure turned away; He filed and sawed and spliced and grooved for months with soaring hopes And wrought, at last, a miracle of canvas, rods and ropes.

In later years John Jenkins and Van Buren Spriggs, downcast, Sat by the wayside, hungry, and conversing on the past; It seems that Jenkins couldn't get his ship to cleave the sky, While Spriggs, upon the other hand, had made his money fly.

What He'd Say.

"What, sir," asked the large man with the bulging biceps and the ponderous fists, as he glared at the slim gentleman who had accidentally stumbled over his toes, "would you say if I were to tell you that you were an awkward ass and an annoying chump?"

"I should at once say," replied the other man, who had enjoyed the advantage of a course in the diplomatic service, "that you had the courage of your convictions."

Weak Minded, Undoubtedly.

"I think that man intends to do something desperate, and that he is deliberately trying to arrange it so that he will have little trouble in showing, if it shall become necessary to do so, that he is insane."

"What has caused you to form such an opinion?"

"When he was taken into court yesterday for exceeding the speed limit he admitted right away that his automobile was going 40 miles an hour at the time the policeman called on him to stop."

Not All Fun for Photoplayer.

"The life of a moving picture villain grows somewhat strenuous at times," says Joseph Levering. "Not long ago I was forced to climb out of a fourth story on a wire cable, have a desperate combat with one of my kind in midair, and fall to the ground below. I did well for the first two times, but I gradually lost my enthusiasm for the occupation. Because of a ruined negative the scene had to be repeated each time. On the third and last time I was to be dashed into the waiting blanket below. But the waiting blanket had ceased to wait, and I had a chance to find out how hard the ground is."

Hackett in "Monsieur Beaucaire." James K. Hackett will go to Europe early this summer with a cast to make a motion-picture production of "Monsieur Beaucaire," in the exact scene of the story.

IT WAS GREAT JOKE

Engaged to Daughter, Fortune-Seeker Changes Mind and Marries Girl's Mother.

By B. J. KROMER.

(Copyright, 1914, by Daily Story Pub. Co.) All the travel he had indulged in, all the hard work, all the business absorption and worry, all the great affairs of life which had occupied his time during the strenuous years following his graduation from college, had not erased from his mind and heart the memory of dainty care-free Laura Tolman, his old sweetheart of the college days.

He had suspected this before he returned to the old scenes; now that he was here the conviction came to him with crushing force. Every shaded walk, every leafy retreat, every part of the old college buildings and the campus seemed to be alive with her presence. As he walked the old familiar paths he seemed to hear the music of her girlish voice and to catch the very aroma of her sweet presence.

With a groan he admitted it—he had failed utterly in the task he had set himself out to perform. He had gone away that day when her engagement to Bently was announced determined to forget her. The struggle that afternoon had been a hard one, and many times he had thought of the river as the most peaceful haven he could find. Finally his pride had triumphed, and, setting his teeth with that peculiar gritty motion the fellows on the gridiron knew so well, he had said to himself:

"Claude Belknap, brace up. Where is the spirit of your forebears? Are you to let a bit of a girl ruin your life—especially a girl who throws you over for a fellow who is only after her money?"

And so he had gone bravely away with a song on his lips, but with gloom in his heart. He had worked hard, and not without success. The very whole-heartedness with which he threw himself into his work and which was born of his desire to so occupy himself that he would forget the laughing face and saucy eyes of his college sweetheart, drove him on to success. He had taken up a strenuous profession, and it had carried him to many climes and into much danger.

In the stress and heat of the battle with fortune he had flattered himself that the old wound had healed, and finding himself in the near vicinity of the college town, he had rashly decided to revisit the old scenes. Then like the rush of the tide came the realization that he ever would love the sweetheart of his youth, wherever she was and whatever her condition or relationship. The realization frightened him when the thought flashed across his mind that she was the wife of another.

Heart-sick with his own reflections, he sought to escape them by calling on Miss Carrie Sample, who still lived in the town, and who had been a great chum in the old days. He was given so warm a welcome as to make him forget for the moment the bitter pain in his heart. The conversation naturally reverted to the old college days and the old boys and girls. Belknap had been abroad so long and so occupied with business that he had lost track of them to a considerable extent, but Miss Sample, having lived all the years under the very eaves of the old college, and being a gossip lady, knew where nearly all the old classmates were, who they married, how they were prospering, and all the other details which so delight the feminine heart.

The conversation was animated and extended, and Belknap for the time being forgot his heartache under the magic of this clever and friendly little woman.

It was when she dragged forth from a sacred drawer a bundle of old class photographs that he was most painfully recalled to his great sorrow.

"Oh, but do you remember this picnic we had," she exclaimed, showing a photograph in front of his very nose.

Did he remember? The blood rushed back into his heart at the memory until he thought he would faint. It was a snapshot of a group at a picnic the girls adorned with the boys' hats, and the boys wearing the boys' millinery. It was just outside an apple orchard surrounded by a high stone fence, over which but at a perilous height hung a bough of luscious fruit. In the very center of the picture was Bently, and perched on his shoulder upon his shoulder was Laura Tolman, supported by his strong arm. He was picking the apples and she was leaning down to the laughing content below. He remembered that picnic. It was the day when, mortified by the contact with her dainty self, he had poured forth his love and then, frightened at his own audacity, had stammered and failed to ask the vital question.

The photograph brought back all the memories of the afternoon, and aroused all his latent passion. As he gazed at it he felt the full tide of his passion sweep through him until it seemed that he must burst.

Miss Sample chattered on.

"We all thought you were awfully sweet on Laura Tolman," she said. "Really, we did. In fact, the whole class thought it was a match, and was all fixed up. It was perfectly paralyzing when, after commencement, you plunged into business, and she got engaged to that Bently fellow."

"You can't always judge about these college affairs," he replied, with a fine assumption of indifference. "By the way, whatever became of Miss Tolman—of Mrs. Bently?"

"Oh, dear, didn't you hear?" she replied, with a shriek of laughter.

"No," he replied, gravely, and a trifle shortly.

"Oh, my, it's the greatest joke," laughed the girl. "Let me tell you—no, positively, I must read it to you. El—never mind who, but one of the old class wrote it to me from Saratoga. Wait, and I'll get the letter." And away she danced, leaving her caller wondering whether to be angry or glad.

Presently she danced back in again.

"Listen to this," she said, and then she read:

"Oh, Carrie, just the funniest thing happened here yesterday. You remember Laura Tolman, of course. Well, she has been here all the season with her mother—who, by the way, does not look much older than Laura. Well, you remember she became engaged to Mr. Bently just after she graduated, and Mr. Bently has been here also all the season, and he has been a perfect shadow to Laura. She has seemed a trifle cool, and one day, presuming on our old class relations, I chided her about it.

"Ella," she said, very solemnly—and you know Laura never was very solemn, I'm awfully afraid I've made a mistake. There was another before Mr. Bently, and I liked him very, very much. But he seemed tongue-tied, and it made me angry that he would not speak, and—and I accepted Mr. Bently—and sometimes it seems to me that it would be a sacrilege to become his wife, when my heart is—somewhere else."

"While we were talking a messenger boy came with a note from her mother that she had left for New York with Mr. Bently, where they would be married the next day, and she hoped Laura would approve and always treat her second father with all due respect—and a lot of other stuff; and she wound up by saying that Aunt Julia would be a sufficient chaperone during the brief honeymoon trip they proposed to take.

"Oh, my, Carrie, what a shock it was to Laura. And really I don't know whether she was more angry or more glad. You see, Bently had found out that the widow had old Tolman's money, although everybody had been led to believe that the bulk of the estate had been left to Laura."

"Now, what do you think of that?" asked Miss Sample, laughing until the tears ran down her cheeks.

"What became of Laura?" asked Belknap, with an indifferent show of indifference.

"Oh, she's living an old maid's ideal life at the old home in Cleveland," replied Miss Sample, carelessly. "The Bentleys moved to New York and built a palace on the drive. Laura preferred to live in the old home. Oh, you must not go yet, Mr. Belknap. Where in the world would you go at this ridiculously early hour?"

"To Cleveland," he replied, regarding her steadily.

After he had left Miss Sample looked off into space for a moment, and then gave voice to a prolonged whistle.

HIS IMAGINATION WAS GOOD

Professor, Who Was Given to Telling Nightmarish Tales, Finally Cornered by Wife.

A certain well-known professor had a habit of imagining the most hair-raising adventures, which he would recount as having happened to himself.

His dutiful family, though doubtful as to the accuracy of these stories, never questioned them, nor were they ever quite sure whether the things had really happened or not.

But one evening he arrived home with such a scalp-freezing, nightmarish sort of tale that his meek little wife was stirred to making a mild protest.

"Do you really mean to say, darling," she interrogated, with a pained expression on her tired face, "that this actually occurred to you?"

"Certainly, my dear!" he said. "It has just occurred to me!"

Talk That Counts.

Ephum Johnson was up before Judge Shimmerpate on a cruelty to animals charge.

"Deed Ah wasn't abusin' dat mule, Judge," the old man demurred.

"Did you not strike it repeatedly with a club?"

"Yassah."

"And do you not know that you can accomplish more with animals by speaking to them?"

"Yassah; but dis critter am diff'nt. He am so deaf he can't hear me when Ah speaks to him in de usual way, so Ah has to communicate wid him in de sign language."

Why?

Mrs. Thompson had no use for cats. With a frown of disapproval she watched her eighteen-year-old daughter caress a beautiful tiger kitten. At last she spoke her mind.

"Mabel, you've kissed that cat more in half an hour than you ever did me in your life."

"Why, yes, mother," replied Mabel, with a fond look at her pet; "but, you know, you haven't any whiskers."—Judge.

What He Said.

"Are you sure he loves you for yourself alone?"

"Absolutely."

"But you are rich, and he is very poor."

"I know, and I asked him about that, and he said that even though he were worth a million dollars himself, it would make no difference. He would still want to marry me."—Detroit Free Press.

Her Reasons.

"Mummy, can I have that pear that was on the dining-room sideboard this morning?" "Cos—"

"Because what?"

"'Cos I've eaten it!"—London Punch.

"Movies" in the Churches.

Rev. William Carter, formerly pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed church, New York, field secretary of the International Peace Forum, a member of the national board of censorship for moving pictures, has been the prime mover in establishing the Church and School Social Service organization, by which the churches have definitely entered the moving picture field to teach of the Bible missions and great historical events which have tended to the betterment of mankind. Pictures will be taken of many biblical scenes at the places where the events were transacted, so far as possible, and of the great missionary centers, and others to show "how the other half lives." Doctor Carter says the organization "is not joined with commercial interests, but is one of clergymen, educators and social service workers formed for religious and philanthropic purposes to uplift humanity through this popular and widespread amusement." Represented on the advisory board are the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Reformed churches, the Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts, and the Big Brother movement.

German and Austrian Goods

The war has raised the cost. We are extremely fortunate to have just received a large shipment of Austrian White Toilet Ware, and the largest shipment of the Stransky Enameled Kitchen Utensils we ever imported. We are now unpacking a direct shipment of our Munich Stock Pattern of German China. We are advised that our import purchases of German Christmas China are afloat. Had the war come a few weeks earlier it would greatly have increased the cost of shipments.

We shall share our good fortune with you. While other stores have already marked up their stock of German and Austrian Ware we shall give you the old prices as long as the stock lasts.

It is anticipated that both Germany and Austria will place an export duty on all goods leaving the country in order to raise war revenue. The factories will make sharp advances to cover their losses by curtailment owing to the help taking up arms. The cost in this country will be nearly doubled.
