Town Should Give Careful Attention to Matter

Mr. Editor:

I have no desire to criticize any one because I presume that the conditions which exist in this section of the town at the present time may have been unavoidable, but I feel that if these conditions are to be remedied in the future it is well that the people outside should know them.

For 15 years I carried the mail through this section and if my memory serves me right there was never a time when North Branch was not reached by the carrier for two days at a time.

At this time some people have been deprived of this service for two days and at this writing it looks as if they would have to meet the carrier on the way or go without their daily paper for some days to come.

Further than this, one family with the wife sick in bed has been shut in, with no chance of getting out in case of fire or for a doctor, while the husband has been shoveling with very little help to open a track to the nearest neighbor.

Now it is foolish to say that we never had such a storm before, because we have had, and probably will have again. So it is a condition for which we should prepare.

I doubt if there is a worse road, all things considered, in town, to keep open through the winter months than the one through the Campbell pond district.

I have advocated that the town erect a wind break, which it seems to me would help a lot in preventing the snow from piling up in this particular section.

I don't know what the expense would be, but if the town is to be deprived of one roller, which by the way has been rotting within a stone's throw of my house beside the road since last Spring, and if as it is claimed it is impossible to get horses enough to handle a roller if we had one to take its place, then I submit the town must consider some such means to remedy an evil which has existed for years and will for years to come.

It is not surprising that two houses are closed on this road, and more will follow if prospects do not improve.

Again, the Government laid out a rural mail route over this road, and the people can get redress through the Government if they ask for it, if the roads are not kept passable.

I dislike to believe that the people at the village are unmindful of the fact that it is to the rural districts they must look for many things which go to alleviate the almost unbearable conditions which exist today, and I hope that they will consider things in a true light and see if there is not some way in which farms may be made more attractive so that they may do their share in solving the question of the high cost of living.

CHILD WELFARE

A Sanitary School House Said to be Needed

The following article is contributed by an earnest worker in the Antrim Woman's Club, and hopes we can find space for its publication: —Ed.

All over the country during the past year the study of child welfare has been one of paramount importance.

The terrible neglect of the health of the children of this country was made evident by the physical examinations carried on during the selective draft. It wakened the men and women of this country to the great necessity of caring for the health of the children. Accordingly, organizations for child welfare sprang up all over the country and thousands of public-spirited men and women pledged themselves to this work of caring for the health of the children of this great land of ours.

If there were more legislation to control child welfare in New Hampshire our rural districts would be obliged to provide more sanitary conditions in the schools.

In order to provide this, money is needed and it is about time our tax payers and the parents of this town woke up to the fact, that if you desire healthy, normal children they must be surrounded by healthy, sanitary conditions.

What was good enough for the last generation, or rather what the last generation put up with through ignorance of right conditions, is criminal now.

Germs are peculiar. They do not go to work as soon as they are taken into the system, they lie dormant until such time as the system is right for them to get in their deadly work; so an apparently healthy young child may develop very unhealthy conditions in a later stage of life, that was the condition discovered among the boys at camp. Therefore, we must protect the health of the child from the beginning and it cannot be done in an unsanitary place.

Is the health of the child important? Is it of any commercial value? Are good roads more essential?

Perhaps it may occur to some of our voting citizens after duly considering this subject of child welfare that it might be possible at the next town meeting to cut down the road appropriation and apply it to having a sanitary schoolhouse to preserve the health of our children.

Is it worth at least a passing thought, for no matter how much money is spent on the roads someone is always grumbling about the conditions of our roads and wondering where the money goes.

Now here is a chance to see where your money goes, for a sanitary school house will stand as a living monument to your interest in the health of the children and to the future generation of citizens. It is the best investment a community can make. Try it out.

ONE ARTICLE

To Appear in the Antrim Town Warrant

A meeting of the Board of Trade directors was held in the Selectmen's room on Wednesday evening, Feb. 11, for the purpose of deciding whether or not there should be placed in the annual Town Warrant an Article relating to the purchase of the Jameson ball grounds as a Soldiers' Memorial Field.

After much discussion it was voted to have the following Article placed in the Warrant for the next Town Meeting:

To see if the Town will vote to buy as a Memorial to the Soldiers, Sailors and Nurses of the World War, the ground on West Street known as Jameson field, for the sum of eight hundred dollars, and appropriate the money therefor; also to appropriate additionally the sum of twenty-two hundred dollars to purchase a suitable Memorial Tablet with the names of these Soldiers, Sailors and Nurses properly inscribed thereon; any balance of this appropriation to be used for improvements on the Memorial Field under the direction of a committee of five to be appointed by the Selectmen, this same committee to have charge of the purchase and erection of the Memorial Tablet, and to serve without pay. Also, to see if the Town will authorize the issuing of Town notes maturing at the rate of five hundred dollars a year to carry the above into effect, or take any other action thereon.

W. R. C. SUPPER

To the Boys of the Local American Legion

The supper given by the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps for the benefit of the William M. Myers Post, No. 50, American Legion, on Thursday evening last, in Odd Fellows banquet hall, was a grand success in every way.

The members of Waverley Lodge generously donated the use of their banquet hall and kitchen for the supper, and in addition opened their lodge room for reception purposes; all the other rooms were at the disposal of the people for use as they saw fit.

Some over one hundred dollars worth of tickets were sold for the supper, and around 250 were fed.

The supper was one of the best our ladies could serve, consisting of cold meats, baked beans, and pastry of every kind and all of the finest quality. Service was one of the noticeable features of the supper and everybody commented on the excellence of it.

The net proceeds of the supper will be around eighty dollars, and the committee in charge have every reason to feel proud of their efforts on this occasion.

The Woman's Club

Mrs. Jessie M. Hall, of Worcester, Mass., Vice President General of the D. A. R., spoke on "Americanization" at the meeting of the Antrim Woman's Club, Tuesday, Feb. 17, at G. A. R. Hall. Molly Aiken Chapter, D. A. R., were invited guests of the Club at this meeting.

Mrs. Hall delivered a most interesting address, emphasizing the importance of Americanizing our Americans. She laid stress on the training of boys and girls for citizenship, stating that this training should commence in the home.

Tea was served and a social period enjoyed at the close of the address.

Verification of Savings Bank Depositors' Books

To the Depositors of the Hillsborough Bridge Guaranty Savings Bank, of Hillsboro, N. H.

The law of this state provides that, "It shall be the duty of every depositor in any savings bank, and of every share-holder of any building and loan association to present his book for verification with the books of the bank or association when notified so to do, at the times fixed by the bank commissioners."

The bank commissioners have selected the month of February in this year as the time for such verification. I have been appointed to examine the depositors' books and compare them with the books of the bank, with the object of correcting any errors that may exist, and for that reason I shall be at the Hillsborough Bridge Guaranty Savings Bank between the hours of 9 a. m. and 12 m. and 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. each day the bank is open during the above-named period, unless the work is sooner completed.

You are requested to present your deposit book, or to forward the same by mail or otherwise, to me at the bank at as early a day as convenient, if possible during the first two weeks, and so avoid having a personal request sent to you. The book will be immediately returned to you after comparison with your account as kept by the bank.

Statements of Newport Citizens Are Always of Interest to Our Readers

To many of our readers the streets of Newport are almost as familiar as those of our own town, and we are naturally interested to read of happenings there. The following report from a well-known and respected resident will be helpful to numbers of men and women here in Antrim.

H. O. Hutchison, Maple St., Newport, N. H., says: "My back occasionally becomes lame and sore across my kidneys. I blame the trouble to being on my feet a great part of the time and to being confined inside. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills excellent for that trouble. They not only remove the pains in my back, but strengthen my kidneys."

BACK GIVEN OUT?

There's surely some reason for that lame, aching back. Likely it's your kidneys. A cold or strain oftentimes congests the kidneys and slows them up. That may be the reason for that nagging backache, those sharp pains, that tired, worn-out feeling. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, with annoying bladder irregularity. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

I used Doan's Kidney Pills and two boxes entirely cured me of kidney trouble."

PISO'S

Wills of the Washingtons

INTERIOR OF THE FAIRFAX COURTHOUSE

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S will and that of Martha Washington are side by side in the century-old brick courthouse at Fairfax, the capital of Fairfax county, Virginia. They are presumably secure against thieves and fire and, so far as may be, against time itself, since they rest in hermetically-sealed steel cases sunk in concrete and velvet curtains shut out the destructive light rays from the pages of the wills exposed through glass to the public view.

What more natural, inasmuch as these wills are priceless national documents and Mount Vernon is in Fairfax county? Nevertheless, it was not always thus. Hence this story of the "Wills of the Washingtons."

George Washington's will was signed at Mount Vernon July 9, 1799, five months before his death. It is in his own handsome, fluent handwriting. It was filed for probate in 1800 in the Fairfax courthouse. It consists of 22 sheets about the size of foolscap, written on both sides.

Through all of a century he who ran so far as Fairfax courthouse might read at his leisure and with his own hands manipulate the original document and at his pleasure thumb and fumble it.

At the beginning of the Civil war the will was taken to Richmond, and there securely hidden. It was returned to Fairfax courthouse when peace had been restored. The years did not tend to its preservation. Its custodians added to its peril of complete obliteration by persistently folding it lengthwise, following the original fold of the clerk of 1800.

In time the pages cracked and divided along the lines of the creasing. Then some past and gone official undertook to repair the damage and prevent extension of it. Bits of glued paper and court plaster were put across the torn creases. As the years went by these patches themselves split, leaving the pages again to fall apart through the center.

Court authorities then decided that the broken parts should be sewn together. This rough and ready surgery was applied. So gradually the manuscript went from bad to worse until most of its 42 pages were in deplorable condition and much of the beautifully written text was practically illegible. In 1910 Herbert Putnam, librarian of congress, asked the Fairfax county authorities for permission to make photographs of the will. They replied that the will was in such forlorn condition that a satisfactory series of photographs of its forty-two pages was impossible.

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition. Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be dependent; it makes any one so. But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions. Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

on this cover except "The Last Will and Testament of Gen'l George Washington."

Washington began his will thus: "In the name of God, Amen! I, George Washington of Mount Vernon, a citizen of the United States and lately president of the same, do make, ordain and declare this instrument which is written with my own hand and every page thereof subscribed with my name to be my last Will & Testament, revoking all others."

Just the same, he omitted his signature from the bottom of page 23, which goes to show that even the model of all the ages was human. Martha Washington's will is dated March 4, 1802, and was admitted to probate by the county court at Fairfax June 21, 1802. It remained in the old courthouse until the Civil war. Union forces occupied Fairfax in 1862 and the will disappeared. For more than 50 years the Fairfax county authorities could find no trace of it.

Upon the death of J. Pierpont Morgan in 1913 it became known that the missing will was one of the most prized articles of his great collection of historic documents. Fairfax county thereupon undertook to regain possession of it.

J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., declined to give up the will. He offered, however, to let Fairfax have a photographic reproduction, provided Fairfax would let him have a similar reproduction of George Washington's will.

This offer was declined. The Virginia legislature was then appealed to, with the result that an act was passed directing the attorney general of the state to bring suit to recover the original document. The bill was filed in the Supreme court.

In the meantime, in correspondence with the Virginia state authorities, Mr. Morgan first objected to the manner in which he had been approached, then offered to return the will provided it was placed at Mount Vernon instead and in a vault to be constructed by him. This and all other conditions were refused. Finally, in 1915, when the case was about to come to trial Mr. Morgan capitulated and handed over the will to the Fairfax county authorities.

Thereupon the secret of the disappearance and whereabouts of the will was cleared up. For, pasted on the fly-leaf of the handsome folder which the elder Morgan had used to protect the will, was found the following signed statement by the woman from whom he had purchased the document in 1803:

"Lieut. Col. David Thomson, commanding the Eighty-second regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, was during the spring or autumn of 1862, stationed at Fairfax courthouse. Va. His headquarters were in the courthouse building. The safes had previous to this been broken open by the Bleckers, a command of men noted for their reckless vandalism. The papers were on the floor and had been destroyed in large quantities (and) used to kindle fires. My father, going into the office, found his men shoveling the material from the floor for this use—called them to stop, and, looking over them, found the document in question. Just preceding his death, in 1892, he gave the document to me to be done with as I thought proper."

(Signed) MARY ESPY THOMSON, 2855 Irving Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.

Martha Washington's will is a long one, is written on pages of foolscap and is remarkably well preserved. Any one who doubts that Martha Washington was a good business woman should read the will.

Also, the will has a postscript, which shows that the wife of the "Father" of this country was also human.

Jinxed. One hot day I met Browne as he was getting out of his car. We are both auto fans, and naturally fell to discussing our machines. "I'm certainly Jonah'd this season," said he, mournfully. "I've had ten tires go bad on me since the first of May."

"Gee whiz!" I exclaimed, sympathetically. The words were scarcely out of my mouth when a terrific explosion occurred in the rear of Browne's car. The extra tire strapped to the back of his car had exploded. He had pumped it up too hard and the extreme heat had done the rest.—Exchange.

Dwarfs in History

Dwarfs, until very recent days, have been highly regarded and much sought after. In far-away days kings have fought over dwarfs, and a court that possessed one was considered very fortunate and altogether stylish. Wealthy folk, even, competed with monarchs in the purchase of dwarfs as a sort of hall-mark of aristocracy. A race of tiny people in Equatorial Africa, the Akkas, were much prized by the early

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder is Troubling You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and leggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, also you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils to Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, give you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.—Adv.

Tramp Engaged in Much More Important Occupation Than Merely Looking for Work.

A big, strong, healthy-looking fellow knocked at the kitchen door and asked for something to eat, but the woman was not charitably disposed.

"Why don't you get some work?" she snapped.

"I haven't time, ma'am."

"Haven't time?" she asked in surprise.

"No, ma'am; I'm busy."

"Busy, indeed," she said sarcastically. "I'd like to know what keeps you busy?"

"Tearin' round from house to house, ma'am."

"What?"

"Tearin' round from house to house, ma'am, tryin' to get something to eat, takes up all my time, so I don't have any left to work in. That's the whole truth, ma'am; and if you don't give me a bite I'll have to waste two or three precious hours, ma'am, lookin' for somebody that will!"

Small Town People Had a Great Idea, but it Was Disappointing to the "Drummer."

A commercial traveler arrived for the first time at a small country town one evening. Early next morning he was awakened by a great blowing of whistles, steam sirens, buzzers, etc.

Rejoicing in the thought of doing a lot of business, he asked the hotel proprietor later on:

"This is quite a manufacturing town, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes; we're pretty busy," was the proud reply.

"What kind of factories have you?"

"Well"—this time more slowly—"four principally."

"Only four?"

"Yes, that's all as yet. But our flour mill's a good one."

"But I heard at least a dozen whistles going this morning."

"You did," agreed the proprietor, dropping his voice, confidentially, "but they are all at the flour mill. You see, we got the whistles we should want for the factories we are going to have, and put them in to make the town sound more lively. Quite 'cited,' ain't it?"—London Answers.

A Real Finish.

"I understand you have put the finishing touch on your new home." "Yes; just put a mortgage on it."

A man by the name of Frank Canney, of Rochester, this state, was in town over Saturday night. His business here was to open a safe belonging to Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellow which had not been in use for some time, owing to a difficulty with the combination.

Rev. M. A. Dawber, professor at Boston University, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday morning last, and owing to the severity of the weather only a small congregation was present. In the evening he preached at the union service at the Presbyterian church to a small congregation. Rev. Dawber is an eloquent speaker, and along the line of rural community work has no equal in this section of the country. His sermons were interesting and instructive. At the close of the evening service he gave his hearers a recital on the reed organ, at which he is also an expert.

More Winter

It is presumed that everybody in this section knows all about the storm conditions that have prevailed the past week and the inconveniences that many have experienced as a result, yet nothing of a serious nature has come to our attention. Trains and mails are very much later than during the storm of a week ago, and in consequence express and freights are also slow; in fact freights seem to be a minus quantity. Even with these conditions in our midst they are not nearly so bad as in many other places, for most of the delays in our train service are due to blockades and rail trouble in places that affect the connections with trains running on this branch.

The Successful Farmer Raises Bigger Crops and cuts down costs by investment in labor-saving machinery.

Good prices for the farmers' crops encourage new investment, more production and greater prosperity.

But the success of agriculture depends on the growth of railroads—the modern beasts of burden that haul the crops to the world's markets.

The railroads—like the farms—increase their output and cut down unit costs by the constant investment of new capital.

With fair prices for the work they do, the railroads are able to attract new capital for expanding their facilities.

Rates high enough to yield a fair return will insure railroad growth, and prevent costly traffic congestion, which invariably results in poorer service at higher cost.

National wealth can increase only as our railroads grow.

Poor railroad service is dear at any price. No growing country can long pay the price of inadequate transportation facilities.

N. E. GIRL TEACHER IN GERMANY

Has Charge of School for Allied Officers' Children

Coblenz, Germany.—Miss Leonora Mulletts, of Malden, Mass., formerly a teacher in the public schools of that city, is in charge of the kindergartens classes here in the new Y. M. C. A. school for the children of army officers and members of the Inter-Allied Rhineland commission. The pupils attend classes four days a week and spend the fifth accompanied by their instructors on an excursion to some point of interest made famous in fairy tales.

The "Mouse Tower on the Rhine," familiar to every youngster since his cradle days, has now become a reality to the 50 or more little "shavers" from America, whose parents happen to be in the occupied area of Germany. They hear the story of Siegfried in school and immediately set out to visit the spot the composer made famous. In a like manner they have lived over again the tales in Hans Anderson's story books.

Children from 5 to 16 years of age attend the school, all subjects being taught from the primary grades to the college preparatory course. In addition the American boys and girls now in Coblenz are receiving the benefit of special courses in German and French taught by native teachers.

The pupils not only are acquiring a full knowledge of folk lore along with the customary school course, but they are receiving instruction about commercial lines that will be beneficial in later years. It is claimed. They were taken to the vineyards during grape picking time and watched the entire process of wine making from the time the grapes left the vine until they went into bottles.

The school was started by the Y. M. C. A. two months ago as the result of the presence of many American children in Coblenz, and the fact that there was no suitable school for them to attend. Army cooperation in the way of suitable building, comfortably heated and well equipped, has enabled the Y. M. C. A. to carry on regular classes under four trained teachers.

WELFARE WORK TO CONTINUE

Sec. Baker Requests "Y" to Continue Service in Rhineland

Boska.—At the special request of Gen. Allen, commanding the American Forces in Germany, Secretary of War Newton D. Baker has instructed the Y. M. C. A., to continue its welfare work in the Rhineland, despite the fact that in home camps activities of that kind have been taken over by the army. The Y and the Salvation Army are the only organizations catering to the 17,000 soldiers in an area around Coblenz.

The troops are scattered over a large part of the area held by Gen. Dickman's Army of Occupation last summer. The force includes the units sent over seas to do guard duty in Silesia. The men are comfortably billeted, have plenty of excellent, well cooked food and all the entertainment they want, Miss Virginia Newcomb chief of the women personnel, said yesterday on her arrival home after nearly two years abroad.

Miss Newcomb, who was formerly the executive secretary of women's war work, Columbia University, returned to New York to take charge of the women's departments of the Institute of International Relations at Columbia.

The Y recently leased the great festhalle at Coblenz, she said, after returning it to the Germans at the time the peace treaty was signed. In order to get the building the association agreed to allow the German Philharmonic society to use the auditorium two evenings a week.

The galleries are reserved entirely for the American Army and members of the Inter-Allied Rhineland commission and their staffs and soldiers are not allowed on the main floor during the concerts, Miss Newcomb said.

Victory hut on the grounds of the Ex-Kaiser's palace and one of the Y's largest overseas buildings is now being salvaged, but Liberty hut nearby, is well equipped as a gymnasium and is one of the most popular places in Coblenz. Bowling alleys have been added to the list of indoor sports during the winter months.

Owing to the extreme scarcity of coal, efforts have been made to centralize many of the activities in the festhalle. A cafeteria has been opened there and for 20 cents an American soldier can get a meal of soup, meat, two vegetables and a dessert.

Women far outnumber the men in the force of welfare workers at the American bridgehead. There are now 61 canteen girls, including a group of teachers in the soldiers' night school and other instructors in the school conducted for children of army officers and members of the Rhine commission.

Miss Newcomb strongly recommended to Mrs. F. Louis Slade, head of the women's department of the National War Work Council that an additional force be sent over to assist those already on the ground.

"What they used to call the decent thing we call indecent. You said yourself that marriage without love was horrible. And it is; it's all quarrel and nagging and deceit. If people are faithful to each other morally they seem to quarrel all the more. Long ago I vowed I'd never marry, and I don't intend to. I don't want to marry you. But I want your life."

"Mr. Duane! Really, this is outrageous."

"No, it isn't! Hush and listen, honey—Miss Kip—Daphne—whatever you'll let me call you. I told you I was stunk, starving, crazy mad about you. When I think of you looking for work, living in that awful spare room of those awful Chivvies—when I think of you going from place to place at the mercy of such men as you're sure to meet—when I think of you waiting for poor Wimburn to get out of the poorhouse, I want to grab you in my arms and run away with you. It breaks my heart to see you in distress and anxiety; for I want you to have everything beautiful and cheerful in the world. And I can get it all for you. Let me! Let me love you and try to make you happy, won't you?"

She Was More Afraid of Him Now Than Ever.

He had crowded nearer and he held her fast against the door of the car. His right hand clung to hers; his left slid round to her waist. He drew her toward him, staring up beseechingly. He laid his cheek against her left side like a child, the big man pleading to the little woman for mercy.

She felt sorry for him and for herself. She regretted that cruelty was her one unmistakable duty. She had no right to be kind, and charity would be a sin. She wrung her hands free from his with slow persuasion and shook her head pityingly.

He accepted the decision with a nod, but before she could escape from his arm she felt that he pressed his lips against her just above her heart. It was as if he had softly driven a nail into it. Tears flamed to her eyelids and fell on his hands as he carried them to his bent brow. He crossed them on the wheel and hid his face in them, groaning.

"Daphne! Daphne!"

She was more afraid of him now than ever. All the splendors he could promise her were nothing to that profusion of his longing.

While she waited in a battle of impulses, he regained self-control with self-contempt, in a general clench of resolution. "I apologize," he mumbled. "I'm a fool to think that you could love me."

CHAPTER XX.

Duane did not speak till miles and miles of black road had run backward beneath their wheels. Then he scrambled, "What a fool I was to dream of such a thing!"

More miles went under before her curiosity led her to say, faintly, "What were you dreaming of?"

He laughed, and did not answer for another while. Then he laughed again.

"Do you really want to know?"

"I think so."

"Well, you couldn't hate me any more than you do, so I'll tell you. I said to myself that I would never be the slave of any woman."

"It's not that I am stingy about my money, not that I wouldn't take the greatest pleasure in pauperizing myself for the woman I loved, but that I want her to take my gifts as gifts, not as a tax or a salary. Some of these women think they are doing a man a tremendous favor by letting him support them. That doesn't get me a little bit. I believe a man does a woman just as much honor as she does him, and sacrifices a blamed sight more. He gives up his freedom, and if she gives up hers, she's only giving up something she doesn't know how to use anyway."

Daphne had rarely found a man who would talk to her with Duane's frankness, and if there is anything that interests a woman more than another it is to hear womankind analyzed, even satirized. She was eager for more vinegar.

"You won't be shocked and angry?" he asked.

"I don't think so."

"You don't know how pleasant it is to talk life and love to a woman who doesn't rear up and feel insulted at everything. At first you gave me a couple of how-dare-you's, but they don't count. And if you do hate me a little more, why, so much the better. When I thought you had broken with Wimburn I said to myself, 'She's the one girl in the world for me. I'm going to ask her to marry me.' But I was afraid to, for I was afraid of marriage. And then—I— Well, I'd better not— Yes, I will, I said. 'She believes that men and women are equal and have equal rights, and she's going to get out and hustle for herself, like a little man. Maybe she could learn to love, me well enough to go into a partnership of hearts.' That's what I said to myself. You mustn't think it's because I don't want to cleave to one woman; it's because I do. But I hate handcuffs. Do you see? And now you know what I was dreaming of. What do you think of it?"

The answer to his long oration was complete silence. Duane waited for his answer, and, not getting it, laughed harshly: "Well, that's that. The next number on our program will be a ballad entitled 'I Never Dream but I Bump My Head.' Go on! Marry Clay Wimburn on nothing a year and live miserably ever after."

She said nothing to this, either. Duane was in a wretched state of bafflement. He put the car to its places, and it ripped through space at fifty miles an hour. Daphne had a new terror added to the load of her nerves.

The car went bounding up a steep incline toward the swerve of a headland cut in rigid silhouette by the far-reaching searchlight of a car approaching from the other direction. Duane kept well to the outside of the road, but just as he met the other motor and winced in the dazzle of its lamps, a third car trying to pass it on the curve hurtled into the narrow space with a blaze like lightning searing the eyes. There was a yelling and hooting of horns and a sense of disaster.

Daphne bent her head and prayed for life, but without faith. Duane, half-blinded, swung his front wheels off the road and grazed a wall. The rear wheels were not quick enough. The other car smote them, crumpling the mudguard and slicing off the rear lamp.

Daphne was thrown this way and that, and it seemed that her spine must have snapped in a dozen places. When she opened her eyes again the car was standing still. Duane turned to her with terrified questions, and his hands visited her face and her arms and shoulders. He held her hands fast and peered into her eyes while she promised him that she was not dead.

The car that had bested his did not return, but the other did, offering help from a safe distance till its identity was established. In the light of its lamp Duane got down and examined his own car. Besides the damages in the rear, it had sustained a complete fracture of the front axle, a twisted fender, and a shattered headlight.

The driver of the other car came up and joined the coroner's inquest. He stared at Duane, and cried in the tone of an English aristocrat, "Goddamn my soul, ain't you Tom Duane?"

Duane, blinking in the light, peered at him and said: "Yop! I can't see you, but the voice would be Wetherell's."

"Right-o; it's me. Oh, pardon me, you're not alone. Nobody hurt, I hope and pray."

"No, but we're pretty far from home and country."

"I see! Hum-m! Pity I couldn't get the number of the swine that hit you. I rather fancy I'll have to give you a lift—what? I was out on a tangaroo hunt, but that will wait—if you don't mind trusting yourself to bad company."

Duane lowered his voice anxiously. "Is it very bad?"

Wetherell put the mute on his voice. "As good as yours, I'll wager. But let's not go into family history. Come along and we'll take you to the next neutral port. That would be—"

"Yonkers."

"Oh, yes. I fancy those were the Yonkers we came through a few miles back. Well, come along."

Duane was embarrassed, but he could do nothing except take Wetherell to his car and introduce him to Daphne. "Miss Kip," he said, "I've got to present Mr. Wetherell. He wants us to ride with him as far as Yonkers. We'll get another car there."

Wetherell came close and said: "Did he say Mrs. Kip? I can't see you, but I hope you are the fascinating Mrs. Kip I met at Newport. Have you forgotten me so soon?"

"I am Miss Kip," said Daphne. "Oh, so sorry! I don't mean that, either. But my Mrs. Kip was a siren—Lella was her first name. I called her De-Lella, you see. And she called me Samson. She was a—"

"She is my brother's wife," said Daphne.

"Oh, you don't tell me!" Wetherell gulped, and his abrupt silence was full of startling implications that alarmed Daphne, angered Duane, and threw Wetherell into confusion.

Duane helped Daphne to alight from the derelict and transferred her to the other car, where Wetherell introduced them to a mass of shadow whose name, "Mrs. Bettany," meant nothing to Daphne and everything to Duane.

Duane arranged to have a wrecking crew sent out to his roadster, and chartered a touring car and a chauffeur for the trip into New York.

He sat back with Daphne and murmured prayers for forgiveness because of the dangers he had carried her into and for the things he had said. Daphne's nerves had been overworked. She had been rushed from adventure to adventure of soul and body. She had been invited to enter a career of gorgeous sin, and she had been swept along the edge of a fearful disaster.

Mrs. Chivvis met Daphne at the door. Her recent affection had turned again to scorn, and she glowered at Daphne, who crept to her room in hopeless acceptance of the role of adventuress.

Tired as she was she could not sleep. The clangor of the morning called her to the window. A gray day broke on a weary town. The problem of debt and food and new clothes dawned again. Everything was gray before her.

Wisdom whispered her to take Duane at his word and try the great adventure. How could it bring her to worse confusion than she found about her now? And then the morning mail arrived and brought her a large envelope addressed in a strange hand. She opened it and took from it a sheaf of photographs.

Her father's image a dozen times repeated lay before her. The untouched proofs omitted never a line, never a wrinkle. One of the pictures looked straight at her. She recalled that once she had stood back of the photographer and her father had caught her eye and smiled just as the bulb was pressed.

She made him smile like that. What would his expression be when he learned that she had "listened to reason," ceased to be his daughter, and become Tom Duane's—

She shuddered back from the word and the thought. She forgot both in the joy of reunion with her father. All the philosophies and wisdoms and luxuries were answered by the logic of that smile.

She lifted his pictured lips to hers with filial eagerness and her tears pattered ruinously on the proof. She Tired as She Was, She Could Not Sleep.

was satisfied to be what the jeweler in Cleveland had called her to Clay Wimburn—"old Wes Kip's girl."

Suddenly she remembered Wetherell and his messages to Lella. She felt so renewedly virtuous herself that it seemed her duty to go down and rebuke Lella for her apparent philandering at Newport. She was also curious to see how guilty Lella would receive the news that Wetherell had asked for her.

But she found Bayard at home for luncheon and she was neither mad nor mean enough to confuse Lella before him. And this was rather for his sake than Lella's.

Lella was just informing Bayard that the butcher had delivered the morning's order no farther than the freight elevator, and instructed his boy to send the meat up only after the money came down.

Bayard had no money and the chagrin of his situation was bitter. He snarled at Lella: "Tell the cub to take the meat back and eat it himself. Then I'll go over and butcher the butcher."

Lella dismissed the boy with a faint-hearted show of indignation. Then she came back and said, "And now we have no meat to eat."

Bayard was reduced to philosophy, the last resort of the desperate; "Well, the vegetarians say we ought never to eat meat, anyway. We're poor, but my Lord! we're in grand company. Look at this cartoon of Cesare's in the Sun—Father Knickerbocker turning his pockets inside out and not a penny in them. New York City has to borrow money on short-time notes at high interest to pay its own current bills."

"Look at Europe. All the countries over there were stumbling along under such debt that they wondered how they could meet the interest on the next pay day. And now they are mortgaging their great-grandsons' property to pay for shooting their sons."

"It's the old Thirteenth Commandment that we've all been smashing to flinders. And, my God! what a punishment we're all getting! And it's only beginning."

They sat down to a pitiful meal—meatless, maidless, mirthless—hardly more than the raw turnips and cold water of Colonel Sellers. Lella fetched what victual there was.

After the meal Bayard shrugged into his overcoat and left without kissing his wife or his sister goodby.

Daphne and Lella went out to the kitchen, set the dishes in the pan, and the pan under the faucet. Lella turned on the hot water. Daphne was glad to be at work.

"There's one good thing about a small meal," she chirped, "it makes less dishes to wash." Then, with as much trepidation as if she had been the accused instead of the accuser she faltered: "Oh, say, Lella, do you remember a man named Wetherell?"

Lella dropped a plate. She said it was hot. But other plates had been hot.

"Wetherell? Wetherell?" she pondered, aloud, with an unconvincing uncertainty. "I believe I do remember meeting somebody of that name. English, wasn't he?"

"Very."

"Oh, yes. He was at Newport, I think. Why?"

"Oh, nothing. I met him last night and he thought I was you."

"How could he?" Lella gasped. "We don't look the least alike."

"It was in the dark."

"In the dark! Good heavens! Where?"

Already Lella had gained the weather gauge. Daphne had to confess her outing with Duane, the crash of the collision and the return to Yonkers in Wetherell's car. Lella took advantage of the situation to interpolate:

"Good heavens! How could you? You of all people! And with Tom Duane! What would Clay think?"

Daphne knew that she had no right to reproach Lella for having known Wetherell in Newport. She had no right even to suspect that Lella had overstepped any of the bounds of propriety. And still she was not convinced of Lella's innocence. She was merely silenced.

CHAPTER XXI.

The next day her fears of Wetherell and of Lella were rekindled. She went down to ask Bayard to help her trace Clay. Bayard was out and Lella was on the point of leaving. She was dressed in her killingest frock and hat and generally accoutered for conquest.

"Aren't we grand!" Daphne cried. "You look like a million dollars. Where are you off to?"

"Going for a little spin."

"Who with?"

Lella hesitated a moment, then answered, with a challenging defiance: "With Mr. Wetherell. Any objection?"

Daphne disapproved and felt afraid; but when Bayard came in unexpectedly early and asked for Lella Daphne lied inevitably and said she did not know where she was.

She tried to be casual about it, but Bayard caught fire at once. He was already in a state of tundry irritability, and Daphne's efforts to reassure him as to Lella's innocence of any guile only angered him the more.

He kept leaning out of the window and staring down into the street. Finally, spying Lella in Wetherell's car when it approached the apartment house, he dashed to the elevator and met the two at the curb.

When Lella got out she was startled to see him standing at her elbow. There was nothing for her to do but make the introductions.

"Oh, it's you, dear!" she fluttered. "I want you to meet Mr. Wetherell. Mr. Wetherell, my husband."

"Ah, really!" Wetherell exclaimed, trying to conceal his uneasiness. "This is a bit of luck! I've heard so much about you! Your wife does nothing but sing your praises."

"Won't you come up?" said Bayard ominously.

"Er—thanks—no, not today. I'm a trifle late to an—appointment."

"Then I'll have a word with you here," said Bayard. "Run along, Lella; I'll join you in a minute."

He said it pleasantly, but Lella was terrified. The spectacle of rival bucks locking horns in her dispute is not altogether enjoyable to a civilized doe. Lella went into the vestibule and watched through the glass door, expecting a combat. She could not hear Bayard saying:

"Mr. Wetherell, I'd thank you to pay your attentions elsewhere."

"What's that?" Wetherell gasped at the abrupt attack.

"Your attentions to Mrs. Kip are very distasteful to me."

"My dear fellow, I hope you don't imagine for one moment that— Why, your wife is the finest little girl in the world!"

"That's for me to say, not you!"

"My word! this is amazing!"

"It is, indeed. It will be more than that if you come around again. Had you heard that your country was at war?"

"I had."

"Well, a big, strapping fellow like you ought to be over there fighting for his country instead of looking for trouble here."

Wetherell's panic at the domestic situation was forgotten in the attack on his patriotism. He drew himself up with an unconsciously military automatism and said, "I fancy I'm doing as much service here as I could do over there."

"More, perhaps," Bayard sneered, with contemptuous irony. "But that's your business, not mine. Mrs. Kip is my business and I don't intend to have her subjected to your attentions. I'm trying to be neutral, but by— Well, I've warned you. Good day!"

Bayard joined Lella in the vestibule and they went up in the elevator together. She waited till they were in their own apartment before she demanded an account of the conversation.

He told her in a rage and she flew into another. She divided her wrath between Bayard and Daphne. There was enough for both. Daphne tried to escape, but being cornered, proceeded to fight back, whereupon Lella denounced her to Bayard and told of her ride with Duane.

It was a right good fight and getting well beyond the bounds of discretion when the telephone announced that Clay Wimburn was calling.

Nobody imaginable would have been welcome in that battlefield, but Clay seemed peculiarly ill timed. Bayard went to the telephone and called down:

"Tell him we're out."

"Yes, sir."

Evidently the telephone was taken from the hallman's hand, for Clay's voice roared in Bayard's ear: "I hear you, you old villain. I know you're in, and I'm coming up. It's a matter of life and death. I'm on my way up now."

It seemed decenter that Lella and Daphne should disappear, since Bayard had said that they were all out. The women retreated to Lella's room as a good cogn of audition.

FIND WEALTH IN WINTER

Canadian Farmers Turn Winter Months to Good Account.

Large crops and good prices for the wheat, oats, barley and flax from Canadian farms have made the winter months in California at times resemble a meeting of a Canadian farmers' institute, but the practice among successful farmers of spending their winters holidaying seems to be on the wane. After all, nothing can be more tiresome than having nothing to do, and the farmers of Western Canada are now finding winter employment right on their farms which rivals the attractions of the sunny South.

Live stock is the explanation, according to a six-foot Westerner who dropped into the Canadian Government Information Bureau at 311 Jackson street, St. Paul. He was on his way back to Western Canada with a carload of selected breeding stock which had carried off blue ribbons at several state fairs in 1919. "We have found," said he, "that there is just as much pleasure and a great deal more profit in developing a herd of prize stock as in listening to the murmur of the sad sea waves. Where we used to grow grain exclusively now we are raising stock as well. The fact that steers raised in Western Canada took the grand championship at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago two years in succession shows how well we are getting along. And instead of depleting our bank rolls we add a tidy sum to them."

"But don't you find the life monotonous?"

"Not in the least. You see, we have a rural club which meets in our school house, where we thrash out all kinds of problems. Here we exchange ideas and also have occasional talks from government experts, and the man who goes abroad for the winter only realizes how much he has missed when at a summer picnic he hears an address by a neighbor that would do credit to a college graduate."

"It was at one of these meetings that we decided to import a prize-winning stallion, and today our district is raising some of the best draft horses in Canada. The carload of breeding stock which I am now shipping to my farm is indirectly the result of our club meetings. We are going to make that little corner of Saskatchewan one of the big stock centers of America. Why shouldn't we? Everything is in our favor—climate, fertility, cheap land, free grazing land adjoining lots of farms, creameries, government supervision. You know how energetic the northern climate makes a man? Well, it's just like that with stock. They get to be great, husky fellows, hardy and big-framed—and that counts on market day."

"Come up and see me some time," were his parting words as he left to catch his train. "I'll show you some of the finest land and live stock out of doors, and treat you to a real farm meal—everything but the coffee and sugar grown right on my farm. That counts some in these days of high prices."—Advertisement.

Depopulated Nebraska Town. Forty years ago, just as the city of Lowell, Neb., which was then at the end of the railroad and had 8,000 inhabitants, was about to lose its importance because of the extension of the railroad, a shopkeeper had the poor judgment to lay in a complete stock of goods. The stock is still there, for the disgruntled owner shut up the store and has never since opened it for business. Lowell now is populated by fewer than thirty persons.

YOUNGSTERS!

Need "Cascarets" when Sick, Bilious, Constipated.

When your child is bilious, constipated, sick or full of cold; when the little tongue is coated, breath bad and stomach sour, get a box of Cascarets and straighten the little one right up. Children gladly take this harmless candy cathartic and it cleanses the little liver and bowels without griping. Cascarets contain no calomel or dangerous drugs and can be depended upon to move the sour bile, gases and indigestible waste right out of the bowels. Best family cathartic because it never cramps, sickens or causes inconvenience.—Adv.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

IMPERATIVE NEED FOR ACTION

Twelve Months Since the Signing of the Armistice Practically Wasted —Call for Aid From America Must Be Heeded.

Article V.

By FRANK COMARFORD.

The signing of the armistice ended the fighting. The signing of the peace treaty brought peace, but neither of these acts restored devastated Europe. The great job ahead is the work of reconstruction, and when I write the word "reconstruction" I have not in mind the mere rebuilding of the war-stricken areas of France, Belgium, Italy, Poland and Russia. Gigantic and important as this task is, necessary as it is, it is only a small part of the work of real reconstruction. Hundreds of thousands of square miles make up the actual war zone, the ground marched over, the territory under shell fire. Millions of acres of land that once yielded food in response to the touch of the plow have for the past four years been tilled by high explosives.

Belgium was literally looted, pillaged and ravished. Almost the entire state was violated. Nearly one-eighth of France, her industrial section, was crushed. Buildings were destroyed, factories dismantled. Sixty thousand square miles in Poland were laid waste. Italy suffered terribly. The ground is filled with high explosives, undischarged mines and shells. Every day since the work of recovery and restoration began men working in this zone have been blown to pieces. Billions of feet of barbed wire and millions of tons of metal make a dangerous wilderness out of what was once a highly productive area.

Cities and villages are jungles of twisted, broken, torn wood, iron, brick and stone. I have walked through these villages and have stood stunned by the completeness of the destruction. The streets are uneven and lumpy with brick and stone and plaster and glass, aisles of wreckage. Roofless houses with walls gutted and torn, heaps and piles of broken building material; jagged, ragged pinnacles, masses of debris meet the eye. Had I not known of the war and come upon one of these unsightly, shapeless masses of material, I should have thought nature had entered into a mad conspiracy, combining and concentrating all of the powers of a cyclone, a tornado and an earthquake, and spilled their fury on these mangled, dead villages.

Sights to Wring the Heart.

Picture the refugees returning to these villages—coming back home. What the sight must have meant to them. I have seen them, their faces gray as the gray ruins, standing in the midst of their destroyed homes. I have seen them picking their way over piles of stone and brick through great openings made in the broken walls. I saw in their eyes homesickness, a hurt of heart I never shall forget. Old men and old women and little bare-legged children; now and again a boy with a worn, soiled uniform, some limping on crutches, others wearing an empty sleeve. One thought surged through my mind until it almost sickened me—War. The land of the war zone must be reclaimed. These acres are needed now more than they were before the war. The world's food supply is low. Hundreds of miles of trenches must be filled up. Trees must be planted, the ground must be cleaned of shells, cleared of barbed wire; villages, cities, must be rebuilt; sewer systems must be installed. The mess must be moved. It is a big job.

One great misfortune is that although 12 months have come and gone since the signing of the armistice, no general comprehensive plan of reconstruction has been started. Here and there small sections of the devastated regions are being partly reconstructed. Temporary provision is being made for the homeless. This is all well and good, but intelligent, economical, efficient and speedy reconstruction demands a general plan and an organization big enough to put it over. The doing of this work requires vision and capacity for doing big things well. If the physical reconstruction is left to Europe it will not be finished in 50 years. Here is a chance for America. We have a faculty of doing things on a big scale and in a short period of time. Europe needs our help. If we are to give it eventually, why not now? But the clearing up of the wreckage and the rebuilding is a minor problem compared with the other greater and more important question of reconstruction, the reconstruction of industry, the establishment of normal life.

The reclamation of the devastated area is, after all, only a matter of plan, time and money, and notwithstanding the fact that Europe is bankrupt today, the money must and will come. The barbed wire will be rolled up, the mines and shells will be dug from the fields, the villages will be rebuilt; everything that has been destroyed will be replaced. Physical reconstruction is the least of Europe's problems.

The great problem is the reconstruction tion of life. The war-devastated and disordered the life of the world. It threw everything into confusion; it left the scheme out of balance.

Only Road to Prosperity.

We live by work. Prosperity means production. Poverty is underproduction. Stripping economics of all its high-sounding jargon, the simple truth that everyone knows is that the world has only the things it works to produce.

It may not be amiss to state a few facts known by everyone which explain the meaning of production. We live on the earth. It is land and water. In the ground are minerals. The land grows crops. We need the minerals that are in the ground. We need the crops, but minerals in the ground, as well as the fertile soil, mean nothing until man by his work brings the mineral from the ground and makes the soil yield. We must have food, we must have clothing, we must have shelter, and the only way we can get these things is by working. If little work is done we have a shortage. There isn't enough food to go around, there aren't enough clothes, enough coal, and as a result the prices of all these necessities go "way up." But this is not so important as the fact that when there is not enough to feed the world some go hungry, others must starve. When there isn't enough coal, some are cold, others freeze. When there aren't enough clothes for everyone, some must be ragged and half-naked. Everything by which we live is the result of work. Stop work, and poverty follows. Work, and plenty results. Work is responsible for everything that goes to make life worth living.

To understand Europe's condition today, one must stop and realize that the war stopped production. The result is a shortage of everything. There isn't enough food, there isn't enough raw material, there isn't enough coal. The whole story is told in the word Poverty.

Only Cure Is in Work.

There is a cure; the prescription can be written in a single word. Everyone knows that word, but knowing the word and adopting the word are different matters. Before we can get back to normal life this word must get root in the consciousness of the people. We must realize that the world will continue sick and grow sicker unless this prescription is taken. Further, we must know that if we delay taking this remedy it will be a longer time before we get well. The prescription is work. Every effort should be made to make every man will to work. Every employer must not contribute to unrest and provoke idleness by refusing to negotiate with his men, and into this negotiation he should go with a friendly spirit and a willingness to compromise. The employer who meets labor with the thought in his mind that he is better equipped to fight than labor, because he has a surplus and can eat and be warm, while labor has been living from hand to mouth and will starve, is shortsighted. He had better get the idea out of his head that you can starve men into submission. There was a day when that was true, but that day has passed, never to come. The man who depends upon his ability to turn a key in the factory door and go off on a vacation, imposing his will on his workmen, will discover that these men stopped a certain "gent," late of Pottsdam now of Holland, from doing this very thing to the world. He may wake up some morning to learn a new definition of the word "fight."

One thing that people do not realize is that the men who fought the world's fight for freedom are the men who are now complaining that they are not getting a square deal. Who made up the fighting men of the war, the rank and file of the armies that stopped the Prussian Push? Who were the great majority of the volunteers and the conscripted men numbering millions who went to the front for the allies? The teamsters, the shophands, the millworkers, the factory hands, the coal miners. These are the same men who are the center of the labor problem.

Mr. Employer, you are dealing with ex-soldiers. Please don't forget it. They fought for you. You wouldn't have any business today if it hadn't been for them, and when you think of the bond you bought, remember the blood they gave.

Applied Christianity.

The late Archdeacon Madden of Liverpool used to relate how on one occasion he separated two women, one a Roman Catholic and one a Protestant, who were fighting in the street. Afterward he asked the latter, whom he knew, how she, as a professing Christian, could justify her behavior, to which she replied:

"Well, sir, I was only obeying you. I have often heard you say 'Fight the good fight!' That other woman came into my house and she saw a picture of you on the mantelpiece. 'That's no priest,' said she. 'Nor no parson, neither! He's only an old quack.' Do you think I could stand that, sir? No! 'Touch not the Lord's anointed!' I says, and I ups with my fists and I hits her!"—London Post.

Smart Kid.

An Irish school inspector was examining a class in geography. He had propounded a question regarding longitude and received a correct answer. "And now," he said to the same boy, "what is latitude?"

The youngster hesitated a moment and then with a merry twinkle in his eye he replied, "Please, sir, we have no latitude. The British government won't allow us any."

The embargo on freight which was put into effect following the recent snow storm, has been modified somewhat, and it is stated by railroad officials that carload shipments of livestock, perishable food and feed for human consumption will be taken now and all less than carload shipments of all articles which are not covered in other embargoes.

Plummer of Laconia, Arthur H. Chase of Concord, John T. Amey of Lancaster, John H. Brown of Concord and John G. Weiple of Manchester. The only absentee who has returned his check so far is William R. Brown of Berlin.

Selling Boiled Cider Troubles Grocers.

Since the liquor law enforcement forces of the state visited Franklin and prosecuted vendors of cider including not only hard cider, but also a supposed-to-be temperance drink, grocers have been worried over the question of whether or not they can legally sell boiled cider and a decision on the question has been requested from the state authorities.

Although boiled cider has never been considered a beverage it is claimed that thirsty fellows who are driven to extremes for strong drink just now are drinking diluted boiled cider.

Receives Broken Shoulder When Gored by Bull.

First Selectman Orville P. Smith, one of the best known men in Center Harbor was gored by a bull in his barn and sustained a broken shoulder. Fortunately the animal was tied, a circumstance to which Mr. Smith owes his life, as the animal had him pinned against a stanchion. Mr. Smith is the secretary of the Union Grange Fair association, and has served as first selectman of Center Harbor for more than 30 years.

FARM LABOR SCARCE

Decreased Product Certain—Situation Emphasized at Meeting of Farm Bureaus

Faced with impending decrease in production by the farmers of the state the New Hampshire State Federation of Farm Bureaus, at the adjourned annual meeting, held in the hall of representatives at the capitol, Concord, discussed the problem of farm labor and listened to addresses by Gov. John H. Bartlett, John R. Howard of Iowa, president of the American Federation of Farm Bureaus, and Commissioner of Agriculture Andrew L. Felker. All of the speakers said that the situation is critical and that the farms of New Hampshire cannot produce a crop in 1920 equal to that of last season.

Geo. E. Putnam of Contoocook, president of the state federation, presided and introduced Mr. Howard, who was the principal speaker. Mr. Howard prefaced his address by referring to the patriotism of the farmers during the war in bending every effort to stimulate production. He said that the agricultural situation in the United States, because of the problem of securing labor, is alarming, though conditions in the east, in New Hampshire are not as critical as in the west. He cited an instance in a western state where a 200-acre farm, worth $300 an acre, is idle because help cannot be secured to operate it.

Mr. Howard devoted the greater part of his address to discussing middle west conditions and showed that the production of the staple cereals must be materially reduced this year from the fact that men cannot be hired to plant and harvest crops.

He argued that with the anticipated 25 per cent reduction in agricultural production there is bound to be a reduction in train service and that factories must shut down by reason of lack of transportation. He declared that the 44-hour week is responsible for labor shortage on farms as the farmer cannot afford to hire men at present wage scales to work on a trade union time schedule.

Commissioner Felker prefaced his talk by saying that the agricultural interests of America are the interests of every citizen. Stressing the importance of co-operation, the commissioner said: "We must pull together as one man to get what is our just rights, co-operation so to speak." Governor Bartlett spoke briefly and touched upon general topics of interest to farmers. He said: "We were pulling together during the war, but since the war we have been pulling apart." The governor urged better home life on New Hampshire farms and said that he could be relied upon to do his part to bring this about.

Following Commissioner Felker's talk there was an animated discussion of the labor situation in New Hampshire, the several farm bureau agents telling of the acute shortage of farm labor in their territories.

Snow Crust Hurts Lumber Industry.

The lumber industry near Franklin is reported to have received a set back from the fall of sleet recently which left a crust which is proving very bothersome. It is impossible for horses to travel through unbroken paths without being greatly hindered by the crust, not to speak of the liability of severe cuts on the legs from the broken edges of the crust.

New Prohibition Director.

George H. Whitchee, of Concord, has been appointed federal prohibition director for New Hampshire. Mr. Whitchee is a man with a wide acquaintance in this state, gained as a deputy commissioner of public instruction. He has long been prominent in educational circles. He came to the department from Berlin and as a deputy commissioner he has been in charge of the vocational work.

The case was based on an accident of Oct. 18, 1918, at the defendant's shipyard in Newington, when the plaintiff, a laborer at Portsmouth, was struck by a lumber laden car and, as he alleged, sustained head, knee and ankle injuries.

Lumbermen Must Quit Water Supply Source.

All lumbering operations must cease at once on Mt. Garfield, above the Littleton's water intake, and by order of the court the timbermen's camps must be removed. The decree came as a result of the claim by Littleton citizens that their water supply was, or would be, contaminated by sawdust and other waste from the cutting operations.

Educational Reorganization.

Persons who desire an understanding of the educational reorganization now in progress in the state can get more information on the subject from two brief pamphlets recently issued by the state board of education than from any other one source. Copies of these publications have been sent to all state and local school officials, but the state board of education's co-operative plan extends to the public, and in order to provide the basis for co-operation in a good understanding of what is being done, the board obtained a supply of these pamphlets

Fellow Townsman:

As a new comer, naturally I am interested in the town affairs.

The position of Road Agent came under my observation perhaps because I was not just satisfied with the service rendered.

I understand, much to my surprise, that the only compensation received by the Road Agent is his day's pay when at work on the roads, the same as any of the help he may hire. Yet he has the responsibility, thinking, planning, knocks, kicks, and is at your call as a public servant.

Is this a square deal. It assuredly is not.

The Road Agent should receive a salary in addition to the day's pay, of at least $25 a month, $300 a year.
Right is right.

Kindly give this your careful attention between now and town meeting day.

H. W. Cate,
Antrim, N. H. Liberty Farm.

It is rather unusual to find one speaking in favor of a public official, yet perhaps it is more general than we think. Mr. Cate informs us he is not looking for a town job of any kind, but believes what he says is in justice to one from whom we expect too much.

The Reporter has many times expressed our views on town officials,— of course favorably, for Antrim has had many men who GAVE their time to these sort of thankless jobs, getting pay only for actual work done.

There will be a woman's prayer meeting at the Baptist church on Friday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, and all the women of Antrim are earnestly requested to be present.

this place, now in Armenia as private stenographer to Col. Haskell, in full charge of the Near East Relief, and had we time and space should publish them in full. Knowing about Miss Kimball's work in this starving coun-

Mrs. Margaret Taylor is the Benning-tions should be handed. In the four remaining days our quota should be carried well "over the top."

The following clipping was taken from the Boston Post of Feb. 10, and it is given space herewith by the request of one of the interested citizens of our town, in the hope that it will appeal to our voters and perhaps be a means towards procuring something really modern for our town in doing this sort of work:

"The old days of breaking out the roads following a snowstorm in the country are no more. The great long log chained before the front runners of the wood sled with its ends extending a few feet on either side of the sled, has given way to a huge wooden rolling machine. Instead of the soft, narrow roadways of the days of old,
those who travel the country roads today find a hard road of crushed snow, wide enough for two vehicles to pass easily. One other added feature under the new method is that the roadbed withstands the thaws much longer than under the old method.

"Next year will witness still another forward step in this direction, one probably in vogue in some places at the present time: that is the use of tractors in the rolling of the roads.
To the farmer who values his horses this latter is bound to appeal."
