"THE PIT," IN 5 REELS

A Spectacular Drama — Specially Good Offering

On Saturday evening of this week, May 13, "The Pit" will be shown at the local town hall. It's a big production, elaborately staged, well directed and finely played. There are two interiors of pictorial and spectacular value, uncommon even in these days of big productions. These are the scenes of the opera house and of the operators in the pit of the Chicago stock exchange.

The theme is that of a man absorbed in business—"big business"—so much so that he thinks of nothing else, not even the attractive wife with whom he is so strongly in love. As he gets deeper into the toils of the market, his wife in her loneliness turns to an artist, a former lover. She is on the point of departing with the latter when the husband, broken in fortune and in spirit, enters his home. The threatened break is off; the couple are reunited.

The story is well and convincingly told. The pictures of the speculators fighting in the pit are remarkably good and true to life. Hundreds of men are employed in them and they are just what happens on a smashing day in wheat. It was a real battle, and must have seemed so to every participant.

This feature should appeal strongly to all patrons. Don't miss it! 20c and 10c.

Special meeting of Hand in Hand Rebekah lodge to-morrow night; the degree will be conferred.

For the "Shut-ins" and Aged

There are several persons in South Antrim who are frail or aged, and who on account of disease or age, cannot sleep well nights when well people sleep soundly. Hence these frail ones lie down afternoons often or regularly to get a little sleep which is so essential to the continuance of their lives. The children during recess and after school closes have especially of late been in the habit of yelling with all their might so as to startle and waken the shut-ins and make it impossible to fall asleep again. The writer was young once and loved fun, and expects the children to be full of life. However there is hardly any child or grown person who would not be most happy in showing consideration and kindness to the weak and feeble members of the community. It is mostly thoughtlessness therefore on the part of some to yell like wild Indians while at their play, when any ordinary laughter or talk would not disturb the neighbors so much.

Telephone Notice

REPORTER'S VIEWS

Our Comments on the Current News of Interest

Republican harmony or discord spells either victory or defeat—which ever is uppermost from now on.

Who on earth has a larger job than Ambassador James W. Gerard? And he seems to be handling it all right, too.

If someone speaks a good word of you or says a nice thing about you, see to it that you live up to that reputation.

This is "watchful waiting" time in New Hampshire, and the probability of learning of new gubernatorial candidates on either the Democratic or Republican ticket is small—but after the national conventions in June there will be something doing is a safe bet.

We have been told of some fad or fancy that has led High school girls in Antrim and elsewhere to think that they must graduate in "some sort of something or other" vastly different from the modest and becoming white dresses that have been so long in vogue, and in which the "sweet girl graduate" looked so charming. Nothing else can be made to take the place of these simple gowns of white. It is impossible for us to believe that the modern ways of doing things, or the most approved methods and courses of study are to blame for it. Perhaps it is wise for the parents to steer these young minds along the right channel, and this home training along with the "book learning" will give them a fine start in life.

D. A. R. May Meeting

The May meeting of Molly Aiken Chapter, D. A. R., met with Miss M. Louise Griswold, in Elmwood, Miss Helen Stanley assisting, Friday afternoon, May 5th. The Daughters reported $20 received in exchange for the Belgian Flags.

The Chapter has secured Mr. Townsend, of Nashua, Sec. of the Audubon Society of New Hampshire, to give a free illustrated lecture on Birds, in the town hall, Friday Eve., May 16.

A very interesting program was given as follows:

Reading, Grandma's Attic Treasures, by Miss Beatrice Clement dressed in Ye Olden Time.

Vocal duet, Long, Long Ago, by Mrs. Maud Robinson dressed in Colonial style and Mrs. Wheeler, in present fashion.

Reading, When I was Young, by Mrs. Nettie Hurlin, dressed as grandma.

Vocal duet, Aura Lee, by Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Wheeler.

Paper, My Grandmother's House-keeping and Mine, by Mrs. Louise Smith.

Ethel Brooks Nichols, Sec.

High School Department.

The Antrim High school base ball team was defeated last Saturday by Hollis High, the score being 8 to 3. Wild throws and errors were the cause of our downfall. The battery for Antrim was Farrant and Clough; for Hollis, Brown and O'Neil. Men struck out by Farrant 8, by Brown 7. Hits off Brown 10, off Farrant 7.

Only a small crowd attended the game.

Next Saturday, May 13, Antrim plays Hancock on the home grounds. Come and see the excitement.

Some original (?) jokes from Senior English papers:

John—"I think I'm going to die, Pat."

Pat—"Is that so? What kind of flowers shall I send you, John?"

John—"Cauliflowers, Pat."

Why are married men considered cleaner than single men?

Because they are always in hot water.

A teacher had spent some time explaining the difference between the word light and the word delight, to a little negro boy. At last she asked him for a sentence with the word delight in it. He replied: "The wind blew in the window and blew out delight."

Bird Lecture

On Tuesday evening, May 16, at 8 o'clock, in the town hall, there will be an illustrated bird lecture, given by Rev. Manley Townsend, the secretary of the New Hampshire Audubon Society. This lecture is very highly spoken of, and promises to be both instructive and entertaining, and it is hoped a goodly number of the townspeople and the pupils of our schools will be present. Admission free.

Rheumatic Pain Stopped

The drawing of muscles, the soreness, stiffness and agonizing pain of Rheumatism quickly yields to Sloan's Liniment. It stimulates circulation to the painful part. Just apply as directed to the sore spots. In a short time the pain gives way to a tingling sensation of comfort and warmth. Here's proof—"I had wonderful relief since I used your liniment on my knee. How Far is Concord?

Not So Far That the Statements of Its Residents Cannot be Verified

Rather an interesting case has been developed in Concord. Being so near by it is well worth publishing here. The statement is sincere—the proof convincing:

J. A. Drew, painter, 15 Highland Ave., Concord, N. H., says: "I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back, which often extended into my shoulders. I was so weak and lame that I could hardly move. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and caused me much annoyance, especially at night. I didn't rest well and got up in the morning feeling tired and miserable. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that cured Mr. Drew. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

Carr-Stone

A serenade was given Mr. and Mrs. D. Henry Carr, of Depot street, Monday evening by about 50 of the friends and neighbors. Bass drums, a hurdy gurdy and other noise making instruments were much in evidence. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Huntington hospitably opened their tenement to the assembled guests and in a short time Mr. and Mrs. Carr put in their appearance from the tenement upstairs. An informal reception to the newlyweds was then held, after which the groom treated the men on cigars and the ladies on fruit.

Mr. Carr was married to Mrs. Frances Stone, of Worcester, Mass., by Rev. Henry A. Coolidge, pastor of the Congregational church, at the parsonage one evening recently. They will make their home here.

Many friends united in three rousing cheers, wishing both bride and groom much happiness.

The Whist Club closed their season with a banquet last evening at The Maplehurst Inn. About 60 members attended.

When You Become a "Conscious" Reader of Advertising

By J. R. HAMILTON

Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

When you learn to read your advertising as you read your news, the cost of everything you wear or use is going to be lowered for you.

If you knew how much money it takes to soak an idea into your mind subconsciously you would be ashamed of your mind. It actually takes as long as two years sometimes to get you to think and say a certain word.

It's like teaching a baby to talk.

Every known trick of psychology is brought to bear on you. Advertisers have even been known to print their advertisement upside down, hoping, perhaps, that if you had to stand on your head to read it you might remember what they say.

And what you so often refuse to receive with your will the camera of your eye records in spite of you. So that 96% of what you buy you buy through advertising whether you know it or not.

And yet, in the face of all this, the advertising method of selling things is twenty times cheaper than any other method known.

Think how much cheaper still it would be if you would only read your advertising consciously instead of buying through it in spite of yourself.

The merchant who doesn't advertise hasn't even a chance with the one who does.

Your eye is taking photographs every time you turn these pages. You couldn't get away from these advertisements if you tried. Even the man who claims not to see them at all is recording them all the time. Every merchant who appears here is telling you his story every day whether you know it or not.

All we are trying to do is to make you conscious readers of advertising instead of subconscious readers. This is being done equally for your benefit and for ours.

Every time you look for the advertising in this paper instead of making it look for you you bring down your cost of living, you increase the buying power of your money and you get a better quality for the price. This is true because the men who advertise are always the best merchants. They are the ones who last. The others flicker up for a little while and then go out. That's the proof.

On the other hand, every time we get a hundred more of our readers to turn each day with a conscious mind to the advertising news as well as to the general news, we make this a better medium for our advertisers. We give them more for their money because we give them your will.

And before we are through every subscriber we have will be reading his advertising consciously day by day—never fear. For this is another psychological law.

NEWS OF THE GRANITE STATE

Peterborough Has Series of Strange Accidents

ONE MAN DEAD, IS RESULT

Woman Gets Electric Shock—Blacksmith and Cook Receive Same Treatment. Doings of a Somnambulist.

Peterborough—A series of accidents, apparently the result of an imperfect electric transformer, took place here Friday, resulting in the death of one man and serious injury to a young woman. The man is Karl B. Hodgkins, a baker, who came here from Concord but a short time ago. He apparently opened his oven door against an electric wire and was electrocuted by establishing a short circuit through his body. Miss Ruth Page, a milliner, in attempting to turn on an electric light was severely shocked and burned and is in a dangerous condition. Dennis McLane, a blacksmith, picked up some tools in his shop and received a shock which rendered him unconscious. The cook at a hotel was knocked down and heated wires set fire to the building. An investigation will be made for the cause leading up to the accidents.

What a Somnambulist Can Do.

Manchester—When Mrs. Herbert S. Quimby heard her front door close soon after midnight, Thursday, she began an investigation, and found that her husband was missing, but his clothes were left. She at once notified the police, and they began a search for the missing man. In the meantime members of his sister's family not far away heard a noise and upon investigating found Quimby in a room on the second floor just getting into bed. He was barefoot and clad only in his night clothes. In some way he had found a night key with which he unlocked the front door and was making himself at home although sound asleep. He was not disturbed and allowed to finish the night. He went to work as usual in the morning, but left during the day, complaining that he did not feel well.

And They Went Gypsying.

Penacook—One afternoon last week while Fred Miner, an elderly man, was working beside the road, a woman belonging to a band of gypsies who were doing the place went up to him and took his wallet from his pocket. She abstracted a $5 bill and went away. Mr. Miner reported the matter to the police and the band was followed to a point some two miles above Franklin where they had camped for the night. A demand was made for the money which was paid over together with the expenses of the officers from this place.

From Pulpit to Politics.

Manchester—Rev. Thomas Chalmers, for 17 years pastor of the First Congregational church, has placed his resignation in the hands of the officials. Friday he made a formal announcement that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the First district. There are now three avowed candidates from this city, as Congressman Sullivan will again be a candidate and George I. Hazelton, president of the senate, is also a candidate for the nomination.

Two Thieves are Caught.

Concord—A store at White River Junction was entered one night last week and some nice suits of clothing taken, the thieves leaving old ones behind. Later the station at Andover was entered in daylight and $35 taken. Officers got after the two men who were supposed to have committed the thefts, and after considerable trouble they were rounded up in the woods near Boscawen. In court here Friday morning they were held in $800 each for the grand jury.

Don't Monkey with Fire Alarms.

An alarm was rung in from one of the boxes in this town early one morning recently and a man was seen running away from the box. The department came out but could discover no fire. Later a young man was brought into court charged with the offence. He pleaded guilty and was given a sentence of fifteen days in jail.

Hotel Changes Hands.

Ashland—The Squam Lake House, one of the oldest hotels in this vicinity has been taken over by Thomas Barney of Somersworth, who will take possession May 15. He has leased the house for a term of years and bought all the furnishings.

Three Dartmouth Students Become Ambulance Drivers.

Hanover—Three Dartmouth students will sail for Bordeaux, France next Saturday, having volunteered their services as ambulance drivers to the American Hospital Unit at Paris. They are George Dock of St. Louis, Lyman T. Burgess of Souix City, Ia., and Carleton A. Potter of Oneida, N. Y. They have signed for a six months' service but all plan to stay longer.

Oakum is Very Combustible. Manchester—An employe of Clarence E. Smith, a tinsmith, with a store in the four-story Ray block, went into the basement Friday and after lighting a gas jet threw the match to the floor. It struck in a pile of oakum and a flash of flame followed. Before the department had the fire under control a loss of several thousand dollars from smoke and water had resulted.

He Can Live Comfortably on This.

Milford—Henry Lewis, a man of 67, who has earned his living by doing odd jobs about the town for several years, has received word that a distant relative has left him $80,000. The money is left in trust and he can draw only $65 a week. He says he has not made up his mind how he will use the legacy, but will keep on working just as usual.

School Boards Meet in Concord.

Concord—There was a largely attended meeting of the members of school boards from various towns in the state in Representatives hall Thursday afternoon and Friday. There were interesting addresses and discussion which were intended to make a more efficient supervision of the schools by the various school boards.

Was This a Foul Ball?

Tilton—While some of the employes of the Tilton hosiery mill were playing ball during the noon hour Friday the ball accidentally went into the canal. Arthur Randall reached for the ball, lost his balance, and he too went into the canal. The current was swift, but he was rescued by his companions without injury.

Had Passed the Century Mark.

South Effingham—William Taylor died Friday evening at the home of his son at the age of 100 years, four months and five days. His 100th anniversary was celebrated January 31st when all the business places were closed. He had been representative, selectman, policeman, and a stage driver for 30 years.

Suncook Has a Bank.

Concord—At a hearing before the bank commission Saturday the Suncook bank of Pembroke was authorized to proceed in organization and make its report to the commission when completed. This is the first bank to be organized under the act passed at the last session.

Farmington Has Big Black Bear.

Farmington—M. B. Smith of this town saw a black bear drinking at a watering trough near the Burnham farm one day last week. When the animal saw Mr. Smith it set off at a lumbering gait toward the hills and it was watched until it entered the woods half a mile away.

Motor Vehicle Registration.

Concord—The receipts of the State Motor Vehicle department for April were the largest of any month since the state began to license automobiles, and reached $80,000. The receipts to May 1 were $167,000, which is larger by $16,000 than for the same period in 1915.

Was Longest in the B. & M. Service.

Portsmouth—Emmons Garland, the oldest conductor on the Boston & Maine railroad, died in this city Friday night after an illness of only four days. He was born in 1840 and began his service as conductor in 1871.

Ex-Congressman Reed Gets a Good Berth.

Manchester—Senator Hollis telegraphed ex-Congressman Eugene Reed Friday that he had sent his name to the senate to be a Philippine commissioner. The salary is $13,000.

Plants His Garden at 93.

Stratford—Joseph Stiles, aged 93, the oldest person in town, is busy these days planting his garden. He is very active and does not appear over 70.

How It Affected Him.

There recently entered the office of a physician a young man making this announcement: "I want to thank you for your valuable medicine, doctor." "It helped you, did it?" asked the physician, much pleased. "It helped me wonderfully." "How many bottles did you find it necessary to take?" "To tell the truth, doctor, I didn't take any. My uncle took one bottle, and I am his sole heir."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Don't Worry.

The man who is always behind in his work and frets and worries because he has so much to do, is working without a system. No use trying to do more than one thing at a time and if one will adhere to this rule and have a time for doing everything day after day and month after month, the kinks will soon straighten out and he can do his work easily and without friction.

Hair Tonic His Undoing.

"I understand Binks has just had a most humiliating experience." "Yes, he has. You see, he prided himself for years on his ability to withstand regular liquor, and yet succumbed to some hair tonic he bought at a drug store."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Frequently Is That Way.

When a man gets what he wanted he's lucky if he doesn't put in a lot of time wondering what he wanted with it.

The largest flower in the world grows in Sumatra. It measures about a yard across, and weighs, roughly, 15 pounds. At the declaration of war the British army comprised 711,600 men, of whom, in regulars and reserves, 601,000 were in the British Isles. Royalties on oil and mining developments, rents on state lands, leases and fees pour in so rapidly to the state of Wyoming that she may soon be in the position of not having to raise any taxes at all for support of the state government, a pitiful prospect. Owing to this, France has been forced to increase greatly its imports of matchwood, etc., especially from the United States, Sweden, Italy, Switzerland, Indo-China and Japan. HISTORIC CRIMES and MYSTERIES

By WALT MASON

THE LAW AND THE LACKEY.

At the close of the eighteenth century the families of the Marquis d'Anglade and the Comte de Montgomerie lived in peace and harmony in a large house in the Rue Royale, Paris. They lived rather luxuriously, and while it was held that most of the marquis' funds came from the gambling tables, nobody held that against him. He was a man of fine appearance and charming manners, and his wife was a beauty. De Montgomerie had a fortune of his own and didn't need to go to the gambling establishments to earn his bread in the sweat of his fingers. He kept a large establishment, with servants and horses and chariots and the d'Anglades lived in the same house because of the firm friendship existing between the two families.

It came to pass that the Montgomerie decided to go to their country house for a while, and invited the but when a man is hunting a lion he doesn't want to fool away time on rabbits. Five of the missing bags of silver were found in the servants' boxes, but this made no impression upon the great policeman. The marquis must have put the bags where they were found, in order to throw suspicion upon the servants.

The prosecution was pitiless and brutal, and the lieutenant general of police seemed to dominate everybody and everything. The marquis protested his innocence, and was ordered to the torture, but no physical agony could draw from him a confession of guilt. He was convicted and sentenced to the galleys for life, and presently set forth on his mangled limbs, as a member of a chain gang bound for Toulon. The story of the persecution of the d'Anglades seems more like a chronicle of the dark ages than a record of modern happenings. The marquis, whose life had been spent in gilded ease, found the journey torture; and the brutes in charge of the chain gang seemed to take a vicious delight in adding to his misery in every possible way. He was chosen out for all their barbarity, perhaps because he was an aristocrat. League after league he toiled along the endless white road, his feet bleeding, his legs swollen, his body covered with bruises, and his heart broken.

At last death came to his relief. He died of exhaustion at Marseilles, and it is doubtful whether any man ever greeted the deliverer with greater joy. Meanwhile his wife had been taken from a sick bed and dragged to the bar of justice by the tireless lieutenant general, who was fairly basking in the well-earned fame this case had brought him. She was found guilty of something or other, and imprisoned in an underground dungeon, where, in cold and slime and darkness, she became the mother of a daughter; and mother and babe were left there with no attention, except when a piece of black bread was thrown in, as to a wild beast. Afterwards the jailor who did this service said that he often heard the wretched woman moaning.

The Chief Criminal Was a Priest Named Gaynard Who Obtained Wax Impressions of the Comte's Keys.

d'Anglades to go along. The invitation was accepted but at the eleventh hour d'Anglade begged off, saying his wife had fallen sick. The Montgomerie went away and there is every reason to suppose that they had the best kind of a time at their rural chateau. They returned to Paris a day earlier than they had expected, arriving at their home in the evening. The d'Anglades spent the evening with them.

On the following morning Montgomerie discovered that he had been robbed during his absence, and the robbers had made a big haul. They had opened his strong box with a false key and had carried off thirteen bags of silver, several bags of gold, and a hundred louis d'or of a new pattern, not in general circulation, and a quantity of valuable jewelry. The Comte sent at once for the police.

The lieutenant general of police came with several of his trusty sleuths, and after examining everything he announced his belief that somebody in the house had stolen the goods, and he began a search of the premises. In order that nobody could accuse him of impartiality, he made a search of the d'Anglades' apartment the first thing, before going to the servants' quarters, and his surprise and delight may be imagined when he discovered a roll of 75 louis d'or, of the new coinage, wrapped up in a paper, a part of a genealogical table, which was at once identified by Montgomerie as belonging to him. In vain the marquis protested that he knew nothing about the money or how it came there. His appearance was against him.

To the astute lieutenant general of police this was sufficient proof of the man's guilt. When he went to the house he expected that it was going to be a sordid affair, involving a crooked servant or two, and now he had a real live marquis in the toils. His delight may easily be understood. The case was bound to make a big sensation, and the lieutenant general would be covered with glory. From the moment of finding the money in d'Anglade's attic, that gifted functionary bent all his efforts to the one end—the conviction of the marquis. He would consider no evidence that led in other directions.

As a matter of form he went to the basement, and there found evidence against the servants far more incriminating than that against the marquis.

"Oh, God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Surely few people have had better reason to ask the question. But God had not forsaken her entirely. About this time a former lackey of the Comte de Montgomerie's felt within him a spiritual yearning. He realized that his sins were as scarlet, and he would be as white as snow. He wished to become a priest, and devote his life to good works. With this praiseworthy ambition in his breast, he set about undoing the evil he had wrought, so far as he could. He knew the truth about the robbery at the Montgomerie's, and he wrote an anonymous letter to friends of the d'Anglades, giving them information which enabled them to bring the facts to light. And the facts showed that the unfortunate d'Anglade had nothing whatever to do with the crime.

The chief criminal was the Comte de Montgomerie's almoner, a priest named Gaynard, who had obtained wax impressions of the comte's keys. From these impressions a man named Belestre made false keys; several servants of the comte were in the plot, including the writer of the anonymous letter. They were all taken into custody and subjected to the torture, one by one, and in their confessions they were unanimous in exonerating d'Anglade.

The unfortunate wife was released from her black dungeon, with her naked babe in her arms. She was in a dying condition, but now the sympathy of an entire nation was with her, and she was nursed back to health. The people of Paris raised a fund for her, amounting to $20,000, and the courts made De Montgomerie dig up a large sum to make restitution for the property confiscated.

There is only one bright spot in this tragic story. One morning the lieutenant general of police, who had been the lion of Paris for a long time, stepped out of his door to go to his office, when a stone hit him on the side of the head. Then another rock—or maybe it was a vitrified brick; anyhow, it was hard, and weighed eight pounds and a half—took him in the stomach and doubled him up, and before he could unbend himself somebody prodded him in the ribs with a pole. In fact, the whole population of the street had turned out to do him honor, and when his servant dragged him back into the house he looked just like a man who has been fooling with a pile driver.

The Dreamer

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

"Aw, come off, Bill! I'm too old for them dreams!" said Dick Sittlingwell to his fellow drummer in the train.

"No, but honest! I mean it! Why, Dick, you must be making your cool bust you could get as good a job anywhere. And forty-five if you're a day. Ain't you never had a girl, Dick?"

Dick Sittlingwell moved in his seat uneasily. "Cut it out, I tell you," he answered ferociously. "Hello! Bourne End! Here's where I get off. So long, old man! See you next week as usual."

Dick Sittlingwell had had plenty of girls when he was a young man, but somehow all his romances had come to an untimely end. And it was only within the last two years that a new romance, sweeter than any, and more strange, had come into his life.

He never spoke about Miss Elsie Van Nugent. It had never entered his mind that he could speak to her without profaning her. That was his sanctuary, his holy of holies. And marriage with her was something of which he had never dreamed. Their acquaintance had begun by an accident. Dick, toiling up the hill at Bourne End on a hot summer day, with his sample case in his hand, had seen the old maid standing at the gate of her garden. He looked up at the big house in the village and, taking her for the housekeeper, said:

"Might I ask you for a glass of water, ma'am?"

"I'll get you one," stammered Miss Van Nugent, and ran away, or rather hurried away, returning with a glass as clear and cold as if it had come from some Olympian spring. Dick quaffed it at a draft.

"Much obliged, ma'am," he said, and raised his hat and went away. He did not imagine what a romance that was to Elsie Van Nugent.

Afterward, upon succeeding journeys, it often happened that he saw Miss Elsie at the gate. Then he would nod pleasantly and pass a remark. By degrees their intimacy increased. Dick Sittlingwell would often stay as long as five minutes, talking and looking wistfully at the big house in the cool grounds. He learned Miss Elsie's name at the hotel. She owned the place, and was the daughter of the late squire. She was an old maid—and they said, maliciously, that she was forty.

Elsie Van Nugent had never married because she had taken care of her father until his death, when she was thirty-seven. No opportunities came after that. Opportunities for marriage are few in New England among women whom birth has made superior to the rest of the community. And, besides, Elsie was already growing into a typical old maid. She was becoming angular and thin, there were gray streaks in her hair, and she knew quite well that whatever beauty she had ever possessed was already gone beyond recovery.

Her life had been utterly cramped. Her bookish learning had never been modified by contact with the world, for her father had always been a recluse, and, in his last days, a fretful invalid. When she met the drummer she thought him a typical man of the world.

The acquaintance was a wonderful thing to her. She felt guilty in stealing down to the garden gate when Dick was coming that way—Thursdays he always appeared in Bourne End. She invented little excuses at first to account for her presence there. Wistfully she thought how she would like to ask him in. But she never dared. It was not only fear of what the neighbors would say, but fear of what he would think of her.

It was odd that the uncouth drummer should exercise so strange a fascination over the old maid, but it was equally strange that he should find in her his ideal of womanhood. Two or three years passed, and their intimacy stayed exactly where it was. Neither dared to increase it, or to venture to speak of the thoughts in the heart. Dick was becoming bolder and stouter, and Elsie more withered and lean.

Then came the day when Dick was amazed to see the house closed and a big "For Sale" sign in front of it. The town was buzzing with the news. Miss Elsie's lawyer, who had had charge of her property, had absconded, taking with him her whole available fortune, ten thousand dollars.

Miss Elsie had remained secluded in the house since the Monday before. Dick hesitated only a moment; then he went into the garden and knocked at the door.

Miss Elsie herself opened it and stood, watching him through her tear-stained lashes. She looked less beautiful than ever at that moment, with her reddened eyelids and her disordered hair.

"It's too bad, ma'am," said Dick. "Just heard the news, and called to say how sorry I was."

"I suppose it's what they call life," answered Miss Elsie.

"I hope, ma'am, you aren't planning to sell the place because of that?"

"I certainly am. It's all that I have left now."

"Might I ask your price, ma'am?" inquired Dick.

"Eight thousand dollars," answered Miss Elsie listlessly. "It ought to be more, but the house is very old, and that's what I'm advised to hold it for."

Dick thought hurriedly. He knew that would mean about three thousand cash and a mortgage. Dick was worth about three thousand; he could arrange the details.

"I'll buy it," he announced. "You!" gasped Miss Elsie.

"Yes, ma'am. You see, I've had my eye on the place for a long time, in the hopes you might some day sell."

The words struck her like a blow between the eyes. So that was the secret of his interest. The vanity of her dreams!

"I suppose you can have it, then," he heard her answer vaguely.

"Everything in it as it stands, lock, stock and barrel!" asked Dick.

"Why, I guess the furniture's not worth much," said Miss Elsie. "You'll have to see my brother, Mr. Van Nugent, at Staples. He has charge of the matter."

"But if he is willing, you are?" persisted Dick.

"Yes," she replied.

Dick withdrew. He wanted to hide the elation in his heart, that set it pounding frantically as he reflected upon his maneuver. He clenched his fists as he thought of the lawyer. He had known Sharples well; the man was a convivial person at the hotel. "If ever I run across him, I'll break his head," he swore.

And Dick ran across him the following week in the most amazing way. He was sent out to a western city to cover a territory left vacant by the illness of a fellow drummer. The business done, Dick retired to his room in the hotel.

A door opened softly, and Dick saw the head and shoulders of Sharples. In a minute he had leaped across the passage and entered, before the lawyer could draw the bolt.

Sharples stared at Dick in terror. "What do you want?" he snarled.

"You know," said Dick. Sharples realized that it was no time to make pretenses. "It's not your business," he swaggered, "but I'll give you five hundred to get out and keep your mouth shut."

"You'll give me ten thousand for Miss Van Nugent," answered Dick. "It never was ten thousand."

HANDY THINGS TO MAKE FOR MOTHER.

For the sleeve board (Fig. 1) you will require wood three-quarters of one inch thick, out of which to cut pieces A and B (Figs. 2 and 3), and a carpenter's "dowel" stick about two feet long from which to cut four pieces five inches long for connecting A and B. Figs. 2 and 3 show the measurements for cutting pieces A and B.

and the location of the one-half inch holes for the dowels, which should extend entirely through the pieces. Coat the ends of the dowels with glue, and fasten them with finishing nails driven through the edges of A and B.

Fig. 4 shows a unique rack for dish towels, with the back board so hinged that, when the towels hung upon them have dried and been put away, the arms may be dropped out of the way as in Fig. 5.

Fig. 6 shows the dimensions for board A. Fig. 7 the dimensions for board B, and Fig. 8 the length of the broomhandle arms C. The holes in board B must be of the exact diameter of the broomhandles. Coat the ends of the arms with glue, and drive a nail through the edge of board B into each.

One pair of hinges is sufficient for hinging board B to A. They should be screwed to the edges as shown at D (Fig. 6). Screw eyes E and F (Fig.

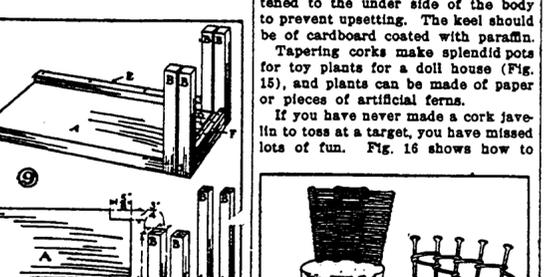

5) are provided for pin H to slip through when the arms have been raised, to hold them in that position (Fig. 4).

Screw one screw eye into the edge of board B (E, Fig. 5), and two screw eyes into board A (F, Fig. 5), in the right positions so when the arms are raised screw eye E will come between screw eyes F. Screw eye G (Figs. 4 and 5) are provided for hangers.

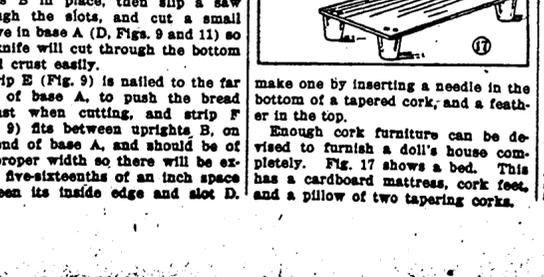

The purpose of the bread-slicing board (Fig. 9) is to make it easy to slice a loaf of bread so each slice is of equal thickness on all edges.

Fig. 10 shows the dimensions for base A. Fig. 11 the dimensions for uprights B. Block C will keep up-rightly B the right distance apart for the slot for the bread knife. Nail uprights B in place, then slip a saw groove in the slots, and cut a small groove in base A (D, Figs. 9 and 11) so the knife will cut through the bottom bread crust easily.

Strip E (Fig. 9) is nailed to the far edge of base A, to push the bread against when cutting, and strip F (Fig. 9) fits between uprights B, on the end of base A, and should be of the proper width so there will be exactly five-sixteenths of an inch space between its inside edge and slot D.

Patchouli for Moth Prevention. The fragrant dried roots of the patchouli, reports Special Agent Gardner Harris, are held in great esteem in Porto Rico, and it is the general belief in the island that when placed among clothing and in closets they are a sure preventive of moths. In the earlier days of the century the perfume of patchouli was in great favor. It is believed that, if the properties of patchouli were more generally known, there would be a demand for it in the United States in preference to moth balls. It should have as much vogue as lavender for putting between sheets and placing among garments; and if it were manufactured or shredded into a finer substance and sold in small bags, it would be a decided novelty that undoubtedly would prove popular. Great quantities of it grow wild in Porto Rico, and a demand for it from the United States would afford employment to many of the poor country people. In Porto Rico natives bring the patchouli to town and sell it in small bundles that retail at two to five cents.

GLASS OF WATER Upeat Her. People who don't know about food should never be allowed to feed persons with weak stomachs.

Sometime ago a young woman who lives in Me. had an attack of scarlet fever, and when convalescing was permitted to eat anything she wanted. Indiscriminate feeding soon put her back in bed with severe stomach and kidney trouble.

"There I stayed," she says, "three months, with my stomach in such condition that I could take only a few teaspoonfuls of milk or beef juice at a time. Finally Grape-Nuts was brought to my attention and I asked my doctor if I might eat it. He said, 'yes,' and I commenced at once.

"The food did me good from the start and I was soon out of bed and recovered from the stomach trouble. I have gained ten pounds and am able to do all household duties, some days sitting down only long enough to eat my meals. I can eat anything that one ought to eat, but I still continue to eat Grape-Nuts at breakfast and supper and like it better every day.

"Considering that I could stand only a short time, and that a glass of water seemed 'so heavy,' I am fully satisfied that Grape-Nuts has been everything to me, and that my return to health is due to it.

"I have told several friends having nervous or stomach trouble what Grape-Nuts did for me and in every case they speak highly of the food."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each mouth so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 322 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Glenwood

"It certainly does make cooking easy"

Sooner or Later you'll have one

Glenwoods are Brim Full of Good Things

The Glenwood Balanced Baking Damper is far ahead of any other—it is as positive as the turning of a railroad switch—open to start the fire, closed to bake—just this one damper for kindling or baking and best of all, it can't warp or stick.

The Glenwood Revolving Coal Grate is easy to shake at all times, and simply fine for removing clinkers. It is triangular in shape, with three different sides for wear.

The Ash Pan rests on a roller bearing frame—just open door and it rolls out at the slightest touch, neat and clean.

The Glenwood Shelf Under Oven Door is not stationary—it automatically raises and lowers as oven door is opened or closed. It is always level with oven bottom—a great convenience when basting meats or removing food.

The Glenwood Sectional Top is interchangeable—cross pieces can not warp—a wash boiler can be placed at the back as well as in front for quick heating, leaving the front holes free for cooking.

Glenwood Iron is smooth and perfect—the easiest of any to clean—a real delight to the most exacting housekeeper. Get one and you'll be glad ever after.

Baldwin Dry Air Refrigerator

The Box with the Steady Cold Wave

The Baldwin Refrigerator is built in such a way that there is a steady passage of Dry, Cold, Pure Air, from the ice down through the food compartments, and up over the ice again. The ice condenses all the impure vapors and moistures, carrying them off down the drain pipe, thus causing the air to be Pure and Dry. These Refrigerators are made of best kind dried stock, sanitary wire shelves, and best quality of galvanized iron and porcelain enamel interiors. The door joint with the help of the rubber insertions around the edges of the door keep the compartments Absolutely air-tight. The insertions are made of odorless rubber.

It is economy to buy a good Refrigerator; a good one lasts a lifetime, and saves ice every day. The Baldwin is the most economical Refrigerator in the market. Cuts ice bills in half. On the market for 37 years. Prices $10 to $50.

SAVE YOUR CALVES
Raise Them Without Milk
Why throw away money by knocking them in the head or selling them for a dollar or two at birth when they can be raised or weaned WITHOUT MILK at a fraction of the cost of feeding milk.
You profit both ways selling the milk and still have the calves.
The Best Milk Substitute to Use is Rede's Cream Calf Meal
the most successful milk substitute on the market—the standard of perfection. Thousands of farmers are using it and cannot say enough for it. It is NOT a stock food—it's a complete food that long experience has proved to be right for rearing calves. It contains all the nutrition of milk prepared in the most digestible form and is sold on a money back guarantee to give results.
SOLD BY NEAREST CALF FEED or the equal to 100 gallons milk—Try it on your calves.

Tastes Differ

store, where they get honest value for their money. They can see what they are getting, and can have their money back if not satisfied.

Other People Very often prefer to increase the profits of the mail order firms, and send their orders out of town.

Most People Prefer to trade where they can get 100 cents in value for every dollar spent.
