SCHOOL MATTERS

Take Strange Turn, Owing to Misunderstandings

TO the Reporter's mind, a series of misunderstandings are to blame for the uncalled-for attack on the Antrim High school in the last issue of the Milford Cabinet; that paper had it known all the circumstances we feel sure would have presented the facts in a little different way, for we know the Cabinet people to be among the fairest minded men in the state. In our endeavor to get at the facts in the matter, we have run on to much that is not directly connected with it and will not give that here, but would like to make clearer if possible a few things that have become twisted a bit or are not generally known. Our information is reliable and first-hand, being furnished us by the faculty and school authorities.

The present condition is the result of a basketball controversy which brought into it a matter of more seriousness than at first thought possible.—at least this is the way it seems to us. These extracts are from the Cabinet of November 26:

The two boys who have been making the best bid for the forward positions are Paul R. Colby, a senior, and Walter Cleary, a sophomore. Both boys come from Antrim.

Colby received a diploma from the Antrim school last year. Last fall he came to Milford with his father, called at the High school, and explained that he did not feel sufficiently prepared to enter college, that the Antrim school had not given him much and could not teach him any more. Accordingly he wished to enter the Milford school for a year, where he felt that he could get sufficient preparation, to enter college. Principal Ross gave him a careful examination and found him, after four years at Antrim, about fitted to enter the senior class in Milford, which he did, enrolling as a tuition pupil.

Cleary's home is in Bennington, and last year he attended the Antrim High school. This fall he came to Milford, took the examinations, and enrolled as a tuition pupil in the sophomore class. He gave his reason for leaving the Antrim High school, saying that it did not offer him enough. They insisted on his taking agricultural subjects when he did not want to be a farmer.

The leaving of the two Antrim boys was, of course, a criticism of the efficiency of Principal Davis.

So far as Milford's basketball trouble goes, of course that is none of our concern; but when our High school and its efficiency is held up to ridicule it comes pretty close home. From this same High school have gone graduates from Antrim to the very colleges that Mr. Colby made a desperate effort to enter and could not; the reason being his very low rank. With nothing but the best of feelings and good wishes for the young man it must be said that his lack of interest in studies and desire to get rid of all the school work possible was the reason for low marks; the school should not have all the blame. In a talk which the writer had with Mr. Colby a week ago he admitted what we have just said. The statement that the Antrim High school could not teach him any more, is too absurd to consider. It certainly should not be computed against a school when the trouble is elsewhere.

With Mr. Cleary's case there might be much less said. He entered Antrim High in September and was simply asked to continue the course of study he pursued last year. In his second week in school, for good and sufficient reason, he was suspended, which suspension has never been removed. In the light of these facts, in order to "offer him enough," what would the school be expected to offer a pupil under like conditions?

So far as being a criticism of the efficiency of Principal Davis, we fail to see any force to the argument, for Mr. Davis is a new principal in Antrim High, beginning in September; he had nothing to do with Mr. Colby except help him all he possibly could to enter college—in this he admits failure but the school authorities do not hold it against him. In the case of Mr. Cleary, many here think he displayed efficiency of the right sort. When school matters are examined at close range they always look different than they do when seen from a distance.

From what the Reporter is able to learn everyone who has interests in the schools has nothing

THE STAMP TAX IN OPERATION

The Taxes of Particular Interest Hereabouts are Enumerated in This Connection

It matters but little what we think of the stamp tax; it is here, and we like the good citizens that we are will meet it and wherever it strikes us pay our good money, feeling that the administration at its earliest opportunity will raise the embargo and we shall be absolutely free from anything like a war tax. Deacon-Beloff

Announcements have been received of the wedding at Amesbury, Mass., of Howard Bass Deacon of Putnam, Conn., and Miss Olga Beloff, of Amesbury. Mr. Deacon is a former resident of Antrim, where he is very popular with the young people. He attended school here and later moved with his parents to Worcester, Mass. A short time ago Mr. Deacon and his father, Harry Deacon, started a large department store business at Putnam, Conn., the firm name being H. Deacon & Son. Mrs. Deacon is the daughter of Mrs. Simon Beloff, of Amesbury, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Deacon will make their home at Putnam.

Handy for Rheumatism

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, lumbago, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle today. ad

Mrs. S. I. S. Hadley

Mrs. S. I. S. Hadley passed away at the home of her grandson, Fredell O. A. Hadley, in Somerville, Mass., Nov. 23. She was the oldest member of Molly Aiken Chapter, D. A. R., of Antrim, and the Amity Lodge of Rebekahs in Cambridge. She leaves three grandsons, Fredell O. A. Hadley of Somerville, Frank E. Hadley of Boston, and Ralph S. Hadley of Wilton; also two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth A. May of Fitchburg, and Mrs. Susan B. Tenney, and one brother, William O. Smith of Medford. Remains were brought to Antrim for interment and short funeral services were held at the grave on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 28, at one o'clock.

Returned West

Butler A. Jones and wife, who have been guests at the Ramsey homestead and of other relatives in town, left for their home in Sydney, Nebraska. Mr. Jones, who is a lawyer and banker, left the east in the early 80's and has done much to develop that section of the western country.

House Party

A most successful and pleasing house party was entertained by E. E. Smith and wife at Alabama farm for over the holiday.

A ROAD MEETING

In Which Antrim is Considerably Concerned

A PUBLIC meeting will be held at Hillsboro on December 9th, at 1 o'clock p.m., under the auspices of the Hillsboro Board of Trade, to forward a movement for the construction of the proposed "Contoocook Valley Highway," to run from the Massachusetts line through Rindge, Jaffrey, Peterboro, Hancock, Bennington, Antrim, Hillsboro, Henniker, Hopkinton and into Concord.

This is to be an important meeting and will doubtless be largely attended; a goodly number of Antrim men should be present, as our town being on the line with a long stretch of road ought to be very deeply interested.

Meeting will be held in Precinct hall.

New Postoffice Idea

Filipinos have certain conveniences at the Manila postoffice which would doubtless be appreciated by American if they were provided in this country, says the Boston Globe.

A department for wrapping parcels at a charge as near as possible to actual cost, for instance, has been opened in the faraway city, and its operation is meeting with much success. Paper, twine, boxes, etc., are available to the public.

Charges (including labor) range from five to twenty five cents.

Born in Antrim

Since so much has been said concerning the birthplace of President Franklin Pierce, the matter has been gone into quite extensively, and it has now been quite definitely settled that he was born in Antrim in a house on the road leading from North Branch to Hillsboro Lower Village. When only a few days old his parents removed with him into Hillsboro. A few words to this effect might be added to the inscription on the new statue in the State House grounds at Concord.

Community Christmas Tree

In many places the community Christmas tree is the popular thing, and since it has never been tried in Antrim it might not be a poor scheme to consider. It is thought by some of the church people that not enough interest is manifest to make church trees the successes they should be,—that their popularity is on the wane. The spirit of Christmas seems ever the same but the mode of observance appears to be changing a bit.

but good words to say for Principal Davis; he is a gentleman, pleasant to meet, courteous and obliging to his teachers and pupils, and known to be an unusually hard worker in his profession, and in addition possesses a firmness and dignity which is respected by all with whom he comes in contact. Under such a principal and with his faithful instruction, the friends of the Antrim High school hope for a continuation of its former successes.

High School Inspected

George W. Whitcher, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, inspected the Antrim High school last week. He reported that he could see great improvement in the attitude of the scholars toward their work and in the actual results they are obtaining.

Our school is one of the fifty six High schools and Academies in New Hampshire which are giving practical arts courses and receiving the approval of the state superintendent. Mr. Whitcher has the supervision of these courses and he expressed his satisfaction of the progress being made in our courses of agriculture and domestic arts.

A VILLAGE CUT-UP

By JOHN CHEBLE.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)
Miss Adilah Plumtree, the postmistress of Four Falls, sat staring at a letter in her hand. The letter was not addressed to her, but it had come so fastened in the post, and so she had exercised the prerogative which is so liberally ascribed to postmistresses.

It was addressed to Mr. Charles Black, and was signed by Andrew Usher. The sentence which was burning itself into Miss Plumtree's brain was as follows:

"I have told my wife that I have been called away on business till Monday, which is true in a certain sense. I have brought Lily down here for a couple of days. She is the smartest little thing you can imagine. Charley, and as fast as they make them. For heaven's sake throw Rose off the scent in case she suspects anything."

Miss Adilah read and re-read this letter, and then she folded her hands and uttered a calm, benignant, "I told you so."

Everybody in Four Falls had prophesied what would happen when pretty Rose Black married a traveling man. Charles, her brother, had brought him to the house, and he had fallen violently in love with Rose. They had been married nearly a year now. Nobody knew for what firm Andrew Usher traveled, except Charles, and he seemed completely under the spell of his friend. Charles was the black sheep of the village, and it was only a matter of time before his brother-in-law would complete his ruin.

Conversational phrases were often thrown at the pretty wife as she passed by. She seemed so devoted to her husband, and how long would it be before she would be found out?

Mr. Phillips had Stomach Trouble for More than Five Years.

Mr. W. R. Phillips, Jr., 130 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Georgia, writes: "I had the catarrh and stomach trouble for more than five years, and I faithfully tried all the medicines I saw advertised, and found they all failed to cure me. I then heard of Pepsin. I purchased six bottles, and after their use I soon discovered that I was well, safe and sound. I now weigh two hundred and ten pounds, and have never been sick since I took Pepsin. It is surely the best medicine for catarrh, stomach trouble and catarrh that I ever heard of."

not read her husband's character in the flashy attire, the money that he spent so lavishly, the ever-ready smile, so different from the sour visages of Four Falls?

And then, everybody knew that it was no legitimate business which took him away. He was not traveling for any firm.

Miss Plumtree sat in a daze for a long time. She must tell Mrs. Usher. But how could she without betraying her own breach of trust? She looked at the heading of the letter again. It was Portstown, of all places, where all the flashiest "sports" went about that time for the county fair.

Suddenly a brilliant idea came to her. She knew there was another letter in the mail addressed to Mrs. Usher by her husband. She found it and looked at it. It was mailed from another city, and, like its predecessor, it was unfastened. Mr. Usher was careless with his mail.

The postmistress quickly exchanged the envelopes. Then, sealing them carefully, she handed them to the carrier for delivery. After that she waited.

About half an hour after the delivery Mr. Charles Black came into the post office with a singular expression on his face.

"Any letters for me?" he asked. "Why, I think there was one for you, Mr. Black," answered Miss Plumtree, watching him narrowly.

Mr. Black looked perplexed and walked away. And Miss Plumtree squinted out up the street, watching for her victim. Surely enough, there she was coming down.

"Good morning, Miss Plumtree," said Rose Usher.

"Good morning, Mrs. Usher," said the postmistress. "I think there was a letter for you this morning."

"Yes, I have just received it," answered the girl. To the disgust of the postmistress there was not the shadow of trouble on her face.

"Do you know, Mr. Usher is growing very careless," she confessed, laughing. "What do you think he did? He actually put a letter to my brother into my envelope."

"Dear me!" murmured Miss Plumtree. Then, venomously, "It isn't that he's a spy, you suppose, is it?" she asked.

Rose Usher turned on her with dignity. "My husband is the finest man in the world, I would have you know," she answered.

She walked out of the office. The postmistress watched her. She saw her go into the railway station. A train would leave for Portstown in a few minutes. It was an hour's run, the county seat. Miss Plumtree smiled to herself and nodded her head briskly.

"That settles you and your man," she said to herself. "I can see through you; you're almost as deep as he is, Mrs. Usher, but I can see through you."

In strictest confidence she told one of the neighbors, omitting all mention of her part in the affair. By three in the afternoon half the gossip in the village knew. By six all the gossips were waiting on the station platform to see Mr. and Mrs. Usher return. They were enjoying their speculations. And when Charles Black put in an appearance, looking decidedly downcast, they under each other's breath.

The train drew in. There were only a few passengers descending at Four Falls. Early arriving among them were Mr. and Mrs. Usher—radiant. Charles Black ran toward them, a word passed, and he swung his arm around his wife's hand, and she smiled on the three faces, which had only been normal smiles of happy people, broadened as the three entered the onlookers, until they became real grins.

"This is quite a gathering," said Andrew Usher, and then he turned to the postmistress. "Waiting to meet somebody?"

"Don't you dare speak to me!" said the offended woman. "I know all about you, if you think I don't. And let me tell you this, Four Falls is a moral village, and we won't stand for any of your speculations."

"Hail!" exclaimed Andrew Usher, brightly. "Here opening letters, don't you dare you!" cried Miss Adilah. "All I can say is that the two unfastened letters were in the envelopes when they left my hands. I remember the bad man, he said he had a letter to a woman named Plumtree, but it was I who sealed it."

He turned to the onlookers. "I hope you are all satisfied," he said. "Steps it will be a little lesson to some of you. Mrs. Usher knew all about the matter, but she was foolishly afraid of the village opinion. I don't see the still opinion was that of a lot of people, due to the fact that there is a superfluity of female gossip in this village. I have overheard many a man having emigrated to the other side of the globe to get away from the village. I don't blame them."

"But who is Lily?" gabbled a dame, whose curiosity was too strong for her discretion.

"The dilly that won twenty thousand dollars in a canter this afternoon," answered Andrew. "Mine."

CENTIPEDES A FOOT LONG

Giant Insects of the Tropics Have Forty-Two Feet, and Every Claw Is Poisonous.

The giant centipede of Trinidad and Venezuela is sometimes a foot long, and can do very serious harm. Its foremost pair of feet are modified into supplementary jaws, which are fang-like, and may inflict a powerful bite; furthermore, each has a poison gland at its base, that sends into the wound a venom deadly to small creatures, and very painful even to mankind.

Moreover the sharp claw of each of the 42 feet is poisonous likewise, so that when the animal crawls over the soft skin of the human arm, it leaves a trail of red, inflamed spots. It is dangerous to knock the centipede off, for instantly the creature drives the claws more deeply into the flesh, and sends a greater amount of venom into each puncture; it may also take hold with its jaws.

When the centipede seizes its prey, or is itself caught by an enemy, it coils itself round its antagonist, and grips it tenaciously with all its legs. Many myriapods are brightly banded with black and yellow, contrasting tints that show conspicuously against the dark soil of the forests where they abound. The giant centipede is a shining mahogany brown, with the legs bluish and ringed with yellow.—Youth's Companion.

Wireless Worries.

Wireless telegraphy has done much for us, and will probably—rather, surely—do a great deal more for the benefit of humanity at large.

But, if they could speak, many birds would probably tell you that they don't approve of this new invention in the least. For in the parts of the world where there are a large number of wireless stations observations have been made which seem to indicate that birds are disturbed in a very curious way by the wireless waves.

The unoffending sea gull is one of the chief sufferers, as also is the harmless dove.

This strange state of things is attributed in some way to an effect of the ether waves, though how it is brought about is not yet understood.—Answers.

The Farmer's Explanation.

"Every now and then we read about a lot of quail following a hen up the road," said the summer boarder.

"Yes," replied Farmer Cornsossel. "How do you explain it?"

"Various ways. Sometimes the phenomenon is due to the fact that lots of people don't know the difference between a quail and a young brown Lechorn."

A Scientific Explanation.

"There's something uncanny about my husband," said Mrs. Wasserberg. "What makes you think so?" asked Mrs. Phillips.

"Not after how suddenly he may be seized the moment I start to go. I watch his pockets he wakes right up."

"That isn't so hard to explain. Some men are such lightweights that their own wives' words tell them when they are in a dangerous spot."

The new pending in congress which creates a volunteer officer's retirement roll is being favorably considered since it is discovered that of those who have been in congress who are now in the volunteer officer's retirement roll is being favorably considered since it is discovered that

By deducting 13,159 from the number reported April 1, 1914, the number is reduced to 8,826. Many have died since June 30, 1913, by which this number will be reduced. This is further confirmed by a recent set of figures taken, and 2,275 cards from it. Of these it was found that 61 had been officers. This would make about one officer to 54 men. There are now about 25,000 pensioners on the roll. Dividing this number by 54 makes 463, which is in all probability very near the exact number of living officers.

The annual investigation made by congress by the Legal Education and other seller organization contains these last figures. (S.L.) Only a few years ago in this report out of the 100,000 men who were a part of the army of 1914, only 10,000 were left. The actuarial table says that the possible period for these old men Suits Very latest styles in clever Suits, mostly copies of very much higher priced garments, expressing the most graceful of the jaunty new ideas recently introduced by style arbiters. All the new fabrics and shades, no two alike; no difficulty in suiting the very stout or very small woman. Large Discounts on all Suits.

Coats Exceptional offerings in new Coats for cold winter weather. Coats that give comfortable feeling of snugness, not alone from warmth, but by comparison in price with others, we assure a saving of from $1.00 to $5.00, in favor of The Fashion Shop. All sizes.

Dresses It would be folly to attempt descriptions. The Fashion Shop's Reputation for charming Gowns is sufficient to assure you of their style attractiveness. Every clever effect sanctioned by fashion for winter and early spring in all materials are shown here.

FURS This is the year to buy furs at moderate prices. True of fur coats, of scarfs and of muffs. Every piece "different."

THE RURAL CHURCH

THE FARMERS THE CUSTODIANS OF THE NATION'S MORALITY.

Co-operation of Church, School and Press Essential to Community Building.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The church, the press and the school form a triple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social triumvirate for their uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowmen I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The Farmers Are Great Church Builders.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm, and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church.

If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community.

The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and the church prejudice saps the vitality of many communities. An over-churching community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal Christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture.

We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community. The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral efforts is oftentimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

The evils of too many churches can be minimized by co-operation. The social and economic life of a rural community are respective units and cannot be successfully divided by denominational lines and the churches can only copy this important field by co-operation and co-ordination.

The greatest rural church will flourish, serve its community by leading the people in the building of community buildings in leading the people in all cooperative endeavors for the good and welfare of the community. It will be a real love for the community, a real love for the people, a real love for the united effort of the press, the school, the church and organized farmers.

The Premium List of the Antrim Poultry Association is printed and will be ready for distribution after this week. Inquire of the clerk, E. E. Cummings.

Alonzo Fisher

The townspeople were greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death Monday morning of Alonzo Fisher, at his home on Pleasant street. Mr. Fisher had been in his usual good health when he retired Sunday night.

In the morning when one of the household called to him and received no response, help was summoned and entrance gained to his room. It was then learned that he had died during the night. The cause of death is said to be heart failure, from which he had previously suffered at tacks.

Mr. Fisher was a native of Nova Scotia, where he was born 62 years ago.

The sudden death is especially sad, as Mrs. Fisher is confined to her home and is under the care of a trained nurse, suffering from the effects of a recent fall, when she broke her arm.

Prayers will be said at the No. Branch cemetery today when the burial will take place; Rev. Arbuckle officiates.

By the latest tabulation of figures, Hon. Herbert O. Badley is re-elected county commissioner by about twenty votes.

Lucius Tuttle, former president of the Boston & Maine railroad, died on Monday of this week, of angina pectoris.

NORTH BRANCH

Mr. and Mrs. Hardin Ford are rejoicing over the birth of an 8-lb. baby girl, born this Wednesday morning, December 2.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Sutherland have arrived at their home from Nobleboro, Me., for the winter. Mr. Sutherland has completed the sawing of over three million feet of lumber and will now rest awhile.

Thanksgiving was quietly observed in this village. Gilbert Trask and wife were with the Crombie's; the Flint came on Friday and on Wednesday as announced; Mr. Cunningham and wife were guests of the Lowes.

E. W. Estey and wife attended the funeral of Mr. Baker, a relative, at Hillsboro Lower Village, on Tuesday afternoon.

Tuesday—Hunters are scouring the woods for deer, with some success we understand.

High School Department.

The items of news appearing under this department are furnished us by the school.

Our basket ball team has lost two games, one to Peterboro High 50 to 14 and one to Hollis High 53 to 12.

These teams are the strongest ones in this section of the state and are composed of players who have played for three or four years. Our boys are very much lighter than these teams and deserve much credit for holding them as well as they did. Our boys lack weight and experience but their spirit and grit are excellent. In each game the Antrim team has held the opposing team well until the extra weight and strength wore them out. At Hollis the score was only 17 to 7 at the end of the first half.

Once more we ask for your support, if you believe in good clean athletics. The boys are working hard both in school work and in basket ball practice in an attempt to show you that athletics and study can exist together. The attendance at the Peterboro game was very poor and we lost six dollars. Your support would be appreciated by the school and by Mr. Davis, the principal.

Don't forget the game on Dec. 4. There will be no other home game until Jan. 8.

Prompt Action Stops Cough

When you first catch a cold, often indicated by a sneeze or cough, break it up at once. The idea that it does not matter often leads to serious complications. The remedy that immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the one demanded. Dr. King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c at your druggist. adv

About Advertising

It costs money to advertise in a paper of circulation and influence in the community. Every business man who seeks to enlarge his trade, recognizes the fact that advertising is a legitimate expense. It is not the cheapest advertising that pays the best. Sometimes it is the highest priced newspaper that brings the largest net profit to the advertiser.
