DEATHS IN ANTRIM

Three of Our Residents Transferred to a Higher Life

The death angel has been hovering over our village the past week and as a result of his visitation the town has been compelled to part with three of its people. Such occurrences sadden the community and more than ever does the sympathy of our people go out to the bereaved families, especially as they were well and favorably known by us all. One being a resident of our town but a few years, was not so generally known but by a limited circle of friends was highly esteemed and her friendship greatly enjoyed. The two more prominent could be easily considered as leaders in their respective classes and were among Antrim's best known people, whose families have contributed their share towards making our town what it is. We as a community will miss them, and trust that something in their lives will inspire us and have a tendency to make us live nearer our ideals, so that we may be more of a help to those with whom we associate.

MILTON TENNEY

Had lived in town about thirty-five years and had become one of its most substantial and reliable citizens. It was as a hotel man that he came into some prominence, and his integrity and square business dealing were the means of securing for himself the confidence of the town's people, so that they repeatedly elected him to positions of responsibility; and never did he once betray that trust. According to his means he was public spirited, as many an act of this nature can be recalled. Yet while he was somewhat occupied by matters of a public nature, he was a man who thought everything of his home and his home life with his family was a most happy one. Only those who knew him best knew of his generous and kindly disposition, and his immediate family and their welfare was always uppermost in his thoughts. Of him it can truthfully be said that he was a kind and loving husband and an indulgent and thoughtful father. With the passing of such a man, it is little wonder that Antrim feels she has met with quite a loss.

Milton Tenney

Milton Tenney was born in Marlow January 4, 1836. After obtaining his early education, he became a traveling salesman, which business he followed for a number of years and then went into business for himself in Boston and Cambridge, Mass.

In 1875 he removed to Hancock where for a year he managed a hotel, from there going to Hillsboro and entering the bakery business.

He came to Antrim in 1881, taking possession of the Carter House, which he successfully run until 1888. Then he purchased the Antrim House, the present Maplehurst Inn. It was while he was proprietor of this hotel that he formed a wide acquaintance with the travelling public, and conducted an extensive livery business in connection with the hotel. Mr. Tenney sold his hotel in 1896 and the same year built his nice home on Highland avenue, which he recently sold.

Mr. Tenney was Representative to the Legislature in 1896, and served a number of years as Selectman; Water Commissioner, and held other town offices.

He married Hattie M. Elliott July 4, 1863; she died July 4, 1908. As a result of this union two daughters are still living, Mrs. Lena Balch and Mrs. Leander Patterson. Other relatives who survive are three grandchildren, Ivon A. Balch of Boston, Mrs. Ina B. Libby and Alfred T. Balch of Brockton, and two great grandsons, Sidney Milton Balch and John Balch Libby.

February 25, 1915, he had a paralytic shock, since which time he has received constant and tender care at the hands of both daughters; all that could possibly be asked has been done by these faithful children, and a son could not do more than has Mr. Patterson during the entire period of illness. During his sickness he had made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Leander Patterson.

Funeral will be in charge of Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which deceased had been a long-time member, and will be held this Wednesday afternoon at Baptist church.

MRS. IDABEL B. JAMESON

Mrs. Idabel B. Jameson, widow of the late Hon. Nathan C. Jameson, passed away on Sunday, April second, at her home in this town. The deceased was a daughter of John D. and Mary Burnham Butler, late of Bennington, and was born in Greenfield, on May 8, 1850.

The deceased was one of those women of whom it is almost impossible to say too much, for every one knew her to be a most excellent woman; in her home and with her family was where she found her greatest enjoyment, and her sons will miss a loving mother whose first care was always for them. They in turn have taken the best of care of her during failing health and shown her every possible attention. In this great affliction they have the satisfaction of knowing that nothing known to medical skill or nurse attendance has been omitted in her care and comfort.

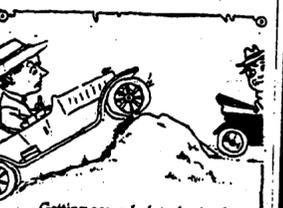

She was a woman of rare ability, great charm of manner and strength of character, and was for many years prominent in the church and social life of this town. She is survived by three sons, John B., Robert W., and Dr. James W. Jameson, five grandchildren, and two sisters, Mrs. Gustavus Walker, of Concord, and Mrs. Edwin D. Jameson, of Antrim.

The funeral was held at the Presbyterian church on Tuesday, at one o'clock. Rev. S. P. Brownell officiated, and spoke comforting words to the bereaved family and friends. Miss Florence Brown sang two solos. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. Interment was in the family lot at Maplewood.

MRS. LUCY A. LOHNAS

Mrs. Lucy A. Lohnas, aged 81 years, passed away at her home on Hancock road Saturday night after a long illness, death being hastened by a fall which she sustained a short time ago. Prayers were held at the house Monday afternoon, Rev. C. E. Clough, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating. The remains will be taken to Mill Village, Nova Scotia, for burial. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Winslow Hartlow, with whom she made her home and where she was tenderly cared for, and Miss V. M. Lohnas, both of Antrim, and three grand-daughters, Mrs. Nathaniel Farrant, Mrs. William A. N. Scott and Miss Nan Harlow.

Prayers were held at the house Monday afternoon, Rev. C. E. Clough, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating. The remains will be taken to Mill Village, Nova Scotia, for burial. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Winslow Harlow, with whom she made her home and where she was tenderly cared for, and Miss V. M. Lohnas, both of Antrim, and three grand-daughters, Mrs. Nathaniel Farrant, Mrs. William A. N. Scott and Miss Nan Harlow.

MEANS A LONG STAY

ARMY OFFICERS BELIEVE JOB IN MEXICO WILL TAKE CONSIDERABLE TIME.

FEAR MEXICANS MAY FIGHT

Factions May Unite Against Northern Invader—Pershing's Good Work in the Philippines—Naval and Congressional Circles in Controversy.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Army officers here say there is no blinking the fact that as the United States government has been obliged to send an army into Mexico it will be forced to stay there for a long time before it completes its work. There are some military men in Washington who declare that the comparatively small force sent into Mexico for punishing purposes and with orders to stay there until the job is completed, probably will be as long at the work as would a larger force engaged in a much broader field of operations.

Of course as has been said by military men and laymen scores of times, if a big army eventually goes into Mexico it will go because the necessity seems to be that it must fight the followers of all factions in the southern country including the adherents of the de facto government under Carranza. So if an American army goes in, that is a big army and not merely a punitive force. It will mean that the Mexicans, spurred by what they think is a pricking of real patriotism, will have joined together to fight the northern invader.

If the Carranza following holds off, the work of the United States troops will concern itself only with the bandit bands, but before these can be rounded up and the work of pacification completed it is held by many Washington officials that a long time will have elapsed, much money will have been spent and probably many lives will have been lost.

How the Army Views It.

This is the army view of the matter and it is based on what has happened in Mexico and on this side of the border in the years that are past. Col. G. A. Dodd of the cavalry is in command of a part of the troops on the border. If Colonel Dodd does not know how to trail bandits and how to fight them probably no man in the American army does. There are a good many officers on the retired list who have been into Mexico in pursuit of hostile Apaches and there are more of them who have fought Mexican bandits in the chaparral and desert countries along the Rio Grande.

Colonel Dodd when he was a captain in the Third cavalry was in the field for two years against Mexican bandits aided by some Texan-Mexicans, who constantly were raiding back and forth across the border and who as a rule made the chaparral country south of the Nueces river their lurking places.

It took the United States government nearly two years to capture about 300 Mexican and Mexican-Texan bandits. The operations against these thieves and desperadoes began early in 1892 and lasted until the latter part of the year 1893. The reason for the success of the outlaws in eluding the troopers was that the nature of the country in which they were committing their depredations was such as to make concealment easy and effective pursuit almost impossible.

It should be remembered that these operations largely were conducted on the American side of the border. At that time American troops were forbidden to cross into Mexico, but no such inhibition held in regard to the men whom they were trying to capture. The outlaws went back and forth at will. If the American troopers had been allowed to cross the river the chances are that the career of the bandits would have been cut much shorter than was the case.

Chased Indians Into Mexico.

In the early '80s and somewhat later, under an agreement with Mexico, American troops were allowed to cross into the southern country when actually in pursuit of hostile Indians. Some officers now on the active list of the United States army took part in these trailing expeditions into the mountains of Mexico and into the desert regions where the bandits of today will betake themselves if pressed by American troops.

It took the troopers a long time to put an end to the Apache raiding. Geronimo and the other Apache chiefs with their bands considered themselves virtually safe if they could once get across the line into the fastnesses of Mexico. The bandits of today may go where the Apaches went and it is probable that following them will be colonels and lieutenant colonels who as first and second lieutenants followed the same trails when in pursuit of the Apaches.

Army officers say that this section of Mexico is one of the worst in the world in which to conduct a campaign with any hope of success. The country is rough and for long stretches it is waterless. One expedition which went into Mexico in pursuit of Indians could not find water for two days and the men came near perishing. With this expedition was Lieut. John W. Heard, who is now a lieutenant colonel of cavalry stationed in Texas. Heard once said that the expedition probably was saved by a mule which seemed to scent water and which breaking away from the expedition led those in pursuit of it straight to a spring.

Pershing Won His Way.

Much has been written and printed about Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing, United States army, the commander in chief of the punitive expedition sent across the border into Mexico to round up Francisco Villa and his followers. Many of the things which he has accomplished as a soldier have been printed, but there are some things which seem to have been overlooked by the record searchers.

No one seems to have given as yet the exact circumstances connected with Pershing's coup in the Philippines, by which he won his star as a brigadier general. He was captain of cavalry, and he happened to be near the Lake Lanao country with his troop at a time when there were no officers of superior rank present, although there was a considerable body of troops in the immediate vicinity.

In the section of the country in which Pershing was stationed there was some cavalry, some infantry, and if memory is all right, some field artillerymen. There were troops enough there of the different branches to form, when combined, a miniature brigade. There were the elements present necessary for a mixed brigade, but there were not troops enough to make it proper in a military sense to call the assemblage a brigade.

However, it was a brigade in form, and Pershing happened to be a senior captain present. In the absence of majors, lieutenant colonels and colonels he therefore became the commanding officer of what, for courtesy's sake, was called a brigade. He took his troops, cavalrymen, infantrymen and artillerymen into the Lake Lanao district and there fought a hard fight and cleaned up what was a very dirty situation, or at least so one might express it from a military point of view.

Following this exploit, Theodore Roosevelt, who was then president of the United States, mentioned Pershing's name in a message to congress, saying that he wished that he could promote the captain to a majority or a lieutenant colonelcy, in order to show appreciation of his fine service in the Philippines.

The law is such that the president of the United States cannot promote an officer except to the grade of brigadier general. When the opportunity came, Roosevelt promoted Captain Pershing and made him Brigadier General Pershing.

Controversy Over Submarines.

A controversy still is waging in naval circles and in legislative circles concerning the usefulness of submarines. As has been pointed out before in Washington dispatches, there is a wide difference of opinion among the members of the senate naval committee over this submarine matter. The chairman of the committee it is said favors submarines at the expense of dreadnaughts, while most of the members take issue with the chairman and favor dreadnaughts at the expense of submarines.

For a year and five months now this submarine matter has been causing disputes in congress and in the American navy. In September, 1914, a German submarine, the U-9, performed a feat which astonished navy men all over the world. The U-9 went a long distance from its base and sunk three second-line enemy cruisers. At that time it was said that upon the report of the captain of the U-9 when it finally was turned in might depend the futures of the navies of the world.

Some time ago, after the exploit of the U-9, it was reported on seemingly good authority that one of the under-the-sea boats had made a voyage from the vicinity of the North sea to the Bosphorus without replenishing its fuel. This feat was so much more extraordinary than the voyage of the U-9 that naval officers in America began to believe that dreadnaughts were to be done away with for all time and that the future navies would consist principally of speedy battleship cruisers and of an enormous number of submarines.

Then all at once there came stories that the British navy authorities had found means which were effective to offset the attacks of submarines and moreover to cut short the career of the under-the-sea boats before they could get in their deadly work. Then the American authorities, naval and legislative, had to study the subject all over again. They tried hard to get the truth concerning the British reports as they tried hard to get the truth concerning the reports which came from Germany. The stories have been so conflicting that the camps are about equally divided today between the submarine advocates and the dreadnaught advocates.

Many Experiments Made.

All sorts of experiments have been made by the naval authorities of the world to protect warships from under-the-sea torpedo attacks. No one knows definitely, as has been intimated in the foregoing, whether something absolutely adequate to the work of protection has been secured. There are some naval authorities who say that inventive genius seemingly has not reached the stage where it can produce a perfect protection for a big warship without so handicapping its movements as to make its means of defense destroy its usefulness in offense.

Congress today is uncertain in preparing its program for an increase in the navy as to whether or not it is wiser to build little ships or big ships. The question may not be answered definitely for some years, and in the meantime the United States must take chances that its naval program will prove to be adequate to the occasion.

Ready for the Birthday Party

The little beauty of the family, having attained the responsibilities that begin with her fifth or sixth year, finds plenty of opportunity for wearing finery. What with Easter and June weddings that require her services as flower girl, and birthday and other parties that are always happening among her friends, her social training is well begun.

A frock that will grace any occasion that requires fine dress is made of sheer batiste and fine val lace. The addition of a little very fine hand embroidery will enrich it to the highest degree of elegance in the dress of the small girl. Several silk slips to be worn under it make a variety of colors possible, for the diaphanous batiste and the val lace veil all colors beautifully.

Other sheer cotton fabrics may be used for dresses of this kind, and the various flouncings, with narrow and daintily embroidered edgings, are very effective in little dresses with full skirts joined to short-waisted bodies. These bodies are finished at the high waist line with one or two narrow frills, made of the embroidered edge from the flouncing, and the short sleeves are merely underfrills of it.

Little overbodies of taffeta or other light silk are worn with them. They are cut without sleeves, having bands over the shoulders, and just to reach the top of the frills on the underbody. Their edges are pinked or finished with hemstitching. They may be made of wide ribbon, and several overbodies in various colors made to be worn with one frock. Slips of silk or mull to match them will bring the frock into harmony with any color scheme, but they are prettiest when worn over white with color confined to the overbody and hair ribbons.

Very handsome and showy party dresses for the small girl are made by joining fine val or other lingerie lace insertion to embroidered organdie insertion in alternating rows, by means of hemstitching. Although the lace, embroidery and hemstitching are all machine made the effect of these in combination is fine. The insertions must be basted together at home and the hemstitching done by someone who has the proper machine for it.

There is a fad for having a hat or little bonnet made to match the lingerie party frock, and a pretty example is shown in the picture given here.

Latest Fashionable Coiffure

Two views of a very fashionable coiffure are given in the picture shown above. This is one of several variations of the same style in which the hair is drawn back from the forehead and brought forward over the ears. Those who are young enough, or look young enough, and have the face for it, may attempt it as it is pictured.

The style is not generally becoming but nevertheless has many devotees. It makes up in neatness and "finish" what it lacks in softness, and it imparts the charm that lies in looking well-groomed to those who wear it.

To dress it, the hair may be waved or marcelled and parted at a point on the forehead above each temple. The hair at the top of the forehead is then combed straight back and even when waved lies flat to the head with no hint of fluffiness about it. At the sides it is brought forward and curved over the ears and the ends concealed under coils across the back of the head. One or two small ringlets are allowed over the temple, and a recent variation of this style has three short curls at the nape of the neck.

The same arrangement of the front hair appears with the back hair brought to the top of the head and coiled into a long puff extending to the middle of the crown at the back. In another variation of the style all the hair is combed back from the face and brought to the top of the crown, where it forms a loop of hair tied to place with narrow ribbon. This is a coiffure for evening dress. A pretty style recently introduced shows the hair with an almost imperceptible wave parted at the left side and combed across the head to the right side. It is brought a little way down in a curve at the middle of the forehead and arranged in four soft coils across the back of the head against the nape of the neck. A jeweled comb is thrust in the hair above the coils and at the right of the crown.

The most becoming of recent styles has a small pompadour across the forehead and stands out at the sides, suggesting the bobbed hair of children. In this style the back hair is coiled low across the head. In the latest coiffures short curls are appearing sometimes at each side of the face and sometimes in the coils at the back of the head, and there is reason to believe that the popularity of the uncovered forehead is waning.

Made With Ruffles.

There are plain silk petticoats to wear with walking frocks that are plain petticoats, no more, no less. They are made with ruffles to give the required fullness at the bottom, and some of them are stiffened with crinoline or a reed.

Mother and Child

By FRANK FILSON

(Copyright, 1918, by W. G. Chapman.)

All through his delirium Ralston was faintly conscious of a woman's face bending over him, with a look of compassion that transfused it. Again and again, as he came weakly back from the fog of delirium into consciousness, he would realize her presence and feel the cool hand on his burning forehead.

When at last he opened his eyes to the realization of his position he saw that the face had been largely the figment of his dreams. It was a pleasant, motherly face, the face of a woman of thirty-five, perhaps; but it was not the face he had imagined.

"Are you feeling better?" asked a soft voice.

Ralston tried to answer, but he was too weak to speak. And, lying there, he began to remember the circumstances of the accident.

He had gone West three years before to take up the homestead miles away from the city, nursing in his heart the remembrance of the girl who had jilted him and ruined his life. He had abandoned everything, his friends, his interests. Gradually the charm of the peaceful country had clung about him, and he realized that nature had a healing balm for his wounded heart.

He had known that Mrs. Symon, a widow of culture, had taken up the homestead adjacent after her husband's death, preferring the solitary life in the wilds to a struggle in a city; but he had not chosen to see any woman, and on the rare occasions when he saw her, as he rode past on his way to the post, he only raised his hat and turned his face away.

So he had lived three years, alone, save for the occasional visit of a neighbor, or the appearance of some wanderer at his sod cabin. He passed for a morose man, as, indeed, he was. Nobody intruded on his life. Each man had his own interests in that wild region.

He had been riding to the post, ten miles away, when his horse stumbled and threw him. He had sustained internal injuries, but no bones were broken. The worst thing was a severe concussion of the brain, and for three weeks he had been semiconscious, living in a world of delirium.

It was odd that in the place of the woman who, till then, had occupied his heart, he should have pictured that face that bent compassionately above him. The force of the delusion had gripped his heart; now, on awakening, he was almost glad to find that it was a dream; and yet he knew that the image persisted. It was extraordinary that he should have imagined what could never be in the face of Mrs. Symon.

For days he lay there, gradually recovering his strength. It amazed him that anyone should be so kind. Ralston was thirty and Mrs. Symon not too old for his expressions of gratitude to bring a warm flush to her face.

Gradually the motherly attitude seemed to vanish. In place of it was a very womanly sympathy, a certain equality that set Ralston thinking hard.

After all, a man could not live alone forever. And this woman was very kind, kinder than any he had ever known. She would assuage his loneliness, and something told him that she was not indifferent to him.

During the days of his convalescence he told her much about his past, and what he did not tell her she surmised. It was only when he approached the subject which had begun to possess his thoughts that she nervously checked him.

"Do you know how old I am, Mr. Ralston?" she asked, with a laugh of embarrassment. "Forty."

It did check him, as it was meant to do, but only because he meant to make no error this time. A wife ten years his senior! Well, such things had been. He resolved that he would ask her.

Yet, with her woman's intuition, she postponed the matter until Ralston was convalescent, till he was able to hobble about the house. Yet each knew that the other was acting a part, and that it was only a matter of time until the words were spoken.

"Did you know that I had a daughter?" she asked him one day.

"A daughter!" mused Ralston. He had not thought of that. Somehow, it seemed impossible—this sweet-faced, youngish woman, with a child.

"She has been living in the city until I could make a home for her," continued Mrs. Symon. "She has been here once or twice, and she is coming to live with me next week." She laid her hand on his arm. "I want you to wait till you have seen her," she continued.

Ostensibly the words meant that Ralston was to postpone his departure until Lillian had come; but, actually, he knew they meant that until then nothing was to be said of marriage.

Yet it was with difficulty that he could restrain himself, for his love had again given Mrs. Symon the aspects of the woman in his dream, and he felt that he could with her attain that peace of soul which he had lost.

"Lillian is coming tomorrow," Mrs. Symon said one day. "Will you take the horse to the depot and meet her?"

"And you?"

"Oh, I shall not have time if I am to get things in order for her," answered Mrs. Symon with a little laugh.

Ralston drove to the depot, and presently a fresh-faced young girl got down from the train and glanced about her. Ralston went up and stood staring foolishly at her. It was the girl of his vision. So she had been there, had seen him while he lay in his delirium!

She knew him, too; she put out her hand, and mechanically he clasped it. He helped her into the carriage and they whirled away. And though not a word had been spoken Ralston felt his heart leap up with ecstasy. She was his! He blessed his stars that nothing had been said to the mother. She knew—Lillian knew. He felt that with perfect instinct. They were born for each other, each was destined for the other.

And the mother was forgotten, and two young people drove along absorbed in one another. Their glances, at first shy, became more ardent. Ralston put out his hand and closed it on the girl's warm fingers.

"Do you understand?" he stammered.

She nodded shyly.

"It was you, then, whom I saw in my dreams?"

She nodded again. And suddenly he drew her to him and pressed his lips to hers. And all pretense seemed ludicrously absurd in the face of this elemental and overmastering passion that had sprung up between them.

In silence they drove the last stage of the journey. When at last they stopped before the cabin they descended like people in a dream. Mrs. Symon was sitting in front of the door; she had seen and interpreted the look upon each face.

As they went in she said in a low voice:

"Are you not glad that I told you so many women, and on the rare occasions when he saw her, as he rode past on his way to the post, he only raised his hat and turned his face away."

"Yes, I am glad," he answered helplessly. Then, with a sudden pity:

"And you? And you?"

"Oh, I?" she asked, with a shrug of her shoulders. "I have had my day, you know. Besides, I am the mother."

Different Matter.

It was the first night of the pantomime, and Jack took his seat in the pit next to a lad about the same age as himself.

"Say, mate, can you smoke in here?" he inquired, when he had made himself as comfortable as he could.

"No," briefly replied his neighbor.

A few minutes afterward Jack saw others smoking, and, looking about, discovered that there were no prohibitory notices on the walls, so again addressed the quiet one:

"I thought you said you couldn't smoke in here?"

"I did not say you couldn't smoke here. I said I couldn't, for—here he jerked his thumb towards the woman on his far side, and whispered—"my mother won't let me."

Care of the Piano.

Half the pianos of this country catch winter colds exactly as we do. They get hoarse or have a cough or a stiff note or some similar complaint, which cannot be cured by home remedies, but which requires tedious and expensive doctoring. In order to prevent these avoidable ailments a piano should be kept in a moderately warm room, where the temperature is even, say 60 or 70 degrees, the year round—not cold one day and hot the next. The instrument should not, however, be too near the source of heat. It should be kept closed and covered with a felt cloth when not in use, particularly in frosty weather. Always place the piano close to but not against an inside wall.

Not Same Kind of Shells.

A stranger became one of a group of listeners to a veteran of many battles. The veteran had about concluded a vividly colored narrative of a furious battle, in which he had taken part.

"Just think of it!" exclaimed one of the party—turning to the stranger—"How would you like to stand with shells bursting all around you?"

"I have been there," responded the newcomer.

"What? Have you, too, been a soldier?"

"No," answered the stranger. "I am an actor."

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water each morning, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any druggist or at the store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

Cause and Supply. "What a fire-eater Jiggins is!" "Yes; accounts for his constant supply of hot air."

Important to Mothers. Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher in Use for Over 30 Years. Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria.

Policewomen Prove Practical. London policewomen have justified their "unfeminine" undertaking by the convincing means of real service. According to a London dispatch, England, after a six months' trial, is really beginning to like them, though at first there was violent opposition to the enterprise. Incidentally, these new public servants are winning favor, not so much by force as by tact and persuasive powers. They have been especially successful in quieting panic-stricken crowds during Zeppelin raids, in dealing with drunken and fighting soldiers, and in calming excited women and children in the streets.

Col. Churchill and His Father. Winston Churchill is bound to remember those old enough to remember of his father, Lord Randolph, a man who made everybody sit up in joy or wrath, but who never achieved much of anything except mischief, brilliant and interesting but erratic and unconvincing.—Hartford Times.

STOP EATING MEAT IF KIDNEYS OR BACK HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Clean Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

ELDERLY WOMEN SAFEGUARDED

Tell Others How They Were Carried Safely Through Change of Life.

Edward, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life, a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recommend my Compound to other ladies."

—Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.
A Massachusetts Woman Writes: "Blackstone, Mass.—"My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well."

—Mrs. PIERRE COURNOYER, Box 239, Blackstone, Mass.
Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through the change

Backache, headache, dragging pains. Nothing relieved me until I took Peruna.

Thousands of the best women in the world are bearing the burden of backache, headache, dragging pains, a miserable half-dead, half-alive condition, produced by chronic internal derangements. Mrs. Joseph Lacelle, 124 Glenora Ave., Ottawa East, Ontario, Canada, is one of the fair women of America who has had her experience with this sort of a burden. Her experience is similar to the multitude of other women whose letters are recorded in the "Ills of Life." A copy of this free booklet ought to be in the hands of every housewife in the United States. Read what Mrs. Lacelle says:

"I suffered with backache, headache and dragging pains for over nine months, and nothing relieved me until I took Peruna. This medicine is by far better than any other medicine for these troubles. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable half-dead, half-alive condition. I am now in good health, have neither ache nor pain, nor have I had any for the past year. If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

HE HAS HAD GRAND CROPS

And Likes the Laws in Western Canada.

"I lived near Lee, Illinois, for 46 years. I came to Saskatchewan in the spring of 1912 and bought land near Briercreek. I have farmed this land, 1680 acres, ever since. I have had grand crops. In 1914 I had 100 acres of wheat that yielded 40 bushels to the acre. I sold this wheat at $1.50 per bushel. I like the country and my neighbors. My taxes on each quarter section (160 acres) are about $32 a year. This covers municipal tax, school tax, hall insurance tax—everything. There is no war tax so-called. I like the laws in force here. There is no compulsion to me in any way. I am just as independent here as I was in Illinois, and I feel that my family and I are just as well protected by the laws of the province as we were in our old home in Illinois. What I earn here is my own. I have seven children and they take their places at school, in sports and at all public gatherings the same as the Canadian born.

We reprint the following article, complete, without comment, from the latest number of the "Saskatchewan Farmer," an agricultural paper published at Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan:

Former Iowa Farmers Are Doing Well In Canada.

"The attempt to check emigration from the United States to our prairie provinces by publishing alarming statements about the enormous war taxes that are being paid here—$500 on a quarter section yearly—about forcing young men to enlist for the war; about the cold, no crops and any old story that by its extravagant boldness might influence men and women from venturing north to Canada, is really in the list of curios to our people. Knowing the country, we can hardly take it seriously. Our governments, however, dominion and provincial, are taking steps to expose the false statements that are being made, and thereby keep the channel open for continuing the stream of settlers that has been flowing to us for the past decade.—Advertisement.

KIDNEY MEDICINE DISSOLVES GRAVEL STONES

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root sells well with us because it invariably produces good results in Kidney, Liver and Bladder troubles. We sold a dollar bottle to one of the inmates of our Soldiers' Home near here, and after using it he brought in about one dozen gravel stones, some as large as a pea, which he had passed. He states that he obtained wonderful relief from the use of Swamp-Root.

ERNEST A. BROWN, Lafayette, Ind. Personally appeared before me this 28th of July, 1909, Ernest A. Brown of the Brown Drug Co., who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

DAVID BRYAN, Notary Public. Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You. Send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample size bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention this paper. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Butter in the Icebox. For a small icebox where space is precious, put butter in a small enamelware dish, closely covered. This will be found as impervious to odor as the much heavier traditional butter crock of earthenware, will occupy much less room and cannot be tipped over as easily.

Fruit Dessert. Six bananas, half pound shell walnuts, pint of cream, two tablespoonsful sugar, a few drops of lemon juice. Crush bananas fine, chop nuts fine also and stir together. Whip stiff and stew over top of mixture with sugar and serve very cold.

Everett Toffee. One pound brown sugar, one-fourth pound butter, one-half teaspoonful water, one tablespoonful vinegar, one-fourth pound finely chopped nuts. Stir till boiling. Boil until nice brown (about half hour or more). Pour on well-greased dish on which nuts have been laid.

For Tough Meat. One method of making tough meat more tender is to brush it over with olive oil and let it stand for several hours.

To Open Sardine Can. Those who have trouble in opening a sardine can will find this is a good way: Start the key as usual, then insert the blade of a can opener in the loop of the key and turn. This acts as a lever, removes all strain and opens the can easily.

Saving Time on Apples. By pouring boiling water over the cooking apples they are much easier to peel. This will be found a considerable saving of time when there is a morning's cooking to do.

CHAPTER I

Red Hill was hemmed in by the breathing silences-of-scattered woods, open fields and the far reaches of misty space, as though it were in hiding from the railroads, mills and highways of an age of hurry. Upon its long, level crest it bore but three centers of life and a symbol—Maple house, the Firs and Elm house, half hidden from the road by their distinctive trees but as alive as the warm eyes of a veiled woman; and the church.

The church was but a symbol—a mere shell. Within it presented the appearance of a lumber room in disuse, a playground for rats and a haven for dust. But without all was as it had ever been, for the old church was still beloved. Its fresh, white walls and green shutters and the aspiring steeple, towering into the blue, denied neglect and robbed abandonment of its sting.

In the shadow of its walls lay an old graveyard whose overgrown soil had long been undisturbed. Along the single road which cut the crest of the hill from north to south were ruins of houses that once had sheltered the scattered congregation. But the ruins were hard to find, for they, too, were overgrown by juniper, clematis and a crowding thicket of mountain ash.

On these evidences of death and encroachment the old church seemed to turn its back as if by right of its fresh walls and unbroken steeple it were still linked to life. Through its small, tinted windows it seemed to gaze contentedly across the road at three houses, widely separated, that half faced it in a diminishing perspective. The three houses looked toward the sunrise; the church toward its decline.

On a day in early spring Alan Wayne was summoned to Red Hill. Snow still hung in the crevices of East Mountain. On the hill the ashes, after the total eclipse of winter, were weakly donning pale green. The elms of Elm house, too, were but faintly outlined in verdure. Farther down the road the maples stretched out bare, black limbs. Only the firs, in a phalanx, scoffed at the general spring cleaning and looked old and sullen in consequence.

The colts, driven by Alan Wayne, flashed over the brim of Red Hill on to the level top. Coachman Joe's jaw was hanging in awe and so had hung since Mr. Alan had taken the reins. For the first time in their five years of equal life the colts had felt the cut of a whip, not in anger but as a reproof for breaking. Coachman Joe had braced himself for the bolt, his hands itching to snatch the reins. But there had been no bolting, only a sudden settling down to business.

For the first time in their lives the colts were being pushed, steadily, evenly, almost—but never quite—to the breaking point. Twice in the long drive Joe gathered up his jaw and turned his head, preparing spoken tribute to a master hand. But there was no speaking to Mr. Alan's face. At that moment Joe was a part of the seat to Mr. Alan, and being a coachman of long standing in the family, he knew it.

"Couldn't get here quicker if he'd let 'em bolt," said he, in subsequent description to the stable hand and the cook. He snatched up a pail of water and poured it steadily on the ground. "Just like that. He knew what was in the colts the minute he laid hands on 'em, and when he pulls 'em up at the barn door there wasn't a drop left in their buckets, was there, Arthur?"

"Nary a drop," said Arthur, stable hand. "And his face," continued the coachman. "Most times Mr. Alan has no eyes to speak of, but today and that time Miss Nance struck him with the hatpin—member, cook?—his eyes spread like a fire and eat up his face. This is a black day for the Hill. Something's going to happen. You mark me."

In truth Mr. Alan Wayne had been summoned in no equivocal terms and, for all his haste, it was with nervous step he approached the house.

Maple house sheltered a mixed brood. J. Y. Wayne, seconded by Mrs. J. Y., was the head of the family. Their daughter, Nance Sterling, and her babies represented the direct line, but the orphans, Alan Wayne and Clematis McAlpin, were on an equal footing as children of the house. Alan was the only child of J. Y.'s dead brother. Clematis was also of Wayne blood, but so intricately removed that her exact relation to the rest of the tribe was never figured out twice to the same conclusion. Old Captain Wayne, retired from the regular army, was an uncle in a different degree to every generation of Wayne. He was the only man on Red Hill who dared call for a whisky and soda when he wanted it.

A Story of Today and of All Days

When Alan reached the house Mrs. J. Y. was in her garden across the road, surveying winter's ruin, and Nance with her children had borne the captain off to the farm to see that oft-repeated wonder and always welcome forerunner of plenty, the quite new calf.

Clematis McAlpin, shy and long limbed, just at the awkward age when woman misses being either boy or girl, had disappeared. Where, nobody knew. She might be bird-nesting in the swamp or crying over the "Idylls of the King" in the barn loft. Certainly she was not in the house. J. Y. Wayne had seen to that. Stern and rugged of face, he sat in the library alone and waited for Alan. He heard a distant screen door open and slam. Steps echoed through the lonely house. Alan came and stood before him.

Alan was a man. Without being tall he looked tall. His shoulders were not broad till you noticed the slimmness of his hips. His neck looked too thin till you saw the strong set of his small head. In a word; he had the perfect proportion that looks frail and is strong. As he stood before his uncle his eyes grew dull. They were slightly bloodshot in the corners and with their dullness the clear-cut lines of his face seemed to take on a perceptible blur.

J. Y. began to speak. He spoke for a long quarter of an hour and then summed up all he had said in a few words. "I've been no uncle to you, Alan; I've been a father. I've tried to win you, but you were not to be won. I've tried to hold you, but it and there are mighty few people that know it. The Hill's battles have never entered the field of gossip. Seven years before you were born my father—your grandfather—turned me out. It was from this room. He said I had started the name of Wayne on the road to shame and that I could go with it. He gave me five hundred dollars. I took it and went. I sank low with the name, but in the end I brought it back, and today it stands high on both sides of the water. I'm not a happy man, as you know, for all that. You see, though I brought the name back in the end, I never saw your grandfather again and he never knew.

"Here are five hundred dollars. It's the last money you'll ever have from me, but whatever you do, whatever happens, remember this: Red Hill does not belong to a Lansing nor to a Wayne nor to an Elton. It is the mother of us all. Broken or mended, Lansings and Waynes have come back to the Hill through generations. City of refuge or harbor of peace, it's all one to the Hill. Remember that."

He laid the crisp notes on the desk. Alan half turned toward the door but stepped back again. His eyes and face were dull once more. He picked up the bills and slowly counted them. "I shall return the money, sir," he said and walked out.

He went to the stables and ordered the pony and cart for the afternoon train. As he came out he saw Nance, the children and the captain coming slowly up Long lane from the farm. He dodged back into the barn through the orchard and across the lawn. Mrs. J. Y. stood in the garden directing the relaying of dower beds. Alan made a circuit. As he stepped into the road swift steps came toward him. He wheeled and faced Clem coming at full run. He turned his back on her and started away. The swift steps stopped so suddenly that he looked around. Clem was standing stock still, one awkward, lanky leg half crooked as though it were still running. Her skirts were absurdly short. Her little fists, brown and scratched, pressed her sides. Her dark hair hung in a tangled mat over a thin, pointed face. Her eyes were large and shadowy. Two tears had started from them and were crawling down soiled cheeks. She was quivering all over like a woman struck.

Alan swung around and strode up to her. He put one arm about her thin form and drew her to him. "Don't cry, Clem," he said, "don't cry. I didn't mean to hurt you."

For one moment she clung to him and buried her face against his coat. Then she looked up and smiled through wet eyes. "Alan, I'm so glad you've come!"

Alan caught her hand, and together they walked down the road to the old church. The great door was locked. Alan loosened the fastening of a shutter, sprang in through the window and drew Clem after him. They climbed to the belfry. From the belfry one saw the whole world with Red Hill as its center. Alan was disappointed. The hill was still half naked—almost bleak. Maple house and Elm house shone brazenly white through budding trees. They looked as if they had crawled closer to the road during the winter. The Firs, with its black border of last year's foliage, looked funeral. Alan turned from the scene, but Clem's little hand drew him back.

Clematis McAlpin had happened between generations. Alan, Nance, Gerry Lansing and their friends had been too old for her and Nance's children were too young. There were Elton children of about her age, but for years they had been abroad. Consequently Clem had grown to fifteen in a sort of loneliness not uncommon with single children who can just remember the good times the half-generation before them used to have by reason of their numbers. This loneliness had given her in certain ways a precocious development while it left her subdued and shy even when among her familiars. But she was shy without fear and her shyness itself had a dowerlike sweetness that made a bold appeal.

"Isn't it wonderful, Alan?" she said. "Yesterday it was cold and it rained and the Hill was black, black like the Firs. Today all the trees are fuzzy with green and it's warm. Yesterday was so lonely and today you are here."

Alan looked down at the child with glowing eyes.

"And, do you know, this summer

Gerry Lansing and Mrs. Gerry Lansing are coming. I've never seen her since that day they were married. Do you think it's all right for me to call her Mrs. Gerry like everybody does?"

Alan considered the point gravely. "Yes, I think that's the best thing you could call her."

"Perhaps when I'm really grown up I can call her Alix. I think Alix is such a pretty name, don't you?"

Clem flashed a look at Alan and he nodded; then, with an impulsive movement she drew close to him in the half-wheeling way of woman about to ask a favor. "Alan, they let me ride old Dubs when he isn't plowing. The old donkey—she's so fat now she can hardly carry the babies. Some day when you're not in a great hurry will you let me ride with you?"

Alan turned away briskly and started down the ladder. "Some day, perhaps, Clem," he muttered. "Not this summer. Come on." When they had left the church he drew out his watch and started. "Run along and play, Clem." He left her and hurried to the barn.

Joe was waiting. "Have we time for the long road, Joe?" asked Alan, as he climbed into the cart.

"Oh, yes, sir; especially if you drive, Mr. Alan."

"I don't want to drive. Let him go and jump in."

The coachman gave the pony his head, climbed in and took the reins. The cart swung out and down the lane.

"Alan! Alan!"

Alan recognized Clem's voice and turned. She was racing across a cor-takes more than a Wayne to hold a Wayne. You have taken the bit with a vengeance. You have left such a wreckage behind you that we can trace your life back to the cradle by your failures, all the greater for your many successes. You're the first Wayne that ever missed his college degree. I never asked what they expelled you for, and I don't want to know. It must have been bad, bad, for the old school is lenient, and proud of men that stand as high as you stood in your classes and on the field. Money—I won't talk of money, for you thought it was your own."

For the first time Alan spoke. "What do you mean, sir?" With the words his slight form straightened, his eyes blazed, there was a slight quivering of the thin nostrils and his features came out clear and strong.

J. Y. dropped his eyes. "I may have been wrong, Alan," he said slowly, "but I've been your banker without telling you. Your father didn't leave much. It saw you through junior year."

Alan placed his hands on the desk between them and leaned forward. "How much have I spent since then—in the last three years?"

J. Y. kept his eyes down. "You know, more or less, Alan. We won't talk about that. I was trying to hold you. But today I give it up. I've got one more thing to tell you, though.

"Clem," He Said, "You Mustn't."

ner of the pasture. Her short skirts dounced madly above her ungainly legs. She tried to take the low stone wall in her stride. Her foot caught in a vine and she pitched headlong into the weeds and grass at the roadside.

Alan leaped from the cart and picked her up, quivering, sobbing and breathless. "Alan," she gasped, "you're not going away?"

Alan half shook her as he drew her thin body close to him. "Clem," he said, "you mustn't. Do you hear? You mustn't. Do you think I want to go away?"

Clem stifled her sobs and looked up at him with a sudden gravity in her childish face. She threw her bare arms around his neck. "Good-by, Alan."

He stooped and kissed her.

CHAPTER II

To the surprise of his friends Alan Wayne gave up debauch and found himself employment by the time the spring that saw his dismissal from Maple house had ripened into summer. He was full of preparation for his departure for Africa when a summous from old Captain Wayne reached him. With equal horror of putting up at hotels or relatives' houses, the captain upon his arrival in town had gone straight to his club and forthwith became the sensation of the club's windows. Old members felt young when they caught sight of him, as though they had come suddenly on a vanished landmark restored. Passing gamins gazed on his short-cropped hair, staring eyes, faring collar, black string tie and flowing broadcloth and remarked, "Gee, look at de old spot in de window!"

Alan heard the remark as he entered the club and smiled.

"How do you do, sir?"

"Hub!" grunted the captain. "Sit down." He ordered a drink for his guest and another for himself. He glared at the waiter. He glared at a callow youth who had come up and was looking with speculative eye at a neighboring chair. The waiter retired almost precipitously. The youth followed.

"In my time," remarked the captain, "a club was for privacy. Now it's a haven for bellboys and a playground for whippersnappers."

"They've made me a member, sir."

"Have, eh?" growled the captain, and glared at his nephew. Alan took inspection coolly, a faint smile on his thin face. The captain turned away his bulging eyes, crossed and uncrossed his legs, and finally spoke. "I was just going to say when you interrupted a dirty job. Not, however," he continued, after a pause, "dirtier than most. It's a profession but not a career."

"Oh, I don't know," said Alan. "They've got a few in the army, and they seem to be doing pretty well."

"Hub, the army!" said the captain. He subsided, and made a new start. "What's your appointment?"

GET NEWS BY TELEPHONE

In Stockholm All the Latest Information Can Be Had by Calling Up "Central."

A "telephone newspaper" is now in active operation here, according to a Stockholm correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle. It "comes out" at nine o'clock in the evening; that is to say, that at that hour or later anybody who will spend ten "oere," or less than three cents, can get the latest war news, etc., by calling up central. Instead of asking for another exchange and a number, one asks for "telephone news," whereupon the operator connects one with a phonograph that gives in a summary all the latest news that is not carried in the evening newspapers. If you are a regular subscriber your bill is charged with the extra amount, and if you call from a pay station you drop the little coin in a slot. The telephone that gives the news has a reinforced current so that one is sure to hear very plainly.

Devices of a similar sort have been used for some time in giving Sunday afternoon concerts. They are very popular on stormy days, when no one can go out, and one can sit at home in an easy chair and hear the best singers and reciters in the city. It is not "canned music" that is served, but the living voice that comes over the wire. The reinforced current telephones are so perfected that one can hear concerts over the long-distance telephone. There have been cases where subscribers in Stockholm have heard concerts in Copenhagen and vice versa.

Hollow Bricks Popular. During the past few years the use of hollow blocks and hollow bricks has extended rapidly. These are much lighter than solid bricks and effect an important saving in railway carriage but they must be distinguished from porous bricks. The weight alone is not a sufficient guide, as hollow bricks are now made which are indistinguishable in appearance from solid bricks. When cut or broken their hollowness is easily seen. On the continent porous bricks are defined as having a weight which is notably less than common bricks, but this definition will have to be abandoned now that hollow bricks are made in large numbers.

Curtain. Once a poor actor was praying for bread. He was dying of hunger, and this fact contributed in making his speech and gestures eloquent. But his argument seemed to be of no avail. At last he heaved the end of his endurance, but he redoubled his efforts. "O Lord," he said, "I pray you by all the powers that be, give me bread," and just then the curtain let down a roll.—Cornell Widow.

Raising Road Funds by Bond Issue

Benefits from Good Roads Cannot Be Overestimated—Necessity for Expert Supervision

(Prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture)

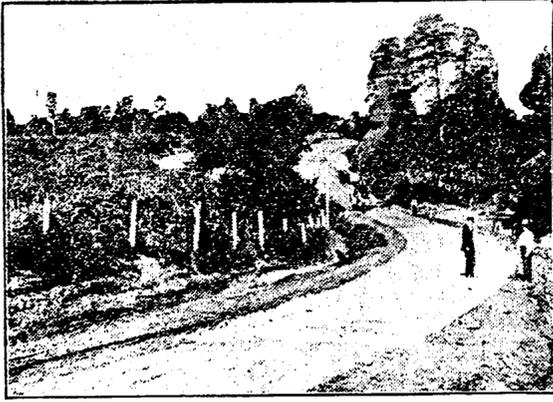

Using Drag, Dunn, North Carolina.

Of the various methods of financing road projects the one most generally practiced for raising a substantial fund which will be available for immediate expenditure is through the issuance of bonds. Experience, say the road specialists of the department, has shown good roads to be a sound investment, both from a business and economic standpoint. If properly proportioned and managed bond issues are made for their improvement, the roads themselves will pay off the indebtedness thus created through the utility which they afford and the saving which will result in the cost of hauling.

Some Reasons for Failure.
Instances are not lacking where bond issues for highway purposes have proved failures. These failures are due to mismanagement rather than to defective principle. Where counties have issued highway bonds the proceeds of which have been spent to construct temporary road surfaces and maintenance. Too frequently ill-advised locations are adopted. Need for Highway Engineers. Highway plans for bond issues require expert skill and professional service. Before the amount of bonds is determined, a thorough study of the needs of the county should be made and careful maps of the proposed highway system should be prepared. The sum to be issued should not be fixed until it is reasonably known what it will accomplish. It is customary for many counties to appoint a commission of business men under whose jurisdiction the bond money is expended. In other cases the county supervisor or county commissioner has the direction of expenditures. The best results have always followed where such commissions or county boards have secured the services of a competent highway engineer. Guided by the costly experience of on unimproved grades and without proper drainage. Failure has necessarily resulted. There are on record in the department of agriculture instances showing where the so-called macadam roads have been built with bond money by simply dumping broken stone at the wrong time of year on muddy surfaces without grades or alignments and without rolling or binding. Investment of money in new roads does not become real economy until provision is made for keeping these new roads in condition by maintenance and repair after they are built.

Through a misunderstanding of the essential principles underlying the establishment of a proper country road system, conflicts of interest sometimes arise which cause the failure of the bond-issue plan. The location of the roads to be improved should not be determined by argument, but upon sound engineering and economic principles. Before a community votes to issue bonds for highways it is necessary to study thoroughly what roads ought to be improved, and the approximate cost of their construction many communities, it is now becoming common for counties to adopt this plan. In all engineering construction it is customary to allow a certain percentage of the cost for engineering and supervision. There is no reason why highway building should be made an exception to this rule. At least five per cent of the bond issue may well be set aside for engineering and supervision alone. Money spent to hire a competent engineer to make preliminary investigations before bonds are issued and to plan and supervise construction will be well spent. It is not uncommon to find counties that will repeatedly postpone the sale of bonds in order to obtain an increase of one per cent in a bid for $100,000 or less and then proceed to construct the roads in a most haphazard and ill-planned manner.

The split log drag has contributed more toward the economic maintenance of public highways than any implement of modern usage. A drag can be built or purchased for $20 and is easily operated by anyone who can drive a team.

WATERING WORK HORSE

Many Animals Are Killed or Injured Through Carelessness.

Never Water Immediately After Feeding Grain Nor Allow Too Much Water When Hot—Management of Great Importance.

(By GEORGE H. GLOVER, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)
Many horses are killed and many more are injured by careless feeding and watering.

Never water a horse immediately after feeding grain. This washes the grain through the stomach before it is properly mixed with the stomach juices and is liable to cause colic. It is safer to water the horse before feeding grain.

If the horse is very warm let him drink a few swallows and then hold his head up for a minute or two and thus cool his stomach slowly. Try it yourself in hot weather. You can drink a quart of cold water without injury if you but will take several minutes for the first few swallows.

When horses are brought in hot from their work they should first be given water cautiously and then fed hay and grain together, allowing them to exercise their own judgment in the selection of their feed.

While waiting for them at the watering trough the time can be profitably used in removing the harness, at least the collar, and cooling the shoulders by washing in cold water. Removing the hot harness, in a hot barn, during the hot noon hour, is a great relief to the horse and is really worth while.

When a horse becomes colicky or is foundered, from too much grain or cold water on a warm stomach, there is no one to blame but the one who had him in charge and it is he who must be charged with either ignorance or carelessness. Horses are worth money and their services are indispensable. Their care and management should be given more consideration.

COMFORTABLE BED FOR HOGS

Best to Use Just Enough Bedding to Keep Animals Warm and Change It at Least Weekly.

Hogs should be comfortably bedded, but it is best to use just enough bedding to keep them warm, and to change it once or twice a week. Where a large quantity of bedding is supplied it becomes damp underneath, causing rheumatism; and dusty on top, giving the hogs a dry, hacking cough. Both dust and dampness are opposed to thrift.

When hogs are not supplied with plenty of comfortable bedding in cold weather, they pile on top of each other to keep warm. In this way the under ones become heated, and when they get out into the cold air are easily attacked by pneumonia and rheumatism. If the attack is not sufficient to kill them, it makes them unthrifty. It is best to allow only a limited number of hogs to sleep together, and they should have such shelter and bedding that they can keep warm without becoming heated.

LOSS IN MUDDY BARNYARDS

Danger From Disease Endangered by Insanitary Conditions—Use of Scraper is Recommended.

It would be difficult to estimate the loss to farmers from muddy barnyards. There is loss of time and much inconvenience in caring for the stock, there is loss of feed and loss of fertility from the barnyard refuse, not to mention the danger from disease that may be engendered by insanitary conditions.

Most muddy barnyards are unnecessary. By the use of the scraper and sufficient gravel, the mud and water can be eliminated. The improvement can be appreciated by all connected with the farm enterprise. An interesting sermon might be written on the relation of the muddy barnyard to the boys who leave the farm. That such relation exists there can be no doubt.

Feeding the Colt.
Growing colts require considerable protein. They should be so fed as to secure proper development and at a minimum cost. Rough feed, such as clean mixed hay, alfalfa, or clover, may be fed along with a mixture of bran, oats, and corn.

Clean Up the Garden Spot.
Remove all weeds, trimmings and surplus rubbish from the garden. See that every plant and bush is properly protected. Cover the ground with finely composted manure and you may then look forward to a fruitful resurrection in the spring.

POINTERS ON SILO BUILDING

Build Above Ground and Remember Silage Can Be Kept Equally Well in Any Receptacle.

(By C. M. SCHULTZ)
Many statements have been made about the different kinds of silos that are not strictly true. For example, in many cases, men who are interested in promoting various makes of silos have made the statement that some certain kind of silo will keep silage better than any other kind. That is "bunk" of the worst kind. All of the standard kinds of silo will keep silage about equally well, if they are well built.

There is considerable talk about the underground silo, and its advantages. It is being advocated by men who ought to know better. An underground silo is a poor thing to have. It is hard to get the silage out of it, and it is dangerous because of the gases that are formed. While the first cost may be a little less than an above-ground silo, it is more expensive when the cost of getting the silage out of the hole, and the bother of the whole proposition are considered. Don't build an underground silo, for it will pay so much better to build a good one.

Build a silo above ground, and remember you can keep silage about equally as well in all of the principal kinds. All you have to consider is the cost, maintenance expense and probable life. When these factors are worked out, it will be found, in many cases, that either the thin-wall or the solid-wall type of cement silo is the best. Investigate the advantages of cement silos carefully before you decide to build some other kind.

HANDY CART FOR FARM WORK

Hundred and One Odd Jobs Could Be Facilitated by Use of Cheap Little Vehicle.

There are many little jobs around the farm that could be made easier through the use of a low-down push cart. Barrels, buckets, and sacks of material, in fact the hundred and one things that we find necessary to move on the farm, could be transferred with a saving of time and labor by means of a light cart.

Two wheels of almost any description can be used, but the lighter the better. Old buggy wheels will answer nicely. An axle with a dip to within a foot or so from the ground can be made by any blacksmith. Short shafts can be attached to the axle on the inside just at the hub of the wheel.

Then the body of the cart can be built from the shafts to the lower part of the axle, giving the cart an underslung platform. The back end of the cart will be left open for convenience, while the two sides and the front end may be boarded up with thin lumber or narrow strips.

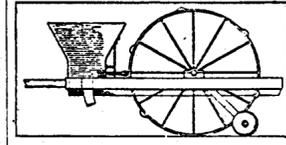

Heavy materials should not be used, except for the bottom, unless heavy loads are to be transported. Such a cart as this can be made quickly and without any special skill. Its value will become more apparent as new uses are found for it. It will shorten and lighten many a task.

SEED PLANTER QUITE USEFUL

Californian Invents Device for Delivering Seeds at Predetermined Spaced Intervals.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a planter, invented by O. L. Freisinn of Santa Rosa, Cal., says:

This inventor provides a planter having a delivery hopper providing means which may be automatically operated by a ground wheel for delivering seeds at predetermined spaced intervals; provides a planter having an automatically operable device for planting the seeds at spaced intervals, and means for covering the seeds; and provides an arrangement whereby the planting rows may be spaced at desired distances apart.

CLEANING UP POULTRY FLOCK

Disease Must Be Expected Where Chickens Are Raised on Same Ground Year After Year.

On ground upon which numerous chickens have been raised until it is thoroughly poisoned you are never rid of disease in the flock, and breed as you will from good outside stock, yet the flock will not attain the size it should, and year after year, in spite of precaution, the chicks show up with the white diarrhea.

Get rid entirely of that flock, especially if it be a special kind that has been kept for many or several years. Oftentimes with but ordinary cleaning up a new breed can come directly upon the ground and show but little sickness.

Yellow Yolks of Eggs.
Rich yellow yolks of eggs can be secured in winter by allowing the fowls free range when possible and making yellow corn, clover and alfalfa meal a large part of the ration. Pale yolks come from the lack of these foods.

CHICKENS DUCKS and TURKEYS

FEEDING THE YOUNG TURKEY

Breeder Should Remember, First of All, Never to Overfeed and Never Give Anything Spoiled.

In feeding small turkeys, remember never to overfeed, and never to feed anything the least spoiled. Feed often but very little at a time. Provide grit and charcoal. Feed plenty of sou milk in addition to fresh drinking water. Mix a little wheat bran and middlings with the cornmeal, moisten this a very little with sour milk and feed sparingly in low rim pie tins. In addition feed very sparingly of a little grain mixture as follows: Equal parts of lime, cracked, untainted, thoroughly dried corn and wheat. Pinhead oatmeal and a little millet are also very good.

Green food in the form of finely sliced onion tops are very good, but must indeed be fed very sparingly.

Keep the turkeys cool, and above all, free from lice and in clean surroundings. Do not allow them to stroll through long grass early in the morning, thus becoming exhausted and wet.

FEEDING MILK TO CHICKENS

Has Most Favorable Influence on Growth and Lessening of Mortality Average Among Flocks.

The feeding of milk to young chicks has a most favorable influence on the growth, and on lessening the mortality average.

Sweet and sour milk are of equal value in chick feeding. The degree of sourness does not affect the nutritive value.

Chicks fed milk freely will have abundant exercise. This applies particularly to early hatched or brooder chicks.

In no way is milk injurious, but whether you feed sweet or sour milk, the same should be fed continually until the end of the milk feeding period, whichever is most convenient, adhere to consistently.

SPROUTED OATS FOR WINTER

Excellent Green Food for Chickens During Cold Weather—How the Trick is Performed.

Sprouted oats have proved an excellent feed for chickens during winter months. The oats may be sprouted in a regular sprouter, in trays by the kitchen stove, in the cellar, on dirt or on burlap. The trick is to soak the oats with water, spread them out in the light and keep them warm and moist until the blades are from three to six inches long.

A successful feeder soaks the oats for 24 hours, spreads them in a shallow box and places it in the cellar. Frequently an inch or more of sand is placed in the bottom of the box upon which the oats are spread.

Watch Fowls Closely.

Watch your flocks closely. It often happens that when mated up, the male is not popular—at least not generally. It is a common thing to notice some females that persistently and successfully avoid the male placed with them and a change to another pen and male produce a marked difference. If there are such cases in your yards, try the changing method.

Don't Doctor Sick Fowls.

As a general rule it does not pay to doctor sick fowls and it is much better practice to prevent disease than to cure it.

Easy Flock to Manage.

On the average farm a flock of 100 to 150 hens is more easily managed than one of a thousand.

Pigeon Terms.

At a day old pigeons are known as "peepers"; at ten days old, "squeakers"; and at three weeks old, "squealers."

Small Flocks Pay Best.

Fowls are said to give the greatest profits when run in small flocks of 50 or not more than 100.

New German Aircraft.

Details regarding a Teuton hydro-aeroplane which fell into the hands of the Russians in the Riga region are of unusual interest in that they disclose the thoroughness with which German air craft are finished and equipped. To quote from the report of the Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd: "All the necessary manipulating parts of the machinery are made luminous at night with a radium composition. There is a special newly invented lever to facilitate handling the plane in darkness, and a special compass, and seats are provided for three. The hydroaeroplane carries a searchlight, a maxim, and a rifle, with an adequate supply of ammunition, and the bombs, five on each side, of ten pounds weight apiece."

Nitro-Glycerin From Garbage.

The war and the resultant demand for nitro-glycerin are given as the reasons for a legal contest which has been begun for a contract to remove the garbage of the city of New York. It has cost New York $3,750,000 during the past 17 years for the removal of its garbage, but a company now offers to pay $900,000 for the privilege for five years. Counsel for the new bidder explained that after treating the garbage with steam, grease is extracted, and from this grease glycerin is made, from which in turn nitro-glycerin may be manufactured.

War on 25,000,000 Prairie Dogs.

The 25,000,000 prairie dogs that inhabit the pasture ranges of New Mexico and Arizona destroy, says the Youth's Companion, enough grass to support a million cows or 5,000,000 sheep. Therefore, the government, acting on an appeal by the stockmen, has employed men to wage a systematic warfare of extermination upon the little creatures. But it will be a long war, for the enemy is widely distributed and deeply entrenched.—Philadelphia North American.

Has a Thrilling Horse Race as Special Feature

Anyone who likes to be thrilled by a spectacular horse race will get a plenty of solid enjoyment out of the photoplay at town hall, Antrim, on Saturday evening of this week.

It is "The Sporting Duchess," from the famous play of the same name. It is a masterful production and nothing was left undone to make "The Sporting Duchess" one of the most remarkable motion picture achievements yet undertaken. The great horse race is only one of a score of thrilling incidents, that flash by with a fascination that grips from the instant the picture appears.

"The Sporting Duchess" teems with exciting incidents; first of all, because it's a soldier play—a story of English army life, with the action shuttling back and forth between British Isles and India. There's intrigue, of course, and a few stiff fights that add piquancy to the play. But, above all, there's a beautiful love story so that while "The Sporting Duchess" has an appeal to the red-blooded, it is humanely sympathetic and refreshing. Is a truly remarkable film.

For Hatching

THE LEGHORN A GREAT LAYER!

The Single Comb Brown Leghorns have taken their place among the general utility fowls because they produce more eggs of larger size than the Asiatics and most other breeds and because they begin laying sooner, do not consume so much time in setting, are hardy, easily raised, do a lot of hustling and consequently can be raised at much less expense.

No one desiring eggs will make a mistake in breeding Brown Leghorns. If they fail to come up to your expectations in egg production, be sure there is something wrong in the management. It is claimed by many breeders that no variety of domestic fowls among the improved breeds at present will produce during the year a larger number of eggs with the same feed and care than the BROWN LEGHORNS.

The laying of eggs seems to be their great forte and so regular and uniform is this quality that it is a rare occurrence to find a poor layer in the flock. They are a proud, sprightly and handsome variety of fowls and commend themselves to all lovers of fancy poultry.
