HURRAH FOR OLD NEW ENGLAND

By the late William P. Chamberlain

This is our own, our native land,
The poor and rough she be,
The home of many a noble soul,
The birthplace of the free.
We'll love her rocks and rivers
Till death our quick blood chills—
Hurrah for old New England,
And her cloud-capped granite hills.

Chorus

Hurrah for old New England, and
Her cloud-capped granite hills,
Hurrah for old New England, and
Her cloud-capped granite hills,

Shall not the land, tho' poor she be,
That gave a Webster birth,
With pride step forth to take her place
With the mightiest of the earth?
Then for his sake whose lofty fame
Our farthest boundaries fills,
We'll shout for old New England
And her cloud-capped granite hills.

Chorus

They tell us of our freezing clime,
Our hard and rugged soil,
Which hardly half repays for
Our Springtime care and toil;
Yet gaily sings the merry boy
As his homestead farm he tills,
Hurrah for old New England,
And her cloud-capped granite hills.

Chorus

Others may seek a western clime,
They say 'tis passing fair,
That sunny are its laughing skies
And soft its balmy air;
We'll linger round our childhood's home,
'Till age our warm blood chills,
Till we die in old New England
And sleep beneath her hills.

Chorus

ENTERTAIN GUESTS

Molly Aiken Chapter Host to Officers and Guests

Molly Aiken Chapter, D.A.R., held its October meeting in the Woodbury Memorial church on Friday, October third, with the State officers and Mercy Hathaway White Chapter, of Bradford, this state, as guests. The church was beautifully decorated with silk flags and Autumn leaves.

At noon a delicious luncheon was served in the dining room, consisting of chicken patties, mashed potatoes, tomato salad, rolls, Harlequin ice cream, cake, cookies and coffee. Little baskets of blue and buff crepe paper, the D.A.R. colors, filled with mints and nuts, were at each plate and helped to carry out the color scheme of the dining room.

At quarter past two the Regent, Mrs. Wilkinson, called the meeting to order. The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the Flag Salute and America.

The program of the afternoon was intensely interesting.

Mrs. Smith's paper, "My Visit in the Hawaiian Islands," was very fine and also instructive.

The National Anthem of Hawaii, Aloha, and other Hawaiian songs, were sung by Mrs. Maud Robinson, Mrs. Amy Wheeler, Mrs. Helene Hills and Mrs. Emma Nay, accompanied on the Ukeleles by Mrs. Elizabeth Felker and Miss Nelly Mudge, with Mrs. Muzzey at the piano. These songs were very pretty and enjoyed by all. A solo by Mr. Newell which explained the meaning of Aloha or farewell, was listened to with much pleasure.

The address by the State Regent, Mrs. George H. Warren, was most interesting. Although it was not a political speech, she did ask all daughters to prepare for the coming election and vote intelligently. She told us some about the work of the State Chapter.

A short talk by the Vice State Regent, Miss Alice M. Chesley, and remarks by Miss Isabelle Greeley, Regent of Mercy Hathaway White Chapter, and a member of the Peterboro Chapter and one from Colorado Springs, completed the program, after which a short business meeting was held.

At this time Mrs. Cora Hunt was elected delegate and Mrs. Nettie Hurlin alternate to the twenty-third annual State Conference, which is to be held at Manchester October 21-22.

The Regent announced the History prize, committed: Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson and Mrs. Lillie Newell.

Much credit is due the committee who worked so hard to make this meeting a success, and especially to the chairman, Mrs. Inez Sawyer, and to Miss Helen Stanley, who served so kindly and generously.

A FEW THOUGHTS

Suggested By What Is Happening Around

The New England potato crop this year is estimated to total 41,971,000 bushels.

Coon hunting has commenced but luck is not reported very heavy as yet by those who have been out.

The first days of the hunting season were not productive of much game, although greatly enjoyed by all who were out with dog and gun.

One of the painful sights of the times is a boy on his way to school with a cigarette in his mouth, says an exchange. In other words, it would seem that the foundation for his life work was "going up in smoke."

Twenty years ago the supposedly popular method of obtaining votes was to "bust" a trust. Now that they have all the trusts "busted," a lot of agitators would like to "bust" everybody else with tax raising schemes.

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Griffin has issued a warning to motorists that falling leaves and rains make dangerous traveling and calling for the use of unusual care in driving. He disapproves of applying the brakes with the clutch released.

Announcement has been made by the State Public Service Commission that the petition of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company for an advance in rates on private exchanges in New Hampshire has been further suspended until Nov. 1.

What a fine thing it is that we can all do our own thinking and in reaching a conclusion can go right along and work it out to one's own satisfaction. This idea carries with it that "grand and glorious feeling," perhaps never more gratifying or pronounced than in the matter of politics.

Buy Home

Mrs. Mary Nay will purchase of C. F. Downes his cottage house on Fairview street, now occupied by A. Fuglestad. The house soon to be vacated by Mrs. Nay will be occupied by Mrs. Alfaretta Smith, who having sold her house in Wilton, will return to her former home here.

SPANISH VOGUE IN SHAWLS; WEARABLE TYPES IN COATS

FASHION, this season, is conspicuously a matter of following the Spanish vogue. At every style exhibit, at social gatherings galore, where modish women add to the picture, in cable reports from across seas, in messages brought by word of mouth by those incoming voyagers who have not left a stone unturned in Paris, London, Vienna and other style centers in their search for "the latest," the present-day modes are discussed and exploited in terms of picturesque Spain. One of the outstanding notes in this overwhelming favor for modes Spanish is the vogue for the deep-fringed, can no longer keep up with her. In stead, he contributes his fleece toward making her a coat all trimmed with braid and fur, and everywhere that Mary goes the coat's along with her. This is an arrangement highly satisfactory to Marys in general, who are just now looking for coats that will do for all-round wear, give good service and be equal to holding their own with different kinds of hats. For Mary has learned to leave it to the hat, more than anything else, when it comes to adapting costume to occasion. Here is one of those accommodating new coats, of a soft and becoming pile graceful, gay-hued shawl. Creators of style who express their genius through knitted stitch, having "caught the vision," are scoring new triumphs in that they are introducing the shawl. These wizards of the knitted art are ensnaring the feminine heart with beautiful long-fringed shawl creations which reflect most fascinatingly true Spanish colorings of crimson, black, orange, green and purple. Sometimes the color glory is varied, as in the case of this lovely shawl shown in the fabric, with rich, but sturdy trimmings that will fit in with almost any background. Its plaid lining proclaims comfort and serviceability. Its luxurious collar and cuffs are of Hudson seal and there is a little glint of gold in the silk braid that makes a finishing touch. Probably its owner has a simple plaid frock to match the coat lining and a plain felt hat to complete, with the coat, an ensemble for everyday street wear. But her ostrich-trimmed millinery indicates that a picture, which is knitted of tan fiber silk with striking pattern in orange. A flattering accessory to any costume is this lovely exponent of knitted artistry. A black silk knitted shawl designed in triangular form, with an effective green and blue peacock pattern interknitted in the corner section, is an outcome of the Spanish shawl vogue. Among the large knitted squares simulating the crepe Spanish shawls, green and beige are successfully introduced in a particularly handsome model, which carries a wide border knitted in fancy stitch, repeating the two colors in the deep fringe.

pretty crepe de chine or satin afternoon dress is on its way—somewhere. There are many beautiful and wearable types among the coats that stylists have prepared for this fall. Among the handsomest are coats of chocolate brown velours, with long waist, surplice fastening at the front, which brings two very large, decorated glass buttons a little to the left side. Dyed squirrel makes the ample and long shawl collar and wide cuffs. In climates where there is no very cold weather the new coats of heavy ottoman silk will be found practical and very chic.

SOCIALISM IS HIT BY MR. COOLIDGE

Foreign to the Principles of Our Institutions, Says President.

President Coolidge, in an address before a great open-air audience at the close of the Holy Name society convention in Washington, had some pertinent things to say about socialism, communism and the necessity of upholding the Constitution, his utterances being directed at the forces that are supporting the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket.

"Our American government was the result of an effort to establish institutions under which the people as a whole should have the largest possible advantages," said the President. "Class and privilege were outlawed, freedom and opportunity were guaranteed. They undertook to provide conditions under which service would be adequately rewarded and where the people would own their own property and control their own government."

The founders of the government, the President said, recognized authority, both earthly and spiritual. The foundation of our independence and our government, he maintained, rests upon basic religious convictions.

Divine Sanction for Authority. "The Constitution and laws of our country are adopted and enacted through the direct action of the people, or through their duly chosen representatives," said the President. "They represent the enlightened conscience of our country. They ought always to speak with the true and conscientious voice of the people."

"Such voice has from time immemorial had the authority of divine sanction. In their fundamentals they do not change. As new light arrives they may be altered in their details, but they represent the best that we know at any given time. To support the Constitution and observe the laws, is to be true to our own higher natures. That is the path, and the only path, toward liberty."

Coincident with the right of individual liberty under the provisions of our government, he indicated, is the right of individual property.

Fundamental Human Rights. "Socialism and communism cannot be reconciled with the principles which our institutions represent. They are entirely foreign, entirely un-American. We stand wholly committed to the policy that what the individual produces belongs entirely to him to be used for the benefit of himself, to provide for his own family and to enable him to serve his fellow men."

Principles underlying American institutions, he said, "bestow upon the people all there is to bestow."

"They recognize in the people all there is to recognize," he went on.

"They are the ultimates. There is no beyond. They are solely for the benefits and advantages of all the people. If any change is made in these principles it will not be by giving more to the people, but by taking from them something of that which they now have. It cannot be progress. It must be reaction."

United States Principles Vindicated. In spite of criticism of American institutions, the proof of their soundness and strength, he said, lies in our wealth, educational facilities, charities, religious institutions, and in the moral influence exerted on the world.

"Most of all it is apparent in the unexampled place which is held by the people who toil," he added. "Our inhabitants are especially free to promote their own welfare. They are unburdened by militarism. They are not called upon to support any imperialistic designs. Every mother can rest in the assurance that her children will find here a land of devotion, prosperity and peace."

Guarantees of religious liberty in the Constitution were referred to by the President, who quoted the clause prohibiting any religious test as a qualification for public office. "This," he said, "is the essence of freedom and toleration, solemnly declared in the fundamental law of the land."

Dawes' Speaking Plan.

Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes returned from South Dakota and Iowa convinced that he had found the right method of meeting LaFollette sentiment in that political belt and ready to do some more hard riding and rear platform talking upon the issue of saving the Constitution and the present form of the American government.

"In the future, aided by some of his 'minute men,' his warnings against the business and industrial chaos which he believes would follow a victory of the LaFollette plan of congressional government, are to be delivered chiefly as extemporaneous speeches from the end of his special car which is to be fitted up with amplifiers.

His experience on this western trip was that good sized crowds are ready to listen to him in the cities where stops can be arranged. In addition, he has found that he likes the work and the contact.

He proposed such a general plan to the Republican speakers' bureau for his long western swing, which is scheduled to start October 4. He would like to avoid making any more long academic speeches which require great preparation. He is filled now with his subject and ready to shoot at a moment's notice.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

QUEEN BEES BRING ROYAL RETURNS

"IT PAYS to specialize" when you are engaged in the art of apiculture. Bee keeping, always a specialized business, reaches its most highly specialized and most lucrative form in the raising of queen bees.

But the work of raising queen bees is difficult, and there are many failures, admits a girl specialist in the industry.

"The girl who decides to undertake the raising of queen bees had best consider it, for a time, at least, as a side-line to the business of general bee keeping," says this queen of the queen bees. "She can realize profits off her honey, in that way, while she is learning to manage her queens."

The market of the specialist in queen-bee raising is formed by the general beekeepers of the country. The most readily sold queens are bred from the notable sweet-tempered golden-colored Italian stock.

The first step of the commercial queen bee raiser is to remove the established queen from one of the colonies. Next, she should remove some young eggs from another colony and place them, by means of a tiny metal spoon, into wax cups, or "queen cells," similar to the ones queen larvae naturally have, set the cups in a frame, and place the frame in the midst of the first colony. She can make these cups herself, or she can procure them from a good bee supply house.

The bees which have been deprived of their first queen set up a hum of joy at the discovery of the new queen egg, and immediately set to work to provide it lavishly with the special "royal jelly," which means that a queen will emerge in about sixteen days. Since a queen bee is jealous of her rights, and will fight to the death with any other queen that may hatch, the keeper must enclose each cell in a separate compartment, so that each queen will hatch in a little cage by herself.

When a queen bee is hatched, the keeper must remove her to a "mating box," five inches square and four inches deep, containing a couple of small frames of honey-filled comb. The keeper pours in with her about a cupful of bees and with them the queen bee sets up a temporary home. After preliminary short excursions which assure her that she can find her way home, the queen makes her "wedding flight," from which she returns mated for life. Soon she begins to lay—and then the keeper knows that she is successfully mated, that she will produce half a million eggs in the three or four years of her life, and that she is, therefore, ready for shipment.

THE "FLOWER GIRL"

A "FLOWER GIRL" is not always an adjunct to a wedding ceremony. Often she is just some energetic girl who has turned her fancy for flowers into financial success. Fads and follies do not always bring returns; but a flair for flowers, if rightly directed, does.

A "flower girl" I ran across the other day became provoked when I used the word "art" in connection with her work, because, she said, "It's all a matter of business." Later on, she admitted that she did indulge her "artistic tendencies" a bit as she worked in her garden, though she sternly repressed them when she marketed her wares.

True garden-craft is market-craft. The struggling block of most country and small town girls in selling flowers is their proneness to set limitations for themselves. A girl is sometimes satisfied to carry a little basket of flowers into the city each day, when she could be shipping out hundreds of dollars worth of flowers daily during the season.

One step, such a girl may profitably take is the making of an arrangement with the hotel proprietor to provide his tables with flowers at a fixed sum per month. The proprietor may agree to display her fresh-cut flowers every morning where a people will see and buy them, too.

Furnishing flowers for the town cemetery may be another opportunity for her. She may put up flowers for funerals, too. She should solicit this trade herself, pointing out that flowers received from the city are not always fresh and attractive, as hers would be.

A "birthday book," in which is listed birthday and other anniversaries of as many women as possible, is a help. The flower girl who keeps a book may call the woman's husband to remind him of the event, and to suggest that he "say it with flowers."

Of course, there is something else to the flower business than simply going to the right places to sell them. One must have a salable product, and that requires in this case, an artistic instinct. Even in business, one can't "say it with flowers" unless she understands their language, which is, after all, an artistic one.

Now, caring for a flower garden is essentially a work for which many women are eminently suited.

You must be both an artist and a business woman, then, if you are ambitious to succeed as a "flower girl."

DAVIS PREDICTS A SWEEPING VICTORY

Convinced by Western Trip That Democratic Ticket Is Sure to Win.

Returning to New York from a 5,000-mile campaign tour through the West, John W. Davis declared that "All signs point to a sweeping Democratic victory in the coming election."

"I return to the East confident of success," he said. "Privilege has won its last battle. We are laying our cause before the American people and they are responding nobly."

Mr. Davis said that everywhere he went in the West all those with whom he talked brought the same message.

"That the great silent vote, that vote which has turned every election in the past when the American people came to a crossroad, has made up its mind this year to turn to the Democratic party as the only possible avenue of relief."

"The people fully realize," he said, "that the choice lies only between continuing discredited Republican regime or installing the Democratic administration in its stead."

Asserting that in all the states he had visited—West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, Wyoming, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and Missouri—he had found the Democratic party intact and undivided. Mr. Davis said its members were working together in an "absolute unity of purpose and with an interest I have never seen surpassed in any campaign."

"Everywhere that I have been I have heard the same story," he added, "and it has come to me from men regardless of previous party affiliation—it is that of dissatisfaction with the service rendered—or, rather, denied, by the government during the last three and a half years."

Farmer Resents Tariff. "The farmer resents the deception that was attempted by the Republican party in placing an utterly ineffective tariff duty on his products; he resents the artificial increase in the price of all the things he buys; and he is convinced that there is no sincere purpose on the part of the Republican party to take any steps in his interest.

"The exposures of corruption in Washington made a far deeper impression on the public mind and the moral sense of the country than the leaders of the Republican party are willing to admit. They have not been forgotten and will not be forgiven.

Interest in Navy Belated. "I found, moreover, that in the Middle West—contrary to the impression which prevails in some quarters—the people were deeply interested in the foreign policy of the government and entirely out of sympathy with the timid and evasive course which the present administration has pursued.

"They fully realized, moreover, that to accomplish any reform whatever, the legislative and executive branches of the government must be in complete and entire sympathy. The lack of leadership and coherence which the Republican party has exhibited has made a deep impression.

"Unquestionably the people of the West are in favor of disarmament and opposed to any militaristic scheme. Nevertheless they are resentful that our navy has been permitted to fall in strength in comparison with other powers—a fact to which I called attention in my speech at Cheyenne, Wyo., on the 12th of September. They regard the navy as the first line of defense and are determined to maintain it as such. I do not think they will be impressed by the belated interest shown in the recall of Secretary Wilbur from his speaking tour on the Pacific coast."

Roper Sees Drift to Davis. There is a decided drift in sentiment toward John W. Davis and the Democratic ticket, according to Daniel C. Roper, who was one of the prominent McAdoo managers. Mr. Roper has noted particularly a sudden pickup in Davis strength in Illinois, he says.

"Some of the papers have shown surprise at the spectacular growth of the sentiment for Mr. Davis in Illinois, as shown by a comparison of his two visits there," said Mr. Roper.

"It is no surprise whatever to me. The same turn of the tide will be shown wherever Mr. Davis revisits a locality. The hesitant vote, which has been unusually large in this campaign until about ten days ago, had been distinctly wavering between the different parties. A great number undoubtedly waited to hear more of the principles of Senator LaFollette before reaching a decision.

"During the last week reports not only from states at large but from every county in these states, has shown that this vote is deciding to ally itself with the Democratic party.

"From those sections of the country where Mr. Davis has been heard and seen the reaction in his favor has been amazing.

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

By JOSEPH KAYE

(© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

NATHAN HALE AND ALICIA ADAMS

NATHAN HALE died just as he came of age but the fates recompensed him to some extent by allowing him to enjoy six years of love.

When Hale was a youth of fifteen, he met Alicia Adams of his own age, beautiful and clever. Nathan's brother, Enoch, also met Alicia and he, too, found her beautiful and clever. The result was that both brothers fell in love with the young girl. Nathan, however, was the favored one and when he left for college, he had the happiness of knowing that his love was reciprocated.

Then something happened which threw a boulder in the path of the youthful lovers. Mamma Adams and sister Adams objected to Nathan and the long wait for his maturity and success in life and their constant persuasions at length had the desired effect. Alicia married an estimable neighbor named Elijah Ripley. She married him with regret and perhaps she was not very sorrowful when Elijah went to the arms of his fathers a year later and left the nineteen-year-old matron a widow.

With Ripley's death, Nathan and Alicia were again drawn towards each other. They became reunited in love and their engagement was formally announced. "Then destiny again interfered. Hale joined the army and became one of Washington's most zealous officers. His duty to his country was his paramount thought and no undertaking was too dangerous for him. So it was when Washington asked for a keen-witted officer to send on an important expedition into the enemy's lines, Hale volunteered and was accepted.

The young hero never came back. Disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster, he obtained all the plans and memoranda he was after but as he was returning he was caught. The next morning, without the consolation of a minister or even a Bible, he was hanged, dying with these immortal words on his lips: "I only regret I have but one life to lose for my country!"

The following is a rhymed letter Hale sent to Alicia when the ardor of his love found mere prose inadequate to the expression of his sentiments:

"Alicia, born with striking charm, with the gift to ravish and the heart to warm! Fair is thy form, still fairer in mind, with beauty, wisdom and sweetness joined.

"Oh, friend sincere, of soul divinely great; sheddest thou for me, a wretch, the sorrowed tear—what thanks can I in this unhappy state return to you but gratitude sincere! Ah, dearest girl, in whom the gods have joined the real blessings which themselves approve—can mortals frown at such a heavenly mind when gods propitious shine for thy love?"

"Far from the seat of pleasure now I roam; the pleasing landscape now no more I see. Yet absence never shall take my thoughts from home, nor time efface my regard for thee."

DAVID LIVINGSTONE AND MARY MOFFAT

A BEAUTIFUL example of "pure love" was given to the world by the great explorer and missionary, David Livingstone. He married the daughter of another missionary, Mary Moffat, and the happiness of these two was ideal. In one of his letters to Mary before their marriage Livingstone wrote:

"And now, my dearest, farewell. May God bless you. Let your affection be toward Him much more than toward me; and kept by His power and grace I hope I shall never give you cause to regret that you gave me a part. Whatever friendship we feel toward each other let us always look to Jesus as our common friend and guide, and may He shield you with His everlasting arms from every evil."

After eight years of married life, Livingstone could still feel inspired to read his wife this letter:

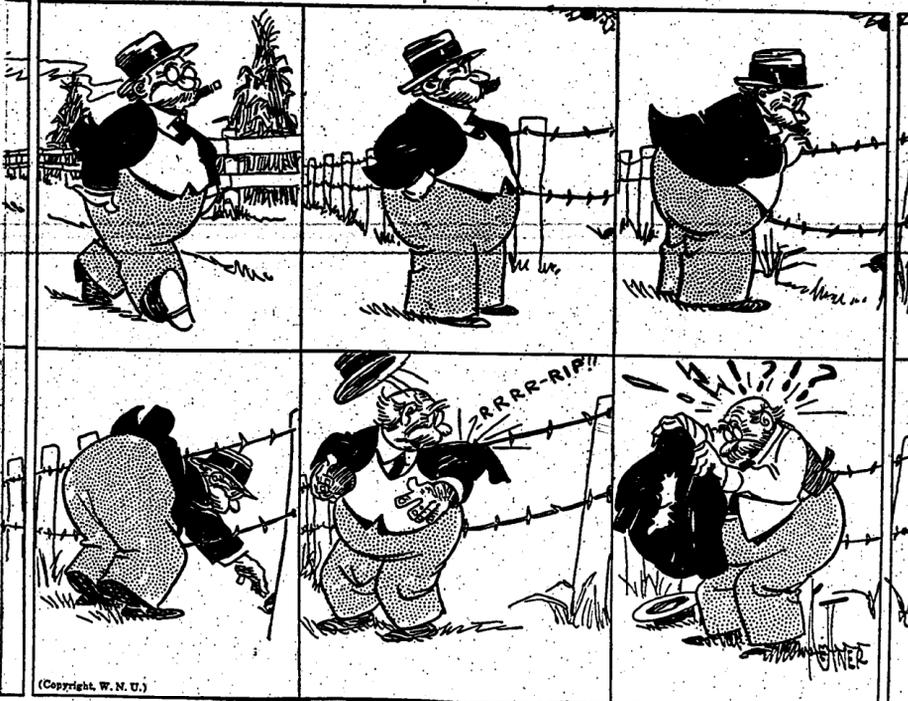

"Cape Town, May 5th, 1892. "My dearest Mary: How I miss you and the dear children! My heart yearns incessantly for you. How many thoughts of the past crowd in my mind! I feel as if I would treat you much more tenderly and lovingly than ever. You have been a great blessing to me. You attended to my comforts in many ways. May God bless you for all your kindness. I see no face now to be compared with that sunburnt one which has so often greeted me with its kind looks. You may read the letters over again which I wrote you at Mabost—the sweet time, you know. As I told you before, I tell you again, they are true, true; there is not a bit of hypocrisy in them. I never show all my feelings; but I can say truly, my dearest, that I loved you when I married you and the longer I lived with you I loved you the better."

WHEN THE TEST CAME

By JUNIUS B. SMITH

JED MINOR carefully examined the gun he was holding and clicked his teeth together with a sullen frown. He had been insulted and—well he just learned about the insult. Hence the polishing of the gun, the oiling of its mechanism, the slipping into place of a clip of shells.

He would show Old Man Fuller that he couldn't take liberties with his good name. He would make him retract or—

He didn't quite complete the thought in words, but intangibly it was there, menacing, red in its portentous, darksome in the visitation it foreboded Old Man Fuller, as he had called him.

Fuller lived down the lane some three or four miles distant. He was a farmer, like himself—a tiller of the soil—a man, head of a family, who ought to know better than to risk his life saying unkind things about the bachelor, Jed Minor.

Jed had been sweet on Old Man Fuller's daughter, to be sure, and had cause to consider his regard fully reciprocated. But—Minor gritted his teeth—no one could accuse him of doing the things Fuller said he had done, without swallowing it and saying he was sorry.

There was no chance of getting the girl now, of course. Fuller had seen to that. Well, if he couldn't get the girl, he could get Fuller—that is, if Fuller refused to retract. The man had lied and—

Minor jerked a hat off the hook on the back of the kitchen door, pulled it onto his head, stuck the pistol in his shirt, where it rested against the tight-drawn belt that encircled his waist, and set out of the house, almost on a run.

He cranked his flyover and sped out of the yard into the street.

Then he turned in the direction of Fuller's house.

The wind blew a gale and he traveled in his own dust. This didn't assuage his anger. If anything his color mounted. He'd fix him, he would. He'd show him no man could lie about him and get away with it.

His eyes were fixed on the road before him.

He sped along at a terrific rate.

And then something caught his eyes. So powerful was the attraction that he partly closed the throttle that he might look without danger of turning turtle. On his left was the Johnson residence. The Johnsons were nice people—just the two of them, with their year-and-a-half-old baby—a happy trio if ever there was one.

A piercing shriek came to his ears—blood-curdling, terrible in its agony—that portrayed agony of mind as well as body. He saw and understood.

The Johnson home was afire!

Great flames were leaping out of the upper windows—smoke was issuing from the open door. The place was doomed—he could see that at a glance. And even as he looked, the body of Johnson's wife, hair and clothes afire, came staggering out of the smoke-blackened hole of the door.

She fell on her knees on the ground outside, rolled in the dust to extinguish the flames, almost instantly sprang to her feet again, screamed "my baby, my baby," and staggered back into the maw of death.

Minor took it all in at a glance, then raced toward the burning building.

He almost capsize when he made the turn, into the Johnson yard, slammed on his brakes when near the house, and left the machine with amazing speed.

Without a moment's hesitation he went to what might be his death.

He couldn't see for the smoke. He couldn't breathe. Remembering something he had read, he dropped to his hands and knees where the air was better and crept along in search of whoever he might find.

He felt that his lungs must burst with the holding of his breath, but he kept on, wondering where the woman had gone, where the child might be she was supremely intent on saving.

Little tongues of flame licked down through burnt openings in the ceiling—reached down and sought to engulf him, to set his clothing on fire as they had those of the woman before him. They cast a lurid glare through the smoke-laden room, dimly revealing it in outline when the smart of the smoke permitted him to look.

And then his hand came in contact with something soft and yielding and hot. A chill went through him despite the heat of the room. He knew what it was—it was the body of a man or woman—too large for that of the child—with the smoldering cloth flesh-searing in the intensity of its heat.

He threw caution to the winds and seized the body in his arms, staggered from the room into the open and deposited it on the ground—the expiring remains of Mrs. Johnson.

Others had come upon the scene. Subconsciously he glimpsed them racing frantically in at the gate.

He turned and dashed back into the house.

Stooping low, he ran first to one room and then to the other, on the ground floor, exploring hurriedly by sight where he could, by feel otherwise, the place where a body might be.

The fire itself was raging upstairs. The upper floors were threatening to fall in at any moment. He wondered about the stairs and what was taking place in the rooms that led from the landing at their top.

He knew the answer—nothing alive could exist up there. Johnson and the child—well, what was Johnson and the child—would probably be found up there—alongside himself, he mentally added, as he turned and leaped to the lurid curtain of death.

He took two steps at a bound—several bounds—then the stairs caved in and precipitated him face forward in the room below.

He remained where he had fallen. He awoke to see angels fluttering about him. One was looking down in his face and bathing it with deliciously cool water. It was—yes, he must have been dead a long while—it was Gladys, whom he would have married but for Old Man Fuller's interference. Well, she had come to him, even though she had to pass through all eternity to do so. He closed his eyes for a moment to think.

Then he opened them again and glanced at other faces. Yes, he was certain he was dead. There was the Johnson two-year-old, unmarked, as he had seen him last—mute evidence that he was beholding the spirit of the child—for had he not been searching for the child's charred body? And he blinked and wondered if he was in heaven after all—and if so—what was Old Man Fuller doing there? He raised up on one elbow and groaned.

"What—what—where am I?" he demanded in none too strong tones. "I died—and—"

"Thank God!" cried Gladys, slipping an arm around him.

"That I died?" He looked at her questioning.

"No—that you didn't."

He rallied quickly. "But—I must have died. I went in that—in that—seething hell—and—I didn't—come out."

"Oh, yes you did—father brought you out."

"What's that?" he staggered to his feet.

"Just what I said. We saw you go inside—and father told me to take care of the baby and then he went in."

He looked toward the mass of burning tinder. The floors were all in now—the roof had caved. Johnson had returned to the dust out of which he was made.

"But the child," he exclaimed, viewing the youngster whom Gladys held by the hand—"I went in for him."

"Daddy brought me out," said the baby, "and then he went back for muzzer. Why did muzzer go back—to get daddy?"

The simplicity of it told the tragedy of miscalculation—Johnson searching for his wife, who could have saved herself—the mother searching for her babe that she did not know was rescued. There was something awful in the death of the two. It put a horror in his heart of death.

And—the thought grasped him in its pitiless embrace—he had been en route to Fuller's house, a loaded weapon in his hands. He felt for it and found that it was gone—lost in the incinerator, perhaps—since the front of his shirt was burned away.

He looked at Fuller, scorched like himself, though not so badly—at Fuller, whom he was going to force to retract at the point of a gun—at Fuller, who had risked his own life that he, Jed Minor, might live! At Fuller—the man who had lied about him. It was a mystery as great as he had ever known. Something of its puzzle must have shown in his blistered face, for Gladys said:

"Father learned that it was not true what he said about you. Some one had lied to him. And we were on our way over to see you, when—"

"You—you mean?" said Minor.

"I mean—she's yours, if you want her, Jed. I'm sorry I told her what I did—I thought it was the truth—I know different now—I—you're a man, Jed, and I'd be proud to own you as a son-in-law—I've seen—enough." He reached out his hand.

Jed took it.

Then Gladys spoke: "And the baby, Jed—we'll have to take care of it—now that—that they're gone."

"As our own," he promised.

"As our own," she acquiesced.

Height of Happiness

Found in Contentment

Oh, happy day for him who gives up striving to outshine his fellows and settles down content to be himself! And when abates the fever of possession and he perceives that the riches of the rich, the joy of the happy and the strength of the strong are his as well, then indeed for him has the millennium dawned. Then shines the sun for him; for him blooms the rose; for him the waters murmur and the wind sighs in the forests or croons to the rustling corn. He shares the speed of the trout and the song of the wren. He welcomes the souls that are coming and bids Godspeed to the souls that are parting. Alone on the mountain or one of the crowd, everywhere is he in touch with the heart of humanity. All joys are his joys; all sorrows are his to assuage. Child is he with childhood, everywhere. To him flow the love and heroism of the world, for he has no longer a private and particular life. His bark has sunk "to another sea"—sails now on the serene and smiling waters of the Universe—Stanton Davis Kirkham in "The Ministry of Beauty."

Sapphire of High Value

Used as Paperweight

Still another attraction has been added to the British empire exhibition at Wembley. This is one of the largest sapphires, a jewel weighing ten ounces and valued at more than $25,000. This stone was discovered recently in the home of a Mahometan official in Hyderabad state, who had been using it for many years as a paperweight. In fact, so little value did this man attach to the curious looking stone, which is intricately carved in the form of an ear ornament, that he frequently gave it to his children as a plaything.

The stone has a long and romantic history which has been traced from the Twelfth century, when it was an ornament on a Buddha belonging to the Ballala kings of South India. It was handed down from generation to generation until it came into the possession of a white man, who eventually gave it as a present to the ancestors of its present owner.

In Lighter Moments

I came across in my scrapbook the following bit of humorous dialogue which took place between Oliver Wendell Holmes and a friend:

"The young lady is in evening dress," said the friend, referring to a rather overdressed dumsel.

"The close of the day, my dear sir," remarked the doctor.

"That is Holmes-pun," laughed the friend.

"I'm worsted," rejoined the doctor.—Mrs. J. W., in the Boston Transcript.

Milford Made Furniture

THAT-SOUNDS GOOD; BUT IT MEANS A LOT MORE THAN YOU MAY AT FIRST SUPPOSE

Among the early settlers in Milford were high grade cabinet makers. Pieces of furniture made in the early days in Milford are still in use in some of our families. The sons of these early artisans, some of them, followed in the footsteps of their fathers and added to their skill, the initiative and progress of youth. Their sons after them continued in the same path and so was built up a line of master workmen. Furniture made in Milford reflects the thorough painstaking care of the early cabinet makers; but it also reflects the initiative and progress of the succeeding generations. With this as a background based on the thoroughness of its cabinet makers, the originality and good taste of its designers, the painstaking care of its finishers.

WE DISTRIBUTE MILFORD MADE GOODS

We invite your inspection of the pieces on our floors. We are delighted to have you bring your friends and show them anytime.

We extend a special invitation for inspection just now when home made goods are receiving special attention. Our store is a community institution, it is much more than a place to buy. Though it is a first class place for purchase, it is also a place for information—reliable information—and for high grade service.

the affair was a pronounced success.

Waverley Lodge of Odd Fellows has been invited to attend service at Hancock on Sunday evening, October 12, at seven o'clock, which invitation has been accepted. This is considered very thoughtful of Rev. E. W. Eldredge, the pastor, and it is hoped that just as many Odd Fellows as possibly can will avail themselves of the opportunity to attend this service.

Some of the more interested ones have been reading the doings of the Sovereign Grand Lodge at their annual gathering in Jacksonville, Florida, recently. Here are two things that are found which will affect many towns where there is an Odd Fellows' Lodge: The age at which one can apply for membership has been now changed to eighteen where for so many years it has been 21. Also, there was provision made for a junior branch of the order for boys between the ages of 14 and 18. These are advanced steps in Odd Fellowship and very many are of the opinion that they will prove beneficial to the order.

High Class Entertainment

Be sure and hear the Blanchards Friday evening, in the town hall. A very novel number on their program is the presentation of Bishop's "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," in which whistling takes the place of the flute. You will want to hear the character delineations. Remember, you will laugh with him over his jokes, not at him. "The Blanchards are more than just a Duo—they really present the work one could expect from a four-people company."

Democratic Rally

The Democrats of Antrim held a political rally at the town hall on Tuesday evening of this week, attended by a goodly number from this town and a few from adjoining villages. This was the opening gun in Antrim of the vote hunting season, which will doubtless be followed by at least one more, by the opposing party.

State Treasurer George E. Farrand, of Concord, and William H. Barry, Esq., of Nashua, talked to their audience in a manner which pleased the "followers of the faith," while Governor Fred H. Brown was an easy speaker to listen to and did his best to convince his hearers that his way of thinking is right. These speakers are candidates respectively for the offices of United States Senator, Representative in Congress from the 2d District, and for Governor.

An orchestra from Concord furnished good music, and were very generous with their selections.

Andrew B. Stone acted in the capacity of presiding officer.

Mrs. Harriett Conn

The funeral of Mrs. Harriett McIlvaine Conn, widow of the late Chester Conn, who died at her home on Wallace street after a long illness, was held on Friday afternoon at the Presbyterian church, Rev. William Thompson saying words of comfort to the family.

Deceased had lived in town all her life, she having reached the age of 76 years, and was well and favorably known by a large number of people, as a nice woman in every way, a loving mother, kind neighbor, and ever ready to help and encourage a good cause. She will be greatly missed in the home by those whom she leaves—two daughters, Mrs. W. F. Russell, of Antrim, and Mrs. Perley Russell, of Greenfield, and several grandchildren; they all have the sympathy of the community in their affliction. Interment was in the family lot at North Branch cemetery.

New Egyptian Flag Has

Crescent and Three Stars

Hardly had the new minister from Egypt, Seifoullah Yousry Pasha, arrived in Washington and unfurled the Egyptian flag, consisting of a red field with three white crescents and three white stars, than word came from King Fouad that a new flag had been adopted. This new flag consists of a dark green field—the prophet Mohammed's color—bearing a white crescent and the three white stars. Of course, in an astronomical sense, it is impossible for stars ever to shine within the crescent of the moon as here shown, but it makes a handsome flag design.

Smiling Porches.

More houses are being built with inclosed porches than ever before; you may walk down long streets of dear little homes whose porches smile at you through tiny panes of glass. You pass medium-sized places with grounds, comfortable houses set back from the road, and large mansions—in every one somewhere you catch the glimpse of an inclosed porch-room. Old-fashioned houses follow suit, and back of the rounded Colonial pillars are fitted small-paned glass partitions that inclose the porch as efficaciously as though it had been built that way in the beginning. In the summer these are lifted out, leaving the porch as before.—The Designer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowles have returned home, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowles, Jr., at Wilmington, Del., and with another son, John Knowles and family, of Quincy, Mass.

The eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Atwood passed away at hospital in Grasmere on Wednesday last and the funeral was held at the Congregational church on Friday at 3 o'clock. Rev. E. C. Osborne officiated.

Friends of Paul Brooks are pleased to know that he has completed the electrical course at a trade school in Connecticut, and now has a position as first-class helper in the Malleable Iron Works, New Britain, Conn.

Miss Frieda Edwards started for Hillsboro on Friday evening last but a blow-out delayed progress, so she did not arrive there until 11 o'clock; her sisters and friends expected to attend the High school reception and Miss Frieda the S. of V. inspection.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson made a trip South without a mishap to their auto, going 3000 miles, six days going down and five days returning. Then they went to Keene and parked their car for a short time in the square; a horse ran away, and struck their car, so it will occupy a repair shop for three weeks or more.

Mrs. F. A. Seaver carried Mrs. Hawkins, Miss Lawrence, Rev. Osborne and Mrs. Gordon to Peterboro on Thursday evening of last week to hear Miss Slatery speak. Her topic was "The Nations;" first, the passion of possession, second, the passion to know, third, the passion to serve. Miss Slatery is a wonderfully interesting speaker, with a keen sense of humor and an observation which takes in all the detail of this world of war, which she so ably pictures.

EAST ANTRIM

Bert Davis is at home, after being in different towns building roads.

Miss Harriett Collins and mother, of Lexington, Mass., are stopping for a season with Mrs. Trask.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle, Mrs. Trask, Miss Harriett Collins and mother were business visitors in Keene recently.

Mr. McAskill, of Kansas City, Mo., is visiting in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Davis.

Robert Munnhall and Lucius Parker have the management of the state road that is being built, beginning at Hillsboro line and going towards the Branch past the Robert Dickie place.

On September 26, a party of about thirty neighbors and friends called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Tuttle and spent a most enjoyable evening. Games and music were indulged in by those present, and then quantities of ice cream and cake were served. At a late hour the company departed for their homes, after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle many years of happiness.

Regarding Old King Tut

Three thousand years ago lived an Egyptian King named Tut-Ankh-Amen. It sounded like a Stutter and the Gang at the Luxor Golf Club called him "Tut."

When Tut reached the Cake Eater age and got his Hair plastered back Right—he died. Dying was one of the leading Egyptian In-Door Sports and Tut's death was a Major Event. They slipped him into a Swell Tomb in the Valley of the Kings.

Three thousand years later a Party of Snoopers dug up Tut's Tomb and all the Junk buried with him. The Advertising Men took charge of the remains and in a few weeks gave him a Rep which made Charlie Chaplin's, "Doug's" and "Day-by-Day" Coue's look like a Punctured Tire in comparison.

Dead for 3000 years! Lost! Forgotten! Then, Bang! Advertised—and a whole world hollered for more news of Tut!

If Advertising could thus put life into a Dead One—what can't it do for a Live One?

For a Live Business?—For your Business?

They could have dug up a hundred Tuts in the desert and if they had kept the good news to themselves—only a few Bald-headed Historians would ever have known it.

You can have the best Merchandise in the World. But if the World does not get Hep to it—the business will sleep along peacefully.

Remember Tut!

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten?

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overacting kidneys, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

Good Comparison. When we see a man who can't accommodate himself to other people's points of view, we think of the farmer who wouldn't build a storm-cellar because he didn't approve of cyclones.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale by Mary Graham Bonner

LUCY'S LOYAL FRIEND

You have heard of Lucy before, without a doubt. But if you have not heard of Lucy I will tell you about her at once. She is very lovely.

How Gracefully She Had Danced. She is very popular. Her mother loves her and her Granma loves her and so does her aunt and so do the neighbors and so do all her small friends.

Then the Tonsil Twins called upon her and they had to be simply taken right out of the way. And now the other day Mean Scraggy Scratch decided he would pay her a visit.

All of the members of the Scratch family aren't mean. They give little scratches which don't amount to much. But Mean Scraggy Scratch is different. He gave a scratch so that it really hurt and so that Lucy had to be in bed for a time until Mean Scraggy Scratch's work was taken out of the way.

Now Lucy had been very busy before Mean Scraggy Scratch went to call on her. She had been dancing and had gone to dancing school. She had danced in a beautiful blue bird dance when she had looked like a lovely blue bird herself with a blue costume and blue upon her fair hair.

Just give her a usual scratch which won't bother her at all," said the other members of the Scratch family, but Mean Scraggy Scratch said: "No, I shall pay a visit upon her for awhile."

But her loyal, little, quiet friend was almost the most comforting of all. He was a little toy brown monkey. But Lucy loved him dearly.

Of course he did not go to dancing school with her, nor did he go roller skating. But just as soon as Lucy was ill and as long as she would have to stay quiet, there was her little monkey.

He Knew. Teacher—And what was Washington's farewell address? Bright Boy—Heaven, ma'am.

Lay Poison for Borers in Fall. Most Serious Pest of Trees and Must Be Combated to Get Good Fruit.

Throughout much of the peach-growing district east of the Rocky mountains from Canada to Florida, orchardists are troubled with the damaging work of the peach borer, the most important and serious pest of these trees and one that must be combated relentlessly if the peach is to be grown.

Use Paradichlorobenzine. In these experiments it was found that the chemical paradichlorobenzine, for which the abbreviated name "paradichlor" is suggested when referred to as an insecticide, could be used successfully in control of the insect.

Remove Dirt Mounds. Under average fall weather conditions most of the chemical under the soil covering will have evaporated in four to six weeks, killing from 90 to 100 per cent of the borers.

Make Stack Silage When No Silo is Available. Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station, says that farmers without silos can preserve green and immature corn by the stack method of making silage.

Most Important to Keep Sheep Free From Worms. It is most important to keep sheep free from tapeworms. These worms come from ripe segments dropped by infested sheep on the pastures so that old, or permanent pastures soon become tainted for sheep.

Improve Marketing Plans. More farmers adopted improved practices in marketing their products in 1923 than in any other single phase of farm activity in which better methods established by experience and experiment were demonstrated by cooperative agricultural extension workers.

Dress Turkeys for Market. Farmers near the city markets, and particularly those in the middle Atlantic and New England states, often dress the turkeys and either sell them direct to the consumer or to city dealers.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. Fundamental Principles Discussed in Bulletin.

The fundamental principles of apple growing are discussed in a new bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture which treats in particular of apple growing east of the Mississippi river.

Dairy Products Perfect and Economical Food. It has always been known that milk and other dairy products were very healthful and economical foods, but these facts were not fully realized until scientists made their startling discoveries, within recent years, concerning those mysterious substances known as vitamins, which are contained in milk, butter, etc., and which are absolutely essential to the growth and health of the old as well as the young.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. The aim of Farmers' Bulletin 1300 is to help the grower in meeting some of the problems of apple orchard planting and maintenance. A copy may be secured upon request, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. Various agencies and organizations, such as the United States Department of Agriculture, national, state and local health organizations, doctors, nurses, etc., the national dairy council and many commercial organizations, have given these facts enormous publicity and advertising, and have educated the public to a greater appreciation and knowledge of the value of dairy products.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. Pull out and burn all bean vines infested with rust. Give special feeding and attention to hogs to be shown at fairs.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. The successful dairyman must weed, feed and breed, and keep continually at it. The average American cow gives but half of the milk of the average cow in Denmark.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. Testing cows is a good deal like matrimony from the man's viewpoint—you always get the best results if you humor every whim.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. A bookkeeping system of the farm is like a speedometer on the sifter; it tells you how fast you're going and lets you figure the costs.

Apple Growing East of the Mississippi. Don't let the woodlot be used as a grazing ground. The feet of the cattle bruise the roots at the base of the trees and this gives entrance to insects and disease spores.

Modern Life

As two pedestrians were starting to cross a busy thoroughfare a man almost grazed them with his high-powered car and forced them back to the curb. Before they could remonstrate he was well on his way.
 "Isn't that Flubdub?" asked one.
 "The same."
 "I heard he was out of work."
 "He is."
 "Then how can he maintain an expensive automobile?"

President Coolidge Autographs Ball for Walter Johnson

"Dazzy" Vance Gave Himself His Nickname

Vance gave himself his baseball nickname. "Dazzy" sounds as if it refers to his blinding fast ball, but it doesn't. It means his "change," his slow ball.
 When he was with New Orleans somebody asked him what he had.
 "A fast ball and a dazzy," was the reply. Finally he wrote it down, and it leaked out that "dazzy" was his idea of the way to pronounce "daisy."
 So he became "Dazzy" then, and is "Dazzy" today. Today it's the National league batters who are "dazy."

Good Left Is Essential in Various Kinds of Sport

Many handball players are handicapped by a weak left. Tennis players often fail because the lack a good backhand. Ball players frequently fall down because they are weak going to the right or to the left. Many boxers have failed to advance because their left was almost useless.
 To these we recommend the case of William Harrison Dempsey as an example. When Dempsey began boxing he had a weak left hand. He decided he could never advance in his profession unless he carried a good left, so Dempsey tied his right hand to his side and sparred, using only the left. He did this for months and the result was that Dempsey developed one of the greatest lefts in ring history. The left played the biggest part in his ring success. It is not difficult to overcome weaknesses in sport, but it does require a vast amount of time, patience, perseverance. It calls for a "grind" that few care for and that explains why more do not succeed.

Bleacher Fan Thing of Past in Various Cities

These are silk stocking days in baseball. Not many years back the average fan would grab his hat, run for the street car, get to the ball yard just in time to hear "play ball," and enjoy a rare afternoon with the other sun gods in the bleachers.
 Now he steps into his automobile, motors leisurely to a palatial ball plant, and purchases a seat in the grandstand. The bleachers are almost forgotten. This is true of cities wherever professional baseball flourishes, from New York to the Main-street towns of the Dakotas. The average American demands the best, and if he has the price is willing to pay for it.
 This is true not only of baseball but of almost everything which the public supports from the movies to railroads. Once it was thought the height of extravagance to buy a pullman; in fact, most people thought it a fine treat to ride on the red plush of the day coaches. Nowadays one is often lucky to get a parlor car chair, even when a train is running light. And so it goes through the whole run of travel, amusement and sports.

Burleigh Grimes Helps

Here is shown Burleigh Grimes, a star of the Brooklyn pitching staff, who rounded into his best twirling form late in the season and materially aided the Dodgers in their drive for the flag.

THURSTON ONE OF SOX BEST "FINDS"

Considered Star Pitcher of American League.

Efforts on the part of President C. A. Comiskey of the White Sox, to obtain star outfield talent from the minor leagues, recalls to mind that Hollis Thurston, right-hand pitcher for the Sox, played the outfield, himself, not so long ago and did a good job of it. Just at present Thurston holds the distinction of being one of the best pitchers in the American league.
 But Thurston might never have been a pitcher if a California semipro manager hadn't faced the problem of going into an important Sunday game without a dependable mound man one afternoon, two years ago. Then Thurston crossed his path and the manager had an idea. The youngster had played a great outfield, was a wonder with the bat and had a strong arm.
 Thurston was told if he would go in and pitch, he would receive $100 for his work if he could beat the other club. Thurston pitched his first game on the mound but he didn't win. He went right down the old stretch to the ninth with the score 1 to 0. Then an infielder kicked one behind him and the game was lost to Thurston's team. Thurston as an outfielder was through. Thurston as a pitcher was just beginning and it wasn't long before a scout for the St. Louis Browns saw him and Owner Ball paid a big price for the youth who could pitch, hit and play the outfield.

Thurston is a glutton for work and when he failed to get as much of it as he thought necessary, under Lee Fohl's management, he consigned Lee to the fiery place one afternoon and waivers were asked on the native son. That is how the Sox happened to get him.

While Thurston appears to be a great young pitcher, either starting or relieving games, his hitting seems to stand out. He doesn't stop at mere singles, but intersperses the base knocks with doubles and triples.

No Hotel Episode in Town of Rock Island

One day when Heinie Zimmerman was playing in Chicago, the pass-gate boy sent a note out to Zim, practicing before the game, that a man named Kelly, from Rock Island, desired to crash the gate via Heinie's password.
 "I don't know any Kelly from Rock Island," Heinie sent back word. "I been in Rock Island a million times, but I don't know any Kelly."
 "Sure he knows me," Kelly told the gate man. "Ask if he doesn't remember that hotel episode in Rock Island. He'll know."
 "That proves he's a four-flusher," said Heinie when he got this message. "I know the town well and there is no Hotel Episode in Rock Island."

Sporting Squibs

Wonder if cheer leaders undergo regular training?

Umpires in the American league now wear uniforms of khaki.

The Detroit Tigers will train in Augusta, Ga., again next spring.

Washington beat New York Yankees 13 games to 9 in this year's play.

Jack Dempsey hasn't been arrested for speeding on the way to any fight.

The slogan of the American baseball fan is "anything to beat New York."

San Francisco has recalled Catcher Pete Ritchie from Albany of the Eastern league.

By the time he is sixty-five or seventy years old Walter Johnson will be quite a pitcher.

Phil Welner, southpaw pitcher, with Los Angeles under option, has been recalled by the Phillies.

Tilden is said to consider entering the movies. Well, he has already made good at the love game.

Pitcher E. Morris of the Nashville club, has been signed for next season by the Cincinnati Nationals.

The prize scholar will soon be occupying a humble seat in the bleachers rooting for the football hero.

Bill Clymer will get a Buffalo job to succeed George Wiltse, according to an International league rumor.

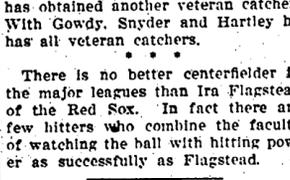

Pitcher Yowe of the Tyler (East Texas league) club has been purchased by the Cleveland Indians.

The racing whippet, a small dog bred for speed, is a mixture of the greyhound and terrier types. The fragile-looking dog can go nearly twice as fast as a man over a course an eighth of a mile long.

Manager J. J. McGraw, in purchasing M. J. Devine, catcher of the Newark team in the International league, has obtained another veteran catcher. With Gowdy, Snyder and Hartley he has all veteran catchers.

There is no better centerfielder in the major leagues than Ira Flagstead of the Red Sox. In fact there are few hitters who combine the faculty of watching the ball with hitting power as successfully as Flagstead.

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A Blessing to Suffering Women," Writes One

Louisville, Illinois.—"I certainly thank you for the great benefit I have received from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I first learned about it from my step-mother who got so much help from it. Several years ago I took it for inward weakness and since then I have taken it during the Change of Life and it has been a great help to me. It certainly is a blessing to suffering women and I take pleasure in recommending it. My health has been better this summer than it has been for five years. I am now able to do all my work and have canned 340 quarts of fruit and vegetables this summer."—Mrs. KATE McPEAK, Louisville, Illinois.

Wants Letter Used As Proof

Frankford, Pennsylvania.—"I am sure if women who suffer through the Change of Life as I have, with hot flashes, nervousness and other weaknesses, would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would be benefited as I was. My nerves were so bad that every little noise made me jump, but now I am not bothered that way at all. My husband says he really hated to look at me I looked so miserable. I hope you will use this letter as proof of the help the Vegetable Compound is giving me."—Mrs. ABBIE HARVEY, 5701 Leonard St., Frankford, Pa.

Forced To Remain in Bed

Carlyle, Illinois.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with severe nervousness and with disturbances of the entire system. These continued probably two years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could do none of my work and was not always able to be up. For ten days at a time I was forced to remain in bed with my hips propped higher than my head and the pains were terrible. The doctor helped some but each time I was forced to go over the same suffering. I had taken the Vegetable Compound in 1910 after my twins were born and it had helped me so I decided to try it again. I became better and gained in strength. I have taken it for about three years now but not steadily. I am able to do my housework but I avoid all heavy lifting and washing and ironing as I know I am not strong enough yet. I give the Vegetable Compound to my daughters and recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. LOUISA B. BRAND, 450 Fairfax Street, Carlyle, Illinois.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Not So Much Difference
Between Cities After All

Its worth remembering, we think, that never in the history of the world did small towns exist in any large number with such a high general level of education and behavior as in the Middle West today. If our material progress has somewhat outrun our development in artistic and "cultural" lines, after all we feel it is better that way than with the reverse condition. Also, every one of the traits Sinclair Lewis pokes fun at exists just as much among 95 per cent of the inhabitants of every big city as it does here among the cattle, corn and wheat, says Bruce Bliven in the New Republic. The New Yorkers go to the same bad movies, read the same trashy books, play the same bridge as ourselves. We can't see that they have any right to laugh at us; nor has anybody else. We are honest, hard-working, sober; if these are qualities which are to be despised then the world, we think, must certainly be coming to an end. We say grace at our tables three times a day without shame; we pay our debts when the government follows a policy which permits us to do so; and we give our children the best education our prairie colleges know anything about. It's pleasant, I agree, for you to hop on the 4:33 train and slide away from the little town, with its jealousies (certainly we have some), its gossip (which is terrific, I admit, being the natural product of active minds with too little to do), its daily round of the same few short streets, the same familiar faces, the same jokes in the barber shop, the same smiling stupid amiability at the church supper. But it is fair to remember that if you had been born here, almost certainly you would be here yet, making the best of it. Also, that if the rest of us didn't stay here the pickings would soon be very poor in those big Chicago restaurants you are so proud of.

Solar Time

Forenoon and afternoon are always equal, or very nearly so, by the sun; they are, at times, far from being so by the clock. The reason for this is that clocks give, not the actual solar time, but the mean or average solar time. Noon by the sun is when the sun is due south; that is to say, noon by the sun is midway or very nearly midway between sunrise and sunset. Noon by the clock may occur as much as one-quarter hour earlier or later than noon by the sun, the difference being known as the equation of time. It so happens that when the days begin to lengthen in December noon by the clock is growing relatively earlier at a rapid rate; in other words, is moving toward the time of sunrise and away from the time of sunset; the tendency being to shorten the forenoon and to lengthen the afternoon.

Had First Car Line

The first street-car line in the world was established in New York ninety-three years ago. The rolling stock consisted at first of one car and it ran on wooden rails. This was the only street railway in the world until 1852, when other lines were built in New York. Boston's first street railway was opened in 1856 and Philadelphia began a similar line the following year. In 1860 the first street railway was built in England at Birkenhead. London followed with one nine years later. Horses furnished the motive power for all these early "rapid transit systems." New York was the first and last city to have horse cars, as several were running up to eight years ago.—Detroit News.

Thibet's Famous Woman

Dorja Parne is the most famous woman in the Thibetan plateau. She is believed, by the natives, to have the power to turn herself and fifty other inmates of a monastery, into pigs. In this curious country a representative of the grand lama throws dice with a delegate believed to come from the devil, for the luck of the year. If the devil's delegate wins, evil luck is expected for a year, while if the grand lama wins, all will be well for the year.

Bulletin Issued on Watermelons

Handling of Product Is Precarious on Account of Many Factors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
"Watermelons." That is the name of a new bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The subject of watermelons is a big one, but the author of this bulletin has covered the ground thoroughly. The handling of watermelons is extremely precarious, he says, on account of the many factors that govern their sale on the market. Overproduction is one of the chief causes of loss, but weather conditions at the market are perhaps a more important factor. Cool, rainy weather will cause breaks of the market, while clear, hot weather will invariably stimulate the demand. Considerable losses are also caused by diseases which have their origin on the farm, but develop during transit.

Increase Yield and Quality.
Under existing conditions any decided increase in the acreage planted to watermelons for shipment, for the present at least, would be unwise, but there is great opportunity for improving cultural methods and for increasing both the yield and the quality of the melons. Watermelon as a rule should not be grown on the same land oftener than once in ten years, in order to avoid losses from disease. Plant on new land wherever possible and avoid the use of barn or feed-lot manure where either refuse melons or hay cut from melon fields have been fed during the previous season.

They respond to the use of commercial fertilizer, the amount being governed by the character of the soil and the cost of the fertilizer. Melons grown for the market should be thinned to approximately two on each vine or hill, in order to get marketable size, the pruning being done when the vines are dry. The vines themselves should be cut back or pruned. Watermelons should not be gathered until reasonably ripe, but not over-ripe. They should be clipped from the vines by means of a sharp knife, leaving the stems as long as possible, and hauled to the shipping point without injury to the skin or bruising. Melons should always be hauled and loaded into the cars the same day that they are clipped from the vines.

Ship in Clean Cars.
Watermelons should be shipped only in clean cars provided with at least three inches of dry bedding, and in case of box cars or ventilated cars a lining of paper around the walls is desirable, although not absolutely essential. In sections where stem-end rot is prevalent, watermelons should be handled with extreme care to avoid injury. Only melons with fresh green stems should be loaded, and the stems should be re-clipped and treated to prevent the development of stem-rot in transit. Melons should be handled carefully throughout, snugly packed in the cars, and should reach the market without unnecessary delay.

The profits accruing from watermelons growing are not large; therefore all items of expense in their production should be kept as low as possible consistent with good cultural and handling methods. Sudden expansion of the acreage planted is undesirable, and usually results in extremely low prices.

A copy of this bulletin, Farmers' Bulletin No. 1394, Watermelons, may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Night Pastures Favored for Cattle and Horses

A night pasture for dairy cattle and horses saves some time every morning, and good effects can be noticed on the stock. The cows will do much better if they can spend the night on pasture from the time the ground has warmed up until early fall. It isn't possible to have a night pasture on every farm. In such a case, it is better to spend a little time rounding the stock up in the morning than to not let them out at all.

Some object to letting their work horses out nights on pasture. A horse may sweat a little more, but seem to keep in better health the year round and takes much less care when given the run of a pasture. This does not mean to not give them an evening feed. We give our horses the regular feed in the barn when at work. On idle days they are turned on pasture and given a feed at night if they come up. When a horse can roll on the pasture sod he requires very little currying.

Japs May Discard Kimono

Owing to the fact that the cumbersome kimonos worn by Japanese women prevented many from escaping death during the earthquake and fire in 1923, prominent Japanese women have started a movement to discard the kimono as a national dress and to begin by dressing the children in modern European clothes.

Fairy Tale

PETER GNOME'S FRIENDS

"There was a time," said Peter Gnome, "when a great many people thought a gnome was a dreadful creature, and oh, dear, it did hurt my feelings."

"I like children so much and I wouldn't do any one any harm for anything."
"I know you wouldn't," said Witty Witch.

"Well, you know," she added, "I used to have a lot of enemies, but now I have many friends. They have heard more about me and they know that I'm not a horrible old person at all."

"I don't mean to throw compliments at myself, but neither did I like to have untrue things said about me. I didn't like it when it was said I would chase children and all those dreadful things which I wouldn't do for anything."

"Why, I like jokes, and parties and stories and good times."
"A lot was said about both of us," Peter Gnome went on, "which was untrue. But now I think children all know it was untrue and know that there aren't any dreadful gnomes and goblins and witches, but that we're all friendly little creatures just as the Fairies are."

"Well, I must tell you about some of my friends."
"There is Caroline. She has dark brown eyes and dark brown hair and such a dear little face."

"We wrote her a birthday poem not long ago. The Fairies and Brownies were really the ones who made up the verse, and this is what they said in the poem which they gave to her, or rather, sent to her, on her birthday:

"The fairies and the brownies
All send this verse and say
That they wish the charming Caroline
Many happy returns of the day!"

"Then I've I splendid little boy friend named Charles Norman. He is still very young, and I go and see him when he is asleep, and I hear of his funny little amusements. He really is still such a very, very young boy—but he'll grow fast enough and I'm waiting to see him play baseball in five or six or seven years from now!"

"The other day I saw him and he was paying great attention to an alarm clock."

"You're one of the few I know who likes an alarm clock," I said, "and may be you'll get over it!"

"His mother said he liked silk cushions which had a nice, pleasant, scratchy, rough feeling."

"But she said she thought he admired his own plump legs—that was what she said—more than anything else."

"Then I went to call on a little girl named Gwen, and she had been riding on a merry-go-round."

"I rode on a horse, too," she said, "and I loved it."

"I thought to myself, then, that it was as I had always thought—riding on a horse on the merry-go-round was so much, much more fun than riding in a seat."

"Next I saw a boy named Nicky, and he was reading a book, and when I saw him—so interested in the book—I said to myself:

"Now I know what they mean when they speak of a person who has his nose always in a book, for it just seemed as though he could not get deeply enough into the book, he liked it so much."

"Later I saw a little girl who said she didn't like the country, nor flowers, nor the birds, nor the bugs, and she hated the rain, and the sun in the country was too hot and that made me feel very sad. For it seemed as though she missed so much pleasure feeling that way, but I cheered up when I saw a picnic being given in the woods."

"I knew that those who didn't enjoy the country and all its wonders were very, very few."

How Could He Tell?
Two policemen, operating a speed trap, were watching for scorchers. One gazed up the road, the other down the road.

"What are you smiling at?" asked one without turning his head.

How could he tell that his partner was smiling?
Let some one guess on this awhile. Then tell them the answer: The policemen were facing each other.

Film Shows Control
of the Grasshopper

Government Picture Shows Methods of Fighting Insect.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Hoppers," a film dealing with grasshopper control, particularly in the western states, has just been completed by the United States Department of Agriculture. This picture shows various methods of fighting grasshoppers, including the hopper catcher, the "balloon," and large flocks of turkeys, but particular stress is laid upon the poisoned bait method of killing hoppers, and upon thorough plowing and harrowing of fields for destroying hopper eggs. Scenes illustrative of a community campaign, including a big "mixing bee," constitute the body of the picture. The bureau of entomology advocates such neighborhood campaigns as an effective means of checking grasshopper infestations in the spring and early summer.

Interesting features of this picture are scenes taken on "grasshopper glacier" in Montana, where prehistoric hoppers are found frozen in the ice, and scenes taken in Africa showing great flights of grasshoppers such as are supposed to have figured in the Mosaic chronicle of the Plague of Locusts.

The film is in two reels. It will be circulated through the film distribution system of the Department of Agriculture and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short specified periods, or may be bought by authorized purchasers at the laboratory charge.

Diseases and Pests of Many Garden Vegetables

From the time the seeds of garden crops are put into the ground until the crops are gathered, diseases and insects may appear that must be fought. Vegetable troubles are due to numerous causes, including unfavorable soil conditions, too wet or too dry, too rich or too poor, lack of humus or lime, weather unsuited to some crops, careless use of fertilizers, or attacks of fungi or other parasites. The adoption of the best horticultural practice—crop rotation, the careful application of fertilizers suited to each crop, adequate cultivation, the planting of all crops in their proper season—is important for the successful growing of garden crops. The control of diseases due to fungi, bacteria, and other enemies requires special additional treatment, as does the damage caused by insects.

The purpose of Farmers' Bulletin No. 1371, issued by the Department of Agriculture, is to present briefly control measures for the more important insects and fungous and bacterial diseases of the home-garden vegetable crops.

Best Plan to Save Feed
by Discarding All Males

It will cost about $1.50 to feed each male in the poultry flock until next year, and since the males are of no value to the flock until next breeding season, it is natural to ask, why feed them for eight months without returns, especially when new blood is needed to help build up the flock?

You can purchase new cockerels from any reliable breeder and save the feed money and time in raising them, and new cockerels will mean better baby chicks and a larger percentage raised next year, according to poultry specialists.

Infertile eggs will keep better during the hot summer days, and they have a better market value than the fertile eggs. After a fertile egg germinates and the blood rings begin to form, the eggs are not good for human food. "Swat the rooster and produce infertile eggs" should be the slogan.

Farm Hints

Good seed costs less than poor seed.

In two months a field of weeds can sap the ground of moisture that would mature this year's crop.

Canada thistles can be eradicated. They are indeed hard to kill, but clean cultivation will turn the trick.

Take an interest in your garden. It will be a pleasure for you to care for it, rather than a drudgery.

Rebuilding isn't always necessary to make farm homes attractive. Paint and shrubbery will work wonders.

Prepare to dust the Irish potatoes with arsenate of lead for the control of the Colorado beetle, or potato bug.

High corn yields are most likely to be gained on fields planted to clover, alfalfa, or sweet clover the year before.

Dust cabbage plants with arsenate of lead for the control of cabbage worms. This may be more efficiently applied when the dew is on the plants in the early morning.

Broom corn will succeed on any good corn soil. There are two general varieties grown, the dwarf and the standard, which refers to the height of the stalk and the length of the bush.
