BANQUET AT GREYSTONE

The Antrim Ball Boys Given a Good Time by Mr. Hazzard

A banquet was given the Antrim Base Ball Association on Friday last by Alford R. Hazzard, a director of the association, at Greystone Lodge. A course dinner was served.

The post-prandial exercises were in charge of Charles B. Gordon, president of the association. Among those who made remarks were E. M. Lane, treasurer, Col. Richard C. Goodell, director, and most of the members present of the team.

Seventeen men sat down to the splendid repast and did justice to the good things provided.

At the opening of the season Mr. Hazzard made the ball boys a proposition that he would furnish them with a banquet at the close of the season if they won 65% of the games played. The boys won 66%, winning 14 in 21 games played. Five of the seven games lost were lost by one score only, and one of those games was 19 innings in length, and played with Peterboro at Peterboro. Our boys have conducted themselves throughout the season in such a manner as to win the approval of those interested in clean sport, and have played good ball.

The association was financially successful, there being $64 in the treasury, which was divided among the players.

After hearty cheers for the hospitality of the host, the party broke up with the hope that next year the team may have even better success.

Pledged to One Term

Vice President Marshall is made responsible for the declaration that President Wilson will be a candidate for a second term. The New Bedford Standard says:

"There is no reason to doubt the truth of the report, and it would hardly be worth a mention, were it not for the specific declaration in the Baltimore platform in favor of a single Presidential term."

The single term plank reads:

"We favor a single Presidential term, and to that end we urge the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to make the President of the United States ineligible for re-election, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle."

Is it any wonder that the people everywhere ask what platforms of political parties amount to, any way?

Maine Goes Democratic

Much interest is always centered around the early Fall elections, even in an off year; this is true now as much if not more so than in any previous year. For, as go the early ones, the public generally feel that others are likely to follow; one good result is always sure to be obtained: Whichever party is victorious, the other parties work so much the harder, and have the satisfaction of knowing—if they are beat—that they worked well and did their best.

Maine went democratic Monday. It was hardly expected; yet we are inclined to believe that this is a good thing for New Hampshire, for it will put into the Republican leaders a desire to be victorious at the polls, and they will necessarily take up their work with renewed vigor, doing their utmost to win.

Cost to the Candidates

Rosecrans W. Pillsbury confesses to having expended $1910 in his recent campaign, up to within three days of the primary election; Mr. Spaulding spent $991; Judge Paige, $1500; Senator Hutchins, about $1500; and Albert W. Noone about the same. These totals will grow with the supplementary returns, yet it is stated that none of the candidates will go broke.

Those opposed to the primary talk loud of its great cost and its ability to furnish a multiplicity of candidates. Well, in Vermont, the Republicans had five candidates for Governor to choose from this year, and they didn't have direct primaries either.

Short War Predicted

According to certain despatches from Washington, it is the belief in official circles that the European war will be short and that possibly within a few months President Wilson will be called upon to lead the way toward a peace agreement.

Dedicated Labor Day

This bit of verse, composed by a local contributor to our columns, should have appeared last week but was inadvertently left out:

The Flag pole and the Flag
Antrim, N. H.

Presented by a Munificent Citizen
Labor Day, Sept. 7, 1914

The "twig" on which the flag was strung,
Hung but fifty feet from the ground.
The donor, with patriotic zeal,
Was wont to civic pride appeal.
So, to himself he boldly said:
"I'll make this gift e'er I am dead."
Fair Antrim town, wake up today,
This is glorious Labor Day!
Let sons and daughters, far and near
Come back to give the flag this cheer:
"Hurrah for Lane! he's mighty stuff,"
Of money, sure, he has enough—
So, let him give it while he may,
And bless his "stars" he lives today.
—With apologies—A. B.

Schools Re-open

The town schools reopened Monday for the fall term. There were very few changes in the teachers this year. A list of the teachers is given herewith:

Antrim High—A. G. Davis of Peterboro, principal; Miss Alice R. Peaslee of Contoocook and Miss Faith B. Lindsay of Middlebury, Vt., assistants.

Grammar—Miss Ethel Colburn, of Deering.

Intermediate—Charlotte E. Balch.
Primary—Miss Edith Barker, Milford.
North Branch—Miss Anna Cuddihy.
East Antrim—Miss Eckless Nay.
Antrim Centre—Miss Alice Cuddihy.

Birthday Party

The pleasant home of Hiram Allen and wife was the scene of an enjoyable gathering of young folks last Wednesday when their daughter, Miss Wilma, was given a surprise party in honor of her 16th birthday. Miss Allen was the recipient of several nice presents, among them being a gold watch. Ice cream and cake were served and the afternoon passed pleasantly with games and social chat.

Harvest Supper

The ladies of North Branch held their annual harvest supper and entertainment last Friday evening at the chapel. The affair was largely attended and a generous sum realized as proceeds from the event. The usual sale of aprons, fancy articles, etc., was held in connection with the supper. The entertainment consisted of readings and musical selections followed by a social hour.

Unfortunate Accident

Mrs. Elizabeth Paige, wife of Col. E. C. Paige, met with an unfortunate accident Wednesday, about noon. She was stepping into a wagon when the horse started and Mrs. Paige slipped and fell to the ground. She broke her hip bone and sustained other injuries. Passers by aided her to get to her home and medical assistance was summoned. The accident occurred near the meat market.

A Card

The family of John Munhall wish to express in this manner their sincere appreciation to neighbors and friends who assisted in the harvesting of our hay crop this summer.

SOME GUN PLAY

Was the Excitement Yesterday in Our Neighboring Town--Man Shot

Quite a sensation was created yesterday, Tuesday, afternoon when it was learned that a man known as "Billy, the Greek," living at Bennington, had been shot and wounded as a result of a quarrel with Harold Myhaver, Richard Myhaver and Michael Cody. According to the injured man's story the boys are said to have fired at him six times with a revolver, one of the shots hit him in the leg. He also said he was robbed of $40 cash. The fracas occurred near the railroad track.

The Greek succeeded in walking to the village where he related his version of the disturbance. The town constable, Ralph E. Messer, was sent in search of the boys and soon found them and had them in his custody until midnight when Sheriff Ramsey of Manchester arrived and assumed charge of the case, taking them to Manchester with him. The case is to be tried before the grand jury today.

Henry W. Wilson, Esq., took the Greek to the county hospital at Grasmere, at midnight by auto, where he will receive treatment.

ANSWER WAS TO THE POINT

Old Lady of 93 Did Not Mince Words
In Reply to Question Propounded
by Her Pastor.

The pastor of a well-known Boston church was calling a short while ago on a dear old lady, one of the "pillars" of the church to which they both belonged. Looking upon her sweet, motherly face, which bore few tokens of her ninety-three years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to exclaim: "My dear Mrs. Adams, who has been the chief source of your wonderful strength and sustenance during all these years? What do you consider has been the real basis of your extraordinary vigor of mind and body, and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joys and sorrows which must come to all of God's creatures? Tell me, that I may pass the secret to others, and, if possible, profit by it myself."

The good pastor waited with unusual eagerness for the old lady's reply, which she gave, after a moment's reflection, while her kindly old eyes were dimmed with tears. "Victuals," she answered briefly.—Harper's.

Her Carelessness

"They say nature makes no mistakes, but I doubt it."
"What makes you doubt it?"
"Why did she put a lid on the eye and forget to put one on the chest?"

The Preference

"Mrs. Smith has a husband who pays her unremitting attention when she is away."
"I would rather have a husband of cash remitting attention."

SURE.

Bystander (to painter who has fallen from his scaffold, upsetting his paint)—Rather a bad fall, eh?
Painter—Yes, but I came down with flying colors.

At the creamery auction last week the building was not sold, there being no one who wanted it enough to bid anywhere near what it was worth.

FISH AND THE HAWK

By CLARENCE WILBERFORCE.

For weeks the beleaguered city had held out against the artillery of its enemies. Night and day the cannon thundered, but, though the forts were ruined and the countryside a plowed field, the defenders had repelled every assault, until those without were in despair.

If the warships within the port could be destroyed, the city must fall. But they were hidden from artillery range by a high, protecting bluff, and from torpedo boats by a stout boom which closed the harbor. Within that sanctuary their mighty guns made a successful assault impossible.

Then it was that the enemy sent in their submarines, to creep beneath the booms and explode torpedoes against the vessels' sides. But the pass was narrow, and the searchlights played all night, so that the moment that the periscope appeared upon the surface of the waves, a hundred guns belched forth destruction, and the submarines never came back.

The besiegers were in despair. And it was then that a new device was tried.

A submarine without a periscope! Why not? It was not necessary to see one's entrance. One could feel it. The warships were jammed together inside the small harbor, and a submarine, creeping like a blind mole under the boom, could not fail to hit her objective.

The enemy tried it. They sent the "North Pole" beneath the boom at night, and five minutes after she had left the line of the blockading ships, the Queen Dorothy went up into the air in a mass of twisted iron and steel.

The "North Pole," having accomplished her task, put out to sea again for fresh torpedoes. This had been only a trial attack. There were eight submarines, and each of them ought to account for two battleships. By the next morning the defenders' fleet would be scrap-iron, and the town would be at the mercy of the besiegers' artillery.

It was then that the defending general hit upon his idea. It was desperate to be at the mercy of the enemy; the richest city in the world would be theirs to plunder.

With a Roar, the Eagle Broke Into Debris.

Each side possessed a number of aeroplanes, but they had hardly come into use. Each knew accurately the positions of the opposing forces, and warfare had proved that little damage could be done by dropping bombs from above. Moreover, the newest field guns could be elevated perpendicularly, and no aeroplane could hope to escape from that well-aimed fire.

"From the heights," said the defending general, "one can see far under the sea."

It was one of those simple truths which everyone had heard and every one had forgotten.

So, on the following night, equipped with searchlights and stabilizers, which enabled them to hover with their engines shut off, aeroplanes took up their position above the water, waiting.

John Winthrop was in command of this aerial squadron. He had a sweetheart in the beleaguered town, as what soldier had not? The thought of her gave him courage for the supreme task that was his. From his position beside the pilot he watched the selenium searchlight—a far more powerful light than anything known before, and solving the secret of that "cold light" for which inventors had sought so long. He saw it play upon the waves and, where it fell, he saw not the rippling surface of the water, but the sandy bottom. Through the glass which focussed the rays upon the retina he could see the inhabitants of the deep sea, passing lazily about their business. Here was a school of fishes—there the quiver of some scavenger monster, come to prey upon what lay beneath that mass of metal which had once been the Queen Dorothy. And then—

A lithe black shadow passed beneath the surface. She was so far below the waves that nothing could be discerned clearly except the flash-like rudder and the diving plane.

John Winthrop took the steering gear from the pilot's hands, and the aeroplane dropped as a hawk drops upon the fish far beneath him.

So swift was the descent that the sea splashed him before he touched the diving plane that sent the craft skimming along the surface of the sea. He was too near now to see anything at all except the searchlight playing upon the waves. But he had aimed truly.

Crash! As he pressed the button a thunderous broadside of metal sent his airship careening like a boat in a current. Swiftly he rose to a height of 500 feet. Far below the waves he saw the shadow, still against the yellow sand.

And now, all round him, the aeroplanes were diving, and, as each touched the surface, she aimed her guns, which from a height, would have been useless, on account of the deflection of the water. It needed a sure aim and eye, to know when to swoop, to calculate how far ahead the submarine would be before the metal reached her, after the dive.

The airships rose into the sky, and slowly winged their way homeward.

And suddenly, with a roar, the Eagle broke into debris before the eyes of the air-sailors. One of the submarines, unscathed, had crossed beneath the boom and delivered her torpedo against the side of the flagship of the defending navy.

John Winthrop signaled to the squadron to retire. There was room for only one aeroplane to maneuver. He must catch the invader as she was returning toward the blockading fleet.

He hovered, motionless as a hawk, and keen-eyed as a hawk, sweeping the sea with his selenium light. Nothing escaped his scrutiny. He saw a monster, predatory fish gliding upon the bottom, but he saw nothing of the submarine.

Had she escaped in the confusion? No! Suddenly Winthrop understood. This monster fish was the submarine. She had deceived him by moving forward at an incredibly slow rate of speed, instead of at 25 miles an hour, her maximum—and, from that height, while every object was disclosed with startling clearness, it was difficult to form an accurate estimate of size.

Winthrop took the steering gear and plunged. Instantly the shadow went out. He fired his guns and rose.

There, far under him, skimming frantically beneath the ocean, was the submarine. Again he plunged. Again he missed her.

And now the submarine was half way to the blockading squadron, and already the hostile searchlights were playing about him. A couple of shells whizzed past him, and once more he plunged and fired.

He rose. The submarine had stopped. No! She was rising to the surface. A shell had struck her afloat, injuring the diving gear, but, fortunately for those on board, sending her upward. She lay upon the waves and drifted there.

John Winthrop plunged again, amid a hurrying shower of shells. His grappling irons swung free. They caught the iron fish's sides, and the aeroplane, pinned down by that dead weight, fluttered frantically above her like a wounded bird.

The play of shells stopped. Each man upon the ramparts, each man upon the hostile decks, held his breath and watched that battle, outlined as distinctly by the selenium lights as the pictures upon a cinematograph scene.

If the power of the aeroplane was stronger than that of the submarine, Winthrop would tow her into port. If the submarine could make headway above the waves, she would take the lighter craft captive.

The head of the lieutenant in charge of the submarine appeared at the opening. Winthrop looking over from his seat, saw and recognized him. They had made each other's acquaintance when both were ambassadors' aids in a foreign capital.

Neither vessel could fire, for the airship's guns could not be directed vertically downward, while the submarine carried nothing except torpedoes—and those were exhausted.

"Surrender!" called Winthrop from his place.

The young lieutenant laughed and went below. And suddenly the submarine began to sink, dragging down the aeroplane with her.

Winthrop strove madly to cut loose the grappling chains, but it was impossible to reach them, for they were firmly fastened, and to do so would have necessitated unshipping the gun to starboard. And, while he tried, the waves splashed over him. His last thought as he sank was of the girl he loved.

Suddenly a hand reached forth and grasped him. He shuddered and opened his eyes. The aeroplane drifted upon the surface of the sea, and the submarine skimmed the surface. The lieutenant was pulling him in from the water.

"You are my prisoner."

Winthrop, dripping with water, sat beside him as the vessel repaired slowly to the feet. She had not been injured. Ruse had conquered audacity, as it always does. Suddenly, from both sides the selenium lights began to flash through the sky. Winthrop stared at the Morse code incredulously. He caught at his captor's arm.

"Did you read that?" he gasped. The young lieutenant nodded. "Peace has been declared tonight," he spelled out, as the white lights flickered above them.

And silently the two men shook hands.

JUDGE REMICK'S VIEWS

A Calm Analysis of the Political Situation in this State. Why Progressives Should Support Senators Gallinger and Rolland H. Spaulding. Third Party Unnecessary.

To the Editor of the Monitor and Statesman:—

In the Monitor of August 10, 1914, under the caption of "Senator Gallinger, Judge Remick, National Policies and the Progressives," you published an editorial in which you quoted words of mine written several years ago, commending Senator Gallinger for leading the movement to restore the American merchant marine, and quoted also highly eulogistic words of Theodore Roosevelt and Clarence E. Clough in support of the re-election of the senator in 1906, and then referred to the senator's long service in congress and to his progressive and patriotic attitude upon economic, social and moral questions, such as the tariff, merchant marine, equal suffrage and prohibition, concluding by expressing some interest as to what my attitude would be toward the senator's present candidacy and the situation in general.

While I have no wish to obtrude my views, if they are of any interest to you or your readers I have no hesitation in stating them. But you and they will understand that I do so with no thought that my views are important. As to Senator Gallinger, I fully share the good opinion so strongly expressed by such militant progressives as Theodore Roosevelt and Clarence E. Clough, in support of his candidacy six years ago. Six years additional service since then, making him the senior of all the senators of the United States, cannot, it seems to me, have diminished his capacity for usefulness to the state and nation or his deserving of a re-election. My introduction to Theodore Roosevelt was by the courtesy of Senator Gallinger and in the President's office at the White House. On that occasion Mr. Roosevelt spoke in the highest terms of the senator and gave me unmistakable evidence that he had then great respect for his ability and integrity.

One who has deserved and received such endorsement from such progressives and who all his life has stood for such reforms as equal suffrage to women and prohibition of the liquor traffic and who stands today for such progressive propositions as the establishment of a tariff commission and the upbuilding of our merchant marine at any cost—cannot fairly be classified as a "stand-patter and reactionist." On the contrary, one who has stood for such far-reaching innovations may be properly said to have the vision, the spirit and the courage of progress.

True, he has not cooperated with the progressive faction of the Republican party nor with the Progressive party, but as the leader of the Republican organization in New Hampshire for more than a quarter of a century, it would have been most extraordinary if he had done so; and we should not forget that, from the beginning of our government, whenever the established order has been assailed, however justifiable and necessary the assault, wise and patriotic men have, wisely or unwisely, either faltered or opposed especially when upheaval and disruption have seemed to threaten. Thus Webster failed to support the cause of abolition, McKinley was forced into the war with Spain and President Wilson—wisely, I believe has "watched and waited," sometimes to the great concern of his truest political friends.

The progressive movement has overturned cherished traditions. Whether wisely or unwisely in all respects, the future must determine. Meantime, we who have been responsible for the movement and are confident of its essential vindications, gain nothing by harboring resentments toward those who hesitated or even those who opposed it. All and more than was sought to be brought about or hoped for by the bastioning has been accomplished. The more important of the results are secured by constitutional amendments, others by state and federal law; but the best guarantee of all is that the spirit of the movement has filled the hearts of the rank and file of all parties. The fruits of the Civil War are not more secure than the great general principles already established by the progressive movement. If the man who wore the blue and the grey in that sanguinary conflict could reunite as they have for the common good, we should be petty indeed to refuse in the present crisis in the nation's life to vote for or co-operate with anyone, however distinguished or deserving, who did not vote and co-operate with us in a crisis that is past.

Senator Gallinger's long service and commanding influence in the senate and the high opinion in which he is generally held by that body and by the District of Columbia, over which he so long presided, are considerations of decisive weight with all who would form dispassionate judgment. For one, I believe the state and nation need his seasoned statesmanship in the present crisis and he will therefore, have my support.

With reference to the general situation, I assume my full share for the political blasting that has been going on during the past few years and have no apologies to make. In the working out of our national destiny, the upheaval had to be as much as the Civil War, and the lessons it has taught and the new civic, business and social standards it has established are worth all the sacrifices it has cost. But while political blasting is sometimes necessary and useful, I do not believe that it is good to get the habit and to make disturbance chronic, except for those who thrive on disturbance and certainly neither labor nor capital nor producers of any sort belong to that class. There is a time for war and a time for reconstruction, a time for blasting and a time for building, and after so many years of necessary disturbance, I for one believe that the time has come for all progressives in the state and nation to co-operate together, regardless of party, to bring about an era of business confidence and prosperity. I believe the time has come for progressives to show that they are not disturbers by temperament and habit, that they can build as well as blast, and that when they blast, it is only to lay foundation upon which to build more enduringly.

In the coming election in this state, I believe we can do more to preserve the good that has been accomplished by the progressive movement, to wisely supplement it and to restore confidence and prosperity by voting for such Republicans as Senator Gallinger and Rolland H. Spaulding upon a platform essentially progressive than we can by being partisan progressives and voting for progressive party candidates.

Whatever the exigencies of a particular situation may have required or justified, I have become convinced that the partisan way is not the best way for the progressive element to exert the greatest influence and to accomplish the most good. The aims of the progressive movement have been and now are more moral, humane and social than political. In the political field, its principal aim has been and still is to prevent the abuses of party. I cannot believe that a movement with such aims can in the long run be most effective upon a partisan basis. The objects by their nature appeal to a certain element in all parties. Upon a non-partisan basis all these elements would combine and make a power which would compel favorable action by parties, legislatures and officials. If all those who voted the progressive party ticket two years ago would only co-operate for progressive principles upon a non-partisan basis, it would be a nucleus around which would gather such acquisitions from the other parties that the combination would be irresistible. As a party organization, however, it arouses even in those in sympathy with its aims, a spirit of party rivalry and antagonism which prevents cooperation.

How can the progressive party render a greater service to the nation or more honor itself than by giving up its partisan character and becoming the nucleus of such a patriotic force for good? For one, I would rather be instrumental through such an organization in making political parties responsive to the aspirations of the people and truly beneficent than to be a mere partisan of any party and have the richest spoils at its disposal.

I do not know whether Rolland Spaulding is guilty as charged of having some time done what he thought it was his duty to do without regard to party, but I do know, from long personal business and political relations with him, that in the broad sense of the term, he is as progressive as any man in the state, that no man in the progressive party has higher standards of civic duty, that he is just the sort of man needed for governor of this state in this crisis, and that he will administer its affairs as a capable, conscientious and fearless trustee, with no thought but the welfare of the people and the whole people.

The struggle now going on in Europe has enabled us to see ourselves in clearer perspective and has revealed to us as never before the supreme need of our country. That supreme need so clearly seen in the light of the present crisis is to make our nation as far as may be independent of the world in peace and war by producing here as far as possible everything which we need ourselves

Mr. Phillips had Stomach Trouble for More than Five Years.

Mr. W. R. Phillips, Jr., 129 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Georgia, writes: "I had the catarrh and stomach trouble for more than five years, and I faithfully tried all the medicines I saw advertised, and found they all failed to cure me. I then heard of Feruna. I purchased six bottles, and after their use I soon discovered that I was well, safe and sound. I now weigh two hundred and ten pounds, and have never been sick since I took Feruna. It surely is the best medicine for colds, stomach trouble and catarrh that I ever heard of."

and as much more as can be legitimately marketed abroad; by providing ourselves with ships built in American shipyards, owned by American citizens, manned by American sailors and flying the American flag, sufficient to make us not only independent but supreme in the ocean carrying trade of the world and by adequately fortifying ourselves against the aggressions of militarism as long as that spirit dominant in the world.

Because of its clear vision to see this supreme need and its traditional devotion to the principle of governmental protection and encouragement, by which alone this supreme need can be realized, the Republican party would seem to be best fitted for the great constructive work which now lies before the American people and to which they are being so urgently called by every consideration of patriotism.

The old world slaughter and holocaust have taught us anew other lessons—lessons that Washington taught us long ago but which we have been tempted in recent years to disregard, that to avoid foreign entanglements is the highest statesmanship, that to build up and fortify our own nation and abstain from extending our sovereignty over foreign lands and peoples is neither weakness nor cowardice, but the truest patriotism and benevolence; that imperialism and militarism, whether prompted by unconcealed lust for empire or a spirit of commercialism disguised as "benevolent assimilation" or "the white man's burden," are a delusion and a snare and fraught with the greatest danger to our free institutions, and that mediation, arbitration and even, watchful waiting, may, as a general rule, be more wisely tried than scorned when war, with all its horrors, is the alternative.

The Republican party, which in recent years has been most afflicted, with the Jinzo spirit, seems to have, profited by these lessons, while the Democratic party, apparently panic-stricken by the condition in which it has placed the country by its traditional opposition to measures necessary to the upbuilding of our merchant marine and to otherwise establishing our industrial and commercial independence, in order to minimize the disasters without confessing its error and applying the true remedy, is resorting to temporary makeshifts which threaten to involve us in an international conflict.

However, the greatness of the events through which we are passing and the far reaching consequences of our action in this crisis, should lift us above the pettiness of partisanship and inspire us to do that which in our inmost hearts seems best for the state and nation, regardless of party creed, or present or future party success.

Mr. Alford was taken ill on the 3d inst., and was out for the first time on the 13th; bronchitis was the trouble.

Byron Butterfield left town Monday for Durham, where he commences on a four years' course of study at the state college.

Everett Davis and wife entertained for over Sunday Miss Anna Childs, of Henniker, a former popular teacher in the Antrim schools.

George Hunt and wife and daughter, Miss Edith, spent Sunday with Scott Emery and family in Worcester, Mass., making the trip by auto.

Miss Susan Mayo, sister of Rear Admiral Henry T. Mayo now at Tampico, returned to her home at Holyoke, Mass., Tuesday, 15th inst.

Miss Marion Shea and Miss Ellen Weston, who graduated with honors from the Antrim High school in last year's class, will teach school at Sullivan this year.

Paul W. Thayer and wife and daughter, Miss Rae, are spending two weeks at the beach; after this much-earned rest Mr. and Mrs. Thayer will return to Antrim for a while.

The circus on the grounds opposite the railroad station will show on Thursday of this week, two performances—one in the afternoon at two o'clock and in the evening at eight.

Other freaks in the vegetable line have been left in our window, one a large double cucumber grown by Wm. Shoults, Jr., and a white cucumber 16 inches long grown by Daniel Nash.

Wilson's Singing and Novelty Orchestre, of Fitchburg, will give a grand concert and ball at Antrim town hall on Thursday evening of this week, under management of M. J. Lynch. For other particulars see posters.

NORTH BRANCH

Hardin Ford's auction was a satisfactory one.

The Harvest Supper was a success in every way; enough food was contributed to feed many more. The entertainment, under the supervision of Mrs. Madison McIlvaine, is spoken of as very fine. The ladies thank Mr. Flint and Mrs. Hunt for their generous money gifts, also all others who in any way helped to make the affair a success. Seventy-five dollars was the sum added to the treasury. Mrs. J. L. Parker came from Winchester, Mass., to help out.

The Crombies have returned from their Manchester visit. Mr. Crombie enjoyed meeting with his old comrades. There are now fifteen survivors of the 100 who left Concord for the front Sept. 11, 1862; eight were present, none of which looked just as they did fifty-odd years ago.

Boarders still keep coming and going at Hillside.

This week will nearly finish work at Flint Farm, and a splendid looking residence it will be; and we trust they will all live long to enjoy it.

Mrs. Hunt and family are on an extensive trip through the Birkshires, the Adirondacks, and perhaps to Canada.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Day

By Henry Chappell. [From London Standard, August 26, 1914] Published by Request

(The author of this magnificent poem is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath. Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Poet." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet.)

You boasted the Day, and you toasted the Day,
And now the Day has come.
Blasphemer, braggart and coward all,
Little you reck of the numbing bill,
The blasting shell, or the "white arm" fall,
As they speed poor humans home.

You spied for the Day, you lied for the Day,
And woke the Day's red spleen.
Monster, who asked Gull's and Divine,
Then strewed his sea with the ghastly mine:
Not all the water of the Rhine
Can wash thy foul hands clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day,
Watch how the Day will go.
Slayer of age and youth and prime (Defenceless slain for never a crime)
Thou art steeped in blood as a bog in slime.
False friend and cowardly foe.

You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day;
Yours is the harvest red.
Can you hear the groans and the awful cries—
Can you see the heap of slain that lies,
And sightless turned to the flame-split skies?
The glassy eyes of the dead!

You have wined for the Day, you have lured for the Day;
That fit the awful theme,
'Tis nothing to you that fall and plun
Yield sheaves of dead men amid the grain
That widows mourn for their loved ones slain,
And mothers curse by name.

But after the Day, there is none to pay
For the sowing and for the sowing,
And he you have done for many a day—
Listen, and hear what he has to say
"Vengeance is mine, I will repay."
What can you say to God?

Dizzy? Bilious? Constipated?

Dr. King's New Life Pills will cure you, cause a healthy flow of bile and rid your stomach and bowels of the waste and fermenting body poisons. They are a tonic to your stomach and liver and tone up the general system. First dose will cure you of that depressed, dizzy, bilious and constipated condition. 25c, all druggists. adv.

IN NEED OF DYES

Attention of State Department
Is Called to New War Peril.

Representative Herman A. Metz of
New York Says Failure to Keep Up
These Imports Would Close
Many Factories.

Washington.—Should the war in Europe operate to cut off the shipment to this country from Germany of dyes used in the manufacture of cottons and silk the result will be the suspension of work by many factories and the throwing out of employment thousands of persons, says Representative Herman A. Metz of New York, who is a dealer in chemicals and dyestuffs. Mr. Metz informed the house of this threatening situation the other day, and said it would be one of the most serious in its positive outcome that confronted this country on account of the conflict abroad.

Mr. Metz held the opinion that the trouble might be averted largely through action by the state department. He said he had informed the secretary of state of the conditions and has urged that the department get in touch with American ambassadors, ministers, and consuls abroad that they might know the importance of obtaining ships to bring German dyes to this country.

"This is a question that concerns practically every part of the United States," said Mr. Metz. "These dyestuffs are used in the manufacture of cotton, wool, silk, leather and chemicals. There is in this country today not more than 60 days' supply. In the last ten days I have had at least 25 per cent of the manufacturers of cotton and woolen goods in my office begging for enough goods to keep them going."

"These goods are generally shipped in Dutch bottoms down the Rhine to Rotterdam, and from there are transhipped to New York. These goods are neutral. They are not contraband. The state department should keep in communication with our consuls in Germany with a view to keeping open the transit of these products from abroad. It affects the running of mills and the manufacture of medical preparations. It is a very serious situation that confronts us."

CAPITAL'S WATER SUPPLY.

The daily per capita consumption and waste of water in the district in the year ending June 30 was 160 gallons, according to a report just issued. This is based on an estimated population of 353,297.

The maximum daily amount of water pumped to the filters during the year was 73,680,000 gallons. The maximum consumption of water for 24 hours occurred in July, 1913, and the minimum daily consumption during the year was 44,760,000 gallons in October last. The maximum daily consumption for June, 1914, was 60,590,000, and the minimum daily consumption for that month was 51,480,000. The average daily consumption for that month was 60,400,000 gallons. The average daily consumption for the entire year 1913-1914 was 56,430,000 gallons.

These figures show a decrease in the daily average consumption and waste of water in the district, with few exceptions, since 1899, when the present complete system of records was instituted.

Progress is reported in the work of lining with concrete certain unlined sections of the aqueduct tunnels in the vicinity of waste weir No. 1, near Great Falls. About 17 per cent of the work is completed, with about 3,643 feet of unlined tunnel still requiring attention and repair.

Complete plans for parking the whole area of McMillan park have been prepared by Olmsted Brothers.

Shoes are Now Arriving,—Shoes for Men,

YOU no doubt have read the effect that the European War is having on the price of all materials which enter into the make-up of a shoe. 65% of all the Calf-skins, Goat-skins, Colt skins and Hides, come from the countries which are at war. The supply of these materials has been practically cut off, which has caused the prices in finished shoes to advance. There is no question but what shoes during this season will be much higher in price, if quality is considered. We are buying our shoes from some of the largest manufacturers in the business, and therefore get them at the lowest possible price. We shall hold our prices down and give you the benefit of what we have saved by buying early. WE shall give you a list of prices next week that will save you good money if you buy now.

IS COUNT BERCHTOLD ACCOUNTABLE FOR WAR?

To what extent Count Berchtold is accountable for the great war, and how entirely it is a piece of statescraft on his part, rather than a reluctant surrender to an overwhelming popular demand, is strikingly shown by the manner in which his casting down the gauntlet to Serbia, and indirectly to Russia, took not only all Europe, but even his own countrymen, by surprise.

The outburst of public indignation in Austria against the Austrian government in Austria against the murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, by Serb assassins, alleged to have been armed, paid and instigated by personages high in office at Belgrade, had subsided, and speeches of a pacific character delivered by the premiers of Austria, and Hungary respectively, had dispelled for the nonce the apprehensions of war, both within the borders of the dual empire, and also abroad.

Emperor William, the closest ally of Austria, had started on his annual trip to remote Scandinavian waters on board the steam yacht Hohenzollern. Czar Nicholas was cruising with his consort and children on the Standart, off the picturesque coast of Finland. President Poincaré was steaming in a leisurely fashion across the Baltic.

on board a French battleship, from Kronstadt, to pay a series of visits to the courts of Stockholm, Christiania and Copenhagen, accompanied by his premier, M. Viviani. King Victor Emmanuel had retired with Queen Helena and his daughters to his seaside retreat at San Rossore, in northern Italy. Even old Emperor Francis Joseph had returned to his summer residence of Ischl, and in spite of his eighty-four years was described by the Austrian papers as being engaged almost every day, rain or shine, in the arduous and difficult sport of stalking chamois.

Suddenly, without the slightest warning, the world was startled by the news that the Austrian envoy at Belgrade, acting under peremptory instructions from Count Berchtold, had presented to the Serb government an ultimatum, couched in the most sharp and vigorous language, and that he had been ordered to demand his passports, and to leave Belgrade, with his entire staff, and the archives belonging to his mission.

That the Austrian envoy left Belgrade at the appointed time, breaking off all relations with the Serb government, and that formal declaration of war was issued on the following day, not by Emperor Francis Joseph, nor yet by the premier of Austria or Hungary, but by Count Berchtold, over his own name, in his capacity as de facto chancellor of the dual empire, are well known.

On the news of the ultimatum becoming known, there ensued such a scurrying on the part of Old World rulers and statesmen as has not been seen in many a day.

$50,000,000 A DAY COST OF EUROPEAN WAR

The general European war lends particular interest to what Dr. David Starr Jordan, America's distinguished peace advocate, said in his recent book, "War and Waste":

"What shall we say of the great war of Europe ever threatening, and which never comes? We shall say that it will never come. Humanely speaking, it is impossible.

"Not in the physical sense, of course, for with weak reckless and godless men nothing evil is impossible. It may be, of course, that some half-crazed archduke or some harassed minister of state shall half knowing give the signal for Europe's conflagration. In fact, the agreed signal has been given more than once within the last few months. The tinder is well dried and laid in such a way as to make the worst of this catastrophe.

"Behind the sturdy forms of the Bulgarian farmer lurks the sinister figure of Russian intrigue. Russia and Austria, careless of their neighbors, careless of obligations, and in this their opportunity. And the nations of Europe in their degree are bound to one or the other of these malcontents. Neither Russia nor Austria can be trusted to keep the peace even in her own interest, for both, through debt abroad and discontent at home, are in a condition of perpetual crisis.

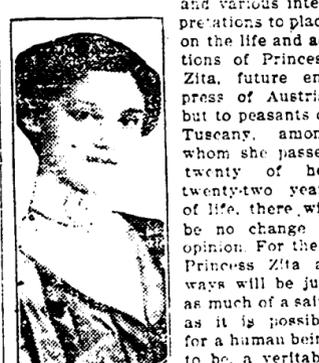

"Should all Europe rush into war, the expense would be about $50,000,000 a day, a sum to be greatly increased with the sure rise of prices.

"The table of Richet (here translated from francs to dollars) deserves most careful attention:

1. Food of men	$12,000,000
2. Food of horses	1,000,000
3. Pay (European rates)	4,200,000
4. Pay of workmen in arsenals and ports (10¢ a day)	1,200,000
5. Transportation (90 miles, ten days)	2,100,000
6. Transportation of provisions	4,200,000
7. Munitions—infantry, ten cartridges a day	4,200,000
8. Artillery, ten shots a day	1,200,000
9. Marine, two shots a day	400,000
10. Equipment	4,200,000
11. Ambulances, 500,000 wounded or ill ($1 a day)	500,000
12. Armature of imports	500,000
13. Reduction of imports	5,000,000
14. Help to the poor (2¢ a day to one in ten)	5,000,000
15. Destruction of towns, etc.	2,000,000
Total per day	$40,860,000

FUTURE EMPRESS IS LOVED BY THE PEOPLE

In the years to come, the world at large may have various things to say and various interpretations to place on the life and actions of Princess Zita, future empress of Austria.

Princess Zita was born May 9, 1892, at the Villa delle Pianore, in the province of Lucca, near the famous Italian sea resort of Viareggio. Her father, Robert, retained the title of grand duke of Tuscany, even if he didn't retain the dukedom, the latter having been incorporated into the growing kingdom of Italy when the duke was only ten years old. His predecessors enjoyed also the titles of king of Hanover, duke of Brunswick, duke of Parma and king of Naples, but Robert didn't insist on these. Princess Zita's mother was the Infanta Maria Theresa, of Portugal, youngest and handsomest of the six famous Braganza sisters, whose brother, Dom Miguel, a few years ago, married Anita Stewart of New York.

Zita's mother was Duke Robert's second wife, and Zita was the thirteenth child, the duke having had eight children by his first wife and 12 by his second.

Of the former, only three, Princess Maria Theresa, Prince Elias and Princess Beatrice are normal. The other five are weak minded. Although Duke Robert insisted they should always remain under the parental roof, it was necessary for them to have constant attendance and surveillance.

Films Race of African Dwarfs. James Barnes, naturalist and moving picture hunter with camera rather than gun, who has been camera-exploring in Africa, got back recently with 21,000 feet of film. Mr. Barnes and his party traveled about 5,000 miles, traversing Africa from West to East. Leaving the jungle at the Congo, they went over the old trail of Stanley and Livingston, meeting old memory only for her charity and piety.

Princess Zita was born May 9, 1892, at the Villa delle Pianore, in the province of Lucca, near the famous Italian sea resort of Viareggio. Her father, Robert, retained the title of grand duke of Tuscany, even if he didn't retain the dukedom, the latter having been incorporated into the growing kingdom of Italy when the duke was only ten years old. His predecessors enjoyed also the titles of king of Hanover, duke of Brunswick, duke of Parma and king of Naples, but Robert didn't insist on these. Princess Zita's mother was the Infanta Maria Theresa, of Portugal, youngest and handsomest of the six famous Braganza sisters, whose brother, Dom Miguel, a few years ago, married Anita Stewart of New York.

Zita's mother was Duke Robert's second wife, and Zita was the thirteenth child, the duke having had eight children by his first wife and 12 by his second.

Of the former, only three, Princess Maria Theresa, Prince Elias and Princess Beatrice are normal. The other five are weak minded. Although Duke Robert insisted they should always remain under the parental roof, it was necessary for them to have constant attendance and surveillance.

Films Race of African Dwarfs. James Barnes, naturalist and moving picture hunter with camera rather than gun, who has been camera-exploring in Africa, got back recently with 21,000 feet of film. Mr. Barnes and his party traveled about 5,000 miles, traversing Africa from West to East. Leaving the jungle at the Congo, they went over the old trail of Stanley and Livingston, meeting old

CHET DICKS; one of the Stanley guides. With the camera they caught groups of the Pigmy tribes of Du Challu in "the country of the dwarfs." They found them a shy lot, and it took several weeks for Mr. Barnes to get well enough acquainted with them to induce them to pose for the moving pictures. Later some of the little fellows became guides to the expedition.

FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn. — "I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do." — Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

BEEF SHORTAGE.

Here are some figures by J. M. Pickens, expert in the bureau of animal industry, department of agriculture, in the report he has just made on the consumption of meat:

"The high cost of meat is a serious reality, and it is now obvious that the rise in price is the result of an actual shortage in production."

This is the way Pickens sizes up the matter in his report, which continues:

"This condition is reflected in the per capita consumption of meat in the United States, which is estimated to have fallen off ten pounds in four years, or 162 pounds in 1909 to 152 pounds in 1913. It is evident the country is facing an era of short production of meat, and that some constructive means must be adopted if the American appetite for this class of food is to be supplied. The decline in beef production is especially marked."

There were only 6,724,107 cattle slaughtered in the last fiscal year, while the yearly average for the preceding seven years is 7,499,195. Calves slaughtered in the last fiscal year numbered only 1,814,904, while the yearly average previous is 2,094,612.

There were increases in the last fiscal year over the yearly average for the seven preceding years in the number of sheep and swine slaughtered as follows: Sheep slaughtered in last fiscal year, 14,958,834, as compared with a yearly average of 11,907,621; swine slaughtered in last fiscal year, 33,259,715, as compared with a yearly average of 32,439,737.

UNCLE SAM'S COMMERCE.

The world's carrying power practically has doubled during the last 20 years, and now includes about 21,000 vessels, with an aggregate capacity of 47,000,000 gross tons, according to figures issued by the department of commerce. In number, however, this commerce has decreased slightly, the tendency being toward larger carrying units.

The United States ranks second in number and tonnage of vessels engaged in commerce, due to the vast number engaged in lake and coastwise trade, since the number of American vessels engaged in foreign trade is less than that of Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy or Norway.

The carrying trade of the United States shows a marked growth in coastwise and lake traffic and a striking decline on the ocean. While the gross tonnage of American vessels in lake and coastwise trade increased from 3,657,304 tons in 1883 to 9,789,561 tons in 1913, that of its vessels in the foreign trade decreased from 1,302,095 tons to 1,027,776 tons, an increase in one case of 168 per cent and a decrease in the other of 21 per cent during a 30-year period, in which the value of American foreign trade rose from $1,250,000,000 to $4,225,000,000.

While the volume of the over-sea commerce served by the world's merchant marine cannot be definitely stated, the United States sends about four-fifths of its exports to South America and over-sea countries.

PELLAGRA IN THE DISTRICT.

It will no doubt surprise the public to learn that the horrible disease of pellagra is reported to have several victims in the District of Columbia.

Doctor Woodward of the health department says that there were 12 cases in the district last year, nine of which were of local origin. Five patients were white and seven were colored, and in each the patients varied from twenty-three to sixty-seven years. All cases proved fatal. Doctor Woodward goes on to say:

"Pellagra is usually a chronic disease, extending over a year or more, but sometimes it runs an acute course. Nervous and mental disorders are usual and distressing features of the disease. No treatment by hygiene or drugs can be relied on to cure, although some patients recover. The treatment generally adopted is that of rest and wholesome living under such conditions as are best calculated to build up the bodily strength."

"The cause and mode of spread of pellagra is unknown. By some the disease has been attributed to eating unsound or diseased corn, but the trend of opinion is now against this hypothesis. Pending developments the wise course is to preserve an open mind and for prevention rely on the ordinary principles of wholesome living."

faith, too. Harris was in the Confederate army and General Sherwood rose to high rank in the Union army. Now, do you begin to catch on? They fought at Peach Tree Creek—fought each other, you see, near Atlanta, Ga., on July 21, 1864, the day that General McPherson, the Union commander, was killed. General Sherwood, in command of a brigade, fought against a Confederate force of which Representative Harris was an officer. They both saw General McPherson fall. Discussing war reminiscences recently, the two learned that they had been in close combat in the war. Whereupon Mr. Harris sent a challenge to General Sherwood to fight a duel at 30 paces with firecrackers. General Sherwood said it was the first time in his life that a challenge had been sent to him. But you can't fire a firecracker in the District of Columbia, so General Sherwood feels right safe for the present.

DECREASE IN SLAUGHTER.

A decrease of nearly one million cattle were slaughtered in the federal inspected establishments during the fiscal year ended June 30, as compared with the average killing during the years 1907-1913, according to the department of agriculture. Calves showed a similar decrease, while the slaughter of sheep and goats increased more than sixty per cent. Swine showed an increased slaughter of 1,000,000 head.

In the receipt of live stock at six principal western markets during the same period, cattle has decreased during the last fiscal year, as compared with the period from 1907 to 1913, more than 1,000,000, while sheep increased 2,880,000, and swine 78,240.

A gradual increase is shown in the import of meat and meat food products from December, 1913, to June, 1914, February being the only month in which the imports dropped lower than the previous month. From 13,295,027 beef in December, the imports of June jumped to 37,808,946, or almost triple.

BENNINGTON

A Weekly News Letter of Interest

Mrs. Annie Wilson is on the sick list.

Miss Grace Wilson, from Milford was here over Sunday.

Hon. A. W. Gray, from Boston, is passing a few days in town.

Mrs. Edith Knowles, from Holyoke, Mass., visited her father, Charles Dutton, the past week.

Rev. Andrew Gibson, pastor of the Congregational church, is on a business trip to Boston for a few days.

Mrs. Carrie Hadley, accompanied by her son and daughter, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are at Mrs. A. B. Lawrence's for a season.

The cutlery shops of the Goodell Co., were closed down all day yesterday as the result of a break in the gears of the power machinery.

A great improvement is the cutting of the bushes near the covered bridge, on the road to Bennington. The traveling public will appreciate this work, as the bridge is now in view for some time before it is reached, and a dangerous curve is made safer by the change.

Mrs. Kossbiel has returned to her home in Greenfield, Mass., after several weeks' passed with friends here.

Benj. Messer has returned from his trip to the National convention of the S. of V., at Detroit. He was a delegate and greatly enjoyed the trip.

The Antrim band gave a concert at the band stand here last Wednesday evening, and it was much appreciated by a large gathering. The dance held at the town hall after the concert was a flat failure, there being only three couples in attendance.

Work has been resumed on the State road. The road will be continued in the Hancock direction, and will be completed as far as possible with the available funds for use at this time. James J. Griswold has the work in charge.

New planks have been laid in the bridge near the paper mill. Traffic over the state road from here to Antrim was obliged to go over the sand hill by the residence of Charles Balch, which caused considerable inconvenience and made the traveling public appreciate the value of a good state road!

Miss Mae Knowles, from the central telephone office at Hillsboro, is spending her two weeks' vacation at home here.

Some excitement in town on Tuesday, although not of the enjoyable kind; a more detailed account appears on first page today.

A gang of workmen are busy making cider at the mill on the farm of R. E. Messer. William Wilson has charge of the manufacturing.

Miss Jessie Ellis, from Springfield, Vt., is the guest of Mrs. Josephine Odell and other friends in town. She will be remembered by many as she formerly lived here about ten years ago.

The schools sang the Star Spangled banner on Monday noon of this week, as per instructions of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. As is generally known this was the 100th anniversary of the writing of the national anthem and these exercises were very commendable. Several citizens joined with the pupils in singing the song.
