EAST JAFFREY SHUT OUT

Antrim White Sox Easily Win the Game on Saturday by Score of 8 to 0

An aggregation of base ball players from East Jaffrey journeyed to Antrim on Saturday last and participated in a game which was won by the Antrim White Sox, the final count being 8 to 0, East Jaffrey being completely shut out.

Lynch achieved a no-run game and also, practically, a no-hit game. In the sixth frame Kidder hit a hot grounder to Brown at third. About

Taylor made a pretty one-hand catch in centre field, and the fast work of the infield in catching Little while attempting to steal home was most commendable.

Antrim plays at Wilton Saturday of this week.

Monday, Labor Day, Hillsboro comes here for the final games of the season, unless in case each team should win one of the two games to be played, a tie would continue, as the series is now even with three games for each team. It is certain that the Labor Day contests will be full of "pep". Come and see the last games of the season.

Antrim has won 12 in 17 games this summer—give them your loyal support to help them make it 14 in 19!

East Jaffrey's One Lucky Hit

three feet in front of Brown the ball hit a stone, glanced off to the left and was the only hit the visitors secured for the afternoon.

Only one other player for the visitors reached a base. On a muffed third strike Buckwell ran to first, was hit in the head by a throw from Mull-hall, and kept on running, reaching third.

Aside from Lynch's gilt-edged pitching which was one of his best performances this season, he was given first class support by his team mates. That running catch by Clough in the fourth was a feature.

Often Visited Antrim

News reached here Sunday of the death Sunday noon of H. M. Rice, of Brooklyn, N. Y., at the Elliot City hospital, in Keene, as the result of an auto accident. He had concussion of the brain.

Mr. Rice, who was cashier of the Brody-McClelland Co., of New York, was touring this section with his son, H. M. Rice, Jr. They had been enjoying a visit at Greystone Lodge here for several days, leaving town Saturday. Near Hinsdale they turned out for an auto into a stretch of road, which was recently oiled. The car, which was going about 20 miles an hour, skidded and plunged through a fence and down a 12-foot embankment. The machine turned completely around, landing bottom up, with the two men pinned under it.

Mr. Rice, Sr., was at once taken to the Elliot hospital, where he failed to regain consciousness, and died within a few hours.

Both Mr. Rice and his son had visited Greystone Lodge several times this summer.

CURRENT TOPICS OF INTEREST

The Reporter's Special Correspondent Writes Entertainingly on a Few Subjects

Dr. Charles E. Finley, discoverer of the mosquito origin of yellow fever died at Savannah in his 82nd year. He was born in Camaguey.

Edward C. Pickering, director of the Harvard Observatory and one of the foremost students of the sky in the United States, informs us: "The War in Europe has nothing to do with the present abnormal rainfall." Be it so, nevertheless we could gladly dispense with much of the rain and all of the mosquitoes it has cultivated.

President E. T. Fairchild, of the New Hampshire State College, has named K. W. Woodward of the United States Forest Service to succeed Professor John H. Foster, who has resigned. Prof. Woodward is a graduate of Cornell and took his Master's degree in forestry at Yale. He will report for duty at the opening of the State College.

"I think I have the support of a majority of the House if I decline to reply, as the moment is undesirable," said Gottlieb Von Jagow, German Foreign Minister, as he declined to reply in the Reichstag to the question of whether the government of Germany was disposed to enter into immediate peace proceedings if the other belligerent powers were similarly inclined.

Ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews, of Boston, declares as facts, after his trip through Great Britain, that "You hear no talk of peace in England. Great Britain . . . is determined to see the struggle through to a decisive end. Its one thought is to win to fight." Our hearts are torn with admiration, pity, disgust and apprehension for all the warring countries.

Collision of Motor Cars

While motoring last Thursday evening on the Antrim-Bennington road, George Loveland, of Rumney, who was visiting relatives here, came into collision with another car driven by Charles H. Boutelle, of Hillsboro.

The hind wheel of Mr. Boutelle's car struck the forward wheel of Mr. Loveland's auto and swung his car out of the road so that the forward parts landed in a small brook near the road just north of F. A. Taylor's residence. Fortunately none of the four occupants of the car were injured. The car was somewhat damaged. It seems that Mr. Boutelle did not turn out sufficiently to pass Mr. Loveland. The damaged car remained where it was until Friday morning when Mr. Loveland had it taken to the garage and repaired.

Doubly Proven

Antrim Readers Can No Longer Doubt The Evidence

This grateful citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Charles Wood, Bridge St., Hillsboro, N. H., says: "I suffered from dull nagging backaches and distressing pains across my kidneys. I was hardly able to stoop or lift. I was restless at night and was annoyed by the irregular kidney action. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills entirely relieved the backache and made me feel better in every way."

Over Three Years Later Mrs. Wood said: "The benefit Doan's Kidney Pills gave me has been permanent."

About Advertising

It costs money to advertise in a paper of circulation and influence in the community. Every business man who seeks to enlarge his trade, recognizes the fact that advertising is a legitimate expense. It is not the cheapest advertising that pays the best. Sometimes it is the highest priced newspaper that brings the largest net profit to the advertiser.

NEWS OF THE GRANITE STATE

Liquor and Dynamite Make a Bad Combination VETS' ENCAMPMENT CLOSES

Discovery of a Man Forms a River Mystery—Easily Lost Five Dollars—Pinned Under Auto.

Nashua.—John J. Gibbons, of Will-ton was found asleep in an automobile in this city Friday, and a further investigation showed that he was not only pretty drunk but that he had a big load of dynamite in the machine. He was arrested for drunkenness, and the only reason he did not get arrested on the more serious charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated was because his condition was such that he could not crank the machine. While being taken to the police station he would stand up in the back of the auto and go through the motions of cranking an imaginary machine. On the charge of being drunk he pleaded guilty and was assessed $3 and costs. Then to round out the matter completely a complaint was brought for operating a machine without tail lights and another plea of guilty brought a fine of $10 and costs. He was then allowed to depart.

Veterans' Encampment Closes. Weirs.—The 39th annual encampment of the New Hampshire Veterans' association was brought to a close with a business meeting Friday at which Gen. Charles W. L. Stevens of Nashua was elected president.

Had Better Kept the Five. Manchester.—While Edward E. Kent of Derry was slowly driving his car up Elm street one day last week the mud guard struck Walter Corliss of Reed's Ferry and bowled him over. Corliss got up and while brushing the mud from his clothes assured Kent that he would have to pay for this. Kent offered him $5, which was accepted, but later Corliss said his leg was feeling worse and handed back the money. Kent then proposed that they visit a doctor and find out the extent of the injury. This was done, and the doctor found only a slight bruise on the calf of one leg. Corliss didn't pay the doctor's bill, and Kent did not again offer him the $5.

A River Mystery. Dover.—The body of an unknown man was found floating in the Cocheo river last Thursday, and the medical referee was summoned. He stated that death was due to drowning, and the body had probably been in the water more than a week. Poul play was indicated, as there was a gash on the forehead and another on the back of the head. Interest is added to the case by the fact that a note was found not far from the spot some time ago in which the writer stated that he intended to commit suicide. The man was probably 40 to 45 years old, but there is nothing about the clothing that will give any clue to his identity.

Authorities Close a Bridge. Merrimack.—The Denchuck bridge on the line between Nashua and this town, was closed indefinitely by the authorities Friday afternoon. The bridge had been pronounced unsafe for heavy conveyances, and a special town meeting was called a month ago to raise money for its repair. A quorum was not present and no action could be taken. The selectmen are powerless to repair the bridge without the sanction of the voters, and after several conferences between the selectmen of this town and the Nashua officials it was decided to close the bridge.

What Washouts Cost Franklin. Franklin.—Highway Commissioner Nowell estimates that it will cost the city about $2,500 to repair the damage caused by washouts. The effect of the heavy rains during the summer.

Heifer Ate Paint and Died. Salem.—Last April a valuable heifer belonging to Franklin B. Cooper of this town ate some paint intended for use on a signboard at Rockingham Park, and not being accustomed to that diet, died. Suit has been brought against the Kimball System of Lowell to recover $300 damages, and alleging carelessness on the part of the company's employees. The company has filed a general denial, and a representative says that if the heifer ate the paint she was a trespasser at the time.

Received 500 Volts. Nashua.—While Frank Felton was working on the tracks of the electric railroad here Saturday he received 500 volts of electricity. The forefinger of his right hand was severely burned and the end of the thumb burned off. He was taken to the hospital.

What a Woman Can Do. A woman may not be able to write poetry, but she helps to make life a grand, sweet song every time she sows a bushel of cherries.—Toledo Blade.

Pinned Under His Auto. Hinsdale.—H. M. Rice of Brooklyn, N. Y., left Antrim Saturday morning with his auto to return home. When about two miles from this town, he turned out to pass another automobile, the road had been recently tilled, and he went through a fence and down a 12-foot embankment. The machine turned completely around and landed bottom up. Mr. Rice and his son, who was with him, were pinned beneath the auto. Help was summoned and the two were taken from beneath the machine. Mr. Rice was taken to a hospital at Keene where he is on the dangerous list, suffering with concussion of the brain. The son escaped with a few bruises. Mr. Rice is about 45 and cashier of the Brody-McClelland company of New York.

Mayorality Candidates. Concord.—Interest in the city political campaign received a new impetus last week when it was announced that County Solicitor Robert Murchie was considering entering the field as a candidate for mayor. Alderman Nathaniel W. Hobbs, Republican, and Charles J. French, Democrat, filed nomination papers several weeks ago. Should Mr. Murchie decide to come in it will make things especially interesting. There is talk that the anti-saloon force are proposing to have a candidate in the field.

Belknap County Solicitor Dies Suddenly. Tilton.—John M. Meserve, solicitor of Belknap county, died suddenly at his home here Saturday, after an illness of two days, with pneumonia poisoning. A few minutes before he died he talked with his mother at Lacombe over the telephone and told her he was feeling quite well and he and the family would be up on the noon train to go into camp over Sunday. He was 33 years old, and leaves a wife and four children.

Must Answer Serious Charge. Manchester.—Until within a few weeks George Makile has lived with his sister in this city. George is a Syrian, and in the family was a Syrian girl 13 years old. Recently both disappeared, and the sister has caused his arrest under the white slave law. She charges that he took the girl to Massachusetts for immoral purposes, and had him arrested by the Taunton authorities.

Morrison Peaslee Held Without Bail. Concord.—The continued hearing of Morrison Peaslee, charged with the murder of his father at Henniker, took place Friday morning. The state put on witnesses to prove the murder of the elder Peaslee, and put in the alleged confession of Morrison Peaslee, which it is claimed he made to the officers in Portland. He was held for the October term without bail.

Had a Close Call. Franklin.—While George H. Rowell, a carpenter employed in tearing down a brick dwelling house, was at work on a staging one day last week a granite window sill fell on it. Its weight broke the staging and Mr. Rowell and the block of granite went down together. Fortunately he was not hit by the block, but received a bad shaking up from the fall.

Curfew Must Ring Every Night. Concord.—The only public bequest in the will of the late Gen. John H. Albin was one of $10,000 to St. Paul's Episcopal church. The income is to be used for paying of the chiming of the bells and providing music for the choir. The will provides that the bells shall be rung for 15 minutes each night, and in case of failure to do so the money shall revert to his heirs.

Cut by Glass from Windshield. Keene.—An auto containing Arthur H. Maynard, his wife and a Mrs. Maynard and son, crashed into a tree Saturday afternoon on the Swansey road. They were all thrown out of the machine by the impact and Mr. Maynard received serious injury to one eye by broken glass from the windshield. The others escaped serious injury.

Advertisers Have Successful Camp Meeting. Alton Bay.—The annual camp meeting of the New England Advent association which has been held here for the previous ten days came to a close Sunday evening. It was the most successful meeting the association has held for many years.

Saved the Chickens. Hampton.—One day last week Miss Lizzie Blake saw a large hen hawk swoop down upon her sister's flock of chickens. She at once ran to the rescue, and seizing the hawk by both wings finally succeeded in killing it. It measured four feet from tip to tip of the wings, and friends of Miss Blake are to have it mounted.

GERMAN SOAP FROM SUGAR Discovery That Promises to Be of immense importance to Country in the Midst of War.

The discovery is announced of a method of manufacture of soap from sugar, of which Germany has plenty. Instead of from oil, which is scarce. In the past it has been possible to use sugar only in soaps that had little value. By the new method, it is claimed, the soap produced is not only fine and delicate, but it acts as efficiently in salt water as in fresh—a fact that may make the soap valuable for the navy.

Articles that formerly had to be sent to chemical laundries can now be washed with the new kind of soap. The finest kinds of silks, it is alleged, not only are not harmed by it, but their colors are brought out brilliantly and as new. In addition, the sugar soap seems to be responsible for a minimum of the wear and tear occasioned by old-fashioned cleansing soaps.

Hieroglyphics. "You seem interested in that Egyptian obelisk." "I am," said the man with the faint grin. "There's no doubt that the pictures are funny. But the artist ought to have put in some reading to show what they're about."

As for the Evening Gown

The winter color card provides a series of beautiful pastel tints for evening gowns, among the sedate but rich dark colors that are advanced for the heavier materials and day time wear. These dark colors include "African brown" which is a very deep shade—bottle green, "crow blue" (darker than navy)—dark taupe, and "field mouse," which is a warm shade in mouse color. A dark blue with a purple cast is called "blackberry," and a dark purple like that of the grape is called "Concord."

The pretty dress shown in the picture shows chiffon in a one-piece over-dress worn over an underdress of net with lace flounces about the bottom. The lace reappears in the collar and sleeves. Chiffon roses weight the overskirt and three of them are tacked to the front and back near the bottom. A band of wide ribbon is set on the underskirt and the same soft ribbon appears in a folded girdle about the waist of the underdress. It is brought through a slash in the chiffon overdress and tied in a loop with long hanging end. This is finished with a bead tassel. Satin slippers and silk hose to match the gown in color, complete a simple and refined costume.

This silk might be used for the underdress, and any of the pretty light colors or pastel tints chosen with good effect in this dress if selected with discretion.

Stripes were better managed during the past season than ever before—at least within the memory of women—and this is the probable cause for their continuation in favor. In the lovely light colors and tints one can picture them in the evening gowns of the coming season. Next, haughty variety is possible in designs when we consider them made up with laces or nets or plain surfaces in one of the colors of the striped fabrics.

Outfitting Younger People for Fall

September is upon us and the young people must be outfitted for the fast-coming school days and for winter. It is good policy to make selections for them as early in the season as possible, because the choicest models in coats and dresses are apt to be those brought on by merchants for their opening displays. It may be impossible later to duplicate a garment among the early showings, that just suits one.

An elegant and snappy coat for a little girl is shown (with one of the new close-fitting fabric hats) in the picture given here. The checker-board pattern, in the heavy woolen material, is finished with collar, cuffs, belt and border at the bottom, of plush. The edges of the collar and belt are bordered with a narrow fancy braided silk. The coat shown here is cut with a double-breasted opening at the front, and large bone buttons make a practical fastening and are ornamental, too. An enameled buckle with white markings carries out the color scheme in the garment. The coat fits the figure quite smoothly above the waist line and has a flaring skirt which just reaches to the bottom of the dress.

The woolly little hat has a soft crown and rolled-back brim, the latter bound with silk braid. At the side a small animal with white fur looks like an ermine, but is not. It is made of millinery fur, and boasts a little head with twinkling black bead eyes and an ermine tail.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Unfaithfulness in the keeping of an appointment is an act of clear dishonesty; you may as well borrow a person's money as his time.—Horace Mann.

No one is useless in this world who lightens the burden of it to anyone else.—Dickens.

NICE THINGS TO KNOW.

SOMETHING NEW IN SALADS.

There are a few suggestions that it is well to be reminded of in regard to the selection and care of salad materials. A good, resourceful cook will make an appetizing salad out of almost any sort of good materials. Care should be used in combining delicate flavors with highly seasoned dressings. Rich fish should not be served with a heavy mayonnaise. Lemon seems most appropriate to use in salad dressings when fruit is to be used.

Pepper Salad.—Select tender green peppers, wash and dry. Cut off the stem and remove the seeds and the white fiber. Shave into fine strips and add equal portions of chopped olives and celery. Cover with a rich mayonnaise and serve in tomato cups or on curled parsley or lettuce.

Russian Salad.—Cut cold roast beef into cubes, mince fried bacon, and mix. All shredded head lettuce, half a cupful of cold, cooked peas and dress with mayonnaise.

Meat Salad.—Cut chicken, beef or veal into fine pieces, discarding all fat or gristle. To each two cupfuls of meat add one cupful of celery and one onion, both minced fine. Just before serving mix with enough dressing to hold together, not enough to make it wet.

Benares Salad.—This is such a well-liked combination that it is becoming Americanized. Equal parts of tart apple, cocoanut, a little sugar, salt and chopped red pepper and parsley, with a tablespoonful of chopped onion. Serve with French dressing like the above.

Cabbage Salad.—Chop enough cabbage to make a pint; shell peanuts or walnuts, a half cupful or less. Boil one-half cupful of sugar with a half cupful of vinegar; let cool. Beat a yolk of egg with a half cupful of cream. Mix all together lightly and serve on the cabbage.

Raisin Salad.—To a half cupful of raisins add one cupful of shredded cocoanut and three chopped apples, a bit of onion juice or green pepper chopped, and serve with French dressing.

USE OF SALAD DRESSINGS.

There is nothing new under the sun, but each housewife may in blending different seasonings create quite unusual effects. A salad dressing should be suited to the salad with which it is served. A hot mustard dressing is most inappropriate to a fruit salad as is a heavy mayonnaise dressing on rich meat or fish.

The old stand-by French dressing, may, by the addition of different flavors seem quite like a new dressing. Mashed Roquefort cheese, added to French dressing, served on lettuce is one that is almost universally liked by men.

Chopped green pepper, Spanish onion, chives, cucumber, a piece or two of tomato, in fact almost any vegetable added to French dressing then used on lettuce is well liked.

To make a good French dressing it is necessary that the oil should be perfect and all the ingredients ice cold. The vinegar is another important item. Too acid vinegar makes a dressing too sharp. Good cider vinegar is the best and one part vinegar (if at all strong, dilute it), to three parts of oil, makes a good combination. Then add such seasonings as seems advisable or such as you have.

Chili sauces, catchups of various kinds, chives, pimientos and many bottled sauces may be used to give variety to a dressing.

One of the most tasty of fruit salad dressings is made of fruit juice, pineapple is especially good, using oil and less of the vinegar.

Chili Dressing.—Make an ordinary French dressing, adding salt and pepper to taste, three tablespoonfuls of oil and one of vinegar, then a few drops of onion juice, a finely chopped green pepper, and enough chili sauce to make the dressing red. Serve this poured over head lettuce or chopped cabbage. Parsley may be used in place of the pepper if it is not liked.

Young onions sliced and served in a sour cream with a dash of cayenne and salt is a most appetizing salad for those who know the value of onions in the diet.

Cheap Farm Truck. Potato growers all over South Jersey are greatly concerned over the poor outlook for the season, and unless prices become higher, many farmers are likely to be heavy losers. The crop is about ready for digging, but the markets are so poor that growers are deferring the work as long as possible. There are hundreds of acres within a mile of Woodbury from which the owners cannot see at this time more than $1 per barrel.

For the last five years farmers in the lower counties have been making big profits from their pea crops. This year John Bradley, a Port Norris grower, shipped 37 hampers to Boston and received a check for 30 cents in settlement. Charles Tribbett of the same place, sent 51 hampers which sold for $1, 53 cents less than the freight charges.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Rubber goods, such as hot water bottles, rubber gloves and such things which are expensive when bought will last twice as long if they are treated to a strong solution of soda and water every two or three months. Let them drop into the boiling soda water and stand until cool. Lace yokes may be cleaned very satisfactorily by placing a large bath towel in the neck of the gown, cover the waist with another towel and wash with a small brush with soap, rinsing well with clean water. The yoke may then be pressed and it will be fresh looking again.

Before making up dainty colored cotton goods, soak in water overnight to which is added two tablespoonfuls of turpentine to eight or ten quarts of water.

To clean white shoes, make a paste of cold starch and water, rub in well and let dry. When dry, the soil will come out with the starch when brushed.

If your child is unfortunate enough to push a bean or other hard substance up her nose, put a bit of pepper on her lip so that she will sneeze it out, for poking and probing for it, is futile.

When the clothes line needs cleaning wrap it around the washboard and scrub it with a brush in soapsuds.

The cut side of a raisin laid next the gum of an aching tooth will relieve it; heated, this same raisin is good for the earache. A grain or two of red pepper will be more efficacious if the toothache is serious.

Wrap linen that is to be unused in a towel well blueed, this will keep the linen white and fresh.

Milk Frosting.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of butter, a half cupful of milk and a half teaspoonful of vanilla. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add sugar and milk, boil gently, without stirring, ten minutes; beat until stiff enough to spread, add flavoring and spread over the cake.

Salads are recognized as being of distinct food value in addition to the appeal which they make to the eye in beautiful combinations of color.

Pineapple Salad.—Take six slices of canned pineapple, two cupfuls of marshmallows, cut in cubes with the shears; one cupful of blanched almonds, shredded; three tablespoonfuls of chopped pimento, one cupful of whipped cream, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of mustard, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and a few dashes of salt. Some like a boiled dressing, using one part of the dressing to four or five parts of whipped cream, as the salad dressing.

Grapefruit in sections with strips of pimento between, served on lettuce, is another wholesome salad.

Sapsago Salad.—Grate a cake of sapsago cheese, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, a few drops of tabasco sauce and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Mold into a loaf and slice, garnish with red pepper or pickled beets and serve with mayonnaise.

Nut Salad.—Blanch peanuts and place in a hot oven to brown with a bit of butter. Chop when cold and to each cupful of nuts add two cupfuls of finely chopped celery and an equal amount of apples. Mix well and serve with mayonnaise.

Toasted, buttered baking powder biscuit, cut in thin slices before toasting, make a nice accompaniment to any salad.

Cucumber and Potato Salad.—Dice cold boiled potatoes and crisp cucumbers, mix lightly with mayonnaise dressing which has been seasoned with chopped parsley and onion.

Any potato salad is improved by the addition of a few cooked peas or a little sweet corn cut from the cob. Gelatin jellies mixed with fruit and served molded in small cups or forms and placed on lettuce leaves, served with any desired dressing, make a most pleasing salad.

Then Pennington Understood.

foundation. It was muscle-making or muscle-breaking work, and for the first few days—or weeks even—it seemed wholly of the breaking.

But there was an under element of doggedness in Pennington's nature which had never come to the surface, and though his limbs trembled with weariness long before the days were half over, and at noon he sank into a crouching heap upon the nearest board rather than cross the street to a restaurant, he struggled on in some way until the hour of dismissal came.

The second day the boss told him gruffly that he could not afford to pay him more than half wages, and the third day that he should pay him nothing at all, for he was worth nothing.

This was tantamount to a discharge, and so the boss meant it, but it was not one in actual words. Pennington disregarded it.

The boss looked toward him doubtfully from time to time, but in the occasional jobs of oversight or authority, for he seemed the best man at hand for them.

At first an hour or two of keeping the men's time, the stock taking of some of the materials, or perhaps a commission downtown to purchase things that required inspection and could not be ordered by messenger or telephone; then, after a year or so, he began to be left in temporary charge during the enforced absence of both foreman and boss.

And by that time Pennington's hands were as firm and hard as the average workman's, and his thin face and narrow shoulders were filling out with good, solid flesh.

At the end of three years the foreman started out as an independent contractor and the boss took his place, Pennington would have then become boss, but the new contractor asked him to go with him as foreman, and Pennington, with an odd feeling of exultation and wonder, consented.

All this time the Pennington agent had heard nothing, and an expression of speculative concern was beginning to appear in his face.

Of course Pennington must be dead, for he was a man who required a great deal of money, and being in Europe made the money more imperative. The agent was in half mind to communicate with the nearest relative, but hesitated and concluded to wait a little longer.

A small portion of Esther Kilton's property consisted of downtown tenements. In the last few years she had become infected with the reform movement, and was remodeling them with more regard for the inmates' welfare than her rent roll.

Several blocks had already been rebuilt and occupied, and recently to hasten the work she had given a block to a new contractor. When the old buildings were demolished and the new walls were up a dozen or more feet she went down to look at the work.

Poised on the very end of a timber almost above her was an alert, compactly built man, who seemed to be directing the work.

Something about him drew her gaze back again and again; yet even while her eyes kindled they filled mistily. He was so like and yet so unlike; so what the other might have been, and was not.

Presently the man sprang lightly across to another timber seven or eight feet away, explained something about the work to a new man, then crouched and dropped to the ground 12 feet below.

As he turned he stood facing the owner, and they gazed for some moments into each other's eyes. He had been so absorbed in the work that he had not noticed her presence.

"Esther!" he cried.

"Ralph Pennington," wonderingly. "I thought you were in Europe."

"No; I have been here all the time."

"In work like this?"

He nodded.

She looked at him with the color rising warmer in her face; in her eyes was inquiry, then comprehension, joy, exultation.

"Ralph," she said softly, after a long silence, "will you come up this evening and—tell me about it?"

There was a smile in Pennington's eyes, though his face remained grave.

"Yes, Esther," he answered, "I will come up and—ask you about it. I am now in the trades."

A LABOR DAY REALISM

In Work He found Salvation for Both Body and Mind By FRANK H. SWEET

ENNINGTON lit a cigarette, took one puff, hesitated, and threw it away. He had forgotten the doctor's quietly spoken but incisive words, and now remembered them with a sudden return of his old dread of what might come.

And yet, what odds? The world was an unsatisfactory place at best, and if it was to be hedged in by high walls, what pleasure would the little cells be?

A band of music was approaching, and his gaze went to it with the crowd's.

Behind the music came a great block of marching men, and behind them another and another, and still another. Then Pennington understood. It was Labor day, and this was the trades parade.

Under other circumstances Pennington's gaze would have turned away indifferently; but there was only the sidewalk or the street, and of the two the street was the less tedious. It was at least a moving bore.

The first impression that came clearly to his understanding was one of the strong, stalwart units of the blocks; the next, their contented and even happy looks.

"How happy and strong they are," said a voice at his side, and Pennington looked down; a quick glow coming into his face, and fading yet more quickly. It was the girl who had tinged his dreams, who had since grown distant and somewhat scornful.

"Yes, they seem strong and happy, Esther," he answered, "in spite of being in the trades."

"Because of being in the trades," she corrected swiftly, a vibrant ring in her voice that brought his eyes again to her face. She was looking out at the marching blocks, her gaze steady, but with a tremulousness of the delicate lips that somehow reminded him of the old note in her voice.

The next day there was a rumor of Pennington's going abroad; his housekeeper had received a note to close the house, the agent to look after the affairs until further instructions.

Down on one of the back streets, a street unknown to Pennington's old life, were many dingy offices, meager in appointments, but representing a vast accretion of labor. At one of them a line of men were seeking employment, passing in front of a keen-eyed foreman, who accepted or rejected them almost without a glance.

But the rejections were few. Men were wanted for new blocks of buildings going up, men of skill, of strength, of merely carrying capacity—any man who could add his strength to the labor force and hasten the work.

So when a white-handed man of confessed incapacity stepped in front of the foreman's desk he was looked at askance, but finally accepted and set to carrying brick from the sidewalk to the men who were laying the occasional jobs of oversight or authority, for he seemed the best man at hand for them.

At first an hour or two of keeping the men's time, the stock taking of some of the materials, or perhaps a commission downtown to purchase things that required inspection and could not be ordered by messenger or telephone; then, after a year or so, he began to be left in temporary charge during the enforced absence of both foreman and boss.

and concluded to let him remain. Such determination promised good work if the man survived the breaking in. Besides, he must be in dire need.

Pennington had a little room over the second-hand store where he purchased a coarse suit of working clothes, but he had not brought money to pay the room rent. He possessed a cheap silver watch, however, and this he left as security. With his first pay envelope he redeemed the watch.

In his room were cot, a chair, and a rusty little stove propped up with wooden blocks. But not until the third week did he start a fire in the stove and make disastrous ineffectual attempts to cook his breakfast.

By this time the blisters had disappeared under rough lumps and ridges. How he had lived before this no one knew but himself, for until he received his second pay envelope he did not commence crossing the street to the restaurant for a noon lunch.

When he sat down for a few minutes at the noon hour he did not double over in a tremulous heap as he had done at first, and though his face was thinner and whiter, his flesh was firmer than when he first came, and his eyes were clearer.

As Pennington's hands acquired a working knowledge of the materials, and his mind began to more thoroughly grasp the details, the boss gave him occasional jobs of oversight or authority, for he seemed the best man at hand for them.

At first an hour or two of keeping the men's time, the stock taking of some of the materials, or perhaps a commission downtown to purchase things that required inspection and could not be ordered by messenger or telephone; then, after a year or so, he began to be left in temporary charge during the enforced absence of both foreman and boss.

LABOR DAY

The gods of Man, who rule his fate, Are Labor, Love and Learning. That they establish his estate Is known to the discerning. Though Learning knows a brief conceit And Love still makes the world go round, 'Tis Labor that provides the means On which the others thrive. He gives to Learning hands and feet; For Love a cozy home he found— 'Tis he who keeps these kings and queens Alive.

They tell him that they're in his debt And Labor toils—but listens. His seal of honor is the sweat That on his forehead glistens. They catalogue his works, but lack The time to tell all here and now: Joy's wheels, forged from Pain's pickled rods; Love's tires, that vanquish miles. Then Labor straightens up his back— With modesty he wipes his brow— Looks squarely at his fellow gods And smiles. —Gif Alexander in the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

MUST GO TOGETHER

Labor and Capital in the Same Harness.

Enormous Possibilities of the Situation Before the Country Should Be Recognized by Employers and Workers Alike.

Labor day is at hand, and it carries suggestions to both labor and capital of the greatest importance. Not since the celebration was established, not since labor first organized in this country to advance and protect its interest, has a situation existed so promising for all that American industry and capital represent.

Leaders of all grades and kinds—leaders of labor, leaders of capital, leaders in politics—all see before this country opportunities of a magnitude never presented before. As they read the times and tendencies, we are scheduled as a people for activities on an enormous scale. New markets await us. Old markets will be demanded more than they have been receiving from us. A boom era for America is coming.

It is the interests of all that the opportunities be improved to the full. But all must help. To get the proper result there must be what the president calls "team work." Both labor and capital must keep in trim and on terms. They must pull together. Otherwise, both, and all, will suffer loss.

Organized labor is often complimented, and deserves the tribute paid. It has made its share of mistakes. In not every case has it been fortunate in its leadership.

But it has steadily and successfully resisted socialism, and worse, and kept as its principal purpose the true welfare of men who work with their hands. It has contributed to the establishment of homes, to the filling of savings banks, and to an improved general condition of those needing to be buoyed and encouraged in the struggle of life.

We start, then, on this new journey with labor in good fettle, strong in numbers, likewise in capital, though now inactive, abundant for the annual occasion. Both factors in the equation are equal to their duties, and have only to put their shoulders to the wheel in good earnest and keep steadily on the push.

There may be some exaggeration in the picture we are all studying. There may not be in store for us all now promised. Europe will recover from her prostration and losses, and then we shall confront our old rivals again. And when in condition they are not easily handled.

But, allowing for that, the immediate future in America should show two wheels turning where one has hitherto turned, two pay envelopes, well filled, handed out where only one has hitherto found its owner, and dividends on investments large, satisfying and sure.

Celebrating Labor Day. That Labor day has gradually been given over almost wholly to sport and recreation is a cheering evolution. Crowded stands at the baseball parks, packed excursion trains and steamers, full bathing beaches, teeming parks, and standing-room signs in the theaters on Labor day bespeak a prosperous and contented country. Were men out of work, factory chimneys destitute of smoke, spindles idle, and mines closed down we would see more mass meetings on Labor day. Something approaching the first of May celebrations in European countries might be feared. But who in this land looks forward to Labor day with feelings of concern? When has a political crisis hinged on the demonstrations of Labor day?

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

That Common Person

By Augustus Goodrich Sherwin

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Miss Victoria Dallemand, handsome, but haughty because purse-proud and intolerant, turned from the driver of the big van that contained a part of the furniture of the house of Dallemand.

She noted that a pair of clear, intelligent eyes showed from under the soiled and creased sombrero worn by the driver and his manner was that of a cultured gentleman. Still, his vocation was humble, his clothing rough, his present position on a par with the family coachman.

"Will you kindly tell the men with the second van to take the hill road when the conveyance arrives?" he had asked courteously.

Miss Dallemand bestowed upon him a chilling stare. A slight smile passed over the face of the young man. It was so enigmatical, and withal so susceptible of fine gradations of analysis that the companion of the exclusive Miss Dallemand was influenced to pay attention to him. She was only Lucia Parr, poor and an orphan, but a favorite with Victoria. She deprecated the autocratic action of her friend. It was so simple and natural a task to answer civilly, and she said impulsively:

"I will deliver your message, sir."

"Thank you," and the keen, mirthful eyes of the driver, whom his present companions called "Wharton," flashed her a signal of appreciation, and of admiration, too, that caused Lucia to flush deeply.

"Why, Lucia," observed Miss Dallemand in tones of open reproach.

At Least a Dozen Times the Van Nearly Upset.

"These underlings are too familiar as it is, without encouraging them."

"I fancied the young man was very courteous, and—handsome," added Lucia, with a twinkle in her eye, and she made good her promise when the second van arrived.

The Dallemands were about to take up summer quarters at Haven Cove, where they had a sumptuous home near Clear Water lake. It was their custom each year to do this. In the absence of her father and mother, Miss Dallemand had assumed charge of affairs. She had sent to the town, as was usual, to secure a moving crew, and the first van, carrying the piano, some book cases and other special furnishings, was now jogging along down the road, driven by Wharton.

The young man was an accomplished driver. He showed that in the way he managed the team, but his two helpers were unruly comrades. Armed with several bottles, they threw themselves upon a heap of mattresses piled in one corner of the great wagon and ordered Wharton to give them the word when they reached destination.

"If we ever do!" soliloquized Wharton, just after dark.

It had begun to rain, as it had rained every day for over a week. The roads were in a frightful condition. At the best mere struggling wagon trails, at places they were now a series of ruts and quagmires.

At least a dozen times the van nearly upset. Once it became mired and they had to secure the services of two farmers with their teams to haul them onto a solid roadway further on.

They reached the point of land at the extreme end of which the Dallemand summer home was located late in the evening. Wharton had planned to reach the place by four o'clock in the afternoon. The horses were well nigh exhausted. Across a narrow neck of ground that was swampy and flooded they just managed to plod along, and drew up in front of the dark and lonely looking mansion, all hands wet, chilled and exhausted.

"That second van will never get through tonight," remarked one of the men.

"No, nor for some days to come," answered Wharton. "I wonder what arrangements the family have made as to getting into the house and unloading?"

He took the lighted lantern from the wagon and went up the gravel path leading to the porch. A rustic fixed his attention, and as he focused the rays of light up the steps Wharton drew back in some surprise.

The radiance showed a damp and shivering group huddled back upon some porch benches—Miss Dallemand, her friend Miss Parr, and two woman servants. Regal as ever, stony-faced and disdainful, the haughty Miss Dallemand looked grieved, indignant and resentful.

"We expected you here hours ago," pronounced the proud beauty in icy tones.

In a hurried, but clear manner Wharton explained the difficulties of the journey. Miss Dallemand simply shrugged her shoulders. Miss Parr arose and regarded Wharton in an apologetic way.

"We came in the automobile," she said, "which got through more easily than the heavily loaded van. Would it be possible to make us a little more comfortable?"

"Yes, indeed!" bristled up Wharton. "Have you a key to the home?"

"It seems to have been lost in the bustle and discomfort of our journey," replied Miss Parr.

"We will soon adjust all that!" pledged Wharton cheerily.

He was as good as his word. A window was forced, some lamps found in the house filled with oil from the can in the wagon, and the helpers urged up to get the furniture out of the van into the house. Once inside, Miss Dallemand sat at a distance in an arm chair brought in for her especial comfort. Miss Parr kept in touch with the movements of Wharton, suggesting, and seeming to stir about and busy herself.

Under her directions two rooms were quite comfortably fixed up, fires started in the grates, and Wharton even went so far as to bring in a course but wholesome lunch from their own provisions in the van.

"You have done so nicely!" commended Miss Parr brightly, as Wharton went back down stairs, bowing with the grace of a cavalier, and assuring her that as soon as the other van arrived they would have the place in complete order.

But the other van did not arrive the next day and the rain kept up. Wharton sent his men and the van back to hunt up and assist if necessary the delayed transport.

He worked like a beaver for the comfort of the refugees. A mile away at the village he secured eatables, including dainties, installed one of the servants as cook, and even Miss Dallemand assented to the sentiment of her friend that things were beginning to look actually homelike.

"That common person who drives the van has been really useful to us," she acknowledged languidly.

"He isn't very common," declared Lucia. "Why, I heard him at the piano today playing softly one your most difficult concert pieces. He is a true gentleman, that is sure."

The other van arrived next morning. Then came Mr. and Mrs. Dallemand. Mr. Dallemand, hearing of the active services of the "common person," pleaded with him to remain a week and get things in order about the place.

"My old friend, General Taylor, is coming to visit us tomorrow," announced Mr. Dallemand to his wife and daughter one day. "His nephew will be a millionaire some day, Victoria," added Mr. Dallemand, with a quiet smile, and the next day the general arrived. His host was showing him about the garden when the general started, halted and stared.

"My nephew here!" cried the old man and his glance was fixed on Wharton, who, assisted by Lucia, was training a vine up a trellis, their faces temptingly near together.

"That—why, that is Wharton, a jewel of a manager I have employed," began Mr. Dallemand.

"Yes, Eric Wharton Taylor," added the general. "Hey, sir, what is the meaning of this masquerade?" he hailed, and Lucia, with blushing face retreated, and Wharton advanced. "I put you on probation—"

"Well, I've started in to make a man of myself by seeking honest work, haven't I?" smiled Wharton.

The general put out his hand with the words: "I guess we'll cancel that foolish quarrel. And that pretty young lady?" he intimated, glancing after the runaway.

"My affianced wife, if you approve it," announced Wharton.

Miss Victoria was aghast when she heard the news. The unknown Eric Wharton Taylor had been on her list of prospective suitors. However, she bit her lip and smiled on Lucia, and really approved the match with that "common person!"

Zeppelin Engines.

The latest Zeppelins are said to be equipped with three six-cylinder Diesel engines, with a combined horse power of 450. The speed of these air monsters is normally 50 miles an hour, but 80 can be attained under favorable weather conditions. In case one of the three engines should be disabled, the remaining two have been proven to be sufficient to make headway against a 27-mile wind, which means that under normal conditions 35 to 40 miles could be made.

From Suffering to Satisfaction

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE

Animal Department of Men, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace. Mark 5:25-34.

The incident of the healing of this woman illustrates in a very simple way the five steps which bring the sinner from suffering to satisfaction.

First Step—Her need of Jesus.

There was no help for her either in herself or in others. She had suffered for 12 years, had tried many physicians, had spent all she had in attempting to rid herself of this disease, but in spite of all she and her physicians could do, she was "nothing bettered but rather grew worse." She was helpless and therefore she was hopeless. What she needed was this Great Physician who alone could heal her. What a true picture of the sinner striving against sin. How very soon salvation would come to many if they could only see how hopeless and helpless their condition is apart from him, the Great Physician.

Second Step—Her Approach to Jesus.

When she heard of him she came to him. Would that all might be brought to Jesus as simply as this. Suppose she had merely gone to Peter or one of the other leaders among the Lord's followers? Would Peter have been able to do her any good? Would he have been any better than her physicians? And what more can any minister today do than simply point the way to Jesus? Who would think that journey's end was reached just because the signpost was in sight? The true minister is but a signpost pointing the way to Jesus as the only one who can heal the soul's disease. And neither did this woman merely go to the crowd around Jesus. She must necessarily go to the crowd, for the people were thronging round him, but it was Jesus himself to whom she went. Too many are satisfied today when they are merely with the crowd that surrounds the Lord. That is, they deem it sufficient if they are members of some church, mingling with the people of God. But neither the church, anymore than the ministry, give salvation to a soul. The church and her ministers are set for the spiritual help and growth of the Lord's people; the Savior is Jesus alone.

Third Step—Her Touch With Jesus.

She might be near him, but it was necessary to touch him and touch him she did. After her long experience with many physicians there would not be, perhaps, great faith behind the hand she stretched out to touch him. But it is not great faith that brings the blessing, but the actual coming in touch with the one who has all power. It is not the faith, but the object of faith that works the miracle. But there must be faith, be it small or great, to touch Jesus on one's own need before the power of Jesus can operate. A small wire can carry the power of a large dynamo, but there must be contact. So one can be very near to Jesus and yet go unsaved if there be no personal touch for one's own salvation.

Fourth Step—Her Healing by Jesus.

It came immediately upon her touching him. The moment her hand reached out and touched him, that moment "she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague." There was no waiting, no long period of convalescence, no gradual passing of the plague, but at once there came relief and she was whole. So it is when a soul is saved. The moment that soul, seeing Jesus as the only Savior, and believing in his power and willingness to save, reaches out the hand of faith for the personal need, that moment salvation comes.

Fifth Step—Her Confession of Jesus.

Why did Jesus bring her out before that crowd to tell her story? Because she would never have heard the word "daughter" from his lips nor would she ever have heard the words "go in peace" if there had not been this public confession. There are many who have believed in Jesus to the saving of their souls who have no satisfaction and peace concerning their sins, because they are held back from making an open confession of their faith. If you have believed and are saved, tell the story and you will hear him say to you as he said to this woman, "go in peace." If it be that you are not saved, he says to you, "him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." He has the power and the willingness to save you just now if you but trust him.

When the Heart is Weary.

When the heart is weary by the hard conflict of life it is well sometimes to withdraw to the solitude for rest and inspiration. There may come peace and courage and renewed strength, but it will not do to stay there, thinking to serve God. The service of God is the service of one's fellow men.—H. C. McDougall.

TILE DRAINAGE PLANS

Three Systems Easily Laid Out by the Farmer.

Best Plan to Combine Water From All Drains into a Single Main, Having But One Opening—Some of Benefits Derived.

(By PROF. C. P. NORSGORD.)

The arrangement of a drainage system has a great deal to do with the cost of construction as well as its efficiency. There are three systems which can easily be laid out by farmers, and the drawings accompanying this article show how they are to be laid out.

One system (Fig. 1) is that in which laterals enter a main tile from the sides at an angle. If the angle approaches closely to a right angle each lateral should be given a slight turn toward the mouth of the main before entering it, in order to make the water entering the main run as nearly parallel to the main as possible.

In a drainage system (Fig. 2) where the length of a line of tile exceeds 800 or 1,000 feet, the size of the tile at the lower end should be increased.

In many instances each line of tile is made to empty into an open ditch. This saves the expense and work of laying the main tile. However, the difficulty of keeping so many openings free from obstruction is usually so great that it pays better to combine the water from all drains into a single main, having but one opening.

In using this system the lines of tile should, of course, run with the slope of the land, rather than across it.

The grouping system of drainage (Fig. 3) is used where the land is irregular in contour and has depressions needing drainage with higher land between not requiring drainage. Much land is so situated that a great benefit would come to it, with a very small expenditure, with this system.

Some of the important benefits of drainage may be briefly summarized as follows: It removes surplus water and makes room for more capillary water, thus increasing the supply available to plant-roots.

It makes possible the storage of large quantities of moisture against drought.

It makes a better condition for mulches, and prevents waste of moisture by surface evaporation.

It prevents washing, and holds fertility in the soil and increases its capacity for water.

It improves the texture of the soil and sets free much plant-food that would otherwise not be available.

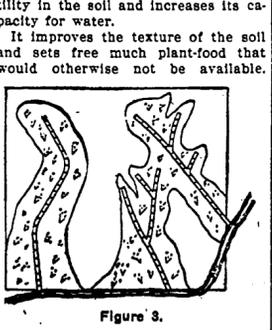

Figure 3.

Very often tough clay soils may be made friable by drainage, and to respond with increased crops.

Produces early soils and large root systems, because a water-soaked soil is very slow to become warm in the spring, while well drained soil warms quickly. This insures a vigorous root system, consequently better crops.

Develop the root system by lowering the water table, because roots cannot grow below the water table.

Ventilation Needed.

Greenhouses require free ventilation.

PLAN FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Experiment Fields Help to Determine Best Order of Application of the Materials Needed.

(By DR. C. G. HOPKINS, Illinois Experiment Station.)

In an experiment, where no farm manure was used, the average yearly return from the land itself was $3.75 per acre, while $7 was the return from a ton of limestone and $2.65 from 500 pounds of phosphate.

In order to reduce the labor involved, the limestone and phosphate are actually applied in larger amounts at less frequent intervals; but thus far the rates of application have been one ton of limestone and 500 pounds of phosphate per acre for each year, although, after the soil is sufficiently enriched, one-half or one-third these amounts will provide for maintenance.

The principles of permanent improvement for most soil types are already well established. They include the use of ground limestone for correcting soil and for enrichment in calcium; the utilization of atmospheric nitrogen by proper use of legume crops, the application of phosphorus to most soils and the liberation of potassium from the inexhaustible supply already contained in all normal soils.

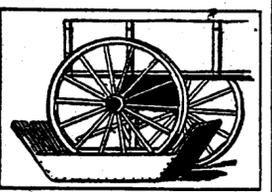

On some soils dolomitic limestone should be used in order to provide both magnesium and calcium; and on certain abnormal soils, such as swamp muck and residual sand, potassium must also be applied.

The location and character of the various soil types are established by the surveys and analyses, and the soil experiment fields help to determine the best order of application of the materials needed.

WAGON WHEEL-SOAKING BOX

Will Be Found Quite Useful in Dry, Hot Weather When Tires Become Loose—Oak Is Preferred.

When wheel tires become loose, as they often do in hot, dry weather, the wheel-soaking box shown herewith will be found useful for soaking them either in water or oil. The box consists of pieces of wood, preferably oak, cut in the forms indicated and nailed firmly together with numerous wire nails. All the cracks are then thoroughly filled with thick white-lead paint and the inside at least painted with two or three coats of paint to render the wood waterproof. The dimensions will depend somewhat upon the size of the wheels to be soaked. Large-tired wagon wheels will need a wider box than will buggy wheels. In operating the wagon is jacked up until the wheel will slip over the edge of the box; then it is lowered until the rim almost touches the bottom. The oil or the water is then poured in till it covers the tire, and the wheel is slowly revolved so as to get every part wet. In order to reach the hub rags may be wound around it and kept soaked with oil or water.

FINE YIELD OF CLOVER SEED

Instead of Decreasing Yield Protracted Drought Seems to Increase It, Says Indiana Farmer.

(By S. E. BRANDIS, Indiana.)

A few seasons ago we thought we would not cut clover for seed, as the drought had been unusually severe during the greater part of the summer. We expected that the protracted drought would lessen the turnout of seed.

Several farmers in this vicinity said that they did not intend to cut their clover for seed. They thought it would not pay for the labor and expense of threshing.

I had a very large field of seed clover, and, as I was needing the seed, concluded that I would cut it and see what the results would be. The turnout of seed was excellent. It appeared as though the drought was of some benefit.

I can see now that a dry season after the seed has formed will increase the yield of seed in place of lessening it.

Use Whitewash Freely.

The free use of whitewash or kerosene also does wonders in getting rid of mites when used thoroughly over every bit of the interior of the hen's home. A clean house, free from these torments, is a real blessing to the hens. Puts money in your pocket besides. The hen mite or red spider feeds upon the poor hens at night while they are on the roost and saps their life to such an extent the egg yield is largely reduced. And sometimes the hens are killed by mite attacks.

Produce Everything.

The farm should be made to produce everything the family will need for the table in both summer and winter.

Cull Sheep Flock Carefully.

Cull the flock carefully. Make it uniform. A few poor sheep in a flock spoil it.

FARM POULTRY

PREVENT LOSS OF DUCKLINGS

In Many Cases Filth in Poultry Yards Is Responsible for Fatalities—Keep Quarters Dry.

Providing the right kind of food and in the proper amounts is not all that is necessary to success in raising ducklings. It should be known that they will not thrive if they are crowded or if their yards are filthy. It is often puzzling when apparently healthy ducklings die, and there is but little opportunity to try remedies. In many cases the filth in the yards is responsible for the fatalities, as the ducklings will swallow droppings in their eagerness to pick up anything that they see. And when this happens they are liable to die suddenly.

A duckling may be suffocated when eating soft food if it cannot reach water, for the reason that its nostrils become clogged, thus making breathing difficult. The water must be deep enough in the trough to permit the duckling to bury its head in the fluid. It will eat a little and then run to the trough. That is why they throw so much of the water out of the trough and on the ground, as they are then washing their heads, bills and nostrils. When ducklings are fed very heavily on an exclusive grain diet they will sometimes have giddiness, weak legs and may be unable to stand. Damp quarters also cause weak legs. Shade must be provided for the ducklings in hot weather, as many losses will occur if they are exposed constantly to the sun's rays.

Rats seem to prefer a diet of duckling to one of chicken when the two classes of poultry are kept in the same yard. For this reason, if all rats cannot be wiped out, floors should be used in the coops and the ducklings should be fastened in each night, though ample ventilation must be provided. A duck should be full grown when three months old, so far as size is concerned.

PRODUCE FIRST CLASS EGGS

Hens Should Be Given Proper Quantities of Wheat, Bran, Clover, Oyster Shells and Grain.

Just because an egg is freshly laid by an apparently healthy hen it cannot be assumed that it is always a good egg. It requires plenty of clean, wholesome food for the production of first class eggs. Hens that are forced to obtain the greater proportion of their living as scavengers and given a poor range to work on, cannot produce eggs of as good quality as can a flock which is regularly fed a good ration.

Eggs lacking in protein have a watery white and the shell is apt to be thin owing to the partial absence of lime. Such eggs, as well as being of less value as a food, are more than likely to bring forth puny chicks of low vitality, subject to white diarrhea and an early death. With proper quantities of wheat, bran, clover, oyster shell and sound grains in the ration fed to laying hens, eggs with a firm shell, rich in protein and delicately flavored are sure to result, providing, of course, that the flock is given clean nests and runs and is kept free from lice and mites.

PLAN TO PREVENT FIGHTING

Where Male Birds Run Together There is Always Danger of Quarrelling—Fowl's Memory Short.

If male birds are running together, there is always danger of fighting. If they are not with the females, cutting the beaks will put a stop to the fighting; but sometimes it seems best to keep two males with one pen. A chicken's memory is short; one day's confinement in a coop away from his companion will apparently make the two look on one another as strangers, and they promptly square off for a fight to the finish.

To prevent this, if males have been separated, or a new one is to be introduced where there is already a male tie the two together with a soft, strong cloth—a strip of flannel is best—taking one leg of each—and let them get acquainted. They are unable to fight, and in an hour or so are so weary of one another's company that they have no inclination to fight. If they try it on being released, tie them up again until they learn their lesson.

Meat Succotash.

Here is a recipe for succotash: Four to five pounds of lean corned beef, a small fowl, four quarts of hulled corn, one large turnip, six or seven fair-sized potatoes, one quart of white beans. Cook beans alone until they are real mushy and strain. Cook meat and fowl together and when partly done add turnips. Take meat out when cooked. Then add your potatoes as you would for a stew and when done add your strained beans and hulled corn and keep stirring. Season to taste.

Corned Beef Hash.

Take corned beef without gristle or skin and equal parts of hot baked potatoes (if used cold, boiled), wet them up with beef stock if you have it. If not take milk, just a flavor of onion and nutmeg. After you put it in your frying pan never stir. Put milk or stock in pan first with a generous piece of butter or drippings. Now turn in hash and simmer till liquid is absorbed, brown and fold. For a change use bits of celery or pieces of bacon instead of butter.—Exchange.

To Clean Sued. Shoes.

To clean brown suede shoes or slippers rub them well with an old tooth brush dipped in gasoline or benzine. This removes soil and also restores the velvety look of newness. Black suede shoes can be revived with fine charcoal dust brushed with an old tooth brush, so that it removes the gray look, but does not leave any loose dust.

Eggs With Piquant Sauce.

Chop one green pepper, one teaspoonful of capers, one small pickled onion, one pickle and a sprig of parsley. Dissolve one tablespoonful of butter in boiling water. Add the juice of half a lemon, a pinch of salt, a dusting of flour and the chopped pickle. Cut hard-boiled eggs in quarters and pour the sauce over them.

Stewed Gooseberries.

Gooseberries are cheap just now and should be appetizing and wholesome. Top and tail the berries and put them over the fire with just enough water to cover them and plenty of sugar. The amount must be governed by the tartness of the berries; stew till tender. Serve cold.

CUTICURA SHAVING

Is Up-to-Date Shaving for Sensitive Skins. Trial Free.

Prepare razor. Dip brush in hot water and rub it on Cuticura Soap held in palm of hand. Then make lather on face and rub in for a moment with Angers. Make second lathering and shave. Rub bit of Cuticura Ointment over shaven parts (and on scalp if any dandruff or itching) and wash all off with Cuticura Soap and hot water, shampooing same time. One soap for all—shaving, shampooing, bathing and toilet. It's velvet for sensitive skins. No slimy mug. No germs. No waste of time or money. Free sample each, if you wish. Address postcard, "Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston." Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Some women are hard to please. They hardly get a wedding gown before they begin to look up material for a divorce suit.

Amatite ROOFING

When you buy a smooth surface roofing you incur a continuous liability, for you have to paint it every few years to keep it from going to pieces.

In fact, the coat of paint constitutes your real protection against the weather.

Amatite, however, is different. It is waterproof all the way through.

To destroy Amatite the weather would have to beat through the mineral surface and two layers of pitch, then through two layers of tarred felt.

Amatite weighs 100 pounds per hundred feet of roof. It costs less than other roofing of the same weight.

Samples showing mineral surface free on request.

SYNOPSIS.

Hall Bonistelle, artist-photographer, prepares for the day's work in his studio. Flodie Fisher, his assistant, reminds him of a party he is to give in the studio that night, and that his business is in bad financial shape. Mr. Doremus, attorney and justice of the peace, calls and informs Hall that his Uncle John's will has left him $4,000,000 on condition that he marry before his twenty-eighth birthday, which begins at midnight. Mrs. Rosa Royaltan calls at the studio and Hall asks her to marry him at once. She spurs for him, but finally agrees to give him an answer at the party that night. Miss Carolyn Dallys calls and Hall proposes to her. She agrees to give him an answer at the party. Rosamund Gale, art model, calls. Hall tries to rush her into an immediate marriage.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

She sat bolt upright and stared at him with harder and more glittering eyes. "Today? What in the world do you mean, Hall Bonistelle?"

"Why, I'm in a hurry—aren't you?"

She rose and smoothed down her skirts. "Why, you know, Hall, of course I've got to get ma's consent first, anyway. Naturally, I suppose she'll want to know whether you're able to support me, and all that. You don't really have to work, do you?"

"I'm afraid I do." He looked at her queerly. "Why?"

"Oh, nothing, only—I don't know—ma's funny, sometimes—it really doesn't matter, but—well, you know I'm crazy about you, in spite of anything, no matter what happens!"

"When can you find out?" he asked a little angrily. It was maddening, just as he had his millions within reach. For with her consent again the millions beckoned.

"Oh, I don't see that there's any particular hurry. Of course I'd have a lot to do in any case. There's my clothes."

"Bother your clothes! I'll get you anything you want after we're married. I'll be well able to afford it."

"You will?" She eyed him shrewdly.

"Oh, well, then, I'll go right home and speak to ma. Of course you want it settled, I understand. I tell you, I'll let you know tonight, when I come to the party."

"Fine! You will come, then?"

"Of course I'll come! I say, Hall, if ma gives her consent, will you announce our engagement tonight?" Her eyes sparkled as she held out her hands and let herself be folded in his arms for a farewell kiss. In that caress his fears were forgotten. Then she freed herself and walked to the office door.

"Good-by, Hall, dear! Oh, I hope we can be happy. And say, won't those swells open their eyes, though, when they hear the news?" She hurried through the office without so much as a nod to Flodie.

Flodie jumped up. "Oh, your box, Miss Gale!" and handed it to her.

"Oh, yes!" Rosamund took it, and emerged from her dream to look the little assistant over with scornful triumph. "Thanks." She threw it about her neck jauntily. "Oh, say, never mind those prints, Miss Fisher; I'll get them when I come tonight!" Up went her chin.

"All right," said Flodie sweetly. "If I have time to find them I will."

"Time? I'd like to know what you're here for!"

"To wait upon—" Flodie paused for effect—"customers!" and brought it out with force.

"Well, you may not be here so very long, if you don't look out," said Rosamund. "But while you are, it wouldn't hurt to be a bit more polite, Miss Fisher."

Flodie held herself in well, replying, "No, that's true. But everyone is so kind, usually, and Mr. Bonistelle is always so nice and dear to me, I suppose I am spoiled."

"Oh!" Rosamund's eyes were piteous. "Yes, he is a dear!" She gave a glance in the mirror. "He's a savage when he's affectionate, though, Isn't he! Why, he's mugged up my hair awfully. But he is sweet, isn't he, Miss Fisher?" She smiled wickedly and went out.

Into the studio Flodie shot, a bullet out of a gun. Hall was not in sight. She pounded at the door of the dark room, stopped and listened, pounded again. Bang! Bang! Bang!

Hall emerged, scowling.

"What's the matter?"

She grabbed him by the arm.

"Mr. Bonistelle! Oh, Mr. Bonistelle," she cried, "you haven't gone and done it again, have you?"

"Why, you see—" Hall began to stammer—"really I think she's the best of the three—don't you? It just came over me—she's so devilish pretty, Flodie—and well, she's going to give me my answer tonight!"

"Oh, Mr. Bonistelle!" Flodie, despairing, dropped into a chair and stared at him glassily. Then she shook her head and sighed.

"Well," she said in a hard, dry voice, "I've heard of men who went out looking for trouble, but you are the first one I ever knew actually to go and order it delivered at the house!"

CHAPTER VI.

It was two o'clock in the afternoon. Flodie was crying. Seated at her desk, her bills littered her account books in disorder, her head was down on her arms, in an attitude of dismal abandonment. She did not weep, she cried. Hall Bonistelle married—and not to her! Married to whom? Ah, that was the worst of it. If Flodie had known the identity of her rival her sorrow might have, before now, been transmuted into anger. Would Mrs. Royaltan, or Carolyn Dallys become Mrs. Bonistelle? Or, worst of all, would the wedding ring be worn by Rosamund Gale? Flodie didn't know. Hall didn't know. Even Rosamund didn't know herself. Hence Flodie's tears, wet and heavy, splashing, trickling, soaking the dark blue blotter of Flodie's desk.

At two-ten sundry sounds, translated by Flodie's intimate knowledge of Hall Bonistelle's ways, indicated his approach. She sat hastily down at the typewriter and began to print off this interesting message:

"Quiz Jack; thy frowns vex G. D. Plumb."

Interesting mainly because, a concoction of Flodie's debutante days at the typewriter, it contained every known letter of the alphabet. Now it served to focus her mind on her fingers, and hide her face from scrutiny. When Hall came in, she had copied the statement nine times, and seemed too busy for speech.

"Say, I'm going out, Flo!" he announced, and tapped with his stick on the floor thoughtfully.

Flodie kept right on: "thy frowns vex G. D. Plumb." But love and curiosity won against embarrassment. She wheeled round in her chair. "What are you going to do, Mr. Bonistelle? There's your work for you to do, I should think—"

"Lord, I don't feel much like work today, but I've finished Mrs. Royaltan's plates, Carry Dallys', too; some of her poses are not half bad. She's almost pretty, did you know it? I didn't have time to develop Rosamund. She can wait; I expect I'll have plenty of time for her later."

At the inflection Flodie turned to him again with a heartbroken look. "Oh, Mr. Bonistelle! Have you—really—made up your mind that she— Flodie couldn't finish. She choked.

Hall laughed. "Lord, made up my mind! What good would that do? It's up to them, now. Well, I'm on the way to buy the ring—and I ought to get a suit of clothes to go away—I haven't anything at all to wear."

Flodie bit her lip hard. "Oh, Mr. Bonistelle!—was she going to break down, after all? In despair, her fingers flew to the keys of her machine. "thy frowns vex G. D. Plumb. Quiz Jack—"

He tapped her playfully with the tip of his stick. "Well, I'm off, Flo. See you tonight. Be here early!"

Flodie turned a wretched face to him. Her eyes were wet.

"But I don't know how you want the rooms decorated, Mr. Bonistelle!"

"Oh, I don't care—use your own taste. It'll be all right. You can do it. So long, Flo!" And he was off.

Flodie went to the washstand behind the screen and dabbed her eyes in cold water, then inspected herself mercilessly in the mirror. A sigh. She made a face at herself and returned listlessly to work.

But mental occupation was impossible; Flodie had too much on her mind already. Manual exercise was what she needed to keep her from giving up to her misery. There were the freshly developed plates—she went into the dark room to get them.

Taking the rack full of glass negatives, she emerged and walked into the office. Busy with melancholy thoughts of Hall Bonistelle, a shock awaited her. There was a stranger in the room.

"Mr. Bonistelle in?"

He was a tall, gaunt, stoop-shouldered man, with a long upper lip. Deep lines, sharp as saw cuts, ran down his cheeks, and from the ends of his gashlike mouth. His neck was flabby, the cords showing like the ribs of a fan. Rusty provincial garments hung loosely upon him, draping his bony body, and in his hands he held a soft, felt, prehistoric hat. He was not at all a city person; one almost smelt salt marshes at low tide, and clams. His ill-cut hair, too, suggested wet seaweed.

Flodie, at another time, would have had trouble in restraining her smile. Now her heart was too heavy; her sense of the ridiculous inhibited. She merely looked him over carelessly, added him up as some sort of drummer person, and replied that her employer was not in.

"Ain't in, eh?" He looked her over inquisitively. "What be you, anyway, his wife?" He pierced her with his little blue eyes.

The words stung her to the quick; her nerves were all exposed. She managed her face, however, and replied, "No, I'm his assistant, that's all. Bookkeeper, sort of."

He was still watching her shrewdly. "Ain't going to marry him, be ye?"

Flodie, sensitive as she was, could not help showing a little of her distress. The color began to rise on her cheeks. In her embarrassment she bridled. "Is that any business of yours?" she answered in meek resentment.

"Ye," he said, "considerable, as it happens. Hasingbury's my name. Jonas B. Ain't never heard of me, be ye?"

Flodie gasped. "Oh! Not Mr. Bonistelle's cousin Jonas?"

He nodded solemnly. "Fust cousin—once removed."

"Oh," she exclaimed, "Mr. Bonistelle will be awfully sorry to have missed you. But I'm afraid he won't be back till late this afternoon."

"Ain't in, Eh?"

"Won't, eh? Well, now, that's too bad. I did want to have a little dish o' gossip with Hall. But, come to think of it, I dunno but perhaps you'll do just as well." Again he inspected the room. "Nice place, he's got here. Don't live here, though, does he?"

Flodie pointed into the studio. "Yes, he has a room in there."

"And where do you live, miss?" Jonas demanded boldly.

His tone was offensive, and Flodie's blush deepened. She managed to be polite. "Oh, quite a way from here, in darkest Harlem."

"H'm!" Jonas's eyes were fastened on her keenly, watching every change in Flodie's expressive face. "Ain't sweet on him, be ye?"

Flodie rose in her wrath. What right had he—why should he stumble so on the truth! It was torture for her. She walked toward the stockroom trembling. "If you'll excuse me, Mr. Hasingbury, I've got some pictures to print." She started to enter.

"Hold on a minute, miss. I want to talk to ye!" said Jonas, beckoning with a bony finger.

"I'm sorry, but I'm awfully busy," Flodie stammered.

"Well," he remarked, "so be it. This is important, though. I guess you can spare me five minutes or so. I didn't come up all the way from Branford, Connecticut, and miss prayer meetin' night at that just for the fun of it. See here: is Hall married, or not? That's what I want to know."

Still Flodie's color mounted. "No, he's not. Why?"

"See here, miss!" Jonas beckoned again. "Set ye down; you needn't be afraid, I ain't goin' to hurt ye. I'm a religious man and a church member; ye can trust me. Mebbe you think I'm stickin' my nose into what's none of my business, but, land! I'm his cousin, and I guess I got a good right to know his plans on the subject o' matrimony. He gazed at her cruelly. "And I expect you know why. Now, don't ye?"

"No," said Flodie faintly, leaning on the desk for support.

"I see ye know more'n you're willin' to let on," he continued. "I wa'n't born yesterday, miss, nor yet the day before, and I know somethin' about women, if I be a bachelor. Up in Branford they call me weather-wise. Well, the signs on a woman's face is just as easy, sometimes. Now see here—" he hitched his chair nearer to Flodie. "You don't want Hall Bonistelle to git married no more'n I do. Ain't that so?"

MARCUS SMITH'S CREDIT

Senator Marcus A. Smith of Arizona takes great pride in the means by which he built up a line of credit back in the days when he was a struggling young lawyer in Tucson.

Shortly after he began living in Tucson, Smith fell in with a pleasant chap from Boston named Stebbins, and another man named Charles Leach, from whom he could borrow money, and by that means he contrived to live until he could get a toehold in his profession. He would borrow $100 from Stebbins and promise to pay him back on the first of the month. When the debt was due he went to Leach and borrowed enough to pay off Stebbins and square his board bill. The next time he would get money from Stebbins to pay Leach, and so on. He never failed to pay promptly on the first day of the month, and in that way established a great line of credit. He could borrow almost any amount from either Stebbins or Leach. After his law practice gave him enough to run by his own steam, and he no longer needed to borrow, he still kept on borrowing from Leach and Stebbins for several years and paying them back right on the dot. Why did he do it? Simply for the purpose of advertising his credit.

Senator Smith had a law preceptor back in Kentucky who gave him a bit of advice that he has followed through all these years. The professor said: "Avoid cultivating too much sense of humor. Don't crack jokes, but look serious. If you are trying a case that seems funny to you, remember that to somebody it may be a tragedy. Above all things, as you go through life, be solemn; be as solemn as an ass."

So Marcus Smith has abstemiously avoided jokes and japey.

WHEN KENYON COMPROMISED

Years ago Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa was running for county prosecutor on the Republican ticket. His Democratic opponent had the backing of a man who was not only the leading Democrat in the community but also had a beautiful daughter. Kenyon was extremely fond of the beautiful daughter, and that made complications. For Kenyon feared that if her father opposed him in politics he might get the habit and oppose him in other and more serious ways. Moreover, the daughter was one of the dutiful kind that shared her father's view that to vote anything but the straight Democratic ticket was wicked. One day when Kenyon went to call he found the daughter in tears. She confessed reluctantly that she had had words with her father. It seemed that father had refused her a favor—refused to scratch the ticket to vote for a certain young man who was running for prosecutor. With that encouragement Kenyon went to the daughter's father and effected a compromise by which the father agreed to give Kenyon his daughter, but absolutely refused to yield his suffrage. But Kenyon, by way of making the thing complete, went ahead and beat father's candidate for prosecutor, anyway, after which both he and daughter laughed at father right heartily.

FRANCE'S NAVAL HERO.

Admiral Boue de Lapeyriere, commander of the French naval forces, is as popular in France as is Admiral Jellicoe in England. He entered the French navy nearly forty years ago, and from the outset of his career he displayed marked ability.

One of his early commands was in China, when he obtained distinction at the battle of Foo-Chow. His flagship led the attack against the enemy, and the personal courage he displayed made him the hero of France. Since then he has successfully conducted several diplomatic expeditions in the Baltic and the Mediterranean.

LLOYD-GEORGE'S STAND-BY

Miss Owen Lloyd-George, the daughter of the British minister of munitions, is her father's "right-hand man," assisting him in public duties and ministering to his comfort and health in his home.

The minister is a man of highly nervous temperament and occasionally he has to have a day in bed, where he receives his private secretaries and attends to the routine of business. At such times his daughter assumes full charge of his room, allows the secretaries just as much time as her father's strength will allow and then politely but firmly ends the day's work.

When he is in good health the two are companions for long walks or at golf. In the summers Mr. Lloyd-George has been fond of going with his wife and daughter upon camping excursions, living out of doors and cooking the meals in Gypsy fashion. He returns from such holidays with his nerves much strengthened. But this summer Miss Lloyd-George has had more than her usual duty in watching over her father, as he has not been able to take a prolonged rest.

His daughter is a wholesome-looking girl, with a highly intelligent face, and is the "apple of his eye" to her father.

The General Says:

Know why and know how are essential to any success. Every one of us has to acknowledge that some sort of military preparation is the best way for us to defend the most effective principle in making an industry of any kind serviceable and profitable both to manufacturer and consumer.

This Great Roofing Organization Is Trained Like an Army

Three enormous mills—officers and managed by the best trained force ever enlisted in an industrial army—three huge factories that are run like clockwork.

Military exactness in the securing and selection of raw material, and in every step from then on until the finished product is distributed and sold.

Constant readiness—being prepared every minute for the work to be done, the next—Right there you have your finger on the great, essential reasons for the unflinching satisfaction every user finds in

Certain-teed

ROOFING SHINGLES

These shingles are made of the same high grade materials as are used in Certain-teed Roofing. This process recognizes the principle that roofing materials don't wear out—they dry out. Therefore, Certain-teed Roofing is made with a soft center asphalt and coated with a harder blend of asphalt, which keeps the soft sensation fresh—the life of the roofing—from drying out quickly. This produces a flexible shingle, a true sign of thorough attention in the slowest drying asphalt mixtures that can be made for roofing purposes. A thick, stiff or heavy-bodied asphalt shingle is by no means a proof of durability on the roof.

We use only genuine crushed slate in natural green or red colors for surfacing the Certain-teed Shingle. No painting is necessary. We don't try to use old brick, common rock, or crushed tile from old tile roofs. The slate also increases the fire-resisting qualities, thereby minimizing fire dangers and lowering insurance rates.

When the General first entered the field the cost of roofing was two or three times more than it is today and the quality was not as high as Certain-teed is today. By reason of his enormous output the General has not only been able to bring down the cost and selling price of roofing, but he has also been able to raise the quality to its maximum. Today every fifth roll of roofing sold bears the Certain-teed label.

Certain-teed roofing, shingles, wall boards, felts, building papers, etc., bearing the General's name, are sold by your local lumber or hardware dealer at very reasonable prices. Don't send your money away for these goods. Patronize your home dealer.

SOURCE OF RUBBER PRODUCT.

Rapidly Developing Industry Makes Countries Supplying Crude Material of Special Interest.

"Crude rubber, its source of supply and the conditions governing its progress from the source of American tire factories, have been subjects of especial interest in this country of late," said an officer of a tire and rubber company recently.

Crude rubber is a vegetable product, gathered from certain species of tropical trees, shrubs, vines and roots. It was first introduced into Europe in 1735. It was first used for pencil erasers and in waterproof cloth, and, finally, in solution, in cements. Vulcanizing or curing rubber was discovered in 1844, and thereafter the development of the industry was rapid—though the industry was but an infant in size, compared with now, up to the development of the automobile industry.

Rubber can today be divided into two chief classes—wild and cultivated. These are collected from trees that have grown wild and where there has been no cultivation process. Such trees and shrubs are found mostly in northern South America, Central America, Mexico, Central Africa and Borneo.

The finest rubber in the world has until recently been obtained from the Amazon region of South America and is known as fine Para. For over a century this rubber has been gathered in practically the same way. The native goes into the forest, selects a tree, cuts V-shaped grooves in the bark with a knife made for the purpose, the grooves being cut in heringbone fashion around the tree, with one main groove down the center, like the main vein in a leaf. The latex of the tree (not the sap) flows from the smaller veins and down the center vein into a little cup placed to receive it.
