W. C. T. U. COUNTY CONVENTION

Held Its Thirty-sixth Annual Session in Antrim at the Methodist Church

The 36th annual convention of the Hillsboro County Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held Wednesday of last week in the Woodbury Memorial Methodist church, in Antrim. Delegates from all parts of the County were in attendance or sent their reports, and the convention was very successful. The church was prettily decorated, the national colors being in prominence; a fine framed likeness of Mrs. Frances Willard was hung in a conspicuous place.

The forenoon service was opened by the president, Florence E. Cram, of Weare, after which the devotional period was in charge of Mrs. Alice Avery, treasurer, of Peterboro. Mrs. Mary E. Cochrane, president of the Antrim W. C. T. U., gave the address of welcome in behalf of the entertainment society, and Mrs. Medora Currier, of North Weare, responded. Reports of secretary and treasurer showed good progress made the past year.

Rev. Stephen P. Brownell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. William J. B. Cannell, pastor of the Baptist church, were introduced to the convention, and made a few appropriate remarks.

An interesting paper on "Co-operation" prepared by Mrs. Mary A. Snow, of Manchester, was read by Mrs. Frisell, of Manchester, followed by discussion.

Mrs. Richardson, of Concord, State President, conducted a memorial service for members who died during the past year, prominent among whom was Mrs. Armenia White, of Concord, founder of the Woman's Christian Temperance League, in 1869. Mrs. Clara E. Morrill, of Henniker, led the nondenominational prayer service.

The banner for the largest gain in membership during the past twelve months was awarded to Manchester.

In the afternoon a praise service led by the County President was followed by prayer by Rev. C. E. Clough, pastor of the Methodist church. The following officers were elected:

President—Miss Florence E. Cram, of Weare.

Vice President—Mrs. W. G. Cain, of Nashua.

Secretary—Mrs. Belle J. Moore, of Nashua.

Treasurer—Mrs. Alice Avery, of Peterboro.

Reports from the several societies throughout the County were given, also a report from the Superintendent. A talk on "Mercy Home Work" was given by Miss Ella Johnson, of Manchester, and "Discussion on the Medal Contest Department" was conducted by Mrs. Martha J. Byers, of Antrim. "Woman in Industry," a paper prepared by Mrs. Sara Plummer, of Manchester, was read by Mrs. Dora S. Chase, of Manchester.

Dinner and supper were served by the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist church.

Mrs. C. Cornelia S. Alford, of this town, was one of the speakers in the afternoon, and spoke entertainingly on her work in Brooklyn, N. Y., where she was one of the original Crusaders.

The evening services were very well attended, many of the town's people being there. Vocal solos were nicely rendered by Miss Ethel F. Ellinwood, Miss Mae L. Harris, C. Harold Clough, duets by Mrs. J. J. Nims and Miss Gertrude Jameson, Miss Florence L. Brown and Frank J. Boyd. The contestants for the prize medal were Neal Clough, Miss Mary Coolidge, Sheldon Burnham, Miss Bertha Merrill, Everett Davis and Miss Winnie Wilson.

The medal was awarded to Everett Davis, second prize to Miss Bertha Merrill; each of the other contestants received a sum of money. The judges were Mrs. Richardson, State President, Mrs. Medora Currier, of North Weare, and Miss Mae Cashion, of Bennington.

The banner for the largest gain in membership during the past twelve months was awarded to Manchester.

In the afternoon a praise service led by the County President was followed

The Chicago Conventions

After very much preliminary work, the Republicans in National convention selected their standard bearers on Saturday last, naming Justice Charles E. Hughes, of New York, for president, on the third ballot—he having almost all the votes cast; and for vice president, Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, on the first ballot.

At the same hour, the Progressives nominated Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, as their candidate for president, and Hon. John M. Parker, of Louisiana, for vice president.

Upon being notified of his nomination, Justice Hughes resigned his high office which was accepted by President Wilson, and at once accepted the nomination of his party. His statement of his position was truly characteristic and thoroughly American.

Col. Roosevelt notified the Progressive convention that he could not at present accept the nomination so graciously bestowed upon him. This act is taken to mean that if the position of Justice Hughes is sufficiently broad and American to suit the Colonel and according to his idea meet the demands of the times, that he will come out flat-footed for the Republican ticket.

It is the hope of a large number of the admirers of Colonel Roosevelt that he will not disappoint them and that he will stump the country for the Republican nominees, thereby giving much assurance of a complete victory at the polls in November; this to say the least would inject a large amount of certainty into the situation at the start.

A COMPLIMENTARY DINNER

Given the Members of Waverley Lodge, by Its First Initiate, Willard Manning

A complimentary dinner was given all present. The service was prompt and courteous, and in every way the dinner was most satisfying to all present.

The following toast was read by W. E. Gibney, as a tribute to Mr. Manning:

Oh, here's to the President,
On this night of merriment;
He's a corking good fellow,
With no streaks of yellow.
He's an Odd Fellow true,
And we find him true blue.
This night's for his pleasure,
Which we'll always treasure.
He also enjoys a good game of pitch,
He wallows us all by taking the tricks.

He'll bid four on the ace, and two on the deuce.

Will win six out of five,—you play as you choose.

He's a stickler at pitch from dark until dawn,
And you'll find on his countenance never a yawn.

So here's to the President,
On this night of merriment.

And Brothers, remember,
With thoughts sweet and tender,
That the good things to eat,
Are the President's treat.

A FAMOUS DRAMA

"The City" to be Shown Here Saturday Night

"The City," a 5-act photo drama of the well known stage success by the late Clyde Fitch, will be shown at the town hall on SATURDAY evening of this week, June 17.

The story of the rise of the Rand family in a small town and their decline when caught in the turmoil of a great city, makes a good dramatic feature.

TOWN FAIR!

Arranging for Successful Occasion for Labor Day

There have been two Town Fairs, one in the summer of 1912 and the other in 1913. Both of these Fairs, held under the auspices of the Antrim Board of Trade, were successful and brought out large gatherings of people, not only from our town but from all the surrounding towns. Notwithstanding this accredited success, there was not sufficient interest manifested in the year 1914 to warrant the committee to attempt another Town Fair, and accordingly two years have gone by without a Fair.

Now there seems to be an awakening of that interest shown in the previous years and a committee, appointed by the Board of Trade, is already hard at work arranging for this event, to be held probably Labor Day.

Everyone knows that the work of any committee is not enviable unless each and every member of the committee willingly, cheerfully and obediently performs the task appointed him to the very best of his ability, and for the time being eliminates the word "no" from his vocabulary. To make this Fair unequalled and unparalleled as a Town Fair in every way, let no one refuse when invited by the committee to do whatever may be required of him.

Despite the unusual weather conditions, we feel assured that the various exhibits will be as excellent as the former Fairs.

It has been said that the women's exhibit of 1912 was unexcelled by any of the larger fairs throughout New England, and we know that the women of Antrim will set to it that this reputation is sustained this year.

Advertising pays. Let us then use the medium of advertising to forward the interests of the Fair, and send the news of it far and wide. Talk about it everywhere you go, keep it always in mind, let your enthusiasm grow day by day, that the Fair of 1916 may reach the high water mark of success.

This is no wolf cry when there is no wolf. Of course, the articles that have appeared in The Reporter the past few weeks regarding the Town Fair, have been read with interest.

They have been published, through the courtesy of the editor, for the express purpose of creating an interest not only in the Town Fair, but in the hope, and I think I may say, the expectation of a large attendance at the Public Meeting of the Board of Trade to be held in the town hall, on Tuesday evening, June 20, to complete arrangements for the Fair.

ISSUES FORMAL STATEMENT

Think Situation Does Not Require
Sacrifice on His Part—
Burglars Crack Safe
Other Items.

Concord.—Governor Rolland H. Spaulding issued a formal statement Friday night in which he announced that he would not be a candidate for a re-nomination. He expresses his appreciation of the compliment paid him in the request to again become a candidate, but states that he does not think the situation requires the sacrifice on his part which another term would require of him. This action of the governor gives renewed interest to the suggestion that Chairman Henry W. Keyes of the exercise commission may decide to enter the field. Mr. Keyes is receiving many letters urging him to run.

Cracked Safe and Skiddooed. Cornish Flat.—Between one and two o'clock Thursday morning burglars entered the general store of E. C. Brown by taking out a window in the front. The post office is located there, and an attempt was made to blow open the safe. A heavy blanket was used to muffle the explosion, and the outer door was blown off. The inner door did not yield, and the noise of the explosion was so great that the whole village was wide awake in short order. The intruders took no chances when they found the village was astir and left with an automobile in short order. The car was seen but the number of occupants could not be ascertained. The thieves were evidently professionals, and the safe seemed to be their object as nothing else was touched in the store.

Another Interesting Divorce Case. Woodsville.—Second only in interest to the famous Carpenter divorce case is that of Carl E. Taylor, a Boston & Maine conductor, who is seeking a divorce from his wife, and has named another conductor and a steward of the Mount Washington Hotel as correspondents. The court room has been packed with interested spectators to hear the testimony. One of the witnesses who occupied the same tenement with the Taylors, testified that when one of the correspondents called on Mrs. Taylor at night during the absence of her husband she became curious to know how long he stayed. She therefore piled tin cans on the stairs, and their clatter when he descended gave her the desired information.

Young Woman Found Dead in Her Room.

Concord.—Smith H. Vernal, clerk at the Endicott lodging house on South Main street, smelled gas Friday morning and began an investigation. He traced it to the room of Mrs. Gladys Dow, and forcing the transom, saw her lying on the bed in a natural position with the gas turned on. The windows and transom were tightly closed and the medical referee considered it a case of suicide. Mrs. Dow was divorced from her husband and came here a few weeks ago. She lost her position in a local laundry Thursday and was without money. She was 19 years of age. Her father and sister live in this city.

Motorcycle and Auto in Bad Smash.

Milford.—While Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Skinner were driving along the Amherst road one night last week with a horse and buggy, they were run into by a motorcycle with a side car attached containing two men. The wagon was said to have been without a light and the motorcycle was coasting down a long hill. Charles A. Brown, one of the occupants of the motorcycle, received a broken leg and is in a serious condition. Arnold Wheaton, the other occupant, was taken up unconscious. Mrs. Skinner was thrown out and received a bad shaking up. Both the carriage and motorcycle were badly wrecked.

Another Autoist Gets Heavy Fine.

Lebanon.—While Selectman Thos. P. Waterman was driving towards this village one night last week he was run into by an auto driven by Frank Blood of Hanover. Mr. Waterman was thrown out and received some severe bruises and the car was overturned and somewhat demolished. In police court on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated Blood was given a fine of $100 and costs and a ninety-day's jail sentence. The latter was suspended.

Girl "Doped" Mother's Coffee.

Dover.—Hattie Fribble, aged 14, and Corinne Williams, aged 16, had a strong hankering to see more of the world than this city affords and struck out for Biddeford, Me., Tuesday night they fell into the hands of an officer to whom they confided the fact that they had had nothing to eat for 24 hours. An officer from this city took them home Thursday. The Fribble girl said she got away by placing "dope" in her mother's coffee.

Said he borrowed the jewelry. Manchester—Christos Elian was held in $500 Saturday on a charge of breaking and entering. Elian is a tailor who has several creditors and, according to his story, he was going to Boston to see if he could raise some money. He said that in order to present a good appearance he stepped into the room of a friend of his, John Petalidis, and borrowed a few articles. These included a stick pin, cuff links, necktie and other articles. On arriving at Boston he did not raise any money, and not wishing to meet his creditors did not come back. He came back under escort, and will have an opportunity to plead in superior court.

Governor Spaulding's Program. Concord.—Governor Spaulding will attend the annual meeting of the National Conference of Governors at Salt Lake City June 27 and has accepted the invitation to reply to the address of welcome. This week he attends the graduation exercises at the New Hampshire College at Durham, and next week with his staff will attend the commencement exercises at Dartmouth. The regular meeting of the governor and council will not be held this month, but some routine business may be transacted while they are at Hanover.

Grasshoppers in Cheshire County. Walpole.—Farmers in this town and Westmoreland have called upon the state agricultural department for assistance in subduing the grasshoppers which have appeared in large numbers in these towns. The county agent and a representative from the agricultural college were here last week and assisted the farmers in scattering a mixture which it is hoped will largely reduce their numbers.

Five Parsons in Auto Wreck. Manchester.—An auto with out-of-state plates skidded and turned turtle on the Derry road one day last week. The car contained two men and their wives who were touring the state, and two children. A baby was seriously injured, the other occupants of the car escaped serious injury, although one man was pinned under it. Workmen from a neighboring lumber yard came to their assistance.

This Mister Day Says He Will Pay. Franklin—Hosea R. Day works in a Lowell restaurant. He is a good man and child living with relatives in this city who claim he does not contribute to their support. He was brought before Judge Towne Saturday on a charge of non support and was given a sentence of six months in jail. Upon his agreement to pay $3 a week the sentence was suspended.

Steel Cars for the Boston & Maine. Manchester.—The Boston & Maine has recently added several steel passenger cars to its equipment, and some of them are now in use on regular passenger trains which pass through this city. They are equipped with all modern improvements, including electric lighting, and have a larger seating capacity than the older cars.

Leaves for the Philippines. Manchester.—Hon. Eugene E. Reed, Philippine commissioner, left Friday on a north bound express train for the first lap of his 1200-mile journey. Quite a party of his friends gathered at the station to see him off. He is accompanied by his son, Royer Reed, who goes with him as his secretary.

More Pay or Shorter Week. Hudson.—Twenty-five men employed in the box shop of Charles Melendy walked out at noon Saturday. They claimed that their pay was insufficient. They have been working 60 hours a week and now demand an increase of 25 per cent. in wages or a reduction of five hours a week.

Had Apparently Done a Wholesale Business.

Nashua.—Milton Greenwood, aged 22, was arrested here Saturday morning charged with the larceny of an automobile, and also with being connected with the disappearance of seven others.

Nashua to Have a Fair.

Nashua.—Contracts were signed by Congressman E. W. Jason and Joseph Labre, owners of the Nashua fair grounds, and William E. Dobbin, the exposition manager, last week, which will insure a large fair in this city every year for the next five years.

Fish Dealer Dies Suddenly.

Keene.—F. E. Washburne, who has been a fish dealer here for 36 years, died suddenly Friday while on his way to Dublin. It appeared that he was walking beside his cart at the time. He was 58 years of age, and is survived by a wife and sister.

Equal Suffrage Banquet.

Manchester.—The Manchester Equal Suffrage Association held a banquet Saturday evening at which more than 50 were present.

Christian's Task Not Hard.

To follow Christ does not of necessity involve anything new or unwonted; to be perfect in him does not always need change. There remains only to persevere in lowly obedience to what the conscience witnesses to be the calling wherein he looks to find us when he cometh to see how his servants have occupied their talents and the sin.

Girl Accidentally Shoots Her Father.

Meredith.—While G. F. Boyden, a

New York artist, and his little daughter Irene were engaged in target practice with a rifle one day last Wednesday night they fell into the hands of an officer to whom they confided the fact that they had had nothing to eat for 24 hours. An officer from this city took them home Thursday. The Fribble girl said she got away by placing "dope" in her mother's coffee.

Where Art Thou?

By Rev. Wm. Wallace Ketchum
Director of the Practical Work Course,
Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT.—And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, "Where art thou?"—Gen. 3:1.

So far as we know this is the first question God ever asked man. It is the question God asked Adam after Adam sinned and was trying to hide himself from the presence of God.

She always, consciously separates one from God so that the sinner ever tries to get away from the presence of the Almighty. For this reason men close the Bible which brings them face to face with God. This is why some men never darken a church door; they fear that they may meet God. You know we are told that Adam tried to hide himself amidst the trees of the garden just as if material things could shut out God's view of him, as if God's eye could not penetrate the trees and see Adam where he was. "The eyes of the Lord," says one of old, "run to and fro throughout the whole earth." And the Psalmist asks, "Whither shall I go from thy spirit or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and my right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the days; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." How utterly impossible it is to get away from God. There is no way for man to escape the Almighty; neither earth nor heaven nor hell has in it a hiding place from him. Darkness cannot shut man from his vision. It may hide hellish deeds so that men may not see them, but the eyes of the Almighty not only penetrate through inky blackness but search the innermost recesses of a man's being.

God did not ask this question of Adam because he was ignorant of Adam's place in the garden, but he asked it to bring Adam to a realization of his sinful condition, that he might reveal himself to Adam as his savior. This same question he has been asking men down through the ages and he has been asking it for the same reason. Not always in the same words, but nevertheless the same question. He asked it of Cain when he said, "Where dost thou thy brother, Elijah?" and Cain knew himself a murderer. He asked it of Elijah, when he said, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" and Elijah knew he was not trusting God. He asked it of the woman of Samaria when Jesus said, "Go call thy husband," and the woman knew herself an adulteress. He has been asking it of you many times and in many ways. He asked it of you when you heard the first time the story of Calvary, and every time you hear the story the same question is asked, "Where art thou?" Calvary is the great revelation of man's sinfulness and God's grace. There, as nowhere else, one sees himself a sinner and there one beholds God's provision to meet his need.

He asked it of you when that great sorrow came into your life. Did you not hear him say, "Where art thou?" Not to condemn you, did he ask it, but to reveal himself unto you as your comforter. He asked it of you when your loved one left you alone. In the loneliness of your life he asked it, that you might find in him your companion. When that calamity came and all your hopes seemed blasted it was his voice that said, "Where art thou?" Didst thou not hear him, child, say this to thee, that thou mightest cast all thy care upon him who careth for thee? Deaf indeed hast thou been to the voice of thy God, if thou hast not heard his loving question, "Where art thou?" If thou hast heard this question and in the stillness of his presence realized where thou art and found in him thy savior, happy art thou indeed. But if he has spoken to thee in his providences, as well as with his word, and thou hast—not—heard, to what pitch must his voice be raised until thou dost hear and heed? Even now in these words he asks thee, "Where art thou?" Not to condemn thee, but to save thee from thyself, thy sorrow, and thy sin.

Use canned peaches for this. Put them in a flat gratin dish and pour over the following mixture: Two ounces of butter; two ounces of flour; one ounce of sugar; half a pint of milk and peach syrup; four eggs. Cook butter, flour, sugar and milk in a stewpan. When cold, add yolks and whipped whites of the eggs last. Bake half an hour in moderate oven.

Codfish Salad.

Put a piece of salt codfish to soak over night. In the morning pour off the water, put on fresh cold water and let come to a scald. Taste, and if still salt, repeat, as it wants to be tender and soft like fresh fish. Pick up, in flakes, cut a hard-boiled egg in pieces, mix with it crisp lettuce leaves, cover with the mixture and pour salad dressing over it.

Creamed Celery and Eggs.

A leftover of creamed celery was rewarmed by setting dish in cold water and letting come to boil, then pushed to less hot place on stove. Just before removing from heat, two leftover hard-boiled eggs were chopped and cut into the cream. Served on toast as a supper dish.

Changing Pillow Cases.

In putting on fresh pillow cases, start the pillow into the case, then, holding it to you press against the wall, and the pillow will slip in easily, filling the corners.

Fish Toast.

Take one cupful of cold fried fish, free from skin and bones. Heat in water sufficient to moisten; add butter, pepper and salt. When hot pour on slices of buttered toast, garnish with eggs poached in mimin rings.

ADOPT PLATFORM FOR REPUBLICANS

National Convention Formulates Principles for Party.

AMERICANISM IS THE THEME

Wavers Peace, but Peace With Honor—Compromises on Suffrage—Endorses Literacy Test and Demands Bigger Army and Navy.

The Republican platform as adopted by the national convention follows:

In 1861 the Republican party stood for the Union. As it stood for the union of states, it now stands for a united people, true to American ideals, loyal to American traditions, knowing no allegiance except to the Constitution, to the government, and to the flag of the United States. We believe in American policies at home and abroad.

We declare that we believe in and will enforce the protection of every American citizen in all the rights secured to him by the Constitution, treaties, and the law of nations, at home and abroad, by land and sea.

These rights, which in violation of the specific promise of their party made at Baltimore in 1912, the Democratic president and the Democratic congress have failed to defend, we will unflinchingly maintain.

We desire peace, the peace of justice and right, and believe in maintaining a straight and honest neutrality between the belligerents in the great war in Europe. We must perform all our duties and insist upon all our rights as neutrals without fear and without favor. We believe that peace and neutrality as well as the dignity and influence of the United States cannot be preserved by shifty expedients, by phrase making, by performances in language, or by attitudes ever changing in an effort to secure groups of voters.

The present administration has destroyed our influence abroad and humiliated us in our own eyes. The Republican party believes that a firm, consistent and courageous foreign policy always maintained by Republican presidents in accordance with American traditions, is the best as it is the only true way to preserve our peace and restore us to our rightful place among the nations. We believe in the pacific settlement of international disputes and favor the establishment of a world court for that purpose.

MEXICAN POLICY DENOUNCED.

We deeply sympathize with the fifteen million people of Mexico, who for three years have seen their country devastated, their homes destroyed, their fellow citizens murdered, and their women outraged by armed bands of desperados led by self-seeking, conscienceless agitators, who, when temporarily successful in any locality, have neither sought nor been able to restore order or establish and maintain peace.

We express our horror and indignation at the outrages which have been and are being perpetrated by these bandits upon American men and women who were or are in Mexico by invitation of the laws and of the government of that country, and whose rights to security of person and property are guaranteed by solemn treaty obligations. We denounce the indefensible methods of interference employed by this administration in the internal affairs of Mexico, and refer with shame to its failure to discharge the duty of this country as next friend to Mexico, its duty to other powers who have relied upon us as such friend, and its duty to our citizens in Mexico, in permitting the continuance of such conditions, first by failure to act promptly and firmly, and second, by lending its influence to the continuation of such conditions through recognition of one of the factions responsible for these outrages.

We pledge our aid in restoring order and maintaining peace in Mexico. We promise to our citizens on and near our border, and those in Mexico, wherever they may be found, adequate and absolute protection in their lives, liberty and property.

MONROE DOCTRINE AFFIRMED.

We reaffirm our approval of the Monroe doctrine and declare its maintenance to be a policy of this country essential to its present and future peace and safety and to the achievement of its manifest destiny.

We favor the continuance of Republican policies which will result in drawing more and more closely the commercial, financial and social relations between this country and the countries of Latin America.

We renew our allegiance to the Philippine policy inaugurated by McKinley, approved by congress, and consistently carried out by Roosevelt, and Taft. Even in this short time it has enormously improved the material and social conditions of the islands, given the Philippine people a constantly increasing participation in their government, and if persisted in will bring still greater benefits in the future.

We accepted the responsibility of the islands as a duty to civilization and the Filipino people. To leave our task half done would break our pledges, injure our prestige among nations, and imperil what has already been accomplished.

We condemn the Democratic administration for its attempt to abandon the Philippines, which was prevented only by the vigorous opposition of Rep. publican members of congress, aided by a few "Ridiculous Democrats."

We reiterate our unanimous approval of the action taken in December, 1911, by the president and congress to secure with Russia, as with other countries, a treaty that will recognize the absolute right of expatriation and prevent all discrimination of whatever kind between American citizens, whether native born or alien and regardless of race, religion, or previous political allegiance.

We renew the pledge to observe this principle and to maintain the right of asylum which is neither to be surrendered nor restricted, and we unite in the cherished hope that the war which is now desolating the world may speedily end, with a complete, and lasting restoration of brotherhood among the nations of the earth and the assurance of full equal rights, civil and religious, to all men in every land.

ADEQUATE ARMY AND NAVY.

In order to maintain our peace and make certain the security of our people within our own borders the country must have, not only adequate but thorough and complete national defense, ready for any emergency. We must have a sufficient and effective regular army, and a provision for ample reserves, already drilled and disciplined, who can be called at once to the colors when the hour of danger comes.

We must have a navy so strong and so well proportioned and equipped, so thoroughly ready and prepared, that no enemy can gain command of the sea and effect a landing in force on either our western or our eastern coast. To secure these results we must have a coherent and continuous policy of national defense, which even in these perilous days the Democratic party has utterly failed to develop, but which we promise to give to the country.

TARIFF AID TO AMERICAN PLANTS.

The Republican party stands now, always has, in the fullest sense, for the policy of tariff protection to American industries and American labor, and does not regard an antidumping provision as an adequate substitute.

Such protection should be reasonable in amount, but sufficient to protect adequately American industry and American labor and be so adjusted as to prevent undue exactations by monopolies or trusts. It should, moreover, give special attention to securing the industrial independence of the United States, as in the case of dyestuffs.

Through wise tariff and industrial legislation our industries can be so organized that they will become not only a commercial bulwark but a powerful aid to national defense.

The Underwood tariff act is a complete failure in every respect. Under its administration imports have enormously increased in spite of the fact that the intercourse with foreign countries has been largely cut off by reason of the war, while the revenues of which we stand in such dire need have been greatly reduced. Under the normal conditions which prevailed prior to the war it was clearly demonstrated that this act deprived the American producer and the American wage earner of that protection which entitled them to meet their foreign competitors, and but for the adventitious conditions created by the war would long since have paralyzed all forms of American industry and deprived American labor of its just reward.

NATIONAL CHILD LABOR LAW.

We pledge the Republican party to the faithful enforcement of all federal laws passed for the protection of labor. We favor vocational education, the enactment of a generous and comprehensive workmen's compensation law, within the commerce power of congress, and an accident compensation law covering all government employees. We favor the collection and collation under the direction of the department of labor of complete data relating to industrial hazards for the information of congress, to the end that such legislation may be adopted as may be calculated to secure the safety, conservation, and protection of labor from the dangers incident to industry and transportation.

EXTENSION OF VOTE TO WOMEN.

The Republican party, reaffirming its faith in government of the people, by the people, for the people, as a measure of justice to one-half the adult people of this country, favors the extension of the suffrage to women, but recognizes the right of each state to settle this question for itself.

SUPERVISION OF CORPORATIONS.

The Republican party has long believed in the rigid supervision and strict regulation of the transportation and great corporations of the country. It has put its creed into its deeds, and all really effective laws regulating the railroads and the great industrial corporations are the work of Republican congresses and presidents.

For this policy of regulation and supervision the Democrats, in a stumbling and piecemeal way, are undertaking to involve the government in business which should be left with the private enterprise.

Reaffirming the attitude maintained by the Republican party, we hold that officials appointed to administer the government of any territory should be bona fide residents of the territory in which their duties are to be performed.

NATIONAL CHILD LABOR LAW.

We pledge the Republican party to the faithful enforcement of all federal laws passed for the protection of labor. We favor vocational education, the enactment of a generous and comprehensive workmen's compensation law, within the commerce power of congress, and an accident compensation law covering all government employees. We favor the collection and collation under the direction of the department of labor of complete data relating to industrial hazards for the information of congress, to the end that such legislation may be adopted as may be calculated to secure the safety, conservation, and protection of labor from the dangers incident to industry and transportation.

EXTENSION OF VOTE TO WOMEN.

The Republican party, reaffirming its faith in government of the people, by the people, for the people, as a measure of justice to one-half the adult people of this country, favors the extension of the suffrage to women, but recognizes the right of each state to settle this question for itself.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill.—"While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said I had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life. I left the from the Infants Hospital."—Mrs. E. Sheldon, 5637 B, Englewood St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists, it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

SYNOPSIS.

Alan Wayne is sent away from Red Hill home by his uncle, J. Y., and a mortal enemy, Colingford, who is marking his birthday. Judge Healey defends Alan in his business with his employers. Alan and Alix, Gerry's wife, meet at sea homeward-bound, and their first sight of each other as he thinks, is Alix and Alan sloping, drop everything, and goes to Fernabuco. Alix leaves Alan on the train and goes home. Gerry leaves Fernabuco to meet him. On the same trip he meets a native girl. The judge fails to trace Gerry. A boy is born to Alix. The native girl takes Gerry to the ruined plantation and raises him. Gerry marries her. At a single house Colingford tells how he met Alan—"Ten Per Cent. Wayne"—building a bridge in Africa. Colingford meets Alix and her son, and she is won over to him. Gerry Alan comes back to town but does not go home. Gerry begins to improve Margarita's plantation and builds an irrigation ditch. In Africa, the native girl's letter and dreams of home. Gerry pastures Lieber's cattle during the drought. A baby comes to Margarita. Colingford meets her in the city and falls in love with her. Alan meets J. Y. and Clem, grown to beautiful womanhood, in the city and realizes that he has sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. Kemp and Gerry are married. They visit Alix and the three exiles are drawn together by a common tie. Lieber tells his story. In South America Alan gets the fever.

There's a lot of maudlin sentiment about "dear old mother" put into cheap songs and sung by scalawags, but just the same, "God" and "Mother" are the two biggest words in the English language. Consider here the effect of a mother's memory on Alan Wayne.

And then he drew out the other letter and the curl in his lip straightened out to a line of sweetness and the light in his eyes turned to a fiery, blind adoration. The letter had been sent to him, sealed, by J. Y., who had accompanied it with a note. The letter began, "To my boy at Thirty," and signed, "With undying love, your friend and Mother." In life he could not remember his mother, but he saw her now in three pages of laboring words traced by a dying hand. In herself, dying at thirty, she had seen her boy revealed. She had had no strength—no time—left for slow approaches. With the first words of her letter she laid a cooling hand on his burning soul. She spoke the all-seeing wisdom of death. She held him close to her heart and fed him with her life's blood. All that she had been, all that she had learned, all that she foresaw, was crowded into those three pages. They were brittle with age, the ink yellow and faded, in words that no eyes but his and hers had ever seen. They gripped his soul and held it steady. Without this letter he would have torn up the other. But the other had come as a complement and he kept it because it helped him to see himself.

As Alan weakened the bridge approached completion. Batches of men, as special work was finished, were dispatched to the coast. With each batch McDougal strove to send his master, but Alan was too weak to go, though he did not say so. He had realized it with terror and then with calm. "No, McDougal, not this time," he would say, and finally, "I think I might just as well stay on till they send up to take over. It's unprofessional to chuck it before. It won't be long now." And McDougal had cursed low, rolling oaths and taken it out on the men.

Alan seemed to have become childish in his weakness. He spent what strength he had left in cutting words into a board ripped from a kerosene box. When he had finished he called McDougal and showed him his handiwork. "McDougal," he said, "if anything should happen to keep me here permanently just cut these words into some big rock and lay me under it. Be careful you get them just so. The French are mighty particular about the way we use their lingo, and while it wasn't a Frenchman that wrote this bit, I guess he'd be just as particular." "Aweel, sir," said McDougal, stifling his rage within him, "I'll do as you wish." He took the board and looked at it. The words meant nothing to him but the scene meant much. He went out and concluded his agreement with twelve quiet, lowering men gathered from the countryside. They were pioneers without knowing it. They and their fathers and their fathers' fathers had held these far depths of the world against wild beasts and drought and flood since, centuries ago, the Jesuits swept through the subcontinent and left a trail of settlers behind them. They were proud, narrow, independent. They were unloving, unimaginative. No man among them had ever thought to lie. They did not steal, though they were robbed whenever they invaded civilization with their wares.

From them McDougal had learned that due east, halfway to the sea, was a place called Lieber's and that this Lieber was known as the Americano and had fame as a curandor of fevers. Four men could carry a sick man to Lieber's in a hammock in four days. Twelve men could do it in two, and quicker than that a hundred men could not go. For the price of three steers each—two-year-olds—they would all acting over. He paused before springing him up. "That's it," he said. "There's fire in him—the worst kind—and he's been playing with it, just tickling it with stale quinine." His eye ran rapidly over the thin body. "I said the dose I gave him would probably kill him, but I've changed my mind. I'm betting the other way, now I really look at him. There's no flesh on him, but he doesn't look like a skeleton. Why? Because of the sinews and bones of him—they're perfect. Look at the way the sinews bold his neck and the way the neck carries the sinews. Look at the fat bulge of his ribs and the breadth of his shoulders over the hips. That means heart and lungs and vitals. That man's been a fighter, and unless I'm a bigger fool than I was yesterday he's a fighter yet."

"Cover him up, for God's sake," said Gerry.

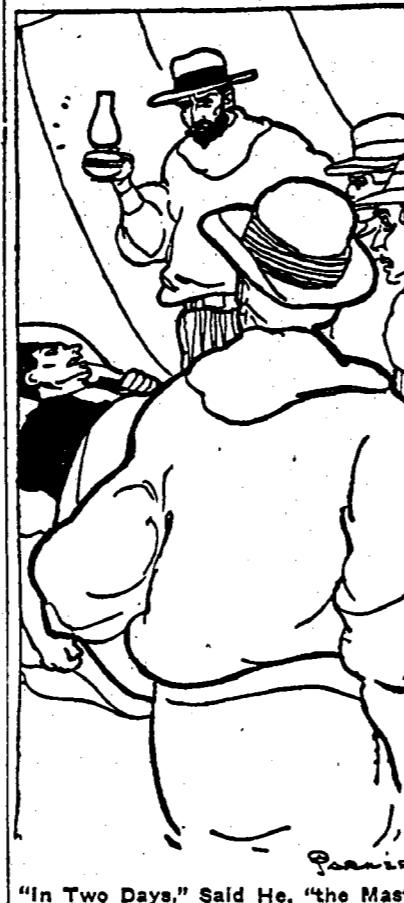

Lieber dropped the sheet and went to the kitchen. Gerry and Kemp covered the stripped body and tucked many blankets over it. Lieber came back and took off half the blankets. "Mustn't tire him with weight," he explained. "If he's going to sweat—he'll sweat all right. Malaria—malignant fever—is the thirstiest disease in the world. When they get too tired to breathe, that's the end." He took hold of Alan's wrist. "To feel his pulse, you'd say he was dead now."

"Butt time we was startin'" remarked Kemp with his eyes toward the declining sun.

Gerry's first impulse was to say he would stay, but he suddenly remembered Margarita. How far away life she seemed! Alan and Margarita could not crowd into one day or even into one world—it was against the order of things. But facts do not stand on the order of their coming, they simply come, and against the protest of man's will they present his fate;

The spleen was frighteningly distended and pushed out across the abdomen. He could feel its hard, unyielding margins. The feet were swollen. The face was yellow with the sickly gray-yellow of molded straw. Come had set in.

Lieber dragged a great medicine chest out from his room. With alcohol he rapidly washed out the dust-filled nostrils of the stricken man and bathed his face and then the limbs and body. Then he took out a hypodermic syringe and a graduated glass. In the glass he dissolved a powder and with steady hands added measured drops of a liquid of faint amber hue. Gerry found his tongue. "What is it?" he asked.

"Quinine and arsenic," said Lieber shortly.

"Arsenic? Isn't that dangerous?" said Gerry.

Lieber glanced at him. "It will probably kill him."

"Then why—why—" protested Gerry. A great desire to protect what was left of Alan had come over him.

"Why?" said Lieber dryly, "I'll tell you, Mr. Lansing. Because it is less cowardly to kill a man than to let him die."

He mixed the solution in the syringe and then, grasping Alan's arm, he pressed it until the veins came out in swelling network. "Hold his arm like that," he commanded Kemp. Kemp clutched the arm. The bones seemed to bend to the grip. Lieber chose a swollen vein and pierced it with the needle. He forced the dose into the blood. "There," he said with a smile to Gerry, "that's what's known as an intravenous administration of quinine and arsenic. If another paroxysm hits him he's done for, but we'll know all about that in forty-eight hours' time."

He went into the house and brought out clean sheets, soft woolen blankets, pillows and pillow-slops. Kemp had never seen such linen; Gerry had almost forgotten the feel of it. Gerry came to life. With one hand under Alan's shoulder and another under his hips, he lifted him as though he were an empty shell, while Kemp and Lieber drew out the dust-caked blankets and hammock and spread first a cane mat over the settle and then a blanket and, on top of that, a sheet. The touch of Alan's dry, crackling skin seemed to Gerry to burn his hands. "It is as though there were fire in him," he said to Lieber.

Lieber looked at his patient with an almond or pegs hung his clothes and Margarita's and, on the lowest peg of all, the Lilliputian garments of the Man. The floor was bare and rolling, for the boards, roughhewn from hard-wood giants of the forest, had warped steadily through many years. In its center stood the great rustic bed that Gerry had made from the twisted limbs of trees and Bonifacio had plated with thongs. By raising himself to the full length of his arm Gerry could see Margarita lying uncovered on the coarse, yellowish homespun. On her bare, brown arm lay the black head of her son.

Gerry abhorred at the nearness—the familiarity—of everything. The scenes of elementary life stood out brutally. For the first time he saw them. From the touch of the coarse homespun that covered him, his mind went back to the feel of Lieber's fine linen, and from that it poised on Alan and then flew back to Alix—Alix, who, seen through the years, became doubly ethereal and flowerlike. Where was Alix? What had Alan done with her? He must ask him. That at least, he must know. But before he could ask he must decide about Margarita and steel himself to his purpose. He thought of the long, still days at Fazenda Flores before Alan had come to Lieber's—the struggle and the reward that had been his—and the firmness in him, the steadfastness that had led Alan to name him The Rock, rose up in defense of Margarita and her son.

Gerry was up early. As he was saddling True Blue Margarita came on to the veranda. "Where art thou going?" she asked.

Gerry looked up. He was a little pale from the wakeful night and there were slight shadows under his eyes. "I am going to Lieber's. There is a sick man there—he is dying and I must help. He is my fellow-countryman."

Margarita's eyes searched his face. Her bosom rose and fell rapidly. "Do not go," she said, and Gerry started at the passion in her voice.

He looked at her and smiled. "I must see this man before he dies," he said, half to himself.

"Ah," said Margarita, beating with her little brown fist on the veranda pillar, "I know. It is not death that calls thee. Why should one turn from things that live to fondle death? It is the stranger thou wouldst see."

Gerry dropped the reins of his horse, and, hurrying up the steps, took Margarita in his arms.

"And why not, my beloved? It is not woman I go to see, but a man. Shall I not talk with a man that is at death's door?"

"Let him but die," pleaded Margarita; "let him but die and thou shalt go and bury him. See, the day is beautiful. There is a cloud. Perhaps it will rain. Come, my Geree, let us go down to the river and swim. We will take the man. He shall sit on the bank and the river will play with his bare toes. He will laugh."

Gerry smiled but shook his head.

"Tomorrow, my beloved, tomorrow we shall play with the man and the river."

Margarita's arms fell to her sides in pathetic surrender. She watched Gerry mount and ride slowly up the slope to the bridge where Kemp awaited him. Then she went back to the veranda steps, sat down and wept with her face hidden in her hand. She did not know why she wept, but she knew she wept for things that were going to be.

CHAPTER XXIV

Alan was struggling back from coma. He muttered, he talked, he awoke. Lieber found his sunken eyes, the pupils appearing almost concave, fixed on him with a seeing gaze. It was like resurrection. A spirit had come down upon the body. Eye to eye, mouth to mouth, heart to heart, it had given sight, breath, life.

The eyes closed. Lieber hurried away. From the kitchen he brought a bowl of broth. It was steaming and filled the room with an odor of rich essence. It was in itself a concentration of life. The bowl was emptied. Alan sank back into the pillows. His eyes wandered wistfully over the bare walls, the high tiling of the strange room. "I would have great gods! but one short hour of native air—let me but die at home," he murmured, and Lieber heard.

The words clutched at his own heart, but he answered cheerfully. "You shall, my boy, you shall die at home if you like, but you're going to have years to think it over. Sleep, that's the word. And sleep it is," he added to himself as Alan's eyes closed and his chest began to rise and fall in healthy breathing. Lieber held his wrist. The pulse was taking on strength.

Alan was still sleeping when Gerry arrived. Lieber looked up, surprised.

"You've come all the way back from Fazenda Flores?"

Gerry nodded. "How is he? Has he come to, yet?"

"Yes," said Lieber in a low, modulated tone. "He came to, all right. But the fight's not over yet. Fever goes and comes, you know. If another paroxysm seizes him, he'll not have the strength to pull through. It's a question of hours now."

If you had the opportunity to put out of the way forever the man who you thought had wrecked your home and life, would you do it, especially if your purpose could be accomplished simply by a little neglect in giving a fever patient his medicine on time?

OUR FIRST MEDICAL SCHOOLS

Up to the Nineteenth Century There Were Only Five Such Institutions.

The first medical college in the western part of the United States was Rush Medical College, founded in Chicago in 1837 by Dr. Daniel Bradward, who was born in Whitesborough, N. Y., 161 years ago, May 15, 1812. Rush College commemorates the name of Dr. Benjamin Rush, who was born near Philadelphia of Quaker parentage, in 1745. Doctor Rush served as an apprentice to a Philadelphia physician for six years, and then completed his medical education in Edinburgh, London and Paris. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, one of the founders of the first American antislavery society and the greatest physician of his day. During the yellow-fever scourge in Philadelphia in 1793 he visited more than 100 patients daily. Up to the nineteenth century there were only five medical colleges in the United States, all in the East. In 1819 a medical school was started in Cincinnati, and in 1825 the first institution of this kind in the South was founded in South Carolina, the University of Georgia soon following suit. The first medical college west of the Mississippi was established in St. Louis in 1842.

The Delight of Children

The self-developed, inner-flavour of New Post Toasties bear a unique attraction for the kiddies—they even like them dry from the package for their lunches. A box of Toasties provides "eats" that will delight the children.

New Post Toasties are usually served with cream and sugar, in which form the flavour is more pronounced and the flakes more delicious. These New Post Toasties do not "chaff" or crumble in the package and they don't mush down in cream—both common defects of old-fashioned "corn flakes."

Then, too, notice the tiny bubbles on the flakes, produced by the quick, intense heat of a new patented process of making which imparts delightful crispness and a substantial body to the flakes.

New Post Toasties are a vast improvement over any old-style "corn flakes."

Common American Birds

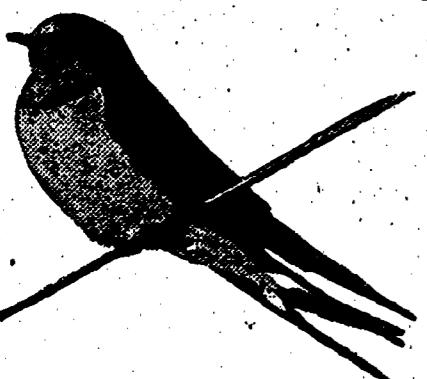

Barn Swallow

(Hirundo erythrogaster)

Length, about seven inches. Distinguished among our swallows by deeply forked tail.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States (except the South Atlantic and Gulf states) and, most of Canada; winters in South America.

Habits and economic status: This is one of the most familiar birds of the farm and one of the greatest insect destroyers. From daylight to dark on tireless wings it seeks its prey, and the insects destroyed are countless. Its favorite nesting site is a barn rafter, upon which it sticks its mud-basket. Most modern barns are so tightly constructed that swallows can not gain entrance, and in New England and some other parts of the country barn swallows are much less numerous than formerly. Farmers can easily provide for the entrance and exit of the birds and so add materially to their numbers. It may be well to add that the parasites that sometimes infest the nests of swallows are not the ones the careful housewife dreads, and no fear need be felt of the infestation spreading to the houses. Insects taken on the wing constitute the almost exclusive diet of the barn swallow. More than one-third of the whole consists of flies, including unfortunately some useful parasitic species. Beetles stand next in order and consist of a few weevils and many of the small dung beetles of the May beetle family that swarm over the pastures in the late afternoon. Ants amount to more than one-fifth of the whole food, while wasps and bees are well represented.

Franklin's Gull

(Larus franklini)

Length, fifteen inches. During its residence in the United States Franklin's gull is practically confined to the interior and is the only inland gull with black head and red bill.

Range: Breeds in the Dakotas, Iowa, Minnesota, and the neighboring parts of southern Canada; winters from the Gulf coast to South America.

Habits and economic status: Nearly all of our gulls are coast-loving species and spend comparatively little of their time in fresh water, but Franklin's is a true inland gull. Extensive marshes bordering shallow lakes are its chosen breeding grounds, and as many such areas are being reclaimed for agricultural purposes it behoves the tillers of the soil to protect this valuable species. When undisturbed this gull becomes quite fearless and follows the plowman to gather the grubs and worms from the newly turned furrows. It lives almost exclusively upon insects, of which it consumes great quantities. Its hearty appetite is manifest from the contents of a few stomachs: A, 327 nymphs of dragonflies; B, 340 grasshoppers, 52 bugs, 3 beetles, 2 wasps, and 1 spider; C, 82 beetles, 87 bugs, 984 ants, 1 cricket, 1 grasshopper, and 2 spiders. About four-fifths of the total food is grasshoppers, a strong point in favor of this bird. Other injurious creatures eaten are billbugs, squash bugs, leaf-hoppers, chick beetles (adults of wireworms), May beetles (adults of white grubs), and weevils. Franklin's gull is probably the most beneficial bird of its group.

Screech Owl

(Otus asio)

Length, about eight inches. Our smallest owl with ear tufts. There are two distinct phases of plumage, one grayish and the other bright rufous.

Range: Resident throughout the United States, southern Canada, and northern Mexico.

Habits and economic status: The little screech owl inhabits orchards, groves, and thickets, and hunts for its prey in such places as well as along hedgerows and in the open. During warm spells in winter it forages quite extensively and stores up in some hollow tree considerable quantities of interesting information about them supplied by the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture food for use during inclement weather. Such larders frequently contain enough mice or other prey to bridge over a period of a week or more. With the exception of the burrowing owl it is probably the most insectivorous of the nocturnal birds of prey. It feeds also upon small mammals, birds, reptiles, batrachians, fish, spiders, crayfish, scorpions, and earthworms. Grasshoppers, crickets, ground-beetles, and caterpillars are its favorites among insects, as are field mice among mammals and sparrows among birds. Out of 324 stomachs examined, 169 were found to contain insects; 142, small mammals; 55, birds, and 15, crayfish. The screech owl should be encouraged to stay near barns and outhouses, as it will keep in check house mice and wood mice which frequent such places.

Brewer's Blackbird

(Euphagus cyanocephalus)

Length, ten inches. Its glossy purple head distinguishes it from other blackbirds that do not show in flight a trough-shaped tail.

Range: Breeds in the West, east to Texas, Kansas, and Minnesota, and north to southern Canada; winters over most of the United States breeding range, south to Guatemala.

Habits and economic status: Very numerous in the West and in fall gathers in immense flocks, especially about barnyards and corrals. During the cherry season in California Brewer's blackbird is much in the orchards. In one case they were seen to eat freely of cherries, but when a neighboring fruit raiser began to plow his orchard

Briefly summarized, the pruning of the black raspberry is as follows: The old canes should be cut out and burned soon after fruiting. The new canes should be pinched back when 24 to 30 inches high, and thinned to not more than five or six canes to each crown. This pruning is called summer pruning, and is done in June or July. In the spring the lateral branches are cut back so that the remaining buds will develop into strong fruit clusters.

PRUNE THE RASPBERRY

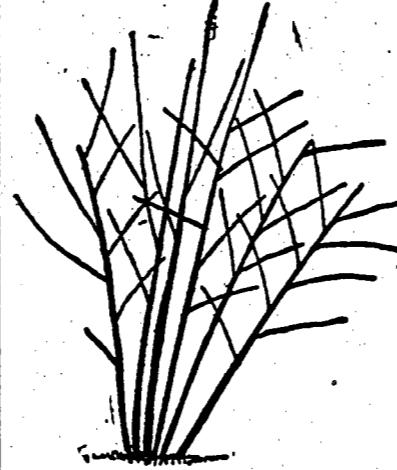

More Profitable If Farmer Understands Growth.

First Object Should Be to Give New Wood Room in Which to Grow—Summer Pruning Is Done During June or July.

The pruning of the red raspberry will be better understood if the pruner knows the habit of growth of the plant. A new cane springs up and develops during the summer; the next spring this cane throws out fruit clusters, bears fruit, and dies that year. The root is perennial and the cane is biennial. The object of the pruner then, should be: first, to remove the old wood as soon as it dies in order to give the new wood room in which to grow; second, to secure, both by thinning and by heading-in, canes to sufficient vigor and development to produce the most and the largest fruit.

There is a slight difference between the methods of pruning the red and the black raspberry, a variation due to different habits of growth. The canes of the blackberry grow long and droop to the ground, whereas the canes of the red raspberry are shorter and upright. Because of this long-growing and drooping habit of growth of the canes, growers pinch off the tips of the black raspberry in order to make the canes branch. A branched cane is desired because it contains more fruit buds than does a straight cane.

This work is done when the canes are 24 to 30 inches high. If it is done in time the tender tips may be pinched off with the fingers and the use of shears is not necessary. The patch must be gone over more than once, since the canes will not all reach the desired height at the same time.

Briefly summarized, the pruning of the black raspberry is as follows: The old canes should be cut out and burned soon after fruiting. The new canes should be pinched back when 24 to 30 inches high, and thinned to not more than five or six canes to each crown. This pruning is called summer pruning, and is done in June or July. In the spring the lateral branches are cut back so that the remaining buds will develop into strong fruit clusters.

PROPER PLANTING OF TREES

Object Should Be to Place Roots in Soil as They Were Before Removal From Nursery.

The perfection of planting consists in placing the tree roots in connection with the soil as nearly as possible in the same direction as that in which they were before removal, and but slightly—one or two inches—deeper than the tree stood in the nursery. If the season is very dry it will be a good plan to give each tree a bucketful or two of water when nearly done planting.

Planting should not be done too early—not before the leaves will come off easily. They must in no case be left on the trees, even for an hour or two after digging, as they carry off moisture rapidly, and the trees would soon be wilted to a certain extent; and to strip off the leaves by hand before their office is completed is not a good plan. The planting may continue as long as the soil works well (is not wet and sticky) and the ground not too hard.

POPULAR AS A LEGUME CROP

Soy Beans Make Excellent Hay, Increase Nitrogen of Soil and Desirable for Pasture.

Soy beans are very popular as a legume crop where they have been tried. They make excellent hay, increase the nitrogen supply of the soil and are highly desirable as a pasture crop for cows and hogs.

Soy beans are sure to be highly regarded in the Southwest when they are planted more extensively. They may be planted in rows and cultivated like cowpeas. The Mammoth and the Ito San are good varieties.

RETARD GROWTH AND THRIFT

Big Mistake Made in Crowding Young Animals—Feed and Care Will Not Offset It.

Crowding any young animals is a mistake. No amount of feed and otherwise good care can offset it. When numbers are increased till good company becomes a mob, the atmosphere of rest, growth, thrift and enjoyment of living departs—and tender young life shows it quickly.

PRUNING THE TOMATO VINES

More Fruit Produced Than on Plants Allowed to Develop With No Attention to Shape.

Pruned tomato vines will produce more fruit and a superior quality to that grown on vines that are allowed to develop with no attention as to shape and density of the foliage. The plant that must supply sustenance to more branches than are necessary for supporting the crop, will have its vitality so uselessly sapped by them that the fruit will be small in size and of an inferior quality.

No set rule can be given for pruning tomatoes, which should be done according to their size, shape and vigor. However, tall, top-heavy vines are to be guarded against by cutting off the tops, thus encouraging lower growth and heavier branches for supporting the fruit. Long, slender branches are to be trimmed back well, else the fruit will be undersized, while the limber branches often will bend down till the tomatoes come in contact with the damp earth, causing premature ripening and rot.

Those who have had little or no experience in pruning tomatoes might do well to wait till the vines begin to blossom, before trimming out any of the branches, when it can be seen where the crop will be too thick—these spots being thinned out by clipping off the smaller and weaker branches, leaving the healthy, vigorous ones for developing and supporting the fruit.

KEEPING PLANT LICE AWAY

Tobacco Dusted Around Cucumber Vines Will Prove Efficacious If Strictly Adhered To.

Buy a sack of tobacco dust, just the ordinary cheap kind, and dust it plentifully all around the cucumber vines as soon as they come through the ground, and, keep dusting it around them once a week all summer. Give the melons the same treatment.

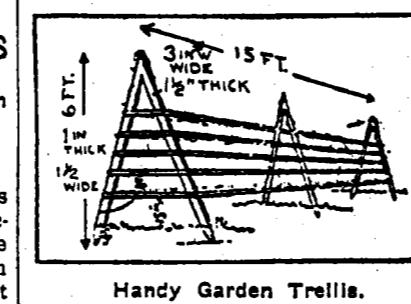

Plant lice do not like tobacco, and generally this will keep them off. It is almost impossible to fight plant lice on vines when they are once established, but if they are kept away from the start we can often succeed in keeping the vines free from them.

Stir a little of the dust into the soil close to the roots and it will help to rid the soil of the root aphids also if they are prevalent.

HANDY TRELLIS FOR GARDEN

Has Many Advantages in Growing Cucumbers, Tomatoes, and Tall Varieties of Peas.

For growing cucumbers, tomatoes, pole beans or the taller varieties of pea a trellis has many advantages over poles or brush. Fewer cucumbers remain hidden under the leaves and go to seed, and it is easier to spray them on both sides of the leaves to prevent rust when they are growing on a trellis. A trellis such as illustrated is easily made, and if put under cover as soon as the growing season is over it will last for many years. If the two uprights are fastened together with a bolt and the end strips left off the trellis will fold up, which makes it much easier to handle.—Farm and Home.

BEST EGGS FOR INCUBATION

Fresher They Are the Stronger the Chicks—Keep Them Covered and Do Not Wash Them.

Do not hatch any eggs older than ten days. The fresher the eggs the better they hatch and the stronger the chicks.

When saving eggs for incubation keep them in a temperature as close to 58 to 60 degrees as possible. Keep them covered. Do not wash hatching eggs.

Hand-Power Pile Driver Made of Piece of Log Will Answer Purpose Quite Satisfactorily.

To drive posts quickly take a section of a log about 15 inches in diameter and two feet long to which are attached two handles at an angle. Two men, one on each side, can use this hand-power pile driver while a third man holds the post to be driven and keeps it in alignment.

CAUSE OF CALVES SCOURING

Trouble Can Nearly Always Be Traced to Overfeeding Skim Milk or Lack of Cleanliness.

Crowding any young animals is a mistake. No amount of feed and otherwise good care can offset it. When numbers are increased till good company becomes a mob, the atmosphere of rest, growth, thrift and enjoyment of living departs—and tender young life shows it quickly.

Painless Dentistry.

A tourist, while "doing" California, noticed a long shanty which displayed the following sign: "Teeth yanked out without a twinge." As he happened to be suffering from toothache, he entered the shanty and asked the dentist:

"Do you extract teeth without giving pain?"

"Well, I reckon so, stranger."

"All right; pull this one out," indicating the offending molar.

The dentist whistled and in walked his assistant with a club.

"Now, pard," quoth the "dentist."

Of course the New Hampshire delegates voted for Fairbanks; didn't they do the same thing four years ago?

The Democratic National Convention is in session this week at St. Louis; and President Wilson will be renominated without opposition.

President Wilson would do a very commendable thing if he should place Ex-President Taft on the Supreme Bench to fill the place of Justice Hughes.

Monday of this week, work was begun in earnest on the road at White Birch Point, as recently laid out by the Selectmen. It is the intention to have this in good condition for travel and practically completed by July Fourth.

There are only five men now living in Antrim who voted for Lincoln for President. They are Samuel S. Sawyer, George A. Cochran, Benjamin F. Upton, Melvin D. Poor, and William H. Hill, and are as interested in the present campaign as any of the younger generation.

Hughes and Fairbanks has a winning sound to the ears of a Republican; it sounds somewhat like the Roosevelt and Fairbanks ticket of a few years ago which was most successful—but how wonderfully have the conditions of our country changed in that short space of time!

With frost in nearly every month in the year and an exceedingly backward and wet season, it really seems that the farmer would have some difficulty this year in getting very much of a harvest. His only hope in a short season is late frosts in the fall, and all trust that conditions will favor him in this respect.

Henry K. Loring

The town's people were greatly shocked Monday morning to learn of the very sudden death Sunday night of Henry K. Loring, of Milton, Mass., who died at his summer home at Antrim Centre. Mr. Loring had driven his auto to the Antrim depot, and returned, a distance of about six miles, and safely entered his garage. A little later in the evening he was found dead at the wheel, by a neighbor. The cause of death was arteriosclerosis, commonly known as hardening of the arteries.

Mr. Loring was a native of Boston, where he was born nearly seventy years ago. While a young man he went West and for several years was prominently identified with one of the large railroads, being stationed at Walla Walla, with his brother, William Loring.

Having terminated his business connections in the West he returned to Boston, where he became interested in the banking business, being with the Commonwealth Trust Co., until about 15 years ago when he retired. He made his home during the winter with his daughter, Mrs. John R. Rablin, at Milton, Mass., and for the past 20 years has spent his summers at Antrim Centre, where he owned a nice summer cottage, Maplewood. He is survived by his brother, William, and one daughter, Mrs. John R. Rablin, and one grandson, Richard Rablin, all of Milton.
