SOMETHING DOING

All the Time in Our Active, Attractive Antrim

This week is a busy one in this town. On Monday evening the regular meeting of Mt. Crooked Encampment was held, followed by installation of officers and a supper. In the afternoon of the same day the Woman's Club held a regular meeting at their rooms, and on Tuesday afternoon the W. O. T. U. held a session at the home of Mrs. O. B. Cochran. Wednesday afternoon and evening the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church meet, and hold a public supper and social in the evening. Antrim Grange also meets the same evening and have their officers installed. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday is being held the seventh annual exhibition of the Antrim Poultry Association. Every evening during the week, except Saturday, special services are being held at the village churches, it being the annual week of prayer.

And we feel sure there are other things taking place this week of which we have not yet been informed. No good reason for anyone saying: "Dead town; nothing doing!"

Not Quite Satisfactory

Regarding the matter of the birthplace of ex-President Pierce, which has been discussed a little in the columns of The Reporter, Mrs. M. Morton Russell of Antrim sends us the following information:

Franklin Pierce was born in Hillsboro, N. H., Nov. 23, 1804; took up residence in Concord in 1838.

This seems to be the general understanding of the matter, yet enough has been said regarding his parents residing in Antrim at about or so near the time of his birth—if not on the very date—that many have been led to believe that possibly this honor may belong to Antrim. There still existing some doubt in certain minds regarding the facts in the case and their authority, we desire to state that if any other person has any facts bearing upon this matter and would send them to The Reporter together with such authority as the statements may have, we would gladly give them space in these columns.

Legislature Convenes

Today, Wednesday, the great and general court assembles at Concord for its biennial session. It will be an interesting session and closely watched, says an exchange; with which statement we surely agree. The usual number of unnecessary appropriations will be asked to build a few more armories, normal schools, etc., all of which should be turned down. Appropriations for permanent roads will have to be seriously considered and wisely passed upon. The fish and game commission will submit sixteen recommendations, some of which are absolutely necessary, such as to prohibit boys under eighteen years of age from hunting licenses or the use of firearms. This and other necessary legislation will make the session unusually important.

Safer, When You Do Right

Attorney General James P. Tuttle says that you must have a light on your sleigh, as a sleigh is a vehicle. Senator Tolford, the one who introduced the bill, says that it was not the intent of the law to have sleighs come under that head. This will probably be remedied at the coming session of the legislature.—Wilton item in Milford Cabinet.

In the mean time it will be wise for every one to carry a light on their sleigh, as it is a law upon the statute books.

PITTSBURGH WITHOUT THE "H"

Was So Written by General Forbes, Who Christened the Now Famous City.

Under date of November 26, 1758, the earliest known use of the name of Pittsburgh occurred in a letter from General Forbes to Governor Denny of Pennsylvania, in which he told of the triumph of the British in the West, written the day of taking possession of "Fort Duquesne, now called Pittsburgh," very properly omitting the "h," he having christened the place and feeling that he knew how to indite the name of his own immortal progeny. Historian Bancroft says of that red-letter day: "The little army moved on in one body, and at evening (November 26) the youthful hero, Washington, could point out to General Armstrong, who marched at the front of his Provincials, to the Highlanders, the Royal Americans, and to Forbes himself, the meeting of the rivers. Armstrong's own hand raised the British flag on the ruined bastions of the fortress. As the banner floated over the waters the place, at the suggestion of Forbes, was with one voice called Pittsburgh. It is the most lasting monument to William Pitt. America raised to his name statues that have been wrongfully broken, and granite piles of which not one stone remains upon another, but so long as the Allegheny and Monongahela shall flow to form the Ohio, so long as the English tongue shall be the language of freedom in the boundless valley which their waters traverse, his name shall stand inscribed on the 'Gateway of the West.'"

Napoleon's Tax on Tobacco.

Napoleon tried to smoke once, and then, with dire results, instituted the French tobacco monopoly, which the German government now proposes to adopt, so far as cigarettes are concerned.

At a court reception held early in 1810 the emperor remarked a lady wearing jewels of such magnificence that he inquired how her husband made his money. "He is a tobacco merchant," was the reply, which led him to seek further information as to such a profitable business. Before the year expired Napoleon issued a decree restricting the sale and manufacture of tobacco exclusively to the state. It has remained a monopoly ever since, and for many years past has brought in an annual revenue of over $16,000,000.

Bible and New Zealand Schools.

The New Zealand government has introduced into the house of representatives of that colony a bill to provide for a referendum vote at the next parliament election to determine whether the Bible shall be read in the public schools under the supervision of teachers, but without sectarian teaching, and whether provision shall be made during school hours for religious instruction by a minister or his substitute, to be chosen by the parent. If the bill, which has received the endorsement of the government, shall pass, it will be submitted to the voters at the next election and the result will be laid before parliament at the opening session of 1915.—The Living Church.

OBVIOUSLY.

"When I started in business," said the self-made man with the double chin. "I had only one shirt to my back." "I suppose," the fastidious young man replied, "you spent your first profits for another shirt." "No, I put them right back into the business." "Oh, I see. You didn't have a beautiful young stenographer in those days."

Hoosier Post Seen in Films.

An interesting future Selig production is a drama based on James Whitcomb Riley's famous first poem, "The Ole Swimm'n' Hole." The noted poet will himself be seen on the screen in a prologue.

Bernstein's Play to Be Filmed.

Henri Bernstein's dramatic success, "The Thief," which was produced in this country by Charles Frohman, is now being adapted for pictures, and will soon be "filmed."

Antrim Woman's Club

Some Good Sport

Considerable interest is caused in the horse racing which is being held almost every afternoon in the field near the residence of F. A. Taylor, on Bennington road. The snow has been carefully rolled and as good a track as possible has been prepared. Owners of speed horses from Hillsboro, Antrim and Bennington, meet in competition and have considerable sport.

W. R. C. Notes

A special meeting of Ephraim Weston W. R. C., will be held Friday evening, Jan. 8, for installation of officers. Department President, Mrs. Mary W. Folsom, of Dover, will be the installing officer.

Corps members and their families, Veterans and Sons of Veterans with their families are invited to attend.

Town Water Users Attention!

For a few weeks past the water in Campbell pond—the source of Antrim's supply—has been considerably reduced, owing to the low condition of springs and constant freezing of the water. We are asking users to exercise unusual care in the running of water and only use such amount as is absolutely necessary, thereby saving as much as possible; otherwise we shall be facing a serious condition—a water famine.

Per Order,

Water Commissioners of Antrim

Ice Racing in Hillsboro

There has been cleared on the river within 5 minutes' walk of the centre of the town a quarter mile straightway course for horse racing. As level as the floor and room for 5 horses abreast, this makes the best place for a little sport that could be offered. The first matinee will be held Saturday afternoon, Jan. 9, at 1:30 o'clock and everybody who has a horse in this or surrounding towns is invited to bring him here and try out his speed. Consider this notice an invitation for you to try your brush-horse with those of Antrim, Bennington, Henniker and Hillsboro. If your horse hasn't any speed come and see the others go. Remember the date, Jan. 9, the place, Hillsboro, Martin's Grove Course. A lot of fun for everyone. Bring your speed. For further information ask E. W. Proctor, Hillsboro.

Make your plans so as to attend the "Movies" next Wednesday night; watch for posters and flyers.

SEVENTH ANNUAL

Poultry Exhibition Now On in Force at Town Hall

The seventh annual exhibition of the Antrim Poultry Association, Inc., opened Tuesday morning at the town hall. It will continue for three days. It is expected by the management that about three hundred birds will be on exhibition, and many specimens from out of town exhibitors are in the hall.

C. A. Ballou of Worcester, Mass., and F. W. Rogers of Brockton, Mass., are the judges. The work of judging was commenced promptly and all the prize ribbons and score cards are now on the coops. Several cups, cash prizes and merchandise prizes have attracted exhibitors and several close contests are in evidence.

Every one who is at all interested in poultry and desires to see some extra good stock, will be sure to attend this exhibition; probably as good a show as Antrim has ever had when quality alone is considered.

We shall endeavor to give a full list of exhibitors and premiums awarded in our next issue.

Encampment Officers Installed

The newly elected officers of Mt. Crooked Encampment, I. O. O. F., were installed Monday night by John Thornton, D. D. G. P., as follows:

Chief Patriarch, H. Burr Eldredge; High Priest, George D. Dresser; Senior Warden, Archie N. Nay; Junior Warden, Horace Patterson; Scribe, Charles L. Eaton; Treasurer, Everett N. Davis; 1st Watch, Charles L. Fowler; 2d Watch, J. Leon Brownell; 3d Watch, John S. Nesmith; 4th Watch, Edw. M. Lane; Outside Sentinel, Charles N. Fagles; Inside Sentinel, Lucius E. Parker; Guards to Tent, George E. Hutchinson and Leon E. Nay.

Following the installation ceremonies refreshments were served in the dining hall.

An invitation has been accepted from North Star Encampment to attend their installation next Monday evening, and it is expected that a large number from here will attend.

Use Town Water Sparingly

The water commissioners, in another column today, are warning all users of town water that care must be taken not to allow any water to run to waste. The question of the water supply thru-out the town is a vital one, requiring thoughtful attention at the present time.

Campbell pond, the source of supply for the town water system, has lowered materially and the commissioners are anxious that everybody should be as careful as possible in caring for poor faucets, allowing water to run continuously, etc. Within the past few weeks the supply has considerably diminished, and the pond has continued to freeze deeper and deeper.

If we could be visited by a January thaw of some length, there would certainly be additional cause for rejoicing.

Fred W. Gould, County Commissioner

Who has received his appointment to fill out the unexpired term of Hon. Herbert O. Hadley, deceased, is a Greenfield man, well and favorably known by many throughout this section of the county. His friends have every reason to believe that he will prove the right man for the position, and that his general good judgment will prove a valuable asset to the office.

A SPELLING SCHOOL

It Wasn't a Large Affair, But Brought Matters to a Head.

By LAWRENCE ALFRED CLAY.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure, Newspaper Syndicate.)

The village of Freedom had no railroad connection, but had you entered it on foot or by vehicle the first resident you encountered would have been Deacon Salathiel Green, putting a leather hinge on his front gate or beating with folded arms on the steps of the post office.

Had you asked the deacon for a list of excuses as to why the village existed he could have answered:

"Well, we have Miss Bird Davis, who is handsomer than an acre of red, white and blue hollyhocks, and smarter'n chain-lightning."

"Also a three-legged calf, owned by Keziah Perkins."

"Also, the loyalty of the people. We have seven hundred inhabitants, but claim twice that number."

"Also, a church spire that has been struck five different times by lightning."

"Also, Grandma Hazleton, who remembers that she dandled George Washington on her knee when he was a kid six months old."

"Also, half a dozen young fellows who are in love with the chain-lightning gal."

This was the tale told to young Roy Campbell as he arrived in the village to spend a vacation of a month in the late fall. He was slightly interested in the three-legged calf, and he reasoned that in time he should behold Miss Davis, but he was not startled. As he bent his steps toward the inn, Deacon Green looked after him and shook his head.

"He may be a nice young man, and he may be a post office robber instead. Time will tell."

The village of Freedom had gathered the vegetables from its gardens, and had plenty of time in which to size up the stranger. It came to the conclusion that he was not dangerous, but why didn't he come out as frankly as the wire-fence man, the windmill man and others had done and relate his history from childhood up? It counted for nothing that he attended church the first Sunday of his arrival and made a generous contribution as the plate was thrust under his nose. Indeed, as Mr. Sparrow said, and as others agreed with him: "If he hadn't been in jail somewhere for something or other would he be seen inside a church and trying to deceive us?"

"No! No!"

"He gave up half a dollar to the plate, while the rest of us gave pennies and nickels, but wouldn't Captain Kidd have done the same?"

The young men realized at once what had brought the stranger to the gates of the village. He had heard of the winsome Miss Davis, and had come to admire, fall in love and wed her and bear her away. He was from the city, and she had been heard to say that she should never live in a village after marriage. Therefore, they glared at him and avoided him and talked to his detriment and wished him to Halifax.

A woman can overlook it in a man for being a bit wicked, if it is not her husband. A girl can and does overlook it if the man is young and good-looking, and a mystery is thrown around him. It was logical that when the young men dropped their differences and combined, against the stranger they excited curiosity more than distrust among the female hearts not too old.

Miss Bird Davis encountered Mr. Roy Campbell at church and on the street and said to herself: "He may be a criminal and a fugitive from justice, but I'd like an introduction to him just the same."

They told her that he was probably a horse thief. That he was a scout for post office robbers. That the constable had an eye on him. That the sheriff was seeking to get his finger-prints. That while he looked as innocent as a yearling babe, he would try every art to get a girl to elope with him, and after a month leave her dead broke on the street of some cold and cruel city.

Miss Bird listened and also laughed. She likewise suggested that an introduction to such an interesting character was in order.

What brought matters to a head was a spelling school. Freedom was proud of her school. It wasn't a great big schoolhouse, with a large and liberal staff of teachers. On the contrary, no unnecessary building material had been used, and two teachers did all the whaling and teaching. Neither French nor German was taught there, but when it came down to old-fashioned orthography the rest of Warren county had to go way back and sit down. Whenever in a newspaper or magazine one of the pupils discovered the word "program" with the final "me" added, an indignant protest was at once forwarded to the guilty party.

Beginning with the fall term, these spelling schools were held once a month all winter. One was due a few days after Mr. Campbell appeared in Freedom. It was talked of as being better than a moving picture show or a circus. People who wouldn't go to a funeral had the front seats at these contests.

No one invited or suggested, but when the evening came Mr. Campbell was there. Moreover, he was chosen by one of the sides, and it was thus that he found himself a contestant, instead of a spectator. It was Miss Bird who had the choice of the opposing line, and she had her love-sick swains beside her. All were good spellers, but she was always the last of the two lines to go down. Her mother had said of her:

"Nobody can say whom Bird will fall in love with and marry, but you can make up your mind it'll have to be somebody who can spell her down."

By and by the hard words came, and the lines began to thin and shorten up. Until he caught Miss Bird looking at him defiantly, Mr. Campbell had wished he had kept out of it. There was a direct challenge in her eyes and pose that awoke a feeling of antagonism and he determined that the victory should be his.

In time they were the last two up. Of course the hopes and sympathies of the people were with the girl. Even in her alertness she caught whispered words behind her which she was to recall later on. For a long ten minutes it was nip and tuck, as Deacon Green expressed it, and the young man had won the victory. There were no signs of dejection on her part, but the victor held out his hand with a smile and said:

"You did nobly. Let me say to you that I am one of a firm publishing a dictionary, and no word goes into it until I have spelled it."

"I am glad that I had such a worthy antagonist," she pleasantly replied.

The next morning there was great excitement in Freedom. Mr. Campbell was missing. He had not returned to the inn after the spelling school. He had not left town in any vehicle. He had not taken any of his effects with him. Would he take the highway thus on foot? He had been seen leaving the schoolhouse, but after that all traces were lost.

The constable got busy, and with him a score of people. It could not be that any accident had happened, and telephone messages to the nearest villages failed to ascertain that the missing man had arrived there or been seen upon the highways.

All day the hunt and the talk went on and it was far into evening that Miss Bird remembered the whispered words behind her: "If he spells her down it must come tonight. Is everything ready?"

Roy Campbell had mysteriously disappeared. Her would-be lovers must have had a hand in it, for they were all sitting together. There was no lake or river into which they might plunge him. If they had menaced him into leaving the village, he would not leave without calling at the hotel. What then? It must be a case of kidnaping, though that seemed too bold an offense for the young men to commit.

If it was a case of kidnaping, where was the victim being held?

Mr. Davis was a quiet, even-tempered man. Not once a year did he get angry at anything, and he had never been known to strike a man a blow. It was to be expected, therefore, that he would be bewildered when the daughter came to his bedside at midnight and awoke him.

"Father, you are to get up and come with me!"

"Where? What?"

"I think I know where Mr. Campbell is."

"Good Lord!"

Ten minutes later, when he had joined her downstairs, she said: "I believe the young men have kidnaped Mr. Campbell and are holding him in the old cider mill. We are going to see."

"I will get the constable," he replied.

"We do not want him with us. We are going to manage without him. If we find Mr. Campbell in there alone he will be bound, and we can release him. If the young men are there you are to sail in and knock their heads off!"

"But I'm no fighter," he protested.

"But you've got to be or I'll deny you as a father!"

The young men had made prisoner of Roy Campbell and borne him off to the old cider mill, thinking to drive him away from the village by threats. When he defied them—when he was missed and a search began, they knew not what to do except to bind and guard him until some plan was formulated. They were all there, seeking to bribe and renewing their threats.

"Hit every one of them, and hit hard!" the girl whispered in her father's ear as they listened at the dilapidated old door.

Mr. Davis spat on his hands, kicked the door down and "sailed in." And none escaped him. The town of Freedom has never learned the full particulars of that adventure, and never will. It has to be content with the marriage that took place a year later.

All He Wanted.

Carefully Abelard Wilks scanned the fair countryside for a suitable spot. After much thought, he stuck his easel up, got out his paints and started. Oblivious to his surroundings, he was suddenly startled to see a red-faced, perspiring motorist at his side. "Don't put another stroke to it," urged the newcomer. "I'll give you $5 for it as it stands." Something in Abelard Wilks snapped. "It—it is very kind of you," he stammered, "but it's not quite finished." "Don't matter one jot," said he of the motor garb, as he got his money out. "I only want the canvas to mend a burst tire."

On the Face of It.

"My dachshund here is a pedigreed beast."

"How can you say that when anybody can see for himself the dog is a low down pup?"

Worth Knowing.

"It is said that there are thousands of Greek boys held in bondage throughout this country by the proprietors of shoe shining parlors."

"Well! Well!"

"They work for mender wages and have to turn over all the tips they get to their employers."

"I'm glad you told me that. Hereafter I will be able to withhold a tip without feeling the least bit stingy."

To Be Expected.

"How was the man dressed who swindled you?"

"He wore a light gray derby, a flashy checked suit, a red tie with a diamond horseshoe pin stuck in it, a tan velvet vest and—"

"That's enough. If you tried to change a hundred dollar bill for a chap dressed like that you deserved to be swindled."

TAKE TIME TO SMILE

PAPA'S SURGERY WAS ROUGH

Little Jessie Resented Manner in Which Fond Parent Was Wiping Tear From Her Eye.

An amused smile fluttered over the features of Congressman Samuel J. Tribble of Georgia the other night when the talk topic in the lobby of a Washington hotel turned to the wonderful sayings of the kiddies. He said he was reminded of a recent incident.

A fond father was taking his little six-year-old daughter downtown in an automobile, and on stopping in front of a store he noticed that the drive against the strong wind had made the youngster's eyes water.

"Just a minute, Jessie," said father, wrapping one finger and dabbing the little girl's eye. "Let me wipe that tear away."

"Say," was the rather amusing exclamation of Jessie, "what do you think that is—a push-button?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

COTS AND BOSTON CULTURE

Los Angeles Matron Had Trouble in Making Her Wants Known—Finally Secured a Small Bed.

"Apropos of Boston and her R's," said a Los Angeles matron. "I had a very funny experience with them both last year. We were living in a cramped flat in Boston, and I needed a small cot-bed for Harry, who was four years old. So I went to a furniture dealer's, where I was told that they didn't keep cots. The obliging clerk, however, directed me to a store on another street, where, he assured me, I would find plenty of cots."

"It turned out to be an ordinary toy shop, and though slightly taken aback, I walked right in.

"Do you keep cots?" said I.

"Yes'm."

"Well, I want one for a small boy of four."

"The clerk came back in a moment, trundling a little red wagon after him!

"When I want a cart," I explained, as soon as I could catch my breath, "I'll say so. What I really would like to get today, if the purchase is possible in this town of excessive culture, is a cot, cot."

"I was politely told that they kept cots, but not cots—and when I was directed to the store I had just left, where they kept cots, but not cots!

"I was confused, but determined, and I finally got a cot that had casters instead of wheels."

His Objection.

"What's your objection to women voting?"

"They haven't got industry enough," said the man with short hair and a large diamond pin. "I used to see men who would willingly vote six or seven times in a day. I've never heard a woman talk who would think of voting more than once at the same election."

A Tactful Explanation.

"My dear, you are not thinking of going to savage islands as a missionary, are you?"

"Why not, sir? Don't you think I am capable of doing the work?"

"Oh, it is not that. I am only afraid the savages will agree with us at home here in thinking you are sweet enough to eat."

Father's Cooking.

"Of course, you and your wife are happy."

"Yes," replied the young man. "But she is a little thoughtless. Whenever I perform with the chafing dish she insists on talking about the superior Welsh rabbits her father used to make."

Minor Woes.

She—I think it is terrible that Russia joined in this war.

He—Yes, it is going to add vastly to the cost of humanity.

She—I wasn't thinking of humanity. I was thinking how hard it is to pronounce all those names.

A Member of The Rebeccas A Bad Case of Nasal Catarrh Cured By Pe-ru-na.

That any case of nasal catarrh can be cured by an internal medicine is denied by some. Only a glance at our files would be necessary to convince any sane person that catarrh can be cured by the internal use of Peruna.

Mrs. Victoria Pickel, of Columbus, is a case of this sort. She had nasal catarrh very badly, and was cured by Peruna. We will let her tell her own story. Mrs. Victoria M. Pickel, 130 E. Mound Street, Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"I have been using Peruna for catarrh, having had a very aggravated case, so bad that it clogged the nasal organs. When I did get the nasal organs opened, the mucus would drop into my throat and make me very sick."

"A friend advised me to take Peruna, and after using four bottles I was cured. I have no trouble now, and am happy to say that I am enjoying the best of health and attending to my lodge duties, being a member of the Rebeccas Lodge of Odd Fellows."

"I would recommend Peruna to those suffering with the same obnoxious trouble."

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Genuine Merit Required to Win People's Confidence

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Antrim Reporter.

Dr. William B. Russell has left town and will go to Warren to assume the practice of Dr. Francis Gerrold.

Mrs. Frank E. Sheldon was the guest Monday evening of Mrs. J. J. Griswold, being here to attend the Auxiliary installation.

Ina Cram passed away at his home Sunday after a very painful illness. Funeral services were held Tuesday from the home and Rev. Gibson officiated.

Frank Keeser is visiting his sister, Mrs. James S. May, at Andover, Mass., en route for Walden, N. Y., where he will be employed this winter. His family will remain in town at present.

We were amused to learn that a 50-lb. package was sent from here recently by parcel post at a cost of 54 cents. The package would have been carried the same distance by express for 27 cents!

Commencing last Friday the railroad fare from Bennington to Antrim was reduced from 6 cents to 5; from here to Hillsborough reduced from 28 cents to 25. A reduction of 11 cents was made in the fare from here to Boston.

Owing to greatly increased business of the Simmons Hardware Co., who own the Kimball shops here, this business will not remove from town until April, if it does then. The Simmons Co. have received a $1,000,000 order for pocket cutlery.

Howard H. Weston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Weston, of Winter Hill, Mass., passed away at his home Sunday morning, January 3, at the age of 43 years and 3 months. Funeral is held today, Wednesday; interment at Woburn, Mass. The Weston family are remembered as summer residents at Lake George.

WILLARD CARKIN DEAD

Willard Carkin, one of the town's oldest and best known citizens, died early Sunday morning at the Carkin homestead. He was over 90 years of age.

Mr. Carkin was a native of this town. In his early years he was in the powder business with his father. He later went to Boston and engaged in the wholesale liquor business. For several years he had an extensive dredging business on the Great Lakes. In West Virginia he owned large soft coal interests.

The funeral was held this afternoon, Wednesday, from his late home. Mrs. Carkin survives him.

LEARNED FROM WAR

Sanitation and Surgery Have Been Wonderfully Improved.

There is Less Fear of Disease Now—Bullets Are Jacketed and Modern Military Rifles Leave No Gaping Wounds.

In the American Civil war eight soldiers died of disease to one from wounds, writes a United States army surgeon. Experts expect that in the present general European struggle not more than three will fall victim to sickness to one killed on the field of battle. Such is the advance of army sanitation and army surgery in 50 years. The Americans and the Japanese have been the leaders. The United States army hospitals have installed many remarkable innovations since the Spanish-American war, with its dreadful lesson in the danger of typhoid, and these new ideas have been adopted by the army surgeons of old world powers.

So it is expected that the present war, the greatest yet in history, also will be the most humane. There will be no disproportionate mortality list from disease and no army of cripples as an aftermath.

The modern high-power, quick-firing military rifle and the development in artillery will have much to do with the change.

Those who die will die more quickly. Gangrene and infection will be practically unknown quantities, it is thought.

Before the Russo-Japanese conflict the armies the world over used a high caliber bullet, made of unsheathed lead and greased to overcome friction in the barrel.

The muzzle velocity was less than half that of the missiles now employed.

Then, too, bayonet and saber charges were more common. These resulted in hideous wounds, very difficult for surgeons to handle.

The bullets of the modern rifle are of less diameter than the ordinary lead pencil. They are jacketed with nickel, lead or steel and have tremendous velocity.

The soft, mushrooming bullets of the old day resulted in the shattering of bones and the crushing, rather than cutting, of tissues. Infection was almost inevitable, the grease being especially unsanitary. A wound in the abdomen was considered necessarily fatal. The death rate among the wounded was enormous.

In recent campaigns there are instances where soldiers shot in what were once considered vital spots have walked unsupported to the field hospitals.

Germany uses a Mauser rifle, with a bullet of 8 mm. caliber, steel and copper coated. Great Britain's missile is the Lee-Enfield, caliber 7.7 mm., the coating being cupro-nickel.

The French weapon is the Lebel rifle, of 8 mm. caliber, with bullet coated with nickel. Russia uses Mosin-Nagant rifles, 7.62 mm., with bullets cupro-nickel coated. Austria's chief small arm is the Mannlicher, caliber 8 mm., with a steel sheet over the tip.

Hitting a man beyond 350 yards, the wounds inflicted by all these bullets are clean cut. They frequently pass through bone tissue without splintering.

Long and Short.

The longest hour of all my life,
I never, never shall forget;
It was an hour of painful strife,
Remembrance of it grieves me yet;
'Twas not where mighty armies clashed
With shells exploding in the air,
Nor where wild billows madly splashed—
'Twas in a heartless dentist's chair.

The shortest hour that I recall

Was not an hour I spent alone
Beside the fairest girl of all
On whom the sun has ever shone:
It was the hour when she was late
And, while she made herself superb,
Allowed the taxicab to wait
At my expense beside the curb.

Why Blame It on the Eyes?

An English physician makes the announcement that he has found after long and careful research that if a man is erratic, disagreeable and a menace to society it is because the muscles of his eyes do not receive proper nourishment. There are many people, however, who will cling to the old theory that if a man is erratic, disagreeable and a menace to society it is largely because of the poor quality of his heart and liver.

Gratified Ambition.

"Oh, I'm so excited!" exclaimed the lady who had been trying for years to get a speaking part; "our manager says he is going to put on a new play next season, and I'm to have the heaviest role."
"Yes," replied the other girl, "he was telling me about it this morning. The scene is laid in a baker's shop. You are to throw the roll at the villain who comes in to rob the till."

Try This for Neuralgia

Thousands of people keep on suffering with neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, lumbago, sciatica, and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied but it does give almost instant relief. adv.

NATION'S LABOR PROBLEM

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF WOMEN WORK AS FARM HANDS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

Our government never faced so tremendous a problem as that now lying dormant at the doors of congress and the legislatures, and which, when aroused, will shake this nation from center to circumference, and make civilization hide its face in shame. That problem is—women in the field.

The last federal census reports show we now have 1,514,000 women working in the field, most of them south of the Mason and Dixon line. There were approximately a million negro slaves working in the fields when liberated by the emancipation proclamation. We have freed our slaves and our women have taken their places in bondage. We have broken the shackles off the negroes and welded them upon our daughters.

The Chain-Gang of Civilization. A million women in bondage in the southern fields form the chain-gang of civilization—the industrial tragedy of the age. There is no overseer quite so cruel as that of unrestrained greed, no whip that stings like the lash of suborned destiny, and no auctioneer's block quite so revolting as that of organized avarice.

The president of the United States was recently lauded by the press, and very properly so, for suggesting mediation between the engineers and railroad managers in adjusting their schedule of time and pay. The engineers threatened to strike if their wages were not increased from approximately ten to eleven dollars per day and service reduced from ten to eight hours and a similar readjustment of the overtime schedule. Our women are working in the field, many of them barefooted, for less than 50 cents per day, and their schedule is the rising sun and the evening star, and after the day's work is over they milk the cows, slop the hogs and rock the baby to sleep. Is anyone meditating over their problems, and to whom shall they threaten a strike?

Congress has listened approvingly to those who toll at the forge and behind the counter, and many of our statesmen have smiled at the threats and have fanned the flame of unrest among industrial laborers. But women are as surely the final victims of industrial warfare as they are the burden-bearers in the war between nations, and those who arbitrate and mediate the differences between capital and labor should not forget that when the expenses of any industry are unnecessarily increased, society foots the bill by drafting a new consignment of women from the home to the field. Pinch no Crumb From Women's Crust of Bread.

No financial award can be made without someone footing the bill, and we commend to those who accept the responsibility of the distribution of industrial justice, the still small voice of the woman in the field as she pleads for mercy, and we beg that they pinch no crumb from her crust of bread or put another patch upon her ragged garments.

We beg that they listen to the scream of horror from the eagle on every American dollar that is wrung from the brow of toiling women and hear the Goddess of Justice hiss at a verdict that increases the want of woman to satisfy the greed of man.

The women behind the counter and in the factory cry aloud for sympathy and the press thunders out in their defense and the pulpit pleads for mercy, but how about the woman in the field? Will not these powerful exponents of human rights turn their talent, energies and influence to her relief? Will the Goddess of Liberty enthroned at Washington hold the caloused hand and soothe the feverish brow of her sex who sows and reaps the nation's harvest or will she permit the male of the species to shove women—weak and weary—from the bread-line of industry to the back alleys of poverty?

Women and Children First. The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 409,000 are sixteen years of age and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose future mothers spend their girlhood days behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture and refinement that grace the home, charm society and entice man to leap to glory in noble achievements if our daughters are raised in the society of the ox and the companionship of the plow?

In that strata between the ages of sixteen and forty-five are 950,000 women working as farm hands and many of them with suckling babes teething at their breasts, as drenched in perspiration, they wield the scythes and guide the plow. What is to become of that nation where poverty breaks the crowns of the queens of the home; despair huris a mother's love from its throne and hunger drives innocent children from the schoolroom to the hoe?

The census bureau shows that 155,000 of these women are forty-five years of age and over. There is no more pitiful sight in civilization than these saintly mothers of Israel stooped with age, drudging in the field from sun until sun and at night drenching their dingy pillows with the tears of despair as their aching hearts take it all to God in prayer. Civilization strikes them a blow when it should give them a crown, and their only friend is he who broke bread with beggars and said: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Oh, America! The land of the free and the home of the brave, the world's custodian of chivalry, the champion of human rights and the defender of the oppressed—shall we permit our maidens fair to be torn from the hearthstone by the ruthless hand of destiny and chained to the plow? Shall we permit our faithful wives, whom we covenanted with God to cherish and protect, to be hurled from the home to the harvest field, and our mothers dear to be driven from the old arm chair to the cotton patch?

In rescuing our citizens from the forces of civilization, can we not apply to our fair Dixieland the rule of the sea—"women and children first?"

There must be a readjustment of the wage scale of industry so that the women can be taken from the field or given a reasonable wage for her services. Perhaps the issue has never been fairly raised, but the Farmers' Union, with a membership of ten million, puts its organized forces squarely behind the issue and we now enter upon the docket of civilization the case of "The Woman in the Field" and demand an immediate trial.

Starts in a new play. Blanche Sweet is featured in "For Her Father's Sins," a two-reel film play produced by Jack O'Brien. In the production is told how a college girl, daughter of a wealthy, miserly department store owner, leaves her home and works under an assumed name to learn how the underpaid clerks live. As the result of her investigations, she forces her father to increase the wages of his employees and incidentally saves him from being killed by a dissatisfied workman. A pretty romance is woven into the production. Wallace Reid, Billie West and Al Fillson have prominent parts. The scenario was written by Anita Doos.

New Series of Plays. Four new series of photoplays by prominent authors are announced for future presentation. Each play will be complete in itself, treating an individual incident. "Below the Dead Line," by Scott Campbell, will be a detective series; "Young Lord Strangleigh," adapted from the stories by Robert Barr, which appeared in a well-known weekly, will be produced in four two-reel subjects; "Olive's Opportunities," written especially for motion pictures by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, and "The Girl Who Earns Her Own Living," by Mark Swan, are the other future serial plays.
