FROM WASHINGTON

The Reporter's Correspondent Writes Interestingly

THE COUNTRY'S COAL SUPPLY

The continuing depletion of coal at the mines and the inability of the railroads to fully supply the coal mines with cars, has been causing a great deal of concern in Washington; and the old champions of "government ownership" ideas have been in evidence trying to show that the railroads under private ownership are not operating to their greatest efficiency. They are even crying out again for "government operation" of the coal mines.

There is no use ignoring the fact that the Government did not supply new equipment for the railroads when the Railroad Administration was in charge; and it also should not be forgotten that for the past five years the railroads have been so upset by political interference that investments in this class of securities slowed down, and new development came to a standstill.

Handicapped on every side, the Commission on Car Service of the American Railroad Association with the cooperation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been doing a fine service for the country in fighting against a coal famine.

In spite of strikes and insufficiency of labor and the resulting congestion, and in spite of the shortage of cars, the railroads have transported 40,100,000 net tons of bituminous coal in excess of the production during the corresponding period of 1919. The year 1920 is still approximately 16,500,000 tons behind 1917, but with the special efforts toward improving the transportation of coal made possible by the recent orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizing the railroads to give preference to coal shipments, it is hoped that the balance of the year will show an even better record.

Anthracite shipments during the year have been 40,099,000 net tons, or 9 percent over 1919. The figures are taken from the weekly bulletin of the United States Geological Survey, which attributes the failure to make even greater records largely to the effect of the railroad strikes.

THE NEW WATER POWER ACT

The Government is ready to do business under the new water power act, and the Commission to administer the act will be composed of the Secretaries of War, Interior and Agriculture. The new law is said to be satisfactory to the investment public and to the "conservationists." A statement from the Forestry Service at Washington comments on the power situation as it confronts the country. "Until fuel began to advance," says the statement, "steam power was going down. With the advance in coal, which has doubled in price in the last five years, the opposite result was brought about and every further increase in the cost of coal will put up the price of steam. Since the bill passed the Senate there have been applications prepared for the development of 500,000 horse power." Under good business conditions, the same authority estimates that 500,000 horse power from water will be added to the present output in the next five years.

In every part of the country there are water powers that are unused, either because the legislation in force prevented, or because of some condition that made steam power cheaper and more feasible. Most of these conditions detrimental to water power development have been remedied and it is high time for the different sections of the country to investigate most thoroughly, with the advantages of the new legislation in mind, the natural water powers in their different regions, that are capable of being harnessed.

KEEP THE WHEELS TURNING

A statement by the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce says that "there is evidence that the country is awaking from its recent orgy of extravagance, and that thrift will take its place as an instrument in restoring normal conditions." From this high altitude in the business world we are advised that "production in this country will never be threatened seriously by bolshevism and other isms," to which is added the finale that "constructive Americanism will contribute toward our social and economic progress."

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested by What is Taking Place Around

There is a whole lot of truth in this saying clipped from an exchange: A person is rich by what he does not spend, wise by what he does not know, good by what he does not do, and is kept alive by the things he does not eat.

Frank E. Bass has filed with the Town Clerk for the office of Republican Representative from Antrim, and will be a candidate of that party at the Primaries in September. Mr. Bass is the first candidate in town to file for any office. There is plenty of time, however, up to August 16—but the voters of both parties like to know as early as possible who all their candidates are to be.

Should the Suffragettes give credit where credit is due—and we think they will—there will be no question with which party they will cast their vote at the coming election. Here is what we have reference to: State legislatures that have ratified the amendment, Republican 29, Democratic 6. Legislatures rejecting amendment, Republican 1, Democratic 7. Governors calling special sessions to ratify amendment, Republican 16, Democratic 9. These are plain statements of facts that speak louder than words during a presidential campaign.

By announcement in another column, it will be seen that Calvin R. Wood, of Nashua, seeks the Republican nomination for Register of Deeds for Hillsborough County. Mr. Wood held this office for ten years, and in the mixup of nearly two years ago was retired for a time, and now feels that he should be returned to this position where he did such efficient work during the period of his occupancy. Those who know of his efforts while he held the office, speak very highly of his ability and the complete change he made in the system of indexing, etc., so that it is said by all who have occasion to use the records to be the best system in the state and by those outside, the best that they find anywhere. The Republican voters of the county will do well to give Mr. Wood a large vote at the Primaries on September 7.

We have been wondering for a little time what had happened to the Citizenship Class which for a time held regular meetings in the Selectmen's room. As we understood it, this was a meeting of the women of the town who were interested in learning somewhat concerning our town, state and national government, so as to be informed on matters concerning our political life, and later to vote intelligently on all matters concerning our welfare. This was a fine thing and was going good when all of a sudden it came to a standstill. Of course we had to make inquiries concerning the demise of so worthy an organization, and were surprised to learn that objection was made by some of the ladies that too much politics was being injected into the meetings and for this reason they were discontinued. This sounds funny! The very thing desired was the thing that killed it dead! We hope the ladies will not lose courage and if meetings of a similar nature cannot be continued that some means will be devised so that all who desire may procure the information necessary to make them the citizens they think they should be in order to be intelligent voters.

Dufrain-Brown

Miss Maude A. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown, of Concord Street, and Lawrence Dufrain, of Hancock, were married Monday evening, July 19, at the home of Rev. Frank Pearson, of Hancock, the single ring service being used.

The couple were attended by the bride's mother and Chester Dufrain, brother of the groom.

Following the ceremony, the couple left for a short trip, after which they will reside in Antrim for the summer. Mrs. Dufrain is employed by the Goodell Co., and will resume her duties there, after her return.

sophical advice and comment nowadays runs parallel with the above, and all that appears to be necessary is for everyone to do his part in keeping the wheels of industry turning.

After Seven Years

This Testimony Remains Unshaken

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Franklin story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

J. J. Lord, 60 W. Bow St., Franklin, N. H., says: "I had kidney trouble for years and suffered constantly from pains across my loins. I had continual grinding backache and my kidneys always bothered me. If I stooped to lift anything, sharp, darting pains shot through my kidneys and I could hardly straighten up. After using three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, the backache and lameness disappeared. My kidneys were regulated, too."

GONE FOR GOOD

Seven years later Mr. Lord said: "I am glad to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for they are a wonderful kidney medicine. They have made a permanent cure in my case."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Lord had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

GERMANS SIGN COAL PROTOCOL

Pehrenbach and Simons, After Consultation, Promise 6,000,000 Tons by November 1.

FRENCH WIN GREAT VICTORY.

2,000,000 Tons Monthly to Be Delivered, Despite All Objections—Referred to Committee That Will Meet in Geneva.

Spa, Belgium.—The Spa conference ended by the German plenipotentiaries signing the allied coal demands for 2,000,000 tons monthly, but not until the menace in the protocol, that the allies would occupy additional German territory in the event she defaulted in carrying out the terms, had been made a supplemental clause to the agreement and not an integral part of it.

The question of reparations was referred to a commission which will meet in Geneva in a few weeks. This commission will be composed of two representatives from each of the allied powers and two from Germany. As finally agreed upon, the reparations payments will be divided as follows: France, 52 per cent; Great Britain, 22 per cent; Italy, 10 per cent; Belgium, 8 per cent, and Japan and Portugal, each three-fourths of 1 per cent. The remaining 8 1/2 per cent will be divided among Serbia, Rumania and Poland.

Besides the 8 per cent Belgium is to receive, she will retain the priority right to 2,500,000,000 marks, from which will be paid sums loaned to Belgium by the allies.

The final session of the conference lasted until after 9 o'clock at night. For a time it looked as if it would be broken off by the refusal of the German envoys to sign the coal protocol unless their reservations regarding occupation of the Ruhr Basin by the Allies were accepted by the Powers. The German representatives withdrew and sent for all their ministers and leading business men, with whom they went into conference. Finally they sent word to the Allied Premiers that they would sign the coal agreement, but found it difficult to do so without a clear reservation.

Premier Millerand said that the Allies were following a twofold policy. It was one of conciliation and readiness to assist Germany to achieve economic recovery, he said, and also, on the other hand, they proposed taking every guarantee that the treaty would be enforced.

Dr. Walter Simons, German Foreign Minister, complained that Germany, despite her evidences of good will, had been confronted with the threat of occupation at each step.

But the most significant utterance made in the conference during the session was that of Premier Lloyd George, who declared that there was no danger of the occupation of the Ruhr region by the Allies unless there were forces at work in Germany which wanted such occupation and which tried to hinder the fulfillment of the coal agreement. If the Ruhr is occupied by the Allies, he declared, the fault would rest entirely with the Germans themselves.

Dr. Simons' only comment was that he did not know what parties were referred to by Mr. Lloyd George. This unexpected charge by the British Premier was the parting shock of the conference.

Instead of accepting the financial concessions of the Allies with satisfaction, the German experts greeted the allied proposal with marked distrust and made a last effort to defeat the entire program. They argued that since Germany must immediately increase her monthly coal deliveries by 900,000 tons this must be subtracted from the supply belonging to the German public utility corporations, railroads and industries. They declared that this would mean throwing 2,000,000 men out of work; would cut down the railroad service, with only one express train daily between Berlin and Cologne; would further reduce the gas and the electric supply and make living in Germany as wretched as it was during the worst period of last year.

PRESIDENT CALLS LEAGUE AT GENEVA

Overrides Allied Leaders' Preference for Brussels as Assembly's Seat.

Washington.—President Wilson has issued a call for a meeting of the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, Switzerland, on November 15.

While it was known that the president had agreed to comply with the request of the council of the league that he call the first meeting of the league assembly and that the date would be November 15, it was not definitely learned until Tuesday that Geneva is the place for the meeting of the league's first assembly.

The call issued by the President has been sent to all nations which are members of the league, each of which will be entitled to representation in the assembly. It went out Monday night. Under Article V of the League Covenant, "the first meeting of the assembly and the first meeting of the council shall be summoned by the President of the United States of America."

The President's decision in favor of Geneva as the initial meeting place not only means that the first sessions will take place on neutral soil, but that the President has again indicated his disapproval of Brussels as the place for the permanent seat of the league. It will be recalled that the allied powers were at first in favor of the selection of the Belgian capital. President Wilson took a firm stand against this at the peace conference, when he insisted that the seat should be on neutral soil, and Article 7 of the treaty, as finally signed, provided that the "seat of the league is established at Geneva."

Despite the fact that Geneva is so named in the treaty, there has been a movement among allied officials in favor of Brussels. The recent request of the league council that the President summon the first meeting of the league assembly was delivered in a manner to indicate that Lloyd George, Millerand and the other principal allied leaders favored Brussels. The President, however, for a second time, indicated his preference for Geneva.

THIRD PARTY SPLIT BROADENS

Boilers Declare Purpose of Convention "Not Fully Accomplished" and Adjourn in Row.

CANDIDATES ARE NOMINATED.

48-ers to Continue State Organization in States—Both Sides Called "Intolerant"—Committee Ends Wrangle Over Separate Ticket.

Chicago.—The new political movement promoted by the Committee of Forty-eight came to a tragic end. The last official act of the convention which intended to place in the field a strong radical presidential ticket was the adoption of a resolution which confessed that the gathering ended its labors "not having fully accomplished the purpose for which it was called."

The Forty-eight stayed in session after the Farmer-Labor party had completed its work by nominating this ticket:

For President—Parley P. Christensen of Salt Lake.

For Vice-President—Max S. Hayes of Cleveland.

Mr. Christensen is a Salt Lake City lawyer, and was once secretary of the Utah Republican State Committee. His running mate, Max S. Hayes, is a Cleveland labor leader.

With some of the earnest men and women who had chased the new political rainbow demanding the endorsement of the Christensen-Hayes ticket, others denouncing the leaders of the Forty-eight; some accusing Senator La Follette of duplicity, others defending him, and not a few actually weeping, the enterprise was brought to an abrupt and dramatic end.

The scenes that characterized the embalming—it was not actually interred—of the Forty-eight movement were not dissimilar to those that attended the breaking up of the Progressive party movement in 1916 following its desertion by the late Theodore Roosevelt. Realizing that they had been duped by the combination of intriguing politicians in the radical Labor party and their former allies, the rank and file of the dwindling army of Forty-eight felt and expressed only bitterness over the woeful blasting of their hopes.

These men and women, utterly lacking experience in political manipulation, made an attempt to reorganize the Forty-eight convention after J. A. H. Hopkins, the chairman of that body, had declared it adjourned amid the most turbulent conditions. The new venture failed to enlist enough support to make it worth while, although they did cheer a message from Christensen, the Farmer-Labor candidate for president, urging their support of him. The lights in the Cameo room, where the swan song of the Forty-eight movement was sung in a minor and almost tearful key, were put out while the valiant band of survivors was acclaiming its adherence to the ticket forced upon them by the experts in the radical labor and farmers organization, in whose hands they had proved to be mere babies.

Another group of Forty-eighters that refused to accept the inevitable conclusion of their leaders that failure had marked the efforts of the Forty-eighters to create a genuine party of protest against the two great parties, attempted to rally sufficient support to pin a presidential nomination on La Follette. It was quite uncertain to determine just how far this project advanced or to predict what will come of it.

La Follette had announced his disinclination to accept an independent nomination, though his supporters continued throughout the proceedings to intimate in vague terms that he might finally be induced to do so.

The committee on procedure appointed by the Committee of Forty-eight, reported recommending that the body continue to function as a national political party, with a complete set of national and state officers.

All signs lead to the belief the nation will see five tickets in the field this year, with five sets of candidates in the race for the White House goal, including the Socialist party with Eugene V. Debs, federal convict, as the nominee.

Longen thought the lump a boil so he squeezed it, and the pearl broke through the skin.

Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills today. They have helped people the world over.

A New Hampshire Case
Mrs. Wm. Devold, 25 Eastman St., Claremont, N. H., says: "I was confined to my bed by an attack of kidney trouble. My back, across my kidneys, was very lame and I could hardly turn over in bed. My feet and ankles were swollen and my kidneys failed to act properly. Two doctors were unable to help me. At last I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and a few more boxes put me on my feet and made me as well as ever."

Edna's Conscience Clear.
"Don't you think you ought stay at home like a good girl sometimes and let mother go to the theater? Don't you think mother likes to have fun, just the same as you?" Thus a strategic aunt addressed her fearful niece of six, who had protested when she saw her mother laying out an evening dress. The argument appealed to Edna's reason. She ceased to weep and considered the justice of the proposal. Then, having thought it out, she lifted up her voice again in walls.
"No, sir, auntie, I now, have done it. I've done the best I could. This, now, morning I tried to make mother have some fun. I want her to! So I asked her and asked her to go walking with me. And she wouldn't."

Amos J. Cummings and Ernest Jarrod were once in a pilot boat during a great storm. The former lay on a bunk, intently reading. The boat gave a fearful lurch and careened until it seemed that she must turn completely over.
"This is awful, Amos!" said Jarrod. "I'm going to put on a life preserver, for the boat can't stand it many minutes longer!"
"Oh, keep quiet and let me read, Mickey!" said Cummings, never lifting his eyes. "The men on this boat draw a regular salary to keep her afloat."—Saturday Evening Post.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

SOVIETS' MISUSE OF POWER

Conditions in Russia Under That Form of Government Not of a Sort to Command Themselves to Thinking Men.

Article XXVII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Soviet government has been a costly experiment. Russia is almost succumbing to the treatment; notwithstanding the "Red" army is meeting with success on the field, back of the army conditions in Russia are growing from bad to worse. The soviet leaders are drunk with power and they have conducted themselves as drunken men generally do. Reckless waste, intolerant officiousness, greed for spoils, are the record they have made. The political machine is the same plundering graft organization under communism in Russia that it is under democracy in other countries. The soviet government is a political machine, and communism has not changed its character or its methods. It has simply given it larger opportunities for spoils. Greater security in its corruption.

The "Socialdemocrat" prints some interesting extracts from the bolshevik budget for 1919.

According to this newspaper, the revenue for the first half of 1919 amounted to 20,350,000,000 rubles, and the expenditures to 50,708,000,000 rubles, so that the deficit for the first six months of 1919 of soviet Russia amounted to the enormous sum of over 30,000,000,000 rubles. The acquisition of foodstuffs and necessaries of life has cost a deficit of five billion rubles, and the railways four and a half billion rubles; thus a half year of bolshevik rule cost more than the total outlay on the whole war.

Money Expended Recklessly.

The report of the bolshevik, Nemensky, on the audit of the central soviet commission in charge of all textile factories, appeared in the "Sovetskaya Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn" of February 25, 1919. "The finance credit division of the central soviet commission received up to February 1, 1919, 3,400,000,000 rubles. There was no control of the expenditure of moneys. Money was advanced to factories immediately upon demand and there were cases when money was forwarded to factories which did not exist. From July 1 to December 31, 1918, the central soviet commission advanced on account of products, to be received, 1,348,619,000 rubles. The value of the goods securing these advances received up to January 1, 1919, was only 143,718,000 rubles. The negligent way of doing business may be particularly observed from the way the central soviet commission purchased supplies of raw wool. Up to January 1, 1919, only 129,803 pounds of wool was acquired, whereas the annual requirement is figured at 3,500,000 pounds.

"The tremendous staff of officials (about 6,000 persons) employed by the commission are in the majority of cases doing nothing useful. It appears that there were on the payroll of this institution 125 persons who actually were not in the service at all, but who were receiving salaries. There were cases where the same persons received salaries twice for the same period. The efficiency of the officials is negligible to a striking degree."

Such soviet institutions, Nemensky says at the end of his report, are a beautiful example of deadening bureaucracy and must be liquidated.

It would seem that the idealists in charge of the communist program in Russia are experts in "graft-rings" methods. Payroll padding is among their accomplishments. An innocent bystander might suspect some of these soviet officials of having a leaning toward private property, particularly when it is in easy reach.

Their Own Condemnation.

Probably it is fair to the bolsheviks to state their case in their own words. The bulletin of the central executive committee of the soviets, No. 15, 1919, announces: "We have created extraordinary commissions and extraordinary commissions without number. All of these are, to a lesser or greater degree, only mischief-makers.

"The tolling population see in the squandering of money right and left by the commissaries and in their indecent loudness and profanity during their trips through the district, the complete absence of party discipline."

People's Commissar Lunacharsky, according to the "Svernaya Komunna" of March 23, 1919, declared: "The upper stratum of the soviet rule is becoming detached from the masses, and the blunders of the communist workers are becoming more and more frequent. These latter, according to statements by workmen, treat the masses in a high-handed manner and are very generous with threats and repressions."

The soviet machine has had its "run in" with the workers. The factory committees have been bulldozed. The soviets have been brutal in their treatment of the proletariat.

"The struggle between the soviets and the committee of factory workers is an ordinary occurrence," according to the bolshevik newspaper "Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn" of April, 1919. Workers Denied Right to Strike.

The soviets have the whip hand in their controversy with the workers; they are the government and the "Red" army backs their decrees. There is a final court of settlement for all disagreements between the soviets and the workers. It is the "wall"—and the firing squad. The right of strike is denied the workers. Many of those who have dared to strike have paid for it with their lives. The workers are without recourse when commanded by the soviet. Whether or not they were the slaves of the machines before communism came, it is certain that they are now the slaves of the soviets. Even as slaves of the machines and the capitalists who owned the machines, they had the right to strike for their rights. The soviets deprived them of this right.

The bolshevik Sosnovsky, reporting on the condition in the Tver province, in the "Izvestia" of the provincial soviet March 9, 1919, wrote: "The local communist soviet workers behaved themselves, with rare exceptions, in a disgusting manner. Misuse of power is going on constantly."

The conduct of the soviet commissaries is a general scandal in Russia. Their conduct is described in No. 12, January 18, 1919, of the "Izvestia" of the provincial soviets: "The commissaries were going through the Tzaritzin county in sumptuous carriages, driven by three and often by six horses. A great array of adjutants and a large suite accompanied these commissaries, and an imposing number of trunks followed along. They made exorbitant demands upon the tolling population, coupled with assaults and brutality; their way of squandering money right and left is particularly characteristic. In some houses the commissaries gambled away and spent on intoxicants large sums. The hard-working population looked upon these orgies as complete demoralization and failure of duty to the world revolution."

These pen pictures of life in Russia under the soviet regime are not furnished by the enemies of bolshevism; they are the complaints of bolshevik leaders. Do we need a greater warning of the menace of bolshevism? (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

Reorganize Polish Police Force.
The British police mission which went to Warsaw under the direction of Gen. Sir Nevil Macready, commissioner of the metropolitan police, has submitted some reform proposals which the Polish government has adopted and which will have the effect of remodeling the Polish police force after the style of the metropolitan police. The Polish ministry of justice will co-operate with the British mission in carrying out the scheme, and it is anticipated that the latter will remain in Poland until reorganization has been completed.

Spain Urged to Cut Exports.
An editorial protest against the exportation of shoes, leather, foodstuffs, cotton and linen is published by Imparcial, Madrid. The newspaper gives statistics to show that while the exportation of shoes and leather from January to July, 1918, amounted to 13,000,000 pesetas, during the same period in 1919 exportation of these articles reached a value of 72,000,000 pesetas. The exportation of other raw materials also increased greatly. The Imparcial says this has been the cause of the large increases in the cost of living.

Clemenceau Drops War Duties.
Premier Clemenceau declared in an interview that he could not continue to represent the department of war in the chamber of deputies, adding that "after the effort of the last year I would be loath to start again on a task with a fear that my strength fail me before it could be completed."

"Everything is not finished with our victory," he continued. "We must still accomplish formidable work, demanding patience for which France may be incapable. I will always have a duty to perform, though I have ceased to be a member of parliament."

Belgium Buckles to Her Task.
Belgium is manfully grappling with the great problem of domestic reconstruction. Like practically every other country she is faced with a tremendous shortage of houses, besides her own great devastated areas which must in some way be rehabilitated. Every day, however, the work must become easier, and with a people so remarkably determined to secure unity amongst themselves and the maximum of effort, a comparatively short time ought to see Belgium well on the way to complete rehabilitation.

Italy Urged to Join Russia.
Deputy Cicotti, in a speech before the Italian chamber, urged Italy to break away from the allies and associate herself with the Russian soviet government. This was the first declaration of the Italian socialists' policy toward the allies.

Immediately after Cicotti's speech leaders of the Catholic block let it be known that their party has decided against a parliamentary coalition with the socialists.

"Villain."
This word has come down to us from Latin through the French and means a very wicked person. In Roman times, however, a "villanus" (from "villa," a country home or estate) was only a farm servant and often a very good man.

Former Mayor Charles J. French of Concord was the first candidate this year to take advantage of the chance to save a filing fee of $50 by securing signatures for a nomination on petition. He took his petitions to the secretary of state properly signed and entered his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

Following the death of her husband, the late Prof. William H. Schofield of Peterborough, and the obvious responsibilities his death has entailed, Mrs. Mary L. C. Schofield sent in her resignation as chairman of the New Hampshire Republican Women's committee to Dwight Hall, state chairman of the Republican party.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Abbot-Downing Truck and Body company, Concord, Treasurer Josiah E. Governor Bartlett has accepted an invitation to be present.

Automobiles or teamsters have been killing turkeys for Mrs. J. B. Wallace on the old Newport road, Claremont. Recently she was in the village and when she returned she found three dead in her driveway, where someone had backed up to turn around and ran over the turkeys. Sunday, while at church, two more were killed in a similar manner.

Work is going along rapidly on the new dam at Amoskeag falls, Manchester. During the past few weeks about 150 more men have been added to the force at work there which makes the total about 400 hands. Many men who were thrown out of employment by the closing of the worsted department have found jobs on the construction work.

POISONED MAN FORMER NASHUAM

John L. Parker, 70, who died at his home Pine Point, Mo., by taking Paris Green by mistake for sugar, was a former Nashua. He was brother of Chas. H. Baker, who formerly ran a fish market where the Whiting block now stands, and himself lived there for years.

Fire Destroys Goat Ranch at Dunbarton.
Fire, of unknown origin, caused a damage, estimated at several thousands of dollars, to the farm buildings at the N. Nashua goat ranch, Dunbarton. One of the employees of the farm is missing and it is reported that he lost his life in the flames.

The Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce has taken steps to reassure motorists and travelers, who come to the gates of that city, that they need not fear the penalization of the law in regard to technical violations of the auto laws locally and that the only effort which the local authorities are making is to stop excessive speeding on the heavily traveled thoroughfare.

Returns $20,000 Bag He Picked Up.
Edwin E. Saunders of Nashua, wholesale meat dealer, while driving his auto back from Boston, picked up a bag in the road which contained $20,000. Of this amount $3500 was in cash and the remainder in stocks and bonds. When he opened the bag after reaching home he learned the address of the owner, a clergyman living just outside Boston, whose name he declined to give.

The clergyman dropped the bag on his way to his summer home in Northern New Hampshire. His son was given the bag.

Examines Several Cases
Dr. Ira H. Prouty of Keene who is in charge of the work in Cheshire county for the New Hampshire Tuberculosis association, examined 133 at the clinics during the latter part of May and in June. Out of that number there were 54 positive cases, 27 were negative and 50 were suspicious. He is assisted in the work in Keene by Miss Carrie Canfield, who visits the homes of patients. She has made 250 home visits and 101 business calls. She has accompanied three patients to sanitariums. Dr. Prouty at the present is devoting his entire attention to Keene, but within a few weeks, or as soon as he has the matter well in hand in Keene, he will devote some of his time in other towns in the county.

Shetland Pony as Auto's Passenger.
Capital city folks were treated to an odd sight on Main st. when a well known make of motor cars, one which is listed to sell at $8000, passed along carrying a Shetland pony riding in the tonneau in company with a man and acting as though it was a common experience to travel in a luxurious touring car. Strapped to the back of the machine was a "basket" phaeton, evidently used as part of the pony outfit. A liveried chauffeur drove the car which bore a Massachusetts number. Directly in the wake of the machine was a car painted a bright blue and bearing a yellow registration plate issued by the Canal Zone, Panama government. It was numbered 173.

New Hampshire cow-test associations are posting the scores of their cows over against one another each month in a contest that some of the members say is as interesting to watch as the scores of the big league ball teams. That there are some heavy-hitting cows in the state is shown by the fact that the ten highest cows during the month of June in eight of the eleven associations all batted for over 68 pounds of butter-fat. Four of the high cows were placed by the Merrimack Valley association; two by the Contocook valley; two by the Hillsborough; and one each by the Monadnock and Stratford-Carroll.

The high cow for the month was Tehee Payne, P. B. A., owned by Francis Pratt of Derry, with 2640 lbs. milk, 3.5% fat, and 92.4 lbs. fat.

Apple-Scab Menace of State Orchards.
Reports of an unusually serious attack of apple-scab in many orchards of the state are coming in to the Agricultural Experiment Station, Durham. This disease thrives in wet seasons and has accordingly had a favorable start. Growers of McIntosh, Greening and other scab-susceptible varieties are urged to take particular care with their trees on account of the infection this year.

The scab attacks both fruit and leaves, causing the former to dwarf and crack, and on the latter forming smoke-brown patches which become swollen and blisterlike. Trees affected should be sprayed at once with a lime-sulfur solution, 1-2 gallons to 50 gallons of water, plus 1 lb. powdered arsenate of lead or 2 lbs. arsenate of lead paste. If the disease persists, this spraying should be followed by another in three weeks' time. It is highly desirable that the spray be applied before rain-periods.

Spraying Time Comes to Close.
The several motor spraying machines which were sent out early in the season from the U. S. bureau of entomology station, Franklin, have returned, the spraying season for gypsy moth caterpillars having ended. The season was late in opening and the necessity for spraying has lasted unusually late.

There have been lots of bugs found, but the damage from them in this state has not been as extensive as last season.

A good word should be said regarding the improvements Landlord Lane has been making at the Maplehurst Inn. The fixing up of the piazzas has improved the looks of the house very much and will prove a fine thing for the comfort and pleasure of the guests. The two coats of paint on the outside makes the house look like new and presents a very attractive appearance. This in addition to the neatness and cleanliness of everything inside, and the reputation the house has for a good table and courteous service, is an asset of considerable worth to our local hostelry.

TO MY FELLOW REPUBLICANS OF THE FOURTH COUNCILLOR DISTRICT:

I have decided to offer you my services as your Candidate for Councillor for this District, and I respectfully submit for your consideration the following statement of my qualifications for the position:

First—Nine years as an employe in various corporations.

Second—Five years of active practice as a Member of the New Hampshire Bar.

Third—Half owner of the Nashua Steam Press & Boiler Works, manufacturers of Crawford Presses, in Nashua, and Manager and Director of the Abbot-Downing Company, of Concord, manufacturers of Concord Trucks and Abbot-Downing Bodies, for the last two years.

Fourth—I own one of the largest herds of dairy cattle in Hillsboro County, and consequently am much interested in all that pertains to enabling the farmers to secure for his product at least as much as it cost him to produce it. I am also very much interested to see to it that some improvement is made in the law as it stands with reference to tuberculosis in cattle.

Fifth—I am Secretary of the Republican State Committee, Secretary of the Hillsboro County Republican Club. I have been Secretary of the Nashua Republican City Committee.

Sixth—I am the only Republican who ever carried the 13th Senatorial District since its present boundaries were established, and was Chairman of Judiciary Committee of the State Senate in 1917.

Seventh—For two years I was a member of the Board of Trustees of State Institutions, and in view of the fact that the Governor's Council now have charge of the Institutions, my experience in their management should assist me materially in the performance of my duties.

Eighth—The fact that I commute to Concord every day except Sundays and holidays, would enable me to tend to my duties with much more efficiency and much less expense to the State for travel and expenses.

The fact that several hundred Democrats in the 13th District voted for me in 1917, enabling me to record the first Republican victory in that District, would indicate that my nomination should strengthen our Ticket, in Hillsboro County, because when a voter crosses over so near the head of the State Ticket, in many instances he will vote for other Republicans.

Whether you accord me the nomination I seek or not, it is my intention this Fall to take an active part in the campaign with a view to rendering what little assistance I can to the election of Republicans from the great office of President down to the biggest Ward Clerk of the smallest Ward in the State.

Yours for a great Republican victory,

MARCEL THERIAULT.

INSPIRED BY LOVE

Remarkable Flag Made by Young American Girl.

Country's History, From the Birth of Independence, Woven into Emblem in Honor of Heroes of Spanish-American War.

Peace unfurled a million flags throughout the world, but not one of them was as remarkable and romantic as that which Josephine Mulford wrought with her own hands a score of years ago in honor of the heroes of the Spanish-American war, observes London Answers.

The flag on which Josephine toiled night and day for more than a year, with a great love to inspire her fingers, is so large that three battalions of soldiers could be massed on it, and so heavy that half a dozen strong men could barely raise its folds from the ground.

But it is the romance of its fashioning that places it so far above all its rivals.

It was begun on the first day of July, 1898, in the parlor of an old homestead in New Jersey, and from the first stitch to the last it was never for a moment out of the hands or thoughts of the young girl who had set herself this patriotic task. Every stitch was counted as it was made; for it represented an American soldier who was fighting in Cuba.

The Pennsylvania star was partly made in the room in which, a century and a quarter earlier, Betsy Ross worked, under Washington's guidance, on the very first American flag which proclaimed the independence of the state; and the star was finished in the room where the first continental congress met.

To make Virginia's star she traveled to Mount Vernon and stitched it in one of the rooms of Washington's home. The Maryland star was made at Fort McHenry, historically associated with "The Star-Spangled Banner" of Francis Scott Key, and New York's star was made partly in the very room in which Washington said good-by to his officers, and partly on board the flag-ship New York.

And thus, making as far as possible each stitch historic, the colossal task proceeded, until the last of the 325,000 stitches was made, with loving, if trembling, fingers, and she rose from her year's work triumphant, but shattered in health.

Josephine lived to see her flag proudly floating over Madison Square garden, to thunders of cheers from a hundred thousand throats. Then came a terrible reaction from the long strain, and within a few weeks the hands that had toiled so long and lovingly were still in death.

But the spirit of courageous love which Josephine Mulford breathed into her work lives on—for courage cannot die.

Health in Business.

A business man walked into a doctor's office the other day.

He looked in the pink of condition. "I want a thorough physical examination," he said.

The doctor accommodated him. Heart was sound, lungs were healthy, kidneys and all other organs functioning properly.

"You're the most splendid specimen I've seen in a long time," said the doctor.

"Thanks; I intend to remain so," said the client. "You shall go over me like this every six months. And I propose to have every man in a responsible position in my organization undergo a similar examination twice a year."

"A competing firm recently put a man into an important job who looked as well as I. He broke down, and in the demoralization of the firm's business that came with the breaking, our firm has taken over one of their biggest and best accounts. A condition of twenty years' standing, which he thought completely overcome, caused that man's breakdown."

"I don't propose that my firm shall suffer through any such experience." Good, hard business applied to health. Doesn't good sense recommend to every man such prudence?

How many men can you recall who have discovered a serious state of health too late to mend?—Haverhill Gazette.

Gold Abundant in Siberia.

Literally speaking, rivers in the Okhotsk district have golden bottoms, says a bulletin of the British bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Three men working in a primitive fashion in the winter wash out easily up to five funts (68 ounces troy) of gold a day. The Okhotsk deposits contain many nuggets. Nuggets weighing one-half funt are not rare. Last winter one zolotnik (0.157147 ounce troy) of gold cost 25 rubles; at the present time it costs 100 rubles. In spite of the rich deposits in this district, many concessions are not being exploited. A United States firm has explored the mine purchased from Stepanov, and is energetically preparing to work it.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

By JACK LONDON

Jack London was born with the love of adventure in his veins. At San Francisco, Jan. 12, 1876. He started his education at the University of California, but did not finish it there, for the strenuous life was to be his school, and all humanity were to be his teachers, any strange place his school-room. Now he was in the Klondike; now at sea before the mast; then he was in Japan and seal hunting in Bering Sea; again he was tramping through the United States and Canada, learning all he could of men and their ways; he was journalist and lecturer, war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese war, and ever and anon making those voyages which kept the eyes of the world upon him. How he broke into the realm of letters he has vividly described; his own great battle with John Barleycorn, told with unusual frankness, did a great deal to set the stage for John's present tragic plight; his own personality kept the great reading public as interested as did the creations of his imagination; his books came thick and fast, beginning with 1900, sometimes two and three a year. He was twice married, first to Jessie Madden and second to Charmian Kittredge, who plays a large part in his later books. He died Nov. 21, 1916.

The keen eyes of Wolf Larsen, master of the sealing schooner Ghost, bound for Japanese poaching grounds, spotted the bobbing head of Humphrey Van Weyden amid the waves of San Francisco bay, into whose waters Humphrey had been thrown as a result of a shipwreck. A few moments more and Humphrey was aboard the Ghost.

Rescued, he faced his rescuer with thanks and a request to be put ashore. The skipper eyed him curiously. "What do you do for a living?" he asked.

"I—I am a gentleman," Humphrey stammered.

"Who feeds you?" "I have an income."

Wolf Larsen's lips curled in a sneer. "You stand on dead men's legs. You couldn't walk alone between two sunrises and hustle the meat for your belly for three meals. You stay here as cabin boy for the good of your soul. I'll make a man of you."

Instant rebellion leaped into Humphrey's eyes. Before he could protest there came a sudden interruption—a clamor from the real cabin boy, a great husky youth who stood by. Wolf Larsen turned and crashed his fist into the boy's stomach. Crumpled like a wet rag around a stick, the lad collapsed into a heap on the deck.

"Well," said Wolf Larsen meaningly to Humphrey, "have you made up your mind?"

The spark of manhood in Humphrey died out.

"Yes," he replied weakly. "Yes, sir!" "Yes, sir."

And thus Humphrey passed into the servitude of Wolf Larsen, the Sea Wolf. His blinking eyes, half revealing and half concealing his terror, surveyed his master and thus appraised him: "Massive of build, like a huge gorilla; with a strength, savage and ferocious; features of no evil stamp; eyes of baffling protean gray, sometimes as chill as an Arctic landscape, sometimes all aglow with love-lights—intense, masculine and compelling—which at the same time fascinate and dominate women until they surrender in a gladness of joy and of relief and sacrifice."

His creed, the mighty will which engined Wolf Larsen, was short. "Life is a mess," he declared. "The big eat the little that they may continue to move; the strong eat the weak that they may retain their strength. The lucky eat the most and move the longest, that is all."

His company on shipboard: seamen sodden and sullen by drink, more animal than human; a group of seal hunters, wild reckless nomads, ignorant of an ordered world—all slaves in body and spirit to the Sea Wolf.

Yet there was a gentle side to Wolf Larsen. He was no ignorant cave man. He could discuss literature with "Hump," roll over his lips the poetic glories of Shelley and Browning, argue the sciences with amazing fluency and be disarmingly charming at times.

As the days rolled on and murderous quarrels made the hours hideous, Humphrey's backbone gradually stiffened. He dreamed of killing the Sea Wolf. But Larsen fascinated him and like some splendid animal, some dangerous beast, held him in a spell. He knew the world should be rid of such a monster, yet Larsen's eyes compelled obedience.

Day by day, with not a gleam of graciousness to break the orgy of brutishness, this tragic drama went on. Humphrey despaired of even a gleam of sunshine. Suddenly fate intervened in the person of Maude Brewster.

Like Humphrey, she came to the Ghost from the sea, saved from a wrecked liner. Like Humphrey, she expected to be put aboard a passing vessel. But no! The Sea Wolf had other plans. She was added to the crew as Humphrey was, and likewise "for the good of her soul."

Maude received the news in wonderment. What kind of a man was this mocking master of the Ghost? She was soon to find out.

The rook had offended Larsen. A rope was coiled around the offender and he was cast overboard in the wake of the ship. A shark rushed for him and Larsen ordered him pulled in. Despite the maddened haste, the shark in the final rush tore away the foot of the victim.

"The shark was not in the reckoning, Miss Brewster," said the Sea Wolf, smilingly. "It was—shall we say—an act of Providence."

This scene convinced Humphrey that he must kill Wolf Larsen. His courage flared up so brightly that he actually threatened to murder him.

The Sea Wolf barked a whimsical snarl: "Bravo, Hump, you do me proud. I like you the better for it."

Humphrey winced. He confided his resolution to Maude, with whom, he had fallen in love. She counseled against it, protesting that moral courage always defeats brute force, but she failed to convince him. He knew the Sea Wolf too well.

The dancing lights in Wolf Larsen's eyes when he looked into Maude's warned Humphrey that some day the storm would break. And it did. In the midst of the night, he rushed into Maude's cabin to find her in the crushing embrace of Wolf Larsen.

Humphrey flung himself on the monster to be tossed aside like a chip. He rushed again, drawing his knife, plunging the blade into the Sea Wolf's shoulder. Larsen staggered back and Maude seized Humphrey, begging him not to kill. Suddenly the Wolfe collapsed, not from his wound, but as if from some uncanny spell that paralyzed him. The giant was helpless. Humphrey carried him to his berth and realized that opportunity for escape was at hand.

Maude and he put off in a small boat, hoping that they might make Japan, 800 miles away. But the winds and creeping drift of the Pacific intervened and finally the grim adventure ended for a time on a little Arctic island. Here they prepared to remain for the winter.

Suddenly one morning, weeks after, Humphrey saw on the beach the wreck of a vessel, and it was strangely familiar. It could not be—yes it was—the Ghost. The blood chilled in his veins. Wild thoughts of flight or the sudden ending of both their lives entered his mind. Then a wondering cunning succeeded such fears. He would kill Wolf Larsen, kill him as he slept for all on board were doubtless sleeping. With knife and gun he climbed to the deck. He saw no one. Was the ship deserted after all?

But as he rounded the poop there burst on his gaze the Sea Wolf. Humphrey raised his gun; the trigger clicked sharply. Then silence.

"Why don't you shoot?" coolly remarked the Wolf.

Humphrey could not speak. "Hump," said the Sea Wolf, slowly. "You can't do it. And after all I have taught you. You know that I would kill an unarmed man as readily as I would smoke a cigar. Bah! I had expected the better things of you, Hump."

Humphrey slowly lowered the gun. The Ghost's presence was explained calmly by the Sea Wolf. He was caught in a net he had set for his hated brother, "Death" Larsen, his crew were taken away and he was left alone. Pacific storms did the rest.

A strange weariness in the Sea Wolf's bearing, a hesitant, preoccupied air about him puzzled Humphrey. A few days later he again summoned courage to put him out of the way. But this time he saw Wolf Larsen slowly making his way down the deck, his quivering finger tips groping for the hand rails.

Wolf Larsen was blind! No need to kill him.

Maude and Humphrey determined to escape by repairing the Ghost, but the Sea Wolf willed otherwise. Blind and helpless as he was, he craftily contrived to ruin Humphrey's work, determined they should die together, so his grim revenge would be complete. Fiendish cunning and instinct to kill still remained.

A final reckoning was to come. Scorning precaution because he felt the Sea Wolf physically powerless from the suspected presence of a tumor on the brain, Humphrey ventured too near one day. Suddenly the Sea Wolf's stopper passed. The steel-like fingers gripped Humphrey's throat. The trap had sprung.

Maude leaped into action, tearing at Larsen's hands. But for once the Sea Wolf's tremendous will could not spur his weakened body. His fingers twitched and then relaxed and Humphrey was released.

"That was the last play of the Wolf," said Larsen, with his twisted smile. "I'd like to have done for you first, Hump. I thought I had that much left in me."

And so Wolf Larsen faded into unconsciousness, a pitiful ending for this grim sea murderer, who pictured himself roaring to death in a blaze of tumult and evil splendor.

Soon the restored Ghost embraced the waves again, freighted with happiness. Then a trail of smoke on the horizon, a rescue and the lovers kiss as the cutter went dancing over the waves on the long road home.

POULTRY

KEEP POULTRY HOUSE CLEAN

Excrement Harbors Parasites, Contaminates Air and Breeds Contagion of Many Kinds.

Everything about a poultry house should be kept reasonably clean. As a rule, droppings should be removed daily, for the accumulation of excrement harbors parasites, contaminates the air, and breeds contagion. After the dropping boards have been cleaned they should be sprinkled with road dust, coal ashes, or land plaster, to absorb the liquid excrement, the poultry division of the United States department of agriculture suggests. Nests in which straw or other similar material is used should be cleaned every three or four weeks, or oftener if it becomes damp or dirty.

The quarters should be thoroughly whitewashed at least once a year, late in summer or early in the fall. The whitewash can be made by slaking lime in boiling water and then thinning to the proper consistency for applying. The addition of four ounces of carbolic acid to each gallon of whitewash will increase its disinfecting power. The runs should be plowed occasionally in order to bury the accumulated droppings and also to turn up fresh soil.

KILL DEVITALIZING INSECTS

Paint Roosts With Kerogene ON to Get Rid of Mites—Use Blue Ointment for Lice.

The protection from mites means simply to paint the roosts about once each week with kerosene oil and the lice can be killed off by the summer by giving each bird the blue ointment treatment at the beginning of hot weather. This has been told many times by poultrymen and probably there is no poultry fact that needs more frequent repetition than the best method of killing these devitalizing pests.

CULLING POOR LAYERS

- 1. Well along in the molt with combs and wattles dried up.
- 2. All that have lay bones less than two fingers apart and small capacity.
- 3. Abdomen and vent dry and puckered.
- 4. Yellow shank and beak.
- 5. Apply all the test; don't apply just a part of it—do it right.

DRY MASH FEED FOR CHICKS

Animal Food in Some Form, Preferably Buttermilk, Should Be Kept Before Fowls.

A dry mash feed should be kept before the chicks continuously—a mash feed containing animal protein in some form, preferably buttermilk, meat scraps or fish scraps. These elements of animal protein in prepared mash feeds are scientifically dried and do not easily decompose.

GET EGGS FROM TURKEY HENS

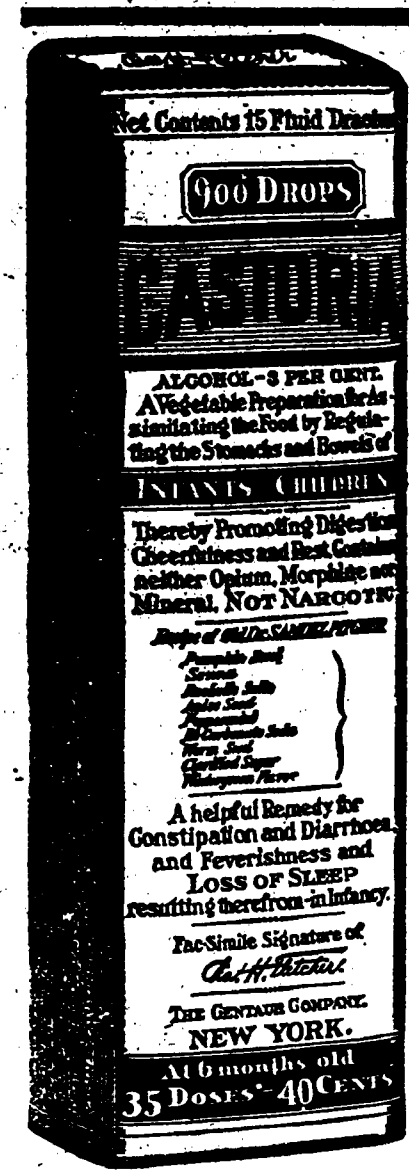

Increased Production Can Be Obtained by Feeding Ground Oats, Corn and Other Cereals.

Increase of egg production in turkey hens can be done the same as with chickens, by feeding ground oats, ground corn, kafir meal, barley meal, wheat middlings, linseed meal, and sunflower seed, in equal quantities. This can be fed dry in hoppers, or mixed with milk or water.

MITE IS ENEMY OF CHICKEN

Insect Does Not Bother Other Fowls to Any Extent—Carried About in Empty Crates.

Chicken mites do not feed to any great extent upon other hosts when chickens are at hand. They are carried about chiefly by the interchange of poultry and in crates and boxes in which fowls are shipped.

Special Care of Baby. That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food. A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your crying child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

Job for Mother. As the motorbus rattled and roared on its way the small and solemn youngster stared unflinchingly at the old gentleman who sat opposite him. Presently his relentless gaze began to create a diversion, he winked at the small boy.

Chinese "Gossips." In China there is a very strange profession for women. It is carried on by the elderly ladies, who go the round of the best houses, announcing their coming by beating a drum, and offering their services to amuse the lady of the house. This offer accepted, they sit down and tell the latest scandals and the newest stories and bits of gossip, and are rewarded at the rate of a few pennies per hour.

"I don't often make a mistake in my official calkerations," admitted Constable Slackputter, the redoubtable sleuth, "but I'll have to own up that yesterday evening I pretty nigh done so. A stranger, that looked like he represented a fair-sized fine and a nice little fee, came along in his motorcar, sorter wabbling in his progress and singing, 'My Irene Is the Village Queen. Rum-tum-tiddy! Er-rum-tiddy-tum!' and so forth.

"Halt, there!" says I. "Consider yourself under arrest!"

"And b'gashed, if he didn't stop and cuss me for everything he could lay his tongue to!

"What are you trying to arrest me for, you blankity-busted, lop-eared, red-necked hick?" says he.

"For being so bone-dry drunk," says I, "that you don't know what you're doing!"

"Like torment, I don't!" says he. "I'm cussing out a blankity-blanked, muton-headed, tin-starred boob!" says he. "That's what I'm doing!"

"Well, of course, I seen he did know. So all the action I could take was to haul in my horns and wave him onward with as much dignity as I could manage to assume on the spur of the moment."—Kansas City Star.

Is This to Be a "Cyclone Summer?"

By John Dickinson Sherman

PHIL. TRIVETT, JR., SEASIDE, JUNE 11, 1915

AT ELLES, IAN, IN JULY, 1915

IS THIS to be a "cyclone summer?" Which is to say, is the Mississippi valley to be visited this season by an unusual number of these terrifying tornadoes so destructive to life and property and as freakish as destructive? The early returns seem to indicate that the "twister" is bent on a busy summer.

The proper phrase to be used in putting this question is "tornado summer." According to the dictionaries, our American twister is not a cyclone, since a cyclone is a violent storm, often of vast extent, characterized by high winds rotating about a calm center of low atmospheric pressure which moves onward with a velocity of from 20 to 30 miles an hour.

The tornado, on the other hand, is a "funnel-shaped cloud, like a water-spout, sand-column or dust-whirl, with very violent and destructive eddies and whirls of wind, progressing on a narrow path for many miles over land. The wind is too violent to be measured and the barometric pressure falls so rapidly that wooden structures are often lifted and burst open by the air within them."

But Kansas calls them cyclones. So cyclones they shall be here. For once upon a time, not very long ago, the east thought Kansas grew cyclones or made them or produced them—whatever the right word is.

"To the early settlers of Kansas, coming as they did from distant eastern states where such phenomena are almost unknown, these storms were one of the wonders of a new country, to be told over and over to visitors and sent as special items of news to papers that gave them wide publicity," says S. D. Flora, Kansas meteorologist. "The result has been that the expression 'Kansas cyclone' has become almost an idiom of the language, and the reputation of the state for visitations of these storms is greater than that of any other part of the country, when, as a matter of fact, there is no reason to believe, in the light of available data, they are any more numerous here, area considered, than in any other states in this part of the country."

Anyway, Kansas became "the cyclone state," and the thing eventually became such a scandal that, soon after the Civil war Uncle Sam decided to investigate and sent out an army officer to trail the cyclone to its lair. The report of this investigator is still among the dusty archives of the United States weather bureau. It contains facts both of scientific and popular interest.

For example, he tells about the woman who lost her hair. He says she was a woman with exceptionally long hair; that the storm cut or tore most of this hair from her head, twisted it into a rope and left it lying near her, while the hair left upon her head was tightly curled into many little wisps filled with sand.

It was the same cyclone, according to this official report, that bore down upon a large house exceptionally well built of logs and heavy native timbers, hit one corner of it a resounding whack, veered off, whirled out around the barn and attacked the house from the opposite side, dissipating it over the landscape so thoroughly that much of it was never seen again.

He describes trees in which sand had been driven entirely through the bark into the wood of the tree. And this was not merely on one side of the trunk, but around its entire circumference. In another place he found trees still standing, but stripped of every particle of their bark.

So you see, for a beginner, this official investigator did pretty well.

Of course, the weather bureau has accumulated a mass of "cyclone literature." Here's an interesting bit:

"They may form after several hours of light wind or during a violent thunder storm. Persons who have witnessed their formation usually report a great commotion in a threatening cloud, or, more commonly, 'two clouds come together.' From this whirling mass the characteristic cloud descends until, in the case of damaging storms, it touches the earth. Sometimes the cloud is really funnel-shaped; more commonly it is described as resembling an elephant's trunk or gigantic snake as it writhes and sways back and forth in its progress. Other observers have stated that it reminded them of a rope swinging back and forth from the clouds. Usually in the case of a slender cloud the color is milky white except near the ground, where it is dark from flying dust and debris. Clouds of large diameter are usually much darker."

A still better simile, it would seem, is that of a gigantic balloon, scudding low across country before the wind and dragging an enormous cable which trails along on the ground, twisting and turning and creating fantastic destruction.

It seems to be established that west of the Rockies and east of the Alleghenies there isn't much danger from cyclones. But anywhere in the Mississippi Valley it's keep your eye open. Chicago has thought itself immune, owing to some peculiar influence exerted by the Great Lakes, but this spring a real twister visited its suburbs to the northwest.

It is estimated by the weather experts that "for any specific area or farm of one square mile the probability of being visited by a tornado is less than 1-16 of 1 per cent per century."

There is a popular feeling that cyclones, like lightning, do not strike the same spot twice. Nevertheless it is of record that Codell, Rooks county, Kan., was hit three years in succession on May 25 at the same hour of the day.

The crop of "cyclone stories" is very large every year. The plain truth is that almost anything that is told may as well be believed. There seems to be no limit to the fantastic vagaries of these twisters. For example, here's what an official weather bureau record says, in part:

"The freakish occurrences that result from these storms will tax the credulity of a person who has never seen them. The often recited instances of straws being blown with such violence that they are left sticking in the bark and the wood of a tree or post, have to be seen in order to be appreciated. Chickens are sometimes stripped of their feathers and left alive, though more often they are killed.

"An instance has been related on credible authority of a dresser being smashed to kindling and its mirror being carried some distance and set down against a fence without being cracked; also, of a window sash being blown from a railway depot, which was demolished, and laid down on an adjoining lawn with a heavy iron scale weight on it without the glass being broken.

"One of the remarkable features noted is the number of almost miraculous escapes." It is easy enough to understand that a house may be "exploded;" the passing twister creates a partial vacuum and the house, if tightly closed, is blown to pieces by the pressure of the air inside it. This vacuum also explains why feathers are pulled off chickens, since the quills contain air. But when wheat straws are driven into a green tree—then it's time to wonder.

Father Youngest of Family. Age is trying to get back to youth and it is resenting the semi-contemptuous respect of the younger generation. There is one eminent artist in London who absolutely refuses to admit that he is any older than his youngest child—and he has many children. The boys and girls do not call him "sir" or even "father." They all call him "George." And "George" remains the youngest and the most popular of the family.—London Chronicle.

United States Treasury Notes

The words "Treasur: Amer: Septent: Sigil:" on every treasury note issued by the government are abbreviated words for "Seal of the Treasury of North America." The Revolutionary government of the United States was continued under the Constitution without any change in some departments. By an act of the Continental congress of September 26, 1778, the treasury was organized with an auditor, comptroller and treasurer, and the same officers still run the treasury under the secretary and his assistants, and all paper money and bonds have the seal, not of the United States of America, but of the treasury of North America. It was the United States of North America which made treaties with France and Spain in 1778, Benjamin Franklin acting as commissioner for Congress.

HE WANTED IT RUBBED IN Congressman Evidently Was Not Satisfied With Knowing Himself to Be a Fool.

A healthy western congressman, says the Argonaut, much against his will, erected a magnificent mansion in Washington to please his wife and daughter. The congressman was of plain tastes and had no liking for the social activities of the national capital. One day an old friend visited him. Wearing a face of the deepest gloom, the owner of the stately home escorted his caller throughout the place. The visitor was admiring and enthusiastic, but the host said little or nothing. When the inspection was finished and the two had returned to the library on the first floor, the visitor said:

"Well, Jim, you certainly can't say that you haven't everything that you want."

"Yes, I can," replied the millionaire soberly; "I want a parrot."

SHIFTING STATUE OF LIBERTY Oldtimer's Simple Explanation of Matter That Had Greatly Puzzled the Rookie Gob.

The destroyer Sharkey, which arrived in New York harbor some days ago, dropped anchor near the Statue of Liberty on the starboard side, but during the night the tide shifted it about to the port side.

This transformation was most perplexing to a rookie gob, who finally confided his problem to a C. P. O. "Well, you see, it's like this," the oldtimer informed him. "New York and Brooklyn both claim the statue, so to stop the argument the government lets New York have it one day and then moves it over to the Brooklyn side the next."—American Legion Weekly.

"Dat's what you calls 'em is it?" she replied. "Well, honey, I've washed an' dressed you, and I've washed and dressed your pa before you, so lookin' at dem ain't no recreation to me."—Milwaukee Journal.

Mrs. Royce, of Hinsdale, is visiting at Lewis Knight's.

Moore King is entertaining his brother-in-law and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lounsberry, from Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ross motored to Pepperell, Mass., on Sunday in their new Overland touring car.

The "Silver Supper" given by the S. of V. Auxiliary for members and their families, on Monday night, was well attended and netted quite a goodly sum toward mending our leaky roof.

Mrs. Howard H. Weston, from Somerville, Mass., is visiting at "Stony Brook Farm." She will soon be joined by her daughter, Miss Ella, when they will occupy their own camp, on Lake George.

Mrs. Jennie Duncklee has a crimson rambler rose bush and one spray has three kinds of roses on it, some variegated, some pure white, and some of the original crimson; it is one of those unexplainable nature freaks which are so mysterious and so interesting.

Miss Thelma B. Weston spent Saturday with her parents. She is taking a summer session at the Keene Normal School. The athletic events are under the direction of Miss Collins, assisted by Miss Weston, and pupils are being instructed in swimming each week.

Miss Charlotte E. Balch accompanied Edward Fleming to St. Joseph's Hospital, in Nashua, last week, where he had an operation Monday of this week for the removal of tonsils and adenoid growth. Master Edward's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fleming, were with him on Monday.

Rev. David Howie, of Boston, supplied our pulpit again on Sunday. Strange to say, his text, Genesis 12:2, was the same from which Rev. Earl Osborne preached some weeks ago, the last three words of the text being Mr. Osborne's choice. Both were good sermons, although widely different.

Mrs. Ralph Messer and Mabel Bailey have returned from a vacation at the Beaches. Ralph Messer went to Provincetown for his vacation and was lucky enough to see a submarine and see it submerge. Mr. and Mrs. Messer could not both leave at the same time on account of their duties at the express office.

Harry Earle Prentiss, of Hamilton, Montana, was the guest of his aunt, Mrs. J. Dana Weston of "Stony Brook Farm" during the holidays; his father is half brother of Mrs. Weston. He is connected with the General Electric Co. at Schenectady, N. Y., and it is the first time he has visited this way. Thus a happy meeting took place and his visit was thoroughly enjoyed.

The "Girls Club" supper on Friday evening was a great success. The supper was delicious, and the girls made charming little waitresses in their white dresses and caps. The tables looked very pretty with their flower decorations and the many good things to eat, with which they were loaded. Something over nineteen dollars over expenses was made. The girls were assisted by Mrs. Helen Duncklee, Mrs. Lura Keeser and Mrs. Gertrude Ross.
