Wash-out Holds Up Train Traffic Near Elmwood

The following article is taken from Monday's Manchester Union and explains the why of irregularity in train service of last Saturday. A few of our people heard about it and maybe some heard it as it was, but quite often the reports get twisted in traveling:

Seventeen adults and four babies were included in the party of travelers who reached Peterboro early Sunday morning, after a variety of adventures, including a trip by special train and a midnight ride over the highways leading around a washout on the line of the Boston and Maine between Peterboro and Tarbell's Crossing.

The evening train to Peterboro by way of Elmwood was held up by the washout, with no prospect of reopening the line before morning. Accordingly the passengers were marooned for some hours at Elmwood, though their stay was made as pleasant as it might be under the conditions.

A lounge was found in the station, and on this the babies were parked. Mrs. Ned Patterson, wife of the station agent, hospitably provided a luncheon of milk for the little ones and bread and butter for their elders. The babies went to sleep and the grown-ups had a social time until, through the efforts of Arthur Carpenter of the Peterboro Tavern, one of the party, a special train was sent up from Nashua, which took the people as far as Tarbell's Crossing.

At Tarbell's Crossing conveyances were in waiting, including a four horse lumber outfit, and the journey was completed by road. Peterboro was reached about 2 o'clock in the morning.

The damage to the road bed was repaired early Sunday and the early morning train made its trip the same day.

A few of these passengers were Antrim bound, who after walking some and riding some, reached here a while after midnight.

Services for Morris E. Nay

The funeral of Morris E. Nay was held from the Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon last, and was largely attended. Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., pastor, spoke comforting words to the bereaved; Mrs. R. W. Jameson sang two selections, Miss Gertrude Proctor accompanist. Members of Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which deceased was a valued member, attended in a body, about forty-five being present, and at the close of the remarks by Dr. Cameron, the ritualistic service of the order was given.

The remains rested in a handsome and substantial oak casket, literally covered with beautiful floral tributes. These offerings testified in a silent and impressive manner to the esteem in which deceased was held by neighbors, friends, shopmates, and many others. During the funeral portions of the Goodell Co. factory were shut down and business places were closed as an act of respect to his memory. Interment was in Maplewood cemetery.

A Wag and a Gag

A newspaper reporter, who was inclined to be lazy in his method of picking up news, met a brother reporter, who was as keen as the other was lazy. "Anything doing?" asked the lazy one. "I have a report that a man was choked to death in a restaurant; but I haven't learned his name yet," replied the other. "How did it happen?" asked the reporter, eagerly scenting copy. "He was eating a piece of horse meat," was the reply. "and some one said 'Whoa!'" — San Francisco Argonaut.

MRS. FRED HATCH

Former Resident Brought Here for Interment

The remains of Mrs. Fred Hatch were brought to Antrim on Saturday last for interment in Maplewood cemetery, where prayers were offered by Rev. H. A. Coolidge. Death took place in Medford Hillside, Mass., early Thursday morning, the 25th.

Mrs. Hatch was born Helen Hildreth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hildreth, of Antrim, where she spent most of her young life and was known and beloved by all who knew her. She was the youngest of seven children, four sisters and two brothers remaining, this being the first break in the family circle since the death of the parents a number of years ago. She was thirty-three years of age. About a year since, deceased had the flu and the poisons in the system remained for a long time; a number of weeks ago she contracted pneumonia and was very sick. She seemed to recover after a time from the fever but septic poisoning followed and the system being in a weakened condition was unable to withstand the ravages of disease, and the dreaded hour came constantly nearer till she was ushered out from the earthly home into one where there is no suffering.

Miss Helen Hildreth left Antrim about fourteen years ago, going to Boston, and nine years ago married Fred Hatch who is now left to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted wife. The sympathy of all goes out to the bereaved in their affliction.

Mrs. George A. Sawyer, of Antrim, is a sister and George P. Hildreth, of Antrim, is a brother; the other sisters reside in or near Boston and the other brother, William, resides in Switzerland.

From the Concord Patriot

If the action of the Concord High school authorities has any weight with other High schools of the state, it may be just as well that a former vote of the Antrim school district was not rescinded at its last annual meeting. Here is what the Concord Patriot has to say about the matter of dancing in the schools:

Gloom fills the halls of Concord High school as the result of an order from Assistant Superintendent of Schools Clayton. No more will the young masters and mistresses of the terpsichorean art trip lightly about the Assembly hall during the recess hour, for the lid has been tightly clamped on by Mr. Clayton.

The reform movement now sweeping the dance halls of the country, because of alleged immoral positions, and which has pushed the "shimmy shakers" into the discard, has arrived in Concord. A short time ago a sign was put up in Phenix Ballroom which sounded the death knell for the shimmy there, but at the High school the new order means everything and all dancing is barred. The explanation given at the school is that dancing calls for immoral positions, which, in the opinion of the officials, is explanation enough.

Baptist Campaign Quotas

New England's full quota of the $100,000,000 fund to be raised by Northern Baptists, April 25-May 2, in the New World Movement campaign, amounts to $15,259,000. Of this amount $3,051,800 is payable the first year of the five year campaign which terminates April 1, 1924. The quota by states follows: Massachusetts, $7,877,000; first annual payment, $1,575,400; Connecticut, $2,255,000, first payment $451,000; Maine, $2,050,000, first annual payment, $410,000; Rhode Island, $1,320,000, first annual payment, $264,000; New Hampshire, $1,107,000, first annual payment $221,400; Vermont, $650,000, first annual payment, $130,000.

"For months my place was alive with rats. Losing chickens, eggs, feed. Friend told me to try RAT-SNAP. I did. Somewhat disappointed at first, not seeing many dead rats, but in a few days didn't see a live one. What were not killed are not around my place. RAT-SNAP sure does the trick." Three sizes, 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold and guaranteed by Cram's Store.

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested by What is Taking Place Around

With some cities and states adopting "daylight-saving" next week, and others, with the railroads, adhering to standard time, look out for confusion. With a railroad running its trains on standard time into and out of a city where daylight-saving prevails, somebody is going to get left.

With daylight saving in Massachusetts and a statewide adjustment of the clocks the same as by last year's Federal statute, there is likely to be a great mixup in time along some lines with the old Granite State. How strange it will be when it takes so much longer to go to Boston than it will take to get back home; but after all 'twill be a fine thing to get back home quickly and breathe the fine mountain air, than which there is nothing better in all New England.

The statement has been made that so long as the country has 4,800,000 men who have had military training, there is no necessity of training any more men; these can be called upon in a war emergency. General Wood came very near the mark when in a recent speech in South Dakota he said:

"I am inclined to think that the American Legion and ex-service men generally feel that they have done their part in the war and that they do not propose to be the perpetual, everlasting fighting force, with the slackers behind them who do not want to train."

These men have done their duty in this respect; now let the country and the oncoming youth of the country do theirs.

Harvey's Weekly of the last issue, in bold face type, made this statement: "Only 341 days more!" At first thought we couldn't just get it—if whether it meant so many days to Christmas, and that all should do their shopping early; or something else. But knowing that Col. Harvey's mind occasionally takes a slant toward politics, decided he must be drawing the attention of his readers to so many days to the November election; no! that wouldn't be right! With pencil and paper and a very little figuring we tumble to the fact that he was informing his readers that there were 341 days more to the inauguration of the President in March next, and at the same time putting forth the thought that the life of the present administration was narrowing down to days, as he sees it.

In Town to Attend Funeral

Those called here to attend the funeral of Morris E. Nay were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Nay and son, Harry, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Macbrine, Leon E. Nay, Mrs. Ernest Hodgdon, Boston; Mrs. Nellie Gray, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. David Ash, Lowell; Mr. Louis Ash, Hillsboro; Charles Wells, Laconia.

How Far is Newport?

Not So Far That The Statements of Its Residents Cannot Be Verified

Rather an interesting case has been developed in Newport. Being so near by, it is well worth publishing here. The statement is sincere—the proof convincing:

Frank Dudley, retired shoemaker, Laurel St., Newport, N. H., says: "Sitting constantly for eight or ten hours a day in one position and lack of exercise was the cause of kidney trouble in my case. My back became very lame and sore, and my kidneys were disordered and failed to act properly. A friend recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, so I used some. They gave me wonderful relief, removing the pain from my back and regulating my kidneys. From that time on, I have kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house, and have used them whenever I have felt any soreness in my back or other signs of kidney trouble."

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RADICALISM IN THE SADDLE

Without a Definite Program, People Everywhere Are Demanding a Change in Present Conditions—Threat of "Direct Action."

Article XI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Radicalism in Europe is rampant. The workers are active, the middle class sympathetic. The industrial centers are hotbeds. The conservatism of the farmers and peasants is breaking down. It is hard to define this radicalism—it is without form. It isn't a definite program, it isn't even political. The people are dissatisfied. The red flag is popular. It promises a short cut. It answers the cry of the impatient. I was surprised to see many of the very men who fought so gallantly under their country's flag and who but yesterday would have torn the red flag from the flagpole, now defending it, carrying it and following it. I am sure they do not know what the red flag stands for. To them it represents a protest against things as they are. Summed up in a word, the attitude of mind of the workers of Europe is eagerness for a change—some change—any change. Every one knows the symptoms, understands what is wrong, but the remedy is only vaguely discussed.

I attach much significance to the new attitude of organized labor in Europe. Labor unions formerly concerned themselves with wages, terms of employment, shop conditions, safety appliances, recognition of their right of collective bargaining. Since the war the labor movement has taken up questions entirely outside of its field, questions properly the concern of all the people, questions of government policy. I have in mind recent demands made by the working men in England, France and Italy. These demands were addressed to the regularly and properly elected representatives of the people, the governments. They were accompanied by threats of general strikes if they were not acceded to. This step is an innovation; it is revolutionary.

The working men are citizens and have a voice in the government equal with all other citizens. After the people have selected their representatives, the men chosen should be responsible to all of the people without regard to class or station. A government by one portion of the people is autocratic. Government of the people, for the people, and by the people, means all of the people. The effort on the part of a minority in the labor movement, who challengingly call themselves socialists, to dictate to the state, representing all of the people, is an attack upon democracy. If successful it would destroy the state and leave the great majority of the people, including the workers, less free than they are now. What sane man, whether he is a working man or not, is in favor of minority government?

Demands Hard to Understand.

I witnessed many demonstrations in Europe under the red flag, in which the leaders demanded three things from the government.

First, they demanded the release of all the men in jail who were held for political crimes. These included men found guilty of sedition and treason during the war. I cannot understand this demand. Why should men be released from jail who sought to stab in the back the men who went to the trenches to fight and die for freedom? I should much prefer to see all of the burglars released. If I am compelled to choose between the traitor and the burglar, I will have no trouble in making my decision.

Second, they demanded that no soldiers be sent to Russia. The agitation on this point was so strong that when the British government attempted to send soldiers to Russia last summer (1919), the soldiers mutinied, and so far as I am able to learn the feeling was so strong, the situation so critical, the government did not dare court-martial them.

Third, they demanded that all conscription laws be abolished.

It is apparent that these demands, coming from a minority, backed by a threat, constitute an invasion of the rights of the people. The question isn't whether or not one believes these things should be done; the issue is the method resorted to. Personally I do not believe soldiers should be sent to Russia. In my opinion allied intermeddling has been stupid and harmful, but if these matters of general public policy are to be decided, all of the people should have a vote in making up the verdict.

When you consider this new attitude of labor in conjunction with the growing popularity of "direct action," it indicates that the labor movement is losing faith in law and political action. I am not saying that their experience with politics, their betrayal by men they have supported, the default of political parties to carry out pre-election pledges, may not be responsible for a distrust in political government. I am not denying that capital has had the ear of government more than it should: that property has been given more thought than human beings. I am concerned with the danger that these innovations promise, a danger to the working men themselves, a menace to law and order, without which no one is secure, without which there can be no freedom.

Political Action Called Failure.

I heard a speech in London that deeply impressed me. It was applauded by several thousand men and women—average good British working people. Most of the men wore service badges. The speaker, a clean young Englishman of about thirty-five, said:

"Political action is a failure. We vote and we are betrayed. Political parties are the agents of bands of capital. Their purpose is to keep the workers apart, knowing that divided we are powerless. The only time they are willing we should unite is when war calls for men. What did we win in the war? Nothing. We thought we had a stake in the game, that the hand we were playing was our own. Now that it is over we have discovered that we won nothing."

"What did the working man ever get by voting, except the worst of it? The word vote comes from a Latin word, meaning 'to wish.' Who ever got anything by wishing?"

"We are like the story in Bellamy's 'Looking Backward.' You remember he spoke of a coach. On top of this coach the capitalists sit in the sunshine enjoying the ride. On the side of the coach, hanging by their fingernails and toenails are the hundreds of thousands who make up the middle class. Millions of men are pulling the coach. They are sweating and trudging—they are the working men. Running along the side of the coach are millions more, fighting to get a chance to get hold of the rope and pull the coach. They are the idle. There is only one thing to do. That is to stop pulling the coach, let go of the rope. Don't wish about it; do it. The fellows on the top of the coach don't do any wishing—they boss and drive."

The crowd cheered. There is some truth in the speech. It is true that the working man has not had a square deal, but the fact that he has not had fair treatment does not make the plan of direct action a sane, wise plan. Revolution would only lead to blood and disorder and leave the very men who revolted in a worse plight than they are now. The millions who are the majority have an infinitely better weapon than force. They have the ballot. They are in the majority. Men must think their way out of the wilderness. They cannot fight their way out. When they try to go deeper in.

Bolshevism Finding Favor.

I found the word bolshevism in the minds and on the lips of the working people of Europe. I expected to find them antibolshevik if for no other reason than that bolshevism came from Russia and the bolsheviks made peace with Germany while the allies were in a death struggle with her with the result in doubt. I found them confessing their faith in bolshevism, speaking of it as a new religion, resenting the obstacles their own governments had placed in the way.

In Ireland, the last place I expected to find a leaning toward bolshevism, I found an open devotion to it. The Irish people are in many respects the most conservative in the world. The only radicalism they have ever shown is the revolutionary spirit expressed in uprisings for freedom. The Irish are a people of reminiscence and tradition. The Celtic mind is devoted to form and custom. I was present at the Irish Federation of Labor convention held in August, 1919, at Drogheda. The delegates to this convention, representing 300,000 union men and women, went on record almost unanimously for bolshevism. I later learned that few of them, if any, knew exactly what bolshevism was. I asked a leading spirit of the convention if he believed in communism, the abolition of the private ownership of property, and he said, "Of course not; that's rank nonsense; socialism; impossible and impractical." The pro and con of bolshevism has from the beginning been partisan and prejudiced. Working men are bolsheviks because employers are against it, and employers are against it because the men are for it.

Duty Before the World.

Millions of gallant young men have fought for the new world. Hundreds of thousands died to establish it. If we fail to honor the promise given to them we dishonor ourselves. What does a new world mean? What was the old world like? It was a world where toll for myrads of honest workers, men and women, purchased nothing better than squalor, penury, anxiety and wretchedness—a world scarred by slums and disgraced by sweating, where unemployment through the vicissitudes of industry brought despair to multitudes of humble homes; a world where, side by side with want, there was waste of the inexhaustible riches of the earth, partly through ignorance and want of forethought, partly through entrenched selfishness. If we renew the lease of that world we shall betray the heroic dead. We shall be guilty of the basest perfidy that ever blackened a people's fame.—David Lloyd George.

West, Central and Southern States Hard Hit by Severe Storm

21 PERISH IN CHICAGO

Homes, Churches, Theatres, Razored—Elgin, Ill., Has Eight Dead and $4,000,000 Damage—Other Fatalities

Chicago, in a series of freak storms, described by the United States weather bureau as a tornado rather than a cyclone, 21 persons were killed outright in Chicago. In the suburbs and neighboring cities upwards of 400 persons were injured, many of whom are likely to die, and the property damage alone will run into the millions of dollars. In Elgin alone property losses exceed $4,000,000.

The tornado came out of the west with great suddenness at 12:30 P. M., whirled through Elgin to Melrose Park, the southwest of Chicago, then into the extreme northwest, thence into Evanston and Wilmette. Eight people were killed in Elgin.

All the electric lights in the devastated zone were out. Street cars were not running. Trains could not get through, for great tree trunks lay across the tracks. But one telegraph and one telephone wire were working.

The storm cut a path 200 yards wide, tumbling all within its wake, modest cottages, stately homes, churches, theatres and business blocks, wood, stone, brick or stucco.

Elgin was placed under military law. Squads of former service men patrolled the darkened streets to see there was no looting, and the search for the missing continues. Men hunted in the ruins everywhere, looking for babies and for mothers, and for aged persons and for those who were sick.

A number were killed in the collapse of a church; others were crushed in a theatre, it is said.

The cyclone hit Melrose Park twice, first on the edge, then jumping square into the heart of the business and residential districts and making havoc in 40 square blocks.

Romance of an Easter Card

by Frank Harwin

EAR me, I hope the Johnsons'll be here," Mrs. Briggs said uneasily. She had deposited a large parcel on the serving table of the small private dining room where the Saturday Dinner club was in the habit of taking its weekly feast, a parcel that appeared to be too precious for Horace Briggs's clumsy paws. The remaining nine members of the club were in their places, and many an anxious eye had been cast in the direction of the serving table when the door opened and the tardy ones burst in, bubbling with suppressed excitement, and also bearing a parcel, this one in the husband's sinewy and always competent hands. "Wonder if they're bringing easter," big Bill Smith muttered, under his breath. He had been assured that the Briggs parcel was not good for the digestion.

"I don't want anybody to look while I get it ready. No fair peeping," Ada Johnson warned, as she bent over a chair in the remote corner of the room. In an amazingly long minute she relieved the anxiety of the crowd by setting in the center of the table a mound of Easter eggs, colored in the most ingenious fashion and bearing the names of all the club members. "They're warranted hard boiled, will not shrink, warp or rub off, and they're to be carried home in the tail pocket of every fellow's dress suit," Johnson explained.

"Humph, I know a better place to carry eggs than that," was Bill's suppressed comment.

"Shall I open mine before or after dinner?" Mrs. Briggs asked, the shine having been rather rudely brushed from her surprise by the hasty appearance of the eggs.

"I should say you'd have to open it before you eat it," Jones glibly.

"I didn't mean the egg. I was talking about that," and she indicated the carefully wrapped box on the serving table, just as the waiter arrived with the anchovy paste. So it was not until the interval between soup and roast that she got around to the openings of the Easter surprise.

"How perfectly beautiful! How interesting! How unique!" came in chorus from the ladies, as she passed out the gifts—made of Easter cards of by gone years, cut out and mounted to form a mat for an unusually pleasing kodak picture of the Briggs. The edge of mat and glass had been cleverly bound in soft gray green.

"I hate you, Vera Briggs," Mrs. Jones ejaculated. "I couldn't pass-e-partout a picture as neatly as this is done if I worked a week at it. And as for combining these Easter lilles and angels and other et ceteras—well, I suppose it's a gift. I look at hats in the windows or on people's heads, and I think I'll go right straight home and get out my old velvet and ostrich feathers and make a swell hat for myself instead of blowing $15 for it. And do you know, the most graceful plume in the world would get as rigid as a poker the minute I get my fingers on it? It makes me sick to see the things other women can do."

"I'd trade my skill at making pictures and trimming hats for the ability to concoct a salad the way you do it," Mrs. Briggs retorted. "Everything I know about cooking I've had to grub for. I have to have a cook book glued to the end of my nose, and all my wits about me. And I could die of envy when I see you flip things together without even looking to see how much you're taking, and have the dish turn out simply delicious."

"There, I love you again," May Jones bubbled. "I'm going to hang this Easter picture in my bedroom, and every time I look at it I'll reflect that my one poor talent isn't so stupid after all. And, say, Vera, any time you want to get out of cooking a meal, there's loads of old feathers and hat shapes and velvet in the old trunk, up in the attic."

"Say, girls, if you'll cut it out, I'll tell you a story," Mrs. Jones' husband broke in. "It's right in season too. I got the last chapter of it while I was out on the road this past week, and the first installment came my way when I was a young chap, just out of school. It began in Western New York, and some of you know the hero, I'm morally certain. I reckon it'll be safe to tell his name right here in the buzzum of the family, but to be on the safe side, I'll call him Stanley. He manufactures something that's advertised in all the big magazines, and most of the ladies use it to help out their complexion. Any of you that have been to guessing school can finish out his name for yourselves."

"Oh, I know," little Mrs. Smith twinkled. "I always buy his dental cream. Bill won't let me put the massage stuff on my face. Says my skin's good enough, and he—"

"You're next, all right," Jones assured her.

"Stan used to be the liveliest fellow in our crowd. Folks said nothing less'n a cyclone or having a leg cut off would ever settle him down. He had lots of sense, and could learn anything he set his mind to. Trouble with him was that things came too easy. He liked to strum a guitar and dance and skate and ride a wheel and make love to the girls. When I met him last February I couldn't believe he was the same chap. There's nothing like smushing a man's heart to settle him down."

"I find that the cares of a family have the same effect," Bob White said, solemnly, whereat the other members of the club laughed.

"I like the family, but I've sometimes thought it would be a good scheme to take the cares by proxy, the way you do it," Briggs remarked. "Your sister's kids and the kids of the club have made quite a serious decent man of you."

"Stan didn't have any kids, nor even any nieces and nephews, to pester him. If he had, it wouldn't have gone so hard with him," Jones averred. "He was the only child, and his mother died when he was about fifteen. He and his dad and an old maid aunt lived together, and I reckon he had to turn around a good deal to keep from dying of slow stagnation in that house. He couldn't have been more'n 23 when two new girls came to town. He'd run the gamut of all the old girls, and he wasn't the sort to fall in love with a girl he'd grown up with. Not but what he could have had any of 'em for the asking. Oh, he wasn't what you call a flirt, as he caught the look in Mrs. Johnson's eyes. Stan didn't break any hearts. He took care to let the girls know it was all play, and I suppose he never would have got in dead earnest if it hadn't been for the two strangers that dropped in on us the same week. One of 'em was a tall girl, with serious dark eyes and a rich contralto voice. She'd been studying art in New York and her folks were all in Europe for the summer, and she didn't want to go along, so they sent her out there to visit her uncle and do some sketching."

"The other girl was a tiny bit of a thing, with yellow hair and big brown eyes and a complexion like peaches and cream. When she sang it reminded you of a Baltimore oriole. When she danced she made you think of a trick pony in a circus. She could cut more dainty little capers and do more amusing things'n any dozen girls I'd ever seen. I met her the same night Stan did, and we'd both met the other girl a couple of nights before. I saw in a second that there was going to be something doing in the old town that summer. And I didn't miss my guess, I can tell you. Half the boys were dead crazy about the little girl, and she didn't make any bones of her preference for Stan. Well, I woke up to the fact, one starlight night, that the tall one was in love with him. I had a yearning for her myself, and that's how I came to surprise the secret from her."

"Stan had paid her a lot of attention, all right, and it was a clear case of the little vixen cutting her out, for the fun of showing us that she could. But he didn't get up his nerve to propose till almost the end of summer, and then she led him right up to the climax. She got dead serious for once, and told him she'd never had any idea what life meant till she met him. So he suggested helping her to fight all the battles of life and all that rubbish that a man talks when he's embarrassed and don't know what to say—and the little divil, pardon me, it's all I can call her, laughed in his face. Said she didn't want to marry him, that he made an elegant summer beau, but was too flighty for a husband."

"She'll get punished for it, mark my word," Mrs. Briggs insisted.

"She did—last Tuesday. That's what I'm coming to. She went back to New York, and so did the tall girl, and Stan went to the demimonde how-wows for awhile. Then he braced up and went into the cold cream business. Just happened to get into that line of manufacturing, and he's rolled up barrels of money. The little girl married an Englishman with a title and cut a swath in London society for a season. Then she had trouble, when her husband found out she really didn't have as much money as she pretended. So he divorced her, after he'd blighted one of her brown eyes and called her several kinds of pet names. After that she had various kinds of hard times, and finally about a year ago she went to see Stan. Walked right in and gave him to understand that she'd reconsidered the question—and wouldn't he please take her back to his heart and love and support her, don't you know? And she was so appealing about it that he almost went into the old madness about her. The only thing that saved him was an Easter card. He advertised last January for sketches in color, with prizes amounting to a thousand dollars, for the cards to be sent out to the trade, and one of the designs, submitted without any name or anything to show who painted it, gave him an awful jolt. It was the facade of an old Roman tomb, and the tomb was empty, and half dead rose vine that climbed over the marble had burst into foliage and flowers just above the door, and over it there was the most wonderful light. Oh, Stan didn't consider putting it in the contest. He had it framed, to hang in his bedroom, where he could see it the first thing in the morning, to inspire him for the day. Under it was that text from Corinthians, 'Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.' He sent out the other prizes, and then he asked the artist who painted that one to come and get her money. Said it was worth $500 to him, and she came—and let me tell you, it was the tall girl he'd turned down fifteen years ago."

"You don't mean it!" "What do you think of that?" A chorus of exclamations burst from his hearers.

"Yes; the same tall girl with the serious dark eyes and the rich contralto voice."

"Then what?"

"He married her that very day."

How to Open Religious Conversation

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—Let the redeemed of the Lord say so—Ps. 113:1

Open it just as you would any other conversation. Decide what you wish to say, and then say it. Say it in the same tone in which you would speak of anything else. It is a great mistake to suppose that one must lower his voice, and look solemn, the moment he introduces the subject of religion. The gospel is good news. If you do not think so, less you say about it the better; but, if it is really good news to you, then speak of it in the same joyful, hearty way in which you would bring any other glad tidings.

The president of one of our largest theological seminaries was led to Christ in this way. During his college course, as he came out of the recitation one day, a classmate gave him a slap on the back and said: "Say, Gus, I wish you were a Christian." Gus made no reply and the matter was dropped; but years afterward he told his friend that it was that remark which led him to accept Christ as his Saviour. The hearty and natural way in which his companion spoke made him feel that he was missing something that he could not afford to lose.

Talking About Religion.

Christian conversation seems to be almost a lost art in some quarters. How seldom does one hear the subject broached in public places even when all the people present are professing Christians! Riding in the cars with a stranger one day I opened the subject of religion. After a while he admitted that he was a member of a church.

"If this is the case," I said, "why didn't you talk to me like a Christian and not compel me to work so long to find out your position?"

"People don't do that down our way," said he. "If I should speak to a man who came into my store on the subject of religion, what do you suppose he would think of me?"

"He would probably think you were a Christian," I replied.

"Well, no one talks about religion down our way, not even the ministers. We never hear from them on the subject except from the pulpit."

A Cause of Doubt.

That Christians do not talk more about the things of the Kingdom is a constant surprise to the unsaved and often an occasion of doubt. Said a skeptical lady to a friend of mine: "I will tell you why I am a doubter. I was in a sewing society last week. Forty ladies were present and every one a church member except myself. I was there three hours. We talked of everything down to crazy patchwork, but not a word about Jesus. I cannot believe that they see in Jesus Christ any such beauty or power as you speak of. I am convinced that there is a great deal of sham in the profession of Christian people."

On the other hand, how refreshing it is to meet those who are evidently in the condition of Peter and John, who said: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." How much might be accomplished by each of us if our hearts were warm and glowing with love to Christ and our minds on the alert to improve every opportunity that God sets before us!

How to Do It Successfully.

That it requires tact and skill to carry on religious conversation successfully no one can deny, but is it not worth while to study the art until we become proficient in it? If we follow Paul's advice to the Colossians we shall always have something to say: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom." If we begin each day with David's prayer, "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer," we shall keep in touch with God. And if we watch for souls as those that must give an account, we shall have opportunities enough so that in a short time we shall find Christian conversation a real pleasure to ourselves and a blessing to others.

A Crown That Is Eternal.

Blessed is the man who can say, "Thou, O Lord, art my glory." We all fall short of the glory we had hoped for. Circumstances defeat our purposes. We flee before the enemies of our souls which attack us on every side. The only glory of any account is that which God gives. The light of his countenance eclipses all the dazzling tinsel of worldly fame. Human glory is uncertain at the best. The crown that man can give, man can take away. The crown which God gives is an eternal one. There was no outward evidence of glory about St. Paul when he was a prisoner in Rome, but he knew that God had laid up for him a crown of righteousness."

GRUMPY?

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Brain foggy? Blue devils got you? Don't stay sick, bilious, headachy, constipated. Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, your breath bad and stomach sour. Why not spend a few cents for a box of Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest laxative-cathartic you ever experienced? Cascarets never gripe, sicken or inconvenience one like Saita, Oil, Calomel or harsh Pills. They work while you sleep.—Adv.

A tree or two and a few shrubs about a house make a great difference in its appearance either winter or summer.

The man who is unable to live within his income must live without it.

Time Now For CEDAR CHESTS

Time to be packing away the furs and woolens where the moths cannot get them.

Time to be starting that Hope Chest. Nothing answers but a good cedar chest.

Brush your winter clothing carefully and air it thoroughly in the sun before packing it away. Moth eggs will hatch as quickly in a cedar chest as in a dark closet. Moths hatched in a cedar chest will keep right to their job of eating holes in the best fabrics till their job is done. No moths will ever enter a cedar chest to lay their eggs. You just have to be sure the eggs are not on the articles when you pack them away.

We are fortunate to have right chests and at right prices. We want to show them to you. If you cannot come, write.

The Selectmen appointed on Wednesday evening last H. W. Eldredge, Town Clerk, to fill out the unexpired term of M. E. Nay, deceased; Mr. Eldredge at once took the oath of office and entered upon its duties.

At the regular meeting of Waverley Lodge on Saturday evening last, the third degree was conferred; and in addition Will C. Hills was elected and installed into the office of financial secretary to fill out the unexpired term of M. E. Nay, deceased.

Woodchucks are out pretty early this year, some farmers having seen them as early as two or three weeks ago. Morris H. Wood's dog caught one last Sunday; the animal was in fairly good flesh but was in the wrong locality, for Mr. Wood's dog is great on catching ground hogs, having a record along this line.

By the Selectmen's notice in another column it will be learned that they are in session at their rooms in town hall block on Monday evening of each week. This is in change from their former plan and owing to the amount of business constantly to be attended to makes it necessary to meet regularly each week.

Some forty members of Hand in Hand Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., were present at the regular meeting Wednesday evening last. The degree was conferred upon two candidates.

At their next regular meeting, Wednesday evening, April 14, the degree will again be conferred—this time on a class of five candidates.

The postponed game of basket ball between the Litchfield, Ct., team and the local team was played on Monday night with the score of 31-18, favoring the visitors.

The approach of spring is making many of our auto owners feel uneasy and they are paying the taxes on their cars, getting them registered, and renewing their licenses.

The Litchfield, Ct., boys did not get to Antrim Saturday night in season to play basket ball as advertised, owing to the washout at Tarbell's Crossing. They came through, however, walking part way and coming part way by team, and arrived here about twelve o'clock.

Quite a bunch of literature bearing on the Federal income tax in its different phases, containing all the information anyone ought to know, has been received and passed on to the Town Clerk, who has deposited same in the town vault. Everyone desiring such information should read these books.

The water was running pretty high on Sunday on the flat adjoining the river, being some two feet over the road on the way from the iron bridge to the railroad track. Some of the Goodell Co. lumber piles near the residence of Fred H. Colby were floating around. Quite a number of our people took occasion to view the unusual sight.

 MILLIONS SOUGHT IN CHURCH DRIVE

Interchurch World Movement Getting Ready for Big Simultaneous Money Campaign

GOAL IS $336,777,527;
STATE QUOTAS OUT SOON

"We hope to give out New England quotas for the United Simultaneous Financial Campaign, the name under which the Interchurch World Movement of North America in cooperation with thirty denominational bodies and church movements will make a united appeal to the nation April 25th to May 2 for a fund large enough to carry on the comprehensive constructive program of the church in missionary, educational and home fields," was made public here today by Alfred C. Estes, Regional Director in the New England states for the coming drive. Mr. Estes also announced that the budget has been adopted by the various cooperating agencies and the Interchurch Board of Review would be given out next Monday, and the state and denominational quotas for New England at an early date.

The directors appointed by state and district are as follows:—Massachusetts, E. L. Bevan; 6 Beacon St., Boston, State Director; District 1, Berkshire and Franklin Counties, J. C. Hayes; 20 Pierce St., Greenfield, Director; District 2, Hampden and Hampshire Counties, W. A. Atkinson, Amherst, Director; District 3, Worcester County, Dan Ivan Patch, 518 Park Building, Worcester, Director; District 4, Middlesex and Essex Counties, J. E. LeCount, Somerville, Director; District 5, Norfolk, Bristol and Plymouth Counties, M. W. Williams; 6 Beacon St., Boston, Director; District 6, Barnstable, Dukes and Nantucket Counties, L. Lacharity, Quincy, Director; Maine, W. S. Randall, Portland, State Director; Cumberland County District, S. H. Scribner, Director; Androscoggin County District, H. M. Rooney, Director; New Hampshire, M. C. Maynard, Manchester, State Director; Lee C. Abbott, Manchester, Director; Western District; C. H. Ellinwood, Manchester, Director; Eastern District; Ebenee Leard and C. B. Brown of Lynn, Mass., with headquarters at Providence, State Director; Connecticut, M. H. Alling, 226 Pearl Street, Hartford, State Director; Vermont, Raymond McFarland, Middlebury, State Director.

In addition to the above divisions Metropolitan Boston and the cities of Worcester, Lowell and Springfield will have separate organizations with their own directors. These appointments are not yet confirmed.

In preparation for the Campaign state and county conferences for Interchurch and Denominational Directors one day will be devoted to intensive training for the drive.

The United Simultaneous Financial Campaign will be based on careful surveys made by the Interchurch World Movement which disclose the unfinished tasks of the church and seek to relate the great denominational movements to their fair share of the responsibility for completing the work.

The money it is hoped to raise during the intensive drive will make possible world wide expansion of Christianity.

The period designated will open with a universal period of prayer, Sunday, April 25th when church goers and Christians the country over will be asked to unite at a given hour in a five minute prayer—not only for the financial success of the campaign, but that the money given shall be conse-

Housewives, with but few exceptions, do not properly value kerosene. As a lubricant a drop or two will set things going which refused to go before. As a cleanser it can often be used with great advantage in place of soap and water. ## CONDENSED CLASSICS

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

By CHARLES DICKENS

Condensation by Miss Sara A. Hamlin

to England as a private gentleman, eager to begin life anew.

Sydney Carton was a young English lawyer, brilliant in intellect, but steadily deteriorating through his life of dissipation, able to advise others but unable to guide himself, "conscious of the blight on him and resigning himself to let it eat him away."

He and Darnay soon became frequent visitors at the small house in Soho square, the home of Dr. Manette and his daughter. Through Lucie's care and devotion, the Doctor had almost wholly recovered from the effects of his long imprisonment, and it was only in times of strong excitement that any trace of his past insanity could be detected. The sweet face of Lucie Manette soon won the hearts of both the young men, but it was Darnay to whom she gave her love.

And so that interval between Lucie and Sydney Carton has a pathos that wrings our hearts. He knew that even if his love could have been returned, it would have added only to his bitterness and sorrow, for he felt it would have been powerless to lift him from the slough of Selfishness and Sensuality that had engulfed him. But he could not resist this last sad confession of his love; and when she weeps at the sorrow of which she has been the innocent cause, he implores: "Do not weep, dear Miss Manette; the life I lead renders me unworthy of your pure love. My last supplication is this: Think now and then that there is a man who would give his life to keep a life you love beside you."

But dark days were to come. In the year 1789 the downtrodden French peasantry turned upon their oppressors. The streets of Paris were filled with crowds of people whose eager cry was for "blood." Madame Defarge no longer sat behind the counter of her small wine shop, silently knitting into her work the names of her hated enemies, but axe in hand and knife at her belt, headed a frenzied mob of women on to the Bastille. The French Revolution had actually begun.

Madame Defarge was one of the leading spirits of the Revolution. Early in life she had seen her family fall victims to the tyranny and lust of the cruel nobility and from that time her life had been devoted to revenge.

Three years of crime and bloodshed passed, and in 1792 Mr. Jarvis Lorry and Charles Darnay landed in Paris, the former to protect the French branch of Tellson & Co., and the latter to befriend an old family servant who had besought his help. Not until they had set foot in Paris did they realize into what a cauldron of fury they had plunged. Mr. Lorry, on account of his business relations, was allowed his freedom, but Darnay was hurried at once to the prison of La Force, there to await his trial. The reason given for the outrage was the new law for the arrest of all returning French emigrants, but the true cause was that he had been recognized as Charles Evremonde.

These tidings soon reached London, and Dr. Manette, with his daughter Lucie, hastened to Paris, for he felt sure that his long confinement in the Bastille would win for him the sympathy of the French people, and thus enable him to save his son-in-law. Days and months passed, and although the Doctor succeeded in gaining a promise that Darnay's life should be spared, the latter was not allowed to leave his prison.

At last came the dreadful year of the Reign of Terror. The sympathy which at first had been given to Dr. Manette had become weakened through the influence of the bloodthirsty Madame Defarge. Also, there had been found in the ruins of the Bastille a paper which contained Dr. Manette's account of his own abduction and imprisonment, and pronouncing a solemn curse upon the House of Evremonde and their descendants, who were declared to be the authors of his eighteen years of misery. Charles Darnay's doom was sealed. "Back to the Conciergerie and death within twenty-four hours."

To Sydney Carton, who had followed his friends to Paris, came an inspiration. Had he not promised Lucie that he would die to save a life she loved? By bribery, he gains admittance to the prison; Darnay is removed unconscious from the cell, and Carton sits down to await his fate.

Along the Paris streets six tumbrils are carrying the day's wine to la Guillotine. In the third car sits a young man with his hands bound. As the cries from the street arise against him they only move him to a quiet smile as he shakes more loosely his hair about his face.

Crash! A hand is held up and the knitting woman who are ranged about the scaffold count "One."

The third cart comes up and the supposed Evremonde descends. His lips move, forming the words, "a life you love."

The murmuring of many voices, the upturning of many faces, then all flashes away.

Twenty-three!"

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

HAS NO PAIN NOW

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Warner.

Oshkosh, Wis.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of stomach I could not lie in bed. I suffered so it seemed as though I would die, and I was not regular either. I suffered for a year and was unfit to do my housework; could only wash dishes once in a while. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women and decided to try it. It surely did wonders for me. I have no pains now and I can do my house-work without any trouble at all. I will always praise your medicine as I do not believe there is a doctor that can do as much good in female weakness and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. LESTER E. WARNER, R. 1, Box 68, Oshkosh, Wis.

The reason women write such letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. and tell their friends how they are helped is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives. Freed from their illness they want to pass the good news along to other suffering women that they also may be relieved.

Deer Leaps High Wall And Breaks Back
When going to work at 7 o'clock in the morning from their homes on Dearborn st., Milford, Albert R. Pratt and William Rodd saw a buck deer, chased by dogs, leap a wall near the Catholic church and fall. They went to it and found it lying with a broken back. The men carried the animal to the nearby barn of Rev. Henry E. Lennon.

Move To Stop Deer Killing
The S. P. C. A. have offered a reward of $10 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the owners of the dogs who killed one of the tame deer at Rolling Park, Concord. Residents in the vicinity are considerably stirred up over the matter as for some time past the women who live in that section have had to stand guard over the deer enclosure, so to speak, in order to prevent the dogs from killing them.

Fined For Inciting Shoe Factory Riot

Five men charged with inciting to riot in connection with a strike at the Chase-Chamberlain shoe factory in Raymond last October, paid fines of $50 each and costs in the superior court Exeter. A meeting will soon be held in Washington, at which Governors Milliken of Maine and Bartlett of New Hampshire, Engineers Brownell, Grover and Jones will confer with Secretary of the navy Daniels to decide which of the three different locations for the bridge shall be accepted. The bridge will have three spans across the main channel.

Farmers Not Opposed To... Daylight Saving

George M. Putnam, business manager of the Merrimack county farm bureau, in a reply to the referendum vote on daylight saving, expressed the opinion that the farmers of the country would not be likely to interfere with the wishes of the people of Concord, and that only when an effort is made to force upon the people of this country a change of the clock which through change of train service forces the farmer to adopt, much to his disadvantage and financial loss the new time too, would a protest be entered.

Try To Get Game Department Fund

In a communication addressed to the sportmen of the state, Commissioner Mott L. Bartlett, head of the fish and game department of New Hampshire makes this startling announcement:

"Many people are criticising our use of tax payers money for the purposes that do not concern all the people. In fact I understand that a move is on foot to take away any surplus we may have at the next session of the legislature."

Continuing the commissioner says:

"It is true that most of our money comes from tax payers, but it is not tax money. The only things at the present time furnished us by the state through tax money is our office rent, including heat and light; all other money comes from licenses, fines, fees and forfeitures.

"The law is very clear that this money is intended to be put into a fund held and used by the department for the purpose of the department. Each license which we issue is virtually a contract with the man who buys it, to spend his money for fish and game interests. Out of about $75,000 collected in license money last year $30,000 was from non-residents who cheerfully paid their license fee with the understanding that it went into the fish and game.

If this money is diverted how can the state honorably explain its position to these men?

"One way of preventing any such diversion is to spend all our surplus before the legislature meets. Your commissioner feels that a great deal should be spent in that time but in order that new propositions shall be successful they must be brought along carefully and with a good deal of study, so that it might not be possible to bring them to completion before that time. Another way is, to have the public informed of conditions. If they and their representatives understand that this money comes directly from the sportman and is intended solely for the sportman's benefit, I do not believe that they will be unfair enough to support such a move."

Manchester To Have Exposition

According to an announcement just made by the chamber of commerce it is an assured fact that Manchester is to have a mammoth industrial exposition, which will center the attention of New Hampshire and New England upon that city and will display in striking fashion the variety and extent of its manufactured products. The exposition will be held for four or five days in the middle of May and will be in the armory on Pleasant st.

INDIGESTION Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion at one time or another. Nearly every case is caused by Acid-Stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are sure signs of Acid-Stomach. These are heartburn, bloated intestines, food-poisoning, ulcers in the stomach. There are many ailments which while they do not cause much distress in the stomach itself are nevertheless due to acid in the stomach. Among these are: nervousness, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatism, impoverished blood, weakness, insomnia, melancholia and a long list of physical and mental maladies that keep the victim in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of Acid-Stomach. EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with acid indigestion for over two years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. After using EATONIC for a few days the gas and pains in my bowels are gone. EATONIC is just the thing I needed."

We have thousands of letters telling of these marvelous benefits. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise.

Your druggist has EATONIC. Get a big box from him today. He will refund your money if you are not satisfied.

Advantages in Knowing Chinese.

As part of an elaborate program in spoken languages Columbia university is to teach Dutch, Japanese, Arabic, Armenian, Chinese, French, Danish, Norwegian, Icelandic, Russian, Serbo-Croatian, Spanish and Turkish. The importance of Chinese was recently emphasized at Columbia by Juleah Arnold, American commercial attache at Peking, who told an audience that from 500 to 1,000 Americans should be trained in the essentials of Chinese civilization in the next ten years. Tremendous trade potentialities lie in China, said Mr. Arnold.
