NEW ROAD BUILT

Improves Property---Good
Town Investment

At the annual town meeting in March it was voted "that the Selectmen be authorized to expend dollar for dollar with Mr. Henderson to build the road in front of his house, the entire amount not to exceed $250; and that the sum of $125 be raised and appropriated to carry this vote into effect."

The old road by F. C. Henderson's house, besides being considerably out of repair and needing immediate attention for the safety of the public, and the grade and location not being such as would give suitable lawn in front of the house, it was desired by the owner and occupant of the property to change the layout just a bit, and in this way straighten the road; and with a small outlay of money this would make a very valuable improvement to Mr. Henderson's property. The voters considered the matter favorably and voted to expend the necessary sum of money; they considered such improvements as a summer resident might make upon his property would add to the value of such property and not only be a satisfaction and pride to the owner but prove an investment and benefit to the town.

The road has been built and is a credit to all concerned. A substantial railing has also been erected opposite the house and beyond the new road. The grading from the house to the road is not quite completed but taking on very good shape, and when grassed and laid out as Mr. Henderson's artistic eye would like to have it, the place will certainly present a handsome appearance and give to the passerby if he happens to be an Antrim resident a feeling of satisfaction that he was able to assist in a small way in beautifying one of the handsome spots in our town. A lovely view is had from the broad piazzas of this cozy home and no family more completely enjoys a summer home in the country and especially when it is located in the town of Antrim than do the Hendersons. Our town is indeed fortunate in having among us so congenial a family and one who appreciates favors of the kind our town is willing to bestow upon them.

Union S. S. Picnic

The annual picnic of the Sunday schools of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian societies was held July fourth at lake George in Bennington. Invited guests were the Sunday schools of the Antrim Centre Congregational church and North Branch chapel. A goodly attendance of members and friends were present and enjoyed the day's fun and sports.

The refreshment committee provided free orangeade. For amusements there were bathing, boating and games. A basket picnic lunch was held at noon. The several committees did their best to have a most enjoyable occasion and it is the unanimous opinion of all present that their efforts were crowned with success.

GIVING THE POTATO CROP A QUICK START

One of the most discouraging things for the potato grower is the long delay which comes right after the potatoes are planted.

Some weeds are ready to start right "off the bat." In their root stalks they have saved up plant food for just this emergency. The potato, however, it not a good forager, and too often a delay in getting a quick start means a partial or total crop failure. The most important plant food in the early spring is ammonia—the stem and leaf producer. At the time of year when potatoes are planted, the soil is still cold. It has just been leached by the winter's rains and is low in available plant food. Even when manure is applied to a cover sod and turned under, use of ammonia in fertilizer—from 2 to 8 per cent—is a most profitable practice.

ODD HUMORS OF "Y" MOBILIZATION

Some of the Humorous Sideights of Picking Secretaries for Overseas Service.

"What can you say of his home life?"

"Ideal. He is a bachelor."

"What, if any, special weakness of character has he?"

"He owns a Ford."

"What are his qualifications for religious leadership?"

"Plays organ. Not much other wise."

When approximately 150,000 persons volunteered to go overseas for the Y. M. C. A., 20,000 were chosen. Some of the "recommendations" that applicants got had as much humor as truth—and vice versa.

Among the responses and confessions were the unconscious bits of humor that relieved the tension of the drama of "Y" mobilization. And now that the crisis is past the curtain is lifted on these comic interludes.

There stands revealed the minister who, according to one of his references, "plays in a band and uses his horn to social advantage otherwise." Here is another who won this compliment: "A small-town preacher is too often a gloom-dispeller, but is the opposite." One would-be "Y" secretary was recommended because "his right leg is about an inch shorter than his left leg. Would use this man because of his ability to meet men on their own level."

"If any further information is desired," ran a letter commending the secretary of one of the leading mission boards of the country, "I shall be glad to give it. I hope he will be able to get his passport at an early date as it will be for the good of the country to have him go as soon as possible."

One candidate, facing the prospect of being sent to Vladivostok or Mesopotamia, wrote:

"If I go to either of the countries mentioned, would it be permissible to carry a rifle or two? I understand that both are big game countries and are only semi-civilized. I have several high-powered rifles and would like to be allowed to carry at least one, if not two."

Another, determined not to let "Jerry" get away with anything just because his own duties were to be non-combatant.

NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE NEWS

Law Saved People Million.

Marketing of many thousands of dollars worth of new securities, which has been a feature of the recent increase in speculation all over the country in financial ventures, has brought greater activity to the New Hampshire Insurance Department in its enforcement of the "blue sky" law passed in 1917. The authorities are particularly vigilant in their scrutiny of those salesmen who attempt to exchange mining and oil stocks for Liberty bonds. Commissioner John J. Donahue is working with authorities of the United States and other states to prevent the unloading of "wild cat" securities on those who but recently were patriotic in their purchase of the war bonds.

In one recent instance a young widow exchanged $1,400 in Liberty bonds and some cash for worthless stock and was restored both the money and the bonds when the commissioner questioned the salesman about the deal. In another instance a salesman sold $5,000 worth of stock in a moving picture concern and then moved from the state. Gov. John H. Bartlett had him extradited from New York and the salesman made full restitution of the money.

Launch Freighter at Portsmouth.

The 8800-ton steel freighter Portsmouth was successfully launched at 6:52 P. M., July 4, in the presence of a great throng of people who crowded the shipyard of the Atlantic Corporation and lined the Portsmouth bridge and the opposite Kittery shore.

Mrs. Albert Hislop, wife of Mayor Albert Hislop, was the sponsor, and the launching was attended by Gov. John H. Bartlett and staff, Rear Admiral C. J. Bousch, U. S. N., and staff, and Co. P. L. Buck, U. S. N., and staff. The big freighter, the third to be launched from this yard, was named Portsmouth in recognition of the work of the city in the fourth Liberty loan, when it subscribed 98 per cent of its population. The city of Portsmouth presented the ship with a silver platter.

Walter Cox off on Tour.

Walter R. Cox, Dover's premier trainer and driver of light harness horses, left Dover with his racing stable, including horses, sulkes, carts, caulkers, masons, and other equipment to go to make a first class racing outfit for a 14 weeks' campaign through the grand circuit, which includes the meeting at North Randall, Columbus, Kalamazoo, Syracuse, Poughkeepsie, Leadville, Hartford, Lexington and Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Cox left with the best wishes of hosts of friends for the most prosperous campaign, and all hope for his safe return this fall, as the first money winning driver in the land.

Farmers' Meeting Planned at Durham

Two more associations have announced their intention of having their annual meetings during Farmers' and Home-makers' week Durham, Aug. 19 to 22. The first of these is the Potato Growing association, which will meet Wednesday, the 20th, and will have among its speakers one of the big potato men of Aroostook county, Maine, to discuss the practical details of the growing and marketing of potatoes.

On the same day the New Hampshire Good Roads association has decided to have its annual meeting. Mr. Everett, state highway commissioner, will be one of the chief speakers.

Thought Him Dead.

An accident occurred near the residence of former Police Commissioner, Samuel Welch, on High street, Somersworth. The people are unknown. A man on a bicycle was thought to be dead but he was taken to the side of the road next to Mr. Welch's house and water obtained and his head bathed. He revived and was able to walk a little with the assistance of his friends. His wrist and leg were injured. The motorcycle as well as the bicycle was put out of commission. The motorcyclist had no registration plate and the bicyclist had no light.

No Shut-Down This Summer.

The Amoskeag Manufacturing company, Manchester, announces that there will be no vacation shutdown this summer as business conditions are so good. Employees may make arrangements for a vacation, the company having consented to give all those who desire time off, permission to take a rest.

Agent Herman F. Straw says the decision not to close the mills was prompted by the short time of last winter and on account of business conditions at present. Business is so good that the management feels the big mills should be kept going all summer.

N. H. Women Elect.

The annual meeting of the New Hampshire Committee of the Woman's Department, National Civic Federation, was held at the residence of the state chairman, Mrs. William H. Schofield in Peterborough.

Officers elected—Chairman, Mrs. William H. Schofield, Peterborough; first vice chairman, Mrs. Alphonse B. Brown, Dover; second vice chairman, Mrs. J. G. M. Giesner, Littleton; secretary, Mrs. Lorin Webster, Plymouth; treasurer, Mrs. Charles B. Henry, Lincoln.

Favor Anything Promoting Peace.

The League of Free Nations association of New Hampshire announces that the chairman of its branch in Hopkinton, Robert Gould, recently brought to the office of the state headquarters a petition signed by 65 citizens, 24 of whom were returned soldiers. Mr. Gould stated that the unanimous opinion of the soldiers was that they would tend to discourage the old order of things and promote the peace of nations.

The other names contained on the list are those of the business and professional men of the community.

Says That State Labor is Behind.

That New Hampshire labor is not advancing as rapidly as is labor elsewhere is the statement of Patrick J. Cahillane, newly elected vice president of the Central Labor Union in Manchester. Vice President Cahillane also says that his experience at the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic city has convinced him that the bolsheviks and socialists of the country already have a firm hold upon the national federation that can only be shaken by more widespread representation by union locals at the annual conventions.

Well Known Woman Dies At Portsmouth.

Mrs. Laura F. Gurney, wife of Caleb S. Gurney, died suddenly of heart trouble. She was born in Mechanic Falls, Me., and was widely known throughout New England, having held the position of forelady in shoe shops at Mechanic Falls, Kennebunk, Salem, Watertown and this city. She was a charter member of the Fannie A. Gardner Rebekah lodge of Portsmouth. Besides her husband she leaves one sister, Mrs. Alice P. Storer, whom she was visiting at the time of her death.

Navy Yard Mechanics Will Study U-Boat.

The German undersea craft, U-140, will tie up at the Portsmouth navy yard for an indefinite period. It is sent there for use in benefit of the draftsmen and mechanics at the local yard on submarine construction. The U-140 is the very latest type of German submarine construction and is one of the crafts taken over at the signing of the armistice.

Employees Discharged.

Owing to the lack of work in the electrical department at the Portsmouth navy yard, a discharge of 170 hands has been ordered. This discharge was practically all women who have been employed at the yard since the war began. About 100 women will remain as operators in different parts of the yard.

Amoskeag Fair and Exhibit Sept. 18, 19, 20.

The annual fair and agricultural exhibit of the Amoskeag Textile club will be held as usual this year, and the dates have been fixed as September 18, 19, and 20. A meeting of the agricultural committee has been held, and the certainty that the fair will be held decided upon.

The Dover workers for the Independent Coal company of Boston have gone on a strike for more pay. They demand that they be paid $4 per day instead of $2.50 that they were receiving. The work engaged in by the Independent Coal Tar company was repaving Central Ave.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

How the United States Launched The Great Experiment of National Prohibition.

EMERGENCY LAW IN EFFECT

President Returns Home to Take Up Fight for League of Nations—Senator Borah Charges That Wall Street is Financing League of Nations Propaganda—British Dirigible R-34 Meets With Disaster When Near End of Voyage.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

The United States has launched the great experiment. Just after the treaty was signed that nominally brought the war to an end, our war-time emergency prohibition act went into effect and the entire country became officially "bone dry." Presumably demobilization will be completed within two months or so, and there will be a "wet spell" at least in some states until the constitutional amendment goes into effect on January 16.

At present there is considerable confusion concerning the scope and the enforcement of the emergency law. A federal court has ruled in favor of beer and wine containing not to exceed 2 1/2 per cent of alcohol and in many localities the dealers are taking a chance and dispensing those drinks. In most states the old and new laws on prohibition prevent even this. In any case the manufacture and sale of all drinks with the greater alcoholic content are barred and Attorney General Palmer has ordered rigid enforcement of the law relating to them.

The "wets" have been making a game but losing fight, and the "drys" have refused to yield at any point. The forces of the latter in congress are planning to pass measures to prevent the country from going on a whisky-drinking basis between the time of demobilization and January 16, and to put a stop to the sale of weak beer and light wines at once, regardless of court rulings.

Though the United States is now the only "dry" country, there may be another before very long, for the United Kingdom alliance, encouraged by the success of the American prohibitionists, has opened a campaign to put Great Britain on the same basis. American methods will be followed and American speakers imported. London correspondents predict that to deprive the Britisher of his ale, porter and beer would almost precipitate a revolution. British labor is against prohibition, but so is American labor; and it may be that John Bull will in the not distant future be reduced to drinking "lemon squashes" and "minerals." The world will watch the American experiment, one of the greatest ever made in economics, with intense interest.

His great task abroad completed so far as might be, President Wilson has returned to his domestic duties. On the homeward trip he signed bills and read documents and otherwise prepared himself for the contest that confronts him in the United States. The goal he has set for himself is the ratification by the senate of the peace treaty, including the covenant of the League of Nations. Victory will not come easily, though it probably will come, maybe after the covenant has been amended to meet the objections now made by a considerable number of senators. Those who are against the league in any form are very few, but stubborn. If Mr. Wilson is equally stubborn, the whole matter is likely to become a partisan issue despite the efforts of many party leaders to prevent this. It is intimated that, if the senate makes evident its intention to refuse to ratify, the president will withhold the treaty for the time being, and that would at once make it an out-and-out party question. There is precedent for such a course.

If the feste is put up to the people to decide, they have had plain warning that, in case the United States becomes a member of the League of Nations, it will be called on soon to begin assuming international duties and responsibilities. Dispatches from Paris say President Wilson will propose to congress the acceptance of a mandate for Constantinople and for Armenia.

Senator Borah, rampant opponent of the league, broke out in a new place last week, with charges that the propaganda of the league to enforce peace, headed by ex-President Taft, is financed by Wall street, Mr. Taft's organization glories in the fact that most of its financial support comes from men of big business and broad vision.

"It may be," said Senator Borah, "that the occasion for the opposition upon the part of small men is not a limitation of vision; it may possibly be that their investments are not the same and their interests are not the same."

"It may be that they are confining themselves to the interests of their own country and believe in the traditions and policies of their country, and it may possibly be that those who take a wider view of the matter are those who have large investments in other countries, and who propose to have more investments there, which investments will be worth very little unless they are underwritten by the United States government."

It is not easy to see why American business men should be criticized because they wish to see peace permanently established in Europe so that they can resume trade, commerce and industry with the Europeans. An instance of what they are getting ready to do is supplied by the news that three great American construction concerns have been awarded a contract for the rebuilding of the Nancy district of France at an estimated figure of $250,000,000, which sum may be doubled.

Dispatches from Weimar declared that the national assembly would at once take up the peace treaty and that a majority for its ratification was assured. The Germans had been notified that the blockade would be lifted as soon as the pact were ratified, and they expressed the hope that German prisoners of war would be released at the same time. As an earnest of their good intentions the Germans ceased all warfare on the Poles simultaneously for some time and not without a protest. Released from danger in that direction, the Poles turned all their attention to the Galician-Volhynian front, starting a counter-offensive in which they claimed to have broken the Ukrainian resistance and regained control of important towns and railways. There is no assurance, however, that Germany will not again break out on the east front, for according to correspondents she has, since the armistice, reorganized an army of about 1,000,000 men and gathered equipment for three times that number, including as many airplanes as she had when she surrendered. Of course all this is contrary to the terms Germany accepted, and if the stipules are true the allies will have to get busy again. The Germans can be trusted in one respect, and one only. They will evade the treaty if it is possible for them to do so.

The French foreign office gave out the texts of the proposed agreements of France with the United States and Great Britain designed to protect France against unprovoked aggression by Germany. The pacts differ in that Great Britain "consents to come" to the rescue of France, while the United States "will be bound to come immediately."

Various plans are being devised by the Germans to save the former kaiser from trial and punishment, including the formation of a national league for the "protection of his freedom and life." Von Bethmann-Hollweg, former imperial chancellor, formally asked the allied and associated powers to place him on trial instead of the former emperor, assuming responsibility for all the acts for which William is blamed. The German general staff, which resigned, agreed to withdraw its resignations if the government would promise not to give up the ex-kaiser for arraignment before a court. William is in no danger of his life from the allies, but that they still purpose to try him for his crimes is evidenced by their warning to Holland not to permit him to escape from Dutch territory, and by Lloyd George's announcement in the house of commons that William will soon be placed on trial in London.

All matters concerning the peace treaties are now in the hands of the new council of five, comprising Lansing, Pichon, Balfour, Tilton and Makino. Tilton let it be known that Italy wished all territory taken from Austria to be definitely disposed of in the Austrian treaty, which meant that that pact could not be formulated for some time and not without a protracted debate over the Fiume question especially.

The Chinese delegates said they expected to sign the treaty with Austria, in which they found nothing objectionable, and thereby gain admission to the League of Nations despite the withholding of their signatures from the German treaty. China probably will make a separate peace with Germany. In refusing to sign the German treaty the Chinese delegates disobeyed their instructions from Peking, being influenced by the south China revolutionaries.

The Turkish delegation to Paris was sent back home in a hurry because its ideas concerning the maintenance of the Ottoman empire were quite contrary to the plans of the allies. These plans, however, are still inchoate. Greece, which wanted possession of Constantinople and realizes that she cannot have it, is urging that the United States accept the mandate for that city as well as for Armenia, but there is more than a chance that the Americans would not agree to this. Meanwhile the Greek forces in Asia Minor are fighting three Turkish armies over which the government of Turkey says it has no control.

It was predicted in Washington that with the return of President Wilson there would be a radical change in the government's policy toward Mexico. Senator King of Utah, Democrat, said the administration would practically issue an ultimatum to Carranza, demanding guarantees for the protection of American lives and property in Mexico and hinting at intervention by the United States. The public has just learned the facts concerning the brutal murder of John W. Correll, an American citizen, near Tampico on June 16, and the assault on his wife. There is every reason to believe that Carranza soldiers were the perpetrators of those shocking crimes.

Having lived to see the triumph of the cause for which she labored for many years, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, honorary president of the National American Woman's Suffrage association, passed away at her home in Moylan, Pa., at the age of seventy-one years. During the war Doctor Shaw did excellent work as chairman of the women's committee on the council of national defense, and for this she had just been awarded the distinguished service medal.

The first "balloon" to cross the Atlantic, the British dirigible R-34, commanded by Major Scott, which was to have arrived at Roosevelt field, Mineola, N. Y., late in the afternoon of July 5, came to grief in the Bay of Fundy, between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. A United States destroyer was dispatched to her aid from the Otter Cliff station at Bar Harbor, Me. The airship evidently was following the coast line in a southwesterly direction toward New York. The dirigible started from East Fortune, Scotland, at 1:48 on the morning of July 2, and despite the accident, the achievement is considered in aviation circles as a success. The new motor that was installed worked splendidly until near the end of the voyage, and the crew of 23 men, including one American, had nothing but praise for the conduct of the big airship before that.

Scores of army and navy officers were at Mineola to welcome the British flyers, and general sympathy was expressed. During the voyage the dirigible had been in almost constant touch, by wireless with ships, and, nearing the end, with shore stations.

BIG AIRSHIP LANDS SAFELY

Finishes Long Ocean Flight of 3600 Miles Without a Stop

HAD MUCH HARD WEATHER

Terrible Time in Closing Stages—Officer Drops 1000 Feet in Parachute—All Tired Out, But Well

MINEOLA, N. Y.—Great Britain's super-dirigible R-34, the first lighter-than-air machine to cross the Atlantic ocean, anchored here at Roosevelt flying field at 9:53 A. M. Sunday (1:54 P. M. Greenwich mean time) after an aerial voyage of 108 hours and 12 minutes which covered 3130 knots, or approximately 3600 land miles.

Passing through dense banks of cloud, with the sun and sea visible only at rare intervals, the vessel was forced to cruise 2050 knots to reach Trinity Bay, N. F., from East Fortune, Scotland, and 1080 knots from there to Mineola.

When she arrived here she had left only enough petrol to keep her moving 90 minutes longer. Her crew, almost sleepless for four and a half days, were weary almost to the point of exhaustion but happy at the successful completion of their trip. The return voyage probably will be started at 8 A. M. Tuesday.

Haggard, unshaven, their eyes bloodshot from the long vigil and lines of care deep in their faces, Maj. G. H. Scott, the commander, and his officers showed plainly the effects of the anxious hours through which they lived while they were cruising over the far reaches of Canada and the Bay of Fundy, beset by fog, heavy winds and terrific electrical storms.

With the R-34 long overdue at its destination, with its petrol supply running low and buffeted by strong winds, Maj. Scott decided while over the Bay of Fundy to send a wireless call to the American navy department to be prepared to give assistance if it were needed. This was merely a measure of precaution and did not indicate discouragement. While destroyers and submarine chasers were racing to her assistance, the R-34 was plugging steadily ahead on the way to Mineola. Once clear of the Bay of Fundy the atmosphere hoodoo which had beset the craft from the time it took the air was gradually left in its wake.

The R-34 headed southwest cut across the Atlantic along the coast of Maine, her nose pointed for Cape Cod, with the United States Destroyer Bancroft hanging on her tail and in constant wireless communication with her. The bull-dog navy craft stuck close in the wake of the air monster, running under forced draft until Cape Cod was reached, and then the dirigible cut across lots.

It had been decided on the voyage along the coast that unless a favoring wind came up, the R134 would be forced to land on Montauk Point and a wireless message was sent out making that announcement. With the Cape left behind, however, fortune finally favored the balloon and the wind veered in her favor. Headed straight for Montauk Point she ran true and before the tip end of Long Island was reached it was decided to go on to Mineola. With the goal almost in sight the R-34 flew majestically across the island and headed straight down the centre of it for Roosevelt Field, 100 miles away.

As she cruised over Riverhead, the dirigible came within range of the wireless telephons installed at Roosevelt Field by the navy radio service and perfect communication was established. During the night the wireless calls from the R-34 were received by the navy radio station in New York.

Over the wireless telephons it was explained to Maj. Scott that a large part of the crew assembled to assist him in landing had been sent to Montauk Point in motor trucks in the expectation that he would be up there and that consequently preparations for receiving him had not quite been completed.

The mammoth balloon, looking like a huge flying fish was sighted in the distance about 9 o'clock and 15 minutes later was over Roosevelt Field. She cruised about in a circle at a height of about 1000 feet until word was telephoned that everything was in readiness for the landing.

While the R-34 was circling the field, Maj. Pritchard jumped off with a parachute. He landed safely near headquarters and smilingly hurried indoors before an ambulance, that had been rushed to the scene, could reach him. This was nearly a half hour before the dirigible came to an anchor.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN UP-TO-DATE.

Save and have—Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

A rolling fancy gathers no Thrift Stamps. On graduation I had used up about all of my money, but it was well spent. The legal education that I obtained was the most valuable part of my training for the business of life. If I had not saved, I could not have gone to the law school. My savings gave me that opportunity, and enabled me to follow my bent.

"Butter! Did you ever hear of starting life with nothing but?" That is the way United States Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock started. It was not by eating butter but by going without it that he got the start. He says:

"My father told me that if I would go without butter for a year, he would give me a calf."

"Why a calf? I suppose it was because the young bovine animal normally consumes, when fed on its mother's milk, a lot of cream which might otherwise become butter. Accordingly, if I saved a year's butter I might be deemed entitled to a calf."

"Anyway, I went butterless, and I got the calf."

"A calf was of no use to me, so I sold it and with the money bought a few hens and a rooster, building up a small trade in eggs and chickens, which I sold to my own family and to the neighbors."

"My grandfather encouraged me to earn money, and save it. If there had been Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps in those days, he would certainly have urged me to buy them. As it was, he acted as my banker, and added a dollar for every one I saved, allowing me good interest on both."

"Later on, I got a job with my father, and by the time I was 19 I had accumulated several hundred dollars. With this I paid my way through the law school. On graduation I had used up about all of my money, but it was well spent. The legal education that I obtained was the most valuable part of my training for the business of life. If I had not saved, I could not have gone to the law school. My savings gave me that opportunity, and enabled me to follow my bent."

Wanted in Montana: Public Health Nurse

MISS ELLA R. CRANDALL
EXECUTIVE SECRETARY NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES

CHILDREN MEET THE NURSE AT THE STATION

ONLY OPENING IS THE DOOR

If you want to see a dug-out, don't go to France, go to Montana. Scores of Montana families, father, mother, and sometimes wee babies, live in dugouts very similar to those which sheltered our soldiers in the thick of the fighting in France. And the life of these families here in America, especially of mothers and children, is almost as difficult and dangerous as that of the soldier boys. These facts and stories of the life of these present-day pioneers out West, have just been made public by the children's bureau. Homes seventy to one hundred miles from a railroad, without telephones, where trails are difficult and good roads almost unknown, are described in the report, which tells of the mothers and babies who suffer unnecessarily and sometimes die because the nearest doctor may be fifty or more miles away and there is no public health nurse.

Many things are needed to bring comfort and even safety to these families. The first of these, according to the children's bureau, is the public health nurse. And the people of the county studied agree with this recommendation. Since the visit of the agents of the children's bureau they have sent this petition to their board of county commissioners: "We earnestly petition the board that they appoint a county nurse whose services shall be given to the western half of the county. The legislature of 1917, by the enactment of the child-welfare law, empowered you to make this appointment. Because of the war, physicians were called to the service of their country and large sections of the county are left without medical attention, which will render the services of a nurse more necessary than before in giving health supervision to school children, and protecting the health of the community from infectious diseases."

With such a nurse, who could make her rounds by automobile, the lives of the people of the district would be much safer. Isolated Homes in Montana. So isolated are many of the settlers at present that illness and even death may find them alone and without the possibility of securing help. Especially dangerous is the occupation of mother out in this pioneer country. At present, because of the bad roads and great distances and also because of the expense, mother after mother has no doctor and no nurse at the time when her babies are born. She goes through her fight for life—a fight as big and as important as that of a soldier on the battlefield—in the crude surroundings of her dugout of mud and wood, or her "tarpaper" shack, sod or gumbo-clay house, without help or only with the help of an untrained member of the family or of a neighbor. For a doctor is a luxury to the pioneers of Montana and almost impossible to get. In all the district of 5,000 square miles studied by the bureau there was not a single hospital, only three registered physicians, and not one public health or "traveling" nurse. "My husband rode horseback 12 miles in a bad snowstorm for the doctor, but he was away," says one mother. Another husband left at noon to get a physician, but was lost in a storm and did not get back until six o'clock the next morning. Mail is no more certain than the roads or the weather. One mother wrote three months in advance to engage a physician who did not receive her letter until a week after the baby was born. Mail in this region is delivered to a few central post offices only two or three times a week, and then it is often delayed for weeks or months. It is a common complaint that winter underwear ordered in the fall doesn't arrive till spring. As might be expected from this lack of health protection for her mothers, Montana has a bad list of casualties. More mothers in proportion to the entire number of women die in Montana than in any other state in the Union. Children are less safe, too, in this part of Montana than in other western states. "Winter weather," said one mother who lived 45 miles from a doctor, "makes us prisoners. I can't tell you how I am worrying about the winter, for if my baby should get sick I'd be helpless."

Another mother had to take a child who had appendicitis more than 125 miles to the nearest hospital for an operation. One five-day-old baby became ill at a time when the big dry creek had overflowed its banks and there was no way to cross it. Therefore, no physician could be sent for. In another case, the nearest physician, who lives eight miles from the family, was away when his eighteen-day-old baby fell ill, and when the next doctor, who lived 25 miles away, was sent for he did not arrive until after the baby's death. Cases of accident which might be easily treated in a city or in a country district which had adequate health facilities, are difficult to care for in a community without such safeguards. In this district, for instance, a pin lodged in a child's throat, and the child had to be taken 125 miles to have it removed.

Need of Trained Nurses. A public health nurse, with an automobile, could do much for the protection both of children and mothers, mainly through educating them in caring for themselves and their children. In cases of illness, too, she could help the overworked physician, staying with the invalid longer than he could and supplying that expert nursing care so important in curing illness. The story of how one country community organized to protect itself against disease, and to guard the health of its members is described by a secretary of the national organization for public health nursing. In this community, in southwestern Iowa, a number of counties banded together to supply a modern hospital training school for nurses, but they also provided for health supervision of children in all the county schools, free dispensaries for school children; for tuberculosis; child welfare stations, and health and social service centers under trained public health nurses.

When Lands Do Not Matter

By S. B. HACKLEY

He had been on the road with the six fine saddlers he would not trust to anybody else's care, several hot, fatiguing days, and his long form slid wearily into the restaurant chair. "A bite and a sup for you, Gilbert Shore—then bed—the glories of Frisco can wait," he thought. Just across from him dined a man of fifty with a neck and a girth the like of which young Shore never remembered seeing outside the stockyards. The slim young waitress who served him brought lead water and hot soup, cold milk and hot coffee, and it seemed to the Kentuckian every known meat, salad, vegetable, but censure only rewarded her efforts. "What have you for dessert?" the eater finally demanded. "Lemon pie, snow pudding, raspberries, and strawberry ice cream."

"I'll take 'em!" he growled, "and bring 'em quick!" Watching this interesting specimen devour, the young man did not notice that the girl was standing at his own elbow. "Your order, please," she was saying. Her cheeks were flushed with her encounter with the fat brute, her soft voice was not quite steady and there was a mist in her eyes—eyes deep and dark blue like the ocean when the summer sun is over it. A wave of protecting tenderness swept over Shore; he made much ado to keep from pushing away his simple order and feasting his eyes on her winsome face, but he was a diffident young man, and a gentleman, so he pretended to eat, and used his eyes only by stealth.

And the girl? Long ago Allie Randolph had learned that silent unresponsiveness to all social advances of the young masculine customer was a girl's safeguard from insult, but she looked at the young man with his fine eyes, his clear, healthy skin and his charming manner and almost wished that he would ask her to go out with him. But he did not. However, on his third day in San Francisco the aristocratic old lady with whom he lived on the great Blue

"I'll Take 'Em," He Growled.

Grass stock farm received a telegram: "Will be detained longer than I expected. Start back Tuesday." "Oh, Grandmother Girl, if you knew why I am saying," he thought whimsically, "you'd say I'd been sleeping in the moonlight of my lost senses!" On the evening he ate his twelfth meal at the Bay View restaurant, the man of the thick neck was leaving just as he took his seat at the next table. "That man needs a man to punch his head for bullying a little thing like you," he remarked. "I'd just like—"

"Oh, sir, please," she interrupted him half fiercely, "he's a regular customer here! I—I don't really mind. One—one gets used to the unpleasantness here!" Shore's heart prompted him to say: "Little one, let me take you away from all this unpleasantness forever!" But he only said somewhat diffidently that if she would let him, he would take her to see a good play somewhere that evening.

Allie's heart leaped, but she faltered: "I do not go out with customers!" Then she fled to the kitchen. When she came back he was gone, and a twisted bit of paper and a single Marechal Niel rose lay beside his plate. "Oh, Little White Apron," the note said, "I wish I could feel that you trust me, stranger that I am! I like to think there is nothing in my face to frighten a girl. I'm leaving in the morning, but I shall see you again, for I'm coming back to see if you believe in the message of the rose!"

It was signed "Gilbert Shore, Bon Aqua Farms, Treadwell, Ky." "What is the sentiment of the Marechal Niel rose, Sissy?" the girl asked her widowed slater that evening. "Corona reached for the dictionary. "Adoration" or "yours, heart and soul," she quoted. Allie slipped back to her room and held the delicate rose for a long tremulous moment to her lips. "If only I knew he meant it!" she whispered.

He was so lovable and so good-looking, but there were so many with good looks and bad intentions! "And," she thought bitterly, "he is rich and I am a beggar!"

One evening in February she saw him enter the restaurant again. He came straight to her table, his brown eyes eager, glad. "Oh, Little White Apron," he said softly, "I couldn't stay away any longer! Do you believe what the rose told? Do you trust me enough to go out to the theater with me this evening?"

Allie fought back the happiness looking out of her eyes. "I must work until twelve," she told him, "but you may go and call on my married sister and my invalid father. But do not stay late. Father must sleep early." "He will not go!" she told herself bitterly. "He will not go! They never do!" But even as she said it her heart whispered that she believed he would. "He is rich and we have nothing, Corona." Allie remonstrated when Corona told her in delight she had accepted Shore's invitation for them all to go motoring with him the next day. "We are not the people he belongs with."

When two weeks later Shore asked Allie to marry him the girl could not keep the glow of joy out of her face, but she crushed it from her voice. "I cannot," she told him. "You might remember one day that I was poor and think that your riches tempted me. That would break my heart!"

"Oh!" he said easily, "I'm not a millionaire, if that's what's worrying you. Don't punish me because of the little grandfather left me." But she was obstinate. "I cannot marry you," she repeated. "Don't you love me?" he insisted. But she turned her tearful face away. "I will come back," he said then, white and unhappy, "when you have had time to think it over."

"No," she said, her voice shaking, "do not come. I cannot ever marry you." In May the city was full of fair vibrations. One noon when Allie's whole body ached with weariness, her heart most of all, two Southerners sat at her table. "I heard Gilbert Shore got badly smashed up out fox hunting about two months ago," the younger man remarked to the older. "How is he these days, doctor?"

"He's doing no good," the older man answered, and Allie's heart stood quite still. "When I told him the other day if he didn't try he'd never get so he could walk or get well, he said: 'I wish, please you, doctor; I wish I could take more interest in getting well, but what's the use?' Something besides his injury's troubling him, Raymond. I'm going to prod him into telling me when I get back!"

A few days later a young man sitting in an invalid's chair on the porch of a fine country home in the Blue Grass, his eyes closed, suddenly felt a pair of strong arms around his neck. "Oh, Gilbert," a soft voice breathed, "tell me you are not going to die! I came—came—"

For a moment he looked at her uncomprehending, then his eyes lighted with triumphant happiness. "And so you came to do good to the dying? Oh, Little White Apron, can't you do good to the living and stay with him forever?" Then he added in tender whimsicality: "I ought to tell you, Particular One, I've still got what grandfather gave me."

She raised her head from his breast. "I've thought it over," she said. "It doesn't matter!"

CITY OF STONES AND SAINTS
Old Spanish Stronghold of Avila Has Long Been Known by That Peculiar Cognomen.

Avila is an ancient Spanish stronghold now known as the city of stones and saints. The stones are prominent enough in the high wall, broken by circular towers, which surrounds the city and in the past kept out undesirable visitors. Some people say, however, that the term stones refers to the stone piers which decorate the city in unexpected places. No spot is too sacred for these roughly carved piers, which fact recalls the tradition that when paganism ruled in Avila these grotesque animals were themselves objects of veneration. But today they provoke only jests in spite of their attitudes of haughty aloofness. The saint part of the stones and saints epithet is adequately represented by Santa Teresa, the most beloved saint of Spain, who spent most of her life in Avila. Santa Teresa started her career of saintliness at seven years of age, when she tried to get herself martyred by the Moors outside the city walls. She was deterred from achieving this at the critical moment by her relatives. Later, tradition states, she was transported to heaven and given instructions on building and running a convent, after which she returned to earth and spent the rest of her life carrying out the celestial orders, and thereby winning the love of the people.

First "Gas Mask."
The first apparatus to enable persons to enter a noxious inflammable atmosphere was called the "aerophore" and was the invention of M. Denayrouze, a French inventor and scientist. It was first tested at Chatham, England, 44 years ago, and was reported successful. Vast improvements on this device, which comprised an air-pump and flexible tubing, have since been made, and these have saved the lives of hundreds in mine accidents and other disasters where rescue work would be impossible without their use.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine. It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do. Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!
We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

PARKER'S HAIR BALM

No Cooks, Community Kitchens on Trial

For a man seldom thinks with more earnestness of anything than he does of his dinner.—Samuel Johnson. We may live without poetry, music and art; We may live without conscience, and live without heart; We may live without friends, we may live without books; But civilized man cannot live without cooks. He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving? He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving? He may live without love—what is passion but pining? But where is the man who can live without dining? —Owen Meredith.

Signs of the times to be seen in all large cities are these: Apartment buildings, delicatessen shops, cheap restaurants, cafeterias, residential hotels. The old-fashioned home is fast disappearing. People are living in apartments and residential hotels, buying cooked food at the delicatessen shops, eating at restaurants. Why? Well, largely because they have to. The old-fashioned home is still an American ideal. But the increasing lack of servants, especially of cooks, makes the old-fashioned home a burden to people of moderate means and to women who want to do something besides keep house. It is fast coming to the time when only two classes can keep house with any satisfaction: the very rich, who can hire professional servants at high wages; the poor, who do without servants. The moderately well-to-do woman must choose between housework and all other activities. She cannot get servants, because we have no servant class in this country. Working women will not do domestic work when they can get other work, even though the other work pays less.

These conditions have raised a widespread interest in the proposition of community cooking. Notwithstanding the high prices of food and the scarcity of cooks, the American people like good things to eat just as well as ever. The question is where can these good things be had? A large proportion of twentieth century married women cannot cook acceptably and would not cook if they could. A modern city woman who can cook can hardly be blamed for unwillingness to spend all her time in home work. It is an age of inefficiency in restaurant cooking as in most other things and menu prices are even higher in proportion than raw material prices.

Iva Lowther Peters, Ph. D., of the woman's division of the council of national defense, made in 1918 a complete survey of the various co-operative and community food enterprises of this country. It was then believed that if the war continued community kitchens would have to be established in our larger cities to save food and fuel. England was already running a great many of them, with encouraging results, and Doctor Peters not only studied these, but undertook a thorough investigation of the co-operative movement from the time it was born in the eighteenth century. As it happened, the signing of the armistice came just in time to make the survey useless to the United States food administration, but it is going to be of great assistance to those individual Americans who are thinking of co-operating with other individual Americans in bringing down the price of eating.

An object lesson is a community kitchen that was opened in 1907 in Carthage, Mo. It was located in a private residence and the various families of the neighborhood came to it for their meals. Each family furnished its own table, chairs, dishes, linen, silver, thus maintaining its own tastes and standards. To provide the original equipment for the kitchen an assessment of $3 per adult and $1.50 per child was made. In the beginning there were 60 members, including 10 or 12 children. For the first three months the price of meals was $3 for an adult and $1.50 for a child per week. After the third month several families stopped coming. When the number decreased to 30 the price of board was advanced to $3.50 per week. As the kitchen's patronage decreased and the cost of food increased the price of board kept advancing until finally, in 1911, four years after its opening, the kitchen went quietly out of existence.

Most of the community cooking enterprises surveyed by Doctor Peters for the council of national defense tell practically the same story—a brief popularity, a brief decline, then extinction. But the community cooking enterprises tell one other story and it is this: The only community cooking enterprises showing unmistakable signs of success are those where the central kitchen delivers the cooked meals to the homes. These kitchens are now being established in several cities. Chicago and many of its suburban cities have their attention on Evanston, Ill., just now. Evanston is a few miles north of Chicago on Lake Michigan. It has about 30,000 people. It is a city of homes. Many of the men do business in Chicago. Evanston is called the "City of Churches," is the seat of Northwestern university and is what may be called a high-class American small city.

Yes, Evanston is a city of homes. There are streets of dwellings and comparatively few flats are in evidence. There are trees and lawns. The houses look as if they had kitchens—wood, big, roomy, old-fashioned kitchens, where things were cooked—"pies like mother used to make" and doughnuts to compare even with those of the Salvation Army. But the imagination that sets you to sniffing in the hope of catching delectable odors from these old-fashioned kitchens in these old-fashioned homes is a delusion and a snare. The kitchens are there, but they are as idle as a painted ship on a painted ocean. Cause why—there are no cooks. There was a time, not long ago, when an occasional cook could be enticed out to Evanston and pampered into cooking. But even that time is past.

So Evanston is going to have a community kitchen and has made a beginning. That's why Chicago and Illinois are watching her with interest.

NEW COMMUNITY KITCHEN AT EVANSTON, ILL.

The beginning was made in the basement of the Evanston Woman's club. At first only lunch was sold and buyers had to fetch and carry. Next in order is an evening meal. Then will come delivery of hot food in containers.

There was a wild rush near lunch time on the opening day by the housemaidless Evanston housewives for the community kitchen. Mrs. James A. O'Dell and Mrs. H. H. Kingsley, chief sponsors for the kitchen, were kept busy for the best part of three hours weighing cake and wrapping up slices of tempting baked ham—the kind baked with cloves and sugar, the Virginia way, you know—and other goodies. The menu included these things: Potato Soup, Baked Ham, Corned Beef Hash, Spanish Rice, Meat Pie, Potato Salad, Tomato Salad, Gingerbread, Cookies, Cakes, Doughnuts.

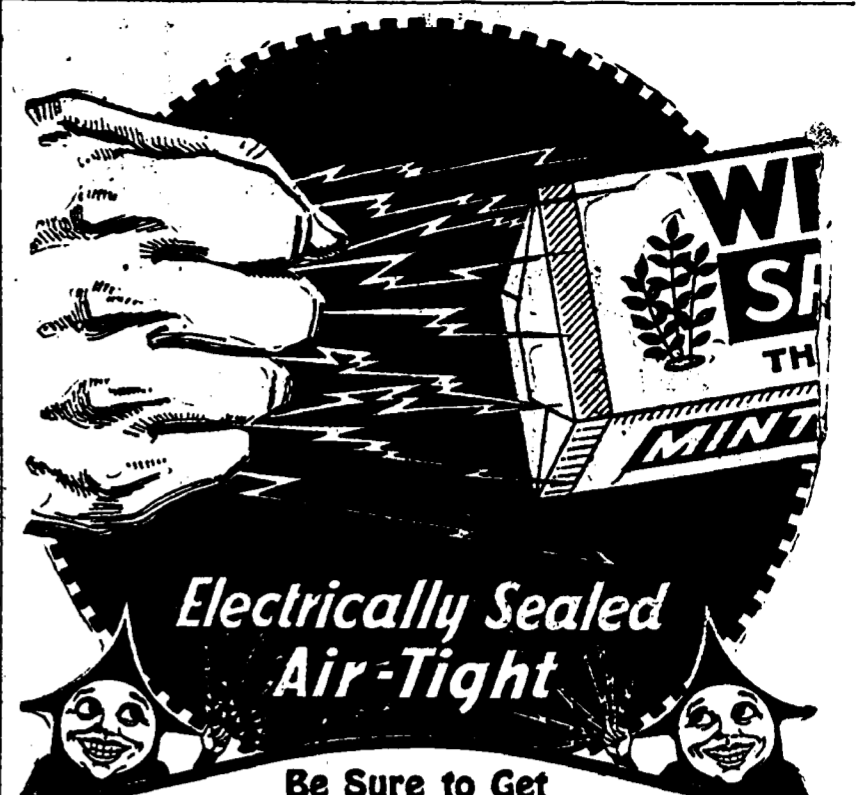

The proletariat was not in evidence. The premiere of the kitchen might have been the opening of the opera season. Limousines and electric cars lined up in front of the kitchen and the beauty and chivalry of the aristocratic village were all present. Among the first to draw up in their electric coupes were Mrs. William S. Carson and Mrs. D. E. McMillan. They departed with a basket containing some tomato salad, gingerbread, baked ham and banana cream pie.

There next drew up in their limousines, with their chauffeurs waiting outside with lips smacking, Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, wife of Dean Grant of Northwestern university; Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes and Mrs. M. H. Dawes, who departed with full baskets.

In their wake came many more, mostly persons in the Blue Book. Then the university co-eds, attracted by alluring reports concerning the doughnuts and gingerbread, began to arrive.

Over at Phi Delta Theta house the students had been having many difficulties in the matter of cooks, and had determined to do their own cooking. That very day the Sigma Alpha Epsilons were guests at the Phi's house. A large quantity of uncooked edibles were procured. After numerous efforts, the only commodities which proved amenable to the culinary treatment of the fraternity cooks were beans. The guests were lukewarm in their appreciation. Following the dinner the dish-washing began. Eight plates were broken. The fraternity house looked like a shambles when it was all over. En masse the youths went to the community kitchen for dinner.

It appears that the community kitchen is offering really toothsome dainties. The tomato salad created a sensation and one enthusiastic purchaser said: "It looks like slices of tomatoes lying on lettuce leaves, but it is really a tomato gelatin, with

Whale Fat is Eaten. The last annual report of the United States commissioner of fisheries states that in 1914 Denmark used 20,000 barrels of hardened whale fat in the margarin industry. Preparations are under way in Norway for utilizing this material in the same way. The product is said to keep and taste well. Whale fat is even better suited for making lard. OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs. This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person. For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil has been relieving the weakness and disability due to advancing years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haaslem Oil is enclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

"FRUIT-A-TIVES", or Fruit Liver Tablets, Gave Great Relief.

MR. WM. H. OSTRANDER
855 Grant St., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have been paralyzed on the whole right side since April 80th. I referred the case to a physician, who wrote me personally, advising the use of 'Fruit-a-tives'.

I bought three boxes and used them as directed. I am feeling fine—better than I have in the past nine months.

I would not be without 'Fruit-a-tives' for anything; no more strong cathartics or salts so long as 'Fruit-a-tives' are purchasable; no more bowel trouble for me.

I recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all. I feel more like 40 than 61, which I have just passed."
