BENEFIT SUPPER

For Local Branch of American Legion, on Feb. 12

The supper to be given the local post of the American Legion boys, by the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps, will be held in G. A. R. hall on Thursday evening of next week (Lincoln's Birthday) instead of Friday as announced. The supper is not only a benefit to the Legion but the W. R. C. desire also to observe Lincoln's birthday as well as show honor to the boys in khaki. Our people will be asked to buy tickets for this supper in advance and it is hoped a very large number will be sold.

Woman's Club

Yesterday afternoon, the ladies were delightfully entertained with an address by Mrs. Frank Knox, of Manchester. Her talk on a "New Citizenship" was most interesting and very instructive, and every woman in town should have been present to hear it; they would have profited much by listening to her plain and convincing arguments.

Should Read Like This

In an item on the fourth or local page concerning Waverley Lodge, it should state that three hundred and fifty-five have been initiated and the present membership is one hundred and ninety-nine. This was noticed after it was too late to change said item.

The Pictures Feb. 10

The Moving Pictures for Tuesday night of next week, at the Antrim town hall, will be "A Good Loser" featuring Peggy Pierce.

HUNGER KNOWS NO ARMISTICE IN CAUCASUS

Colonel Haskell Reports to Near East Relief on Desperate Needs of Helpless.

"Peace may come elsewhere in the world, but hunger knows no armistice in the Near East," says Colonel William N. Haskell, Allied high commissioner in the Trans-Caucasus, in an appeal to Near East Relief, 1 Madison avenue, New York city, for food and supplies for the relief of the starving millions.

Colonel Haskell is in charge of all operations and disbursements of Near East Relief in the Caucasus.

"There is no fuel or shelter for the greater part of them during the terrible winter."

COLONEL HASKELL

$5 PER MONTH FEEDS ORPHAN

Cleveland H. Dodge Shows What Near East Relief Can Do in Efficient Purchasing.

Buying in wholesale lots and under the most favorable market conditions, Near East Relief of 1 Madison avenue, New York city, with representatives in every state of the Union, has been able to baffle the high cost of living so far as relief supplies for the suffering millions of the Near East are concerned.

Cleveland H. Dodge, treasurer, in a statement shows that the committee is able to provide food for the suffering people of the Near East at prices much lower than the average charge here.

A donation of $5 per month will provide food for one orphan, $10 per month provides not only food, but also clothes and shelter for one orphan, and for $15 per month attendance at school is assured to each orphan in addition to food, clothing and shelter.

In the appeal for funds to save the starving remnants of the Armenians and other western Asia peoples, Near East Relief is inviting the American public to "adopt" an orphan at the rates given here. Over 250,000 homeless children are in need of help in the Near East. Women's organizations, lodges, churches and social clubs are responding to the appeal by adopting quotas of orphans for support over a definite period.

THE SUGAR SUBJECT

Treated by Our Washington Correspondent

The American people have not fully made up their minds as to whether they are being robbed by the sugar trust, but most of them have a suspicion that such is the case. The way local dealers are parceling out the sweet stuff indicates that the supply is being juggled somehow.

Alfred W. McCann, the pure food expert, asserts that sugar profiteers have gouged $940,000,000 from the American people in the past few months. He brings the Sugar Equalization Board, created as a part of the Food Administration under Mr. Hoover, to his support. This Board, still in existence, had the opportunity to buy the Cuban sugar crop at six and a half cents a pound. President Wilson would not authorize the purchase. Then,—explains Mr. McCann, the Louisiana crop came onto the market at seventeen cents a pound wholesale, whereupon our Cuban under-studies promptly boosted their prices and perfected their little "corners," with the results that they are found every time a pound of sugar is purchased by the consumer.

Mr. McCann's theory is noticeably incomplete with reference to the sugar refiners trust, as well as relates to the domestic sugar beet crop. He supports the attempt to fasten the blame for present high prices of sugar, and the shortage of it upon the Cubans and the Louisiana planters.

It is a short memory that can not recall the sugar investigation in the Senate a year ago last Winter, when the Spreckels interests exposed the American Sugar Refiners, and accused the latter with having juggled the allocation of sugar under the Food Administration, and manipulated the American market. According to Mr. Spreckles the trust succeeded in shutting out their competitors including of course Mr. Spreckles—the man who hollered!

'BOY WANTED'

"Uncle Dudley" Advises Boys To Look Into Future

Uncle Dudley in the Boston Globe preaches a timely and truthful sermon under the caption: "Boy Wanted." "A boy may go these days from one soft snap to another and get a little more money in each place. But that is not going to last forever. The boy who looks on his work as a graft is unfitting himself for life. The boy who regards his early employment as a trade school and insists on learning as he works is making good terms with the future."

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Members of Local Legion Will Hold Service Feb. 22

The French government has arranged with the American government to present honoray certificates through the American Legion, as memorials to the boys who made the supreme sacrifice during the late war.

In carrying out this idea, the William M. Myers Post, No. 50, of Antrim, will hold a memorial service at the town hall on Sunday afternoon, February 22, at three o'clock, the details of which will be given in our issue of next week.

As this post has members in Bennington and Hancock in addition to our own town of Antrim, it is hoped and expected that there will be a large attendance at this service.

Verification of Savings Bank Depositors' Books

To the Depositors of the Hillsborough Bridge Guaranty Savings Bank, of Hillsboro, N. H.

The law of this state provides that, "It shall be the duty of every depositor in any savings bank, and of every share-holder of any building and loan association to present his book for verification with the books of the bank or association when notified so to do, at the times fixed by the bank commissioners."

The bank commissioners have selected the month of February in this year as the time for such verification. I have been appointed to examine the depositors' books and compare them with the books of the bank, with the object of correcting any errors that may exist, and for that reason I shall be at the Hillsborough Bridge Guaranty Savings Bank between the hours of 9 a. m. and 12 m. and 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. each day the bank is open during the above-named period, unless the work is sooner completed.

You are requested to present your deposit book, or to forward the same by mail or otherwise, to me at the bank at as early a day as convenient, if possible during the first two weeks, and so avoid having a personal request sent to you. The book will be immediately returned to you after comparison with your account as kept by the bank.

That Morning Lameness

If you are lame every morning and suffer urinary ills, there must be a cause. Often it's weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doan's Kidney Pills. You can rely on this testimony.

Frank E. Currier, Machinist, 128 S. Main St., Franklin, N. H., gave the following statement on September 7, 1908: "I had backaches all the time and the trouble was caused by too much stooping while at work. Mornings my back was so lame and sore I could hardly get out of bed. When I tried to lift anything, sharp pains seized me and I could hardly straighten up. Nothing seemed to do me any good until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Three boxes removed all the backache, lameness and soreness. My kidneys now act regularly and give me no more annoyance."

RELIES ON DOAN'S

Over seven years later Mr. Currier said: "I can heartily back up my past recommendation of Doan's Kidney Pills. I use them occasionally as a preventive."

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

CHANGE OF SOME SORT SURE

Returning Soldier Feels He Has at Least Earned a Better Chance Than He Has Hitherto Been Granted.

Article III.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Europe wears an anxious look. One thought is arousing her from the stupor of her misery. She opens her eyes in wide amazement when she notices and notes the striking change that has come over her children. It is puzzling her, although she well knows what they have gone through, how patiently and uncomplainingly they suffered. It isn't strange to her that they have changed, when she remembers the peace of the years before the war, the quiet, sane lives they lived, and the four years in which they lived in wet, foul sewers called trenches, slept in tombs on the edge of a strip of hell called No Man's Land, breathed the smell of burning flesh, saw their pals "go west," buried their dead, grinded at pain, laughed at death. Nerves of steel could not stand what they have gone through without being changed by it.

They have put on mufti again. It is strange to them. The quiet streets are dull. The demobilized soldier feels the letdown. The tenseness over depression sets in. During the war he didn't have time to think of anything except the job ahead of him. Every minute, every move was life or death to him. Now he realizes for the first time what he has gone through, wonders why he is alive. Two thoughts possess his mind; one the memory of every minute of the days and nights of the war—the other, of what is ahead of him, what is he going to do with his life? He is at a strange crossroads. The word "job" doesn't mean much to him. It isn't that he is lazy. He has to pinch himself to realize that it is over and that he is back from the war.

Earned Right to Better Place.

Between the whizz of machine bullets and the shriek of shrapnel he spent his time thinking, and his thoughts were not all about the war. He never got used to the war, but he learned to forget it. He has brought more than souvenirs and memories from his experience. He has brought home thoughts, ideas and ambitions from the trenches. Many a night, looking over No Man's Land, listening to the "banshee" of the war, he thought and resolved that if he ever came back he wanted, and would have, a better chance in this queer thing called Life. He feels that he has paid for a place, and he has paid. He has earned the right to a decent place in the world, for which he fought. He helped save the world and he looks to that world to save him from a meaningless machine existence. If it doesn't he has made up his mind to use force. He is willing to work, wants to work, but he insists on being part of his work, rather than his work being all of him. He sees, feels and measures things from an intensely human angle. He feels his humanness. The war emphasized the value and meaning of the human being. It was life or death. He is alive. He wants a human interest in his work.

Hundreds of demobilized soldiers in different parts of Europe, in different words, in different languages, have said to me: "If the world isn't going to give us a better chance than it gave us before the war, then the world wasn't worth fighting for. When we fought, they told us it was to make the world safe for democracy and to make life worth while. We thought this meant us and ours. We have learned that life isn't only a question of a job and enough to eat, we want to be treated like human beings. A man wants to feel that his work means more to him than just wages. He spends most of his time at work, the rest of it is spent with his family and in sleeping so he will be able to work the next day. Why shouldn't he have an interest in the business, and why shouldn't the business have an interest in him? We don't want to run the business, all we ask is a say in it, a friendly say in it. Some people think that to be fed is to be free—it isn't. Being free means being treated like a human being."

I have found many good honest men and women who have lost interest in work. They say, "We don't get a fair share of what we make. We fight among ourselves for jobs because we have to or starve, and they pay us as little as they can." I am not reasoning or arguing this question. I am stating a fact which indicates the state of mind of millions of men and women in Europe who did their bit for civilization during the past four years.

Fair Hearing Must Be Granted.

Calling these people Bolsheviks doesn't silence them nor solve the problem. Such tactics irritate and deepen the unrest. Their grievance must be given a fair, patient hearing. Their attitude of mind must be reckoned with if we hope to get back to normal living. I have heard some say that these people must be given to understand that they must work or starve. No law or government in the world is powerful enough to compel people to work. This is particularly true of the people today. To think of using force is foolish, suicidal.

We have had enough of force during the last four years and the farther we get away from the idea of beating one another into submission the better off we all shall be. The present unrest is positively dangerous. It isn't like any unrest we have ever had before. It is the restlessness of human beings who have been face to face with death. We need lots of calmness and common sense. By kindly conference we must try to understand each other, and by just compromise help each other. Of one thing I am sure, and that is, if an effort is made to use blind, brute force on the working people of the world, the present unrest will be set in motion, a whirlwind will break upon the world.

The plain, open road back to happiness is co-operation. If we stop for a moment and realize what we have been through, and the changes that have come upon us while we were going through it, we will find getting together easy. Unrest blocks the road. It fetters the will to work. We must face the truth, and the sooner we do, the better. The world is broke. The war has bankrupted Europe. One thing, and one thing only, will bring us back to sane, normal living. It is work. Sympathy and understanding will do more to secure peace, stimulate work, than defiance, challenge and threats.

A normal world is one in which men live and work together in peace, where all men have a chance to be happy. This means an interest in work, a joy in working—living to work, rather than working to live. Men must have food, clean wholesome food, and enough of it to do their work without exhaustion. Men must have clothes. Not only the quantity and quality necessary to protect their bodies from the weather, but clothes that satisfy the normal instinct for appearing clean and neat. Decent clothes sustain self-respect. Men without them are less normal and moral.

All Need a Playtime.

There must be a time between the end of the day and the beginning of sleep in which men can know and enjoy their families. The man who is so used up by his day's work that he falls asleep at his supper table isn't playing fair with his wife and children, and his employer isn't playing fair with him. All men are boys, even after they have gray hair. This quality is probably the finest and best in them. They need a playtime, a recreation time. They lose something and the world loses more when they do not get it. It is not enough that bodies are fed, minds must not be starved. Light is the right of every human being with eyes. Education is light. The human race must have light. None of us were intended to live in darkness. Children are entitled to a school time, a jump-the-rope time, a top time, a play time. A child who enters manhood or womanhood without ever having known a childhood goes through life with something missing, something lost. The creed of the changed world is that while the world doesn't owe anyone a living, it is obligated to give every human being a chance to make a decent living. The new commandment is that this chance must be given.

Little Drops of Water.
It has been stated that people are as ignorant of the size of the sea as they are of matters dealing with astronomy. Few are aware, for instance, that the Pacific ocean covers 68,000,000 miles; the Atlantic 30,000,000 miles, and the Indian, Arctic, and Antarctic 42,000,000.

To stow away the contents of the Pacific it would be necessary to fill a tank one mile long, one mile wide, and one mile deep, every day for 440 years. Put in figures, the Pacific holds in weight 984,000,000,000,000,000 tons, and the Atlantic averages a depth of not quite three miles. Its waters weigh 325,000,000,000,000,000 tons, and a tank to contain it would have each of its sides 430 miles long.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

Constipation invites other troubles which come speedily unless quickly checked and overcome by Green's August Flower which is a gentle laxative, regulates digestion both in stomach and intestines, cleans and sweetens the stomach and alimentary canal, stimulates the liver to secrete the bile and impurities from the blood. It is a sovereign remedy used in many thousands of households all over the civilized world for more than half a century by those who have suffered with indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, sluggish liver, coming up of food, palpitation, constipation and other intestinal troubles. RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.
To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Baro Compound, and 1/2 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up for you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually make dark streaked, faded gray hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

"I'll buy myself a picture of you." She told of her longing for a photograph of him, but did not tell him of her need of it as a talisman. He laughed aloud at this incredible way of spending money, till she began suddenly to cry. He had no answer to that argument except yes. Then she began to laugh. They decided to stop at a photographer's on the way to the five-thirty train.

Daphne ran out and cashed Reben's check at the grocer's much to the regret of Reben's bookkeeper, whose books had been held up by the missing check.

Daphne asked for the privilege of taking her father to the train, and Bayard was so busy figuring where to put the cash he had on hand that he consented to stop at home.

They went first to the gallery of a photographer whose show-case had displayed some strong and veracious portraits of men. The photographer's prices staggered Daphne and she protested, but he answered dolefully:

"I'd give a thousand dollars for one photograph of my father."

That settled it.

After the sitting Daphne and her father proceeded to the station. She stopped at the gate because she had neither a ticket for the train nor a platform pass from the station master.

She watched him dwindling down the long platform. He was a mere manikin when he reached his place and waved to her before he vanished through the magic door of the train.

She waved to him with her handkerchief, and when he was gone she buried her eyes in it. Her partings with her father had marked epochs in her life. She wondered what destiny would do to her between now and the next one. She felt forlorn, afraid for his life on the train, afraid for her soul in the perils before it, and so sorry for him and for herself that she could not help boo-hooing a little.

Destry did not keep her waiting, for while she was strangling her sobs as best she could she heard a voice over her shoulder. It said:

"Aha, get, at last I have you in me power."

"Mr. Duane!" she gasped, as she turned to meet his smile with another. "And where have you been all this long while?"

"A lot you've cared," he growled. "Did you ever telephone me as you promised you would? No! Were you always out when I telephoned? Yes! Did you let me call on you? You did not! When at last it penetrated my thick hide that you were actually giving me a hint that you didn't want me round and that you had thrown me overboard, neck and crop, I grew very proud. I refused to call on you again."

"I'm awfully sorry," she said, and her voice broke.

"Sorry" was a dangerous word for her at that moment, and her sobs were beginning again, when he made a vigorous effort to talk them down.

The crowds in the station were too well preoccupied with their own errands to notice a girl crying, and to the gatekeeper farewell tears were no luxury.

Duane tried the best he could to help her. He was saying: "And now I suppose I've got to miss my train and my reach through his blood to his heart and to make it ache.

"I must go. You can't put me off again!" he said. "I will take you home!" He turned to call a redcap standing in solemn patience beside two traveling bags and a bristling golf bag. "Porter, take my things to the parcel room and bring me the check."

"No," said Daphne, hastily. "I mustn't! You mustn't! Really! I mean it! Good-by!"

She walked away so rapidly that he could not follow her without necessarily haste. She heard him call, sharply: "Porter, never mind the parcel room. Come along to the train."

Her success in escaping him was so complete that she rather regretted it. When she reached the apartment she found Leila almost prostrated from the effects of her altruism and from the fact that Bayard was in one of his tiranisms.

A special delivery letter had just come from Dutill's shop. It said that Mr. Dutill was arriving from Paris with his winter models, and since he would have to pay a large sum at the customs house it was regrettably necessary to beg Mr. Kip to send by return mail a check for the inclosed bill, which was long past due.

And now the briefly adjourned laws of finance were reassembled. Leila's short reign was over; her extravagance had again found her out and demanded punishment. The gown she had bought, and was asked to pay for, had been worn shabby, danced to shreds in Newport. But the bill was as bright as ever.

Bayard was so fagged with his weeks of discouragement that he was as irascible as a veteran of the gout whose toe has been stepped on, when Daphne walked in he was denouncing Leila in excellent form. He used Daphne as a further club.

"My poor sister sent back the gown she bought! But you—you bought more!"

Daphne realized how much this would endear her to Leila and she took immediate flight. She found the Chivvises in a state of tension. Mr. Chivvis was not usually home before half-past six. Daphne felt an omen in the way they looked at her when they acknowledged her entrance.

She went to her room in a state of foreboding misery. She had not paid her board for several weeks. She had not mentioned the fact to Mrs. Chivvis, nor Mrs. Chivvis to her, though the nonpayment of a board bill is one of the self-evident truths that landladies usually discuss with freedom.

A few minutes later Mrs. Chivvis tapped on the door, her thimble making a sharp clack. She brought her sewing with her and sewed as she said: "May I sit down a moment? Thank you." She kept her eyes on the seam while she talked.

"Well, Miss Kip, the war has reached us also at last. My husband lost his position today."

"Yes? Oh, how horrible!" Daphne gasped, with double sincerity.

"The office was closed unexpectedly by an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. His salary was not paid last week nor this, and—well—we don't want to inconvenience you, but—"

"I understand," said Daphne. "I'll give you what I can."

She took her poor little wealth from her handbag. She had paid ten of the fifty to the photographer as a deposit. She gave Mrs. Chivvis twenty-five dollars, and promised her more.

Mrs. Chivvis was very grateful and went down the hall, smiling a little over her seam.

Clay called that evening. He was exhausted with a day of tramping the town, looking for work. He was too weary to talk and he fell asleep twice during one of Mr. Chivvis' commentaries on the probable effects of the imminent capture of Paris by the irresistible Germans. The French government had already moved to Bordeaux—and Clay had read it all in a dozen different newspapers, and he passed away.

Daphne was restless. Mr. Chivvis was on her nerves. Clay was not pretty, asleep, sitting with his jaw dropped and his hands hanging down, palms forward, like an ape's. She was enjoying another of the woes of marriage without its privileges.

The Chivvises began to yawn, and Mrs. Chivvis finally bade the startled Clay "Good evening." She had been brought up to believe that it was indecent for a woman to bid a man "Good-night."

Clay, left alone with Daphne, attempted a drowsy caress, but she felt insulted and she snapped at him:

"If you're only walking in your sleep you'd better walk yourself out of here and go to bed."

His apology was incoherent and she was indignantly cursing him at the door. She went to her room and sat at the window, staring down at the dark swarm of watchers before the bulletin boards.

She had told her brother that she did not have to starve or sin, because she had a father, a brother, a lover to protect her from want. And now her father and her brother and her lover were all in dire predicament, staggering blindly in a fog of debt.

the afternoon went in an endless iteration of dip and write, till five-thirty. Then she joined the home-going panic and took the crowded subway to Columbus circle.

She plodded the treadmill, till at the end of the sixth day, her forty-eighth hour of transcribing names and addresses from the lists to the wrappers, she carried off a cash reward of eight dollars. This was not clear gain. Her street car fares had totaled sixty cents, her lunches a dollar and a half; she had worn her costumes at the sleeves and damaged them with a few ink spots, and her shoes were taking on a shabby nap.

It was not encouraging.

At Daphne's left elbow was a large, fat girl whose pen rolled off large, fat letters. She talked all the time about nothing of importance, laughed and giggled and asked questions that would have been impudent if they had come from anything but a large, fat head.

Her name was Maria Pribik. She was a Bohemian of the second generation; but she was dyed in the wool with New Yorkishness. She was an incessant optimist and kept reminding everybody to "cheer up, golls, the wosht might be wosser yet."

Daphne's luck did not last long. The receivers found that the percentage of inquiries following upon the advertising and circularizing campaigns was hardly paying the postage. People were either too poor to buy books or too busy with the molten history pouring from the caldrons of Europe. Yesterday's paper was ancient history enough.

The receivers closed down the business abruptly on a Saturday and instructed the manager to announce to his flock that there would be no more work at present. Daphne's heart stopped. Here she was again, learning again the dreadful significance of "out of a job"—what the theatrical people called "at liberty."

Mr. Chivvis Was at Home Most of the Time Now, Sitting About in His Old Clothes to Save the Others.

Miss Pribik looked at Daphne and noted her gloom. "Say, kid, listen here. Why'n't choo come with me? I can land you a job at the Lar de Lucks. Guy name of Goist is the boss and he'll always gimme a job or any lady friend. He's kind of rough, but what's the diff? His money buys just as much as anybody's. We better beat it over there ahead this bunch."

Daphne murmured her hasty thanks and they left at once. Miss Pribik led the way to a huge building full of "Pants Makers," "Nightshirt Makers," "Waist Makers," and publishers of calendars, favors and subscription books. She asked for Mr. Gerst, saw him, beckoned him over, and hailed him with bravado:

"Well, Mist' Goist, here I am, back to the mines. This is my friend Kip. I want you should give her a job—and me, too."

Daphne faced Mr. Gerst's inspection without visible flinching, though she was uneasy within. Gerst was a large, flamboyant brute with eyes that seemed less to receive light than to send forth vision. He had an inquisitive and stripping gaze. But Daphne must endure it. After ransacking Daphne with his eyes, he grunted: "You look pretty good to me, kiddo. You can begin Monday."

"Thanks," said Daphne, humbly.

"I'm comin', too," said Miss Pribik.

"All right," said Gerst. "It's time you did. We'll take some of that beef off you." And he playfully pinched her arm.

Adroitly evading his pinches, Miss Pribik led the way out, and Daphne trailed her outside.

Daphne loathed and feared the man already. He stood like a glowering menace in the path ahead of her.

Monday morning at eight Daphne reported for work with the L'Art de Luxe Publishing society, pronounced by its own people (who ought to know) "Lar de Lucks."

This firm was engaged in the peculiarly Anglo-Saxon business of grazing the censorship as closely as possible. It printed everything that it dared to print under the whimsical Puritanic eye of the law. Toward the authorities it turned the white side of a banner of culture claiming to put in the hands of the people the noblest works of foreign genius and defying any but an impure mind to find impurity in its classic wares. The other side of the banner was purple and informed the customers by every prurient innuendo that the books were published in their entirety without expurgation. Vice has its hypocritical count no less than religion.

One day, toward the end of her first week, she was startled to find before her a card bearing the legend "Duane, Thomas." His address was given, and the facts that he had bought the three-quarter morocco Balzac, the half-leather Fielding and Smollett, and the levant Court Memoirs. He had not yet taken the bait for the De Maupassant.

Daphne pondered his card and his taste. She was shaken from her pensiveness by the sudden commotion of all the women. All eyes had seen the minute and the hour hands in conjunction at XI. Names were left in the middle; pens fell from poised hands.

Daphne found herself alone. She was glad of the quiet and the solitude, while it lasted—which was not long, for Gerst came back unexpectedly early.

His eye met Daphne's. He started toward her, and then, seeing that she glanced away, went on to his desk. He stood there manifestly irresolute a moment. He glanced at Daphne again, at the fire escape, at the empty room. Then he went to the first of the tables and with labored carelessness inspected the work of the absentee. He drifted along the aisle toward Daphne, throwing her now and then an interrogative smile that filled her with a fierce anxiety.

She knew his reputation. She had seen his vulgar scuffles with some of the girls, had heard his odious words. She was convinced that he was about to pay her the horrible compliment of his attention.

Her heart began to flutter with fear and wrath. She felt that if he spoke to her she would scream; if he put his hand on her shoulder or her chair she would kill him, with a pair of scissors or the knife with which she scraped off blots. . . . No, she must not kill him. But she would have to strike him on the mouth.

But that meant instant dismissal at the very least. He might smash his fist into her face or her breast or knock her to the floor with the back of his hand. She had seen too much of life recently to cherish longer the pretty myth that the poor are good to the poor. She had seen how shabby women fared with street car conductors and subway guards. She had seen her own prestige dwindle as her clothes lost freshness.

But the violence of Gerst's resentment would be a detail. The horror was the mere thought of his touch.

She rose quickly and tried to reach the fire escape. That was the solution—to join the crowd.

But Gerst filled the aisle. She sidled past two tables into the next aisle. He laughed and sidled across to the same aisle. She tried to hasten by. He put his arms out and snickered:

"What's the rush, girlie? Nobody hollered 'Fire'!"

"Let me pass, please," she mumbled. "Wait a minute, wait a minute. What'd you say if I was to ast you to go to a show tonight, huh? What'd you say?"

"Thank you. I have another—I couldn't."

"Smother eve, then? Or to a dance, hub?"

"Thank you, I'm afraid I can't."

"Why not? Come on! Why not? Ain't I got class enough for you?"

"Oh yes, but—Please, let me by."

He stared at her, and his hands twitched, and his lips. His eyes ran over her face and her bosom as if she were a forbidden text. She was trying to remember what Duane had told her about the way to quell a man. With great difficulty and in all trepidation she parroted her old formula.

"Mr. Gerst, you don't have to flirt with me. I don't expect it, and I don't like it, so please let me go."

He stared at her, trying to understand her amazing foreign language. Then he sniffed with amused unbelief, dropped his hands, and stood aside.

Daphne could hardly believe her eyes. The charm had worked the third time! She darted forward to get away before the spell was broken. As she passed him—whether he suddenly changed his mind or had only pretended to acquiesce—he enveloped her in his arms.

She almost swooned in the onset of fear and the suffocation of his embrace. Then she fought him, striking, scratching, writhing. He crowded her against the nearest table and tried to wrench her lips across her left elbow.

Her outflung right hand struck against an inkwell, recognized it as a weapon of a sort, and clutching it, swept it up and emptied it into his face.

His satyric leer vanished in a black splash. His hands went to his drenched eyes. Daphne, released, dropped the inkwell and fled to the locker-room while he stamped about, howling like the blinded Cyclops. Daphne did not stay to taunt him nor to demand her wages. She caught a glimpse of faces at the fire-escape windows, but, hugging her hat and coat, she made good her escape.

She knew what she was escaping from, but not what to.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcels post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

The Antrim Woman's Club being entertained yesterday on the subject of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, and some of the incidents of the very busy life, brings to our mind the impression she made upon us when we were but a small boy. A few times I remember of hearing her preach in the pulpit of the South Harwich Methodist church; and as a woman preacher was a very rare article in those former days, the appearance in the pulpit and what she said—in addition to the way she said it—is a thing which has lingered with me these number of years. We remember her as a very able and persistent laborer and her ability to be persistent won for her the name she enjoyed all the latter part of her life—and her works do follow her!

The Successful Farmer Raises Bigger Crops and cuts down costs by investment in labor-saving machinery.

Good prices for the farmers' crops encourage new investment, more production and greater prosperity.

But the success of agriculture depends on the growth of railroads—the modern beasts of burden that haul the crops to the world's markets.

The railroads—like the farms—increase their output and cut down unit costs by the constant investment of new capital.

With fair prices for the work they do, the railroads are able to attract new capital for expanding their facilities.

Rates high enough to yield a fair return will insure railroad growth, and prevent costly traffic congestion, which invariably results in poorer service at higher cost.

National wealth can increase only as our railroads grow.

Poor railroad service is dear at any price. No growing country can long pay the price of inadequate transportation facilities.

FAR EAST ATHLETES TO COMPETE

Sixty Huts Now Being Operated by Red Triangle

Prague, Czechoslovakia.—Sixty Y. M. C. A. buildings, staffed by fifty secretaries, are now in operation in Czechoslovakia, and plans for further extension have been approved by President Masaryk and his ministers. Huts are dotted over Moravia, Bohemia, Slovakia and that part of Silesia which is included in the new republic.

Some of the stations are castles, others are barracks or private dwellings. At Komarno, the government turned over to the association a handsome building formerly used as the Austrian officers' clubhouse. Now the common soldiers write their letters and see the movies inside its palatial walls.

Every soldier in Czechoslovakia is familiar with the Red Triangle of the "Y" and what it stands for. Interpreted in Czech, the four letters of the association are "Vojensky Domov".

The government through President Masaryk and the Minister of National Defense, Klofach, has aided and backed the work at every turn. Buildings have been furnished at the expense of the government, fifty soldiers and several officers have been assigned to assist in carrying on the activities, transportation of men and material is granted. In addition to further courtesies such as free telephone and telegraph service, franking privileges on mail and other accommodations.

In connection with the "Y" "Domov" at Zilina, there is a Y. M. C. A. training school. New secretaries, officers and soldiers assigned from the army to "Y" work and civilians interested in the work are sent there for special courses.

Through an arrangement with the government, 75 athletic officers were recently given an intensive ten days' training, for work with the army. The foregoers were spent in the class rooms where they not only took classes and received information on military games recommended for soldiers, but learned something of the history of American athletics and outdoor games.

In the election of delegates to the Republican National Convention it has been the unbroken custom to divide the delegates equally between the two congressional districts. This custom has never been varied. With New Hampshire entitled to eight delegates, four at large and two from each congressional district, the natural division has been to give two delegates-at-large to each congressional district.

At one time, owing to the fact that no one from the Second District except Senator Keyes had expressed a willingness to go as a delegate-at-large, it looked as if three delegates-at-large might be conceded to the First District.

There were strong expressions of dissent in the Second District to any arrangement of this kind.

It is this dissent that has undoubtedly led to the announcement of National Committeeman Estabrook of Nashua as a candidate for delegate-at-large from the Second District.

This announcement is made for him by his fellow-townsman, Hon. William D. Swart, who was a member of Governor Keyes' Council. Senator Keyes and Mr. Estabrook, as delegates-at-large from the Second District, insure New Hampshire two men in the Republican National Convention of country-wide acquaintance and reputation to champion the cause of New Hampshire's favorite son. With an abundance of candidates in the First Congressional District, all apparently for General Wood, the state will send a strong and influential delegation to Chicago.

During his service as national committeeman Mr. Estabrook has met Republican leaders all over the country and his relations with them have been most intimate and friendly. With our entire Congressional delegation and our national committeeman behind the Wood candidacy there can be no doubt as to the unanimity of New Hampshire's choice.

It is reported that efforts will be made in the First Congressional District to so adjust matters that there will be only two candidates for delegates-at-large from that district. This will be in accord with the universal custom of apportioning the delegates-at-large equally between the two congressional districts. Whether such an adjustment occurs or not, whatever of the several candidates for delegates-at-large in the First District are elected will be for General Wood's nomination. There has been no suggestion anywhere in the state that the election will be decided by a run-off election.

"Bachelor of Commerce."

The plan of the University of London to grant degrees in commerce is attracting much attention. Under this scheme it is proposed to grant the degree of bachelor of commerce to candidates who pass the necessary examinations after a three years' course of study. Those who so desire may later proceed to the degree of master of commerce, after a minimum of two years' practical experience in the particular trade or industry taken up.

The first year's course comprises the compulsory subjects of organization of industry, banking, trade and transports, modern economic development of the British empire and of the chief foreign countries; elementary commercial law, and statistical method. The second and final year will be devoted to specialization.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally; else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Merrimack County Plans Big Station
For Distribution

It is quite probable that Merrimack county will soon be organized into a Central Distributing station which will be located in Concord, for the trading and packing of farm products, and, with this end in view, a committee consisting of George M. Putnam of Contoocook, Warren Tripp of Spofford and George E. Hill of Concord, has been appointed to look into the advisability of establishing such a plant there.

The Merrimack County Farmers' Exchange are responsible for the project and the committee held a meeting at the Farm Bureau rooms to formulate plans whereby they could get in touch with the different towns in the county and thereby get an expression from the farmers in the different localities with regard to the matter.

The idea is to have two distinctive departments, the distributing station and a plant suitable for storage purposes for grain and other supplies. If this is established it can be readily figured out that it will be a great saving as far as the producer is concerned.

To Build Moderate Priced Houses

At a special meeting of members of the Lebanon Chamber of Commerce, it was voted to build ten houses of moderate price, suitable for the use of employees of the various factories and mills in town. Plans will at once go forward toward picking out sites, etc. Lebanon has long been suffering from lack of houses and apartments for mill employees and this decision will bring relief to the situation.

The Constitutional Convention

When the members of the Constitutional Convention assembled Tuesday of last week it was well understood that the appropriation by the state would be exhausted in a few days, and there would be no means of paying the delegates. It was apparent that a final adjournment was in sight, and business moved with commendable despatch. The first business in order was consideration of the resolution for the initiative and referendum, and this was tabled with neatness and despatch. Another relating to pensions followed it, and then the convention resolved itself into committee of the whole to consider Mr. Lyford's resolution for a reduction in the members of the House of Representatives. An earnest debate followed as to whether the apportionment should be on the number of names on the check list or the ballots cast for presidential electors. Before final adjournment for the day the district system of reducing the size of the house was quietly voted down.

Wednesday morning, Mr. Metcalf of Concord eulogized the 31 members of the convention who have died since their election and offered appropriate resolutions which were adopted. Mr. Dean of Danbury drove another peg looking to the expediting of business by offering a resolution that no member should speak more than 10 minutes on any question. The Lyford resolution then came up in an amended form and the convention went into committee of the whole.

The resolution provides that the whole number of ballots cast at an election shall be the basis of representation, and this was accepted with but little opposition.

A reconsideration of the vote on taxation of wood and timber was asked for, but on a roll call the reconsideration was denied by a vote of more than two to one. The evident purpose appeared to put the members of the convention on record.

A report of inexpedient by the committee on resolution No. 9, relating to trials by jury was adopted, and then the following went into the scrap heap:

No. 28, relating to the state senate. No. 23, relating to the right of suffrage.

No. 26, relating to salaries of the members of the General Court.

No. 24, relating to suffrage and the right to hold office.

Two or three resolutions were reported inexpedient Thursday morning, but when Rev. William Hathaway Pound of Wolfeboro asked the convention to express itself in favor of the immediate ratification of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations it looked as if he had started something. His resolution was sidetracked for some routine business, and when it could have been taken up, Mr. Pound had departed, and it was laid upon the table.

The finance committee reported a pay roll of $23,335.91 for 419 members for 17 days.

Seven amendments will be submitted to the people on a special ballot at the November election. They provide for a tax on incomes; for taxes on property passing by will or inheritance; giving the Governor authority to approve or disapprove separate items in appropriation bills, providing for a House of Representatives of not less than 300 nor more than 325, the total number of ballots cast at Presidential elections to be the basis; amending the Bill of Rights in regard to those having conscientious scruples in regard to bearing arms; amending the Bill of Rights by eliminating the word "Protestant"; amending the Bill of Rights in regard to pensions.

The convention reached a final adjournment at 4:30 after the usual felicitations.

REMODELING POULTRY HOUSE

Many Stuffy Old Structures Can Be Rebuilt With Little Trouble—Cost Is Small.

Many farms have old style, closed-up poultry houses with poor light and ventilation; also old sheds and other buildings of little use for other purposes that can be remodeled or built over with little difficulty into satisfactory poultry houses, according to the United States department of agriculture.

A building of that kind usually can be made over for less than one-half the cost of constructing a new one, and if the work is well done should give just as good results. Furthermore, the work performed in remodeling the building serves as a good poultry club demonstration in poultry house construction.

KEEP ALL PROFITABLE HENS

Close Attention and Study Must Be Given to Each Individual Fowl—Some Are Layers.

Keep all hens as long as they are profitable. This calls for close attention and the study of each individual hen, but it is work that pays. The man who turns off every hen that reaches the age of two years is pretty sure to sacrifice some of his best layers.

POULTRY NOTES

Clean, dry litter, clean water pails and mash hoppers are essential to the health of good layers.

All air that is admitted for ventilation should be so handled that it will not blow on the fowls, especially when they are on the roost at night.

One of the best ways to furnish green food is to hang a cabbage head just high enough so that the fowls will have to jump for it.

A warm, comfortable henhouse will do much to secure a good egg yield, for fowls that are not comfortable cannot lay well.

There is not much danger that healthy, vigorous fowls will become too fat, if compelled to exercise by scratching for the grain part of their ration.

It is necessary to provide the hens with some reason for exercising in winter because they have no incentive to exercise naturally, as they do in summer hunting for bugs and worms, etc.

POULTRY FACTS

TWO BREEDS IN SAME FLOCK

Crossing Is Prevented by Keeping Male of One Breed One Year and Another the Next

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While keeping two distinct breeds of poultry in one yard without mixing the breeds seems difficult, it can be accomplished easily and with satisfactory results, as shown by the account of an experience just received from a New England poultry raiser. One of the kinds kept is a so-called egg breed, the other being a general-purpose variety of poultry. The method of preventing crossing is as follows:

One year, roosters of the egg-laying breed are retained and used for breeding, no other males being kept. The

MEANT TO SERVE AS BEACON THANKFUL HE DIDN'T STOP

Statue of Liberty at New York Is Not Fulfilling Original Purpose of Designer.

The statue of Liberty, in New York harbor, is electrically illuminated—that is, so flooded with light as to be rendered brightly visible at night.

Originally, however, the idea was to make it serve as a beacon, and for this purpose the "flame" of the lady's torch was cut at the sides, the openings fitted with glass, and nine duplex arc lamps placed inside.

Thus was obtained a light which, upheld at a height of 305 feet above the water, was visible twenty-four miles out at sea, or ten miles beyond the anchorage of the outside lightship. Its maintenance was assigned to the government lighthouse board.

But the lighthouse board declared that it had little or no usefulness as an aid to navigation, its value being purely sentimental, and in 1902 the light was extinguished, the business of illuminating the statue being handed over to the war department.

A Terror, Perhaps!

"Bessie, why don't you try to be a good little girl?" "I do try 'awfully hard,'" "But you don't succeed very well," "Why, mother, just think how bad I'd be if I didn't try at all!" Life.

Mistakes of the past should be made over into guideboards of the future.

After Such a "Break" There Was Only One Bright Spot Left In Drummer's Memory.

Men Are Blind.

The first of the reasons for similar conditions in Israel assigned in our context is that the people were blind.

They did not see. They had so persistently declined to see, that God had taken away from them the power to see.

The blindness of today is chiefly spiritual. Men will not look at the truth. Many in Christian churches today are not informed on what is in the Bible, simply because they will not open their eyes to see. They have been taught to believe certain things, and when anything different is presented, their prejudice prevents investigation. While declining to go over to the ranks of the rejectors of the truth openly, they withdraw from active Christian work and sink into the mass of the non-churchgoing world.

Man says, "I am not learned." Is it true that today we have a condition of ignorance as to religious truth? Investigate the so-called purveyors of truth of today. They are either ignorant of the truth, or, being informed of the truth, are false to it. Do the preachers know the truth? Or, if they know the truth, are they so degenerate as to conceal it? Ignorance of the truths of the Christian religion is the underlying cause of the success of religious fads of the day. The knowledge of the truth is a bulwark against error. It is not sufficient for a man to say, "I am not learned;" he ought to be learned.

The prophet says that it is because the leaders of the people are blind and ignorant. "The prophets and your rulers and seers hath he covered." The true prophet, the good leader, God has taken away; but unfortunately there are those who pose in their places, and they are blind leaders of the blind.

The seers of today are mere guessers at the truth, giving out but the "precepts of men."

What is the Remedy?

Let the leaders and the people open their eyes to the truth. "But where are we to find the truth?" one asks. There is just one answer: We are to find that truth in the Bible. We do not have any hesitation in saying that we should stand on the old Book.

The Catholic church broke down after many centuries of trial, and Protestantism came to the front; but now Protestantism is breaking down.

The church has lost its grip, and its present movement to rehabilitate itself by such efforts as the raising of vast sums of money and by scientific investigation and organization is doomed to failure. God in these movements is largely forgotten, whatever may be the protestations to the contrary.

Christianity.

Christianity did not come from heaven to be the amusement of an idle hour, or the food of mere imagination; to be "as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and playeth well upon an instrument." It is intended to be the guide and companion of all our hours—the serious occupation of our whole existence.—Bishop Jebb.

A Staggering People

By REV. J. H. BALSTON, D.D.
Secretary of Correspondence Dept.,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.—Isa. 29:9.

In the text and context we read of a condition in the days of Isaiah or shortly thereafter. Most of those who were guiding public opinion were speaking words of confidence, assuring the people that nothing direful was ahead; while a very few, faithful prophets, such as Isaiah, were truthfully telling the people of coming trouble. There were confusion, uncertainty, fear taking hold of the masses. Is there any indication that there is similar staggering in our day?

What is stable nowadays? Witness the uncertainty, unrest, agitation, social confusion. The holiday season that has just passed has been one of the most remarkable in the history of the country—period of wild extravagance, indeed, of delirium, with an utter disregard to God and religion, and to even the commonplaces of morality. The contentions in industrial life are more bitter than ever. One strike follows another in rapid succession. In the moral sphere we find that there is an increase in profanity, desecration of the Lord's day and sensuality—all of this notwithstanding the formal destruction of the liquor traffic. As a rule churches are empty or sparsely attended, or, where the congregations are large, the people are attracted to them for the same reason that they attend the "movies"—entertainment; there being, of course, some exceptions. Orthodox churches fraternize freely with liberal and skeptical churches, because they are not sufficiently consecrated to maintain the truth at sacrifice to themselves, yet fear to give up all forms of religion. The world is staggering—and why?

Men Are Blind.

The first of the reasons for similar conditions in Israel assigned in our context is that the people were blind. They did not see. They had so persistently declined to see, that God had taken away from them the power to see. The blindness of today is chiefly spiritual. Men will not look at the truth. Many in Christian churches today are not informed on what is in the Bible, simply because they will not open their eyes to see. They have been taught to believe certain things, and when anything different is presented, their prejudice prevents investigation. While declining to go over to the ranks of the rejectors of the truth openly, they withdraw from active Christian work and sink into the mass of the non-churchgoing world.

Man says, "I am not learned." Is it true that today we have a condition of ignorance as to religious truth? Investigate the so-called purveyors of truth of today. They are either ignorant of the truth, or, being informed of the truth, are false to it. Do the preachers know the truth? Or, if they know the truth, are they so degenerate as to conceal it? Ignorance of the truths of the Christian religion is the underlying cause of the success of religious fads of the day. The knowledge of the truth is a bulwark against error. It is not sufficient for a man to say, "I am not learned;" he ought to be learned.

The prophet says that it is because the leaders of the people are blind and ignorant. "The prophets and your rulers and seers hath he covered." The American officers who came to the courts at Cannes to compete for the army tennis championship were required on their arrival to report to Colonel Johnson, the organizer. When one competitor came in, Colonel Johnson, according to American Lawn Tennis, looked up and said:

"Are you a tennis player?"

The lieutenant looked a little bashful and replied:

"Well, I think I am—at least, I have orders to prove it."

How did forty below strike you for cold weather on Sunday morning? Well, it wasn't that cold everywhere in town, but in certain places the thermometer reached this point we are told.

As our ex-service boys are affiliated with the Antrim American Legion, they will be interested in the supper given for their benefit on next week Thursday evening; also the notice in this paper concerning the memorial service in Antrim town hall Sunday afternoon, February 22.

Our tax collector has certainly been on his job the past year and accomplished something. We are told that Tax Collector Keeser has collected every poll tax except one (who died before he paid) and every dollar on real and personal property with but one exception.

From the Town Clerk's report, prepared for the annual town report: it is found that there were 14 births registered in this town during the past year, although one should have been received by him earlier and entered in the report of the year previous. There were five marriages recorded here, all of whom (excepting one) residing in town at time of marriage. 17 deaths were registered here, three being brought here for burial.
