REV. S. G. HASTINGS

Respected Resident Passes From This Life

Rev. Stephen G. Hastings passed quietly away from this life on Monday afternoon, at his home on North Main street. He had been ill about a week and was a sufferer from ulcers of the stomach. His age was 69 years, and he was a preacher who had the respect of everybody who knew him, and many are saddened by his removal from our midst.

Deceased was born in Suffield, Conn., where he leaves an aged mother of 98, two brothers and two sisters; a third sister resides in San Diego, California. He had held pastorates in Baptist churches in Connecticut and Massachusetts for about 30 years, and had served the church in Antrim a number of years, leaving here in 1894 for California for the benefit of Mrs. Hastings' health. While here he made many friends who were pleased when he decided to return to town to make his home. His first wife, Mary A. Downs, died a number of years ago, and in January, 1916, he married Mrs. Julia Emery of this place, who survives him. A number of different weeks he had supplied the local Baptist pulpit during the past few months and was occasionally heard in the union Sunday evening services. He was a good speaker, was broad in his thought, and all his addresses showed much preparation.

For the past year and more he had given considerable time to the preparation of a town history, and as Town Historian was doing most excellent work.

Funeral services will be held at the Baptist church on Wednesday forenoon at 10.30 o'clock, and the remains will be taken to Suffield, Conn., for interment and services will be held there on Thursday at 2 o'clock.

The writer has valued very highly the acquaintance of the deceased from the time he was resident pastor here till the day of his death. Well do we remember his kindly words of greeting and encouragement nearly thirty years ago when we first met; and they have always been the same. A man who never changed in this respect; he was able ever to keep abreast of the times, and his views on the important questions of the day were sound and well reasoned out. When he was absent from town he was ever thoughtful of our people and occasionally addressed them through the columns of this paper, letters which were always enjoyed and well spoken of by everyone. Since his return to town as a resident he has continued his interest along this line and his contributions to these columns have been generous and interesting, and well pleasing to our readers. For this one reason, if there were no other, he was a most acceptable man for town historian, and had taken great interest in the work, and much has been accomplished by him along this line.

The town regrets losing such a valued citizen and deeply mourns its loss. Wide spread sympathy is extended the widow and other relatives in their affliction.

NO REWARD FOR LOYALTY

What can a man hope for who enters the government service as a career? Let us look at some actual cases. Here is the story of one as told by E. J. Ayers, chief clerk, Department of the Interior. He cites it as a case similar to that of many others in his department, and says there are many others who are in worse circumstances:

"The records of our department show that he entered the service as a laborer at $860 a year, after a service of three and a half years in the United States navy as a first-class fireman, with an honorable discharge. He has been with us for more than thirty-three years, and is sixty-six years old, and has given more than half his life to the service of the government.

"He owns a little property three miles beyond the Chesapeake Junction, and he gets up early in the morning, before daylight, and comes in to work and goes out after dark at night. Today he is getting $840 a year. He has raised a family of nine children—three of whom are now dead—eight boys and one daughter. His elder sons are married and have established homes of their own. Two of his sons were in the military service in France, and his daughter, twelve years old, lives with her grandmother, where he is supporting, educating and clothing her.

"He is a white man, a very intelligent man, eminently qualified for this particular line of work. His wife is dead. He is his own housekeeper and he does the cooking and the washing and the ironing.

"His home was established in its present location because it was not thought practicable to raise a family in the district, and he bought a piece of property in Prince George's county, three miles beyond the railroad terminal, which distance, as I said, he walks twice a day, leaving in the morning most of the year before daylight, and returning home by dark. This small place consists of a shack and a few acres of land on which he has a mortgage of $1,000, and you can judge that he enjoys no conveniences other than the small house, which protects him from the elements.

"The house is divided into four rooms, the partitions being of paper tacked to the framework, there being no laths or plaster.

"The small stove standing in the center of the room he has used for more than twenty years, and the pot on the stove contains his Sunday dinner, which he has prepared for himself, consisting of white navy beans and fatback. These beans are now costing him twenty-five to thirty cents a quart, and the fatback costs him forty cents a pound. It could have been purchased a few years ago for seventeen cents a pound, and the beans for ten cents. He does not get any fresh meat because he cannot afford to buy it.

"To my mind it seems a pity that the United States government should employ men of that type, or any other type for that matter, and not give them enough to live on decently. It is particularly a pity in this case because he is somewhat superior to many of the employees. He has stayed with us as a matter of faithfulness to the government, and has stayed with us when he could make more in one week outside of the government than we pay him for one month.

"Others have left us, but instances of that kind have been very few. At one time I had in our auditorium our employees and I made an appeal to them to stand by us during the war period, and there were more than 300 of them present, and they all of one accord assured us that they would stand by us and would give us the benefit of their labor in our department during the war period, notwithstanding the fact that the price for labor outside was a great deal more."

"This curious pride in their work and loyalty to the government and the government service was a thing that cropped up in the most unexpected places."

"As one employee put it: 'I think you will find that every service seems to be quite proud of its work. I know you will find it in our service as far as compensation and such as that are concerned. The pay in this office is small, but that element, that feeling in a man's mind that he is really help-

ANNUAL MEETING Presbyterian Church Trans- acts Yearly Business

The annual business meeting of the Presbyterian Church was held Tuesday evening of last week in the vestry. An excellent supper was served at 6.30 o'clock by the Unity Guild to ninety members and adherents of the church.

After the supper the business meeting was called to order by the moderator, Rev. J. D. Cameron. The first order, after the reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting, was the report of the secretaries and treasurers of the different departments of the church. These reports were heard with interest and satisfaction.

The election of officers was then taken up and the following were chosen for the next year:

Clerk of Church—Hayward Cochran

Treasurer of Church—Hayward Cochran

Treasurer of Benevolence trustees for three years—John B. Jameson

Finance Committee—Wm. L. Lawrence, Robert W. Jameson, Hayward Cochran

The regular committees, as pew, social, usher and flower, were re-elected with additions.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Unity Guild for the delightful and well arranged supper.

ing to accomplish good work and helping this government to function well, is really part of it. I find in all my talks with employees that they really feel proud of their work, and that pride is really what gets things done. I think that is true everywhere in the whole service, and particularly throughout the executive departments.

That is curious, true, and it is one of the reasons, possibly the chief reason, why men stay on in the departments year after year at a low rate of pay and not much possibility of promotion.

The movies were especially interesting on Saturday last. One feature was the ice in the sea which the ship that went furthest north had to navigate; and then some pictures of our own Contocook river as the ice was breaking up, an interesting contrast.

Miss Gertrude McCheyne, the home demonstrating agent, will meet the women of Bennington, Wednesday afternoon, April 19, at the home of Miss Frieda Edwards, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of having a preliminary meeting in regard to starting a Food Class. All interested are invited to attend and bring notebooks and pencils.

Marshall Neilan's first independent production, released through First National Exhibitors' Circuit, is an adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's latest novel of the Canadian Northwest, "The River's End," and the book's popularity can be taken as a criterion for the success of the screen version. The photoplay will be shown at Bennington, Wednesday, April 19.

Our present postmaster, Morris Cheney, who has held the position for several years, was the only candidate to take the civil service examination in Peterboro last Saturday for this position, the present incumbent's term having expired some time ago. There were others who desired to take the examination but had not taken the necessary steps to qualify.

Six Cents for One

A valued reader of the Reporter hands us the following brief article, to which we gladly give space, with the idea in mind that it may benefit the young mind as it should:

"Give me a cent and you may pitch one of the rings, and if it catches over a nail I'll give you six cents," said a man.

That seemed fair enough, so the boy handed him a cent and took a ring. He stepped back to a stake, tossed his ring, and it caught on one of the nails that were fastened in a board.

"Will you take six rings to pitch again or six cents?"

"Six cents," was the answer, and two three-cent pieces were put into his hand. He stepped off well satisfied with what he had done, and probably not having an idea that he had done wrong.

A gentleman standing near had watched him, and now, before he had time to look about and rejoin his companions, laid his hand on his shoulder.

"My lad, this is your first lesson in gambling!"

"Gambling, sir?"

"You staked your penny and won six, did you not?"

"Yes, I did."

"You did not earn them, and they were not given to you. You won them just as gamblers win money. You have taken the first step in the path. That man has gone through it and you can see the end. Now, I advise you to go and give the six cents back and ask him for your penny, and then stand square with the world, an honest boy again."

He had hung down his head, but raised it quickly, and his bright, open look as he said, "I'll do it!" will not be forgotten. He ran back, and soon emerged from the ring, looking happier than ever. That was an honest boy.—Selected.

An Eskimo would give a Fortune in Furs for a New Perfection Cook Stove and a few gallons of Socony Kerosene

A NEW Perfection Oil Cook Stove is as superior to the first oil cook stove as a modern coal range is to the Eskimo's crude fire of blubber and fat.

The New Perfection gives more uniform results in frying, boiling, broiling and baking than the average coal range, because you can control the heat so easily. And there is no waste of fuel when the stove is not in use.

There is no odor from a New Perfection. You don't have to shovel in coal and take out ashes, or litter up with kindling wood, or give it a blacking every week. The glass kerosene reservoir can be changed without spilling a drop of oil or getting any on your hands. The stove is clean, light and easily movable, an all-year-round stove.

Stop in and let your dealer show you the various New Perfection models and how easy they are to operate.

BASIC ISSUES OF TEXTILE STRIKE

Can the Industry Survive in New England is Great Question To Be Decided

The Boston Journal of Commerce recently published a comprehensive and elucidating review of the business fundamentals underlying the great cotton textile strike which was prepared by a New York brokerage house, from which the following extracts are taken:

"Although the textile strike has been in progress in New England for some time, the general public views the struggle as a controversy in which the issues are confined to the mill owners and the striking operatives. There could be no greater error. The principles involved concern the fundamentals of national production and are merely emphasized by the period of reconstruction through which the country's industry is passing.

"Labor leaders, including the head of the largest organized body, have done much to belabor the situation. Well-meaning sentimentalists that have given the phases of the conflict merely a superficial study have done much harm through the dissemination of their ideas and plausible misinformation.

"The issue now being fought out far transcends the limits of the percentage return on capital participation. Two major points are pressing for settlement. One is the matter of getting production costs down to a level where the buyer will be satisfied to make purchases in volume. The other is a determination of the question as to whether cotton manufacturing in New England can be maintained as an economically sound industry in the face of competition by southern mills.

Buyers Holding Off

"Taking up the first point, it must be stated that the textile industry is in a state of deadlock. In the absolute sense, there probably is no over-production. In a relative sense, however, there is; for buyers are refusing to take the full output of the mills. It is not because they do not need the goods. It is not because they do not want the goods, but it is because they do not want to buy them. They feel either that they do not represent value or, at least, they are not based on rock-bottom conditions of productive efficiency. It is not a question of the price of the raw material, for this is a factor that is non-competitive, and which all manufacturers must face the world over.

"Buyers are holding off in the feeling that production costs are too high. This means a slack sale of goods; it means a slow movement of products, a lessened distribution of goods, a reduced scale of operations and an increasing ratio of overhead. Continued still further, it means stagnation, idleness and starvation, both for capital and labor.

"In the opinion of textile experts, the unit cost of production among New England mills, owing chiefly to the item of labor, has been placed considerably above the level of competition elsewhere, particularly in the South. The wage cost per pound of production in New England mills is higher than in the South and as a result the unit cost per yard also is higher. In the last year or so southern mills have cut wages from 35 to 45 percent, probably an average of 40 percent, while eastern mills have made reductions of about 25 percent. In addition to this the working week in the South is from 54 to 60 hours, while in New England it is from 48 to 54 hours. Many of the southern mills are operated by relatively cheap hydro-electric power, and it is not necessary to heat the plants or, at least, it is not necessary to heat them all the time.

Question of Survival

"Looking at our textile position from the standpoint of pure economic efficiency, it is difficult to see how the New England mills can survive in competition with the South. If they make a vastly superior product they have an economic title to existence. Cases of certain well-known makes that have established a market for years may maintain themselves in spite of aggressive but less widely known rivals. As for the vast bulk of goods, any well informed judge will concede that this is merely a matter of price. If the New England mill employ working shorter hours, receiving higher wages, can turn out a volume of goods sufficiently in excess of the southern operative to make up for the longer hours, lower wages and the consequent overhead, he is entitled to the wage scale and working conditions he demands. If he is unable to do so, and his eastern employer finds it impossible to come to terms with him, the textile supremacy of New England may be considered a thing of the past. Economic law has a curious way of solving its problems in favor of the ultimate consumer without regard to those two ancient enemies, capital and labor. In the long run there is only one question to be decided—productive efficiency whether measured from the standpoint of selling cost or quality.

"The New England mill strike, therefore, may be regarded as the first step in a great economic change. The cotton mills of the future will be built in the cotton belt near to the source of raw material supply, where power is cheap and where the operatives consist of native stock uninfected by the ideas of the elements responsible for much of the discontent in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire."

MUST LET THE WORLD KNOW

Too Many Expect Others to Be Conversant With Their Secret Hopes and Aspirations.

The rarest person in the world is the one who knows what he really wants. And if you don't know yourself, how can you expect others to know?

Two young people went off and got married in the most casual, Bohemian fashion, informing nobody.

And their friends asked them around to dinner now and then, accepting the marriage in equally casual fashion, only to find out, years later, that they were deeply hurt not to have had the usual formal bride-and-groom dinners given for them.

But how could anyone have known that?

If independence, freedom and an adventurous life are what you really want, don't expect people to deduce it from the fact that you are married and have several small children.

If you are a professional person, and have decided early in your career that you must make money above all things, don't be hurt and surprised when you are forty if you are not widely known as a distinguished scientific expert.

And if you have given up your life to research, don't be surprised if you haven't made a lot of money.

You have told the world one thing. Now you are dismayed that it did not see into your heart and understand what it was that you really wanted.

Too many gentle souls pin their faith on the old idea that the world will sooner or later beat a path to their doors.—Marion McLean, in The Designer.

ADAM AND EVE GO SHOPPING

Highly Imaginative Picture of Our First Parents Strolling Through a Department Store.

Let us imagine our scapegoat ancestors attempting an 11 o'clock stroll through a ten-story department store. Ellen Burns Sherman writes in the North American Review.

Can we not hear the tense ejaculations of our first mother before the mountains of unknown things, wools, satins, silks, challies, organdies and muslins, piled ceiling-high before her?

Even Adam, who has a reputation as a namer of things, might well drop all his Miltonic airs of superiority, and say for once in some dainty form of Edenic language, "Eve, dear, I certainly am out of soundings."

names easily enough for birds, beasts and fishes, but all this" (with a gesture of meek hopelessness) "is out of my zone. Yet I am sure it is all intended for your sex; for I'm thinking no man would gear himself up in any of this duffe!—if one may help him to a word. Then Eve, if true to her old Edenic form, would retort:

"But Adam, dear, you can't deny that it is all most tempting, and I am going to pick right away some of that soft, cloudy stuff, the color of a sunrise; I'm sure it would be much prettier than fig leaves for a dress."

Differ Concerning Apparition.

An apparition in dazzling white appeared above the altar at Belmont abbey, according to priests of the Benedictine order at the monastery attached to Belmont abbey. One of the priests was kneeling before the high altar when the apparition appeared and he called some of his colleagues, who are also reported to have seen the apparition. One of the priests at the monastery said: "One evening I was in the grounds closing doors, when I saw the life-size figure of a priest, dressed in his ordinary habit. Another time I was asleep, when I was awakened by someone passing a hand over my heart. Starting up, I recognized the visage as the returned spirit of a dead priest." The abbot of Belmont treated the matter humorously. "No sensible person believes in such psychic phenomena nowadays," he said. "If any man here tells me he has seen a ghost I will give him a good dose of physic for indigestion and watch how he eats his next meal."

Measure Your Figure.

A Brazilian art scholar claims to have discovered how the old masters of painting and sculpture worked. He has taken the pictures and shown, by drawing lines and angles on them, how the artists gave their compositions strictly mathematical foundations.

Ancient Egyptian artists had a rule of proportions based on the length of the middle finger, the distance of which was contained nineteen times in the length of the whole body.

Greek artists adopted these proportions until it was established that the face must be a tenth part and the head an eighth part of the total height of the body. The face was divided into three equal parts—from the roots of the hair to the root of the nose; from the root of the nose to its point, and from the end of the nose to the chin.

The Man in the Moon.

Observations made from August, 1920, to February, 1921, by Prof. William Henry Flockering of Harvard, who is one of the world's leading astronomers and an authority on lunar and Martian phenomena, tend, he asserts, to prove beyond doubt that life exists on the surface of the moon. The professor bases his assertions on a series of telescopic photographs of a crater with a circumference of 87 miles. Hundreds of photographic reproductions have, it is stated, proved irrefutably the springing up at dawn of an unbelievable rapidity, of vast fields of foliage, which come into full blossom just as rapidly, and which disappear in a maximum period of 11 days. The plates also show that great blizzards, snowstorms and volcanic eruptions are frequent. "We find," says the professor, "a living world at our very doors where life in some respects resembles that of Mars—a world which the astronomical profession has in past years utterly neglected and ignored."

Reform.

"When you entered politics you announced yourself as a reformer." "I am still a reformer," protested Senator Sorghum. "But I am obliged to be discreet, owing to differences of opinion as to which particular style of reform is entitled to precedence in public attention."

MUSIC THAT IS IMMORTAL

Mendelssohn Needs No Other Memorial Than His Left in His Wonderful Wedding March.

Possibly the most famous march ever written is the wedding march from the "Midsummer Night's Dream" by Felix Mendelssohn. Like the overture to his famous work it is a splendid example of Mendelssohn's astonishing musical fertility. The overture is now one of the hundred years old and is one of the greatest examples of precocity in any art. Although written by a youth of eighteen, it is one of the great classics of the tone art. The march was not written until later, but its glorious burst of exuberant harmony would make it an all-fascinating musical number even though it were not associated with the joyous occasion of marriage festivities. Mendelssohn's musical mind retained these numbers in wonderful fashion. Once when the score of his famous overture was left in a room in London and he had hastily replied, "Never mind, I shall make another." After he had completed this immense work it was compared with the instrumental parts and found to be accurate to the last dot, even though Mendelssohn had made it from memory. Why did not Mendelssohn write other famous marches? He wrote others, but none quite so good as the wedding march. His "March of the High Priests" from "Athalia" is built upon the same formal lines and is an altogether beautiful work in classical march form.

AMBITION IS HARD MASTER

Success Means Concentration and a Willingness to Make Sacrifices for Its Attainment.

Ambition is more than a wish; it is desire intensified into determined purpose. All that is needed for the accomplishment of our ambitions is a desire so strong that we will sacrifice whatever may stand in the way of our success. The law of compensation never fails. If we would gain one thing we must give up another. How many people have you known who complain of failure through bad luck, when your own knowledge of them tells you that their downfall came through lack of really trying? They were not willing to forego pleasures or extravagances which interfered with their success.

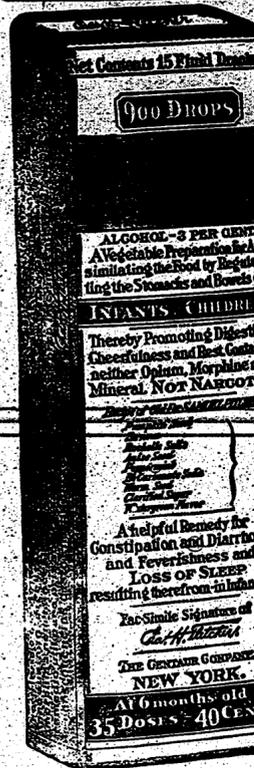

Intense effort comes through intense desire which allows nothing to interfere with its purpose. Life is not much without ambition of some kind and unless one is living with a purpose of some sort he is merely whirling away the time, waiting for the call of the grim reaper. Try to make your ambitions worthy ones, and then concentrate on fulfilling them. Find out not only what you must do to realize them, but also what you must give up. If you desire strongly enough you will accomplish.—Montreal Family Herald.

Forget That "Hate To" Idea.

Are you one of the "I hate to" family? How often one hears people use that phrase. If you are guilty of using it, try to break yourself of the habit. It doesn't reflect a strong, healthy, vigorous mental attitude. It suggests pettiness, querulousness, lack of the "I will" spirit. The way to conquer a disposition to "hate" so many is to cultivate a cheerful, resolute, beneficent frame of mind. If you fill your heart with love of your fellow mortals and are possessed of a consuming desire to be of service in the world, you will have little room left in you for "hating" this, that or the other thing or person. The forceful person, animated by the right motives, starts more sentences with the words "I like to" than with "I hate to." Get this thought into your mind: If you are constantly "hating," the cause lies within yourself.—Forbes Magazine.

Mind-Laziness.

Most of us have, or have had, a tendency to be lazy about thinking. That, in itself, is not dangerous; a tendency can be overcome if we are interested in overcoming it. But many people, not realizing what is the matter with their minds, let lazy thinking habits develop unchecked. The slipshod mind has always an excuse ready. It says, "I'm too tired to rest now. What I need is a thorough rest to fit me for thinking. Tomorrow I shall be able to do this work easily." Sometimes the excuse is genuine, but we must be on our guard to see that the tired feeling really means overwork. We must be on the lookout for the idly brain that complains of being exhausted.
