WILSON AND MARSHALL

Democratic Ticket Victorious Through-out the Entire Nation

The Reporter announced last Wednesday that Hughes was elected, but what was not strange was it was just what almost every daily newspaper on that date said. It was a close election—to close to please either political party—and had it been given out at first that Wilson was re-elected we should have been just as anxious to have said so. Now we are having our first chance to give it as it is, and we willingly do it. We are not saying how it suits us—Republican paper don't have to—but here's hoping that the administration will learn much from the experiences of the past four years and thus be able to give to the country in the four years to come much better service and much better satisfaction to the whole people. For it must be admitted that the entire one hundred millions of people are very nearly equally divided—fifty and fifty—and the dissatisfied ones have just as good reason to expect satisfaction as those who are extremely pleased with conditions.

The political conditions of the country are vastly different from what they were formerly, and to our mind they never will return again to where party may not again be successful.

STATEMENT TO ANTRIM PEOPLE

Shall The Leading Educational Feature Films Be Shown Within Our Borders?

(Advertisement)

To the People of Antrim:

For your careful and fair consideration I wish to present the following facts and statements relative to my position in the matter of showing the motion picture feature entitled "Where Are My Children?" A few weeks ago I booked this feature to show at the Antrim town hall and proceeded to do some advance advertising.

Events followed in rapid sequence! On the afternoon of Saturday, November 4, I was called before your Board of Selectmen and informed by them that I would not be permitted to show the feature entitled "Where Are My Children?" When I asked what their objection was they said there had been a complaint against showing it on the grounds that it was an immoral picture and not fit to show in this town.

When asked if any of the Board had seen this picture they stated that they had not. I then made an offer to give them a special advance showing of the films and was informed that they did not care to see it! Thus they were condemning this feature on hearsay evidence. I ask you people of Antrim "Shall the Selectmen be permitted to censor your entertainments?" Is it fair for them to forbid the showing of any picture which they have not even seen, and which many moral, upright people praise in no uncertain terms?

During my discussion with two of the Selectmen one of them stated that if ANY ONE should make ANY OBJECTION to ANY PICTURE I was to show THEY WOULD STOP MY SHOWING IT! Now, I want to state to my patrons that I will not accept without protest any such narrow minded, high handed ruling!

If this ruling should be enforced I would be absolutely unable to book any of the big feature productions of the day. As is well known there was a strenuous objection made in Boston to the showing of "The Birth of a Nation." Suppose that I booked that feature for Antrim and "ANY ONE" made a complaint I would be unable to exhibit it, according to the statements of the Selectmen.

It seems preposterous that certain people should set themselves up as moral censors for the people of Antrim in regard to this particular feature "Where Are My Children?", inasmuch as they have not seen said production and are therefore not in a position to pass an unprejudiced opinion.

On November 6th I received the following letter which I submit to you:

Antrim, N. H.,
November 6, 1916.
R. E. Messer,
Bennington, N. H.

Dear Sir:

Confirming our conversation of November 4, we are sending this letter in order that there may be no misunderstanding about the town hall.

It is true that an honest difference of opinion exists as to the merits of certain motion picture plays such as "Where Are My Children?" "The Little Girl Next Door," and others of similar character. It does not seem necessary or advisable, when there are so many excellent pictures on the market, to produce such plays in Antrim.

We wish it understood that plays like the above, which are prohibited in larger places, are not to be shown here and the hall is rented you with that understanding.

We have been informed that you have conducted good quality entertainments and believe that you desire to do what is right.

Yours truly,
Charles F. Buterfield,
Carl H. Robinson,
Selectmen.

There is a boundary between taste and ethics, but it is hard to define. Charity and tolerance of other people's tastes and opinions is most fitting in a democracy like ours!

Very truly yours,
R. E. MESSER.

Twice Proven

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's convincing evidence—doubly proven.

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's convincing evidence—doubly proven.

Mrs. Fred Abbott, Jackson St., Hillsboro, N. H., says: "For some time I suffered from dull, nagging backaches and severe pains across my loins. I had spells of dizziness and headaches and the kidney secretions also caused me considerable annoyance. I used just one box of Doan's Kidney Pills as directed and the backaches left. I don't have any more dizzy spells or headaches and the trouble from my kidneys has stopped." (Statement given July 15th, 1908.)

On August 30th, 1915, Mrs. Abbott said: "Although I have not used Doan's Kidney Pills in several years, I still hold a high opinion of them and recommend them as highly now as I did in 1908."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Abbott has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Prop., Buffalo, N. Y.

Election After-Thoughts

The New York Herald gives this reason why New Hampshire went Democratic: "Indifference of the Republican National Committee."

Congressman Wason made a good run for re-election and will be returned to the National House by a nice vote; the interests of the second district will be safely guarded by this very able legislator.

Senator-elect Stillman H. Baker, of Hillsboro, is one of the more prominent republicans of the State, and will represent the district of which Antrim is a part, with much ability; he is at present trustee of public institutions.

The Reporter was glad to learn of the election of Col. William D. Swart, of Nashua, as Councilor from this district; he is the right kind of an advisor for a Republican Governor, and the experience he will gain will better fit him to occupy the gubernatorial chair in the not far distant future.

The Manchester Union is not so very far wrong when it mentions the fact that the Republican party in the State was asleep on its job during the 1916 campaign; and it is not too early to begin now to organize for effective work of the campaign of 1918. Foresight, hard work, loyalty to party, and wise judgment on the part of those who have the details in charge, will be suitably rewarded. We hope to see some signs of activity along this line before many months.

Dea. Frank J. Wilson

Frank J. Wilson passed away at his home last Wednesday, after a lingering illness which included several years of poor health. He was born on March 30, 1850, and was a native of this town. On Sept. 14, 1880, he married Miss Junia E. Barker, who survives him, as do also two daughters, Mrs. Will Ellinwood, of Hillsboro, and Mrs. Clarence H. Elliott, of Litchfield, Conn.

Mr. Wilson was prominently identified with the Presbyterian church, and had served as elder for 23 years. His early life was spent on the Wilson farm in the east part of the town, which is now owned by C. W. Petty. Together with his family, he then moved to Hudson, this State, returning to Antrim when poor health prevented him from following his vocation of farmer. Deacon Wilson was one of our best citizens, upright and square in all his dealings, and was the kind of man that helps make a good community. He will be missed, not alone in the home but in town.

Funeral services were held from his church home Saturday afternoon, with Rev. Stephen P. Brownell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. There were vocal duets by Mrs. Jameson Nims and Miss Gertrude Jameson. Floral tributes were beautiful. Burial at Maplewood cemetery.

Nuttfield Savings Bank vs. R. W. Pillsbury.

Portsmouth—A case in which people who were on inside have felt considerable interest came to trial in the session of superior court here last week. It is that of the Nuttfield Savings bank of Derry against Rosenkrans W. Pillsbury alleging negligence on the part of the defendant in making loans without proper security. Pillsbury was secretary of the bank, and the loan of $5000 was made to Lewis Snyder, vice president of the Securities Guarantee company of which Pillsbury was president. Stock of the company was pledged as collateral, and the interest was kept paid for a time. Pillsbury later resigned from the company, the business went to pieces and the stock became worthless. The Securities Guarantee company, among other things, attempted to finance a mica business in Grafton. The trial is expected to last several days this week.

That Vermont Boundary. Concord—The state of Vermont has done a large amount of surveying of the boundary between that state and New Hampshire, and last week Councillor James B. Wallace and others were working on the matter between Windsor and Bellows Falls. A meeting of attorneys will be held in Washington, Nov. 27, when the matter will be discussed. This state will be represented by Attorney General Tuttle and his assistant, Joseph S. Matthews.

Sheriff Drew Has a Shock. Berlin—Sheriff Holman A. Drew, whose connection with the Thaw case made him a prominent figure in this state a few years ago, had a shock Friday and but slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. He was injured in an auto accident in the White Mountains same two months ago, and has never fully recovered. He was intending to go to Boston for treatment the present week.

Boy Shot While Hunting. Holderness—Mark Martin, aged 36, and Lloyd Perkins 19, went into the woods Thursday evening on a deer hunting trip by moonlight. They shot one deer and then agreed to separate. Sometime later Martin was seated in the crook of a tree on the lookout for game when he saw something moving in the woods. Instead of coming out into the moonlight it started back into the woods and Martin fired three times. Rushing forward he found that instead of a deer he had shot his companion. One bullet had entered the breast and two others had struck between the shoulders. With considerable difficulty he carried Perkins to his home and a doctor was summoned who pronounced his injuries of a very serious nature. It is against the law to hunt in the night in this state. No arrest has yet been made.

Sensational Case is Settled. Nashua—The sensational case of Royal S. Barnes, the well known letter writer, against Dr. George A. P. Dickinson, in which he claimed damages in the sum of $10,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections, came up in superior court last week. There have been several episodes in connection with the case which have brought the parties into the lime-light, among them being fight in the doctor's office in which a telephone receiver was used as a weapon, and another at the former residence of Mr. Barnes in the Whiting block. Mrs. Barnes has been employed as an assistant in the dental office of Dr. Dickinson. The filing of the suit for damages was followed by a suit by Mr. Barnes for divorce. Following a long conference of counsel on the day of trial it was stated that the case would be settled out of court.

Freak Election Bets Are Ripe. Nashua—Several of the freak election bets which have been made in this state were pulled off the last of the week. At Wolboro one man wheeled another a distance of two miles in a two-wheeled truck. In this city in payment of a bet a man played golf, using a peanut for the ball and a six-foot crowbar for the golf stick. The course, which covered quite a distance on one of the streets was covered in 20 minutes' time and 275 strokes. One woman has enjoyed a wheelbarrow ride as the result of an election wager.

New Hampshire Almost Claims Her. Portsmouth—Congratulations have gone from this city and Newington to Miss Jeanette Rankin of Missoula, Mont., the first woman to be elected to a seat in the national house of representatives. The relatives of Miss Rankin's mother lived in Newington, and her mother was a teacher in the public schools in this city. While on a visit to the west she met John Rankin and married him. Miss Rankin is 28 years old, a graduate of Wellesley, and has studied law. She is an eloquent speaker. In politics she is a Republican.

Representative-Elect Has Broken Ankle. Wolfchboro—A broken shaft caused the horse of William Thomas, Democratic representative elect, to bolt Thursday afternoon. Mr. Thomas was thrown out and his ankle was broken in two places.

Sullivan County is Dry. Newport—Every town in Sullivan county gave a substantial vote against license at the recent election. This is the first time the county has gone entirely for no license since the local option law was enacted.

Charley to Have the Chance. Manchester—The Manchester Traction Light & Power company will immediately begin work on a concrete foundation for a new dam at Gregg's falls on the Piscataquog river, 20 feet below the old wooden dam. It is expected that the new dam will be several feet higher than the old one, and that a dozen houses will have to be moved back from the river banks. In addition to the waterpower plants a new steam plant is in process of construction to be used as an auxiliary.

100 ARE MASSACRED BY ZAPATA BANDITS.

Laredo, Tex.—An indiscriminate massacre of nearly 100 women, children and Carranza soldiers, who were travelling on a train near Contreras, state of Morelos, which was attacked by Zapata followers is reported in Mexico City newspapers received here. After the attack on the train, the dead lay in piles beside the cars, the papers state.

RAILROADS ADVISED TO OPPOSE "DAYLIGHT SAVING."

New York—The American Railway Association, at its semi-annual meeting here this week, will consider a report of the committee on standard time on the "daylight saving" movement. The report will advise that the association go against the movement because, it says, the present zone system of reckoning time is scientifically correct and any change would result in confusion disastrous to the railroads.

Billy Sunday Preaches to 52,
500 Persons

MANY ARE TURNED AWAY

In Morning Explains Use of Contributions—"God's Grenadiers" Topic
In Afternoon and "The Sons of Society" in Evening.

Boston—Billy Sunday, cyclone evangelist, fired Sunday the first gun in a campaign that promises to be the greatest of his whirlwind career.

In the Huntington avenue tabernacle, the biggest yet built for him, he addressed more people than he had ever faced under one roof at any time in his life—and more people than were ever before gathered in doors in New England.

In all, there were some 52,500 admissions to the great wooden tent. This is the total of an estimated attendance of 17,500 persons at each of the three meetings, morning, afternoon and evening.

It was real, old-fashioned religion in a modern setting—the mightiest camp-meeting, perhaps, that this world has ever seen.

In place of the black-clad exhorter of the old revival days, there was an athletic, dynamic exponent of militant Christianity. In place of the tent in which the fathers "got religion" there was a giant, far-spreading structure of wood and concrete and steel and fireproof walls. All in all it was the last word in up-to-date, organized, ultra-modern evangelism.

It is indeed a far cry from the Christ who had not where to lay his head, and who preached by the roadside, on the banks of the Jordan, by the shores of Galilee and on the mountain-top, and whose disciples were fishermen, down to this 20th century, servant of His, who preaches in buildings specially constructed for him; whose residence, though simple, is in the heart of the exclusive section of one of the most aristocratic cities in the land, and whose organization for his war on evil includes the leading clergymen and the most powerful churches of his day.

The great audiences poured into the collection pans a total of $9337.95.

Mr. Sunday opened his first sermon with vigor. As the day waned he waxed in fervor, and at the evening session he wound up his epochal day with a scathing denunciation of the evils which infest society today. At the morning meeting he climbed still higher, and delivered his climax from the top of the desk. And his astonished auditors will not be overcome with amazement if tomorrow he hurls denunciation from the lofty elevation of the sounding board above the platform.

Miss Helen Keller was present at the morning service and occupied a seat with the choir at the rear of the platform.

After a praise service conducted yesterday morning by Homer Redheaver, Mr. Sunday's choir leader, the Rev. Dr. James Mott Pierce, offered prayer and Chairman Emery of the campaign committee introduced the evangelist.

Meanwhile, Billy sat on a high chair, tilted back at the rear of the platform. He fidgeted and stroked his chin with his right hand. He seemed as eager as a confident boxer waiting for the stroke of the gong that will start the fight. He was ready to jump from his corner into the battle and give the devil a solar-plexus blow that would knock him down and make him take the count right there on the platform.

When his introduction was finished he darted across the platform, seized the lectern with both hands, leaned over it and gazed for a moment at his audience without speaking. The famous Sunday smile burst forth, and his expression said: "Well, folks, here I am—don't you know an old friend when you see him?"

Billy talked first about Boston and his experiences with the city.

"I used to play baseball here," he said. "Aren't these the old Huntington avenue grounds? Yes? Well, I used to catch the ball just about where I am standing now—or miss it."

He began his sermon, talking rapidly with frequent gestures. From the outset he was all motion, moving the platform, waving his arms and bending low to hurl his shafts at those in the front rows.

Almost never does he step back of the center of the platform. He is either behind the desk or at either side of it, and he is never long in one spot. Much of his preaching is done at the very edge of the platform. He throws himself forward with so much energy that one expects to see him lose his balance and plunge over the brink to the dust below; but he is surefooted, and although his arms and often his shoulders project far over the edge, he never loses his balance.

Just watching these movements is apt to be exciting for the spectator. Occasionally he turns to address a remark to the big choir, which alone is of the size of an ordinarily large audience.

He speaks with amazing rapidity, words tumbling out with a fury that seemingly nothing can stop. But when he is done, he is done—he ends with abruptness and "punch."

UNOFFICIAL RETURNS SHOW PRESIDENT WILSON RE-ELECTED

Result So Close In Several States That Republicans Demand a Recount--Democrats May Not Have Working Majority in House of Representatives.

President,
WOODROW WILSON.

Vice President,
THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

New York, Nov. 11.—On the face of the unofficial returns, the above is the choice of the American people for chief executive officers of the nation for the next four years, but the result is so close in several states that Republican leaders are not willing to accept the verdict until a recount of the ballots has been made in these states.

The situation is extraordinary and has resulted in days of nerve-racking strain for the people of the country. If the election officials of a few remote precincts in a few states know how the nation has been waiting breathless to hear from them, they must be swelled up enormously with a sense of their importance. For on those few precincts has depended the nation's choice of its chief executive.

That Mr. Wilson's victory over Mr. Hughes will not be conceded without a recount in the close states, such as California, New Hampshire, New Mexico and North Dakota, was determined at conferences of the Republican leaders here. Chairman Willcox asserted a recount would be demanded wherever the margin of Democratic victory was so small that comparatively few votes would turn the scales. He and his associates say they take the position that there should be no cloud upon Mr. Wilson's title to the presidency. The Democrats, for their part, declared that there must be a recount in New Hampshire, even though the returns gave the state to Mr. Wilson.

That the returns are still incomplete is due to the presence on the border of the National Guard of a number of states. The soldiers are permitted to vote by mail, their ballots being forwarded to the auditors of their home counties, and in Minnesota especially the vote of the guardsmen is likely to cut a figure in determining whether the state goes into the Wilson or the Hughes column.

Minnesota was as bad as California in the matter of shifts, and as its delegation is nearly as large, it, too, was watched with the intensest interest. Through days and nights of counting, the race was a see-saw, with but a thousand or so of votes separating the candidates. Neither side would admit defeat, and even now both are awaiting the soldier vote and the official count.

New Hampshire a Surprise.

Perhaps the most surprising of all the states was New Hampshire. It alone of all New England failed to give the Republican candidate a substantial plurality, and for days no one knew in which column it would land. The astonishing closeness of the vote was shown by the rival claims, three days after the election, of 100 plurality for Hughes and 44 for Wilson. In the circumstances it is no wonder that the managers of both parties should demand a recount.

New Mexico, with three electoral votes, attracted national attention by placing itself early in the list of doubtful states, and as it soon appeared that almost every electoral vote would be vital, the returns from down on the border were grabbed hot off the wires. After veering back and forth for days, New Mexico was definitely placed in the Wilson column, though there, too, the president's margin was so scant that a basis was afforded for the call for a recount. A few mistakes discovered in the figures of the precinct officials might well swing the state over to Hughes.

Willcox Demands Recount.

On Friday National Chairman Willcox of the Republican party handed out the following statement:

"The result still depends upon the vote in a few close states. It must be borne in mind that the returns thus far announced are, in most states, unofficial, and may be changed by the official count required by the laws of those states."

"Twice during these unofficial computations yesterday in California mistakes in additions were announced from that state, substantially changing figures previously given."

"It is a common experience that the result of the official count almost always varies from the returns first announced."

"Where the vote is as close as that reported in several states, it may well be that material changes will result from the official count."

Wilson's First Office Boy Votes.

Alliance, O., Nov. 12.—Hurrying back from Atlanta, Ga., where, over a score of years ago, he ran errands for Attorney Woodrow Wilson, William A. Harris, the president's first office boy, cast a "sunrise" ballot for Wilson on Tuesday.

"When I was in Atlanta the other day I took my handkerchief and dusted off the old railing and desk in President Wilson's former law offices there, as I had done long ago," Harris said, in an interview.

"I will keep you informed on the doings of the community and the bargains of the merchants regularly advertised will enable you to save many times the cost of the subscription."

"We owe it to the country to take all necessary steps to see that an exact and honest count of the vote is made. When the current seemed to be running against Mr. Wilson on Wednesday day, Democratic managers announced their intention to demand a recount in every close state."

"All we desire is to make sure that the vote is counted as cast."

Crockery!

EMERSON STILL HAS CROCKERY IN FULL ASSORTMENT AND OF THEIR USUAL HIGH GRADE

It has been extremely difficult of late to get the old-time qualities in Crockery; the war has kept the foreign goods from Havilands in France, Doultons and other equally well known makes in England out of the American market, and the German productions cannot get across the Atlantic. Many stores have been obliged to substitute inferior grades, we have kept the standard unimpaired. Early purchases before the market was closed, imports from the Nippon factories in Japan, have kept us with our old-time assortment.

DINNER SETS—At the beginning of the war we withdrew many of our stock patterns from sale to new customers in order to be able to provide our old patrons with the matchings in sets they had from us. We are now able to provide you with matchings on nearly every set we ever sold from a stock pattern; in some cases however the stock is limited, and absolutely impossible to get more; you should therefore secure matchings at once.

NEW PATTERNS—By direct import from Nippon, we have added new patterns and at extremely attractive prices, even on the newest and most desirable patterns; you can make selection from us, buying only the pieces you need and adding from time to time.

City Stores are sending to us for matchings for Dinner Sets they are out of. You can buy from us and save the city store cost of handling.

FANCY CHINA—The new goods for Christmas are already arriving; you can see the newest and most up to date things and have first selection, our goods are purchased by direct import shared with our Brattleboro, Vt., store. We could not purchase the necessary quantity alone, you get the full benefit.

Stop the First Cold

A cold does not get well of itself. The process of wearing out a cold wears you out, and your cough becomes serious if neglected. Hacking coughs drain the energy and sap the vitality. For 47 years the happy combination of soothing antiseptic balsam in Dr. King's New Discovery has healed coughs and relieved congestion. Young and old can testify to the effectiveness of Dr. King's New Discovery for coughs and colds.

Among those who came home to vote we note Orrin Gould and Frank Ware, but we miss the genial face of Hiram B. Marshall.

Three surgeons performed a rather serious operation for Mrs. F. A. Wood, which we all hope will greatly improve her health.

The Moon Party was a notable success, 200 at supper. The farce by Mr. Levitt and the Misses Donnelly, Curtis and Wheeler, received honorable mention.

Harold Stearns has gone to Canada on his annual vacation; no, he did not go alone, Mrs. Stearns, (nee Louise Griswold) is with him, and they have been regularly since 1904. That year and also in 1902 Democrats were sent. Previous to 1902 every alternate term a Democratic Representative was sent from Antrim to Concord. Thus it will be seen that in the past twenty-five years it has not been unusual to elect occasionally a Democrat to this position.

If any one went to see this picture out of curiosity pure and simple and to find something objectionable, he (or she) must have been somewhat disappointed, for it was certainly one of the strongest stories in picture form we have ever seen, and in addition to teaching a great moral lesson, was one of the finest of Universal productions. The principal characters throughout were especially strong—not a weak one among them—and the acting and scenery were fine beyond description.

The picture has caused some adverse criticism, and perhaps in its earlier showing might possibly have had objectionable features—we don't know—but we are frank to state that there is nothing now low or debasing about it, on the contrary teaches the one lesson which needs so much to be taught. The evil which the picture is designed to correct (if possible) even only in a small way, is one of the greatest curses to society of every level. We believe the adult public, who alone is admitted, and who have seen the picture, will agree with us in our statement of the case and the quality and design of this marvelous production.

Some of the remarks that we have heard since last week's election have caused us to go through the files of The Reporter and get the exact figures of the different years, and give them to our readers; it is quite probable that many have forgotten just what has happened in Antrim's political history in the last quarter of a century. These figures will serve to freshen the memory of those who have been around here for this length of time, and also serve as a bit of information to the voter who has not resided among us for so long a term of years; and doubtless the younger voter will be interested to learn these facts and know they are correct.

In 1890, voting under the old system, Miles B. Tuttle was the Democratic nominee against Richard W. Stewart, the Republican nominee. No choice on first and second ballot; but the third ballot, and Mr. Tuttle was elected on the fourth ballot.

In 1892, Sylvester Little, Republican, received 176 votes, and John E. Loveren, Democrat, 178 votes. Owing to the closeness of the vote a recount was had, but Mr. Little retained his seat in the House.

Then followed the other years in succession and these are the figures and the candidates:

There's little comfort in most low priced cars. You can't use their speeds. They jostle you—they ride roughly—they don't hold the road.

The $635 Overland is different. It is not only the speediest of low priced cars—

But you can use the full speed of its powerful motor when you need it.

In all these years no Representative has been elected in Antrim to succeed himself or for a second term.

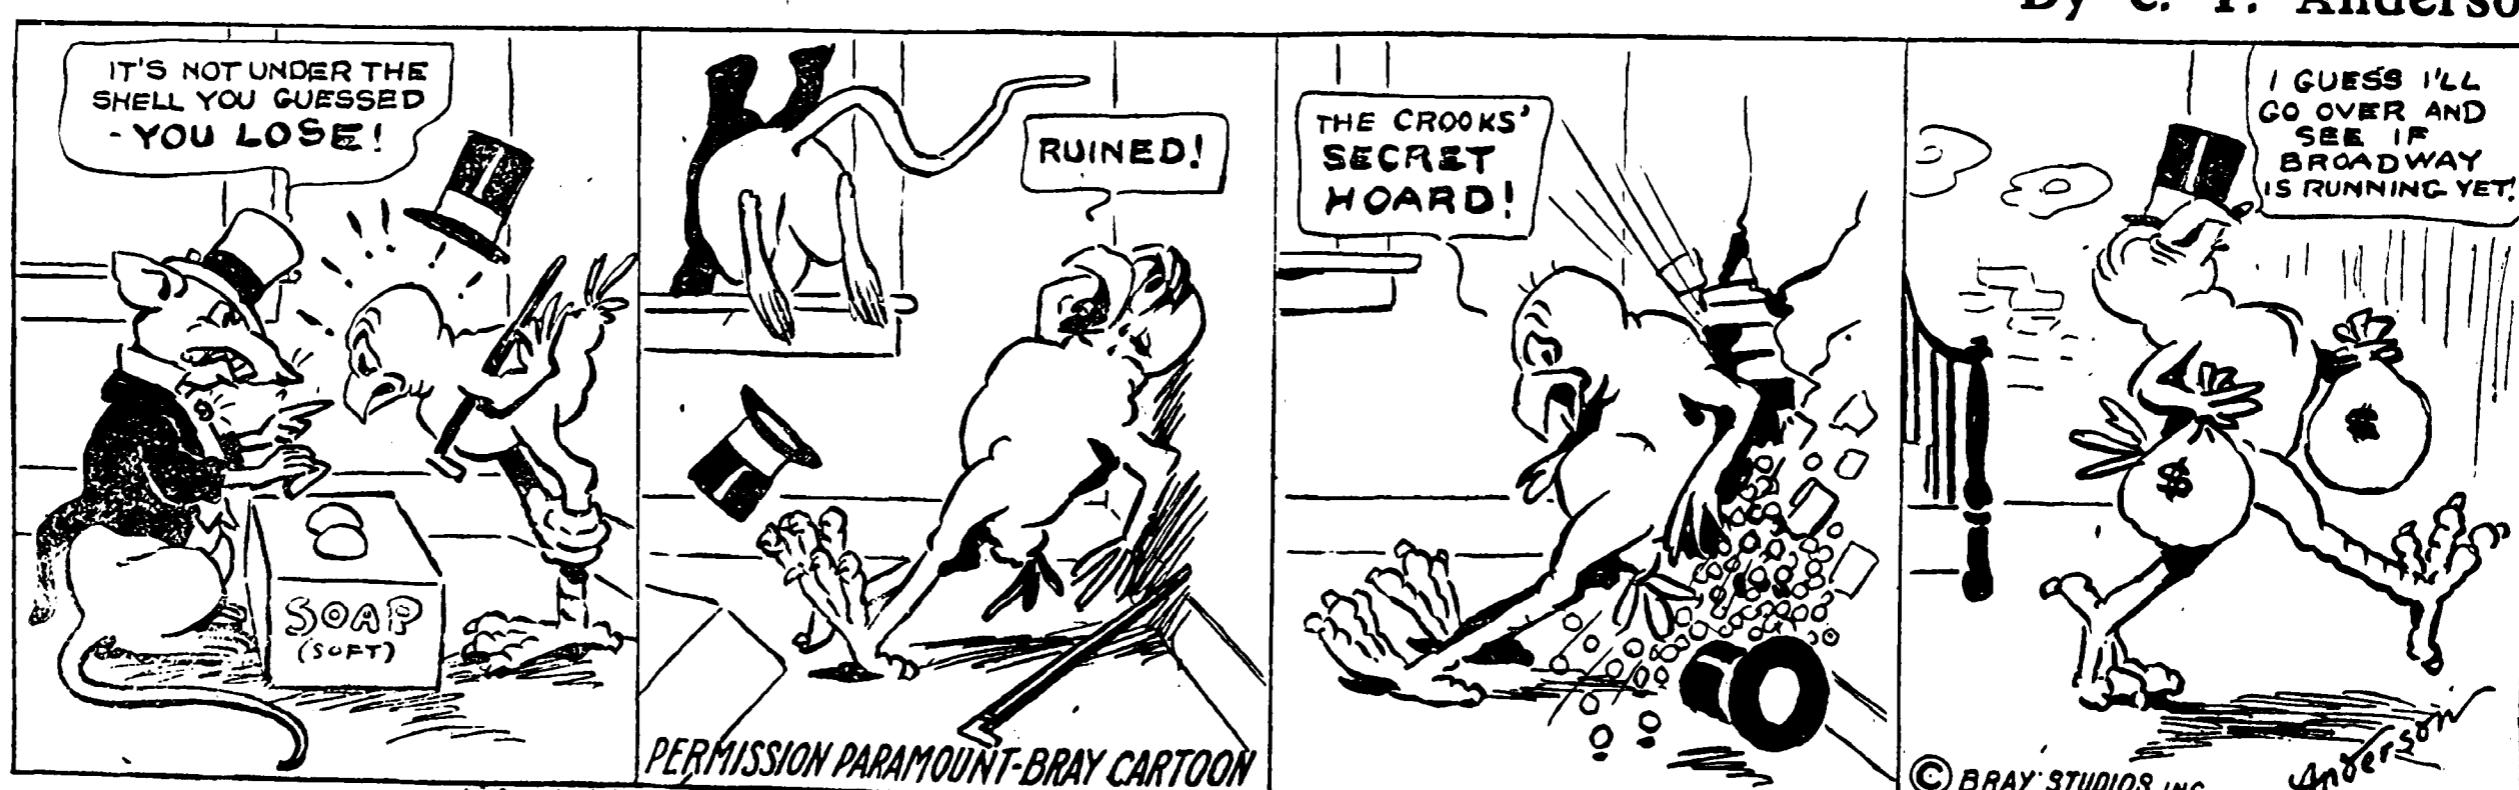

The strange thing about a political campaign is that men will allow themselves to become provoked at something or somebody, if things don't go just to suit them, and act real childish—or something of this sort—instead of being a man in the broad meaning of the word; accept the situation as it is and give the man elected to office all the assistance possible, thereby being a help to the town and to society as well. This may seem too unusual to be practical but it is the proper thing and put into practice would have a most pleasing and beneficial result.

Just after election one might make remarks that would ease his mind in giving vent to his feelings; but really in a large country like ours a man's mind ought to be traveling in a broad channel where there is ample chance for doing good to his fellows.

By studying the above figures it will be seen that almost always following the term when a Democrat was elected it was not a very hard task to elect the Republican nominee. This matter is in the hands of the voters of the town and they will attend to it. Independence in politics is more pronounced today than ever before, and the people as a whole can be trusted to do what is pretty nearly right. We feel sure our voters are shrewd enough men to fall for just this sort of advice; at any rate, we don't think it is anything but what should be done. To get the best out of life and the best out of politics, it seems to us necessary to play the part in the most manly fashion.

After the Years

By Frances Elizabeth Layton

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

"Gone!" uttered Alton Merrill, and his heart sank within him.

"Yes, sir, a week ago. It was strange inexplicable. For a day Miss Harraden moped around the house, looking—stricken is the word—as though she had received bad news that had crushed her. We found a letter on the mantel of her room. It was addressed to you."

"Give it to me, quick!" ordered the young man breathlessly.

"My wife has it. I'll get it for you, Mr. Merrill."

The caller tore open the letter addressed to him in feverish haste. He staggered at the perusal of the inclosure like a strong man under a heavy blow.

"It's impossible—incredible!" he gasped, and went from the spot bewildered, dazed, heartsick.

"Mr. Merrill," so the letter ran, "I have discovered your cruel and wicked duplicity. You will never see me again."

"ESTELLE HARRADEN."

Alton Merrill had in his pocket the ring provided for his marriage. He had more than that. He had a pretty cottage furnished with every comfort and ornament at the edge of the town. For a year he had courted the pretty schoolteacher. The appointed wedding day was less than forty-eight hours ahead. What misadventure had suddenly, mysteriously blighted his fond dream of happiness?

He could not tell and did not find out—just then. He recalled a rival in the past, Bruce Wyant, but he had not been seen in Brocton in six months. He expended time and money in searching for his missing love. It was in vain. Estelle Harraden had disappeared as effectually as though the earth had opened and had swallowed her up.

So Alton Merrill, when he came to the sad conclusion that Estelle Harraden, from freak, fancy or plotting, was beyond recall, accepted his cross silently. He could never forget, never cease to love this woman. He kept the wedding ring in a little packet next to his heart. He went to a friend in the town and arranged that once a month the little cottage he had worked so hard to possess and furnish should be dusted and aired and repainted once a year.

Then, with a heavy heart, Merrill started out once more on his wandering role of a traveling salesman. He applied himself to it and made money.

One day, while seated in a railway station a haggard, shabbily dressed woman seated opposite to him came over to him. Her face bore the traces of former beauty; her manner showed a certain refinement.

"You are Mr. Alton Merrill," she spoke. "Am I right?"

"That is my name," assented Merrill.

"I saw you four years ago in Brocton and remembered you. Mr. Merrill, because it lies heavy on my conscience, because you are too good a man to go through the world saddened by the mystery of the disappearance of the woman you loved. I am about to make a confession. I was the cause of Miss Estelle Harraden leaving Brocton and you."

"You!" exclaimed Merrill, incredulously.

"At the behest of another. Bruce Wyant. That other was the man who swore that you should never wed the woman he coveted. He led me to pose as one you had already married and deserted. He furnished me with forged proofs to sustain the fiction. I did my work because he claimed he sought only revenge, because he promised to make me his wife if I would. He followed Miss Harraden, but she ignored him with scorn. He failed in his promise to me. He was killed in a quarrel in a gambling den and I—she uttered a low plaintive moan. 'I have suffered deeply for my wicked action.'

"Ever since we last met where Shadie Miss Harraden went to?" eagerly inquired Merrill.

"None," was the depressing reply. "You will curse me, but I had to leave my mind," and despite his gentle words of forgiveness, his protests of money aid, the poor creature vanished in the throng.

It was then that Merrill renewed his quest for Estelle. He advertised in the papers, he even employed detectives, but no trace was found of missing or hidden Estelle Harraden. His grief was the more poignant, however, now that he knew that a plot, a lie had driven from his side the lovely girl and probably destroyed her faith in all mankind.

He had a miraculous escape in a railroad wreck at a little town in Iowa and was compelled to remain there owing to a bruised limb for several days. It was the first day he had been able to walk readily since the accident, and he was turning a corner when an automobile came whizzing around the corner. A little child passed directly in its path. Merrill sprang forward. He drew the child aside in safety and held her in his arms as she sobbed with fright.

"Don't cry, dearie," spoke Merrill soothingly. "But my books, look! they are all in the mud."

"We will soon fix all that," promised Merrill encouragingly and he gathered up two books held by a strap, unloosened them and with his handkerchief rubbed off the damp dirt that had gathered on them.

"You see, Miss Bartlett gave me the books," explained the little one. "She's taught me the alphabet and soon I can read words I'm going to the school."

"Here they are, all nice and clean," said Merrill, but in handing the books back to the child one of them chanced to come open. Merrill started, stared, his breath came quickly, for across the fly leaf was written in a dear familiar hand the name: "Estelle Harraden," and after it the date of the year she had disappeared.

"Child! child!" he uttered eagerly, "you say a lady gave you the books. Where, who is she?"

"Miss Bartlett? oh, everyone knows her," prattled the little one. "She is a music teacher."

"Yes! yes!"

"She lives with the school principal's family in that gray house—see it, just beyond the church."

Alton Merrill tried to control himself. A clue at last—oh, surely! for Estelle had been a musician along with her other accomplishments. So abruptly did he leave the little child that she stood staring wonderingly after him.

Merrill approached the gray house beyond the church. Could he be mistaken—was he cherishing false hope? Oh, surely not! for as he approached the front steps of the house, sweet, mellow, reminiscent, the notes of a piano sent out an old song Estelle had often sung to him.

The strains drew him up to the screen door. His range of vision took in a neat little parlor. At the instrument sat a girlish form. Her face was half turned towards him. His fatigued eyes feasted upon its rare beauty.

"Estelle!" he spoke simply.

She turned, her being abrill. Her hand sought her throbbing breast as she recognized him.

"I have found you after the years, and oh, heaven has opened to me," he uttered in a joyful, thrilling tone.

She came slowly towards the door. Her eyes scanned his face. Truth, love, were there. Oh, she could not mistake it!

Her eager hearing drew in the rapid word, he spoke, a voice as from a lost paradise.

It was she who pushed open the screen door. It was she who reached forth her arms towards him with the weary, yet heartsome cry.

"Oh, why did I ever doubt you?"

"It matters not," he spoke, for love, happiness have come back to us—after the years."

Smithsonian Institution.

The first great scientific institute in America, the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, was founded 70 years ago. James Lewis Macie Smithsonian, who bequeathed the funds for the founding of the institution, was a natural son of the third duke of Northumberland.

He was a distinguished scientist and freethinking philosopher, and on his death in 1829 left his fortune of about $500,000 to his nephew, with the proviso that if his heir died without issue the money was to go to the United States government and to be used in establishing an institution for the increase and diffusion of knowledge.

His nephew died in 1835 without heirs, and the property accordingly came into possession of the government. The institution was formally organized on August 8, 1846, and placed under the control of a board of trustees, consisting of the president and vice president of the United States, the cabinet members, the chief justice of the Supreme Court, and other officials. The Smithsonian Institution has played an important part in the scientific researches of the last half century, and its publications have added vastly to human knowledge. The remains of James Smithsonian, buried at Genoa, were brought to America in 1804 and buried in front of a beehive.—American Bee Journal.

NATIVE GRASSES FOR FARMS

Trials Made at North Dakota Station Show Wild Rye and Slender Wheat Are Promising.

Trials have been made on the North Dakota experiment station farm with a number of the native grasses with the intent of learning their value for the farm. Some were from Manitoba.

Wild rye and slender wheat grass were the only two that gave any promise and these were not as good as bromegrass. The slender wheat grass is being used a good deal. It can be pastured and makes a good hay when cut early. When too mature it becomes woody.

SAVE BEST SEED CORN

Careful Selection Will Increase Crop Yield.

Everyone Interested in Industry Should Unite in Campaign for Day on Which to Perform Duty College Will Aid.

An increase of 1 per cent in the average stand and yield of corn will amount to a million dollars' increase in value, but careful field selection of seed corn can be made to result in an increase of from 5 to 10 per cent in next year's crop, according to R. E. Baker of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Mr. Baker bases this on experiment-station figures, comparing the results of field selection with ordinary crib selection, and feels that every day spent in judicious field selection can easily be made to bring the corn grower from $10 to $50 in increased yields.

Farmers' clubs, industrial farmers, and everyone interested in corn-growing should unite in a campaign for a seed-corn selection day on which everyone concerned will see that work is started along this line in his own field. Those who know how to select can meet with those who do not and help them, or if there is sufficient interest, the college will send a man to help in this matter. Many of the clubs have

SHRINKAGE OF A CORN CRIB

Varies So Greatly in Accordance With Amount of Moisture It Is Hard to Give Amount.

The shrinkage that will take place in a crib of corn from the time it is cribbed in the fall until it is sold varies so greatly in accordance with the amount of moisture the corn contains when placed in the crib, and also the ventilation of the crib, that it is impossible to state a percentage of shrinkage that will apply with certainty to any particular crib of stored corn.

Various tests show that the shrinkage in cribbed corn approximates 15 per cent for the first year and 20 per cent for two years.

Corn that has not been kept dry during the winter is usually disposed of in early spring, for the reason that it is likely to spoil upon the approach of warm weather.

BOX FOR CATCHING SWARMS

Bees Immediately Take Advantage of Improvised "Hollow Tree" and Cluster In and About It.

Most beekeepers still prefer to catch swarms by using a ladder, saw, etc., and by cutting down the branch to which the bees are suspended. Messrs. Roberts and Hartwick, two Illinois beekeepers, did not like the ordinary swarm catcher, nor did they like the exertion connected with "shinnying up trees."

They have devised a swarm box which by means of a pole is inserted against the swarm cluster. The box is made hollow and long. They assert that the swarm will immediately take advantage of this improvised "hollow tree" and cluster in and about it, when they can be lowered and shaken in front of a beehive.—American Bee Journal.

INCREASE PROFITS OF DAIRY

If Poorer Half of Cows Were Sold Returns Would Be Doubled, Says Dairy Commissioner.

It seems like a strong statement to make, but it is no doubt true, as was said by the dairy commissioner of a great state dairy, that if the poorer half of the cows of the state were sold off the dairy profit of the state would be doubled.

But if the better half of the cows were kept the feed consumed by the unprofitable ones would be saved, the work would be halved and the profits from those kept would be more than double those of the herds as now constituted.

The volume of butter-and-milk production would be decreased, no doubt, if this course were pursued, and the consumer would be called upon to pay higher prices; but the dairyman would double his profits, and that should be the object sought in any business.

And the farm. The dairyman who does not improve his land every year must lie awake nighting more to keep it from growing more fertile.

Selling milk is about the hardest way to use a dairy farm, but he who sells butterfat sells nothing but sunshine, for a ton of butter isn't worth a wagon-load of stable manure as a fertilizer. They say it is worth about 75 cents.

STORING ROOTS FOR WINTER

Care Must Be Used to Prevent Heating—Should Be Left on Ground Until Thoroughly Dry.

Care must be used in storing roots for winter to prevent heating. Rutabagas put in the cellar damp and with considerable earth on their roots are very apt to heat, and roots of any kind that heat in the bin spoil.

When weather conditions will permit roots should be left on the ground a day or two after pulling to dry out before storing in the cellar. The less earth that goes in the cellar with the roots the better they will keep. Earth fills up the space between the roots and prevents the circulation of air.

When there is danger of the roots freezing in the ground and they have to be hauled in in a wet condition, it is well to pile them outside the cellar and cover with straw and manure and leave them there for a week or more to dry out. If the covering is removed from the top during the day when not freezing they will dry out very fast. This is much easier than to put them in the cellar wet and have to haul them out when they are found to be heating. Roots must be dry when stored to keep through the winter.

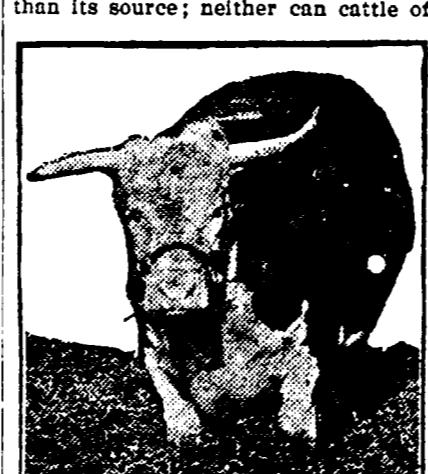

FACTORS IN RAISING CATTLE

Finished Animals Are the Ones That Top the Market—Hold on to Sire of Right Kind.

(By W. L. BLIZZARD, Department of Animal Husbandry, Oklahoma A. & M. College.)

Scrub cattle carried over the winter may mean money wasted. They had better be finished for the block at once.

The great shortage of beef warrants you in raising all the good calves. Early maturity in feeders is invaluable. It is only secured by raising them from good quality, early maturing stock. A stream cannot, of itself, rise higher than its source; neither can cattle of Sell as young as possible for beef, but above all, finish well. The finished cattle are the ones that top the market.

Good bulls are scarce. Don't part too quickly with the tested sire. Select the bull of good beef type with a good, strong, masculine head, good back, loin, and deep ribs. Strong, vigorous, masculine bulls with the proper conformation are the kind that are necessary to sire the right kind of calves.

BEEF ON HIGH-PRICED LAND

Big Increase in Yield of Corn Noted in Kansas Where Attention Is Given to Cattle.

Investigations in the state of Kansas, according to W. A. Cochell of the Kansas Agricultural College, show that the average acre of state produce 32 to 38 bushels of corn, while the average acre on cattle farms produces between 55 and 60 bushels.

They also show that the average value of the farm land of the state is $60 compared with the average value of the beef-cattle farms of $100 an acre.

Apparently it is not so much a question of whether one can afford to raise beef on high-priced land as whether one cannot afford to raise it.

WHAT GYPSY MOTH LIVES ON

Caterpillars Must Have Some Deciduous Foliage for Food—They Are Partial to Fruit Trees.

(By W. E. BRITTON, State Entomologist, Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The damage caused by the gypsy moth consists in stripping trees, shrubs and other plants of their leaves by the caterpillars. Formerly it was supposed that the caterpillars would attack almost any kind of foliage, ash being, perhaps, the most nearly immune of any of our broad-leaved deciduous trees. But more recent investigations at the parasite laboratory, Melrose Highlands, Mass., conducted under the direction of Mr. A. F. Burgess, show
