Kidney Trouble Causes Intense Suffering

Sixteen years ago I was taken sick with kidney trouble and suffered terribly for three months. I did not work during this time and was mostly confined to my bed. After using other remedies I finally tried a bottle of Swamp-Root. I immediately began to feel better, and after using seven fifty-cent bottles, was entirely cured and have had no kidney trouble since. I can truly say that I owe my good health to Swamp-Root. You may publish this letter for the benefit of other people afflicted as I was with the hope of bringing to their attention this most wonderful remedy.

Yours very truly,

ANTRIM VICTORS OVER PETERBORO

The Game on Saturday, 11 to 9, Some Attraction, yet a Bit Unsatisfactory

Antrim made it three victories in a row last Saturday by winning from Peterboro in the opening game on the home grounds, 11 to 9.

For three innings neither team scored, then in the fourth with two out the visitors made two runs, a performance which the home boys equalled by a nice 3-bagger by Mulhall which brought in two tallies and on a sacrifice he also scored.

In the last of the eighth inning the score was 7 to 6 in favor of Peterboro, when Raleigh of Antrim made a great hit and reached third base. The crowd were much surprised to have Umpire and a 2 bagger were secured, five scores were made and Kepple was knocked out of the box. This practically finished the game.

The full score follows:

THE PAGEANT OF SAN FRANCISCO

Five Reel "Quality" Feature at Town Hall Friday Evening-- The Majestic Presents a Good Thing

Many people in Antrim and vicinity appreciate motion pictures of high quality, historical interest, and of educational value. An opportunity to see a genuine feature of merit will be given our people on Friday evening of this week. Wonderful views of the great earthquake that leveled San Francisco almost to the ground a few years ago, are among the historical scenes that go to make up the "Pageant of San Francisco," which is to be shown upon the screen at Town Hall, Antrim, Friday evening of this week at 8.00 o'clock. The picture was made to celebrate the opening of the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, and no expense was spared to make it worthy of the great event it commemorates. This feature, which is in five parts, opens with the discovery of the Golden Gate, by Spanish Adventurers, over two hundred years ago. All the events that have made San Francisco one of the greatest of American cities and aided so materially in the development of the Pacific slope are shown in this film. The first settlement, the lawless days under Mexican rule, the arrival of the hustling Yankee, raising of Old Glory, the discovery of gold, and the rush of '49 following in historical sequence. The terrible earthquake and the heroic rise from the smouldering ashes into a new city follow. With a beautiful panoramic view showing the entire great Panama-Pacific Exposition, with the bills of the Golden Gate sloping to the sea, the picture is brought to a fitting conclusion. One of the features of this film is the artistic manner in which the subject is presented. Beautifully united scenes abound in the picture. adv

OBSERVANCES IN TWO TOWNS

Memorial Day in Antrim and Bennington Fittingly Observed---Saturday and Monday

Memorial Day in Antrim was observed on Saturday by Ephraim Weston Post of the Grand Army by first going in autos to North Branch, where the citizens and school children participated in appropriate exercises. The soldiers' graves at the cemetery there were then decorated, after which the veterans returned to the village, stopping enroute at Antrim Centre where the usual services were held at the ceme-

Meeting House hill the members of ter, D. A. R., and the Post, assisted dren, held exercis-cemetery. In the a large gathering town hall, where Day exercises were

The address of the afternoon was given by George K. Stratton of Bradford, Past Commander of New Hampshire State G. A. R., who delivered a very able address, the kind that only a veteran can give; this was very interesting and well received by the large audience present. There were vocal and instrumental selections during the exercises. Miss Gertrude Jameson rendered a very pleasing vocal selection.

From the hall the column was formed and march was made to Maplewood cemetery, to decorate the soldiers' graves; return was then made to the Soldiers' Monument, where the closing exercises were held, remarks being made by Rev. S. P. Brownell. The Woman's Relief Corps had charge of these final exercises, which brought to a very fitting close the program of the day.

Special Exercises of ton--Large Au- Fine--Good the Day at Benning- dience--Weather Address Given

The patriotic societies of this place had prepared an excellent program for the observance of Memorial Day, and the exercises were held in the town hall on Monday afternoon. Hon. Augustus W. Gray, now a resident of Boston yet retaining as large a place in his heart for the good town of Bennington as when he lived among us several years ago, was president of the day. His very pleasing manner of introduction, the nice way he had of reading the program, and his well selected stories, were peculiarly his own and helped make him the good presiding officer that he was. A large company crowded the hall and listened to a well arranged program given by members of the village schools; these numbers consisted of recitations, songs and exercises. Other music was furnished by a chorus of mixed voices; and the Antrim Band rendered several patriotic selections. The presence of the school children bearing flags was an inspiring sight.

Rev. Andrew Gibson delivered the oration of the afternoon, and spoke entertainingly and instructively on the subject of "The Strength of a Nation." This was a masterly effort and was highly regarded by all who heard it.

At the close of the exercises in the hall the procession formed under direction of George Messer, marshal of the day, and marched to the bridge near the depot, where suitable exercises were held and flowers were strewn upon the waters in memory of the sailor dead. From here the line of march was to the soldiers' monument; after the customary exercises were delivered here, the day's program was brought to a close.

Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows Have Good Time

Waverley Lodge, I. O. O. F., were hosts on Saturday evening last to the State Grand Master of the Odd Fellows, Walter H. Tripp of Short Falls, Grand Conductor Chadbourne and Past Grand Representative Colby of Concord, District Deputy Grand Master Cutler of Williamston of Concord. There were also several other visitors present, including invited guests. There were about one hundred present. The first degree was conferred on one candidate, after which supper was served in the banquet hall.

Supper being over, a very pleasant occasion took place, that of presenting a veteran's past grand jewel to Frank F. Roach, the presentation being made by Isaiah G. Anthoine of Nashua, a brother charter member of Waverley Lodge. Mr. Roach has for many years held the office of trustee, and served the lodge faithfully and well. He has been an Odd Fellow more than forty years, having been initiated in Valley Lodge of Hillsboro.

The speaking by the Grand Officers then followed, with Edmund M. Lane as master of ceremonies. These several brothers brought their speeches with them and gave of the best they had; and they had some very good material which was nicely framed in appropriate language. Other guests also made remarks. All present had a most enjoyable time and pronounced the affair from start to finish a grand success.

The committee in charge of the arrangements included John Thornton, Noble Grand; Charles F. Butterfield, Vice Grand; Chas. L. Fowler, R. S. N. G.

NEWS OF THE GRANITE STATE Spring Meeting of State Board of Trade HELD AT NASHUA Speeches by Many Prominent Men—Notable Wedding at Berlin—About a Fish, But Not a Fish Story.

Nashua—The spring meeting of the state board of trade was held in this city Thursday, with speeches by many prominent men. Charles S. Emerson, who was one of the candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, urged a reduction in the size of the legislature. Hon. James O. Lyford said that if more members could be sent back for a second term we should have shorter and better sessions. Phillip W. Ayers, state forester, said that the income to the state from the lumber business was twice the amount of the summer business. A communication was received asking that the board advertise the state by moving pictures, but as the rate was 50 cents a foot for a 2000-foot reel, no action was taken. A luncheon was served at noon. A Notable Wedding. Berlin—One of the most notable weddings which ever took place in the north country was witnessed by 300 people at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Orton B. Brown Thursday. Of the 300 guests present it is said that fully 200 came from out of town.

All Caused by a Fish. Manchester—Anselo Tjuljklirke, pronounce it who can, was in police court Thursday charged with assault upon Mrs. Tana Kamberogianis, which is another name. It appeared that Angelo bought some fish which he proceeded to cook upon the stove used by the entire household in which both lived, but he made the mistake of dressing it in the flour belonging to Mrs. W-well. Tana, previous to the cooking. This made her mad and she threw frying pan and fish at Angelo's head. This roused Anselo's ire, who proceeded to induce in some pleasant way, one of which was carrying her over the head with a chair. After hearing the evidence the court fined Angelo $100 with costs of $50, which he paid with much sorrow and reluctance.

SYNOPSIS.

In the New York home of James Brood, his son, Frederic, receives a wireless from him. Frederic tells Lydia Desmond, his fiancée, that the message announces his father's marriage, and orders Mrs. Desmond, the housekeeper and Lydia's mother, to prepare the house for an immediate home-coming. Brood and his bride arrive. She wins Frederic's liking at first meeting. Brood shows dislike and veiled hostility to his son, Lydia and Mrs. Brood. Mrs. Brood, however, makes changes in the household and wins her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia to the country. Mrs. Brood is startled by the appearance of Ranjab's Brood. His servant, Jones, makes changes in the household and wins her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia to the country. Mrs. Brood is startled by the appearance of Ranjab's Brood. His servant, Jones, makes changes in the household and wins her husband's consent to send Mrs. Desmond and Lydia to the country.

Lydia resolved to take the plunge. Now was the time to speak plainly to this woman of the thing that was hurting her almost beyond the limits of endurance. Her voice was rather high-pitched. She had the fear that she would not be able to control it. "I should be blind not to have observed the cruel position in which you are placing Frederic. Is it surprising that your husband has eyes as well as I? What must be his thoughts, Mrs. Brood?" She expected an outburst, a torrent of indignation, an angry storm of words, and was therefore unprepared for the piteous, hunted expression that came swiftly into the lovely eyes, bent so appealingly upon her own, which were cold and accusing. Here was a new phase to this extraordinary creature's character. She was a coward, after all, and Lydia despised a coward. The look of scorn deepened in her eyes, and out from her heart rushed all that was soft and tender in her nature, leaving it barren of all compassion. "I do not want to hurt Frederic," murmured Yvonne. "I—I am sorry if—"

am thinking of, Mrs. Brood, but of Frederic. Why have you done this abominable thing to him? Why?" "I—I did not realize what it would mean to him," said the other, desperately. "I—I did not count all the cost. But, dearest Lydia, it will come out all right again, I promise you. I have made a horrible, horrible mistake. I can say no more. Now, let me lie here with my head upon your breast. I want to feel the beating of your pure, honest heart—the heart that I have hurt. I can tell by its throbs whether it will ever soften toward me. Do not say anything now—let us be still."

It would be difficult to describe the feelings of Lydia Desmond as she sat there with the despoiled though to be adored head pillowed upon her breast, where it now rested in a sort of confident repose, as if there was safety in the very strength of the young girl's disapproval. Yvonne had twisted her lithe body on the chaise longue so that she half-faced Lydia. Her free arm, from which the loose sleeve had fallen, leaving it bare to the shoulder, was about the girl's neck.

For a long time Lydia stared straight before her, seeing nothing, positively dumb with wonder and acknowledging a sense of dismay over her own disposition to submit to this extraordinary situation. She was asking herself why she did not cast the woman away, why she lacked the power to resent by deed as well as by thought. Life—marvelous, adorable life rested there on her breast. This woman had hurt her—had hurt her wantonly—and yet there came stealing over her, subtly, the conviction that she could never hurt her in return. She could never bring herself to the point of hurting this wondrous, living, breathing, throbbing creature who pleaded, not only with her lips and eyes, but with the gentle heart-beats that rose and fell in her throat. After a long time, in which there was conflict, she suddenly pressed her warm lips to Yvonne's. Then in an abrupt revulsion of feeling her arms fell away from the warm, sweet body and almost roughly she pushed Yvonne away from her.

"I—I didn't mean to do that!" she gasped. The other smiled, but it was a sad, plaintive effort on her part. "I knew that you would," she repeated. Lydia sprang to her feet, her face suddenly flaming with embarrassment. "I must see Mr. Brood. I stopped in to tell him that—" she began, trying to cover her confusion, but Yvonne interrupted. "I know that you could not help it, my dear," she said. Then, after a pause: "You will let me know what my husband has to say about it?" "To—say about it?"

"About your decision to marry Frederic in spite of his objections." Lydia felt a little shiver race over her as she looked toward the door. "You will help us?" she said, tremulously, turning to Yvonne. Again she saw the drawn, pained look about the dark eyes and was startled. "You can do more with him than I," was the response.

CHAPTER XIV.

Sensations.

Lydia stopped for a moment in the hall, after closing the door behind her, to pull herself together for the ordeal that was still to come. She was trembling; a weakness had assailed her. She had left Yvonne's presence in a dazed, unsettled condition of mind. There was a lapse of some kind that she could neither account for nor describe even to herself. The black velvet coat that formed a part of her trim suit, hung limply in her hand, dragging along the floor as she moved with hesitating steps in the direction of James Brood's study. A sickening estimate of her own strength of purpose confronted her. She was suddenly afraid of the man who had always been her friend. Somehow she felt that he would turn upon her and rend her, this man who had always been so gentle and considerate—and who had killed things!

Ranjab appeared at the head of the stairs. She waited for his signal to ascend, somehow feeling that Brood had sent him forth to summon her. Her hand sought the stair rail and gripped it tightly. Her lips parted in a stiff smile. Now she knew that she was turning coward, that she longed to put off the meeting until tomorrow—tomorrow!

The Hindu came down the stairs quickly, noiselessly. "The master says to come tomorrow, tomorrow as usual," he said, as he paused above her on the steps. "It—must be today," she said, doggedly, even as the thrill of relief shot through her.

"Tomorrow," said the man. His eyes were kindly inquiring. "Sahib say you are to rest." There was a pause. "Tomorrow will not be too late." She started. Had he read the thought that was in her mind? "Thank you, Ranjab," she said, after a moment of indecision. "I will come tomorrow." Then she slunk downstairs and out of the house, convinced that she had failed Frederic in his hour of greatest need, that tomorrow would be too late.

Frederic did not come in for dinner until after his father and Yvonne had gone from the house. He did not inquire for them, but instructed Jones to say to the old gentlemen that he would be pleased to dine with them if they could allow him the time to "change." He also told Jones to open a single bottle of champagne and to place three glasses.

Later on Frederic made his announcement to the old men. In the fever of an excitement that caused him to forget that Lydia might be entitled to some voice in the matter, he deliberately committed her to the project that had become a fixed thing in his mind the instant he set foot in the house and found it empty—oh, so empty!

Jones' practiced hand shook slightly as he poured the wine. The old men drank rather noisily. They, too, were excited. Mr. Riggs smacked his lips and squinted at the chandelier as if trying to decide upon the vintage, but in reality doing his best to keep from coughing up the wine that had gone the wrong way in a moment of profound paralysis.

"The best news I've heard since Judas died," said Mr. Dawes, manfully. "Fill 'em up again, Jones. I want to prop up the health of Mrs. Brood." "The future Mrs. Brood," hissed Mr. Riggs, wearily, glaring at his comrade. "Ass!" "I'm not married yet, Mr. Dawes," exclaimed Frederic, grinning. "Makes no difference," said Mr. Dawes, stoutly. "Far as I'm concerned, you are. We'll be the first to drink to Lydia Brood! The first to call her by that name, gentlemen. God bless her!"

"God bless her!" shouted Mr. Riggs. "God bless her!" echoed Frederic, and they drained their glasses to Lydia Brood. "Jones, open another bottle," commanded Mr. Dawes, loftily. Frederic shook his head and two faces fell. Right bravely, however, the old men maintained a joyous interest in the occasion. The young man turned moody, thoughtful; the unwonted exhilaration died as suddenly as it had come into existence. A shadow crossed his vision and he followed it with his thoughts. A sense of utter loneliness came over him with a swift-ness that sickened, nauseated him. The food was flat to his taste; he could not eat. Self-commiseration stifled him. He suddenly realized that he had never been so lonely, so unhappy in all his life as he was at this moment.

His thoughts were of his father. A vast, inexplicable longing possessed his soul—a longing for the affection of this man who was never tender, who stood afar off and was lonely, too. He could not understand this astounding change of feeling. He had never felt just this way before. There had been times—many—when his heart was sore with longing, but they were of other days, childhood days. Tonight he could not crush out the thought of how ineffably happy, how peaceful life would be if his father were to lay his hands upon his shoulders and say, "My son, I love you—I love you dearly." There would be no more lonely days; all that was bitter in his life would be swept away in the twinkling of an eye; the world would be full of joy for him and for Lydia.

When he entered the house that evening he was full of resentment toward his father, and sullen with the remains of an ugly rage. And now to be actually craving the affection of the man who humbled him, even in the presence of servants! It was unbelievable. He could not understand himself. A wonderful, compelling tenderness filled his heart. He longed to throw himself at his father's feet and crave his pardon for the harsh, vengeful thoughts he had spent upon him in those black hours. He hungered for a word of kindness or of understanding on which he could feed his starving soul. He wanted his father's love. He wanted, more than anything else in the world, to love his father.

Lydia slipped out of his mind. Yvonne was set aside in this immortal moment. He had not thought of them except in their relation to a completed state of happiness for his father. Indistinctly he recognized them as essentials.

As he was lonely. The house was as bleak as the steppes of Siberia. He longed for companionship, friendship, kindness—and suddenly in the midst of it all he leaped to his feet.

"I'm going out, gentlemen," he exclaimed, breaking in upon an unappreciated tale that Mr. Riggs was relating at some length and with considerable fierceness in view of the fact that Mr. Dawes had pulled him up rather sharply once or twice in a matter of inaccuracies. "Excuse me, please."

He left them gaping with astonishment and dashed out into the hall for his coat and hat. Even then he had no definite notion as to what his next move would be, save that he was going out—somewhere, anywhere, he did not care.

Somehow, as he rushed down the front steps with the cool night air blowing in his face, there surged up within him a strong, overpowering sense of filial duty. It was his duty to make the first advances. It was for him to pave the way to peace and happiness. Something vague but disturbing tormented him with the fear that his father faced a grave peril and that his own place was beside him and not against him, as he had been in all these ill-directed years. He could not put it away from him, this thought that his father was in danger—in danger of something that was not physical, something from which, with all his valor, he had no adequate form of defense.

At the corner he paused, checked by an irresistible impulse to look backward at the house he had just left. To his surprise there was a light in the drawing-room windows facing the street. The shades in one of them had been thrown wide open and a stream of light flared out across the sidewalk.

Framed in this oblong square of light stood the figure of a man. Slowly, as if drawn by a force he could not resist, the young man retraced his steps until he stood directly in front of the window. A questioning smile was on his lips. He was looking up into Ranjab's shadowy, unsmiling face, dimly visible in the glow from the distant street lamp. For a long time they stared at each other, no sign of recognition passing between them. The Hindu's face was as rigid, as emotionless as if carved out of stone; his eyes were unwavering. Frederic could see them, even in the shadows. He had the queer feeling that, though the man gave no sign, he had something he wanted to say to him, that he was actually calling to him to come back into the house.

Undecided, the man outside took several halting steps toward the doorway, his gaze still fixed on the face in the window. Then he broke the spell. It was a notion on his part, he argued. If he had been wanted his father's servant would have beckoned to him. He would not have stood there like a graven image, staring out into the night. Having convinced himself of this, Frederic wheeled and swung off up the street once more, walking rapidly, as one who is pursued. Turning, he waved his hand at the man in the window. He received no response. Farther off he looked back once more. The Hindu still was there. Long after he was out of sight of the house he cast frequent glances over his shoulder as if still expecting to see the lighted window and its occupant.

As he made his way to Broadway, somewhat hazily bent on following that thoroughfare to the district where the night glittered and the stars were shamed, he began turning over in his mind a queer notion that had just suggested itself to him, filtering through the maze of uncertainty in which he had been floundering. It occurred to him that he had been markedly sentimental in respect to his father. His attitude had not changed—he was seriously impressed by the feelings that had mastered him—but he found himself ridiculing the idea that his father stood in peril of any description. And suddenly, out of no particular trend of thought, groped the sly, persistent suspicion that he had not been altogether responsible for the sensations of an hour ago. Some outside influence had molded his emotions for him, some cunning brain had been doing his thinking for him.

Then came the sharp recollection of that motionless, commanding figure in the lighted window, and his own puzzling behavior on the sidewalk outside. He recalled his impression that someone had called out to him just before he turned to look up at the window. It was all quite preposterous, he kept on saying over and over again to himself, and yet he could not shake off the uncanny feeling.

Earlier in the evening, without warning, without the slightest encouragement on his part, there had suddenly leaped into existence a warm, tender and wholly inexplicable feeling toward his father. At first he had been amazed by this unwonted, almost unnatural feeling, which later on developed into something quite tangible in the way of an emotion, but he was beginning to realize that the real mystery lay outside of any self-analysis he could make. Like a shot there flashed into his brain the startling question: "Was Ranjab the solution?" Was it Ranjab's mind and not his own that had moved him to such tender resolves? Could such a condition be possible? Was there such a thing as mind control?

An hour later Frederic approached the box office of the theater mentioned by Yvonne over the telephone that morning. The play was half over and the house was sold out. He bought a ticket of admission, however, and lined up with others who were content to stand at the back to witness the play. Inside the theater he leaned weakly against the railing at the back of the auditorium and wiped his brow. What was it that had dragged him there against his will, in direct opposition to his dogged determination to shun the place?

The curtain was up, the house was still, save for the occasional coughing of those who succumb to a habit that can neither be helped nor explained. There were people moving on the stage, but Frederic had no eyes for them. He was seeking in the darkness for the two figures that he knew were somewhere in the big, tense throng.

The lights went up and the house was bright. Men began scurrying up the aisles. He moved up to the railing again and resumed his eager scrutiny of the throng. He could not find them. At first he was conscious of disappointment, then he gave way to an absurd rage. Yvonne had misled him, she had deceived him—ay, she had lied to him. They were not in the audience, they had not even contemplated coming to this theater. He had been tricked, deliberately tricked. No doubt of amusement, serenely enjoying themselves. The thought of it maddened him. And then, just as he was on the point of tearing out of the house, he saw them, and the blood rushed to his head so violently that he was almost blinded.

He caught sight of his father far down in front, and then the dark, half-obscured head of Yvonne. He could not see their faces, but there was no mistaking them for anyone else. He only marvelled that he had not seen them before, even in the semidarkness. They now appeared to be the only people in the theater; he could see no one else.

James Brood's fine, aristocratic head was turned slightly toward his wife, who, as Frederic observed after changing his position to one of better advantage, apparently was relating something amusing to him. They undoubtedly were enjoying themselves. Once more the great, almost suffocating wave of tenderness for his father swept over him, mysteriously as before and as convincing. He experienced a sudden, inexplicable feeling of pity for the strong, virile man who had never revealed the slightest symptom of pity for him. The same curious desire to put his hands on his father's shoulders and tell him that all was well with them came over him again.

Involuntarily he glanced over his shoulder, and the fear was in his heart that somewhere in the shifting throng his gaze would light upon the face of Ranjab. Long and intently his searching gaze went through the crowd, seeking the remote corners and shadows of the foyer, and a deep breath of relief escaped him when it became evident that the Hindu was not there. He had, in a measure, proved his own cause; his emotions were genuinely his own and not the outgrowth of an influence for good exercised over him by the Brahmin.

He began what he was pleased to term a systematic analysis of his emotions covering the entire evening, all the while regarding the couple in the orchestra chairs with a gaze unwavering in its fidelity to the sensation that now controlled him—a sensation of impending peril. All at once he stunk farther back into the shadow, a guilty flush mounting to his cheek. Yvonne had turned and was staring rather fixedly in his direction. Despite the knowledge that he was quite completely concealed by the intervening group of loungers, he sustained a distinct shock. He had the uncanny feeling that she was looking directly into his eyes. She had turned abruptly, as if some one had called out to attract her attention and she had obeyed the sudden impulse. A moment later her calmly impersonal gaze went on, taking in the sections to her right and the balcony, and then went back to her husband's face.

Frederic was many minutes in recovering from the effects of the queer shock he had received. He could not get it out of his head that she knew he was there, that she actually turned in answer to the call of his mind. She had not searched for him; on the contrary, she directed her gaze instantly to the spot where he stood concealed. Actuated by a certain sense of guilt, he decided to leave the theater as soon as the curtain went up on the next act, which was to be the last. Instead of doing so, however, he lingered to the end of the play, secure in his conscienceless espionage. It had come to him that if he met them in front of the theater as they came out he could invite them to join him at supper in one of the nearby restaurants. The idea pleased him. He nodded it until it became a sensation.

When James Brood and his wife reached the sidewalk they found him there, directly in their path, as they wedged their way to the curb to await the automobile. He was smiling frankly, wistfully. There was an honest gladness in his fine, boyish face and an eager light in his eyes. He no longer had the sense of guilt in his soul. It had been a passing quail, and he felt regenerated for having experienced it, even so briefly. Somehow it had purged his soul of the one lingering doubt, as to the sincerity of his impulses.

"Hello!" he said, planting himself squarely in front of them. There was a momentary tableau. He was vividly aware of the fact that Yvonne had shrunk back in alarm, and that a swift look of fear leaped into her surprised eyes. She drew closer to Brood's side—or was it the jostling of the crowd that made it seem to be so? He realized then that she had not seen him in the theater. Her surprise was genuine. It was not much short of consternation, a fact that he realized with a sudden sinking of the heart.

Then his eyes went quickly to his father's face. James Brood was regarding him with a cold, significant smile, as one who understands and despises.

"They told me you were here," faltered Frederic, the words rushing hurriedly through his lips. "and I thought I might run in somewhere and have a bite to eat. I—I want to tell you about Lydia and myself and what—"

The carriage man bawled a number in his ear and jerked open the door of a limousine that had just pulled up to the curb. Without a word, James Brood handed his wife into the car and then turned to the chauffeur. "Home," he said, and without so much as a glance at Frederic, stepped inside. The door was slammed and the car slid out into the maelstrom. Yvonne had sunk back into a corner, huddled down as if suddenly deprived of all her strength. Frederic saw her face as the car moved away. She was staring at him with wide-open, reproachful eyes, as if to say: "Oh, what have you done? What a fool you are!"

For a second or two he stood as if petrified. Then everything went red before him, a wicked red that blinded him. He staggered as if from a blow in the face. "My God!" slipped from his stiff lips, and tears leaped to his eyes—tears of supreme mortification. Like a beaten dog he slunk away, feeling himself pierced by the pitying gaze of every mortal in the street.

Vogue of White Paint.

A clever decorator who remodeled the dining room in a New England farm house has even gone so far in her use of white paint as to finish the floors with it. The woodwork and furniture were also white, but plenty of color was introduced by bright chintz-patterned paper and plain bright green rugs. The white dining room table was always bare, which allowed the mistress to use many attractively colored dolly sets. Her china showed up to splendid advantage on this white ground, and the flowers from the garden seemed unusually bright and pretty in the midst of all this white. A country house near Cleveland has all its floors painted white, with bright green, blue and purple rugs used to carry out certain color schemes. Of course, using white on floors is practical only when you are far from the city's smoke or no-tor's dust.—The Countryside Magazine.

Happy Times.

"The cotton growers seem to be hard hit." "Yes. And many of them are longed for the good old days when all they had to worry about was the boll weevil."

EXCELLENT FARMING
CONDITIONS IN CANADA

Letters from Settlers Indicating Growing Prosperity.

The present year will add another proof that farming in Western Canada, when carried on with the same energy and system devoted to other lines of business, will bring about results fully as satisfactory.

Mixed farming as a tocsin has been sounded for a number of years, and today it is being adopted pretty generally throughout the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. There are those who have made no greater success of it than they did when they pursued grain growing alone, but where one has failed to accomplish what he had hoped to do, dozens have scored success.

From Sedgewick, Alberta, we hear of E. L. Deputy, for past twelve years manager for Frye & Sons, packers, Seattle, who during 1914 were the largest buyers of hogs on Alberta markets. He is taking up active work on his 1,200-acre farm near Sedgewick. Although he was one of the highest paid salaried officials on the Pacific Coast, his frequent visits and personal knowledge of farming conditions in Western Canada convinced him there are greater opportunities in farming Alberta land than in commercial life, with greater assurance of ultimate independence and prospects of home-making under the most desirable conditions.

Thomas McKay, a farmer near Hardisty, Alberta, has this to say about the country: "I came to Hardisty from Osage City, Kansas, nine years ago and took up a homestead here. This is a good district for the farmer who wishes to raise grain exclusively, and as a mixed farming country it cannot be beaten anywhere in the world to my knowledge."

"I had ten cattle, which ranged outside all last winter, and this spring they were fat enough for the market, this without being fed but one night during the entire winter; they were fine fat cattle and looked beautiful. I raised some winter wheat here which weighed sixty-seven and a half pounds to the bushel, government weight, and which I shipped to Calgary. The miller who bought it said that it was the best wheat that had ever gone into Calgary. Wheat in this district yields as high as forty bushels to the acre, oats average sixty bushels. Alfalfa does well here."

"All in all I think the farmers are very well satisfied with the country, and the farmer who farms his land intelligently is sure to make a success. The climate here is the best I have ever lived in, the summers are delightful and the winters are mild. There has never been a blizzard during the nine years I have lived here nor any cyclones or wind storms."

A settler in the neighborhood of Gleichen, Alberta, spent $2,000 in improving his quarter section, has 125 acres ready for crop, keeps 70 head of stock, believes in mixed farming, keeps two hired men, one all year, the other in summer only. He milks 12 to 18 cows, and receives an average monthly cream cheque of $110. Last June he sold $1,200 worth of hogs and in November two more carloads, besides supplying his own requirements, and is not only making money but building up a good home amid desirable surroundings. This is an example of the possibilities open to the industrious in the Gleichen district.

It is stated in the last three months $38,000,000 of American capital has been invested in Canada, showing that United States financial men are satisfied of the solidity of Canadian institutions. Western Canada has been a heavy borrower and Western Canada's great resource is agriculture. U. S. financiers must be convinced that agriculture in Western Canada is sure and profitable or they would not be ready to invest so many millions in the country.—Advertisement.

James F. Eldredge and wife, from Orleans, Mass., and Mrs. T. R. Eldredge of Herwichport, Mass., arrived at H. W. Eldredge's Saturday afternoon for a brief visit, coming in Mr. Eldredge's new Cadillac 8, which was driven by his chauffeur, Judah Eldredge. The former was taken ill on the trip which necessitated calling a physician upon his arrival. Sunday it was necessary to call another physician and Dr. Weston of Keene was summoned. The chauffeur left town Monday morning for Orleans, a distance of 197 miles; Mrs. T. R. Eldredge returned to her home by auto. The patient is still confined to his bed but is reported comfortable.

MRS. LYON'S AGES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

Some Forms of Rheumatism are Curable

Rheumatism is a disease characterized by pains in the joints and in the muscles. The most common forms are chronic rheumatism, rheumatic headaches, sciatic rheumatism and lumbago. All of these types can be helped absolutely by applying some good liniment that penetrates. An application of Sloan's Liniment two or three times a day to the affected part will give instant relief. Sloan's Liniment is good for pain, and especially rheumatic pain, because it penetrates to the seat of the trouble, soothes the afflicted parts and draws the pain. Sloan's Liniment is all medicine. SERVICE FOR AFTERNOON TEA

Having Cup on Matching Plate, Without Saucer, is Excellent Method, for Obvious Reasons.

An easy way of serving a cup of tea is to place the cup on a matching plate, and to put a folded tea napkin, a spoon and a fork on the plate. Then pass whatever sandwiches or cakes you may desire to serve with the tea. They can be accommodated on the plate, and daintily and easily eaten.

If elaborate cakes or sandwiches are served with tea and no plate is provided it is difficult to manage them balanced on the saucer of the cup. If a separate plate is held under the cup and saucer, it is practically useless, for the saucer is nearly filled with the margin at the edge is not wide enough to accommodate the cakes.

Of course when a simple wafer or easily eaten sandwich is to be passed with the tea, the saucer of the teacup is sufficiently commodious to accommodate it.

Lemon Buns.
One-fourth cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful currants, one-eighth cupful lukewarm water, three cupfuls flour, one egg, one-half yeast cake, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-half lemon, one-fourth teaspoonful nutmeg. Cream the butter and sugar, then add egg well beaten. Mix thoroughly, add one cupful flour, then the milk, lukewarm, then the rest of the flour. Lastly add the yeast dissolved in warm water. Beat for 15 minutes, cover closely and let rise. When risen stir in currants, which must be well floured, then add the nutmeg and grated rind and juice of lemon. Place on your pastry board, roll out half an inch thick and cut out with medium-sized biscuit cutter. Place one-half the buns in greased pans, leaving plenty of space. Then place other half on those already in the pan. Let rise very light, bake in quick oven. When done brush with white of egg.

The Church and the Liquor Traffic

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, that maketh him drunken also.—Habakkuk 2:12.

A demand is frequently made on the preacher to speak on the relation of the church to the liquor traffic, but the relation of the church is determined by the individual Christian. What is that relation? Let me ask myself the question, and seek to answer it.

My relation to the liquor traffic is that of a total abstainer from all intoxicating drink as a beverage.

And why is it so? For reasons of a personal character.

A Personal Testimony.

1. I believe alcohol would injure me physically. I have tried to make myself intelligent on the subject, and have read good authorities on both sides of the case. While there is a difference of opinion among wise men as to whether alcohol may not sometimes be given medicinally with beneficial results, there seems to be unanimity that its use in any other way is only harmful. As a man I may be indifferent to my physical condition in some respects, and be willing to pay the cost of certain indulgences, but as a Christian I am not at liberty to do this, for if I am to glorify God in my body, that body must be at its best always.

2. But what injures me physically, will sooner or later injure me morally as well. Indeed the effects of alcohol in this sphere are seen and admitted more readily than in the other, and yet they are only the outgrowth of the other. When man's physical and mental powers are weakened his moral strength is easily assailed, and hence blasphemy, ingratitude, anger, murder, licentiousness, dishonesty, and the whole brood of villainy and iniquity that makes the civilized earth a continual groan. My self-respect, to name no higher motive for the moment, will not permit me to deliberately contribute to this misery and woe.

3. It is the injury to me spiritually, though, that has the strongest power in withholding the cup from my lips. I know that I am an immortal being, and that I must give account to him who shall judge the quick and the dead. And I know that there is for me a future of eternal blessedness or sorrow, and sorrow not only for what I have lost, but for what I must experience in retribution for my sins. I am afraid of hell, and I am not afraid to say that I am afraid of hell. The drunkard shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven, and I want to inherit it, and I will not be such a fool, God helping me, as to sell that birthright for a drink of beer or a glass of toddy.

My Duty to My Neighbor.

But all this is merely personal, it is my duty to myself; but my obligation is broader, and I have a duty to my neighbor too.

1. There is the duty of my example. The apostle Paul by inspiration of the Holy Spirit brings this out very clearly in Chapter 8 of First Corinthians. I may feel that personally I am at liberty to do as I please in a matter of this kind, I may "drink it or let it alone," but not if somebody else will be caused to stumble because I do not let it alone. I may thus cause him to perish for whom Christ died, and it will be difficult under such circumstances to give an account of my stewardship with joy.

2. There is the duty of my vote. What right have I as a Christian citizen to cast my ballot for a traffic that damns men's souls? There was a time in my experience when I was not so keen upon this point. I felt I had done my whole duty when I preached the Gospel and showed men how they might be saved from sin through faith in Jesus Christ. I still believe this paramount, and nothing must be permitted to stand in its way, but I have not done all when I have done that. There is the drum shop on the corner, a snare set by the devil for the neighbor's feet. As a Christian citizen, I have the privilege and responsibility of saying whether I would have it there or not, and I can preach the Gospel with more consistency and power when by my ballot I answer "no."

This brings me to the text. Who is giving his neighbor drink? Who is putting the bottle to his lips? Who is making him drunk? Is it straining the situation to say that the state does this when it legalizes the sale of intoxicating drink and profits by it? But what is the state in a democracy, except the aggregation of the individuals who compose it? And who are these individuals in great proportion, save those who profess to know God and Jesus Christ his Son, and obey his commandments? O church members, let us throw off our lethargy and indifference, and in the light of the second great table of the law, clear our skirts of our brothers' blood!

KEEP SWINE HEALTHY

Scours in Pigs Often Caused by Improper Feeding.

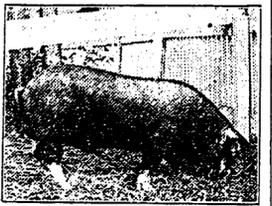

To Correct Trouble Give Sow Dose of Sulphate of Iron in Her Slop—Keep Young Animals in Dry, Sunny Quarters.

(By A. S. ALEXANDER.)

When young nursing pigs begin to scour it is evident that the milk of the sow is disagreeing with them and immediate action, therefore, should be directed toward improving her rations. Most often the trouble comes from overfeeding on corn, or other rich food, just after farrowing, and pigs of fat, flabby, cross, nervous, constipated sows are most apt to suffer. Sudden changes of food, or feeding sour will, or food from dirty troughs also tend to cause diarrhea either in nursing pigs or those that have been weaned, and all such cases should be prevented or removed.

To correct scouring in nursing pigs, give the sow 15 to 20 grains of sulphate of iron (coppers) in her slop night and morning, and, if necessary, slightly increase the doses until effective. Lime water may, with advantage, be freely mixed with the slop as a preventative when there is a tendency to derangement, or after the trouble has been checked, and also is an excellent corrective for weaned pigs showing a tendency to scour on slop or skimmed milk. When little pigs are scouring severely, each may be given a raw egg and five to ten grains of sublimate of bismuth twice daily in addition to changing the food of the sow and mixing coppers in her slop. In cases which do not respond promptly to treatment, success may follow the administration of a dose of castor oil shaken up in milk.

In all cases it is important to set right all errors in diet and sanitation and to provide the pigs with dry, sunny, well-ventilated quarters. The derangement is most apt to occur among pigs kept in insanitary conditions.

Inactivity of the bowels most often gives trouble in pregnant sows and other adult hogs when given too little exercise and too much rich food. In such animals the liver is torpid, the system feverish and the muscles and other organs overloaded with fat. Constipation seldom troubles where hogs are fed laxative foods, such as bran, flaxseed meal, roots or alfalfa during the winter season, and in addition are made to take abundant outdoor exercise.

In the common disease of young pigs known as rickets, there is enlargement, bending and distortion of the bones of the joints and limbs, and fractures of leg bones are not uncommon. The bones of the body in affected pigs lack their normal proportion of mineral material and have an excess of vegetable matter. The tendency to the disease is hereditary and most likely to be seen in closely inbred hogs or those of herds kept under insanitary conditions and long imperfectly nourished upon unbalanced rations. The excessive feeding of corn to generation after generation doubtless induces a weakness of constitution conducive to rickets and the disease may appear as a result of any aggravating circumstance productive of malnutrition.

BREEDING ONLY BEST CATTLE

Counterfeit Dairy Cow Has No Place on Pasture or in Feed Yard—Discard Poor Producers.

(By ROUD MCANN, Colorado Experiment Station.)
The development of the increasing demand for well-bred dairy cattle is based upon the recognition of the fact that under present production conditions, the counterfeit dairy cow has no place on the pasture or in the feed yard.

During the past few years difficulty of replenishing and starting herds with good animals has confronted the dairy farmer at every turn. High feed bills have demonstrated the futility of expecting satisfactory returns when keeping poor producers, and the widespread, progressive, businesslike dairymen are centering their demands on merit, of which there must be a greater supply to meet this demand. Foreign competition has created a well grounded impression that the most effective way of eradicating it is by greater production per animal and better products.

Silo Pays Well.
No building on the farm will pay better returns than a good silo, if properly built and filled on time, and in the right way.

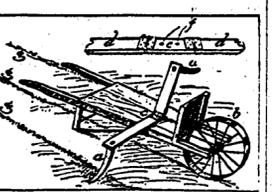

Reduces Farm Drudgery.
The modern equipment in the way of litter carriers and feed carts reduces the drudgery of the barns to a minimum.

HANDY AS POTATO MARKER

Wheelbarrow Arranged With Pine Strips Hinged to Bottom Center Board Proves Satisfactory.

Last spring we had occasion to fit a very stumpy piece of sandy new ground for early potatoes. The one and two horse corn markers would not work because of so many stumps. The wheelbarrow being near with seed upon it a happy thought struck me—this would roll over the rough ground, roots, etc., and leave a distinct mark in the soil, besides running easily. writes G. A. Randall in Farm and Home.

A half-inch hole was bored through the bottom center board and two pieces, c. of inch pine strips 36 inches long were hinged, as shown, to a center section, e, fastened with a wire through the holes, f, to the bottom board. On the outer ends of these strips a light runner, a, extends to the ground and slants back. These runners with the wheel in the center make three distinct marks when pushed across the field. In coming to a stump either or both sections are easily folded back until the obstruction is passed, then dropped to position again to mark.

Being light and mounted on a center wheel it pushed as easily as a wheelbarrow seeder and was extremely easy to guide; marks clear across the field being straight as those made with a line and very distinct. When not in use for a marker the sections are quickly removed.

BURN CHOLERA CARCASSES

Burial of Dead Animals Not Approved by Nebraska Station—Excellent Plan is Described.

The burial of hogs dying of cholera is not advised by the department of animal pathology at the Nebraska experiment station. The germs of the disease will last a long time in the earth under favorable conditions and are liable to cause a new outbreak. The safest way to dispose of a carcass is to burn it.

Burning may be easily accomplished in the following manner: Dig two trenches a few inches deep intersecting each other at right angles. At the intersection of these, cornstalks, cobs, or other fuel may be laid. Over the trenches may next be laid strips of metal to support the carcass. Before being placed over the supports, the abdominal and thoracic cavities should be opened and be liberally sprinkled with kerosene. Then the hog should be placed belly downward over the fuel. As soon as the material in the trenches is ignited, it will rapidly spread to the kerosene and fat and the body will be quickly consumed.

If a large iron wheel is handy, it may be substituted with good results for the trench and iron bars.

IMPROVE YOUR POTATO SEED

Wisconsin Experiment Station Gives Six Excellent Rules for Farmers to Follow.

The Wisconsin experiment station tells the farmers of that state to improve their potato seed.

1. By co-operating with their neighbors in securing pure seed.
2. By planting this foundation stock by itself where it will not be mixed with other varieties.
3. By learning the vine and tuber characteristics of the variety one plants.
4. By discarding as seed all hills which do not have these characteristics.
5. By selecting seed for next year on the field at digging time.
6. By organizing the growers, dealers and others in your community who are interested in the development and improvement of its potato industry.

TREATMENT OF COVER CROPS

Thoroughly Cut Up Clover or Other Crops With Disk Harrow Before Turning Over.

Never turn the clover or other crop under without first thoroughly cutting up with a disk harrow, as the material plowed under in a layer seriously interferes with the capillary action of the moisture in the soil. The effects of turning under in a layer are what is sometimes called souring the soil with green manuring crops. Double disk the cover crop two or three times with a sharp disk harrow before plowing; plow well by taking a narrow furrow and edging rather than inverting the furrow; then double disk the land again rather deeply, and no injurious effect will result however large the growth may be.

Bulls in Same Enclosure.
If dehorned, bulls of the same or different ages may be safely kept in the same enclosure. When two bulls are kept in adjoining enclosures they should be separated by a strong, high board fence, so they are unable to see each other.

POULTRY

WHITE HOLLAND IS FAVORED

Breed of Turkeys That Do Not Wander Away From Home—Hens Nest in Any Convenient Place.

Until recently the Mammoth Bronze turkey was in a class by itself, and was known as the king of domestic birds, but by scientific breeding the White Holland variety has become a close rival of the old favorite and promises to gain in popularity over the Bronze within a very few years, says an Illinois writer in Farmer's Review.

There was a time when I read advertisements which described the White Holland turkey as "the kind that stays at home." I could scarcely believe that it was in accordance with a turkey's nature, whatever breed they chanced to be, to "stay at home." Personal experience has proved that the White Holland will not wander as do the Bronze and Bourbon Red, the only other varieties of the turkey family with which I am acquainted.

In the laying season White Holland hens are content to nest in any building about the place, in straw sheds or nearby shocks of corn and do not resent being disturbed.

When the poulters are very young it is not necessary to keep the turkey-hen penned up more than a week, for she will go only a few yards from the coop, as she seems to realize the helplessness of her flock. Later, as the turkeys grow larger and stronger, the mother hens pick their way slowly through an adjoining meadow or field for a few hours each day, always coming home early in the afternoon. At no time during the summer or fall do they go any distance from home, and they make a practice of coming back within a short time.

White Holland bear confinement well, and are therefore the ideal turkey for the breeder with limited space. The purebred specimen is a remarkably beautiful bird, being as large as the Bronze, and of snow-white plumage. The feathers, except lug those of wing and tail, are as soft as cotton and very abundant. Breeders who cull their flocks, dry pick the birds which are sold dressed, and use the feathers instead of those of geese and ducks.

RHODE ISLAND WHITE BREED

They Are Equal of Any as Table Fowl, Being of Size Which Suits the Average Housewife.

(By M. E. BEMIS, Phoenix, Ariz.)

The advice to go slow on new breeds is unquestionably good. To try each new breed that is heralded is to invite disaster. There is an old adage which applies as well to poultry as to styles in hats. "Be not the first to try the new nor yet the last to lay the old aside." In the matter of choosing a new breed of poultry, one should have some good reason, and if perchance your inclination causes you to fancy one of the new or newer breeds, there should be no reason for discarding this variety just because it is new. All varieties were new once.

Of the new breeds which are likely to make good, the Rhode Island White has many qualities which should attract the breeder who is looking for a fowl which will lay and pay. The Rhode Island White has been bred now for more than ten years. The bird is the same size and type as the Rhode Island Red, the only difference being the color, which is, of course, pure white. The breed originated from a cross of the Cochins with a Wyandotte, this cross mated to a Cochin, and the resulting birds mated with a Rose Comb White Leghorn. It seems that pretty nearly all the good qualities of each have been combined in this breed. As a table fowl they are the equal of any and, being of a size which seems to suit the average housewife, they fill the bill better than a larger or a smaller bird would.

Whole corn is the best ration for sitting hens. Give them all they will eat of it once a day. Don't feed the sitters with the rest of the flock. They should have some grass, also clean, fresh water to drink, some grit and charcoal.

Chocolate Soldiers.

The soldier's weakness for sweets, to which Mr. Bernard Shaw called attention when he wrote "The Chocolate Soldier," has been abundantly confirmed during the present war. The quantity of sweets consumed by our army in France has been prodigious, while from Cairo comes the news that the Australians have absolutely eaten the place out of chocolate. On the troopships which brought them, too, it was the same. Thus Capt. Bean, the official correspondent with the force, writes: "Our canteen had five times the demand for sweets and soft drinks that was expected and one-fifth the demand for beer."—Westminster Gazette.

More Words Followed.

"I'm a woman of my word," said Mrs. Prebscomb, with an air of finality. "Indeed you are, my dear," said Mr. Prebscomb. "When I go out I don't come home and tell an improbable yarn about where I've been." "No, you don't, my dear," replied Mr. Prebscomb mildly, "but that may be due to the fact that I have never had sufficient courage to ask you where you have been."

This is to the credit of human nature: It is not on record that anyone ever resolved to be meaner next year.

CLEAR-HEADED.

Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee and tea did for him: "My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way: "I had an attack of pneumonia, which left me with dyspepsia, or neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial. "Next day it came, and we liked it so much that we will never change back; for I am a well man today and have used no medicine. "My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co's branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee drinking days I was subject to nervousness and the 'blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages. Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

Appropriate for Summer Gayeties

The dignified and picturesque costume of black taffeta and chantilly lace, worn with a poke bonnet shape of lisenet braid, was designed for an older woman than the model on which it is pictured. But the design is one of those that appeal to the matron of elegant and reserved taste even if youth still smiles from her eyes.

A wide chantilly lace veils the underskirt in three scant flounces, the luster of taffeta proving the best of backgrounds for the fine net and intricate pattern in the lace. A short panel of the silk at the front and back of the bodice is extended into a crushed girdle about the figure, fastening at the right side under flat buttons of cut jet. But the details of this particular combination are not so important as the suggestion it carries for the use of lace and taffeta in combination for black gowns. There are many good styles which may be followed with splendid results in making up equally smart and dignified and dressy costumes.

Just the headwear for such a gown has been chosen here. The bonnet of black straw is faced with pale pink crepe georgette and trimmed with a ruche malines with sash and hanging ends of broad black velvet ribbon. Half-blown garden roses, in natural pink shadings, glow vividly against the rich black of the velvet girdle, and the airy tulle gives the requisite lightness. Two roses are tied with a spray of their foliage into the streamers at the back of the bonnet, one near the waist line and one not far from the brim edge at the back.

Something of olden times is expressed in the poke bonnet, something of the heart of summer and gentle ladyhood in the fine lace and the garden roses.

Coiffures for Youthful Faces

There is a number of pretty and simple styles in coiffures that are to be recommended to youthful wearers, and to everyone else to whom the plainer arrangements of the hair are becoming. The hair in nearly all of them is unwaved, but if it have a natural ripple so much the better for the coiffure.

Most demure, and a favorite with artists, the coiffure in which the single parting divides the hair over the middle of the forehead is among the revivals that have come along with wide skirts and poke bonnets. In this coiffure the ears are covered and the back hair arranged low and close to the head. This is modified, when the hair is straight, by pinning it in waves or undulations about the face, with small invisible wire pins, and wearing a plain band of velvet ribbon about the head to help keep the hair in place. Sometimes the back hair is arranged in a small "chignon" at the base of the crown.

Rather boyish-looking is a hairdress in which the hair is combed straight back about the forehead and bound down with a band of velvet. It is loosened by pulling it forward a little until it stands up in a small pompadour over the forehead. At the sides it is pulled forward and pinned in a loop over the ears. The ends at the back are tucked under a small French twist.

One of the prettiest of these simple coiffures is shown in the picture given here. The hair is not wavy, but is abundant. It is parted at the right side and pinned into waves about the face and over the ears. A lock is brought down in a dip over the forehead, and the ends are arranged in three short puffs across the back.

Many of these pretty arrangements must be held in place by a hair net, and never was there a greater help to it than the plain band of velvet which is just now so much in vogue.

The KITCHEN CABINET

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT.

When the housewife is busy with the housecleaning or any heavy extra work which occupies her attention, then is the time to use the cheaper meats in long slow cooking which will take care of itself and not need watching.

On wash day when the top of the stove is covered with the boiler an oven pot roast may be most acceptable. Use a piece from the hip, about five pounds; the bone may be removed and the meat cut in slices. Pound into the meat a cupful of flour, a tablespoonful of salt and a half teaspoonful of pepper. Sear the meat in hot fat, add a pint of tomatoes and water to barely cover; cook gently for an hour. Then add a dozen small onions and cook two and a half hours longer and serve surrounded with the onions. The flour will thicken the gravy sufficiently. The bone that was removed may be broken up, covered with cold water and the broth kept for various uses, either a soup or a sauce, or a flavoring for a stew.

If one does not wish to use all the meat of the chine or atch bone, a portion of the meat left on the bone may be cut in bits, a tablespoonful of minced onion added, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, some bits of fat bacon or suet, a little lemon juice and rind and salt and pepper, make into balls and serve for a supper or a luncheon dish with potatoes.

If there is not meat enough to make into balls, season as above and sprinkle it over layers of cooked macaroni and white sauce, then bake for a half hour and serve hot.

A butcher remarked the other day, "There is no tough meat, it is simply the manner in which it is cooked which makes meat tough." There is certainly a good deal of truth in the statement, for very tough meat may be made palatable by the right treatment. Add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the meat if a stew. Soak it in olive oil and vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of each, if it is a steak. It is far better to stew tough steak than to try to broil it for tough meat should be softened by slow cooking. Slow cooking means keeping the temperature even below the simmering point.

TIMELY TIPS.

When cooking tomatoes to serve as a vegetable add a quarter of a bay leaf and a slice of onion with two cloves.

Whole peppercorns are better for seasoning soups and sauces; they may then be strained out or removed.

Chopped preserved ginger added to a little sugar sirup and a tablespoonful of ice cream makes an elegant dessert.

When milk or soup boils over sprinkle the spot with salt at once, it will prevent the odor filling the house.

When travelling with bottles of toilet preparations, put a strip of adhesive plaster over the cork to insure safe carrying.

Old, loose kid gloves worn when ironing or sweeping will save the hands wonderfully.

Bananas which are not quite ripe may be made most palatable by baking them in their skins.

Lard is much better to grease all gem and cake pans than butter. The casein in the butter scorches easily.

A cloth dipped into hot water and then into bran used to clean white paint works like a charm.

Add a small quantity of carbolic acid to paste, mullage or ink; this prevents mold forming.

Vinegar added in small quantities to a beef stew will soften the fiber and make the meat tender.

A few drops of vinegar on the hands will keep them soft and free from chapping.

Rice with soapsuds will clean bottles and small vases. Shake the rice and suds often and the stains will disappear.

Sauce for Fish.—Cook a small onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter until golden brown, add a grating of nutmeg, a pinch of ground ginger and cloves, salt and pepper and six tomatoes peeled and cut fine. Cook all together until smooth.

FOODS FOR THE BABY.

Orange juice is a most wholesome drink to give even very young babies. Strain the juice and give a teaspoonful not just after or before the milk feeding. Small babies need cool water to drink; their milk is a food, not a drink, and a fretful baby is often crying for a drink.

Oatmeal Water.—Blend one tablespoonful of oatmeal with a tablespoonful of cold water. Add a dash of salt and stir into a quart of boiling water. Boil three hours, adding water as it boils away. Strain through a fine sieve. A baby six months old may be fed oatmeal or barley water or it may be used in preparing its food if fed from the bottle. Barley water corrects looseness of the bowels and the oatmeal the tendency toward constipation.

Barley Water.—Take two tablespoonfuls of barley, one quart of water, boil continuously for six hours, adding enough water to keep a quart. Strain through a muslin. Soak the barley before putting it to cook.

Oatmeal Gruel.—To three cupfuls of boiling water add a half cupful of oatmeal, and a half teaspoonful of salt. Cook five hours in a double boiler. Dilute with hot milk and strain.

Arrowroot Gruel.—This is a valuable food in diarrhea. Mix two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot, one teaspoonful of sugar, a pinch of salt with two cupfuls of boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook for 20 minutes, then add two cupfuls of scalding milk, and bring once more to the boiling point. Strain.

Toast Water.—Take sufficient toast when broken in bits to measure two cupfuls. Add to this one pint of boiling water and let stand an hour. Strain through a cheese cloth. Serve hot or cold.

Plain Bread Pudding.—Scald a cupful of milk. To a beaten egg, add one tablespoonful of sugar and a pinch of salt. Pour on this the scalding milk. Add one cupful of bread cut in half-inch cubes. Bake in a buttered baking dish in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Serve with cream.

GOOD THINGS FOR WEDDING DAY.

Chicken is so well liked that it will never go out of style for any kind of a meal.

Beefsteak Chicken.—Mix a fourth of a cupful of butter, add a third of a cupful of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually a cupful of rich chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point and season with one and a half teaspoonfuls of paprika and a teaspoonful of salt; then add a cupful of heavy cream, one and a third cupfuls of chopped cooked chicken and two-thirds of a cupful of parboiled sweetbreads, cut in cubes. Let stand in the top of the double boiler to season 20 minutes. Serve with lettuce sandwiches. Spread fresh bread with butter and place a crisp lettuce leaf between two slices, with a spoonful of mayonnaise on each.

Pound Cake.—Cream a half cupful of butter, add one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour once sifted. Beat the yolks of five eggs until thick, and one and one-half cupfuls of powdered sugar, gradually, beating constantly. Combine the mixtures and add the whites of five eggs beaten stiff, and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift over one teaspoonful of baking powder and beat thoroughly. Turn into a buttered floured pan and bake in a moderate oven. Remove from the pan and cut in fancy shapes. Cover with boiled frosting, garnish with shredded coconut, fruit or rose leaves.

Strawberry Bombe.—Carmelize one-half cupful of sugar, add one and one-half cupfuls of blanched chopped fibrets, turn into a buttered pan, cool, then pound in a mortar and put through a puree strainer. Beat the yolks of four eggs until thick, add gradually three-fourths cupful of hot caramel sirup and cook in a double boiler until thick. Beat until cold. Fold in one and a third cupfuls of heavy cream beaten stiff. Then add the prepared nuts, a few grains of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Line a melon mold with strawberry ice, turn in the mixture and pack in ice and salt, let stand three hours. Use one part of salt to two of ice.

These new flakes, madam, are crisp and flakey, and have a substance and toasty flavour, a snap and zest that make them distinctive.

Famous Feats of Archery.
In the days when the buffalo was found in vast herds on the western plains there were Indians who, while riding at a gallop, could send an arrow through a buffalo's body. Remarkable as this archery was, it did not equal that reached by the archers of ancient times. It is of record that the MacReas of Garlock, Scotland, were such skilled archers that they could hit a man at the distance of 500 yards. In 1794 the Turkish ambassador at London shot an arrow in a field near that capital 415 yards against the wind. The secretary of the ambassador on hearing the expressions of surprise from the English gentlemen present, said the Sultan had shot 500 yards. This was the greatest performance of modern days, but a pillar standing on a plain near Constantinople recorded shots ranging up to 800 yards. Sir Robert Ainslie, British ambassador to the Sublime Porte, recorded that in 1798 he was present when the Sultan shot an arrow 972 yards.—Washington Star.

We and the British Have Sweet Tooth.
Britons have the sweetest tooth, and Americans come next, if the statistics for consumption of sugar mean anything. An Englishman eats annually 92.4 pounds, an American consumes 79.2 pounds. In Denmark the average consumption is 72.5 pounds per capita; in Switzerland it is 55 pounds; in Germany, Holland, Sweden and Norway it is from 39 to 44 pounds; in France, 35 pounds; in Belgium, 33; in Austria, 24.2; in Russia, 19.8; in Portugal, 15.4; in Spain and Turkey, 11; in Italy, Bulgaria, Roumania and Serbia, from 6 to 7 pounds.

The principal reason for these variations is found in the relative highness or lowness of the customs duties on sugar and on the things with which it is commonly associated—coffee, tea, etc.

Very incorrect is the general belief that Mason and Dixon's line, as originally laid off, divided the slave-holding states from the free states. On the contrary, it ran for one-third of its whole length between Maryland and Delaware, both of which were slave-holding states at the time. The line was run purely to settle a boundary dispute between Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

All the same, the actual Mason and Dixon's line was as much synonym for trouble and dissension in its day as was the figure of speech to which in after years it gave rise. And the phrase will hold bitter meaning to some until (in that looked-for day of charity to all men) shall be fulfilled Dr. John Wyeth's recent prophecy that "When the people of the South and the North get together they will forget there was ever a Mason and Dixon's line."—Southern Woman's Magazine.

Everybody Satisfied.
"I see where another baseball player has been fitted for having a row with an umpire."
"Do you sympathize with him?"
"Not at all. My observation is that the average player who is fined for assaulting an umpire feels that he got his money's worth."

'Twas Ever Thus.
"Have you been operating in the stock market of late?"
"No, I've been operated upon."
—Judge.

Quite Fitting.
"I am going to have an old beau as the hero of this story."
"What a dandy deal!"
Most women would rather be grass widows than spinsters.

Madam, Allow Me To Introduce the New Post Toasties

You may have eaten "corn flakes" but you have never tasted any that equal the New Post Toasties.

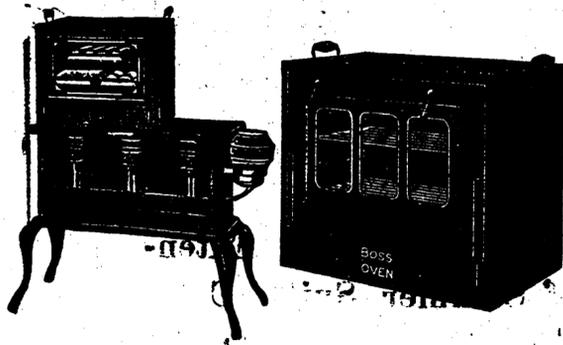

These new flakes, madam, are crisp and flakey, and have a substance and toasty flavour, a snap and zest that make them distinctive.

Dainty to be sure in their sweetness, the New Post Toasties have a body and firmness that don't mush down when cream or milk is added; and a true ripe-corn flavour that makes one feel that here, at last, is something really new and good to eat.

New Post Toasties—selected Indian corn, prepared for the table as it was never prepared before.

Your grocer has them now.

White Man with Black Liver

The liver is a blood purifier. It was thought at one time it was the seat of the passions. The trouble with most people is that their liver becomes black because of impurities in the blood due to bad physical states, causing biliousness, headache, dizziness and constipation. Dr. King's New Life Pills will clean up the liver and give you new life. 25c. at your druggist. adv.
