ENJOY FINE TIME

I. O. O. F. Entertained by Hancock Brothers

Last Thursday evening, Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows, under dispensation from Grand Master Ernest C. Dudley, went to Hancock to confer the second degree upon a class of four candidates, three of whom were Hancock young men, the other being a resident of Bennington, all well known and popular young fellows.

Between eighty and ninety members of the Order were present to enjoy this occasion and to say it was a very pleasant affair in saying nothing about it at all. Only those present know just what a real sort of time it was. The degree team was in fine condition and the "goat" was never in better temper, due no doubt to the good nature and the desire of everybody to have everything just right. Even the candidates who took this degree were "impressed" with a number of the features, which will continue with them for a long time; and the lessons designed to be taught will go with them and likely never be forgotten.

The closing number on the program was one which interested every person present: the supper in the banquet hall in the adjoining building. Beans, cold ham, rolls, all kinds of fancy pies and cakes, and coffee, were loaded onto the tables till not another thing could they hold. The service was just as good as the food. Hancock has an enviable reputation along this line; it was well sustained at this time, and really it seemed as if she tried to excel all previous efforts, and it was said by many that this was the best ever.

When time enough had elapsed for all to have eaten all they should, some time was spent in listening to very brief remarks by a number of the brothers present, thus closing a most enjoyable evening.

LAW AS AMENDED

To be Enforced by Motor Vehicle Commissioner

By an advertisement on the first page today, attention is called to the amended law of 1921 requiring lights on horse drawn vehicles; also that same is going to be enforced.

Chapter 105 of the laws of 1913 as amended by chapter 26 of the laws of 1919, reads as follows:

"Every vehicle, excepting as herein otherwise provided, whether stationary or in motion, on any public highway or bridge, shall have attached to it a light or lights, which shall be so displayed as to be visible from the front and rear, during the period of one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise; provided however, that this act shall not apply to any vehicle which is designed to be propelled by hand, or to any vehicle designed for and transporting hay and straw."

This amended chapter drops from chapter 105 the provisions including, after "hay and straw," wood, lumber, stone, machinery, or other heavy freight; also omits the following: "Nor shall it apply to any form of vehicle whatsoever, while upon any bridge or highway where street lights are maintained at a distance of five hundred feet apart or less."

This change will need to be taken due notice of in order to be within the law, and everybody wants to obey the law. It may be a trifle hard for a time to remember this every night, but after practicing it for a while the custom will be general. It is hoped that no cases of forgetfulness along this line will be reported anywhere in this section.

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested by What Is Happening Around

With strikes in the large paper mills and the statement by certain authorities that by the last of May the most of the mills will be closed, has assured us that our dreams of lower prices on paper will not come true for some time yet.

There are not as many jobless men and women in the United States as there are those who are unchurched and untutored. President Harding pleads guilty to the charge that he is a joker, and he thinks that it is a very commendable habit. "Fraternity in understanding," he said. "You cannot belong unless you believe in truth, justice and love. I wish that the Nations of the world could be committed to fraternal doctrines, because with fraternalism comes understanding. If nations understood one another, the world would be better and there would be no more war."

In view of the fact that some statements have been made in public that were somewhat misleading, it might be well for us to say this: A local newspaper may contain some statements about certain things that have news value and are the thoughts or statements of others, yet the editor may have no sympathy with such statements nor take any responsibility for them himself; in fact just because it is his paper is no reason why it should be said that he made the statements. It seems hardly necessary to say this, yet there appear to be those who need to have it brought more directly to their notice.

The foreign-born population of the United States in 1920 totaled 13,705,987, an increase of 338,442 or 2.6 percent over 1910. The census bureau in making this announcement cited the 30.7 percent increase in the nation's foreign-born population between 1900 and 1910 and ascribed it to the almost complete cessation of immigration during the war period and to considerable emigration during the war. The foreign-born population listed by country of nativity includes: England, 812,414; Scotland, 254,482; Wales, 67,071; Ireland, 1,035,680; Norway, 363,399; Sweden, 624,759; Denmark, 139,051; Luxembourg, 12,539; Netherlands, 181,282; Germany, 1,688,298; Poland, 1,139,578; Austria, 574,963; Russia, 1,398,989; Italy, 1,607,458.

Please Take Notice

Have you seen the small boy on our street with a mitt in one hand and a ball in the other? A sure sign that the Bass Ball Season is about to open, for the youngsters are always a few days ahead of the veterans.

Certainly, Antrim is to have its Ball Team this year, and a mighty good one too; and preparations are already being made to have our town team fully scheduled for the season.

Last year we had a good team, no getting out of that; in fact we are very fortunate in our list of players, and this season promises our patrons a series of games which are sure to be hotly contested, and you know what that means. Therefore, when those who are soliciting funds for the cause approach, receive them kindly and generously for you know it takes money as well as energy to finance a game.

Antrim has a knack of finding money for a worthy cause and you well know where the energy lies.

A complete schedule will be published later and be sure you mark the dates on your calendar.

A Grateful Patient

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union)

It was a lucky day for young Dr. Rodney Blair when that rarity, a new patient, presented himself for professional treatment. The client was a powerful man of about thirty, named Greg Bryson, and he came from a neighboring town.

"It rheumatism doctor," he announced, "and worse than bad. I am a blacksmith with a wife and five little children, and since the first of the year have been so crippled I had to shut up the forge. I heard about you from a man I once hired, who says you cured him in a month's time."

Thereupon bluff, honest Greg drew an old fashioned gold watch from his pocket and tendered it to the physician.

"I would prefer to trust you," said Dr. Blair. "You appear as a man who will keep his promises and pay his debts."

The young physician did not tell of the difficult struggle for a living that had attended building up a practice in an obscure rural community. He prescribed for Greg and sent him away hopeful and cheered. Poor alking Greg deserved encouragement. His little brood required food and clothing, he was not for the present at least able to earn any money, and a profitable trade he had built up through the years was fast going to his competitors. It was sad to see this formerly sturdy giant of strength and health limp painfully to the wagon that brought him to Fairview. The doctor returned with a sigh to his office, secretly deplored his own condition and ardently wishing other new patients might be directed to him.

Greg made several other visits to the doctor. He had to depend for transportation, however, on accommodating teamsters. Then the doctor transmitted the weekly medicines by mail and was pleased to receive poorly spelled, but well intentioned letters in return from his patient, reciting last spring of trapping the salmon-destroying hair seals at the mouth of the Fraser river by means of set lines and short laterals armed with strong hooks brought a measure of success, but was not entirely a victory over the wise mammals of the ocean. The new proposal is to come down on them from the unsuspecting heights, as they bask on the sandbars in thousands, and pour a stream of bullets into them.

Welding Optical Glass.
The improved method of welding optical glass worked out at the United States Bureau of Standards, gives perfect union with practically no distortion, and is adapted for many purposes, such as making glass cells and hollow prisms, joining lenses and closing glass tubes with accurately fitting flat ends. The shaped-glass object is heated in an electric furnace to the annealing point, when the application of a small blowpipe flame along the edges to be united produces a quick welding.

Unable to Choose National Tree.
American forests are so rich with infinite variety that President Wilson is unable to name a choice for a national tree, he wrote to the American Forestry Association, which is compiling a national referendum as to what tree best represents America.

"Speaking for myself," said the President, "I find that I am quite unable to choose amongst the infinite variety and richness of American forests."

GOOD-NATURED AND PATIENT

English Visitor Pays Tribute to Virtues He Noted as Distinguishing American People.

A while ago I published a little book on a tour I made in America during war time. I dedicated it "To the kindest people in the world," and I put the dedication in Latin to spare their blushes. Should I write another work of the same kind, I think I should dedicate it "To the most good-natured, tolerant and patient people in the world," writes Sir Arthur E. Shapley in the Outlook.

Although as the election grew imminent interest in it became keen and discussion eager, still I only once heard an acute disagreement between the supporters of the rival candidates, and this was between a husband and wife. It seemed based upon a fundamental difference of opinion on that most innocuous and unexciting fluid, milk.

As a rule the discussions were most amicable, and usually finished up, after the method of Lincoln, in a joke or a story. Their toleration etc., their good humor. They bear plentifully every variety of religious dogma; these are almost as numerous in the United States as patent medicines. They quietly endure and ignore the most infernal noises. Owing to the enormous distances one has to travel in the states, one spends a considerable part of one's time on the train and it is this reason which possibly accounts for the fact that Americans persist in talking on the cars.

Mr. Lucas has recently reminded us that Carlyle bequeathed certain books to Harvard university because of his esteem and regard for the American people—"particularly the more silent part of them." The latter exist not only in the imagination of the Chelsea philosopher. They are perhaps not very numerous, still they exist.

Lights On Vehicles

The legislature of 1921 amended the law requiring lights on horse-drawn vehicles as follows:

"The Commissioner of Motor Vehicles shall have authority to enforce the provisions of this chapter." (Chapter 105 of the laws of 1913 as amended by chapter 26 of the laws of 1919.)

Beginning May 16 a genuine attempt to carry out the evident desire of the legislature will be begun.

OLIN H. CHASE,
Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

BURIED WITH THEIR HUSBAND

Wives of Members of the Barau Tribe of the Congo Are Interred With the Corpse.

The Barau tribe in the Congo district of Africa have a number of strange and horrible customs, but of them all their burial customs are the most terrible. When a man dies a large grave is dug. The corpse and his wife—these may be anywhere from two to twenty—are escorted to the hole with wild music and the interested attendance of the entire tribe. The chief wife is thrust into the hole, and the corpse is then lowered. The second wife follows. The dead man's relatives then proceed to break the arms and legs of the two wives so they cannot get out of the hole. The head of the corpse is placed in the lap of the head wife, and the feet in the lap of the second wife.

The rest of the wives are then thrust into the hole, their limbs broken, and they are forced to sit in a circle about the corpse and its human supporters. The priest chants a few words, and everyone falls to with rude shovels, dishing earth into the hole. They never stop until the grave is full and the corpse and the living wives buried far under the earth. The bowls of the wives with their broken limbs and fear of the terrible death are drowned by the banging of drums and the yells of the delighted tribe.

IN THE NAME OF RELIGION!

Weird and Savage Rites Indulged In by the Khlysts, Sect of Russian Fanatics.

One of the queer religious sects of the world is the Christians or Khlysts of Russia. They hold their meetings in their churches with hundreds of men, women and children attending. After prayers and hymns that last until midnight they begin a wild dance amid sobs and groans. After this continues for a while they abandon their garments and put on white robes and white stockings. Candies are lighted, and a new dance begins that consists of rapidly revolving, the men to the right, the women to the left.

In a short time a sort of madness falls upon them. They leap, scream, beat themselves and each other. Indulge in wild laughter and cries, and then begin to tear off the garments with shouts of "It is coming, the Holy Spirit is coming!" They begin to go about on all fours, riding on one another's backs, rolling about on the floor, biting and scratching one another, and at last go entirely insane and dash about until they fall exhausted. By dawn the church floor is covered with naked men, women and children, unconscious and blood-stained.

Weather's Effect on Birds.

Cold and hunger in England has driven armies of birds, even the wild-est, into streets and gardens and unwanted places. Great flocks of green plover, which are singularly shy as a rule, appeared in the stately paddocks and paddocks of Hertfordshire villages. In Buckinghamshire several thousand rooks in a flock was no rarity; and bold scouts came right up to the back doors and competed for their food with the poultry and the pigs. In London it was curious to see the pigeons feeding busily on the ice, to the obvious irritation of the gulls, whose bills are useless for securing fragments from a hard surface. It was hard to be defeated by a land bird in their own element. Starlings showed even greater ability in picking up morsels from the flocks and even the water of the river, a feat very foreign to their nature.

The Boy of It.

The three children were on the street car on their way to school—a boy and two younger sisters. The sisters disputed who was to push the button to notify the street car conductor to stop the car. The older sister won and held her finger on the button for more than a block. Then her brother rose, pulled her hand away arbitrarily and pushed the button. The older sister stepped into the vestibule, followed by her sister, to be the first to step off the car. As it stopped, the brother brushed them aside and led the way. The sisters having alighted, waited for the car to go on, but the boy rushed across the tracks, ignoring the warning clang of the bell by the motorman.

Microbes in Sugar Bowl.

About one per cent of the Cuban sugar crop, valued at $1,500,000, is each year destroyed by greedy micro-organisms too small to be seen except when congregated in crowds of millions. Molds and bacteria are the culprits. It is estimated that each person in the United States consumes 81.84 pounds of sugar each year. At this rate, 873,000 persons could be supplied with the sugar destroyed by germs. The sugar loses its sweetness when the molds consume the sucrose. Its "sweetening" principle.

Marble Cheaper Than Wood.

A report to Washington from the American commercial attaché in Rome is to the effect that American lumber has gone to such price heights in the Italian market that builders find it cheaper to put in marble staircases than to build them of wood. Such is the combined effect of mill cost, plus freight rates, multiplied by the exchange premium of four to one that Italian buyers have to pay to translate our money into theirs.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The Wrong Man

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(C. 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Wilton Revere was a seeker for tips and chances. A speculator and schemer, he was the admiration of a group kindred to himself who had witnessed some of his brilliant manipulation and in many instances had been allowed to share in the profits of his money-making ventures.

Revere called a conclave of his close friends, and his handsome, queenly sister, Eunice, was present.

"We are a strong party of six when we bulk our energies and abilities," observed Revere. "Here is the proposition: I have been tipped off by a city friend that a young man named Wright will come to town next week. He is bent upon a secret and mysterious mission. The son of a millionaire, he is the trusted advance agent of several financiers who propose securing sites for several factories and right of way for a railroad. He may make a modest, guarded presentation and probably be very close as to the real merits of his visit, but I suppose millions are involved in his deals, and we want to gain his acquaintance and confidence and finally share in the benefits of the extensive investments he is to make."

"All working from a co-operative angle as usual, I suppose?" suggested one of the accomplices.

"Genial hosts, disinterested friends and all that. Yes," nodded Revere. "Get close to him and next to his plans, but be polite and don't overdo your parts."

"And my share in the project?" questioned the peerless Eunice.

"Oh! just charm him, as you have so many others," laughed her brother.

Eunice tossed her haughty head disdainfully, but her cheek glowed and her eyes showed interest. All the ambition of her soul was aroused. She had angled for many a wealthy life partner, but had met with severe disappointments, and the only man she had ever loved had proven recreant and had married another. Time had healed the wound in a measure, and she cherished the compensation of some day attaining a position of social eminence and wealth.

There arrived in Weston a few days later a commonplace, ordinary personage, a plainly dressed, rather reticent man of about thirty, who registered at the local hotel as Egbert Wright. His non-communicative manner and his name singled him out in the estimation of the Revere group as their prospective victim. At once Revere and the others proceeded to watch him closely for a couple of days.

"He has got all the local directories and his inquiries show that he is after a lot of general information as to the people of the town," Revere reported to his accomplices. "Now then, to get into his good graces."

Which each one of the group proceeded to do. They warily closed up an acquaintanceship. Mr. Wright seemed a good deal surprised, then fluttered and finally delighted as Eunice was brought on the scene, and he found himself for some inexplicable reason fated, courted and given full attention at a liberal expenditure.

Just about the same time a modest appearing, unassuming young man appeared at the home of Actor Brand, an old man living in a poor way with an only daughter at the edge of the village. He gave the name of Walter Brown and introduced himself by saying:

"I am seeking some information about the town and its industries and real estate. They tell me, Mr. Brand, that you are the best posted man to consult."

"Well, I have known the village since it was the mere way station," was the response. "If I can help you in any way, I shall be glad."

"That you can certainly do," declared Brown, and for the week following the two were a great deal together.

Brown had an automobile and he and Brand and sometimes the charming Luella, his daughter, made a number of trips in and about the town. Mr. Brown asked a great many questions, did not disclose his purpose in doing so, but seemed manifestly interested in all of the information he acquired.

It was one afternoon about two weeks later that Revere came to his house greatly perturbed and excited.

"Well, Eunice," he announced, "you can drop our friend Wright summarily."

"Why? What do you mean?" inquired Eunice in some surprise.

"He hasn't fooled us, but we have egregiously misled ourselves. He is simply a travelling salesman. His name is really Wright, but that is simply a coincidence. He is in fact the wrong Mr. Wright, so far as we are concerned."

"And the right one?"

"Has been working out his plans quietly under the guidance of old Actor Brand and that pretty daughter of him. She seems to have won our millionaire victim. At all events they are reported engaged. He has just gone back to the city to so inform his father, I suppose, and has made all his arrangements as to his investments. The wrong Mr. Wright has innocently led us a fruitless chase."

And so it turned out and the peerless Eunice was once more disappointed.

As to Luella, she was happy and content the day Walter Brown, really Egbert Wright, disclosed his real identity and mission, and knew that a loving husband and that a new life of contentment and wealth awaited her.

Maine Man has Masonic Apron 300 Years Old

Cyrus A. Hooper of Eliot, Me., exhibited in Dover among some Masonic acquaintances a Masonic apron more than 300 years old, which has been in his family some generations and was last previously worn by his grandfather. It is made of Irish hand-woven silk and is artistically hand-painted to show all the Masonic emblems. He has spent years in tracing its history and has shown it to Masons all over the country, he says.

Recently, through correspondence with officials of the Masonic Grand Lodge of England, he has learned that the apron was hand-painted in Edinboro, Scotland, in 1616. The name of the painter is barely discerned on the apron. Mr. Hooper received the apron as a gift from an aunt, who named him when an infant, and who got him into Masonry at the earliest age possible, so that he would be entitled to wear the ancient apron. He is a member of the Kittery Lodge. He was made a Mason in 1874 in Lewiston.

Daylight saving by "common consent" became effective in Hartford, Ct., and in numerous other communities of the state, notwithstanding a law passed by the Legislature prohibiting an advance in time by local ordinance. A mass meeting of the citizens of Derry was held at the Adams Memorial hall, called by the board of trade to consider the matter of adopting daylight saving and setting the clocks ahead. A vote was taken opposing the idea of daylight saving. After an hour's discussion, another vote was taken authorizing the setting of the clocks ahead an hour.

Cows Answer "Bleat" on New Fire Alarm

Tilton's new automatic fire whistle, with a tone almost identical with the bleat of a calf, is causing consternation among cattle in that and surrounding towns. Cows grazing in pastures stop abruptly and turn their heads toward Tilton whenever the whistle is sounded.

Farmers report that the cows become uneasy at the sound of the alarm and in some instances rush around their enclosures in an effort to locate their suffering calves.

Russian Radicals Believed to Have Started Church Fire

The police have no clues to the identity of the incendiary who attempted the destruction of the church of the Immaculate Conception, Portsmouth, but efforts are centered on some one of anarchistic tendencies, as of anarchistic tendencies, as oil-soaked papers of a Russian radical issue, together with a copy of a Los Angeles Times, dated one year ago, were found with some oil-soaked waste behind a boiler in the church basement by Police Marshal Hurley and Fire Chief Woods.

Chinese Armies Stopped Fighting to Let United States Vessel Pass Down the River.

Ensign William H. Galbraith, navigating officer of the United States destroyer Hart, attached to the United States Asiatic Squadron in Chinese waters, in a letter tells of the intensified work placed on the hands of the vessels of the squadron in the Far East by the operations of the Chinese civil war now in progress between the Pekingese and the Cantonese sections of the nation. When armies representing these hostile sections approach cities in which American citizens are in business there is much excitement on the part of the Americans and they call urgently for the protection of the fleet, says the Columbus Dispatch.

Recently the Hart received a radio-gram call from an officer of a United States merchant vessel, stating that his vessel 50 miles up one of the Chinese rivers was being detained. The captain was anxious to put to sea, and would the Hart see that it was permitted to depart? The Hart got on the job at once and found when the scene was reached that there was no governmental authority holding the United States ship up, but the Cantonese armada was drawn up on one side of the river and the Pekingese on the other and a battle was in progress, with the river, through which the United States ship must pass, between them. Naturally the captain did not fancy risking the shots that were passing across the channel. The respective commanders kindly suspended the fighting until the merchant vessel had passed.

FREEDOM MUST BE BOUGHT

And the Price to Be Paid is Complete

Mastery of All Passions and Appetites.

Freedom is not a gift, but an attainment. It does not characterize the state of nature, but flowers from the growth of personality and civilization.

Action issues from character and there is inner discord and the feeling of restraint until the individual is happy and satisfied in his act and attitude.

A divided will marks incomplete personality, and it is not a free will.

Every man must win his own freedom. He must desire it enough to pay its price, and its price is the masteriness of passions and appetites.

As a man gains mastery over his own powers and desires he is free.

Resolutions are good, because they witness to the sense of incomplete self-mastery and to the vision of greater self-control and freedom that are possible.—Minneapolis Journal.
