Reporter Goes to Press Wednesday

Morning and All News and Advertisements Must Reach Our Office Monday to insure insertion that week. Very Important Matters may receive attention Tuesday morning. We need to make the mails early Wednesday afternoon and to do this we need co-operation. If by chance material is omitted, it will probably be because it was received too late. Our people will kindly bear these facts in mind

TWO PROMINENT MEN

Visit Antrim and Talk on Public Matters

Olin Chase of Concord, representative of Captain J. G. Winant, Republican candidate for governor of New Hampshire, was in Antrim on Thursday calling on friends in the interests of his candidate. The Reporter man has known Mr. Chase for a number of years, first becoming acquainted with him when he was editor and publisher of the Newport Champion, and we have great respect for his knowledge of things political throughout the state, and are now anxiously awaiting to see how his predictions will carry in the present case. We enjoyed Bro. Chase's call very much; optimistic manner is an inspiration always and his broad smile, large heart and geniality sticks out all over him,—and that's going some.

John C. Berry, of Plymouth, the veteran insurance agent, who has for a long term of years been traveling up and down our state, was in town last week on a business trip. He called at the Reporter office, and naturally talked politics. Those who have known Mr. Berry very long are aware of the fact that he is a party prohibitionist, and can't quite understand why a strict temperance man (or woman) can belong to either of the two big parties and expect much along that line from them. He sees trouble ahead during the coming election and has ideas that may not be so very far from right. Knowing the history of parties as he does, makes him think seriously along this line. A most interesting talker, having a knowledge of men and events, makes his statements of facts more convincing, and creates in his listener a desire to look into matters political and economical to such an extent as will benefit himself and give him a very much better knowledge of things in general. One of the great needs of the present period is that men and women, especially the younger portion of the voters, should spend more time learning the needs of our country and state and how to get them, and not let others do their thinking for them.

Base Ball

The Antrim base ball team journeyed to East Jaffrey on Saturday last and won the game with the town team of that place five to four; the rally in the ninth inning, scoring four runs, did the trick. Thornton, pitching for the winners, fanned thirteen.

The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
Antrim	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	4	5	8	4
E Jaffrey	0	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	1	4	6	3

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested By What Is Happening Around

Can anybody blame certain school boards in Massachusetts for refusing to hire teachers with bobbed hair? We should say not!

A whole lot of voters hope it will be satisfactorily explained to them a little later just why so much time and attention is given to the "klan" plank in the New York Democratic convention. It is either of great political consequence or it must be a very important plank upon which the party thinks it will ride into power.

Pretty hard lines when you can't park your auto near a town hall while a dance is in progress without keeping a guard over it. One was stolen last Friday night in an adjoining town while the owner was in the hall enjoying the pleasures of the evening. Later it was learned where the auto was—a number of miles away—and the owner now has it in his possession again.

The Reporter man had the pleasure of meeting Norris H. Cotton, editor of the Granite Monthly, a short time since and enjoyed a pleasant chat with him. At that time we thought we were talking with the new superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, and think he would have made an excellent man for the position for his excellent qualifications peculiarly fit him for such a position; we regretted to learn that he felt he could not take on the responsibilities of this position at the present time.

With the tax bill and the bonus measure disposed of by Congress for the time being, it is quite probable that the tariff will be dragged in as an issue for the next Congress. It is going to be different to play partisan politics with this issue, as the public realizes that a reasonable tariff to protect American workmen and industries from ruinous competition is a matter of good business regardless of party affiliations. Many of our industries depend for their existence on a tariff which will give them an even break in the home market with foreign goods produced with cheap labor. Considered from this angle, the tariff question is not a political issue.

Not since 1906—the year of the San Francisco catastrophe—has there been such a heavy fire loss in this country as in 1923, when losses totaled approximately $508,000,000. In spite of this, the average fire insurance rate has declined from $1.03 per $100 in 1914 to 90 cents per $100 in 1923. President Smith of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, before the annual meeting of that organization, declared that 75 per cent of all fires could be prevented by exercise of ordinary care. He added: "No country, however rich in created wealth, can continue to support such an enormous drain on its resources. Our wealth of today will surely be affected if we do not, as a nation, dam this annual waste." The people rely upon insurance as protection against financial losses and overlook their own individual responsibility to prevent fires which destroy thousands of lives annually in addition to physical property.

There is not a country paper published which does not, in its boosting of its community, in its service to the public, in its support of local and rural public enterprises, print matter which, if paid for, would come to many, many times as much as any of these newspapers get out of legal advertising, says an Exchange.

CHIROPRACTIC TALK NO. 10

"KNOW YOUR SPINE"

The most important structure in your body, and the one you know the least about, is your backbone. Millions of people go through life absolutely ignorant of the anatomical formation of the spine; therefore, they do not realize the importance of spinal subluxations.

The spine has to bear every twist, strain, jar and fall. These things are what cause the spinal segments to become misaligned, and this misalignment causes pressure on the trunk nerves as they pass between the movable parts of the spine.

CHIROPRACTIC REMOVES PRESSURE

Every man and woman who suffers from disease or abnormal condition has nerve pressure at the spine. This nerve pressure is the underlying cause of their ailments. Chiropractic removes this cause completely and finally, as is attested by hundreds of thousands of people in the United States alone. Many of these people suffered from the very sickness or disease that now has you in its grip, but today they are well, strong and vigorous.

Herbert Spencer said: "There is a principle which is bar against all information, which is proof against all arguments, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. That principle is condemnation before investigation."

If nothing has helped you so far, look into Chiropractic.

Come to either of my offices for a spinal analysis and consultation today.

Tying Cast Iron Into Knots Is Now Possible

Tying gray or white cast iron in knots is now made possible by a new process invented by Alex. K. Schlaap. The process is very simple, consisting in heating the cast iron to a temperature shortly above the critical temperature of 1,600 Fahrenheit, while protecting it in a muffle surrounded by a gas flame and open at the top. As soon as the gray cast iron reaches the proper temperature the muffle and its contents are removed from the furnace and allowed to cool in the open air. The whole operation requires about 45 minutes, starting from cold cast iron.

The method has been in continuous use for a year, chiefly for the purpose of softening gray iron castings for machining purposes, and especially for making automobile piston rings. The most noteworthy characteristic is the combination of pliability, ductility, malleability, and resiliency. In its resiliency the heat-treated metal most resembles steel, since it shows this property both before and after distortion. For example, a thin bar might be coiled up into a spiral and used as a spring, although, of course, not nearly as strong and resilient as a tempered steel spring. It is worthy of note that this annealed cast iron does not warp on standing. Samples of annealed iron have stood for several months without changing shape by as much as one thousandth of an inch, as compared with unannealed castings of the same metal and pattern, which have warped.—Iron Age.

Indians of Amazon Valley

War is the normal state of the Jibaro Indian of the Amazon valley, first, for the purpose of getting wives from neighboring or enemy tribes, second, for revenge of injuries inflicted upon relatives during wars, then for enemy heads that are supposed to bring good luck to the possessors because of the sacrifice of the victim to the devil. The heads of their enemies also become a source of income to these savage Amazonian tribes, since they are exchanged with traders for arms, ammunition, etc.

The skull is removed from the head of the decapitated enemy through a slit in the back from the neck up. The skin is then boiled to arrest putrefaction, after which it is dried and reduced in size by inserting hot stones the size of an orange. When the interior has been shrunk to the size of the stones hot sand is used to continue the process of drying and shrinking. After the process is completed, the head is hung up in the hut as a trophy and feasts are held in its honor. These miniature heads, retaining to a remarkable degree characteristic likeness to the living person, are in demand in the outside world.—Detroit News.

Real Color of Gold

Few persons are familiar with the real color of gold, because it is seldom seen except when heavily alloyed, a state in which it is much redder than when it is pure. The purest coins ever made were the $50 pieces which were once in common use in California. Their coinage was abandoned because the loss by abrasion was so great and because their interior could be bored out and filled with lead. They were octagonal in shape and were the most valuable coins ever minted and circulated. All gold is not alike when refined. Australian gold is distinctly redder than that taken in California. Moreover, placer gold is more yellow than that which is taken from quartz. This is one of the mysteries of metallurgy, because the gold in placers comes from that which is in quartz. The gold in the Ural mountains is the reddest in the world.

Really Ladylike

Calamity Jane—Doctor, I'm so glad you hurried. I've been severely bitten on the arm.

Doctor Woodchuck—I can't quite make out what sort of animal bit you. The wound is too small for a horse's bite and too big for a dog's.

Calamity Jane—Oh, it wasn't an animal, it was another lady.

One of Many

Probably there isn't a physician who doesn't have a few charity patients as well as those who can, and do, pay their bills, and one of these gave a good laugh to the attending nurses at the hospital.

"I'm very grateful for what you have done for me, doctor," said the woman, adding, "I pray for you every night!"

"Why, that's very nice of you to think of me like that, Mrs. Blank," said the doctor, highly gratified.

"Lord, sir, it ain't a bit of trouble," replied the woman affably. "It ain't a bit of trouble to put your name in along with the others."

Wanted to Know

The wife of a certain bishop had given a long and sympathetic address to a number of women from the east end of London on the question of making the life of the home happy and peaceful—especially peaceful.

After the address one of the women was overheard while making this remark:

"All very well, but why didn't she go into detail? For instance, I should like to know what she does when her old man comes home drunk."

Radiator Plays Lullaby

They recently installed their new baby in a room in their apartment which formerly had been the guest chamber and so far they are delighted with a hitherto unrealized attraction which the room possessed, says the New York Sun and Globe. Every night about 10:30, just after the baby has been fed and should settle down for the night, the radiator commences to beat out a tattoo that has had the effect of acting as a lullaby to the baby. Before it ceases he has fallen asleep, but their joy is tempered somewhat by the fear that some night, more wakeful than usual, he will not have lapsed into unconsciousness before the radiator stops its tune and the problem will then be what substitute to give him.

Lacked Harmony

Wife—Henry, I'm afraid we'll have to have the drawing room done over.

Hub—What?

Wife—I've just found out that the wall paper does not harmonize with the color of the gown I'm going to wear when we entertain next Thursday.—Boston Transcript.

Some Difficulty

A very stout and portly gentleman was once asked why he did not play golf, and this was his reason:

"I did try it once, but I found that when I put the ball where I could see it I could not reach it; and when I put it where I could reach it I could not see it."

Smoking Introduced in America by the Chinese

The Indian long has enjoyed the reputation of having invented the pipe and bequeathed to white men the joys of tobacco. Recent discoveries in the West indicate, however, that the Indian in turn may have inherited the smoking habit from a much earlier period, and that smoking was introduced into America by the Chinese at some remote time. It is certain that the East Indians have been smoking for some two thousand years.

Long before tobacco was discovered smoking had become a fine art. Babylon doubtless had many smokers who were as particular about their pipes and brands as any one today. They smoked different woods and herbs and paid special attention to blending them to get the desired flavor. A piece of wood was burned to a charcoal, and smoked in an ornamented pipe. When the charcoal was red hot a powder was dropped on it and the resulting smoke was inhaled. Throughout Central Asia in remote times smokers were common and were exacting about the "tobacco," or whatever it was they smoked. They used the gum from trees, bark and many aromatic herbs and smoked various kinds of flowers.

Soldiers have been smokers from remote antiquity. The Russian military camps still yield pipes. The ruins of Roman cities, notably Pompeii, show that smoking must have been common. Many of the pipe designs were most elaborate.—New York Times.

Yankee Genius Floods World With Everything

I make bold to believe that in the United States today at the close of this first quarter of this Twentieth century there can be seen an ingenuity in plot-making and a fertility in devising situations recalling that which was to be observed in France in the days of Scribe and Dennery and Sardou and in Spain in the days of Lope de Vega and Calderon, two periods of dramaturgic dexterity and of abundant productivity. The American faculty of invention, which has filled the world with Yankee contrivances, seems to have been directed suddenly to the construction of plays, says Brander Matthews in Scribner's. I am aware that to say this is to lay myself open to the retort that our plays are as machine-made as our Yankee contrivances, and even that we are engaged in quantity production rather than quality production. If thus cornered I should have to confess that there may be more than a little truth in the charge; but I should proffer as my rejoinder the statement that not a few of the American plays of this century are as interesting in the library as they are in the theater.

Discovered

A young man whose gallantry was in excess of his pecuniary means sought to remedy the defect and to save the money required for the purpose of expensive flowers by arranging with a gardener to let him have a bouquet from time to time in return for his cast-off clothes.

One day he received a bunch of roses which he at once dispatched to his lady love.

In sure anticipation of a friendly welcome he called at the girl's house the same evening and was not a little surprised at a frosty reception.

After a pause the girl remarked, frigidly: "You sent me a note today."

"A note! I? To be sure, I sent you flowers; but—"

"And this note was with the bouquet. Do you mean to deny it?"

And the young man read: "Don't forget the old trousers you promised me the other day."

Declares Ants Are Topers

Ants consume more alcohol in proportion to their body weight than does the most accomplished "old soak," asserts Prof. Paul Lindner, chief of the Fermenting Industry institute in Berlin, Germany. The industrious insects manufacture their own home-brew in their digestive canal by the action of yeasts on the milky juices that they extract from aphids, or plant lice, which they keep for that purpose.

Other insects have similar homemade home-brew outfits that they use to capacity, Doctor Lindner stated. Wasps are accomplished bootleggers.—Popular Science Monthly.

Magnets Lay Nails Straight

To lay nails straight in containers, a packer equipped with magnets is reported to have been built by a Swiss inventor. The machine is said to be able to fill kegs, boxes, or paper cartons and to handle wire rods, hairpins, knife blades and fishhooks with equal ease. The articles to be boxed up are poured into a huge vibrating hopper in lots of about a thousand pounds and are straightened out on large trays.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Psychology Expert

"When one forgets and leaves a parcel or some such article in a shop or car, it is because the subconscious mind regards that parcel as an incumbrance, and as something which ought to be got rid of."

Aberdonian in the class—Well, how can you explain this? Last night I went away from a shop without my change, and—

Collapse of class and lecturer.

Always Had Bad Luck With Pets

By CLARA DELAFIELD

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

I never had a fond gazelle
To glad me with its soft, black eye,
But when it came to know me well
And love me, it was sure to die.

THAT was the only verse of poetry that Miss Dolly knew. She had come across it in a scrapbook once, and treasured it in her mind.

For, being past the age of attractiveness to men, and having never married, Dolly had an inordinate fondness for household pets.

Anything on which to lavish her unwanted affections. Dogs, cats, parrots—and the same fatality overtook them all. Now she was gazing with tearful indignation at the body of her canary, stretched out cold and limp upon the floor of his cage.

Something had happened to his little insides, something inexplicable and unsuspected—and that was all that remained of Jim.

"I'll get a tabby," reflected Miss Dolly. "Cats don't die on you like birds do. It's a year since Tom was poisoned. I'll get a tabby, and keep her in the house, and she'll come to love me in time. A nice, big one—what's that under the bed?"

Miss Dolly, who was making up her room, started as she saw the overhanging sheet and blankets stir. A purring sound came from beneath. Miss Dolly lifted up the blanket.

"Pussy, pussy!" she whispered.

A large and tawny form came from underneath the bed. Miss Dolly found herself looking into the great, staring orbs of a lion.

All was confusion down at the circus. Dick, the oldest lion in captivity, had got away.

Dick had delighted generations of circus-goers who had thronged the tent, in the eager expectation of seeing Signor Antonelli, his attendant, fall a victim to his famishing maw. As a matter of fact, Dick was too old to want to do anything but sleep in the sunlight. He had to be prodded into his tricks. The trainer had to secrete a piece of meat about him in order to awaken Dick to any interest.

And somehow the cage had been left open, and Dick had strolled out and disappeared.

He had been seen in town, slinking along an alley toward an odorous garbage can. The alarm was out. A panicky mob of townsmen, armed with sticks, guns and rifles, was hot on Dick's trail. Shots were being fired, the streets were filled with an increasing crowd.

"He's gone that way!"

"I saw him streaking up that alley!"

"Savage lion at large! Lock your doors!"

"Don't shoot! Don't shoot!" It was Signor Antonelli in the van, trying to calm the infuriated, frightened crowd. "He's harmless. He's an old lion."

Nobody listened to him. The mob streamed up the hill in the wake of the sinuous, yellow form that had been seen slinking into a back yard. The yard was that of Miss Dolly's house.

"He's gone into Miss Dolly's house!"

"He'll eat her alive!"

"Here come the police!"

"Here comes the fire department! Drown him out!"

"What's the good of that when Miss Dolly's inside him?"

The police cordon formed round the house. Three of the bravest officers, with pistols drawn, rushed to the back door. With a single united blow they broke it from its hinges.

"Where's that lion?"

"Well, of all the—"

Miss Dolly, her face red with anger, stood confronting the astounded officers. She had just risen from a chair in the kitchen, and one hand was still clasping the mane of the vagrant lion, which looked up growling from the basin of milk that it had been lapping.

"Say, that's a lion; that ain't no pussy-cat!"

Signor Antonelli pushed through the crowd. "Ah, Mees, my lion—"

Dexterously he flung a lasso over Dick's head, and led him away. There was no opposition on the part of either crowd or police.

Miss Dolly sank back into her chair. "It always happens," she moaned, throwing her apron over her head. "Something always happens to every pet I ever have. I'm going to get another canary bird."

Probably

"Uck-yassah!" agreed old Brother Bulginback. "Brudder Bogus do shout long and loud. De on'y thing I knows dat kin beat him am a steam whistle. But we isn't said nuthin' to Brudder Bogus yit; we judges dat he's so fur away fum de Lawd dat he's p'intedly 'bleeged to yell in awdah to make hisself heered."

Safety First

Dorcas—Do you ever allow a man to kiss you when you're out motoring with him?

Philippa—Never. If a man can drive safely while kissing me, he's not giving the kiss the attention it deserves.—Kansas City Star.

His Real Status

Judge—You are charged with being a deserter, having left your wife. Are all the facts in the case true?

Prisoner—No, your honor, I am not a deserter. Just a refugee.

Reporter Goes to Press Wednesday

Morning and All News and Advertisements Must Reach Our Office Monday to insure insertion that week. Very Important Matters may receive attention Tuesday morning. We need to make the mails early Wednesday afternoon and to do this we need co-operation. If by chance material is omitted, it will probably be because it was received too late. Our people will kindly bear these facts in mind

TWO PROMINENT MEN

Visit Antrim and Talk on Public Matters

Olin Chase of Concord, representative of Captain J. G. Winant, Republican candidate for governor of New Hampshire, was in Antrim on Thursday calling on friends in the interests of his candidate. The Reporter man has known Mr. Chase for a number of years, first becoming acquainted with him when he was editor and publisher of the Newport Champion, and we have great respect for his knowledge of things political throughout the state, and are now anxiously awaiting to see how his predictions will carry in the present case. We enjoyed Bro. Chase's call very much; optimistic manner is an inspiration always and his broad smile, large heart and geniality sticks out all over him,—and that's going some.

John C. Berry, of Plymouth, the veteran insurance agent, who has for a long term of years been traveling up and down our state, was in town last week on a business trip. He called at the Reporter office, and naturally talked politics. Those who have known Mr. Berry very long are aware of the fact that he is a party prohibitionist, and can't quite understand why a strict temperance man (or woman) can belong to either of the two big parties and expect much along that line from them. He sees trouble ahead during the coming election and has ideas that may not be so very far from right. Knowing the history of parties as he does, makes him think seriously along this line. A most interesting talker, having a knowledge of men and events, makes his statements of facts more convincing, and creates in his listener a desire to look into matters political and economical to such an extent as will benefit himself and give him a very much better knowledge of things in general. One of the great needs of the present period is that men and women, especially the younger portion of the voters, should spend more time learning the needs of our country and state and how to get them, and not let others do their thinking for them.

Base Ball

The Antrim base ball team journeyed to East Jaffrey on Saturday last and won the game with the town team of that place five to four; the rally in the ninth inning, scoring four runs, did the trick. Thornton, pitching for the winners, fanned thirteen.

The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9—RHE
Antrim	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	4 5 8 4
E Jaffrey	0	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	1 4 6 3

Batteries—Thornton and Edwards; Craft and Garfield.

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested By What Is Happening Around

Can anybody blame certain school boards in Massachusetts for refusing to hire teachers with bobbed hair? We should say not!

A whole lot of voters hope it will be satisfactorily explained to them a little later just why so much time and attention is given to the "klan" plank in the New York Democratic convention. It is either of great political consequence or it must be a very important plank upon which the party thinks it will ride into power.

Pretty hard lines when you can't park your auto near a town hall while a dance is in progress without keeping a guard over it. One was stolen last Friday night in an adjoining town while the owner was in the hall enjoying the pleasures of the evening. Later it was learned where the auto was—a number of miles away—and the owner now has it in his possession again.

The Reporter man had the pleasure of meeting Norris H. Cotton, editor of the Granite Monthly, a short time since and enjoyed a pleasant chat with him. At that time we thought we were talking with the new superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, and think he would have made an excellent man for the position for his excellent qualifications peculiarly fit him for such a position; we regretted to learn that he felt he could not take on the responsibilities of this position at the present time.

With the tax bill and the bonus measure disposed of by Congress for the time being, it is quite probable that the tariff will be dragged in as an issue for the next Congress. It is going to be different to play partisan politics with this issue, as the public realizes that a reasonable tariff to protect American workmen and industries from ruinous competition is a matter of good business regardless of party affiliations. Many of our industries depend for their existence on a tariff which will give them an even break in the home market with foreign goods produced with cheap labor. Considered from this angle, the tariff question is not a political issue.

Not since 1906—the year of the San Francisco catastrophe—has there been such a heavy fire loss in this country as in 1923, when losses totaled approximately $508,000,000. In spite of this, the average fire insurance rate has declined from $1.03 per $100 in 1914 to 90 cents per $100 in 1923. President Smith of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, before the annual meeting of that organization, declared that 75 per cent of all fires could be prevented by exercise of ordinary care. He added: "No country, however rich in created wealth, can continue to support such an enormous drain on its resources. Our wealth of today will surely be affected if we do not, as a nation, dam this annual waste." The people rely upon insurance as protection against financial losses and overlook their own individual responsibility to prevent fires which destroy thousands of lives annually in addition to physical property.

There is not a country paper published which does not, in its boosting of its community, in its service to the public, in its support of local and rural public enterprises, print matter which, if paid for, would come to many, many times as much as any of these newspapers get out of legal advertising, says an Exchange.

CHIROPRACTIC TALK NO. 10

"KNOW YOUR SPINE"

The most important structure in your body, and the one you know the least about, is your backbone. Millions of people go through life absolutely ignorant of the anatomical formation of the spine; therefore, they do not realize the importance of spinal subluxations.

The spine has to bear every twist, strain, jar and fall. These things are what cause the spinal segments to become misaligned, and this misalignment causes pressure on the trunk nerves as they pass between the movable parts of the spine.

CHIROPRACTIC REMOVES PRESSURE

Every man and woman who suffers from disease or abnormal condition has nerve pressure at the spine. This nerve pressure is the underlying cause of their ailments. Chiropractic removes this cause completely and finally, as is attested by hundreds of thousands of people in the United States alone. Many of these people suffered from the very sickness or disease that now has you in its grip, but today they are well, strong and vigorous.

Herbert Spencer said: "There is a principle which is bar against all information, which is proof against all arguments, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. That principle is condemnation before investigation."

If nothing has helped you so far, look into Chiropractic.

Come to either of my offices for a spinal analysis and consultation today.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democratic Convention War of Fighting Factions and Mad Tumult.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

WHEN the Democratic national convention, which opened Tuesday in Madison Square Garden, New York city, adjourned Thursday evening to Friday morning the net results were these: Two keynote speeches; many tumultuous demonstrations; a platform committee desperately struggling with seemingly insuperable complications, and an apparent deadlock between the forces of McAdoo and Smith, with favorite sons in plenty and going strong. Of the rival McAdoo and Smith demonstrations the New Yorker staged the longer and noisier. In the only test vote—that Thursday afternoon on the question of adjourning to Thursday night or Friday morning—the Smith forces won by a vote of 555½ to 513. The convention decided to stick to the two-thirds rule—which may or may not have been a victory for Smith. There are 1,098 delegates; necessary to nominate, 732. Each state is a law unto itself as to the unit rule.

As to the platform the situation was this: The subcommittee was still at work on a draft to be submitted to the full committee. This draft contained alternative planks on several controversial subjects, including the League of Nations, the Ku Klux Klan and prohibition. It was hoped to have the platform ready for the convention sometime Friday. There was every prospect of a fight on the floor over the League of Nations and Klan planks.

Those who had been placed in nomination were: Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, William Gibbs McAdoo of California, Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Willard Saulsbury, former senator from Delaware; David F. Houston, cabinet officer in the Wilson administration; Samuel M. Ralston, former governor of Indiana; Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Gov. Jonathan M. Davis of Kansas, Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris of Michigan.

THE feature of Tuesday, the opening day, was the address of Senator Pat (Byron Patton) Harrison of Mississippi, temporary chairman and official keynoter. In congressional life he is "chief bear-baiter" of the Republicans—a party duty which he cheerfully performs with his tongue in his cheek. But nothing like that here. His tongue was hung in the middle with both ends working. He lambasted. He flayed. He blistered. He charged the Republican party with responsibility for pretty nearly all the evils of the day, except the World war and the foot-and-mouth disease. Exhausted by his own eloquence, he brought in an artful and eloquent reference to Woodrow Wilson and sat down to rest and receive congratulations for 13 minutes by the watch while the vast assemblage made demonstration of regard for the dead leader. Then he brought his keynote to a brass-band close.

Wednesday Thomas J. Walsh, United States senator from Montana, tireless watcher beside the ill-fated Teapot Dome and a dark horse with many admirers, took command of the convention as permanent chairman and made the second keynote speech. The committee on platform not being ready to report—for many and divers reasons—Chairman Walsh started the nominations.

Alabama nominated Senator Oscar W. Underwood, its stock-in-trade being Forney Johnston of Birmingham. Underwood is the original anti-Klan man. Johnston led artfully up to a climax where he named the Ku Klux Klan right out in meeting. A large part of the convention thereupon went plumb crazy in a long, riotous anti-Klan demonstration marked by parades and fist fights. Its significance was that it was spontaneous and not staged.

Arkansas nominated Senator Joseph T. Robinson through Gov. Charles T. Brough.

THEN came California and McAdoo. Former Senator James D. Phelan (1915-21), chosen because he is a Roman Catholic, made the nomination while the great crowd got set for the demonstration to follow. It started at 3:30 with staged and boosted accessories and spontaneous fist fights—it was in part a pro-Klan demonstration. At 4:35 it was still going strong with the Smith forces trying to drown out the McAdoo shouters and the band inaudible. Then George Brennan of Illinois, in command of the anti-McAdoo forces, caught the eye of Chairman Walsh, and moved to adjourn. Walsh declared it carried without consulting the milling and shouting crowd.

Thursday was Smith day. Connecticut yielding to New York. Four years ago a vigorous young man seconded the nomination of Smith at San Francisco and won for himself the vice presidential nomination. Thursday this same young man, Franklin D. Roosevelt, manager of the Smith campaign, fighting against the inroads of infantile paralysis, had virtually to be carried to the platform to make the nomination. The convention paid him a fine personal tribute. The Smith demonstration which followed lasted from 12:30 to 1:55 and was the wildest and noisiest ever staged in a national convention. The McAdoo forces said it at least explained the puzzle of the 1924 convention, "Who got the tickets?"

HARLAN F. STONE, the new attorney general of the United States, filed suit Wednesday in the United States District court in Chicago, charging the Standard Oil companies of eight states and 44 other oil companies with violation of the anti-trust act. Yes; this is the Sherman anti-trust act and the Standard Oil company of 1911, when Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis said "Guilty" and imposed a fine of $29,000,000. The petition is aimed primarily at the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, parent organization of the series of corporations into which the old company was split, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana (covering the 15 Central states); the Texas company, the Gasoline Products company and the Standard Development company.

The other interests named in the bill, including the Standard Oil companies of California, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, New York and Ohio, are termed "secondary defendants" and are concerned as holders of contracts with the five "primary defendants."

Specifically, the charges allege that the defendants are "engaged in a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations in gasoline, kerosene and other hydrocarbon products."

UNITED STATES Ambassador Kellogg at London was instructed Wednesday from Washington to attend the allied conference of premiers to be held July 16 in London to discuss execution of the Dawes plan. The statement given out at the White House was as follows:

"It is the desire of the administration that the Dawes plan should be put into effect as speedily as possible. This is the first essential step to economic recovery abroad in which this country is vitally interested. It is with this in view that in response to the invitation extended by Prime Minister MacDonald, instructions have been given to Ambassador Kellogg to attend the conference in London on July 16 for the purpose of dealing with such matters as affect the interests of the United States, and otherwise for purposes of information. Colonel Logan will go to London to assist the ambassador."

It is now expected that in attendance will be Premier MacDonald of Great Britain, Premier Herriot of France, Premier Theunis of Belgium, Premier Mussolini of Italy and Baron Hayashi, Japanese ambassador to the Court of St. James.

LIEUT. RUSSELL MAUGHAN, United States army aviator, flew from New York to San Francisco Monday in 21 hours and 48 minutes. Seventy-two years ago Ezra Meeker crossed the continent in five months and is still alive and telling about his record journey.

So the span of a single life covers the transportation development of America from the ox team and covered wagon at two miles an hour to the airplane at 156 miles. In between are the stage coach, pony express, railroad and the march of the American people across the continent.

Maughan, in accomplishing the seemingly impossible, won fame for himself and prestige for the air service and for his country. His flight is epochal, from both military and commercial viewpoints. Incidentally, a transcontinental all-night air-mail service goes into effect next Tuesday.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy, whose speedy downfall had been predicted by his opponents as the result of the abduction and murder of Socialist Matteotti, is today more than ever his country's national hero. Incidentally he confounded the prophets and set all diplomatic Europe agape by his magnificent gift to the Italian people. In an epochal address before the senate Tuesday, confirmed by an address Wednesday to the Fascisti majority in the lower house, he promised to reform the Fascist government and to return to constitutional parliamentary government. He promised this:

"First, I will cause the institution of parliament to function regularly and nobly as an organ of legislative power, restoring to it its capacity and its prestige.

"Second, I will regularize under the constitution the situation of the national militia.

"Third, I will repress the superimposed illegalisms in the organization of the Fascist party.

Even the Socialists do not doubt Mussolini's sincerity and good faith. By giving up the dictatorship he is apparently more powerful than ever.

GEN. JAMES BARRY HERTZOG Tuesday accepted the premiership of the Union of South Africa, succeeding Premier Jan Christian Smuts, resigned. Smuts, soldier-statesman, reckoned in other parts of the British empire as one of the greatest figures of his time, is the champion of the policy of strict allegiance to the British home government. Hertzog, the Nationalist-Labor leader, is champion of the movement of the South African party to establish an independent Dutch-governed republic. The recent election campaign was fought on this issue. The result was a substantial majority in parliament for the South African party. Thus the first avowedly republican government in the British empire will soon be in existence. It is apparently a second blow at the principle of imperial unity. It will be remembered that Premier King of Canada declined to submit to parliament the treaty made by Great Britain with Turkey—the so-called Lausanne treaty—on the ground that Canada had no share in making it.

BRIG. GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES, Republican candidate for vice president, will have his first conference with President Coolidge Tuesday. He and Mrs. Dawes will be guests at the White House for several days. Chairman William M. Butler of the Republican national committee and other leaders will attend the conference. At an Association of Commerce meeting before leaving Chicago General Dawes said that he would make no speeches until the campaign opened, when he would do "his best." Presumably "Hell Maria" Dawes can be relied upon to enliven the campaign.

Chairman Butler Thursday in New York began to arrange for the opening of eastern headquarters for the Republican campaign. He said the Coolidge clubs of the country would be organized and centralized in a bureau at New York, as an adjunct to the campaign.

The Democrats are "chortling with glee" over an alleged discovery in connection with the appointment of William Hodges, a Denver lawyer, as treasurer of the Republican national committee. They expect to link up Republican funds with Wall street through the fact that Hodges was a classmate at Columbia law school with Dwight Morrow, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., who was a classmate of President Coolidge at Amherst.

NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE NEWS

For Child Labor Amendment

Capt. John G. Winant, Republican candidate for Governor, has issued a statement favoring adoption by the state of the proposed federal amendment relating to child labor.

Counsel Pardons War Vet

The governor and council voted a pardon to Claude M. Gillespie, war veteran of Hooksett, on account of illness. He was serving a sentence for aggravated assault, completing six months of it.

Pardons were refused to John Robinson of Exeter, serving a sentence for arson, and Bert Michelson of Concord, for robbery.

"Blue Ribbon Children"

"We raise blue ribbon cattle, why not blue ribbon children," was the slogan of the health demonstration staged at Cold Spring park, Rochester, at the eighth day's session of the second annual camp meeting and conference of the New England conference, comprising the states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, of the Seventh Day Adventist Association.

Inheritance Tax Valid

The New Hampshire inheritance tax law, enacted in 1919, has been declared unconstitutional by the state supreme court. The decision is interpreted by lawyers to mean that the state must pay back several hundred thousands of dollars that have been collected under the provisions of the act in the last few years.

The 1919 law, frankly a revenue producing measure fathered as an administration bill by Gov. Bartlett, amended the 1903 law, providing for an equal tax, by making a graded tax, pyramiding as the estates increased in value.

The state's income more than doubled the first year it was in operation and each year has seen a larger revenue. The court's ruling is that the old 5 per cent collateral tax is still in effect, an amendment by the 1915 Legislature to the 1903 act being held valid.

Arrest Man for 16 Robberies

George Makepeace, of Savaryville, Mass., arrested hiding in an attic at his home by police officers is wanted for 16 different robberies in New Hampshire towns. He was arrested on a fugitive warrant, which specifically charged him with breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Sarah George, 103 years old, at West Hampstead, N. H., during the latter part of May. Antiques valued at more than $1,000 were stolen from the George home.

Makepeace was arraigned before Judge John J. Winn in central district court Haverhill, Mass., on the fugitive warrant, he refusing to be extradited.

Wife of Killed Ex-Consul in New Hampshire

David Montt, former Chilean consul at Boston, was killed in an automobile accident at Sao Paulo, Brazil, June 20, according to a message received by members of his family from the American consul at Sao Paulo.

Montt, who was 34 years of age, was a nephew of a former president of Chile. He was graduated at the Masachusetts Institute of Technology and five years ago was sent to Buenos Aires as representative of the First National bank of Boston. A year ago he went to Brazil to direct construction of a group of factories for a Chicago syndicate.

Mrs. Montt and their four children are at present at Hebron, N. H.

P. S. C. Grants Three Petitions for Dams

Three decisions on petitions filed for the construction or reconstruction of dams have been given by the Public Service Commission.

The Monadnock Paper mills are given authority to increase the height of the Powder Mill dam in the Contoocook river at Bennington and the Breed Pond company will be permitted to raise the level of the dam at the outlet of Howe reservoir in the town of Harrisville.

The Ashuelot Gas and Electric company is authorized to construct a dam in the north branch of Minnewawa brook in Marlboro.

The state commission decided that it would be in the public interest to grant all these petitions.

To Send Children to Farms for Two Weeks

The Nashua Fresh Air campaign of the Community council will start July 5th, according to plans announced by the secretary. At that time about 30 children will be sent to farms for a vacation of at least two weeks.

The council has already sent two crippled children to Marblehead, Mass., where they will spend the summer in a health camp.

Boy Broker in Put Under Ban

The Massachusetts state department of public utilities issued an order under the "blue sky" law, prohibiting Frank A. Mahoney, "the boy broker," of Concord, N. H., who has been doing business in Boston, from selling securities of any kind in Massachusetts. The order followed an investigation of complaints made to the department by several women that they had turned over gilt-edged stock and had received practically nothing in return.

Declines Anti-Saloon Head

Norris H. Cotton, managing editor of the Granite Monthly, declined the tendered position of superintendent of the New Hampshire Anti-Saloon league. To members of the committee that formally offered him the place, he said:

"The position which you offer me is one which carries with it a challenge for any young man. The task which falls to your organization is that of arousing the full force of public opinion to aid in the enforcement of the nation's laws. I appreciate this fact and therefore am fully cognizant of the honor you do me in tendering me the superintendency of the New Hampshire Anti-Saloon league.

"My realization of the importance of the work, however, causes me to feel that certain responsibilities which I now have would prevent my doing it justice. Therefore, with regret I must decline the trust."

Shows Gain for Wool Growers

The official report of the New Hampshire Cooperative Market association for the wool pool of the 1923 season shows a decided advantage gained by the members of the association. According to the final figures the members received prices ranging from 25 to 50 per cent higher than was originally offered by the dealers in wool at the time the pool was formed.

The report also shows that approximately 85 per cent of the pool was for wool in the two highest grades, which means a marked gain to the various members.

The association is pooling more at the present time. This is for the wool of the season closing July 1.

The official price schedule for the 1923 wool clip follows: 3.8 grade, .60; 1-4, .52; L 1-4, .40; 3-8 seedy, 35; 1-4 seedy, .30; 1-s-gray, .30; 2-s-gray, .30; britch, .30.

Both Cancer "Cures" Worthless, He Says

Dr. William F. Wild of New York city, representing the American Society for the Control of Cancer, was the principal speaker at a session of the New Hampshire Medical Association, held in Manchester. He denounced both the Glover and Koch "cures" for cancer, terming them worthless. Doctors, he said, have been unable to question Glover, to obtain details about his so-called cure. He stated also that the cure of Dr. Koch also had failed to stand the test.

"There is no positive cure for cancer," he concluded. "When there is, it will be given to the world by our society."

Former Educator in N. H. Drops Dead

Frank W. Preston, 69, former president of the New Hampton Literary Institution, dropped dead in his furniture store in Concord while in conversation with one of his partners.

Mr. Preston was an educator for many years, up to 1919, when he resigned the principalship of the New Hampton school and was elected president of the board of trustees. Shortly afterward he went to Concord to live and bought an interest in the store, where he died.

He won much state celebrity in the 1911 session of the Legislature by introducing and piloting through the Preston amendment, which prohibited the transportation of liquor from license into no license territory. He served also in the 1909 and 1915 sessions, was chairman of the education committees in all three seasons and in 1915 served also on the appropriations committee.

Governor Names Young Chief Justice

John E. Young of Exeter was nominated chief justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court by Governor Brown to succeed Chief Justice Frank N. Parsons, who retires because of age the third of September.

John E. Allen of Keene was made the new justice on the bench moving to the Supreme Court from the Superior Court Bench.

To complete the Superior Court bench Robert Doe of Rollingsford was appointed.

The nominations of the governor will lay over one month and will then come up for the approval of the council.

Justice Young cannot long hold the post of chief justice of the state's highest tribunal for his own retirement by age limitation will come on Jan. 26, 1925, or in just about seven months. Justice Allen will not reach the limit of age until June 26, 1943.

The next retirement from either the Supreme of the Superior bench, by reason of age, after that of Justice Young, will be on Oct. 19, 1932, when Justice Leslie P. Snow of Rochester, will reach the age of 70, beyond which the law does not permit the justices to serve.

Unless, through the intervention of death, the judicial appointments just made will be the last in the present administration.

Fund Shows $10,000 Increase

At the annual meeting of the New Hampshire Odd Fellows' Home Corporation in Concord, Robert E. Whitney of Marlboro, ex-Mayor Henry E. Chamberlain of Concord, and Mrs. Hattie Smith of Sunapee, were elected to the board of trustees for three-year terms.

Reports presented showed an increase during the year of $10,000 in the funds which supports the home and present family there of 26. The fund for new buildings now amounts to $55,000.

An Exhibition of His Barrel Rolling Motor

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

THERE was not a madder man in all Creedon than Rex Worthy.

"I've acted like some crude farmer from Wayback," he reflected. "Well, I won't waste time crying over spilled milk, but I'll make it the motive of my life to find this Martellus Melton.

"How's motors?" inquired a jocular friend at the very next corner.

"Hump! motor," he anathematized. "I was well caught and fleeced. I guess I'll start out forthwith on my hunt of that swindler, Melton. By the time I come back maybe the joke will have lost its freshness."

One day a stranger came to Creedon. He gave out his name as Martellus Melton. He was specious enough to soon get into the good graces of Rex.

It was after he had very well won his way into the confidence of his prospective victim that Melton revealed a great secret.

"Tell you, Worthy," he said in a somewhat mysterious way, "I'm a mind to tell you what brought me down to Creedon."

"Yes, maybe I can help you," suggested Rex artlessly.

"You can if you can influence a little capital," explained Melton. "And you shan't lose by it. You know Ransom the banker and Martin the rich grocer. Introduce me to them with a good word. I've got an invention that will make millions. To be explicit, I have invented a motor on a brand-new principle. I want enough to build a working model."

"How much will it take?" asked Rex thoughtfully.

"Oh, about a thousand dollars."

"Why, I've got that much," asserted Rex.

What Melton showed Rex was a small metal box enclosing numerous wheels, cranks and rods. The next day he purchased a child's wagon and went out to the edge of town with Rex. He applied a gearing running from the axle of the wagon to the motor.

"It's a new principle," declared Melton, "a combination of springs and magnets."

And the glib schemer succeeded in convincing Rex that, built on a large scale, the motor would do wonders, got the thousand dollars and disappeared.

Rex was full of his wonderful investment and naturally told his friends about it. At the end of a week, however, receiving no word from Melton, he went to the city to investigate. After a visit to the police, Rex went back home sadly convinced that he had been deftly fleeced by a professional swindler. By sheer accident he at length became persuaded that the man he was looking for was at a little city named Macon, or somewhere near there.

It was with intense satisfaction that he located him at the hotel of a little town. According to what Rex learned, Melton had become acquainted with the family of Colonel Everts, a wealthy retired army officer whom he was interesting in a new flying machine device.

A high hill with a muddy slough at its base overlooked Prince Villa, the stately home of the colonel.

Elegantly dressed, playing the plausible man of means to the colonel and the attentive exquisite to his fair daughter, Melton finally halted and pointed up to the summit of the hill. Then after a brief conversation with the others he began its ascent.

"Coming after something," ruminated Rex. "I'll give him a welcome!"

Rex noticed nearby what seemed to be a small summer camp. There was a tent, on its table a camera and he surmised that Melton had probably come after that. There was also a barrel. As his glance fell upon this, his eye sparkled.

Melton, reaching the tent, was suddenly seized from behind and his arms pinioned. Then Rex Worthy confronted him. He did not speak a word. He simply proceeded to ransack his pockets. Melton was in funds, it seemed. From his pocketbook Rex extracted the currency it contained, nearly eight hundred dollars.

"Now then, my friend," he observed, "this much of the money you stole from me you will never see again. And I am going to give you a free ride in my motor."

In a trice he had bound Melton's feet, making him helpless. Nearby stood an empty barrel. Into it Rex forced his captive. He rolled it to a particularly slanting portion of the hill.

"Ready, go," he observed. Chug!

This last was the dismal sound that ended a great splash as the whirling barrel struck the swamp. The astonished Colonel Everts and his daughter saw their guest flung wide into view as the staves of the barrel crashed in. Deluged with mud they viewed their recent escort.

First Rex Worthy released the terrified wretch and sent him slinking on his way. Then he explained to Colonel Everts and his pretty daughter, Myrtle.

And the result was that Rex Worthy found at Prince Villa not only his stolen money, but a fond, loving sweetheart.

GLORIOUS DEED IN WAR FOR LIBERTY

How Maine Fishermen Beat Off British Warship.

Conflict That Was in Many Ways Unique in Battles on Land or Sea.

On the low-lying headland of Cape Porpoise, in the town of Kennebunkport, Maine, stands a symmetrical boulder marked by a bronze tablet commemorating a battle of the American Revolution which stands forth in the limelight of history as one of the most unusual and extraordinary fought in the great war for liberty.

The tablet, erected by Maine State Council, D. A. R., on the 139th anniversary of the battle, bears the legend:

"August 8, 1782, a British Ship of 18 guns attacked a small force of inhabitants gathered on Goat Island and was driven away by severe musketry fire, losing 17 men. Lieut. James Burnham of this town was killed."

The march of seven-score years has dealt gently with the cape whose rocky slopes echoed to the wild whoops of Indian warriors a century before they cast back the sullen boom of British cannon. For this is historic ground.

Yonder on Stage island, beleaguered fishermen fought long and desperately against overwhelming hordes of savages until heroic Nick Morey—crippled in limb, but stout of heart—made his perilous night voyage in a leaky skiff to Portsmouth, 25 miles away to summon reinforcements, which arrived when the last split bullet was rammed home on the last charge of powder.

Worthy of Remembrance.

Only the bare facts of the battle of August 8, 1782, have been recorded and few historians have mentioned the affair. Its effect on the nation's destiny was slight, indeed, and perhaps for this reason it has been ignored by many and briefly dealt with by others; but the battle of Goat Island is deserving of more attention, for it is perhaps the only instance of the Revolution where untrained soldiers, armed with muskets, defeated a ship-of-war whose crew outnumbered them ten to one.

Such information as is obtainable by exhaustive research leads one to believe that the day preceding the battle was clear and warm, with a northwesterly breeze ruffling the bay. People in the fishing village of Cape Porpoise had gone about their daily tasks as usual, and when the evening shadows lengthened they sat in front of their cottages or gathered in little groups to discuss the latest news from Washington's army, brought by courier from Falmouth or York, or gleaned from a Portsmouth fishing smack, which some one had spoken on the fishing grounds that day.

Oarsman Shouts Warning.

Suddenly a boat was seen coming across the bay. From the manner in which the oarsman dipped his blades and bent his back, watchers sensed something unusual and conversation lagged as they walked down to the wharf to meet him. He saw them gathering, and when a hundred yards from shore the boatman turned his head to shout: "A British ship-o'-war off shore and heading this way!"

Where all had been peace and security confusion and alarm now reigned. Never before had Cape Porpoise been visited by the enemy. The very unexpectedness of the impending attack struck terror to the hearts of many. There could be but one meaning: the British had come to fire and ravage the village.

Defense there was none. All that remained was to save all they could and retreat to the woods until the enemy had departed, leaving smoldering embers of what had once been comfortable homes.

People rushed to their houses, to gather such valuables and goods as they could save. No one dreamed of armed resistance until James Burnham assured them by calling out that the enemy would not dare sail boldly into an unknown harbor while the shades of night were fast falling, but would stand off shore during the hours of darkness and cautiously sound his way between the islands in the morning.

James Burnham was a brave man. He was from York and had played an important part in events of that time. He was a lieutenant in the militia and had seen some service in the war. His courage was communicated to others and in a short time his plans were perfected for active resistance. Many of the men were absent in the army, but he succeeded in organizing a force which appears to have numbered less than 20—about one man for each gun on the man-o'-war.

Burnham's prediction about the British ship proved correct. She hovered offshore and when night fell her lights could be seen on the water.

Make Stand on Goat Island.

Burnham rowed across to Goat island. There was little sleep on the island that night. They had brought food and drink—and needed both. When the sun peeped up from his bed in the ocean there was a curved line of rude earthworks on the island shore.

If they were noticed by the English commander, he seems to have regarded them with contempt. No man was to be seen on the island and thought of battle was remote from British minds when they stood cautiously into the channel and began throwing lead.

Deadly Musketry Fire.

Then came a puff of smoke from the rocks on shore and a puny musket shot echoed over the water. The leadsman toppled and fell. Another took his place, and he dropped when a second musket spoke from shore.

Clear and loud sounded the British bugle. Sailors manned the guns and sent solid shot hissing through the air. Some screamed overhead, while others kicked up sand and stones or plunged into the breastworks.

There was no fear in the hearts of the brave old fishermen of Cape Porpoise. Hugging their cover they rammed home bullets and drove them straight at sailors on deck or through open portholes. They were fighting for homes and loved ones these grim-faced, sharp-shooting sons of old Maine.

Twenty hours before every man of them would have ridiculed the idea of such a one-sided fight, but now they had forgotten all about odds against them and picked their marks with deadly accuracy. The big guns on board were thundering as they leaped from deck, almost pulling iron ringbolts from oak with their recoil. Shouts, yells, curses and screams of agony came to their ears from the smoke-enveloped ship.

Women Pray for Victory.

On the headland old men and children watched with bated breath while women prayed silently for a victory none dared hope for. Out on Goat Island muskets were hot from firing and men were fighting who had forgotten all about numbers and cannon, even life itself, in their desperate, unshakable determination to prevent the British from destroying their village.

On board decks were running red with blood. Seventeen men had fallen when the British captain gave the order that sent his ship scurrying before the off-shore breeze—an 18-gun ship-o'-war, driven off by a score of hardy, fearless sharpshooters.

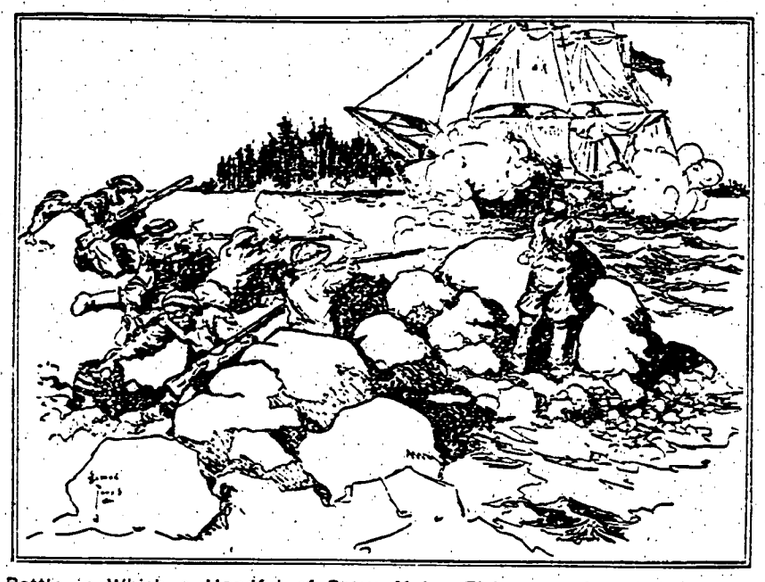
The Americans lost only one man. Lieutenant Burnham, in his anxiety to find a good mark, leaped to the breastworks and stood, musket in hand, when a musketball sped by a marine pierced him and he fell.

As a battle the affair at Cape Porpoise was neither great nor long, nor productive of tremendous results. For stark fighting, muskets against cannon, land forces against naval, and untrained soldiers against overwhelming numbers of disciplined sailors, it should be treasured forever in the archives of American history.

Unique as a Battle.

Soldiers on land have fought sailors on water before and since; but perhaps this battle is unique. Ours is a glorious history, a history bright with deeds of heroism and devotion sublime, but it records few instances in which a handful of raw militia defeated a fully-manned and heavily armed man-of-war.

And so, as one stands by the boulder on Cape Porpoise and reads the inscription thereon, there comes, with the tang of the sea and cries of low-flying gulls an inspiration. Eyes are lifted to rest on Goat Island and in fancy one visions the scene of long ago, and his pulse will quicken and his blood tingle with patriotic pride as he pictures the stirring spectacle of a handful of sturdy fishermen pitted in a death-grapple with scores of trained cannoneers.—Boston Sunday Herald.



Battle in Which a Handful of Brave Maine Fishermen, Armed Only With Muskets, Drove Powerful British Warship to Ignominious Flight.

Weak and Miserable?

Is a lame, aching back keeping you miserable? Are you tortured with sharp, stabbing pains? Feel weak, tired—"all-played-out"? Then look to your kidneys, for these are common signs of kidney weakness. There may be headaches and dizziness, too. Don't risk serious kidney sickness. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Massachusetts Case

Mrs. Nellie Parnell, 47 Richmond Street, Weymouth, Mass., says: "I was in a bad condition with my kidneys. They felt sore and heavy, and also acted too freely. I was languid and tired, and could hardly stoop on account of sharp pains in the small of my back. I used Doan's Pills and they completely rid me of the trouble."

Cows Too Radical in Changing Diet

Seven cows in Klickitat county, on the new North Bank highway, sought to emulate goats and ate a quantity of paper wrappings of dynamite left after blasting operations, and died.

The owner conceived his loss to be due to carelessness of highway workmen in not cleaning up the remnants and residue of the explosives rather than the fault of the cows in making such a radical change in diet, says an Olympia (Wash.) dispatch to the New York World.

He billed James Allen, state highway engineer, for payment of the seven cows. Allen passed the account to Attorney General Dunbar, who coyly slipped it into the desk of Governor Hart. The latter hunted through the statute books and failed to find a clause creating a liability upon the state. Governor Hart, being a farmer, is interested mostly in the question, Why should dynamite wrapping paper prove appetizing to bovines, as well as deadly?

Somewhat Personal

A young man, sitting on the back porch steps at his home in North Pennsylvania street, the other day, exposing his prematurely bald head to the "life-giving power of the sun's rays," looked up to behold his neighbor's three-year-old son William regarding him intently.

"What's on your mind, William?" the man asked.

William was slow to answer, but his reply was full of meaning.

"You look like Mutt," he said, and then went on with his play.—Indianapolis News.

To Make Hammers Last

If you have a hammer the head of which keeps flying off, sandpaper the handle, replace the head, drive in wedges in the usual H form, and then boil the hammer slowly in linseed oil for about three hours. Treated in this way a hammer should last a lifetime without trouble of any sort, says Popular Science Monthly.

Aluminum is passing through the same stage as Enameled Ware experienced in the earlier days of its use, when customers thought anything that was enameled was alike in quality and a lot of light weight Enameled Ware was put on the market, much of which was too light in weight to be durable, and those purchasing it became disgusted with Enameled Ware and required a long period to find it had to be high grade to be satisfactory. You may have had experience with the thin soft Aluminum which is now being sold in great quantities.

Price paid is not the true test—cost per year of service is the real thing. WEAREVER FOR SATISFACTION.

MAKES GRACEFUL ACCESSORY; SUMMER FROCKS FOR GIRLS

THERE is a song of old which says: "In tying her ribbons under her chin, she caught a young man's heart therein." According to modern version it would be a case of tying her silk knit scarf about her throat, with a grace and coquetry sure to bring a responsive smile of admiration from even the most unsusceptible.

Surely a mania for scarf wearing has taken possession of the fashion world. Especially in the field of knitted outerwear does the scarf triumph as a graceful accessory in feminine favor. The modish one shown in the picture is knitted in white with wide stripes of brilliant green, showing a smart monogram in the same vivid hue. This is the sort of scarf one would expect to wear with one's tailored suit or as an article of sportswear. Other of these swagger knitted scarfs are gay in Roman stripes or Scotch plaid. It is the fashion to choose one's scarf to match in coloring the predominating shade in one's hat. For instance, a cloche with powder blue facing, finds a corresponding blue predominating in the knitted scarf which milady wears choker fashion, bringing the fringed ends to the front.

Knitted Scarf Is Graceful Accessory.

Because a scarf is knitted, it does not follow that it is only suitable for sports wear. Some of the flimsiest summery creations are knit in a cobweb like lacy stitch, adorable in exquisite tones and tints. These are wide and long piece frocks, which are at present ultra-modish. Let imagination visualize a pale citron yellow, knitted straightline dress, with which is worn a sheer lace knit scarf in deep orange, the same sliding one end under a narrow black patent leather belt.

Little girls' frocks express the very essence of simplicity this season. A matter of concentrated loveliness are they in their refinement of exquisite handwork and fabric. Straight and full from the shoulders, thus does Madame Fashion issue her orders in regard to tiny tots' dresses. Indeed, just mere sleeveless slips are many of the junior modes, but oh! how cunningly devised are they.

The materials selected are of the daintiest sheerest sort, fine dotted swiss, batiste, and organdie. Foremost in the favored list are printed voiles which accent their appeal by being made up in unaffected simplicity.

There is the fascination of unsophisticated charm in the pretty little frock in the picture, which is in harmony with the style trend of keeping children's apparel strictly simple. It is white with scarlet printings in star-like all-over designs. The hem of the skirt undulates in shallow scallops bound in soft white ribbon machine-stitched with red silk thread. A corresponding ribbon binding defines sleeve edges and the neck, where it culminates in a tie with long floating streamers.

Simplicity in Summer Frocks.

No matter how simple the frock, it must be artistically designed, achieving effect through color scheme and fine detail. Gay embroideries which maintain a typically childlike character play a prominent part in the designing of youthful dresses.

Berthas of the material of the frock or of lace, forming an epaulet effect over the shoulders are prominent in the latest dress designs for little girls.

Really Good Tennis Players in Country

William T. Tilden remarked recently that in touring the country last year he was astonished at the number of really good tennis players to be found in localities that had never been mentioned in tennis circles. No one around Boston, New York and Philadelphia, acknowledged tennis centers of the United States, had ever heard of these players.

Professional golfers, traveling from city to city, playing exhibition matches, find excellent golfers in remote parts of the country, men showing genuine talent.

Some of the best football players in the land are members of "fresh water" college teams and the stars of baseball, at least a great number of them, come from places that are included only on the enlarged maps.

LUIS ANGEL FIRPO WON FORTUNE EASY

Argentine Boxer Struck at Opportune Time.

No boxer in the history of the ring ever had such a sensational rise to prominence or made so much money in such a short time as did Luis Angel Firpo. It is probable that no boxer ever will find conditions so suitable as Firpo did for his elevation from a $10 fighter to one worth a half million.

Boxers with more ability than Firpo may lack the size and color that the Angel turned into a fortune in one year. Boxers in the future with the same color and romance and much more ability may never find the opportunity that Firpo found when he just stumbled into it.

Firpo was the first South American fighter to become famous. Since he became famous he started a vogue for South American fighters, and, in a few years, there will be no novelty in watching or reading about South American fights. It is possible that Brazilian or Argentine fighters may earn a reputation for being cheese fighters and will be given no opportunity in the United States.

Firpo happened to spring up at a time when promoters were looking for another million-and-a-half-dollar gate, like Tex Rickard pulled with the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. It was the thought that the international character of the Dempsey-Carpentier bout was what would have to be provided to get another vast outpouring of the boxing public.

There were no great foreign fighters available until Firpo showed up and Rickard, with more foresight than any other promoter, grabbed him and rushed him along into a great fortune.

His record at Tia Juana of 56 winners, 44 seconds and 38 thirds has given him official rating among American jockeys as second to Ivan Parke. He will appear on the eastern circuits this summer.

George Walker, trainer of the International stable and for seven years leading money winner among trainers in Europe, has taken a keen interest in Wood and aided in developing him. Walker believes the youth eventually will take his place among the great riders of the American turf.

Shocker Would Reserve Energy for Emergency

Too many pitchers make the mistake of putting everything behind every ball they pitch, says Urban Shocker, pitcher, St. Louis Browns.

To use baseball slang, they bear down from the start of the game to the finish, regardless of the score.

There is nothing that takes so much out of a pitcher as wasted effort.

I make it a point to adapt my pitching to the score of the game. If I happen to have a six or seven-run lead in the latter part of the game, I pitch an entirely different game from that I would pitch if leading by a run.

My suggestion is to conserve your energy at all times and try to have something in reserve for the pinch.

A pitching threat is a most effective weapon.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Mrs. Shaw Calls Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a God-Send to Sick Women

Cambridge, Maine.—"I suffered terribly with pains and soreness in my sides. Each month I had to go to bed, and the doctor told me I simply had to go under an operation before I could get help. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I told my husband one day to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I took the third dose I felt better. I took it four times a day for two years, getting better all the time, and now for four years I don't have any pains. After taking the medicine for two years I had another child—a lovely baby girl now four years old—the life of our home. I do praise this medicine. It is a Godsend to women who suffer with female troubles and especially for pains at the periods. I surely was very bad once, and I know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation."—Mrs. JOSIE M. SHAW, Route No. 1, Cambridge, Maine.

Immortal Epic

The Niebelungen-Lied is a famous German epic poem of unknown authorship consisting of ancient ballads, termed sagas. In its present form it dates from the middle of the Twelfth century. It is divided into two parts, the first ending with the death of Seigfried and the second with the death of Kriemhild, his widow. Interest in the Niebelungen-Lied declined after the Reformation, but revived at the close of the Eighteenth century; it was not, however, until the early part of the Nineteenth century that scholars realized the great literary treasures contained in this poem. Richard Wagner founded his musical drama entitled "The Ring of the Nibelungen" on this epic.

FOODS KEPT COOL WITHOUT USING ICE

Refrigerator Is Convenient in Rural Districts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cold air, cool water, and heat-tight containers are the chief aids in keeping foods cold in rural districts, or, wherever it is impossible to obtain ice, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The principle of using cold air is illustrated in the window box, the cellar shaft, and the storage cave.

The most convenient kind of window box fits on the window ledge close up to the window, preferably on the north side of the house. It should be made dust and fly proof and must allow for ventilation.

The air in the cellar is cool and may be used for cooling foods, provided the cellar is clean, ventilated, and screened to keep out flies. Open the windows and doors every day, or in very hot weather every night, to allow cool, fresh air to enter. A north room in the cellar with well-insulated walls is good for general storage. A dumb-waiter leading down from the pantry or kitchen adds to the convenience of a cellar storeroom.

An Iceless Refrigerator.

A shaft made of wood and plaster and extending from the cellar through the roof is another device utilizing the cool air of the cellar. This is particularly adapted to a cool, dry climate. Wire or perforated shelves are fitted into the shaft at convenient heights where it passes through the kitchen or pantry, and here is also a door opening from the shaft. As the air in the upper part of the shaft grows warmer, the cool air from the cellar is drawn up. This constant upward movement of colder air cools the food on the shelves. Where there is no suitable cellar the shaft may open through the wall of the house just above the ground. Both ends of the shaft should be screened.

A cave dug in the side of a hill maintains a fairly low temperature. It should be lined with cement, brick, or some other dry, clean material; it should have a well-fitted door or possibly a double door; and it should have some means of ventilation.

Water helps to cool food in various ways. Food may be kept cool by placing the dish in cold water and changing the water as it becomes warm. In moderate weather such treatment keeps milk sweet and butter firm for a considerable time. Foods hot from the fire may be cooled in this way before they are put into the ice chest.

Water as it evaporates absorbs heat. This fact is taken advantage of in keeping food cool by wrapping the dish in a cloth saturated with water and also in the iceless refrigerator. In cooling by the evaporation of water, the quicker the evaporation the more heat absorbed and the lower the temperature. Quick evaporation depends upon a good draft of dry air; in damp, muggy weather these devices do not work well. Farmers' Bulletin 927, Farm Home Conveniences, gives directions for making iceless refrigerators.

An unglazed earthenware flowerpot inverted in a dish of water makes a miniature iceless refrigerator, convenient where only small amounts of food need to be cooled. There are now on the market similar porous coolers specially adapted to cover a milk bottle. The unglazed earthenware water coolers used in some hot countries work on the same principle, cooling the water by evaporation through the pores in the earthenware.

A house or box built over a spring or brook is another contrivance for keeping foods cool.

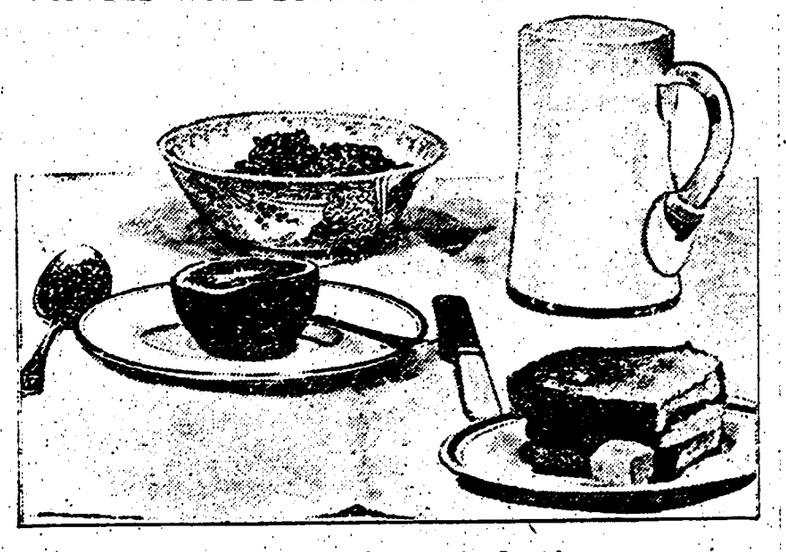
A well may be used for cooling foods. If it is one used to supply drinking water, great care must be taken not to let food fall into the water. An extra well may be used for the purpose.

Heat-tight containers keep small amounts of food cool. Fireless cookers and vacuum-jacketed bottles are well insulated and close tightly so that the temperature in them changes very slowly. They may be used for keeping foods cool as well as hot. Chill foods thoroughly before putting them into the containers. If a little ice is put into the well of a fireless cooker, the food will remain cool longer. Crushed ice also aids in chilling the contents of a vacuum-jacketed bottle, but it must be put in carefully to avoid cracking the fragile lining.

Boiled Chicken Can Be Served on Shortcake

Cook the less tender chickens by boiling, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. It is best to disjoint the chicken when it is to be prepared in this way. Pinfeathers, the oil sac, and surplus fat should be removed and the fine hairs singed. After being well washed the parts may be put immediately into boiling water sufficient to cover them and seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Many cooks consider that a clove of garlic in the stewing water gives an almost imperceptible flavor, which improves the flatness of ordinary boiled chicken. A small onion is sometimes made to answer the same purpose, but too much onion destroys the delicate flavor of the chicken. After it has been cooked until tender, boiled chicken may be prepared for the table in a variety of ways. It may be fricasseed in a gravy made from the chicken stock, or served en casserole. If removed from the bones it may be served in a cream sauce on toast, or in patty shells. It may be used for chicken salad. Croquettes of minced cooked chicken are good, as is chicken hash on toast. A very good way to serve creamed boned chicken or chicken in gravy is on split biscuits or "shortcake."

ORANGES WILL SUPPLY NECESSARY VITAMINS



Orange Juice Is Excellent for Breakfast.

Oranges were never better in flavor or sweetness than they are this season. There are many small ones on the market, purchasable for a lower relative price than the large sizes. They are just as good for most household purposes as bigger ones, and are more economical. Orange juice and oranges may be introduced into the menu in so many different ways that the family will not tire of them. For the children oranges are a valuable food, supplying necessary vitamins in an acceptable form.

Oranges may be cut, or pure orange juice may be served in glasses for breakfast. Orangeade, punch, or any fruit beverage in which orange predominates, is suitable for lunch, at afternoon or evening gatherings, at card parties, dances, or sociables. Give the children orangeade made from pure orange juice when they come in hot and thirsty, from play.

Mixed Fruit Gelatin.

Use pure orange juice for making orange gelatin or any of the mixed fruit gelatins. A dainty way to send orange jelly to an invalid is to scoop out the contents of one orange, leaving the rind a basket shape, and to fill this with the jelly when ready to mold it.

Orange tarts or other ways of serving sliced oranges in custard are good. Orange cake filling and icing is always delicious when made with the pure fruit juice. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making an uncooked orange icing:

Orange Icing.

1 egg white, beaten stiff	1¾ cupfuls sugar
Grated rind of one small orange	Pinch salt: ½ teaspoonful lemon juice
1 tablespoonful orange juice	1 tablespoonful cold water

Add the water to the egg white and beat until stiff. Gradually add nearly all the sugar, beating with a spoon. Then add the grated orange rind, the orange and lemon juice and the remainder of the sugar and beat all smooth.

Save More Pigs to Reduce Cost

Success of Hog Raising Depends on Getting Youngsters to Weaning Period.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is apparently greater opportunity to make a saving on the cost of producing pork by increasing the number of pigs weaned per sow than there is by improvement in some other phases of the hog-production process. This is indicated in a study recently completed by the Department of Agriculture of the cost of producing hogs in 1921 and 1922 in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

Most farmers know that much of the success of their hog raising operations depends on the way in which they bring young pigs through the suckling period. Apparently, however, many have not understood the degree to which this part of the work surpasses other parts in relative importance. Usually hog raisers are better at feeding out stuff than they are in handling brood sows. Improved management of brood sows, says the Department of Agriculture, offers big chances for increased rewards.

Variation in Cost.

Information obtained in regard to the spring pig crop on about 150 corn belt farms in 1922 showed that the number of sows farrowing pigs was only about 86 per cent of the number actually bred. Wide variation also existed in the cost of production per pig at weaning time on the farms raising the lowest number of pigs per sow and the cost on the farms raising the largest number. Thus in 1922 the cost per pig, at the age of ten weeks, on the farms where fewer than four pigs were raised per sow was $9.10, whereas on farms weaning from six to eight pigs per sow the cost per pig was only $4.94. The cost of producing 100 pounds of pork on those farms weaning less than four pigs per sow was $7.98, compared with only $6.61 on farms weaning from six to eight per sow.

These wide variations of cost are emphasized when the profits are expressed in terms of return per bushel of corn fed to hogs. In central Iowa the most efficient one-fourth of the farmers averaged 93 cents a bushel from feeding corn to hogs. The least efficient one-fourth of the farmers received only 39 cents a bushel for the corn fed to hogs. One-half of the farmers between these extremes averaged 63 cents return per bushel of corn. In Indiana during the same year the return per bushel was $1.21 for the best farmers and 48 cents for the least efficient.

Cause of Pig Losses.

The following table shows causes of pig losses between farrowing and weaning in per cent of pigs farrowed. It covers the 150 farms included in the study:

	Per Cent of Pigs Farrowed
Overlaid	15.15

It is evident, says the department, that some of the pigs lost might have been saved with proper care and management. Proof that there is room for improvement in this respect is shown by a comparison between the number of pigs saved on the 25 per cent of farms which were the least efficient in this matter, and the number saved on the 25 per cent which were the most efficient. In eastern Iowa and western Illinois in 1922, on 25 per cent of the farms saving the least little pigs only 48 out of every one hundred farrowed were alive at weaning time. Among the 25 per cent of the farms saving the largest number of little pigs there were 90 weaned out of every one hundred farrowed. This is further emphasized by the variation which existed in the number of pigs weaned per sow. In eastern Iowa and western Illinois in 1922 the least efficient group of farms raised from two to four pigs per sow. The most efficient farms raised from six to eight pigs per sow. A similar variation is shown for the other states in the study.

Spring pigs raised to weaning time on 13 farms in 1921 cost $4.31 per pig compared with a cost of $3.35 for fall pigs. In 1922 on 18 farms spring pigs had cost $3.53 per head at weaning date and fall pigs $3.12 each. Pork per 100 pounds from fall pigs, however, cost more than from spring pigs. Usually the price level at the time fall pigs are sold is higher than at the time spring pigs are sold. Fall pigs, therefore, if well taken care of during the winter may be as profitable as spring pigs.

Management of Herd.

Management of the breeding herd is the first step in the production of pork, and has a determining influence on the profits of hog raising. Feeding methods, care, housing and exercise, have a great effect on the number of pigs raised. Many farmers, figuring that some sows will lose out, breed more sows than they expect to farrow. Improved handling methods showed result in lessening the required number of sows to be bred for the number of pigs desired. This, besides being more economical, would have the additional advantage of improving the size and strength of the litters produced.

Fertile Eggs Cause Loss Every Summer

Can Be Prevented by Producing Infertile Product.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A large part of the loss caused by eggs spoiling in warm weather can be prevented by producing only infertile eggs during the late spring and summer. This loss, which is conservatively estimated at more than $15,000,000 a year, falls almost entirely on the producer. Not only does he lose the value of the eggs which spoil, but the producer suffers a further material loss in the reduction of the number of eggs consumed caused by people getting bad eggs among those they purchase.

This loss can be entirely prevented by producing only infertile eggs during warm weather. This is accomplished by taking all male birds out of the flock after the breeding season is over. The rooster has no influence on the number of eggs produced, and should either be marketed or killed—the meat can be canned—or he should be kept penned up.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just published a large poster showing the difference in the keeping qualities of infertile and fertile eggs during warm weather. This poster also gives simple rules for producing good quality eggs on farms during the latter part of the spring, throughout the summer, and into the early fall months.

Rolling Poultry Houses Beneficial to Keepers

Poultry houses on wheels are not popular in the United States, but it may be beneficial to some poultry keepers to know a little more about such houses. On every farm are tracts of land where during certain periods of the year there is much food for the hens, but which will be wasted unless the flock is moved out to the fields. Dragging houses around on runners is not a popular job but they are quite easily moved when mounted on wheels. A house on wheels can be used as brooder house, laying house, or for special matings, and is especially adapted for hospital use as it can readily be moved away far enough to protect the healthy birds from infection. The construction is very simple—all that is needed is just an axle and a couple of wheels. Most every farmer has some old wheels around his place, which he may never use for any other purpose and an old axle usually can be found also. If the axle is located so that the house will be fairly well balanced on it it can readily be handled on two wheels, if not too large.

Pesky Little Beetle Is Cause of Immense Loss

Can you imagine that a little insect pest called the cucumber beetle could cause a loss of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually to the cucumber crop of the United States. This insect not only injures the plant by feeding, but carries bacterial diseases which are injurious to many other plants.

Do you want this loss to go on in the future? Your answer would be "No." You can become best acquainted with its control by reading bulletin 355—"Nicotine Dust Kills the Cucumber Beetle," by J. E. Dudley of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Madison, Wis.

This bulletin explains how nicotine dusts are made and used in the most efficient and profitable way. It will also tell you how much of the dust to apply to the acre, and the manner in co-operating with your neighbors in using it. Now is the time to send for this free bulletin and learn to kill the most dangerous enemy of the cucumber, the striped cucumber beetle.

Judge Roy Campbell is a person of quiet mien and few words. Like all the rest of humanity, however, he has likes and dislikes, and once in a blue moon he boils over.

Discussing with a newspaperman recently the personality of a man who takes an uninvited part in politics, the judge said:

"He's like an electric fan—his only excuse for being is that he keeps the air circulating, though the good Lord knows he does enough of that to make all the rest of the electric fans in the world jealous."—Houston Post.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Power From Snow

American engineers, electrical equipment and machinery are to be used in carrying out the gigantic project of furnishing electricity to Santiago in Chile.

Snow on the peaks of the Andes might seem to have little bearing upon electric lighting of the streets of that city, yet both snows and ice from these mountains are to furnish hydroelectric power for the city as well as to operate the State railway between Santiago and Valparaiso.

Consumption of Butterflies

The natives of Australia consume every year millions of butterflies. These insects live largely in the mountain rocks. The natives catch them by lighting wood fires, the smoke of which suffocates them. The natives collect them in baskets, put them in the oven and, after having sifted them to get rid of the wings, make them into a sort of tart, much appreciated among connoisseurs.

BIG SEASON AT BEACH RESORT

Lively Season Planned By The Hampton Beach Board of Trade--Much Building

HAMPTON BEACH, N. H., June 24—The spirit of co-operation at Hampton Beach this year bids fair to pave the way for the best season ever held at the beach, reports President James W. Tucker of the Hampton Beach Board of Trade.

A budget of $16,000 has been planned by the budget committee and this will provide all manner of entertainment at the beach during the summer season. Last week there were three band concerts each day and in addition there were magnificent fireworks displays on Wednesday and Friday nights and each afternoon and evening five diving girls gave their act in front of the Casino in a large tank which had especially been built for them.

President Tucker with a committee from the Board of Trade is now canvassing the cottage owners, hotel proprietors and concession holders along the beach in the interest of raising the budget money and fine success is being met by the committee. People who last year gave $25 and $50 are voluntarily giving $100 and $250 which speaks well for the confidence which is placed in the Board of Trade by the people at this resort.

Never has there been a year when so much building has been in progress. Cottages for one and two families are springing up over night and larger buildings are also being constructed. One of the most enterprising structures now under construction is a six-apartment building being erected by George W. Cunningham of Concord, who is to be the architect for the new Community Church, a campaign for which will soon be launched, the project calling for the raising of $25,000.

COMMUNITY CHURCH FOR HAMPTON BEACH

Campaign to Raise $25,000 to be Launched Early in July

HAMPTON BEACH, N. H., June 24—A Community Church for Hampton Beach will be a reality this summer, plans now being well under way for the conducting of an intensive campaign for one full week early in July to secure $25,000 for the erection of the Community Church which is so much desired by the thousands of people who reside at and visit the beach each summer. It is expected that the church will be dedicated some time in August.

Rev. Robert S. Barker of Hampton, who, during the past few years has taken such an interest in the church welfare of the beach, has been chosen general chairman for the campaign, with the following trustees of the Community Church Association acting with him as an executive committee: Howard G. Lane, Hampton; Fred S. Pillsbury, Manchester; George H. Ashworth, Hampton Beach; William F. Thayer, Mrs. F. E. Nason, Haverhill, Mass.; A. J. Morse, Hampton; Mrs. Ethel Powers Uhlig, Mrs. Henry Ford, Mrs. Emma Young, Hampton Beach; Rev. John Cummings and Rev. Bernard Christopher, Hampton. Joseph M. Lucier of Concord, who is passing a few weeks at the beach is assisting the committee in organizing the campaign.

Much enthusiasm is being shown by the beach people over the project and the success of the campaign even at this early date seems assured. "From all sides," reports Chairman Barker, "come messages of encouragement and support and the great desire of the people who live at the beach as well as those who sojourn at this beautiful resort, to have a Community Church, will be realized this summer."

A meeting of the trustees to discuss plans for the campaign was held at the Ashworth Hotel when George W. Cunningham, a Concord architect, presented plans for the proposed edifice. It is planned to have an auditorium which will seat rising 700 and a community house for about 200, with a kitchen adjoining. The community house will be used for children's Sunday School classes and will be available for community gatherings at the beach.

Famous London Well

After being hidden and almost forgotten for hundreds of years, the old well from which Clerkenwell takes its name seems to have been rediscovered and laid bare, London Tit-Bits states.

It was called "Clerks' well" because "the parish clerk of London in remote ages annually performed sacred plays in front of it."

What is believed to be the "Clerks' well" was discovered recently under a shop floor in Farringdon road. It was while workmen were pulling down the building that their spades revealed the well.

In the well are the remains of a leaden suction pump by which the water, it is said used to be conveyed to the street outside for the use of priors, nuns, clerks and ordinary folk.

Close to the well a fine piece of Roman wall has been unearthed. So substantial is it that it is to be used as part of the foundations of a new building to be erected on the spot.

Election and Installation

At the semi-annual election of officers of Waverley Lodge on Saturday evening last, the following were elected for the ensuing term of six months:

Noble Grand—Charles W. Prentiss.

Vice Grand—Ellerton Edwards.

Recording Secretary — J. Leon Brownell.

Financial Secretary — William C. Hills.

Treasurer—Fred I. Burnham.

Installation of officers will probably be held at the first regular meeting in July, the 5th, with Walter F. Abbott, D. D.G.M., installing officer.

North Star Encampment will join with Mr. Crotched Encampment for a joint installation of officers on Monday evening, July 7, at Odd Fellows hall, in this place. Charles N. Robertson, D.D.G.P., will be the installing officer. Refreshments will be served after the exercises, and it is hoped a large number of the Partiarchial family from both Encampments will be present to enjoy the occasion.

Are You Acquainted with Julia Bottomley?

Are you keeping up with Julia Bottomley's fashion department?

The woman who wishes to appear well-dressed without spending too much time or money to that end recognizes The Reporter fashion department as a reliable and authoritative guide to the correct modes of the season.

In this department Mrs. Bottomley attempts only to depict what combinations of color, material and style will prove most satisfactory with regard to economy and individual taste. She makes due allowance for costs, and the materials she describes can be purchased from advertisers in The Reporter at prices from ten to fifteen per cent lower than those she quotes.

Mrs. Bottomley is in constant touch with the fashion centers of New York and Chicago. At present she is in Paris obtaining news for Autumn and Winter fashions which will appear exclusively in this paper in this territory. These, as usual, will be accompanied by authentic illustrations photographed under her direct supervision.

Where fashions are concerned Mrs. Bottomley is an authority. Keep in touch with her each week in The Reporter.

Egyptian Barber Had First Idea of Organ

More than two thousand years ago a barber in Alexandria discovered that in moving his mirror air was forced through the tubes which were common in mirrors at that time. This caused a curious musical sound to be emitted. So struck was he by this peculiarity that he set about making an instrument which was the foundation of the modern organ.

After several experiments he made a water-flute, in which air was forced by bellows through an inverted cone which led to flutes controlled by a keyboard, the pressure being kept uniform by water.

After a thousand years a rival instrument made its appearance. This was of a similar pattern, but, instead of water, weights regulated the pressure.

In 951 an organ was erected at Winchester. It had twenty-six bellows and ten pipes to each key. The two men who sat at the keyboard "blew and sweated enormously." Later, a firm of organ makers in Germany succeeded in erecting the first really big instrument. The primary stops did not differ very much from those of today, although various novelties were introduced.

Among the innovations were the nightingale and cuckoo stops, while others represented cock-crowing and goat-bleating. Though these novelties have now fallen into disuse, an organ with one of these nightingale stops is still to be seen in Rome.

First "Flying" Feat Rather Crude Affair

A slate tablet in the yard of Old North church, Boston, marks the place from which the first flying feat in this country was made. The flight was accomplished by John Childs, an Englishman, who had become famous for his gliding flights from the tops of steeples. His glider was a crude affair, the operator being suspended by a sort of harness. The length of the flight was about 700 feet. It was successfully repeated. The inscription on the tablet reads: "Here, on Sept. 13, 1757, John Childs, who had given public notice of his intention to fly from the steeple of Dr. Cutler's church, performed it to the satisfaction of a great number of spectators. In 1923, the year of the first continuous flight across the continent, this tablet has been placed by the Massachusetts Society of the Colonial Dames, to commemorate the two events."

Puzzled Germans

There was once an operator at the Crookhaven wireless station named Binns, whose breakfasts for 365 days every year consisted of two hard-boiled eggs. During the war he was an operator in a very important position in the grand fleet and a certain most secret signal was required to be sent. He was puzzled for a moment, and then, with his hand upon the Morse key, tapped out the extraordinary words, which no doubt puzzled every German listening in: "Two hard-boiled eggs transmitting. Urgent." He rapped this out half a dozen times and the stations around the coast were much mystified. But Crookhaven stations sprang alert at once. They knew it was Binns. They took his secret message for the admiralty and replied: "O. K.! Two hard-boiled eggs." The result of that code message was claimed to be the sinking of a German cruiser, writes William Le Queux in "Things I Know."

Two Claim Quotation

In her book entitled "Borrowings," Mrs. Sarah Yule credits the quotation "If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door" to Emerson. She said she copied it in a notebook from a lecture delivered by the great philosopher. But the quotation was the occasion of a long controversy, owing to Elbert Hubbard's claim to its authorship. Hubbard stated positively upon two different occasions that he was the author of the quotation. Mrs. Yule's book was published in 1889. It appears that Hubbard's claim was not made until later.

Useful Sunflower

A vessel recently docked at Hull, England, with a cargo of 2,000 tons of sunflower seeds. These seeds yield a valuable food for cattle and poultry, and the oil expressed from them is almost equal in its qualities to olive oil. The doctor depends upon them for one of his soporifics, while in the east of Europe they steep them in boiling water to serve as an infant's food. The Indians used to grind them into a flour for making bread. Even the stems and leaves can be utilized, the former as a cattle food, the latter as fuel, while the ashes left form a valuable manure.

Ostrich Legend "Bunk"

The ostrich does not hide its head in the sand when fear afflicts it. This, at any rate, is the bold proclamation made by Vilhjalmur Stefanson, the Arctic explorer, in an article in American Mercury. Nowhere has a responsible observer ever seen an ostrich thrust its head into the sand to escape a foe.

The legend has persisted for nearly 2,000 years. Perhaps 2,000 years hence, despite all the naturalists and all the iconoclasts, people will still believe that ostriches are as silly as Pliny thought they were.

Aimed for Fair Play and No Favors

By CLARA DELAFIELD

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"FANNY, listen," said Clara to me in a high state of excitement. "D'you know what's happened since you came back from summer camp? Why, Henry Doremus is back from Harvard, and gone into his father's law business!"

"Interesting, but not thrilling," I replied.

"Not, isn't it? Do you realize that that young man's going to inherit a cool million dollars some day, and that we three are practically the only eligible girls in town? Well, Milly and I are going to have a shot at him."

"Wishing you luck," I said.

"Ah, come off, Fanny! You know you'd die of joy if you thought you had a chance at him. Now listen. We want to go in for him, fair play and no favors."

"How d'you mean?" I asked.

"Why we three are to try our luck at him, and no underhand games. We've agreed to draw lots, and the one that wins gets a try for a month, to see if she can land him, while the others stand aside."

"Well, I don't mind," I answered.

"We'll put three pieces of paper into a box, one marked with a cross and the others blank, and the one that draws the cross wins first try."

"It's all one to me," I said, "but what are we going to do with the fellow when we've got him? Henry Doremus is chiefly stuck on himself. The fellow's a nut."

"Nut, is he!" snorted Clara. "He took honors at Harvard."

"That doesn't signify. He's just a great mooncalf. Besides, his father will be so hopping mad if he doesn't marry into society he'll disinherit him."

"Well, that's all part of the game," said Clara. "Are you in on this or not?"

"I suppose so," I answered.

Clara won first try. Clara is a petite brunette with large, soulful eyes, and the way she made a set at Henry was a caution. She never left his side. She haunted him at church fairs and such entertainments, which Henry attended.

My, the fool that girl made of herself. I've seen Henry with a wild look in his eye, glancing about him for some avenue of flight, while Clara was spouting poetry by the yard to him. And when the month came to an end the only effect she had made upon Henry was to inspire him with loathing of everything with a particle of soul in it.

"I'm glad that's through," said Clara viciously. "You couldn't make a dent on him without a chopper. I wouldn't have taken the fellow for all his money."

Milly smiled as she drew the next lot. Milly is plump and vivacious and goes in for sports. I wondered how Henry was taking it when he found himself annexed by a new girl. Milly started dragging him off to golf courses and tennis tournaments.

Poor Henry! I met him in the street, covered with perspiration, carrying a tennis racket limply by the end of the handle.

"You certainly are a strenuous lot of girls in this town," he said to me.

"Poor Mr. Doremus!" I rejoined. "Small town life isn't what it used to be."

"No," answered Henry, winking at me.

I might have winked back, I suppose, but that would have been violating the rules of the game as Milly and Clara had made them. So I just laughed and continued on my way. And Henry continued on his dreary round of sports until the sight of a golf club drove him into a frenzy of despair.

But at the end of the month—nothing doing, absolutely nothing!

"You take the fellow!" said Milly angrily, when the time was up. "If you can get him to fall for you, you're welcome to him, that's all."

Two mornings later both the girls were at the house before breakfast.

"Fanny," gasped Clara, "what's this story about you and Henry Doremus being engaged?"

"I guess it's correct," I answered, breaking my egg.

"But how—how—?"

"Why, we met in summer camp and were married last summer," I told the girls. "We've only told as far as the engagement yet, but the rest's nearly ready for publication. I guess Henry won't feel any temptation to stray from the straight and narrow path after his experiences with you."

Breaking a Name

"Will you kindly tell us," a New York reporter asked Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, "why you are so frequently cold and unresponsive to—to our profession, don't you know? Have you any grouch against newspapers?"

"Not a thing—except one," she replied. "they will, now and again, call me 'Mrs. Pat.' I can't stand that 'Pat.' It is the last straw that breaks the Campbell's back."

Mother Forgets Medicine

Mother—What a naughty little girl you are, telling fibs like that. You can just go to bed without any supper.

Offender—No, I can't, mom. What about that medicine I've got to take after meals?—New York Sun and Globe.
