Said Mother:

Seems to me we were married just a few years ago,

A matter of possibly twenty-five or so,

But that was in eighteen seventy-three

And the calendar says that it fifty must be.

We're experienced travellers now, we two,

We've smiled through our joys, and wept

some, that's true,

But we're proud that it's fifty, and cannot complain

For we've had lots of sunshine along with the rain.

Said Father:

When a man can look back over fifty full years

To the day he set sail, full of hopes—and no fears;

O'er an uncharted sea, full of troubles of course,

Such as gourches, affinities, golf and divorce,

I say, can you blame him for swelling his chest?

And feeling that he is as good as the best

For he knows that his good luck in outwrit-

ing fate

is due to his wisdom in choosing his mate.

Mrs. Ernest C. Martin

The news of the sudden death in Keene, on Thursday, May 17, of Mrs. E. C. Martin, came as a shock to her many friends in Antrim.

Mrs. Martin was the wife of Ernest C. Martin, who for many years was superintendent of the Goodell Cutlery Works and removed to Keene several years ago.

While Mrs. Martin had not been in the best of health since she was accidentally poisoned by illuminating gas more than a year ago, her death was unexpected and resulted from a slight cold contracted less than a week before. Asthma developed and she was taken to the hospital Wednesday, passing away peacefully though suddenly, at 10 a.m. Thursday, heart failure being the immediate cause.

The funeral was held at the home, on Mechanic street, Sunday afternoon. Her pastor, Rev. W. D. Swafford, of the First Baptist church, spoke comforting words to the relatives and friends in which he reminded them of her strong Christian faith and her testimony in the church prayer meeting only a week before, when she said, "Jesus, the light of the world, is the light of my life."

Her body reposed in a bank of roses and carnations, as the casket was completely covered and surrounded with flowers, mutely testifying to the love and esteem in which she was held. Burial was in the family lot at Lakeport, N. H.

Mrs. Lucy Hardy Martin was born November 20, 1866, in Derry, N. H., the youngest child of Franklin and Mary Randall Hardy. In her early girlhood they removed to Manchester, and her education was obtained in the public schools of that city.

In her teens she joined the Christian church and being gifted with a beautiful contralto voice she gave of her best to her church in its musical service, and this is true also of her service in every church she has been connected with since.

Later she went to Lakeport and there she met and married Ernest C. Martin. After living in Lakeport for several years they removed to Franklin Falls, where Mr. Martin was interested in the Mayo Needle Company.

Here Mrs. Martin took a prominent part in the musical life of the city, singing for years in a quartet in the First Baptist church. She was also active in the Eastern Star.

More than 20 years ago they came to Antrim, and here too, her voice was ever ready in the service of her church. She was also a member of Molly Allen Chapter, D. A. R.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Martin leaves two sons; Carroll F. of Bristol, Conn., and Omar W., student in the Junior High of Keene, and a baby grand-daughter, Viola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Martin. Her only daughter, Myrl Mae, wife of Alford R. Hazzard, died of influenza in Dec. 1918. Three brothers and two sisters survive her, besides several nephews and nieces.

CLINTON VILLAGE

Mrs. Helen Paige, of Boston, is a guest of her daughter, Mrs. Leon J. Brownell.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Chamberlain entertained relatives from West Newton, Mass., over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hildreth were in Boston the first of the week.

Roscoe Lang and family visited relatives in Portsmouth, Sunday.

G. H. Caughey and family spent the week end in Waltham, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Warden drove to Leominster the first of the week and brought up Mrs. Warden's mother, Mrs. Harrington.

Born in St. Petersburg, Florida, May 18, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Harlow, a son, Mrs. Harlow was formerly Sadie MacMullen, and resided at Base Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, of Malden, Mass., were week-end guests in town.

69TH SESSION

Annual Convention Held at Baptist Church

The 69th convention of the Contoocook Valley Christian Endeavor Union was held on Saturday last, May 26, with the Intermediate Y. P. S. C. E. of the Baptist church. The theme of the convention was "Success." "Serving and striving thru strain and stress, doing your noblest—that's success."

The morning exercises opened with devotions, followed by an address of welcome by the president of the local Intermediate C. E., Miss Ethel Tewksbury, with response by Mrs. Leon B. Proctor, of Hillsboro, president of the Contoocook Valley Union, Commit-teees for nomination of officers and resolutions were appointed. Dinner and roll call were next in order.

The afternoon session opened at 1.30 o'clock, with service of song and devotion by Rev. R. H. Tibbals, pastor of the local Baptist church. The president's message was attentively listened to. Rev. William Thompson of the local Methodist church gave an address on "Making God Real," in his accustomed interesting manner. An address by Rev. Paris Miller, of Henniker, was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Gererude Jameson sang a solo, which was accompanied by Mrs. Nims. An offering was taken, which was followed by remarks by Rev. H. I. Kemp, of Contoocook, third vice president of the State C. E. Union.

The afternoon addresses were given by Rev. F. G. Alger, of Peterboro, on "The Way the Prize Was Won," and by Mr. Russell J. Blair, field secretary for Massach-

Memorial Day

In these days of reaction from the greatest military tragedy of all time, when the atmosphere is charged with a spirit of recoiling from even the thought of war, and there is a widespread opposition to everything that suggests military temper or military preparedness, and the soldier who fought because he believed in great principles of freedom and would not see them trampled upon by selfish, ruthless men of conquest, is discounted or at least unappreciated, it is preeminently important that we halt from our self-centered pursuits and pay tribute to those who fought and died first to save our union, later to rescue a down-trodden neighboring group of men, and lastly to stand in the path of the march of the most deliberate and brutal army that ever spurred itself to bring to an end the dearly bought freedom of our civilization.

The flowers that with reverent tenderness we place upon the graves of our heroic dead are tokens of our wish to keep fresh the memory of men who were too proud not to fight in defense of right against might, for the guarantee of a nation's honor and the freedom of mankind.

And when for the remaining members of the Grand Army of the Republic the last solemn march of Memorial Day shall have been finished, because the last hero shall have been mustered out, when this now shattered and rapidly fading line of the straggling few of the royal followers of America's greatest hero and martyr shall have disappeared with the sunsets of time, and there remain no grey, bent and faltering comrades to drop a flower on a fellow comrade's grave, still these men will continue to be crowned as is the immortal Lincoln in the hearts of their countrymen through the eternity of the principles for which they risked their lives.

And what we here affirm concerning those of the original Grand Army of the Republic we affirm with equal emphasis concerning those who gave their lives in the war that made Roosevelt famous and the war that felled nearly a hundred thousand of our brave boys on foreign soil, dying as vicariously as ever mortal laid down his life.

"War is hell," but the blight of a more blasting hell will soon rest upon any nation that fails the courage to defend its own shores, its own flag and its own great principles of freedom and independence.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY

Sermons Given in Honor of this Occasion

50 YEARS MARRIED

Event Quietly Observed at Concord St. Home

The regular Memorial sermon, coming each year on the Sunday preceding Memorial Day, was this year delivered by Rev. R. H. Tibbals, in the Baptist church, before an audience numbering about 270, and it may well be said that the house was filled. In the body of the house and occupying front seats were members of the Grand Army, Woman's Relief Corps, American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary; goodly number of members of these patriotic organizations were present.

The speaker of the hour took for a subject: "Observing a Memorial," taking for his text words found in sets and New Hampshire; the latter speaker also conducted a conference.

Resolution committee's report was read and adopted. The officers elected were as follows:

President—Mrs. Leon B. Proctor, Hillsboro.

Vice Presidents—Ira C. Hutchinson, Antrim; Miss Ni- na Saunders, Hillsboro; Miss Ethel Barrett, Antrim.

Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Roena B. Eaton, Hillsboro.

Intermediate Supt.—Mrs. Leon B. Proctor, Hillsboro.

Junior Supt.—Mrs. Harold Connor, Henniker.

Quiet Hour Supt.—Mrs. Minnie Godron, Bennington.

Pastoral Counsellor, Rev. H. I. Kemp, Contoocook.

Supper was served, as well as was the dinner by the entertaining church.

The evening's devotions were led by Rev. Earl C. Osborne, of Bennington. An address and installation of officers were by Mr. Russell J. Blair. Music was furnished by the Baptist choir. The consecration service was led by Rev. J. D. Cameron, D.D., pastor of the local Presbyterian church.

There was a good attendance at these services and all agreed that this was one of the best conventions ever held in the valley of the Contoocook.

Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Cooley were at home to their many friends on Sunday, the occasion being the 50th anniversary of their wedding day, and about 70 friends called to offer felicitations. It being Sunday, the invitation to call was given only to most intimate friends and Methodist church people, but many others called, and the telephone brought numerous words of congratulation, and post cards conveyed happy thoughts of remembrance. Gifts were received, about $120 in gold and currency, besides other appropriate tokens. Visitors during the afternoon and evening enjoyed the informality of the occasion as well as the ice cream and cake that were served them. Miss Blanche Cooley, a daughter, was the moving spirit of the affair, and welcomed all in her usual pleasing manner, and greatly assisted her parents in making the occasion the pleasing event that it proved to be.

Dr. and Mrs. Cooley were married in Plainfield, Vt., May 27, 1873. In Lisbon, this state, they settled, where Dr. Cooley practiced dentistry until 1886, when they came to Antrim, where they have since resided, building their home on Concord street in 1887. All during their residence in town this worthy couple have been connected with the Methodist church where they have worked faithfully and well; this can also be said of them in their connection with the Odd Fellows and Rebekah lodges in town.

Every one who has been long a resident among us knows of the interest and earnest work Dr. Cooley has put into our schools. In every good cause Dr. and Mrs. Cooley are always to be depended upon for advice and help.

They are passing a milestone in life's journey; their health is good, and they are a hard working and contented couple, and their host of friends wish for them a great many more years of happiness in their pleasant home and among our people.

Those coming from out of town to assist in observing this event were:

Mrs. Ella Pickard of Montpelier, Vt.

Mrs. Etta I. Smith, Fitchburg, Mass.

sisters of Mrs. Cooley; a nephew, Glen

Smith, of Fitchburg, Mass.; brother,

D. A. Grady, Ipswich, Mass.

Neil Robinson, grand son, who graduates from Colby Academy, New London, in June; Mr. and Mrs. Fred W.

Lady Erythea stared at her nephew blankly. A curious expression came into her eyes. At last she seemed to detect in Alexander the one thing she had believed was lacking—the touch of the original Adam. But Lord Scroope's face hardened.

"You!" he said grimly. "You also knew the truth? The action of the others, I can understand. But—a Churchman cannot lend himself to such a conspiracy as this."

"Under correction, Lord Scroope," said de Jussac gently; "a gentleman cannot betray a woman's confidence without her consent."

Lord Scroope winced perceptibly. He turned to de Jussac and bowed.

"Am I receiving instruction from a layman?" he inquired.

"It is the last thing I would dare," replied Bertrand humbly. "It is I who seek instruction. Does not the Church respect the seal of the confessional?"

"I make no claim, and no excuses!" said Alexander suddenly. "I have only this to say: I loved Georgina Berners from the day I saw her. When I learned the real position I loved her more. Her loyalty and devotion only increased my esteem. She is the only woman living that I care for; I require you to remember that she is my promised wife. And nobody in this room," said Alexander hotly, "shall address one word of reproof to her!"

"Well done!" cried Almee. "Alexander, you're a man. I'm proud of you, cousin!"

"Thank you, Almee," said Alexander. "It is for me," said Lord Scroope sternly, "to appraise the blame. Georgina Berners is here under—"

He was interrupted by the volcanic arrival of Billy through the window, panting and eager, the tuft of hair on top of his head erect like the crest of a cockatoo.

"I've been looking for you everywhere!" he cried. "You—"

"Go out!" said Lady Erythea fiercely.

"Pardon me," said Billy, advancing.

"But I guess my place is here. Whatever blame is, I take it. Lord Scroope, I know that what I've done is past apology, but—"

"Shut up, Billy!" exclaimed Almee. "I've told them everything—I've said all there is to say. And," she added, under her breath, "for once I think I've made a better hand of it than you could."

Before anyone could reply, Georgina rose sobbing, and made a dive for the door.

"Let me go!" she said brokenly. "I want to go away. I want to go—"

Billy, glancing quickly from her to Almee and Lord Scroope, turned and darted out again through the window. No one noticed him. All eyes were on Georgina.

Alexander intervened—but it was Lady Erythea who, with an extraordinarily determined movement, overtook Georgina. Passing a supporting arm round the girl's waist, she turned and faced the stupefied company.

"Let me remind you all," said Lady Erythea, in a voice that compelled silence, "of one thing that is in danger of being overlooked. I am mistress here at Jervaulx! I have listened with an unexampled patience. Hold your tongue, Anthony! I have welcomed the alliance of Georgina with this family, and Alexander will have such a wife as I myself would have chosen for him. Georgina, your only fault is your devotion to the mad creature there, and for that I give you absolution. I require direction from no one—your marriage with my nephew shall take place as soon as possible."

"Aunt!" exclaimed Mr. Lambe, joyously. "I—"

"Do not interrupt me, Alexander!" said his aunt. She turned to Almee.

"As for you!" continued Lady Erythea, tetchily. "I really find myself in your debt. I can never be sufficiently thankful that you did not know that as my guest, undegraded Alexander was spared your authoriz'd disapprobation!"

One shudder to reflect on the possibilities.

"You appear to have enlisted the services of everyone, but me, to shield your disreputable escapade, and to have enlisted many shrewd-minded persons in your defense!" You may have deluded these men, said Billy. Then, with a scornful wave of her hand towards the company, "but you do not delude me! I find in you no qualities but selfishness and deceit—and I am glad that your sojourn in my house has been confined to the servants' hall, though I dread to think what your influence may have been on my domestics, from whom I require honesty and decency!"

Almee, very white, suddenly broke into a flood of tears. The next moment Lord Scroope had his arm around her and held her to him.

"Not another word, Erythea!" he said sternly. "You have had provocation—but you have said enough and much more than enough. Gentlemen, I thank you for what you have done on my daughter's behalf. And you, too, Georgina. Come, Almee, little girl. Let us go home."

He led her away; Almee clung to her father, sobbing as she went. Before they reached the door it was opened quickly, admitting Billy, who closed it again. Over his arm was a long hooded driving cloak of Lady Erythea's. This from the boy.

"Put this on!" he said to Almee. "Billy," she gulped, darting at it, "you think of everything."

In a moment the cloak covered the parlor maid's dress and the hood was drawn over her cap. Lord Scroope stared in surprise at Billy.

"I've told you my chauffeur, sir," said Billy, "to bring the auto round to this side—I thought you would like to avoid the front and the servants."

As he spoke the big motor slid to a standstill on the drive opposite the windows.

"Mr. Spencer," said Lord Scroope, looking at him judgingly, "I include you in my thoughts."

Mr. Spencer bowed and passed out, quickly through the window. He was holding the door of the car open when "He is not English, is he?"

"American, I understand. It seems curious," said Lord Scroope, pensively, "but I believe he is the first American I have met."

His wife laid a small white hand on his shoulder.

"Tony, darling," she said laughing, "you know very little of the world, but one thing at least you know. You saw this man. Is he—a gentleman?"

Lord Scroope paused.

"Whatever else he may not be, he is that."

"I rather gathered it from what I heard of him."

"But Delicia!"

The butler entered with a card on a tray. Lord Scroope inspected the card. It bore the name "Hiram B. Rivington," which conveyed nothing to Lord Scroope. Under it, in pencil, were the words, "About Mr. William Spencer."

"Is the bearer of this below?" asked Lord Scroope.

"Yes, m' lord. He wished to see your lordship urgently."

Lady Scroope glanced at the card, and suppressed her curiosity nobly.

"I shall leave you to receive this visitor, Tony," she said. "I do not think Almee ought to be left alone just now."

She refried. A very large, clean-shaven man with a rectangular jaw and thin, humorous lips, was ushered into the library. He was attired in roomy gray tweeds, his eye twinkled faintly, and there was something compelling about his presence.

"Lord Scroope?" he inquired, bowing courteously. "It's very good of you to receive a stranger. I thought that my nephew, William Spencer, would be here. He promised me to arrive about now. I guess it's something big that's delayed him."

"Is Mr. Spencer your nephew?" said Lord Scroope guardedly.

"That is so. You know him, I think."

"It is hardly the word. I know less than nothing of him, Mr. Rivington."

"Correct. He feels, and so do I, that a proper explanation is due to you, Lord Scroope. I don't know the whole story, but circumstances have impelled William, by no choice of his own, to break into the society of Eastshire county in a way that would probably be called unusual down here. He came to London and consulted me last night. He was very much distressed—which isn't usual with him. It's only fair to William that his credentials should be presented, and I think I'm the man to do it. I should like, Lord Scroope, to tell about Billy."

"Yes," said Lord Scroope, heavily, "that is what I feel, Delicia. We—we must temper justice with mercy."

Almee sat between her two stern parents on the lounge in the library at Scroope Towers. A night's rest had not restored the color to her cheeks. Her eyelashes were slightly wet. She smiled faintly.

"You, dear people," said Almee, subiding gently into an old bergere chair, "that it was enough for anyone to meet William to size him up. However, he is the son of my only sister, and of the late Linda Spencer of Denver. Who was, on the whole, the finest man I ever knew in the course of a life that has been described as varied and comprehensive. And Billy is as good as his father. I wish you had met Linda."

"Will you be seated, Mr. Rivington. I will give my attention to what you have to say."

"Mr. Rivington twinkled again, then became grave.

"I should have thought," he said, "subiding gently into an old bergere chair, "that it was enough for anyone to meet William to size him up. However, he is the son of my only sister, and of the late Linda Spencer of Denver. Who was, on the whole, the finest man I ever knew in the course of a life that has been described as varied and comprehensive. And Billy is as good as his father. I wish you had met Linda."

"I appreciate what you say," replied Lord Scroope. "I do not gather, however, what Mr. Spencer's occupation is."

"He has developed himself as a motor engineer."

"I know so little of mechanics—" began Lord Scroope.

"Mechanics," said Mr. Rivington, smiling, "are, of course, a matter of taste. They have an interest for me."

A light dawned suddenly on Lord Scroope.

"Is it possible," he said, "that you are the author as it were—of the Rivington motorcar?"

"I am never remeber to have seen you in such a mood."

Almee stood up.

"The thing I want to know," she said, plonkly, "is: what about Billy? You won't answer me. Mummie, you know, will understand. If I lose Billy, I don't care whether I live or die. That is all."

Lord Scroope passed his fingers through his snowy hair. Almee's mother put an arm round her and led her out of the room.

"Go upstairs and rest for awhile, baby," said Lady Scroope, gently. "You are very tired, and there has been talk enough."

He contemplated Mr. Rivington with wondering interest.

In a few minutes Lady Scroope returned.

"This," said her husband, sadly, "is the most distressing aspect of the whole affair."

"I had a long talk with Almee this morning," said Lady Scroope, "and it isn't a thing we can dismiss lightly. Tony, I know the child better than you do." She reflected. "This Bill—this Mr. Spencer appears to be rather remarkable."

"If we can trust Almee's account," said Lord Scroope gloomily, "but—a young man picked up, by the wayside, he added with a bewildered air. "My dear Delicia!"

"Mr. Spencer," he said, "is indeed fortunate in his uncle."

"I would rather say that I'm fortunate in my nephew," replied Rivington. "Billy doesn't need an uncle. In my country we haven't much use for a young man whose only assets are his looks. Billy has made good by his own efforts, sir. He is the inventor and proprietor of the Flying Sphinx motorcycle."

"An experimental machine, I understand. I hope, for Mr. Spencer's sake," said Lord Scroope, politely, "that it may prove—ah—successful."

"Mr. Rivington smiled.

"The present model of the Sphinx, though a big advance on the others, is past the experimental stage. Of the first and second models, a quarter of a million have been sold in the States. The plant for the latest, on mass production, is now being laid down. In the company that's being floated I hold a third control—and I'm very thankful that I have. Billy stands to clean up three hundred and fifty thousand dollars on the deal—hard earnings."

"I have not a very good head for figures, Mr. Rivington. Could you translate that into terms of English currency?"

"About seventy thousand pounds."

Lord Scroope sat perfectly silent, gazing at Mr. Rivington.

"But the youngster himself is what I'm concerned with—not what he's got. However," continued Rivington, looking out of the window as a faint whirling noise was heard below, "I see he's arrived, so I needn't say any more. But I'm very glad to have had this chance to speak for him. Billy isn't good at praising himself."

Billy's card came up, and Billy shortly followed it. He looked at Lord Scroope diffidently.

Lady Scroope glanced at the card, and suppressed her curiosity nobly.

"I shall leave you to receive this visitor, Tony," she said. "I do not think Almee ought to be left alone just now."

She refried. A very large, clean-shaven man with a rectangular jaw and thin, humorous lips, was ushered into the library. He was attired in roomy gray tweeds, his eye twinkled faintly, and there was something compelling about his presence.

The Salt Lake club has sent Tony Lazzari to Peoria.

Pity the poor pitchers if the early heavy hitting continues throughout the season.

With Rommel and Hasty pitching true to form, the Athletics are far from an easy bunch to beat.

Joe Cosgrove, so they say, "wore out his welcome" in Waterbury, so he was traded to Hartford for Leo (Brick) Kane.

Allan Sothoron finally decided to give up his flourishing business in St. Louis and report to the Louisville Colonels.

Manager Frank Chance of the Boston Red Sox has announced the release of Pitcher Fowlkes to the Memphis club.

The New York Americans decided not to keep Outfielder Ollie Tucker and he was returned to the New Orleans Pelicans.

The first set of batting averages for the Coast League show Paul Strand off in front among the regulars with a percentage of .448.

Honus Mizer, joining New Orleans with a reputation as about a .397 hitter, has been getting some timely blows for the Pelicans.

Washington lent its hand toward boosting the New Haven Eastern League entry when it shipped Infielder Bobby Lamotte to George Weiss' club.

The name of Al Spalding is no longer on the big league rolls, for the Cleveland club has given the youngster with the famous name his unconditional release.

Catcher Willson White, who was sold by Springfield of the Western Association to a club in the South Atlantic League, has been returned to Springfield.

Some of the commentators in Los Angeles are fearful lest Jake May be overworked, but Bill Essick says work is what his star southpaw needs to get right.

The Clinton club of the Oklahoma State League has named one of its officials, George Straub, as bench manager, with Pitcher Dennis directing the team as field captain.

By the grace of Commissioner Landis the Chicago White Sox got Outfielder Roy Eish from Sioux City for a mere $2,500. Now Chicago critics are saying that Eish is a mere valuable member of the team than Willie Karp, who cost $100,000.

Manager Frank Chance of the Boston Red Sox, who never did seem to fancy Eddie Goebel, the outfielder he got from Washington, managed to get rid of him by making a trade with Ty Cobb, by which Detroit gave Jim Fergestad, not liked by Cobb, for Goebel.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON FIELDING FLY BALLS

Player Should Not Try to Time Flight so as Barely to Make the Catch.

(By CARL LUNDGREN, Baseball Coach, University of Illinois.)

In fielding fly balls a player should get under the ball as fast as possible and should not try to time the flight so as barely to get to the ball. The reason for this is that if the man in question misjudges the direction and speed of the ball, if he gets there in plenty of time he will have an opportunity to shift so as still to get under it.

In catching fly balls the fielders should learn to catch them with palms up or with the palms up and the thumbs together. The first is usually the safer method, but it is well to practice both.

The following points should be considered in catching fly balls: In running to the spot where the ball will fall, run with the arms at the side, sprinter fashion, as this is the best method of carrying the arms when running. That is, the hands should not be carried in the air in a position of readiness for catching the ball while the fielder is running. When the ball hits the glove the receiver's hands should be relaxed and should give a little with the impact of the ball against the glove.

An outfielder should turn and run back as fast as he can to catch a ball over his head. He should not attempt to keep his eye on the ball while he is running, as this will slow him up. It is a difficult matter to catch the fly balls, in this manner, but a good outfielder should be able to do it.

Galluses May Aid

Impetus to Swats

The fact shouldn't be overlooked that Babe Ruth's batting revival came along about the same time that Babe revived galluses as an article of wearing apparel.

Ruth discarded the customary belt last winter and his new suspenders, he maintains, were of material aid in the reduction of his tonnage.

Many of the old-time British golfers still wear galluses on the links because they give more freedom of action than the belt. And, like Babe Ruth, they hit out many a home run.

Sammy Hale Is Star

Sammy Hale, the young third baseman for whom Connie Mack paid a big price, is coming up to expectations for the Athletics, batting hard and fielding brilliantly.

Asks Ex-Sen. Hollis be Called Deserter

Mrs. Grace Bruerton Fisher Hollis, first wife of former U. S. Senator E. F. Hollis has asked the Norfolk, Mass. probate court to grant her a decree establishing the fact of desertion of her by Hollis and her living apart from him for justifiable cause, so that she can carry on her business affairs as if she were a single woman. Judge McCoule ordered her to notify her husband to appear in probate court in Dedham on June 6 if he desires to show cause why the petition should not be granted. Hollis is living in Paris with his second wife, who was Miss Anna White Hobbs of Concord.

State Limits on Cider Distribution

Ora W. Craig, state prohibition officer, in a statement calls attention to the law requiring cider makers to have either federal or state permits and to keep records of all sales made. No more than 50 gallons can be sold to any one family, for vinegar, nor more than 10 gallons to be used as a beverage before fermentation begins.

Cider that has not turned into vinegar and that has generated alcohol beyond the legal limit is an intoxicating beverage and subject to seizure. Within a few weeks there have been seizures in New Hampshire of cider valued in the aggregate at several thousand dollars.

Woman Doctor 47 Years, to Continue

"The time will come when all physicians will advertise, when such procedure will not be considered unethical as it is now. In fact, the custom is even now changing. Years ago ethics would never permit me to talk to newspapermen. But I am glad to do it and the changing times allow it." That was one of many interesting statements made in an interview with a Boston Herald representative by Dr. Mary S. Danforth, who May 17 observed her 73rd birthday anniversary by forgetting all about it.

Forty-seven years ago on May 10, Dr. Danforth started practising in Manchester. She is not a specialist, she very carefully explained, but has handled from 2,500 to 3,000 maternity cases.

Freed After Six Months in Prison

Harry Kharfen of Keene, who has served six months of an 18 months' sentence in state prison for attempted arson, has been pardoned, by Gov. Brown and the executive council.

An extended hearing was held on a petition for the pardon of Mrs. Katherine B. Marston of Manchester, who has served a year of a five year sentence for burglary. She was known as the female raffles, baffling the efforts of the police to capture her for three years, during which time Chief Neal of the Manchester police department said she broke into more than 50 apartments and residences, stealing varying amounts of money and jewels.

State Names Bridge Commission

Gov. Brown and the executive council have appointed the New Hampshire members of a joint commission with Vermont to take steps to establish a free bridge across the Connecticut river between Monroe, N. H. and McIndoe, Vt., authorized in a resolution adopted at the recent session of the Legislature.

The commissioners named were Highway Commissioner Frederic E. Everett, Oscar A. Frazer of Monroe and Atty.-Gen. Irving A. Hinckley. At present there are two toll bridges between Monroe and McIndoe, one of which recently was closed to traffic by Public Service Commissioner John W. Storrs, after department engineers had reported the bridge unsafe. The present bridge in use is the one it was proposed to make free.

Big Hotel in White Mountains Burned

Starting, it is believed, from a defective chimney fire swept through the Intervale House summer hotel and despite heroic attempts by the firemen summoned from nearby places, was burned to the ground. The damage is estimated at approximately $150,000, which is partially covered by $90,000 insurance.

The hotel was being prepared for the opening Memorial day, and the only occupant was the caretaker, who, awakened by the smell of the smoke, found the big building in flames.

Durant Corporation Has Stock License in State

The Durant corporation which was denied a license to sell stock of the Flint Motor company by the bank commissioner of Maine recently, has held a license in the state of New Hampshire since Jan. 5 to sell the stock here. It was reported at the office of the insurance commissioner that the company held a license a few years ago to sell stock in another motor company and no complaints were received. The request for a renewal was granted after looking into the plan of the stock sales and securities offered.

The chances are that the department will take no action following the report from Maine, but the license will remain in force unless some specific complaint is received, and then all parties will be given a chance for hearing.

Drugs and Child Labor Condemned By Women's Federation

The annual meeting of the New Hampshire Federation of Women's clubs, which met at Milford, had one of the most successful sessions in the history of the organization. Mrs. Wm. B. Fellows of Tilton, who has served the organization as vice president for several years, was made president to succeed Mrs. Charles H. McDuffee of Alton, who has been untiring in her work for the Federation.

The Federation also adopted resolutions submitted by the business resolutions committee through Mrs. Flora A. Spaulding of Manchester, chairman. These called for greater activity in the enforcement of the 18th amendment, for an amendment to the federal Constitution making an adequate child labor law possible, authorizing the appointment of a committee to put up a vigorous campaign against the drug evil, and looking toward the establishment of peace among the nations.

Predicts Year of Big Business

Howard Coonley of Boston, president of the Walworth Manufacturing Company in an address before a joint meeting of the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, Manchester, predicted a big business year ahead. He said in part: "The year 1923 is going to be a wonderful year for this country and one which will mean profit for our citizens, based on conservation. Business men are becoming more intelligent and able to look forward to problems."

"For the business man who is ready to learn his duties as the lawyer and physician learn theirs, the future of this country holds out a vast storehouse of opportunity.

"It is a fact that at the present wave of high production and demand there are very definite signs that there is going to be relaxation of that demand between the latter part of 1923 and the first of 1924. I have just returned from a trip to the West and find that production is going on to the maximum capacity of the producer to obtain labor."

Leaders in School Dispute

State Treasurer George E. Farrand, and Commissioner Ernest W. Butterfield of the state department of education are in controversy over the proportion of state expenditures for educational purposes. Mr. Butterfield said in a speech at Durham that 8.7 per cent of the total state expenditures goes for education. Mr. Farrand, in a statement declared 30 per cent of the total state appropriations and more than 25 per cent of the town and city appropriations are expended for educational purposes.

"I am not objecting to the expenditures for educational purposes," said Mr. Farrand, "but I believe the state has adopted a generous policy toward education during both the present past administrations. I am sure the educational expenditures in New Hampshire will compare favorably with expenditures by other states."

"Out of budget and special appropriations of approximately $2,850,000 for the next fiscal year, the state board of education will receive $575,000 and the University of New Hampshire will receive $230,000. In the following fiscal year each will receive $10,000 increase over these figures. This represents approximately 20 per cent of the total revenue of the state."

"An analysis of the general expenditures of the state government during the 1922 fiscal year shows that out of a total expense of $4,069,555, the sum of $1,074,845 was expended on account of schools. A recent estimated value of state-owned property gives the value of schools and libraries at $3,200,000."

"The state tax commission compiled a statement with chart showing how the average town and city dollar was spent in 1921. This chart indicates that of every dollar expended, 77 cents was for school purposes and represented the largest item of expenditure."

N. H. Doctors' Name Hanover Man Head

Resolutions protesting against the government paying for the training of ex-service men as chiropractors and in favor of the establishment of a four-year medical course in a New Hampshire school were adopted by the New Hampshire Medical Society at the closing session in Concord. The society also voted to have the 1924 meeting in Manchester, this being contingent, however, on the completion of the new hotel there by next May.

MEMORIAL DAYProgram For Observance in Our Town

Memorial Day in Antrim will be observed this year as follows: Ephraim Weston Post, No. 87, G. A. R., and William M. Myers Post, No. 50, A. L., will leave the Grand Army hall in autos at 9 o'clock a.m., for North Branch, arriving at the Chapel at 9:30. Exercises will be conducted under the direction of A. S. Fuglestad, president of the day. Immediately afterward the column will proceed to the North Branch cemetery to decorate graves. Return to Antrim Center where services will be held in the cemetery. After decorating the graves, the column will return to G. A. R. hall.

In the afternoon the column will form at 1:45 o'clock, in front of G. A. R. hall; will march to the Tuttle library, where services will be held at the Tablet to the World War Veterans. Prayer by Rev. R. H. Tibbals; placing of wreaths on the markers by the Commanders of the Grand Army and American Legion.

Column will reform and march to the town hall, where services will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock, under the direction of the President of the Day. Services will consist of music, prayer, exercises by the school children, address by Rev. R. H. Tibbals, speaker of the day. Column will reform in front of town hall.

Order of March

Automobiles are needed to convey members of the Corps and Auxiliary to the cemetery on Memorial Day. It would be greatly appreciated if those having cars will help in this part of the service.

the book of Exodus, 12th chapter and a part of the 14th verse, "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial." Mr. Tibbals, having been a chaplain in the regular army during the World War, was able to talk to the veterans and others present in a manner a bit different from what is usually our custom of hearing. He handled his subject interestingly and was thus able to hold the close attention of his large audience. For practically half an hour he carried his audience with him, and his entire discourse was well received.

The special music for this service was good and enjoyed by all. The decorations had been given special thought and were neatly arranged.

While the union service in the evening is not a regular annual observance, yet it fitted in nicely at this time, and the sermon by Rev. William Thompson at the Methodist church was full of patriotism and Americanism. It was worthy the large attendance present. The speaker took for his text words found in the book of Jonah: "What is thy country?" He gave to our people one of his best sermons in an impressive manner.

Here too the singing was fine and the decorations appropriate.

CHURCH NOTES

Furnished by the Pastors of the Different Churches

METHODIST

Rev. Wm. Thompson, Pastor

Thursday evening, the week night prayer meeting.

To all members of the church: How much good would my church do in the world if every member worked at religion as I do? If every member of the church attended its services as much as I do? How long would the church exist? If every member of the church co-operated with the pastor in the same degree and manner as I do, how long would the preacher stay as its pastor? A word to the wise, etc.

The Bible school will meet after the morning worship. Do not send the children to the school, bring them. The school is for all, young and old.

W. R. C. CELEBRATESThe 25th Anniversary Is Fittingly Observed

Ephraim Weston Woman's Relief Corps took notice of its twenty-five years of service in this place and on Tuesday evening of last week celebrated the event by giving a supper and entertainment in the Grand Army hall to a large number of our people who were fortunate enough to receive an invitation. Those included besides members of the Corps were members of the Grand Army, American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary, and a few specially invited guests, while members of the Corps had a privilege of inviting one another.

Supper was served at 6:30 o'clock, in cafeteria style, and waitresses were handy to assist in any way and see that all were well served, and great care was taken so that none went away dissatisfied. The menu consisted of cold boiled ham, potato and other salads, hot rolls, fancy pies, coffee, for which every one had words of praise.

Those present had the honor and privilege of being presented to the members of the Grand Army and charter members of the Relief Corps who stood in line for this purpose.

An orchestra, composed of Herbert Curtis and Arlene Paige, violins, and Miss Gertrude Proctor and Miss Hazel Lougee at the piano, furnished music during the evening. Other numbers on the program were a piano duet by Benton Dearborn and Ernest Goodwin; reading by Mrs. Lena Jackson, with vocal solos interspersed by Miss Elizabeth Tandy; piano duets by Misses Proctor and Lougee; reading of letters from absent members by the Secretary, Mrs. Julia Proctor; reading of historical paper by Mrs. Anna Eaton Carter. This was an extremely interesting paper, containing facts and figures regarding the activities of the Corps from the year of its institution to the present time. (The Reporter hopes to be able to soon publish entire this historical sketch in these columns.) Much of general interest contained therein we omit now, hoping to give it in detail in the very near future. Mrs. Jennie Proctor, president of the Corps, presided.

It might be well to here state that this Corps has been honored by having one of its members, Mrs. Anna Eaton Carter, fill the office of Department President of New Hampshire for the year ending in April, 1916; her associate state officers from the local Corps were Mary E. Barrett, secretary; Mary H. Reed, treasurer; Bertha L. Colby, senior aide.

The work of the Relief Corps has been mutual assistance, that is working with the Grand Army, and in the important task of relief; and the historian's pen recorded these acts that those present might realize to some extent what it has accomplished. The object is a good one and this Corps stands high in attaining the goal. Let the good work go on!

This was an unusual occasion and also a most pleasant affair. The committee having the arrangements in charge have reason to feel pleased with the success of their efforts.

Antrim at Henniker Saturday, May 26

The very strong Henniker team defeated Antrim last Saturday at Henniker by a score of 4 to 1. The break in the game came in the 8th inning, when with the score 1 to 0 favor of Henniker, Antrim scored one run and had a man thrown out at the plate on an unsatisfactory decision. The pitching of both Woodman and Emerson was good. R. Cuddihy's all round play was the feature.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown N. Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Changes of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

Human Nature.
"It is rather odd," remarked the mild-mannered man in the street car, "how some people object to a little fresh air. At this very minute, there are many more people in this car than there should be, and as a result the air is badly vitiated, and besides it is warm outside. Yet when I tried to open this window a bit ago a flipper back of me, who was wearing a fur coat, and stockings as thin as a husband's excuse, bawled me out as a 'fresh air crank,' and I had to close it. There is nothing funnier than human nature."

Canada's Silk Importation.
Raw silks, etc., imported into Canada during the fiscal year ending 1922 were valued at $2,520,920, according to a government report. Silk dress goods were imported to the value of $13,270,916 during the same period, and the United States' share of this business was $2,847,230; France and Switzerland figured to the extent of $8,162,000, almost equally divided between the two countries.

When a man insists on proving the truthfulness of his remarks always let him do it.

Her Health

"Ten months ago I began to lose my strength. My household duties became burdensome. I felt exhausted after the slightest exertion. Then my nerves got so bad that at the slightest noise I used to tremble, my legs would shake and my heart beat violently causing me to gasp for breath. One afternoon a friend called to see me and she was shocked at my pitiable condition. She went out and bought a bottle of 'Wincarnis' and gave me a dose right away. I continued taking 'Wincarnis' three times a day and its effects have been almost miraculous. Gradually but surely my strength came back, a color came into my cheeks, my nerves grew steady and it seemed as if I had taken a new lease on life. Today I am a very happy woman because I am well."

Days of Memorial for All Who Have Served the Nation

Of the two great patriotic holidays in the national calendar, one commemorates the establishment of our independence. The other is not a day of memorial to those who at some particular time or under some particular circumstances have given their lives for the common good. It is a day of memorial to all those who, at any time and under all circumstances, have earned our gratitude by sacrifice.

As time goes on, undoubtedly additions will be made to the list of dates which have an important relation to the history of the nation. Undoubtedly also their significance will be emphasized in various ways, that the people may remember. After all, however, is there in the whole gamut of patriotic sentiment anything that cannot find full and adequate and appropriate expression on the two traditional days set aside by common consent as well as by law as days of peculiarly national import—the one dedicated to the beginnings of things in a heroic epoch, the other dedicated to the means by which our existence as a people has been perpetuated, and especially to our patriotic dead? In some foreign countries, when religious holidays were greatly multiplied, the meaning of any one was dimmed and virtually all well into neglect. If the number of our patriotic holidays is much extended there will be a similar danger in this busy country, which lives much in the present and little in the past and whose emotional side is in strong restraint to the practical.

Their Proper Tribute.

Of our May and July anniversaries, the tenderest thought goes out to the one on which we honor those whose exit from life was made glorious by fortitude and high devotion. When a people cease to pay tribute to those qualities, whenever or wherever exemplified, and specially as exemplified among their own, they have become unresponsive to promptings that explain all the great achievements of the future. As the periperal days of the war period recede, it is to be expected that the anniversary of this date will lose something of its potency to suggest and inspire, but it fills a place no other anniversary can fill. It comes at a season of the year when its observance can take on a graciousness denied at other seasons and represents so fine an idea that we must never suffer it to be minimized.

Anguish of Bereavement.

Mighty as is the host that would be formed if all those who in the long flight of time have lost their lives for country stood together, it would still be exceeded by another mighty host—those who in the deaths of the other spectral host endured the anguish of bereavement. Of such, as they was this holiday first appointed, long before it received the sanction of statute-makers, and it rules from its sunny place in the calendar in an authority that is above the law, in the way of the popular mind that wills and that executes. Additions have been made lately to the host of the bereaved. Their sorrow is still recent. Shall we forget the afflicted living as is paid in the souls of flowers and appreciate, perhaps even beautiful thoughts? Shall we not before evening falls have for them some brief word of sympathy that may make their outlook on life a little less bleak and lighten the sadness for all that this day recalls?

DESERVES PLACE OF HONOR

General Sheridan's Famous Horse,
"Winchester," Now in Smithsonian
Institution at Washington.

For many years, in the old quartermaster building on Governor's Island, New York harbor, one of the principal objects of interest to the casual civilian visitor was "Winchester," the famous horse that General Sheridan rode in the Civil war. After his death, "Winchester" was mounted and saddled and equipped as he was ridden by his famous master on the day that saved the Union troops at Winchester. Now "Winchester" is to be moved to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, to take his justly deserved place of honor among relics of first historic importance. So, at the ceremony held on the island on June 3, last year, old Grand Army men gathered to pay a last farewell to their comrade of old days. Some of them had seen the general and his horse on the historic day, and bade him goodspeed on his final trip to Washington.

Well to Remember.

Who today remembers that only five years ago congress passed a resolution "humbly and devoutly to acknowledge our dependence on Almighty God and to implore His aid and protection," and asking the President to recommend "a day of public humiliation, prayer and fasting to be observed by the people of the United States with religious solemnity and the offering of fervent supplications to Almighty God for the safety and welfare of our cause. His blessing on our arms and a speedy restoration of an honorable and lasting peace to the nations of the earth." How many recall that this day of prayer and humiliation was held on Memorial day, Thursday, May 30, 1912?

Once More a Nation United.

The graves of American soldiers of three wars are now strewn with flowers on Memorial day. Of these wars the last, fought on European soil, has had a more powerful influence in uniting our people in a devoted patriotism than the conflict with Spain. Today there is no part of the Union but mourns a soldier who gave up his life for the cause of civilization in France.

MEMORIAL day does not extoll heroes so much as it commences deeds. Men are the instruments of achievement, and what they accomplish determines progress. Greatest advancement blesses the greatest number.

MEMORABLE OCCASION

Feeding Methods Help Live Stock

Plan Evolved by Department of Agriculture to Help Breeders.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

The United States Department of Agriculture announces a nation-wide service to bring about improved methods of feeding live stock in the United States. The plan is to bring the knowledge of up-to-date feeding methods to the attention of every live-stock feeder in the country; and, in co-operation with state agricultural colleges, county extension agents, and other agencies interested in the betterment of the live stock of the nation, to offer individual assistance to farmers who have special and difficult feeding problems.

Ever since the beginning of the Better Lives-Better Stock campaign, which has enrolled more than 1,200,000 head of live stock for improvement by means of better methods of breeding, there has been a demand from stockmen over the entire country that the government inaugurate a better-feeding campaign. A large proportion of inquiries on live-stock problems received by the department from farmers of the country seek information on feeding. The plan which has been evolved is expected to render a definite service to those who ask for feeding help, and also to bring a knowledge of better feeding methods to many who would not make inquiries.

Best Methods Not Practiced.
That good feeding methods are known and practiced by the more experienced live stock owners in the United States is shown by the good condition and finish of a proportion of animals appearing at stock yards, and by good records in production made by some feeders. But the proportion can be made larger with benefit to the individual grower and to the nation, according to the department live-stock specialists. A conservative estimate based on a careful survey of American farms shows that there are 14 million head of runty animals in the country. A majority of nearly 1,000 farmers who commented on the situation stated that adequate and proper feed are the principal means of preventing runtness in animals. The tremendous mortality among young animals is largely attributable also to lack of proper care and feed up to and including weaning time. These, and other facts, point to the great need for more general practice of better feeding methods. They point also to the immense amount of benefit that can accrue to the nation in the way of better live stock, more economical production, and a great saving in feedstuffs. If the general live-stock feeding practice of the nation can be made more efficient.

Department Offers Wide Service.

The Department of Agriculture offers an individual feeding service that is available to any live-stock feeder in the country. One of the principal features of this service will be a "Feeding Problem Sheet" which farmers may obtain from their county agents, state agricultural colleges, or direct from the department at Washington. On the feeding-problem sheet the farmer outlines his problem briefly, and describes his stock and available feeds. The sheet is designed to enable the farmer to give sufficient information in brief form to make additional correspondence unnecessary. The farmer then refers the sheet to his county agent, who makes a recommendation, which the farmer outlines his problem briefly, and describes his stock and available feeds. EXPECT BIG CROPS

Conditions in Western Canada
Please Farmers.

Seeding Has Been Begun Earlier Than for Many Years, and Soil Is in Perfect Shape.

With weather conditions highly favorable, the farmers of Western Canada, with the exception probably of a portion of Manitoba, have completed seeding from ten to fifteen days earlier than for some years past. In some parts of Manitoba, there were floods which delayed seeding, but they have abated, and left the land in good shape for quick work and speedy germination. In Saskatchewan soil conditions for seeding were never better. With a generous quantity of snow, which after melting left needed moisture, and another snowstorm after seeding was finished, there was an ideal condition created. From all parts of Alberta there came the best of reports as to rainfall and snow moisture, leaving the ground in the condition required for the prospects of a good crop.

Spring, as in most other parts of the continent, was backward, but notwithstanding this, as has been said, farmers were able to get on the land earlier than for some years. In fact, seeding was practically commenced about the 12th of April, which to many readers may seem remarkable, when it is known that several hundred miles farther south it was not possible to do spring seeding for several days later. Reports to hand on the 10th of May state that wheat is up above the ground in a great many places, oats are being sown, and corn planted. Farm labor was scarce for awhile, but the demand has fallen off. One feature of the demand for farm help is that farmers are now employing help by the year, at of course smaller wages than those paid for special work. The increasing tendency to employ help by the year is evidence that farmers are not relying solely upon wheat growing, but are going out into other branches, such as dairying, stock raising, etc. The prospects in all portions of Western Canada were never brighter than at present. Information regarding the condition of the crops at any time will be sent on request made to any Canadian government agent.—Advertisement.

Mechanics of Milking.

A little girl from the city had been visiting in the country, and was being questioned as to what kind of time she had. Finally someone said: "I bet you don't even know how to milk a cow."

"Bet I do," she said.

She was pressed for particulars, and explained: "You take the cow into the barn and give her some breakfast food and water and then you drain her crankcase."

Something Coming to Him.

Two little boys were playing one spring day when Johnnie said to Willie: "Let's play that you are a pig and I am a bull, and you get down and wallow in the mud, and I will sit upon the fence and bellow."

Willie thought that would be a good game, so he wallowed about in the mud, for a while, then thinking he would like to change, he said: "Now you be the pig and wallow in the mud and I will sit upon the fence and bellow."

"Oh, no," said Johnnie, "you will have time enough to bellow when your mother sees your clothes."—Judge.

WHERE SEA BIRDS ARE SAFE

Wild Creatures Seem to Know It, and Congregate on Rock on the Coast of Scotland.

"It certainly is the most wonderful citadel I ever looked upon. Its sides rise straight from the sea, and if you placed St. Paul's cathedral by its side the cross would only just top the cliff," writes an ornithologist.

Every available ledge on this lower- ing rock contains its bird.

In the past the Bass rock, in the Firth of Forth, had been a famous fortress, holding out for years against an attacking army. Now it is a sea birds' citadel, and there they are safe on the impregnable cliffs.

If you look at the scene from below, it is even more wonderful than looking down on the birds from above. There are thousands of the giant birds sailing around, crossing and recrossing in what looks like a great network of living creatures.

One moment there is silence, and that is the most beautiful moment of all, for it is like a scene from fairyland, with dream wings floating above you. The next moment a garnet uterus its harsh note, and a thousand birds reply until there is a deafening chorus. Then again there is no sound save the wash of the waves at the base of the cliffs.—London Mail.

LIVED UP TO HIS GROUCH

New Yorker Surely Went the Limit Between Saturday Afternoon and Monday Morning.

Wijjat had a grouch when he left the office Saturday afternoon. He refused an invitation to join a friend who said he knew a place where the modern substitute for the wild thyme blows and started for his lonesome home.

The grouch was still in evidence when he returned Monday morning.

"I got home Saturday," he said, "sat around a while, took a nap and decided I did not want to go out to dinner, so I drank a part of a bottle of stale milk and went to bed. I have spoken just two words since I went away Saturday. They are the name of a brand of cigar, and I used them in buying a smoke."

"Didn't you speak to the waiter where you got your meals?" asked a friend.

"Not a word," said the owner of the grouch. "I ate in a nickel-in-the-slot place."—New York Sun.

Smart Boy.
A boy was leaning against a post when a man came by.

"What are you doing?" he asked the boy.

"Nothing," said the boy.

"Get any pay for it?"

"No."

"Why don't you work; I can offer you a job?" said the man in a per- sasive voice.

"Regular?" asked the boy.

"Yes."

"Any pay?"

"No," said the man, "not for the first week; but for the second week I'll pay you."

"Well," replied the boy, "I'm all right here, so I'll come round to your place the second week."

Poor Picking.
Al Wright went West last summer to seek his fortune as a farm hand. But the fortune was rather elusive and Al was back home in a few months—so soon as the weather began to get cold.

"Well, how did everything go around home here this fall?" Al asked a friend.

"Awful!" the friend exclaimed. "I couldn't make no money at nothin'! Why, this fall I had to shuck corn for as little as five cents a bushel!"

"Say, you're lucky!" Al told him. "That would-a been big money out where I was this fall. Out there the corn crop was so this we had to shuck by the mile to make anything at all!"—Kansas City Star.

Culture.
He is a waiter in a restaurant in the University neighborhood, the Chicago Journal reports. The woman has known him for a long time.

"You've been here for a good many years, haven't you?" she asked of him the other evening.

"Yes," he said. "I have. You see, my daughter is a school teacher, and we talk together when I get home. I could work in other places and make a great deal more money, but I'd miss the culture. There's so much fine talk, and it's so educating to listen to it."

So he satisfied himself with crumbs of culture rather than with large monetary tips.

Parallel Situations.

As far as we can make it out, the condition of the starving Russians closely parallels that of the negro who stopped a stranger with an appeal for a quarter to get something to eat. "Why don't you go to work and earn your own quarters?" asked the selectee victim of the touch. "To tell you de trut', boss," said the perishing African, "by de time I gits hungry enough to be willin' to work, I'm so weak I kin't work till I gits some grub."—San Francisco Argonaut.

It's Progress.

"Well, how is the new courthouse coming along?" inquired a recently arrived guest.

"First rate!" answered the landlord of the Poewecuddyump tavern. "The walls are up high enough that a feller who went up on 'em yesterday to tell one of the bricklayers a funny story was able to fall off and break his collarbone."—Kansas City Star.

Denominational Privilege.

"We were out in the park one day, my little girl and I," writes Mrs. B., "when we came to a path with a sign over it. Glancing up at the sign my little girl said: 'Oh, mama, we can't go down there—it says, "For Presbyterians only.'"—Boston Transcript.

The Weathercock.

The church weather vane has been handed down to our own day from the time of St. Dunstan. Its name, weathercock, suggests its shape. This bird, emblem of vigilance, represents the preacher and rouses the sleepy.

Worth Thinking Over.

Here is a rather telling point made in a play running in New York: "Some of us imagine we are misunderstood, when the trouble is we are understood by others and not by ourselves."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Giving and Receiving.

We are as answerable for what we give as for what we receive; nay, than the not receiving of it; for the one is another person's fault, but the other is mine.—Seneca.
