Keep Your Family in Comfort Next Winter

If you can't send them to Florida for the winter, do the next best thing and install a Round Oak Pipeless Furnace that will circulate the balmy air of the South throughout the house all winter. This furnace provides a genial warmth that is healthfully humidified, and sends it coursing through all rooms, using a minimum amount of any fuel.

ROUND OAK PIPELESS FURNACE

The scarcity of high-grade heating equipment, that the building boom has caused, makes immediate ordering a precaution against higher prices and delayed installation.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT

Made at Town Election on Tuesday Last

In our last issue we stated that this week we would give the report of the committee on "Memorial Tablet and some other Memorial" in full, and herewith is the report, and the same was accepted by vote and the recommendations contained therein were adopted:

"That a Committee of five, to serve without pay, be appointed by the Selectmen, to bring in recommendations at Town Meeting to be held in November, as follows:

1st. For a suitable memorial Tablet to be inscribed with the names of the Antrim Soldiers, Sailors and Nurses who served in the World War, and

2nd. For a Memorial of some sort, in addition to the Tablet, that shall be a fitting expression of the part played by Soldier, Sailor, Nurse and Civilian alike in bringing the war to a successful issue.

In considering the cost of such Memorials the Committee shall have in view a fund to be raised by both town notes and public subscription."

The Committee have held frequent meetings, to which the public have been invited and asked to offer suggestions. Some have availed themselves of the opportunity. Various suggestions have been made, among which are:

(a) The purchase of the grounds on West Street, known as Jameson Field, to be improved and used as a Play Ground.

(b) A Community House with hall for public meetings, dining room and rooms suitable for use of the American Legion, Grand Army and other patriotic and charitable organizations.

(c) A new School Building with Community House features.

(d) A Hospital.

Each of the foregoing plans contemplates the erection of one or more Memorial Tablets in connection with the main proposition.

(e) The placing of Tablets on the front of the Public Library, one on either side of the entrance.

While any of these plans if adopted, might supply a definite need of the community, it is also true that each, with the exception of the last named, would not only call for the expenditure of a considerable sum at the outset, but would necessitate an annual appropriation for maintenance, or more, in the judgment of the committee, than the town is warranted in assuming at the present time. Moreover we question the propriety of using the blood and service of our heroes to induce a community to provide utilities that can be justified on their own merits at any period. "The distinctive character of a memorial may be easily sullied by making it a commonplace utility."

We are of the opinion that this town which contributed so largely in every way toward the successful prosecution of the world war, should not do less than express her admiration and gratitude to the men and women who freely placed themselves at the disposal of the Government in the hour of danger; by the erection of some memorial which will definitely and distinctly commemorate their heroism and inspire in the minds and hearts of this and future generations, the same love for country and humanity which actuated them.

We believe that such a monument should rest on ground owned by the town and be perpetually cared for by the town; that on it should be inscribed not only the names of the World War Heroes but the names of all Antrim Soldiers who have served in any war since the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Our Soldiers Monument was erected some years ago through the efforts of the local Grand Army Post. It was at the time perhaps, as good as we could afford and has served the purpose of these years, but it bears the names only of the soldiers who died in the Civil and prior wars. No recognition is made by name of the men who came home to die, those who have since passed on, or those who remain with us today, all of whom gave themselves as completely and are as much entitled to honor as those who died in the service.

We recommend therefore, that the

THE AMENDMENTS

Failed of the Necessary Two-thirds Vote

Official election returns received by the Secretary of State from all but a few small towns show that not one of the seven proposed amendments to the State Constitution submitted to the voters on election day received the two-thirds vote necessary for ratification.

There were more "No" than "Yes" votes on the amendment striking the word "Protestant" out of the Bill of Rights and authorizing the granting of civil pensions.

The amendment authorizing a State income tax lacked 13,000 votes for ratification; that legalizing an inheritance tax, 3000 votes; that authorizing the Governor to veto items in appropriation bills, 6000; that reducing the size of the Legislature, 7000; that taking the "conscientious objector" clause out of the Bill of Rights, 25,000. Less than 75,000 voters marked their ballots in regard to these amendments, although more than 150,000 expressed their preference for President.

It would seem now that a constitutional convention would not be a necessity for many years to come. The only thing that is accomplished in holding its sessions is the spending of a good bunch of the state's money which increases by so much the amount of our state tax.

D. A. R. Meeting

The November meeting of Molly Aiken Chapter was held the 5th, at the home of Mrs. R. C. Goodell, with Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Don Robinson and Miss Marion Wilkinson assisting in entertaining.

The chapter had as their honored guest the State Regent, Mrs. Charles W. Barrett, of Claremont. Eunice Baldwin chapter, of Hillsboro, were present by special invitation.

The chapter voted fifty dollars for a scholarship to the International College at Springfield, Mass.; twenty-five cents per member for the emigrants manual, which is the special Americanization work of the National Society this year.

Mrs. Barrett gave an interesting address on "What the D. A. R. are doing." Mrs. Lang and Mrs. Hunt participated in a debate: Resolved, that the Woman of Today is More Efficient than the Woman of Yesterday. Miss Wilkinson gave a reading, When the Women Vote; a Historical Anecdote of Antrim was given by Mrs. Hurlin; and Mr. Boyd pleased his hearers with a group of songs.

Dainty refreshments were served, and a social hour followed.

Weak Heart

The prediction of Governor Bartlett which he made in his several speeches outside our state during the campaign that if Article X was the heart of the covenant, as President Wilson said it was, then the League plan had a weak heart, must have been very nearly correct,—if we are to judge from what the people of the United States have said!

town erect a suitable Granite Monument with one or more Bronze Tablets on which shall be inscribed the names of the soldiers, sailors and nurses of the World War, and in addition the names of all Antrim men who served in the Revolutionary, 1812, Mexican, Civil, and Spanish American wars, so far as known: that said monument shall be located, if possible on ground owned by the town; that a committee be appointed to have charge of the purchase and erection of said Monument, said committee to serve without pay but whose reasonable expenses shall be paid by the town; that the sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5000) be appropriated for the purpose: that the selectmen be authorized to borrow the money, giving town notes therefor, payable Five Hundred Dollars ($500) annually.

Respectfully submitted:

FOURTH ROLL CALL

The Red Cross Claims a Share of Attention

The drive for the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call starts tomorrow, Armistice Day, and continues for two weeks, through Thanksgiving Day, the 25th. Antrim has always done her part in these, as well as all other drives, and we are confident that our people will not fail this time. The membership fee for a year is one dollar. Committees will canvas the town, so have your dollar ready for the committee member, when you are called upon.

The Woman's Club

About fifty members attended the meeting of the Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon and listened to the splendid talk on Thrift, by Miss Agnes Donham, of Boston, Associate Director of Government Savings. Mrs. Carl Muzey led some chorus singing, and a piano solo by Mrs. Leo Lowell was also part of the program.

This was followed by the usual social half hour, with light refreshments.

The next meeting of the Club will be Tuesday, Nov. 16, and will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening. This will be the first of the two open meetings to be held during the year, and the public is cordially invited.

Maro S. Brooks, Commissioner of Americanization for this State, who is well known to many of our townspeople, either personally or as a public speaker, will talk on some educational topic.

There will also be some musical numbers. Let everyone who would enjoy hearing Mr. Brooks talk, feel that this is their personal invitation to attend.

Hillsboro Road Open

While the state road by the cemetery to Hillsboro is not completed, it was opened to travel on Tuesday and will probably be finished another year. We hope, however, that it will not be closed for long next year. The time spent on this piece of road has caused our people to think quite seriously and it may have an influence on the vote for money for permanent highway construction at the next March meeting. We need good roads and more of them but many of our people think that perhaps we ought to get more for the amount of money expended than we have received this year on this particular piece of road.

A Card

I wish to thus publicly thank all kind friends and neighbors who have in so many ways expressed their sympathy for me since the unfortunate accident which is confining me to my bed: To all who have rendered assistance, expressed words of sympathy, and been so kind and thoughtful in sending flowers and delicacies of different kinds, I extend my heartfelt gratitude.

Mrs. D. D. Goodell

FROM WASHINGTON

The Reporter's Correspondent Writes Again

ENOUGH FOR EVERYBODY

The reports covering the farms and the industrial situation of the country show very clearly that the country is getting back to normal production, and that we will soon have enough to go around. It is good logic that this condition will make toward cheaper prices. There are a great many instances that bear out this theory. While the time has evidently arrived when the competition among dealers for goods at any price and among employers for labor at any wage, has passed, it does not necessarily follow that there have been any revolutionary changes in values. The result is that the profiteers have less chance to sell their goods at unreasonable prices, while the jack of all-trades can no longer buy a hammer and a saw and demand ten dollars a day as a carpenter skilled in his work. Apparently it is a sorry business for merchants in many lines to dispose of goods they have purchased at inflated prices at the new figures that are being found to be reasonable.

HYDROELECTRIC POSSIBILITIES

It has been shown that a great power system drawing its electrical energy from steam and water generation, would save 30,000,000 tons of coal annually, representing $150,000,000, the labor of more than 30,000 miners and the release of vast railroad carrying capacity for other freight. Such a project stretching from Washington to Boston and drawing its electrical energy from steam and water generation, is the design of the Government, which is developing plans to meet the new era in power development which it is thought will result from the water power legislation passed at the last session of Congress. Scientific men say that it is almost unbelievable that a progressive people like those in the United States should cling to methods that are as antique as the ox-cart, by insisting upon digging and transporting coal, and robbing Mother Earth of all her natural mineral resources, when all that is needed is the development of water-powers on streams which have for centuries awaited development.

THE RECORD CORN CROP

The Agricultural Department counts on a yield of 3,216,192,000 bushels of corn this year, which beats all records by more than 90,000,000 bushels. Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri have the bumper crops that swell the big total. And while quantity looks fine in print the farmers are disappointed by the fact that the price of corn which in the middle of June was $1.80 per bushel has fallen for December delivery to less than $1.00 a

Statements of Newport Citizens Are Always of Interest to Our Readers

To many of our readers the streets of Newport are almost as familiar as those of our own town, and we are naturally interested to read of happenings there. The following report from a well-known and respected resident will be helpful to numbers of men and women here in Antrim.

H. O. Hutchison, Maple St., Newport, N. H., says: "My back occasionally becomes lame and sore across my kidneys. I blame the trouble to being on my feet a great part of the time and to being confined inside. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills excellent for that trouble. They not only remove the pains in my back, but strengthen my kidneys."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Taylor had. Foeter-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

bushel. It is the first time since February, 1917, that corn in Chicago has sold under $1.00 a bushel. The high point was $2.36 in August, 1917.

Production figures on agricultural crops of the world, assembled by the International Agricultural Institute at Rome, show greatly increased yields in most every country. The nations whose people suffered from lack of food during the war are about to be fed-up, and Mother Earth has provided bountifully of food stuff for all her children.

WATCH US GROW

The population of the United States increased 14.9 percent during the past ten years. This was considerable; nevertheless the ten year period ending in 1910 showed an increase of 21 percent. The Director of the Census has been explaining the slackening off of our growth, and he attributed it to the curtailing of immigration during the war, the influenza epidemic and the casualties of war. His conclusions have been resisted by a good many writers, all of whom seem to overlook the pet topic of a former President who talked a good deal about race suicide.

American Legion to Observe Armistice Day

Armistice night will be fittingly observed in Antrim when the local Post of The American Legion will hold its first annual concert and ball. The Post has decided to take this way of observing the day and if possible to reimburse the treasury of the Legion. Music will be furnished by Reynolds Orchestra, of Brockton, Mass., which is highly recommended for concert and dance music. Tickets for the concert will be sold separately for those people who do not care to dance, so let everybody come and enjoy himself. Watch for posters and don't forget the date.

Americanism

By LEONARD WOOD

His (the anarchist's) protest of concern for working men is outrageous in its impudent falsity; for if the political institutions of this country do not afford opportunity to every honest and intelligent son of toil, then the door of hope is forever closed against him.—Theodore Roosevelt's message at the opening session of the 57th congress.

NOT long before Roosevelt wrote these words William McKinley had died at the hand of an anarchist assassin. At that time as today the plea generally of the assassin and the incendiary was that his cause was that of the working men of America and that only through the channels of violence could come the ark of happiness and safety for the toilers. All Americans who are worth a pinch of salt are toilers. We are working men and working women and our cause is a common one against the red company of destruction.

The anarchist is simply an assassin of character, of men and of governments. Conservatism is not necessarily reaction. The extreme radical, however, at times finds the way easy into the field of anarchy. Progress goes hand in hand with enlightenment which comes from study. But progress sometimes is conservative. The man who turns back from the field of anarchy is a progressive although his comrades who stay in the field will call him something else.

The political institutions of this country were founded by the Fathers with the intention of affording equality of opportunities to all Americans citizens. These political institutions have endured. The way to reform is through the ballot box. American citizens are voters. They can work their will. Our political institutions afford opportunity to every honest and intelligent son of toil. If they did not, then, as Theodore Roosevelt says, "the door of hope is forever closed against him."

It is just as true today as it was when Roosevelt wrote his message to the members of the fifty-seventh congress that the anarchist's protest of concern for the working man is outrageous in its impudent falsity. The American working man knows it. The working people, which means most of us, are the sustainers of American institutions. The anarchist makes his mistake when he tries to make a labor class in America. Our labor class is all embracing. We have few parasites on the body of the state. In Americanism the man who works with his hands stands with the man who works with his head. America is not afraid. To be fearful is to be weak in action. Americanization will take care of the evils which seemingly are besetting us. It will take care of the anarchist and all his works.

"Gee Broke" in Vaudeville. It is said that the first man to undertake to produce vaudeville in America was Silas W. Steggs of San Francisco, who inherited $400,000 from his uncle in 1865, and not being used to handling money in large quantities, started to spend it freely. He went on a trip to Europe and spent most of his time at the Alhambra music hall in London, and launched a project to start the "New York Alhambra." His idea was approved by a number of amusement people, and he hired hundreds of them to come to the United States. But his money ran out and he left his party on a boat in New York bay and disappeared.

A Business Problem

"Any husband who tries to tear a wife away from all the home ties she cherishes is selfish and unmanly!" "And any wife who will hold back from her husband's chances of making something of himself is a foe direct in the household!"

It was not the first time that Rodney and Esther Mills had clashed, but on this occasion high words followed. They were at odds on a very vital subject. Ever since they married five years previous both had worked harmoniously, cheerfully behind their store counter, building up a moderately successful business. For a long time, however, Rodney had entertained dreams of spreading out and seeking a broader field of activity. The magnet city allured him. There had come along a man who was willing to buy him out at a good figure. The temptation was irresistible. Rodney consummated the deal without saying anything about it to anybody. When he made the dread announcement his wife was fairly prostrated.

In vain had he argued with her. She would admit that with their youth and industry they might score a success on a larger scale, but she absolutely refused to leave Woodville.

There was truth and sense in what she said, but Rodney was doggedly persistent now. The store was in other hands, he heard of a good business in the city for investment and was determined to have his way at any cost. The result was serious. Up to the last moment Esther refused to even discuss the situation. Rodney went away alone, grimly resolved to get re-established in a prominent way, and wrote for his wife to come to him. He received in reply a definite announcement that Esther would not join him at any time and their paths parted then and there.

Twice Rodney wrote again, but he received no reply. He became engrossed in business and his heart hardened as he considered himself the aggrieved one. When he got his affairs in fair running order he was half minded to return to Woodville and make a final appeal to the wife he missed greatly.

He now realized how helpful she had been to him. He began to un- easily recognize that he had been dictatorial and self-willed at the cost of a love he really cherished. He inferred that all kinds of rumors as to his arbitrary course might have led to mean gossip and exaggerations, and for this reason he made up his mind finally to follow out the path he had chosen alone.

Every three months he sent his wife a check fairly awarding her half on what the investment of their money realized. For three years he was prosperous. Then brisk and unexpected competition in the neighborhood where he had established in business brought diminished trade and he broke down from worry and real cares. His physician sent him away for an absolute rest of two months, Rodney ordering his lawyer to liquidate the business which, except for the three good years, had turned out a failure.

Rodney, patched up in health but depressed and disappointed, returned from his brief exile to find that his business assets had just about paid all debts and left a mere modicum of surplus. He had serious thoughts of taking a position as a salaried employe, and then the home longing prompted him to pay a surreptitious visit to Woodville.

We arranged it so that he arrived there at dusk and kept out of the view of old friends and acquaintances until the stores were closed and few people generally were stirring about. When he had left the town his wife had gone to make her home with her mother and sisters. His ideas were vague as to his chances of getting a glimpse of Esther. The store he had sold out was located on his way to the supposed home of his wife. He was naturally curious to view it. As he neared it he observed that an addition had been built on and the show window revealed an increased stock over the old times. He was puzzled, even startled as he chanced to notice the sign over the door. It was "Mills & Co."

A light showed in a window at the rear of the store. He stole around to the side. There in one of the comfortably furnished living rooms was his wife seated at a desk, busy with some bookkeeping. Rodney understood now. She had in some way secured the business he had sold out and from all appearances was making a success of it. Timidly he knocked at the door. A moment later Esther confronted him at its threshold. "Can I come in?" he asked humbly, quivering all over with suppressed emotion. Esther, too, was vastly moved, but she suppressed any exhibition of the fact.

"No one has a better right," she answered steadily, and opened wide the door. "The money you sent me helped buy back the old business. I am simply a caretaker in your behalf."

"You mean—you mean," he quivered, "that I would be welcome here?"

"You are very welcome," she said simply.

"Home!" he aspirated, sinking wearily, but oh! so contentedly into a chair. "Either, can you forgive and forget?"

"Both," answered this peerless one of womankind.

"No Trespassing!"
By SIDNEY E. PORTER
(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Twice Irma Ross had met Dale Westcott and the third time was pending, the fair, inexperienced young girl told herself with a flutter and a blush.

"Why, it's like some story book romance," declared her closest confidant, Edna Martin. "A stranger in Dodgeville, is he not?"

"Entirely so. He is studying for the bar, he told me, and is on his vacation. It was at the brook that I saw him first. My hat blew off and landed on an elder branch just a few inches above the water, teetering and tilting."

"And he?"

"Was fishing, saw my trouble, dropped the pole, made a spring and landed in the water knee deep and caught the hat just as it was swinging free."

"Why, it was almost thrilling!" commented Edna. "And the second time, Irma?"

"It was day before yesterday. There came up a drenching shower as I started across the meadow for home. Again appeared this interesting knight errant, if such exists in these later days."

"He must be following you about," suggested Edna.

"Oh, dear, no! It was all by accident. He drew me under an umbrella and we reached a shelter shed without a drop of rain on me. When the sun came out he walked with me as far as the wood lot, opened the gate for me and insisted I should keep the umbrella for fear the clouds might come up again. 'Till pass this gate about noon tomorrow,' he said, 'so, if you will leave the umbrella here, I will get it.'"

"I see," nodded Edna archly. "Oh, Irma! you have certainly got a lover at last."

"If I am allowed to have one," fluttered Irma timidly.

"Allowed—why, what do you mean?"

"Well, it seems that Uncle Rufus saw me with the young man. Later in the day he questioned me so sharply I almost cried. I never knew him to be so put out. Since his wife died my mother has been his favorite among all the relatives, and he invited me here to see how I would like it and if mother would come later he was to sort of adopt us."

"And make you an heiress, I suppose," murmured Edna. "How delightful!"

"When he spoke to me about this nice young man I told him just how I had met him. I happen to know more about the insolent schemer than you do," he said angrily.

"Why, it's amazing!" cried Edna. "What can he have against such a courteous, well bred young man?"

"I don't know," replied Irma, and then she grew indignant. "If Uncle Rufus thinks he has brought my mother and myself to follow out his whims and caprices, I can tell you that I shall leave here very speedily. I am going to write to mamma all about it."

Irma visited the wood lot gate with the umbrella. She loitered about the spot for some little time, but noticed her uncle watching her at a distance and returned to the house. By rare good fortune, as she esteemed it, she came again across Dale Westcott at a lawn party given by a girl friend. Then there was a week that they did not meet, and coming home one evening Irma was startled to see through an open window her uncle with his head bandaged and Dale Westcott opposite to him. They seemed to be engaged in earnest conversation. The housekeeper stole to her side.

"Don't be alarmed, dear," she whispered. "Your uncle was attacked by some thieving tramps, returning from the bank with a large amount of money. The young gentleman with him now scattered the villains and recovered the money."

Irma remained near the window. She heard her uncle say: "Young man, you have done me a great favor and I wish to reward you."

"Not with money if you please," spoke Westcott. "If you wish to gratify me very much in another way, allow me to call upon your niece. I will be plain with you. She has attracted me greatly and I do not think she is averse to my attentions."

"But I am!" thundered Rufus, rousing up like the enraged lion. "Young man, gratitude must be put aside in a case like this. I know you and your motive in coming here."

"Know me—motive?" repeated Westcott in wonder.

"Exactly. I saw you two weeks ago in the law office of Brand & Carney at Springfield, to whom I went to make my will."

"Why, yes," answered Westcott, "I am in their service."

"And you gleaned from them a knowledge of the fortune I bequeathed to Irma and her mother. A wealthy heiress was worth the picking, eh?"

Dale Westcott laughed uproariously. "Why, Mr. Lind!" he exclaimed, "I never heard about your will, and as to the avaricious intentions you ascribe to me, I must tell you that, although only a law student, I am the son of one of the wealthiest merchants in Springfield. As to Irma, it is her rare goodness and beauty alone that have inspired me with a love I shall always cherish."

The stubborn old will soon gave way as conviction deepened in the mind of Rufus Lind, and when Irma had her say as to the state of her mind, her uncle neither changed his will nor turned her away.
