INCOME TAX FACTS

Weekly Letters of Interest to Everyone

Income Tax Facts, No. 5

Liability to file an income tax return for the year 1922 is determined by a person's status on the last day of the taxable year, December 31, if the return is made on the calendar year basis, as most are. If on that date he was single he must file a return if his net income for 1922 was $1,000 or more, and he is allowed only an exemption of $1,000. If he was married on December 31, he is granted the exemption allowed a married person for the full year, $2,500 if his net income was $5,000 or less, and $2,000 if his net income exceeded $5,000. The bride's income, however, must be considered with that of her husband, the larger exemptions being allowed married couples living together. A widow or widower whose spouse died before the end of the year is classed as a single person. Divorcees and persons separated by mutual consent also are classed as single persons.

Similar conditions exist with respect to the head of a family. If, during the year, his support of relatives ceased he is entitled only to the $1,000 exemption. A man who has a dependent child, not mentally or physically defective, that attains the age of 18 years just before the close of the taxable year, cannot claim the $400 credit for a dependent.

AUSTRALIAN SYSTEM

Secret Ballot and Friend of Every Voter

Friends of the Australian ballot system of voting for town officers need to be on hand at town meeting next Tuesday, when this matter comes up for consideration under Article 15. Antrim has used this system with general satisfaction since 1899 when it was adopted in town meeting, and ever since that time the business of the annual meeting and the voting has been run off as smooth as clockwork. Occasionally there has been an article in the town warrant similar to the one now in question to return to a system of voting which was enjoyed by a few and really was no system at all—just a go-as-you-please sort of way. But for anything like a secret ballot, and everyone has a certain amount of independence about him, the Australian system is practically perfect, and women as well as men will surely want to continue it as among the good things that Antrim enjoys. Talk it to your neighbors and let there be a large vote on this question; this system is your friend and you should so consider it—vote to keep it by all means. There is no GOOD reason for its discontinuance—there may be an excuse—consequently let the vote in favor of its continuance be very large and emphatic.

Pine Blister Rust

Federal Blister Rust Agent Locke Bullock has recently spent some time in town inspecting pine land. In his interviews with town officials and pine land owners he has been very emphatic in stating that unless protective measures are adopted great damage will result to the pine stands of the town. Blister Rust has been found in the vicinity of North Branch, also in the Tuttle mountain district. Mr. Bullock believes that the Blister Rust article in the warrant should receive the support of the voters of this town. A specimen of Blister Rust may be seen at the town hall.

Public Meeting in Concord

Having been requested by the State Horticultural Society and the New Hampshire Fish and Game League to arrange a public meeting at which the matter of "damage to fruit trees" by "game birds protected by law" may be openly discussed, arrangements have been made for such a meeting in the General Committee room at the State House in Concord, at 12:30 sharp on Thursday, March 8. In order that this conference may be of value it should be largely attended, and legislation may hinge on the evidence produced and the sentiment expressed.

Democratic Caucus

The Democrats held their caucus on Monday evening and put in nomination for town offices the following names to be voted for at Town Meeting next Tuesday:

Town Clerk—James M. Cutter
Treasurer—George P. Little
Selectman for three years—Morris H. Wood
Road Agent—Elmer W. Merrill
Overseer of the Poor—Dennis W. Cooley
Library Trustee for three years—Annie J. Munnhall
Trustee of Trust Funds for three years—Robert W. Jameson
Auditors—James M. Cutter, Archie M. Sweet

FORMER RESIDENT

Nathaniel Farrant Dies at Home in Reading

Our people were much saddened to learn on Saturday that one of our former townsmen, Natt. Farrant, as he was familiarly known to everyone, had passed away, a victim of the dread disease, pneumonia; he died at his home in Reading, Mass., March 3, at 1.30 a. m., at the age of 60 years.

For a number of years he resided with his family in town, owning and operating for six years what is known as the Perkins farm, coming here in 1908; later had charge of Grey-stone Golf course; for the past few years since 1919 he has been employed by the Meadowbrook Golf Club as superintendent at their club house and links. Mr. Farrant was a genial fellow and everybody enjoyed his company, his home was always open and his numerous friends were ever welcome. He was an Odd Fellow and a Mason. His removal from town was greatly regretted. Now his friends here are in mourning for the family who has met with so great a loss. His older son, Raymond, since his discharge from service in the World war, has been in delicate health and has spent most of the time in government hospitals. Another son, Howard, and daughter, Natalie Bertha, are the other children. The widow, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harlow, of Antrim, is suddenly bereft of a loving husband and indulgent helpmeet. Mrs. Farrant is quite ill at this writing and under the care of a nurse. All friends in town where they are so well known are loud in their words of sympathy for the widow and the children especially and other members of the family. Besides these, deceased leaves three sisters and one brother, residents of Newport, Vt.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon from Mt. Auburn crematory chapel, at Cambridge, Mass.

Birth of Know-nothingism in Antrim

The birth of the Know-nothing Party into town was in the winter of 1854 and March election of 1855. It appears that the party was organized and made up of Whigs and Free Soilers that winter and spring. It appears that the place of meeting was Dea. Wright's shop at Clinton; it seems that it was a sort of secret organization—met on the sly. Outside of the place of meeting they were known only as good friends, showing their politics only at the place of meeting.

At the March election of 1855 the vote declared for representative by the moderator was: Lemuel N. Pattee, 135; Alexander Jameson, 135. No choice, 2nd ballot: Alexander Jameson, 135; Lemuel N. Pattee, 136. Pattee, the Know-nothing candidate for representative was declared elected.

The men who had voted for him were hilarious; while those who had voted for the democratic candidate were dumbfounded, as it were. It was really the breaking up of the party that had been in the majority of power ever since the formation of the town.

The state tax commission will hold a meeting which will be open to the public for the purpose of conferring with and advising the selectmen and assessors as to the law governing the assessment and taxation of property, for the County of Hillsborough, at Manchester, City Hall, 10.30 a. m., Friday, March 16.

Elk All but Annihilated.

Elk once occurred in nearly every state, but the larger number are now confined to national forests and national parks in 14 states, according to the forest service. United States Department of Agriculture. Of a total of 72,000 elk reported several years ago, over 52,000 find range on the national forests some time during the year. The once large herds of antelope found in all western states have been almost annihilated, but the 2,400 head now existing on the national forests in 10 states constitute the nucleus of future herds. A total of 13,000 mountain sheep in 11 states, and 10,000 mountain goats in four states are reported. A few representatives of many other big-game species are still found in widely scattered sections of the national forests, while fur-bearing animals under protection show a remarkable increase in most localities.

Gophers Commit Suicide.

A self-exploding gun for the extermination of pocket gophers is now being used by a number of farmers who are bothered with these pests. The gun, illustrated and described in Popular Mechanics Magazine, looks like a miniature cannon. It is mounted on an aluminum frame with three ground spikes so arranged that the barrel can be pointed directly into the gopher's runway. It shoots a standard .410 shotgun shell. In setting, the dirt is first scraped away from the hole. The gun is then spiked into the ground with the barrel pointing down into the burrow. A small piece of cork or cob is placed over the end of the trigger wire. The slightest pressure on the trigger-wire cork releases the hammer, and bang! the full charge of the shot hits the gopher in the face. The gopher virtually commits suicide.

Fighting Malaria With Tractors.

Malaria has a new enemy in the motor plow, which drives away disease by introducing cultivation. Experiments lately made with four tractors with a special plow blade turned up furrows ten inches deep so successfully that it is pronounced practicable to reclaim swamp lands hitherto unproductive and given over to malaria. The land rested was formed by a stratum of roots and marsh plants upon a marshy bank of decomposed vegetable material, which in turn rested on soft mud that yielded easily to the weight of wheels.

Two Brides by Law.

The Journal des Debats, one of the most highly esteemed daily papers of France is an authority for stating that the Turkish national assembly is so anxious in regard to the population of the new Turkey, now in course of formation, that it is preparing a law to render matrimony a duty which, like compulsory military service, must be enforced on all.

No conscientious objectors will be tolerated. When a man reaches the age of twenty-five, the police will take note of him and medical authorities will examine him. If he is physically fit, he must marry; if he refuses, he will be treated as a deserter and deprived of all his civil rights and employment.

If he has private means a quarter of the amount will be taken and given to the poor.

Should a recalcitrant husband seek to avoid his obligations by traveling he must obtain special permission; and, if he remains away too long, he must marry a second time and bring his second wife home when he returns.

Here we have a law enforcing not only matrimony but bigamy, the population of Turkey being the one and only social duty recognized.

The Proposed Amendment

This is the last issue of the Reporter before Town Meeting, and we want to say a word or two to our readers concerning the way we feel in regard to the amendment submitted to the voters to be voted on at this time. One amendment, and not much trouble to vote on it. Many say to vote 'yes' would have the effect of double taxation, some say it would give you larger latitude for greater taxation, while others think it is one of the crying needs of the present day. It is probable that there is a little argument in favor of the amendment, but there seems to be so little that we can't encourage our readers in that direction. We hope to vote 'no' after the votes are all counted that our town was practically a unit on this question.

FOR SALE

I have 50 tin sap buckets, with covers and spouts, all in good shape; will sell at a bargain. OSCAR HUOT, Antrim, N. H.

The Direct Primary

The N. H. Senate has passed a bill to kill the present direct primary law. We do not believe a majority of the voters of the state approve of their action, and feel sure the House will see to it that the same is quickly killed when it is their turn to vote. The friends of the direct primary do not claim it is a perfect system of voting, but they do claim that it is so far in advance of the old convention plan—more representative in every way. Had the more amendments been thoughtfully worked out, proposed and adopted by the Senate to improve the present primary law, they would have been doing a constructive work and something the voters throughout the state could improve.

THE AWFUL MESS OF AIMEE AND BILLY

Alexander's eyes became keener. He looked a little contemptuous. "Are you afraid?" he said. "Do you not see that you must face the consequences of this foolish thing you have done? Once the truth is told, you have nothing to fear from the police."

"The police!" said Aimee scornfully. "I'm not afraid of the police. I'm not much afraid of Aunt Erythea. It isn't that at all. It's—the other thing."

"What other thing?"

Aimee looked at him with growing embarrassment.

"Oh!" she said at last, desperately, "have I got to put it in so many words? My staying at Ivy cottage! Didn't you understand what I told you? I was there—two nights."

Mr. Lamb, to her surprise, did not look forbidding or censorious. Instead, he looked a little puzzled. And in that moment Aimee conceived a liking for Alexander.

"Now that I have seen you, and heard your story," he said, "I attach no importance to that incident, whatever."

"Ah," said Aimee sadly, "but other people will, you see."

Alexander suddenly flushed crimson, and he avoided Aimee's eye. But his face grew peculiarly grim.

"I have only this to say. That man—that Spencer—who dared to expose you to such a situation, is the culprit I wish to see. He deserves—"

Aimee's heel smote the floor.

"Not a word against Billy! It's he who saved me, right from the beginning. He begged me to let him own up. But he has kept my secret, at his own risk, because I wanted it kept. He is a gentleman!"

"Billy," said Aimee, "this is my Cousin Alexander. And he's—he knows all about it. It seems this is our finish, Billy."

The two men turned and faced each other.

There you have it in a nutshell—the awful mess that Aimee and Billy have got into. For Aimee is a bishop's daughter and a nice girl—they don't make 'em nicer. And Cousin Alexander is a young churchman—and churchmen are obliged to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. And Aimee is masquerading as a servant maid, and is mixed up in a burglary and is gallivanting around with an unknown American, Billy Spencer, who has a new kind of motorcycle to sell. Incidentally, Billy is as nice as they make 'em, too. It's an English story, but it's bright as a new American dollar. And entertaining! and thrilling!

Sidney Gowing is the author. He's a comparatively new man, but he's already made an international reputation. He certainly has written a good story here, which deserves its name—"The Joy of Living."

CHAPTER I

Sentenced.

"I can't go, dad," said Aimee desperately. "and I won't."

"My answer, my dear Aimee," said Lord Scroope firmly yet benignly. "Is that you must go, and you shall!"

"A month of Aunt Erythea," said Aimee in stifled tones, "would kill me. Why are these things always piled on to me? I'm fed up!"

The Very Rev. Viscount Scroope, archdeacon and incumbent of the living of Scroope Magna, gazed dreamily over his daughter's head without appearing to hear her. A sunbeam filtered through the diamond panes, blanching his silver hair and finely cut features. It was as though the sunbeam said: "Behold a saint; here is one who hears and speaks no evil." A saint Lord Scroope undoubtedly was; calm, benign and immovable as granite.

"My dear child," he said gently, "let us admit the cold light of reason. You can have no genuine objection to your Aunt Erythea, for you have never set eyes on her since you were three years old. Jervaulx abbey is a well-appointed and strictly ordered house. It is an atmosphere which will correct, I believe, the influence of that detestable school from which you have removed. You must go, Aunt Erythea desires that you shall go. And that, as you will realize when you make her acquaintance, is final."

The Hon. Aimee Scroope's vividly lovely face became still more mournful and desolate.

"And do not suppose that you will lack youthful society," added Lord Scroope, smiling. "Your cousin, Alexander Lamb, is at Jervaulx. A little older than yourself, doubtless, but an excellent companion for you. A young man wholly devoted to good work, and with unexcelled connections, he will doubtless attain that eminence which his aunt would wish for him."

Aimee looked at her father with intense suspicion. Then she turned to the photograph of a young man in a clerical collar; the face was pleasant but somewhat serious, with large, frank, round eyes. The face that Aimee made at it was hideous.

"Go and tell your maid to pack, dear child," said Lord Scroope gently, patting her head. Aimee was twenty years of age, and stood five feet six, but her father continued to have the air of patting somebody about three feet high.

Aimee said something inarticulate, and made a beeline for a rose-pink boudoir where Lady Scroope, blonde, petite and wholly charming, was buttoning her gloves. Amid pink surroundings, Lady Scroope looked little older than her daughter.

"Mumsey," said Aimee forcibly, "you'll have to throw me a rope. I have simply got to be rescued from this awful visit!" She expounded with extreme rapidity and terror her views on Jervaulx, Lady Erythea Lamb, and Alexander.

Lady Scroope twinkled, and was so exasperating as to laugh. She put her hands affectionately on her daughter's shoulders.

"Sorry, Aimee," she said; "there is, as you would say, nothing doing. You will have to go. I can't have your dear father worried any more. I don't think," she added pensively, "there's any cause for real alarm about Alexander Lamb."

"It's all very well for you," mourned Aimee, "but—"

"I'm really sorry, dear. I am going to the Milne-Temples and elsewhere for a few weeks, but when I come back I will make it up to you. These are the little crosses you have to bear."

She kissed her daughter, and hurried down to the car.

The car whirled her away, and Lord Scroope followed it with dreamily adoring eyes. Aimee, who had watched the pair with a sort of exasperated affection, turned into the morning room.

"What on earth," she murmured, "is one to do with people like that?"

She encountered her guest and cousin, Georgina Berners, twenty-three, plump and plaid, dressed in a style that suggested enforced economy. Miss Berners was looking wistful.

"Why, Georgina," said Aimee, encircling her ample waist, "have you the bump, too? Let's be miserable together."

"It has been lovely here at Scroope," said Georgina, "and you are such a dear. I've nothing to go back to but Uncle Joseph, who doesn't think about anything but money, and somebody remembers I exist—though he is quite kind, of course. It will be awful after this."

"I've never met your Uncle Joseph," said Aimee, "but I'm certain he's nothing to my Aunt Erythea and Jervaulx."

She broke into a frenzied and vivid word-picture of all that awaited her.

"A place something between a cathedral and a barrack, and a fearful sort of Roman matron with a nose like the duke of Wellington's—I've never seen Aunt's nose, but it's certainly like that—and to be drilled into dithering decorously with an owl-faced curate who, some day, they say, will probably be a bishop—"

Georgina was intensely shocked.

"Aimee, you really are extraordinary! Many people would be too glad to be in your shoes. A long visit to a charming old place—Jervaulx, they say, is even more old-world than Scroope—everything orderly, romantic, peaceful—"

"Molly!" interrupted Aimee. "And luxurious. Lady Erythea, everyone says, is a splendid manager. And your cousin—a nice, sensible young man. I've seen his photograph. His face—"

"It's the face," said Aimee fiercely, "of a cold boiled codfish! I've seen it—I've seen it! It made me feel as if my shoes were full of water!"

"Aimee!" said Georgina plaintively. "You appal me!"

"Good thing! Then you know how I feel!" retorted Aimee, pearly. "The whole thing appals me. These curates! I'm fed up with them! Alexander is the limit!"

Aimee paused for breath.

"He's a frump!" she said, with extraordinary vehemence.

"He is good!" insisted Georgina. "That is a good man's face, if ever I saw one. And," added Georgina, with a rapt expression on her plump features, "he will fall in love with you, Aimee. I'm sure of it! And when that happens—"

"Oh, you make me sick!" said the frenzied Aimee. "It's a disease with you! Sentiment revolts me. This mauling about love—"

"Aimee," said Georgina almost tearfully, "your very name means 'be-loved'!"

"Oh, rats!" said Aimee furiously, and fled from the room.

CHAPTER II

Escape.

In the deepest depression, Aimee wandered down the park avenue towards the high road. She passed through the lodge gates and turned the corner of the road.

There Aimee halted, and considered the perversity of Fate. And close beside her barked a sharp explosion, with a flash of yellow flame and a whiff of pungent smoke. And a clear voice exclaimed:

"H—!"

"Just what I was thinking!" said Aimee.

A young man, who was tinkering a motorcycle, whence came the explosion, looked up startled, and removed his cap.

"Oh! I'm sorry!" he said. "I didn't know there was anyone around."

They looked at each other, and both laughed. It was impossible to look at the stranger and fall to laugh. Not in derision, but joyously, spontaneously, as one laughs when the breeze heels the boat, or when a puppy dog falls head over tail.

When the motorcyclist grinned, his teeth were so white that they gave the effect of a flash. His fair and rather tousled hair caught the sun. His head looked as if it might be rammed through a door, without damaging anything except the door-panel. He was big built, and about twenty-five, but his bright blue eyes might have belonged to a boy of sixteen. He wore dusty blue overalls.

"That's better!" he said approvingly, as Aimee laughed again. "You were looking as if you felt pretty low."

"I was. Everybody has been appalling! Talking sentiment till I feel sticky all over."

The stranger's face fell.

"Gee! That's too bad! Sentiment, eh?" He made a gesture as if ward-

They Looked at Each Other and Both Laughed.

ing off invisible assailants. "Sentiment is poison ivy! It gives me that tired feeling. Madam, accept my sympathy."

"In the space of a moment they felt as though they had known each other for years."

"Do you live anywhere about here?" said Aimee. "I seem to have seen—"

"Here? About seven thousand miles west-by-south of here?" said the stranger, laughing. "Cohalt, Arapahoe county. Citizen of the world—answer to the name of 'Billy.' And I'm here in England," he added, laying a loving hand on the tank of the motorcycle—"to sell this."

"Weird-looking thing!" said Aimee, with interest, for the cycle's engine was of a remarkable shape. "Yours?"

"Aimee!" said the stranger joyously. "Alone I did it. I hold the patent. It's a Sanakotwzer—the Flying Sphinx!"

"Ripping name! Can it fly?"

"Can it fly? It devours space like the sunbeams lick up the mists of the mornin'. And no more noise than a baby's whisper."

"Around the world in thirty winks. When once astride the Flying Sphinx!"

"It's got Sinbad's Carpet an' the Seven-league Boots guessing." He threw a leg over the saddle. "Like a spin up the road? Jump up behind!"

Aimee immediately perched herself on the carrier. There was a whirlwind charm about the stranger that carried her away. The next moment the Flying Sphinx did the same. The wind whistled past Aimee's ears. To keep her seat she was obliged to grab Billy suddenly round the waist.

"Don't mind if I hold you?" she gasped.

"Shucks!" said Billy impatiently. "I don't care how you hold me, s'long's you don't hit the grit!"

They breasted the crest of the rise.

"Hang tight now!" he cried. "We'll let her out!"

The Sphinx went forward with the whirl of a shell. She peeled the roadway behind her like a running tape. Aimee felt the roar of the wind rise to a scream. Billy leaned lightly forward towards the handle-bars, cool, effortless, efficient.

Aimee was only conscious of being whirled gloriously through space, when the Sphinx, after a two-mile loop, slid back to the spot whence she had started. Aimee sprang from the carrier.

"Oh, thank you!" she gasped. "That was too good to be true!"

The cyclist, without dismounting, looked at her glowing face and frank eyes.

"I wish there were more like you," he said, laughing. "Tell 'em—whoever they are—to can the sentiment. S'long, an' good luck to you!"

He raised his cap, and next moment the Sphinx whirled him away in a cloud of golden dust. Aimee followed him with her eyes till he was round the bend, then she turned back into the park. It seemed to her that the sunlight had become less vivid and the sky paler.

Very slowly, Aimee made her way back to the portals of Scroope Towers, where the heavy family car, laden with luggage, stood waiting. Georgina was on the steps, abundantly wrapped up, and Lord Scroope stood beside her.

"Grundle," he said to the chauffeur, "you will drop Miss Berners at the station, and take Miss Aimee on to Jervaulx, returning here direct."

The chauffeur, who was a middle-aged man with a singularly wooden expression, seemed to be making a mental effort. He saluted, starting straight before him.

"Goodby, Georgina! Bless you, my child; bless you! Drive on, Grundle. What are you waiting for?"

The car mandered out of Scroope park and turned northward along the main road. Georgina was in low spirits. Aimee throughout had been seething with an enormously increased sense of mutiny, and, as they neared the station, she exploded.

"I can't stand it, Georgie!"

"I wish I were you!" said Georgina mournfully.

"Eh?"

"I wish I were Aimee Scroope, and on my way to Jervaulx abbey. That's all!"

Aimee started slightly. An extraordinary impish expression came into her eyes. Georgina, who knew the sign of old, looked at her nervously.

"You are," said Aimee, in a voice of unlooked-for decision.

"What on earth do you mean?"

Aimee gripped her by the arm, and replied, in a low voice that bubbled with excitement.

"My dear, fat cousin, your full name, as I remember, is Georgina Amy Scroope Berners! Lop off the superfluous head and tail, and there you are—Amy Scroope. Near enough for anyone. You are going to Jervaulx instead of me! Aunt Erythea has never seen me, nor has Alexander Lamb. And neither of them know you from Adam—I mean Eve! You'll suit them down to the ground!"

Georgina looked at her with dawning terror.

"It is a gorgeous arrangement!" exclaimed Aimee, tightening her grip on her cousin's arm. "And nothing easier. Uncle Joseph will never miss you—leave me to fix that up. Grundle will deliver you at Jervaulx; he's a perfect super-idiot, and has probably forgotten which of us is to go there. If we didn't tell him. He never talks either. As for me, I shall go to Seabridge, or on a walking tour—or anything I choose!"

"Aimee, are you mad?"

"It is one of the sanest moments of my life!" retorted Aimee; and, leaning over the back, she tore the tags off her luggage and Georgina's, and scattered them on the road. "You can take my things with you!"

"If you think for a moment I'd have anything to do with such a business—"

A fendish expression came over Aimee's features. She gripped her cousin's arms again.

"If you don't," she hissed, "I'll tell everybody about you and Aloysius Blennerhasset getting lost at the rural-decantal picnic!"

At this monstrous accusation, Georgina blushed scarlet. The mildest peccadillo in a blameless life, the memory of the incident in question always filled her with alarm; Aimee had held it over her head before.

"I won't listen to another word!" she gasped.

"You needn't. It is the time for deeds!" Aimee seized a small square box from among the luggage and thumped the chauffeur on the back.

"Grundle, stop here! I have only a bag, I'll walk up to the station approach. Take Miss Berners on to Jervaulx. And hurry—she is behind time already!"

A faintly bewildered expression passed over the chauffeur's face, as though he were trying to arrange his luggage. "There is—there is a mistake! May I—"

"The modern tendency of the young to enunciate indistinctly," said Lady Erythea, producing an ear-trumpet, "always annoys me. Say what you have to say clearly."

Georgina had not realized that Lady Erythea was extremely deaf.

"There is something I have to explain," she bawled hoarsely into the ear-trumpet. "P—please, can I see you alone?"

"Ah!" said Lady Erythea vaguely. "I am pleased that you look forward so much to your visit. No, you need not fear being alone. Here is your cousin," she added, as a young man in clerical collar came out upon the steps. "Alexander, your cousin, Aimee."

Georgina turned a pale and timid face to the stranger. The Rev. and Hon. Alexander Lamb bowed.

Alexander was large and well, though somewhat loosely built. Aimee's epithet, "owl-faced," was hardly fair. Certainly his clean-shaven face was a little serious, and his eyes large and round, but very kindly.

"Welcome to Jervaulx, Cousin Aimee," he said.

A sudden interest and sympathy quickened in the large eyes as they rested on Georgina's face. And the panic-stricken girl's fear died within her. Mr. Alexander Lamb looked so cool and protective and dependable.

"Escort your cousin to the morning room, Alexander," said Lady Erythea authoritatively, "and offer her refreshment after her drive."

They walked in, together. And as they walked their backs seemed to suggest, in some subtle manner, that an understanding, a mutual sympathy, had dawned between them. Backs can be very expressive sometimes.

Lady Erythea regarded them with a look of commanding approval. She followed them majestically up the steps.

"This," proclaimed Lady Erythea's erect and overwhelming back, "is as I ordained it from the beginning."

CHAPTER III

Re-Enter Billy.

Aimee tramped along the broad highway, whistling. At Scroope, much more at Jervaulx, one was not allowed to whistle. Ever and anon she stopped whistling to laugh.

Aimee had dropped the square box into a quarry pit an hour before and continued on her way unburdened. The idea of finding belongings at Seabridge appealed to her. She had funds enough. A month's pocket money was in her purse, and Lady Scroope had been liberal on her departure.

"What a row there'll be," chuckled Aimee, "if Georgie doesn't play up! I don't care. I gave them my ultimatum. They can't hang me. I've been very patient with them all. One must make a stand sometime or other. Who does my life belong to?" demanded Aimee, never a purist in grammar. "If not to me?"

A faint sound was borne upon the breeze, a noise that attuned itself curiously to Aimee's thoughts. She looked up, and saw a motorcycle speeding along the road with a sneer of following dust behind it like the tail of a comet. Aimee recognized the Flying Sphinx, and became aware of a laughing face looking up at hers, and a set of very white teeth.

"Why, it's Billy!" she cried spontaneously.

"Hello, old chap!" cried the cyclist. Billy was bare-headed, his fair hair sticking up at the crown in a little tuft that blew about in the wind.

"Where were you making for?" he said.

"The unemployment bureau!" retorted Aimee slyly.

Billy's face expressed concern. "I suppose you're gazing me. You don't mean you've lost your job?"

"Job?" Aimee smiled with amusement. "Well, I had a job all ready for me this morning. But it's washed out. I've lost it. And now I'm adrift."

Billy was perplexed. He had been wholly unable to place Aimee. He wondered if she were a governess. A question was on his lips, but he checked himself for fear of giving offense.

"Lost it?" he exclaimed. "I guess it's just as well! You look a heap happier! What job d'you think of chasin'?"

"I—I don't know."

Billy looked at her eagerly. A sudden flash came into his eyes, as one who conceives a superb idea.

"Will a duck swim?" cried Aimee. "Of course I'll come."

"For several years I had been in a weak and run-down condition. I had frequent fainting spells which always left me almost completely exhausted. I suffered so with nervousness that the least little thing would make me jump and it got to be almost impossible for me to get a good night's sleep. I would get terrible fits of depression which would last for days. I had taken doctors' medicines and tonics without number, but nothing seemed to do me much good. I saw Wincarnis advertised and decided to try a bottle. In an incredibly short time I got back my strength, my nervousness disappeared and I could sleep as peacefully as a child. I really believe Wincarnis is the greatest of all tonics."

NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE

Two bills concerning the city of Manchester furnished an interesting debate for the first day of the session last week, as well as a roll call and quite a display of fireworks. The first bill provides for popular election of assessors. The debate upon the bill was bitter and personal, and was started by Representative Cronin who read a statement in which he charged that the people represented by 61 Democratic representatives from Manchester pay only one fourth as much taxes as the people represented by the eight Republicans.

He further stated that the total taxes paid by the 61 Democratic representatives are $757.95 and the eight Republicans paid taxes of $297.86. Several members of the Manchester delegation tried to prevent Mr. Cronin from continuing his remarks, but he kept the floor long enough to say that 17 representatives from Manchester had secured exemption from the poll tax and that 14 others had failed to pay it. The speaker finally ruled that he was out of order. There were remarks by various members as well as a flood of questions. A motion to substitute the minority report against the bill was defeated, and Mr. Cronan called for the yeas and nays. The vote was 198 to 68 in favor of the bill.

The other Manchester bill provides for the abolition of the finance commission and was passed without opposition.

Among others the house passed the following bills: Relating to the control of self hunting dogs; permitting the collection of birds, their nests and eggs, wild animals and fish for scientific purposes; relating to misleading or deceptive advertisements; an act to establish an additional system of cross state highways.

In the senate the report of the labor committee on the 48-hour bill came in, the three Republicans being against the measure and the two Democrats reporting that it ought to pass. It was made a special order for Wednesday.

Proceedings in the house were quiet Wednesday until the two contested election cases were brought up. The petitions of Willie B. Emmons of Thornton and Frank J. Kelley of Concord to seats in the House of Representatives were read, and a lively debate ensued. On both petitions the Democratic members of the committee on elections presented a majority report that the petitioners were not entitled to seats while the Republican minority claimed that they were. The matter was made a special order for the next Tuesday morning. Two bills were passed during the afternoon. The first was an act repealing section 11 of chapter 55 of the public statutes relating to the exemption of manufacturing establishments. The other related to suits by and against administrators, bill to establish gates at grade crossings was reported inexpedient.

The 48-hour bill came up for action Wednesday in the Senate at 11 o'clock, and the gallery, senate chamber and ante rooms were packed with an interested throng. There was an earnest debate upon the bill, the Democrats urging the substitution of the minority report that the bill ought to pass. This was opposed by the Republicans who defended the majority report. During the discussion Senator John Hammond, lecturer of the state grange, stated that he had more than a hundred letters from granges all over the state expressing the sentiment of their members to be unanimous against the 48-hour bill. On a roll call the minority report was rejected 10 to 12. Those in favor of the bill:

Democrats: Ovid J. Coulombe, Berlin; Daniel J. Hagerty, Nashua; Walter H. Tripp, Epsom; Frederick W. Branch, Manchester; Clinton S. Osgood, Manchester; John S. Hurley, Manchester; Omer Janelle, Manchester; Edgar J. Ham, Rochester.

Republicans: Benjamin H. Orr, Concord; H. Foster Elder, Dover.

Those opposed:
Republicans: Leon D. Ripley, Colebrook; Dick E. Burns, Haverhill; Sewall W. Abbott, Wolfeboro; Ora A. Brown, Ashland; John A. Hammond, Guildford; John A. Jaquith, Northfield; Ralph E. Lufkin, Unity; Harry L. Holmes, Henniker; Herman C. Rice, Keene; Chester L. Lane, Swansee; John F. Swasey, Brentwood; William A. Hodgdon, Portsmouth.

The report of the committee, "Inexpedient to legislate," was then adopted by the same vote.

It is probable that the senate will adopt a resolution for a fact-finding commission, but it is probable that the 48-hour question will be an important factor in the next election.

Among the bills which went into the discard Wednesday was the act in relation to the election of selectmen, making a one year term.

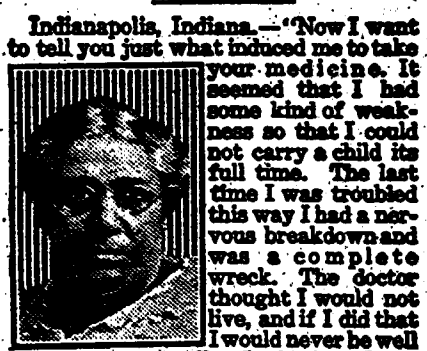

The governor and council have refused the pardon petitions of Stanley Fogg of Brentwood, sentenced to serve two years in the state prison for embezzlement, and Louis Lambert of Berlin, now serving a jail sentence in Coos county.

It is probably the first time in the history of the state that a pardon was asked of the governor and council for a man who has not yet entered upon his term of sentence in prison.

Such is the case of Stanley Fogg, found guilty of embezzlement by a jury and sentenced but who is still at liberty, on bail, pending an appeal which he has taken to the higher court.

Indianapolis, Indiana.—"Now I want to tell you just what induced me to take your medicine. It seemed that I had some kind of weakness so that I could not carry a child the full time. The last time I was troubled this way I had a nervous breakdown and was a complete wreck. The doctor thought I would not live, and if I did that I would never be well and strong again. But I told them I was going to get well, that I was not going to die just then. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took six bottles of it. I soon got strong again and had three more children. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound ever since, and if you could see me now you would think I had always been well."—Mrs. MARY F. LOOKING IN ON THE SENATE

Special from Washington

FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS it has been our privilege to observe quite extensively the conduct of our law-making bodies at our National Capitol. Sometimes we have watched these with pride, at other times with shame. We have seen them a dignified serious body, of apparently picked representatives, moved to profound conviction under the spell of a masterly speech by one of their own number and we have been proud of our country. At other times we have felt only contempt for a body of specially chosen leaders playing with their positions like irresponsible or disgruntled children.

Last Monday was one of those days in the Senate that made us ashamed, sad and almost disheartened for the future of the country.

The President had been desirous of bringing the Ship Subsidy Bill to vote. It was apparent that it might fall of enactment, but he wanted it voted upon; he then would feel that he had done his best to get through a measure which he considers vital to the permanent prosperity of the country.

The President's supporters were waiting for an opportunity; the opponents were bent on pushing the Bill aside. Senator Ladd, of North Dakota, proposed another Bill in advance of it; a motion was made to lay on the table; then came the test vote which really meant a test vote on the shipping bill; for if the motion to lay on the table should prevail, then the chance of getting the Shipping Bill up for action would be open; but the vote was lost 44 to 42.

This is the dishonorable and unsound manner in which legislation wins or loses not on its merits, but by some tricky process of indirection.

FOLLOWING A BRIEF DISCUSSION in which it had been seriously contended that there were only a few days left in which to secure the passage of many important measures, one Senator used an hour and a half in rehearsing the thread-bare story of the League of Nations and in eulogy of Woodrow Wilson to a chamber so nearly empty that we counted at one time only eight Senators present and most of them conversing or reading their newspapers. The members on this Senator's own side of the chamber were as scarce as on the Republican side. Is it any wonder that public responsibility is not taken more seriously by the people at large?

The galleries were half full, mostly of that third rate group of Washingtonians who have nothing better to do than to wait around for some startling sensation that is liable to be sprung any moment when Borah or some other leader thinks the time has come to break the monotony. Then these half dazed mediocre people will start in their seats and crane their necks to see the fireworks, perchance there happens to be any. There is nowhere in America more mediocrity than in the Capitol City.

WE CAN IMAGINE how great masses of our American people who expect much of their Senators and representatives (for in respect to the above indifference, both houses are the same) would be shocked to look in upon their inattention, their dilatory tactics, their obstructive instead of constructive methods, acting as though they did not care a fig about their country or their constituency or concern themselves about the vast waste of the people's money.

Our own Coolidge was there, presiding over the monotonous performance with evident disgust. Walsh was inside the door when the roll was called, and even our own dignified and much honored Henry Cabot Lodge was on and off the floor with no concern for what was going on (and there wasn't much) talking to first one and then another, and like others, paying no heed to the frequent rap of the gavel by the presiding officer as the struggling Senator from Oklahoma read his reams of oratory in eulogy of poor Mr. Wilson.

The following day a dozen Senators figured that they could together talk 44 hours in the filibuster to kill the shipping bill. Doesn't this sound worthy of men entrusted as statesmen in charge of the welfare of the greatest nation on earth?

Can anything be done to change this ridiculous situation? We shall write of that next week.

CHICAGO

Special from Chicago

CHICAGO IS ALWAYS INTERESTING. We never liked it as a place in which to live, but its gigantic nature is impressive beyond any other American city. A friend of ours used to call it "the most beastly city in the world." Chicago is different, and will always be our most dangerous city and increasingly so. It can grow indefinitely and grow without breaking into sections like New York, Boston and some other cities. This ability to grow without disconnection makes the density of its center worse. It does not provide for breaking bad groups into smaller units. At present Chicago is at its worst. The mayorality situation is beyond description. The labor conditions are Herrin on a monstrous scale; here they do not have an occasional murder carnival, they keep it up all the time. Convictions are quite impossible. Jurymen are afraid to convict. A relative of the State's attorney told us today that this man had to be guarded continuously and also his children. Will industrial leaders wake up, and the public generally to the desperation with which our country is threatened at the present time?

GO WEST TO FIND YANKEES

From St. Paul

We were very much surprised on awaking in St. Paul the other morning to find that they had only a few inches of snow. The farther west we go the better the railroad service. These great systems have not been crippled as have the Eastern roads.

We were entertained by the Attorney for the Northwestern system, and he told us what a battle they were putting up to keep their roads in good form, and that with present labor conditions and added taxation the future of our railroads looked dark.

We were met by a company of business and professional men including the above gentleman, the vice president of the Great Northern, two other prominent lawyers, and the leading merchants and taken to their beautiful Minnesota Club. This group of men, all descendants of colonial forefathers, and members of the Sons of the American Revolution, were the finest and most genuine looking Americans we have seen in many a day.

EAST ANTRIM

Morton Dickie of Whitman Mass., was at M. S. French's over the week end, coming to attend the funeral of Mrs. Lucy Swett.

Lucy W. Swett passed away on March 2 after an illness of several weeks. Mrs. Swett has been in poor health for several years, and during these years the care and devotion of Mrs. M. S. French has been all possible for a daughter to do.

Mrs. Swett was a very active and benevolent woman, always doing something for someone, she was ever busy with her needle, and children were her special delight and pleasure. She was also a devoted friend of the G. A. R., her husband being a Civil War veteran.

Mrs. Swett was born in Dunbarton November 12, 1838, and has lived in this neighborhood since 1871 and will be missed by all her friends and neighbors.

Besides Mrs. French she leaves two grandsons, Richard Swett of Brooklyn N. Y., and Malcolm French, Jr.

Funeral was held from the home of Malcolm French on March five, at two o'clock, with Dana Temple of Hillsboro as speaker. H. B. Currier con ductor.

Card of Thanks

To all the neighbors and friends who by acts of kindness during the past months, and to all who spoke words of sympathy during our recent sad bereavement, and to those who attended their love for the departed by beautiful flowers, we extend our sincere thanks.

Rev. Wm. Thompson, Pastor

The meeting Thursday evening will be held at the Parsonage. Interesting? Come and see. Your moral nature demands attention to spiritual diet.

THE ETERNAL CHRIST. The first and last word of all creation is Christ. He is supreme authority on all human life. Everything in the whole universe may change, but Christ remaineth unchangeable, and will have the last word in the universe as He had the first: Christ is the one stable and reliable fact of experience. "He is superior to all vicissitudes, contingencies, privations, revolutions, sorrows, death and decay." What a true and beautiful thought! It is in itself an unspeakable comfort to all who will accept it. No discovery that has ever been made in this world is so important and joyous, as that of Christ, who has worn man's mortal flesh, is also King upon the eternal throne, and the Master of man's fate. This will be the theme of the sermon next Sunday morning.

The church will meet after the morning service to study the Sunday School lesson together. We have classes for all ages. We have room for a few more scholars. Will you be one?

VOTE YES

On the Amendment!

You Farm Owner You Home Owner
You Retailer

You have been paying more than 80% of the taxes. This is unfair. Then Vote YES!

Owners of stocks, bonds and securities, whose property amounts to over 500 million dollars, have been paying practically nothing. You have been paying for them. This untaxed property is equal to or of greater value than your present taxed property. This is unjust. Then Vote YES!

This subject will not be brought up again for five years. Can you stand your present taxes or a probable increase in them? If not, Then Vote YES Now!

It would not take all your present tax to care for your present needs. The revenue from the present untaxed property ought to care for all State expenses. Would this be worth while? Then Vote YES!

Do you want to keep the present inheritance tax, to make possible the gasoline tax, to have a fairer method of taxing growing timber? Then Vote YES!

If State expenses continue to increase, you do not want to bear the whole burden as you do now, but have all property share in it. Then Vote YES!

Don't be fooled into thinking this amendment will give the Legislature any more taxation power than it has now. It only allows the taxes to be distributed more equally. So Vote YES!

Don't believe that this amendment takes away all protection. No unreasonable or confiscatory tax, even if it got by the House, the Senate, and was signed by the Governor, (which it would not) would ever be upheld by the Supreme Court. So Vote YES!

This is not a political advertisement. The Farm Bureau has a stated policy of not mixing in politics. This is an economic problem that affects very vitally every farmer and home owner. Both parties had planks in their platforms promising relief from the present admittedly unjust methods of taxation.

We urge you to Vote YES on the amendment.

LUIS FIRPO TO BATTLE BRENNAN

Arrangements for a heavyweight match between Bill Brennan and Luis Firpo, South American champion, at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 12, have been completed. The South American, it is said, has been promised a championship bout with Jack Dempsey within six months if he defeats Brennan.

Size of Golf Stars

"Is the ancient sport maxim 'that a good big man can beat a good little man' true in golf?" asks a golfer.
The majority of the great players have been men of size and strength, though plenty of them have been small. Size probably counts for little in golf.
Champion Gene Sarazen is 5 feet, 7 1/2 inches tall and weighs 160. Jack Hutchinson is taller but weighs much less, Freddie McLeod, one of the best of the professionals, is real small in stature.
Ted Ray, champion of 1922, weighs 215 pounds and is two inches over six feet. Jim Barnes weighs 105 and is 6 feet and 3 inches tall. Walter Hagen is 5 feet 11 inches and tips the beam at 185 pounds.

Ross Is Golf Star

Jack Ross, formerly golf professional to the Addington club, Croydon, will shortly leave England to take up professional duties in the United States.

WAIVER RULE HITS PLAYERS

Ball Players Who Did Not Deliver Last Season Worried—Champion Hitter Released.

Ball players who know in their hearts they did not deliver the last season—and even some who really did, but are victims of circumstances—have reason to be on the worry list, the way waivers are being asked and granted these days.

For instance, the Boston Nationals got waivers on Fred Nicholson, outfielder, who two years ago looked like a champion hitter. He has been released outright to the Toledo association club. Boston got Nicholson in the deal with Pittsburgh that sent Maravalle to the Pirates.

GOLF WILL SEE BIG WAGERS

If Sarazen and Hagen Compete in British Open Championship Much Money Will Be Bet.

If Gene Sarazen goes to England to play in the British open golf championship and if Walter Hagen also goes to defend his title, and the chances are both will, there will be some of the tallest wagers put up on the outcome of the match that ever have been made in the United States since golf became a game of common participation. This, too, in the very face of the good and virtuous golf people who solemnly request that their countrymen refrain from betting on a game which has so much to commend it.

INTERESTING SPORT NOTES

The Chicago Nationals have signed Otto Vogel, the University of Illinois outfielder.

Anyway, Battling Siki is following in the footsteps of all great fighters by going into the movies.

It's a strange world. Jack Dempsey is too strong to find a fight and Europe is too weak to stop.

Thomas Davies, captain and star of the Pittsburgh football team in 1921, has signed to coach Geneva college next fall.

Senor Jose Lopez, the wealthy Cuban horseman, is the trainer as well as owner of a large string of runners.

John C. Heldt, center on the 1922 University of Iowa football team, has been chosen coach of football at Ohio university.

Charles Root, who pitched for Terre Haute, in the Three-Eye league last season, has signed with the St. Louis Browns.

The novice might be excused for supposing the professional puglist's training consists in hugging somebody most of the time.

W. C. O'Neill, who has given Lehigh two intercollegiate lacrosse championship teams in the past few years, has been re-engaged.

Comparatively few star ball players have ever made good as big league umpires. "Big Ed" Walsh is the latest to try the job and fail.

Fayette National, 2:07 1/2, a start-trotter of the half-mile track last year, is expected to become a great performer on the mile tracks next season.

As there has been more or less contention over the middleweight title during the past year, boxing fans would now like to see a bona fide champion in that division.

James E. (Jim) Robertson, Dartmouth star and last year assistant coach of the Green eleven, has been engaged to coach the Oglethorpe university football squad.

Tentative plans for the new stadium at Golden Gate park, San Francisco, provides for a football field, soccer field, 12 tennis courts, a running track, handball courts, basketball fessionals themselves.

John Weissmuller of the Illinois A. C. holds 19 of the 76 championship swimming records. They were established last year from 60 to 500 yards.

IN LIGHT OF EXPERIENCE

Some Few Things That a Wife Admits She Has Learned From Her Husband.

He really can't advise me as to taking the leadership of a relay of girls who belong to the Girls' Sameday club. They carry a little kit and a basket of canned things, and go off on long hikes and picnics in lovely woody places.

The lady who has charge of all the relays says it is awfully hard to get grownup leaders and she thinks that with my personality the girls would just love me, and you don't have to know much to be a leader.

The girls will tell you how. She said that a rich girl belonged to the club, and her mother had to coax her to eat the very daintiest things at home; and after she had taken a ten-mile hike she ate sausage, just as the other girls did.

And her leader felt that it was awfully worth-while work for any one. The girls give lovely concerts to raise money to pay for having the concert tickets printed.

And they are banded together to do good, and they ask everybody to please help them in their work.

My husband says that years ago when he was a boy women used to marry men before they began to ask them for money.—Life.

Find What CANADA has to offer YOU!

If your dream of success seems like a hopeless ambition, if you are discouraged trying to get ahead on high priced land, if your present location fails to give you opportunity, there is a new deal for you, a new chance in the fertile, virgin farms of Western Canada, where wheat produces 20 to 40 bushels to the acre, where the 1922 crop was biggest in history, where oats, barley and hay and fodder crops are the basis of a great dairy industry, and a man's work brings him success and prosperity.

Low Priced Land—the Last Great West

In Western Canada you still can buy virgin prairie land at $15 to $20 per acre, on long terms if desired, near to town, railroads, etc.—land such as has for many years produced the world's prize winning wheat, oats, barley, flax, rye, alfalfa. Canada had no "war time" land boom; prices are not inflated—you get on the ground floor.

Taxes Favor the Farmer as Values Increase

The tax laws of Western Canada encourage the producing farmer. The tax on land is reduced when it is brought under cultivation—while on your buildings, machinery, improvements, personal property, automobile, there is no tax at all. A single crop is often worth more, acre for acre, than the cost of the land.

Buy on Exceptional Terms—32 Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land a national non-profit sharing organization—the Canada Colonization Association—has been established with head office at Winnipeg, and United States office at St. Paul. This Association offers selected parcels of land, railroads—much of it at $15 to $20 per acre—on very small cash payment; no further payment until third year; balance extended over thirty years, but purchaser may pay up and obtain title at any time if desired. Interest six percent per annum on deferred payments.

Nine Cows Burned

Fire which destroyed the barn of Francis Duprey on the Kingston road, Exeter, also 20 tons of hay and all farming tools, while nine head of cattle perished in the flames.

Bank Commissioner to Become Bank Officer

Bank Commissioner Guy H. Gutter has been appointed assistant treasurer of the New Hampshire Savings Bank, Concord, to succeed Louis P. Elkins, who resigned a few weeks ago.

Gerry as Assistant Examiner

Leon O. Gerry has been appointed associate bank examiner by the Governor and Council to succeed Guy H. Gutter, resigned. Mr. Gerry will receive $2750 a year. He is a son of ex-Senator James O. Gerry of Madison, one of the state's best known Democratic leaders.

Students Wear Tramps' Garb

Dartmouth seniors returned to the much touted old traditions of the college with a rush Feb. 27, when they instituted the custom of old timers' day. Every member of the class—numbering more than 400 men in all—appeared at classes in the morning in tramps' garb. Some of the costumes were more elaborate. Anything denoting poverty and backwoods life was considered acceptable.

Senator Ham Head of Strafford Farm

State Senator Edgar J. Ham, Democrat, of Gonic, one of the successful farmers of that section, has been picked by the commissioners-elect of Strafford county for superintendent of the county farm to succeed on April 1, William J. Hartford, who has served the past nine years as superintendent. Senator Ham is well qualified for the position of superintendent. He has had eight years' experience as a member of the board of county commissioners, four successive biennial terms, and was chairman of the board the greater part of that period. He is therefore thoroughly familiar with the county farm and its work and needs. During Mr. Ham's regime as head of the commissioner board the county debt of some $40,000 was lifted and a considerable amount was saved additionally.

Summer School on Pemigewasset

A summer school or camp for girls is to be established on the east bank of the Pemigewasset river, about three miles upstream from the Eastman's Falls dam, Franklin. Miss Edith Mayall of New York, who conducts a private school for girls, has closed a deal for a large tract of land which includes two summer cottages, a fine pine grove and a long strip of shoreland, all finely adapted for one of the summer schools which have gained so much popularity in this state lately. The location is pronounced ideal for the purpose designed. It is sufficiently isolated and at the same time not far distant from the numerous conveniences which the city offers. It is one of the most beautiful spots on the shores of the big water basin which extends from the power station in the city, two miles north of Hill.

To Exempt Stocks of N. H. Industries

Ex-Gov. Robert P. Bass presided at a meeting of the New Hampshire Civic association held in Representative hall, State House, Three hundred and fifty people attended and listened to the discussion of state taxation and the proposed constitutional amendment by a half dozen authorities. Rep. Raymond B. Stevens, of Laundaff, answering a question put by Stanley H. Abbott, said that should the amendment pass, he expected the committee would introduce a measure providing for the exemption of income derived from stocks of New Hampshire concerns.

H. H. Metcalf, although hoping for the passage, said that the same amendment had been defeated twice before through misrepresentation, and that he expected the same result this time.

G. M. Putnam, president of state federation of Farm Bureaus, favored the amendment, saying that it would lighten considerably the burden of taxation for the farmers.

Clarence E. Carr, of Andover, spoke for a half hour caustically, criticizing the purpose of the amendment, and the results which would follow from its enactment into law. His points included the wide range of activity which he said would be given to the Legislature to spend money, and the expense which would accrue to the state.

There followed a warm debate between Professor Rice and Walter B. Farmer of Hampton Falls. The latter said at the start that he was representing the farmers and that it was for their interests he was speaking. He said the amendment would not help the farmers.

Runaway Boy Seeking Mother Found in Keene

She could not visit me as she has not enough money for car fare. I am homesick for my mother."

May Put Teeth in Daylight Act

Amendments to the Senate anti-daylight saving bill, introduced in a new draft in the Senate with a favorable report, exempts the railroads from the penalty clause, if schedules are approved by the public service commission.

Schedules are arranged to conform to daylight saving laws in other states, provided the state public service commission approves of the changes. A fine of $1000, or one year's imprisonment is imposed for persons in cities or towns of the state who use other than standard time.

Will Manufacture Coke

The Manchester Gas Company will manufacture 25,000 tons of coke a year, starting Oct. 1, 1923, officials announce.

New Move for 48-Hour Fact Board

Steps toward the creation of a fact finding commission to make a study of the 48-hour question and to report to the 1925 Legislature were taken in the House when Representative Alken of Franklin, Republican, moved that Speaker Ahern be requested to appoint a committee to work out a plan to be embodied in a resolution and to submit a report to the House within 20 days.

Father of Eight-Hour "Sleep Bill" Honored

Notice of the 71st birthday of Representative George L. Sibley of Manchester, father of the bill requiring eight hours' sleep and other humane bills at the present session, was made by the House. At the conclusion of the regular business, Mr. Sibley was given several gifts, including a heavy walking stick and a bronze medal from the Manchester delegation and congratulatory speeches were made by Speaker Ahern, Majority Leader Stevens, Minority Leader Lyford, Representatives Lord of Manchester, Barry of Nashua and Senator Tripp of Epsom.

Chapter of D. A. R. Forms in Pittsfield

One of the most interesting societies from an historical and patriotic point of view was formed Feb. 16 at the home of Mrs. F. H. Sargent, Pittsfield, when Mrs. Charles C. Goss of Dover, former state regent, organized the Benjamin Sargent chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The chapter takes its name, Benjamin Sargent, an outstanding patriot of this vicinity who enlisted at the age of 15 in Capt. Livermore's company and Col. Alexander Scammell's regiment and served in the army for three years. He was honored by being chosen body guard to General Washington, was with him during the severe winter at Valley Forge, and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

State Time Laws That Conflict

A problem with which the management of the Boston & Maine Railroad of its train schedules for the coming Summer months to conform with the laws of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, which conflict.

Discussing the situation, a railroad official said: "One of the many problems with which the railroads have to contend as carriers engaged in Interstate Commerce, and as the result of regulation, is seen in the case of the Boston & Maine Railroad, with lines running through New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

"About a year ago the Massachusetts State Legislature passed a law observed within the State and that declaring that in the Summer months daylight saving time should be standard time throughout the State. New Hampshire passed a law declaring that standard Eastern time should be observed within the State and that this time should govern the movement of all traffic within the State or between New Hampshire and any other State. The law provided further that no railroad should change its schedules for the movement of trains within the State in order to accommodate conditions outside of the State.

"As a result, an advance of an hour in the train schedule of the Boston & Maine Railroad in Massachusetts would have been inconvenient to the people of New Hampshire, while the retention of schedules to conform to the laws of New Hampshire would have inconvenienced that part of the Massachusetts public which used trains originating in New Hampshire."

Fears New Textile Strike

President Barry of the Textile Union told newspaper men that he feared the action of the Legislature in killing the 48-hour bill would mean another strike among the operatives of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company in Manchester. This same sentiment had been expressed earlier in the session by Vice-President Starr, and by Horace A. Riviere, New Hampshire organizer for the United Textile Workers. Starr's statement was made in an open meeting of textile workers' recently.

ENGINEER SAYS IT IS WORLD-BEATER

"My Digestion Is Sound as a Dollar Since Taking Tanlac," Declares Buffalo Citizen.

"There is no doubt about it, Tanlac does all they claim it will do—and more," was the positive statement made recently by Richard H. Lawson, well-known engineer, of 1007 Elmwood Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I used Tanlac for a combination of troubles and it put me in splendid condition all the way round. First, I had a bad case of stomach trouble, was simply chock full of sourness and gas, had a general distressed feeling and a burning pain in my stomach that I couldn't get rid of. With my appetite wrecked and digestion gone, I became awfully weak, nervous and run down and could get scarcely any rest or sleep at all.

"Tanlac answered every demand made upon it in my case and today my digestion is sound as a dollar, I have an immense appetite, and with every ache and pain gone, I am sleeping fine and feeling strong and energetic as of old. Tanlac is 100% good."

"Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Point of View.

An optimist is one who hops out of bed on a cold morning, saying: "Well, old bed, I'll be back to you in 17 hours." The pessimist hops in bed, saying: "Gee, up again in seven hours!"—Mass. Tech. Voo Doo.

Immigration Figures.

No trustworthy immigration records were kept in the early history of the republic. From 1783 it is estimated that the number of immigrants to this country was about 4,000 a year until 1794, when the number was increased to 10,000. Then it dropped to about 6,000 until 1808, when it was reduced to practically nothing for the succeeding ten years. In 1816 it was about 8,000 and the next year 22,246. From October 1, 1819, a record has been kept, but up until 1856 it included all "alien passengers arrived" and did not distinguish between immigrants and passengers, nor did it include immigration overland from Canada and Mexico. This record, which is inaccurate as explained, shows a total of 33,639,104 from the year ending September 30, 1820, to the year ending June 30, 1920. The largest immigration in any one year was 1,385,340 for the fiscal year 1917.

Girl's Frank Statement Must Have Been Somewhat Disconcerting to Her Accepted Husband.

Dr. Brander Matthews, the famous critic, said at a Columbia tea: "The school of French novelists that is passing—the school of Anatole France, and Loti and Mirabeau and Maupassant—was very brilliant, certainly, but its philosophy wasn't cheering.

"Those men remind me of an anecdote. A young chap had proposed to a beautiful girl. The girl, blushing and weeping a little, had accepted him. He folded her in his arms, pressed his lips to hers and whispered: "Dearest, is this the first time you have ever loved?"

"Yes," the girl sighed, "but it's so nice that I hope it won't be the last."

The Quiet Goldfish.

The JOY OF LIVING

by
Sidney Gowing

Here Is a Delightful Comedy in the Form of a Serial Story Which We Feel Is a Real Kindness to Offer to Readers

The little English heroine is a tramp. The young Yankee hero is a fit partner for her; and they do become partners in one of the funniest adventures you ever heard about—thrilling, too! Innocently they get mixed up in a burglary which draws not only the local police of an English town, but the detective brains of the celebrated Scotland Yard upon their trail. And the girl's father was a bishop; think of the disgrace if she were caught!

Not a crime story at all, but the story of two joyful cherubs who were suspected of a crime. There are motorcycle trips over a charming countryside; circumstances which cause the climbing of trellises and the invading of ancient castles in the dead of the night; hiding in caves; subterfuges of all sorts, and through it all is the rollicking spirit of youth—just what its title implies—the joy of living. You will love sweet, audacious, nifty little Aimee, and you will have no less regard for dashing Billy, and even the Flying Sphinx, the wonderful motorcycle which figured in their adventures, will get into your affections like a thing of life.
