TWO SOCIETIES CONTINUE TOGETHER

Methodists Again Accept Invitation From the Presbyterians to Worship With Them for One More Year

As a result of the meeting at the Woodbury Memorial Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening last, it was decided to continue to worship with the Presbyterian society for one more year beginning April first next, on invitation from this society. This matter was laid before the constituency of the church, rather than the quarterly conference, and this latter body was guided by the action of the larger body, whose vote was somewhat closer than had been anticipated, yet as the majority rules it was announced that the present arrangement would be continued.

At seven o'clock a chicken pie dinner was served to about seventy-five members of the church and congregation, in the dining room, and a most satisfying menu was set before the company, and it goes without saying that everybody did justice to every single item on the bill of fare. Mrs. D. Quinlan made and cooked the pies and was present to look after the serving. A dozen young men and women were waiters and their service was fine in every way.

After supper had been concluded Rev. Edward A. Durham, district superintendent, gave an interesting and explanatory talk concerning the local situation as he understands it; gave all present an opportunity to express their ideas and preferences in the matter; and then asked that an informal expression be given, which was done by secret ballot.

Following this part of the program, the adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference was held in the lecture room and the attendance of officers was unusually large. Reports were read and routine business was transacted, closing up the business of the conference year, as the annual session of the New Hampshire conference will be held in April.

The activities of this individual society will be continued as they have been the few years past since the two societies have been worshipping together.

The Ladies' Auxiliary

Of the William M. Myers Post, No. 50, American Legion, held its regular meeting on Monday evening of this week. The Legion members were guests of the evening.

The committee on flags and standards for the streets reported progress.

The Leap Year ball committee reported that the Legion had appointed a committee to work with our committee. The date will be March 16, more particulars of which will be given later.

It was voted to purchase 500 poppies for sale on Memorial week.

Voted to have calendar cards and selected a committee for same.

At the close of the meeting the President presented Commander Donald B. Cram and bride (the latter was our initiate this evening) a cut glass bowl.

A social hour followed refreshments of cake and ice cream.

Patriotic Night

Was observed by the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 85, on Tuesday evening, February 21, at 7.30 o'clock, in the G.A.R. hall, by a goodly number. After necessary business was transacted regarding flags and purchase of trees in Franconia Notch, etc., Mrs. Sides, Patriotic Instructor, had a very interesting and instructive program prepared, besides music by Miss Wilma Allen, and singing of patriotic songs requested by the Department W. R. C.

After the meeting, a social time was enjoyed and refreshments served, consisting of sandwiches, punch and a Washington pie. Little red hatchets were also in display.

Next regular meeting will be held March 6.

Town Meeting dinner will be served as usual in I.O.O.F. hall.

Local 4-H Club Leaders Meet

A group of leaders from the 4-H Clubs organized, in the western part of Hillsboro county, met at the home of W. R. Linton on February 17. Kenneth Gibbs, Local Club Leader and organizer, of Milford, had charge of the meeting. He gave an instructive talk on Club work and how to keep the children interested in the work. Each of the leaders reported on their respective clubs, how the clubs were growing in membership, etc. Mrs. Wells, Deering leader, reported her club organized May, 1927, with nine members, has increased to 33; has purchased a lot of land, and is now building a club house.

Mr. Linton was elected chairman of the organization to be known as the Local District 4-H Club Leaders. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Ruth Weston, Hancock.

The Annual Washington Dinner

Of the Presbyterian ladies' mission circle was given last Wednesday evening and about two hundred and seventy-five fed, two tables being set up to accommodate the number. Besides the people in town who attended, there was an auto party of fifty from Hillsboro. The dinner consisted of scalloped oysters, scalloped potatoes, cold meats, hot rolls, salads, Washington pies, ice cream, cake and coffee.

Notwithstanding the large number, the service was good; plenty of food and that which was of the best. Everyone was pleased with their dinner and the way it was prepared and served, and spoke highly of these qualities.

Following the dinner, an hour's entertainment was given, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, farce and readings, which was largely attended and apparently greatly enjoyed. The affair from every angle was a decided success.

Fourth of July Celebration

At a recent meeting of the William M. Myers Post, No. 50, A. L., it was suggested that as far as possible the 4th of July celebration in Antrim would consist of the following program:

Parade
Two Ball Games
Band Concert
Fireworks

This is only a tentative program of the day's activities and will doubtless be changed or added to as time goes on. Announcements of this nature will probably be made in these columns from time to time so that the people of the town may know what is being planned and feel free to discuss the coming celebration with members of the Legion and to offer helpful suggestions. The various committees have not yet been appointed but will soon be selected and their names published.

The members of the Post feel that it is not too early to begin plans for the event and it is hoped that everyone in town will catch the spirit of this thing and help various committees in their work so that we may have a bang-up celebration.

Albert H. Hunt for Delegate!

A member of the Governor's council from our district, Hon. Albert H. Hunt, of Nashua, desires the honor of attending the Republican National convention as one of the seven delegates from this state. As a man unusually fitted for this position, The Reporter feels that Mr. Hunt should be elected. This election comes on the same day of the Town election in March and a special ballot will be provided. Our people will do well to vote for Mr. Hunt to accompany such strong men as Gov. Spaulding and Senator Moses, and others who are likely to be elected to this very responsible position.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Dissensions in the Pan-American Conference—Political Gossip.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

INTERNATIONAL discord was rife in the Pan-American conference at Havana during the week, and it became increasingly evident that plans for the adoption of a convention putting the Pan-American union on a re-organized permanent basis could not be put into effect yet. They were blocked mainly by the attitude of Honorio Pueyrredon of Argentina, who still insisted that the convention must contain a declaration against trade barriers in the form of high tariffs and who declared he would not sign a convention without that feature. His government, however, instructed him to sign the convention with reservations, whereupon he resigned both as head of the Argentine and as ambassador to the United States. The modus vivendi then adopted by the conference for the government of the Pan-American union until the governments shall ratify the new convention provides for continuance of the resolutions in effect with a few modifications.

Then, in a plenary session of the conference, the matter of immigration regulation came up, and three resolutions, all aimed at the policy of the United States, were adopted. To each proposition, as it was adopted, Ambassador Fletcher, a member of the United States delegation, made the reservation that the United States regards immigration a purely domestic question and legislation thereon exclusively the function of the United States congress.

One of the resolutions provided that any American republic may restrict immigration from a non-American continent. Immigration into the United States from the other American republics and from Canada and the West Indies is now unrestricted, but the Coolidge administration favors the extension of our restrictive policy to countries in the western hemisphere and the question is to be considered by congress at this session.

The convention for regulation of commercial aviation among American countries, favored by the United States delegation, was adopted. But the Americans lost a point the day before when the committee on public international law adopted a rule of war that would operate to prevent any American republic from arming merchant ships against submarines. The fight for this resolution was led by Doctor Podesta of Argentina and the vote was 11 to 4. It is not likely that the United States will accept it.

The same committee, on motion of the Mexican delegate, asked that the Pan-American union convene a commission of experts to consider plant quarantines. Mexico especially objects to United States regulations that bar importation of Mexican fruits and plants infected with insect pests. Ambassador Fletcher gave notice that the United States would not consent to arbitration of plant disease quarantines.

Fascist Italy contemplated with satisfaction the dissensions in the Havana conference and looked on the meeting as a virtual failure. The opinion of the Roman press was that the major Latin-American nations, in order to escape from the hegemony of the United States, should seek cooperation with Spain and Italy, "which represent Latin civilization in the world."

HERBERT HOOVER, secretary of commerce, is now formally in the race for the Republican Presidential nomination, for he has consented to the use of his name in the Ohio primaries against Senator Willis. Under the Ohio law a candidate must give consent to the use of his name, and Mr. Hoover went that far, and then stopped for the present. He decided not to take the stump anywhere during the pre-convention campaign and to remain in the cabinet; and he asked that expenditure of money in his behalf be "strictly limited and rigidly accounted for." Willis' supporters in Ohio at first affected to be unalarmed by the Hoover move, asserting that it was brought about by a "group of state politicians without prestige" and would be without avail. But their complacency was disturbed when Maurice Maschke, national committeeman from Ohio, deserted the favorite son and announced he would support the secretary of commerce, believing him the strongest man the Republicans could select. Senator Willis was astonished and accused Maschke of having repudiated promises of support. The Hooverites predicted that Hoover would win from 16 to 24 of the state's 51 delegates to the convention. In a letter to Maschke Senator Willis more than intimated that the wets prefer the nomination of Hoover. "The chief newspaper supporters of Mr. Hoover openly state in their editorials and news columns that they are supporting Mr. Hoover for the nomination on the Republican ticket and falling in that, they will give their support to Gov. Al Smith," the letter said. "This makes their purpose and attitude in the matter very clear. I cannot believe that you and your organization sympathize with such a viewpoint."

Managers of the Hoover boom plan to enter nine or ten of the seventeen primary states. Their estimates of the initial Hoover strength in the convention run from 325 to 375, and they profess to be certain that he will be far ahead of Frank O. Lowden, whose vote on the first ballot has been predicted at 250 or more. The convention will have 1,039 delegates and 545 will be necessary for the nomination.

PROSPECTS for a long and bitter fight in the Democratic convention are increased by the news from Albany that Gov. Al Smith will insist that the platform contain a plank calling for modification of the Volstead act. This is his reply to the statement of McAdoo that no wet will or can be the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and at least it shows he has the courage of his convictions. Recent canvasses have shown, it is said, that at the start of the convention the South will be almost solid against Smith, the exception being perhaps Louisiana. But it has been supposed that a lot of southern delegates would shift to the defendant was saved by the technicality.

COLONEL LINDBERGH wound up by flying from Havana to St. Louis without stop. From the time he left Washington on December 13 he had flown 8,300 miles in 119.31 flying hours and without mishap. Secretary of War Davis has expressed the hope that the colonel will now give up all stunt and dangerous flying, but the young man indicated that after a rest he would resume his work in that line. Capt. Joseph F. Donnellan, who started from Chicago to fly to Chile, abandoned his trip at Havana because the fogs made it too perilous for a single-motored plane.

HERBERT HENRY ASQUITH, earl of Oxford and Asquith, greatest leader of the Liberal party since Gladstone, died at his country home on the Thames near Oxford after an illness of two years. He was prime minister during the stormy years from 1908 to 1910, directing the course of the empire in the first two years of the war, after which he resigned to let Lloyd George, a more vigorous man, take the helm. In recent years he and Lloyd George had disagreed seriously and this almost split the Liberal party, but in October, 1926, Asquith retired from party leadership. Prominent men of all parties paid tribute to the earl's great qualities when his death was announced, and parliament adjourned for a day. Burial was offered in Westminster Abbey but was declined by the family because of the known wishes of Earl Asquith.

Lee O'Neil Browne, a veteran member of the Illinois legislature and widely known lawyer, met tragic death at his home in Ottawa when he fell from an embankment into the Fox river and was drowned. Eddie Foy, old-time comedian who was known throughout the country died suddenly in Kansas City during what he had said was his farewell tour of stages on which he had appeared during more than half a century. He was seventy-three years old and his real name was Edwin Fitzgerald.

PUBLIC utilities of the United States are to be investigated, but not by a senate committee as Senator Walsh of Montana desired. Senator George of Georgia and many others opposed the Walsh plan and radicals of both parties supported it. Finally the Montana senator's resolution was amended to provide that the federal trade commission should be directed to make the investigation and in this form it was adopted.

The inquiry is to apply to utility corporations doing an interstate business, and also will affect corporations holding the stocks of two or more public utilities operating in different states. The resolution directs the commission to go into the pertinent facts in connection with the securities of utility corporations, the extent to which holding companies or their stockholders figure in the situation, and whether any legislation should be enacted by congress to correct abuses. The resolution also authorizes the commission to inquire into the extent to which utility corporations or their officers seek by the expenditure of money to control elections of President, vice president, or United States senators, or to influence public opinion.

FARM relief legislation is again before the senate, for its agricultural committee has reported favorably on the revised McNary-Haugen bill. As altered, the measure meets many of the objections of President Coolidge to the original bill, but it still carries the equalization fee provision. An almost identical bill, introduced by Representative Haugen, was still being discussed by the house agricultural committee; but it was hoped by the senate leaders that it would be reported and acted on by the house before it became necessary for the senate to take a vote. The house committee heard last week the new proposition of B. F. Yoakum that the marketing problem be turned over to farm commodity organizations working under federal charters.

INDIANA'S great political scandal of 1924 became virtually a closed incident when Gov. Ed Jackson was acquitted on the charge of having conspired to bribe former Gov. Warren T. McCray. This verdict was directed by Judge C. M. McCabe on motion of the defense because the state had failed to prove that the bribery conspiracy had been concealed, and therefore the statute of limitations ran against the charge. The prosecution had produced a lot of evidence sustaining the bribery charge, but the defendant was saved by the technicality.

China is certainly the home of the delicatessen idea. The cramped house space, teeming with children who did not have the grace or the luck to die, has made cooking or a near approach to the family table well-nigh impossible, and everywhere savory little-messes cooked over charcoal are sold at an incredible cheapness, and small bowls of steaming delicacies are always being carried through the streets for morning or evening consumption. The river is no exception. Cook boats are everywhere and the principal object of sale is always food.

Food is tempting and cheap. A barge loaded with wool passes, with one leaking bale. Little handfuls of the precious commodity begin to dot the crowded waters, and instantly half a dozen small boats, poled by women and girls, screaming with excitement, dart from under your prow, shoot skillfully between the houseboats, and give chase to the desirable bit. Small children with long picks or skillets like butterfly nets on poles fish the treasure-trove from the water, swearing volubly as other boats and other treasure-seekers intercept a desirable morsel.

The water carefully squeezed out, the flotsam and jetsam are laid out to dry on the little decks. Each of the women and children risks life in this frenzied dart among the stream craft after a few cents' worth of wool. Presently water space is not at quite such a premium, and one begins to meet large boats, shaped like Noah's arks, swinging downstream. They are sagging with vegetables strange to Western eyes—great Broddingnagian things in green and white, like a Bakst stage setting. They are going with the current, but are hastened in their progress by a strange-looking bent oar which resembles the winning half of a wishbone. The oar is usually operated by three willing workers, one of them almost always a tireless woman.

A baby, of two, or three, or four, often shows a shaven crown on the deck; but the fact that she is several

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)
THE river at Shanghai is full of houseboats—so full that you could cross dry-shod—but few there are among foreigners who ever inquire where these houseboats go or whether one can be acquired for a song in the proper key. Suffice it to say that prior to the present condition of civil war houseboats could be acquired, not, perhaps, for a song but for a few notes, and thereby several days of delightful adventure might be secured.

It is no trouble at all to secure a most admirable cook and a most painstaking coolie in this land of housekeeper's delight. A number one boy can pick them like ripe apples from a tree. And such food! Legs of frogs and breasts of guineas and pheasants and caviar and sweet potatoes and pancake suzette and wonderful things in bottles on the ice. And all for a very moderate sum, less than the hotel charges for the same period, and doubtless plenty left over for the number one boy himself.

In the tangle of boats at the Shanghai quay the one you hire is sure to be five or six boats from shore, and to reach it is necessary to "walk a plank." One is glad not to fall in, for the river at Shanghai is very, very dirty. However, there is scarcely space to fall.

How to get the boat out of its tangle is a problem. Coolies work and sweat with hawsers and lines and poles. Great cannon balls of coiled rope drop between the stern of one boat and the bow of the next to prevent chafing, and before long you find yourself being towed slowly but smoothly upstream perhaps in the wake of a Chinese hotel boat—a houseboat which is not rented to a well-to-do family, but which takes single passengers for a consideration and boards and lodges them during the trip.

The river is very wide at Shanghai, and harbor craft literally by the thousands swarm about. A bronzed Ruttercup, her bumpout plied high with peanuts and ling nuts, sings a strange little song at your side and sells her wares to people a little less poor than herself.

Pretty Girls of Soochow.
The towed houseboat arrives at Soochow in the morning and is soon tied up in the moat, outside and underneath the thousand-year-old walls. The ancient barricades look down peacefully enough. The battlements are pierced with loopholes, through which green trees grow and long strands of creepers veil the walls. Here and there are crumbling watch-towers.

Breakfast over, one finds bearers waiting by the riverside, two for each of the closed chairs in which one sits comfortably, looking out in three directions. The girls of Soochow are lovely. They are also Cordelia-voiced. The most famous "sing-song" girls in China come from Soochow, and those of them who have had the misfortune to have been born elsewhere claim Soochow for their nativity.

The beauty of the women is matched by the brains of the men, for in the palmy days of Chinese civil service the examining halls of Soochow sent more honor men to Peking than did those of any other Chinese city. The examination halls are in ruins, of course, together with the civil service system. Silly sheep now occupy the narrow stalls where scholars once pondered the Confucian classics.

Boston Ivy appropriately drapes the ago-garled trees, and the tablets erected in honor of famous scholars of the past are, many of them, so old that they cannot be deciphered, and the character is known only to anti-quarians.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Film Speeds 3 Miles Minute

Camera Slows Down Machinery to One Two-Hundredth of Speed.

Detroit. — Feeding movie film through a camera at the rate of three miles a minute to slow down rapidly moving machinery to about one two-hundredth of its normal speed is the feat accomplished by C. Francis Jenkins of Washington. At the meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers here Mr. Jenkins told of the "chronotone camera," one of his latest inventions, and how it may be applied to the study of automobile engines.

Instead of the 16 pictures a second, taken by the ordinary movie camera, or the 128 taken by the "ultra-rapid" camera, now frequently used in filming athletic events, the chronotone takes 3,200 pictures a second at its normal rate. If desired, it can be speeded up even further, and take as many as 10,000 a second. When these are projected in the ordinary machine at the speed of 16 a second, the apparent speed of the motion is correspondingly reduced.

Uses New System. In the usual type of motion-picture camera, the film is stopped for each exposure, so that it stops and starts 16 times a second. At such high speeds as those employed in the chronotone camera this is impossible, for the film would be torn to pieces.

A further difficulty is introduced, because with a single lens extremely short exposures would have to be made. Otherwise the picture would be blurred, just as if the object itself were close to the camera and moving at such a high speed. Mr. Jenkins has avoided this difficulty by providing 48 lenses, set in the periphery of a 13-inch disk, which turns at a speed of 4,000 revolutions per minute. The film moves back of this disk, so that the image formed by the lenses moves right along with the film. In fact, the exposures overlap, as the exposure is begun through one lens before that through the preceding lens is completed. At 3,200 exposures a second, each one is about one twenty-five hundredth of a second in length. With the rapid lenses used, and sensitive film, this is easily sufficient for a fully timed negative in bright sunlight. In the ordinary movie camera, at 16 a second, each exposure is about one thirty-second of a second in duration. Mr. Jenkins calls attention to the good photographic quality in the pictures, which is unusual in such high-speed studies.

"The pictures are true photographic pictures having half-tone values like other motion pictures, not mere shadowy outlines of grayish silhouettes," he says. "They are made out of doors as well as in the laboratory, of large subjects or small subjects, and from a moving vehicle as readily as from a fixed platform. Has Photographic Quality. The chronotone camera is an instrument for the study of many problems in science and engineering, some of which are not possible of accurate determination in any other way. Some additional applications of this instrument which immediately suggest themselves are a study of gun recoil, shell trajectories and plate impacts, airplane propellers and landing-gear action, bursting of balloons and air hose, tire action over obstructions, water streams, propagation of flame, engine valve rebound at high speed, cam-roller jumping, crankshaft whip; transformer explosions and circuit-breaker ures; shuttle thread knots and bobbin action, brakeshoe and draft gear application; in fact, anything that moves too fast for the eye to follow can be shown slowed down and can be examined in detail at leisure and repeatedly."

VAST REGION IN TEXAS STILL LACKS RAILWAYS

Area of About 50,000 Square Miles as Yet Unpenetrated by the Iron Horse.

Kerrville, Texas.—Although once-wild regions of America now are bound under a network of railroads, a vast domain of 50,000 square miles in Texas is still as free from iron rails as when it was first traversed by early Spanish explorers. And this in spite of the fact that Texas led the nation in railroad building in 1927. Into the railroadless region of Texas could be crammed the states of Maryland, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware and Rhode Island. The territory, spreading west from Kerrville to Alpine, embraces a fifth of the area of Texas.

Yet the sparsely settled region is not unproductive, it is known as the leading wool and mohair-producing territory of the world. Its mineral resources have been pronounced rich by government authorities, who name potash as one of the chief deposits.

Discovery of oil in the Pecos and San Angelo regions has resulted in the laying of pipelines across this hill country to inland shipping points and to ports on the Gulf of Mexico. Railroads penetrate no farther than to San Angelo, Alpine, Del Rio, Kerrville, Llano and Menard. In the thinly settled interior, inhabitants without benefit of railway travel rely upon motor car and radio to relieve the monotony of their isolation.

Simply Denotes Size The term horse chestnut is used, since horse in connection with fruits, etc., means large. The horse chestnut is a larger nut than the chestnut.

Stone Age Principle Survives in New Saw

Washington.—A modern refinement of a Stone Age method of fashioning rock has come into use in the United States this year as the result of an experiment conducted under the supervision of the bureau of mines.

The device, known as a wire saw, proved its utility in Pennsylvania slate quarries by cutting large masses of the rock without the necessity of drilling, blasting and cutting, which by old methods have resulted in considerable waste.

Dr. Oliver Bowles, one of the bureau's experts, arranged for the experiments in co-operation with quarrymen after government engineers had studied operation of the wire saw in Belgium. The saw is merely a long steel cable, drawn at high speed across a rock surface and fed continuously with wet sand. The sand acts as an abrasive and enables the cable to sink into the rock at a rate of about two inches an hour. Operation cost, the bureau asserts, is half that of methods now generally in use, the speed of cutting is much greater, and the waste of material is much less.

Notwithstanding the thoroughly modern aspects of the machine, the bureau engineers find its efficiency depending upon the same phenomenon which prehistoric man utilized to make his arrow heads and tools of stone—the effect of abrasion or grinding.

Sea Lion Is Trainer for Endurance Swim

Berlin.—With a sea lion as a training partner and pacemaker, Otto Kemmerich, of Husum, German professional swimming champion, hopes to establish a new world endurance record of 48 hours about Easter.

Kemmerich, who ranks next to Ernest Virknoetter in Germany's list of long-distance swimmers, recently purchased a two-year-old sea lion from a Hamburg circus. The beast quickly became attached to his new master and learned to accompany him on practice swims. He now acts as a pacemaker, keeping a short distance ahead of his master.

Whether the sea lion will remain at his master's side throughout his world championship attempts is a question interesting not only swimming fans, but zoologists.

Kemmerich expects to make another attempt to swim the English channel with the sea lion as a possible strong-arm bodyguard. His previous attempt to swim the channel in 1926 failed when a large fish attacked him.

Whether the sea lion will remain at his master's side throughout his world championship attempts is a question interesting not only swimming fans, but zoologists.

All Lima Digging for Lost Gold of Incas

Lima, Peru.—The government has received a large number of applications from residents of Lima asking permission to excavate under various old buildings in the city where, legend has it, ancient Inca and Spanish colonial treasure is buried.

One spot in particular, situated on the "Calle Huertanos" (Street of the Orphan) where the Marquis Negrellos is said to have died, a bachelor, three centuries ago after burying beneath his home huge quantities of heavy gold plate, Spanish doubloons, and other coin of the realm, is being sought after as a site for "digging."

After getting permits the recipients set feverishly to work at the excavating. As far as is known, however, no success has attended the efforts yet.

Secluded Garden Spot Bound Up With Home

Fashion has decreed that fences, walls and every other barrier or boundary be abolished in landscaping a home. An appearance of spaciousness is created which is desirable in any and every city to take away that being-crowded feeling. However, the majority of the people are loath to give up their gardens, their favorite spot shielded from the eyes of the public, where they may retire to commune with their own thoughts; something which every one of us at one time or another have wanted to do and probably have done.

All who can possibly provide such a spot, should have one. One must not necessarily be a recluse to desire peace and solitude occasionally, and at such a time a shady, flower-laden spot, shielded from the public eye, the air filled with the fragrance of the blossoms, where one might sit and dream to heart's content or read one's favorite book at leisure and without disturbance, is oh, so heavenly.

It need not be necessary to enclose the entire property, just a small corner is sufficient. As an enclosure for a spot such as this no matter how small or how large, there is nothing that is more pleasing and attractive than a living hedge, or for any situation that requires enclosing, lawns, terraces, gardens, yards, etc. A lawn hedge is permanent, once it is established, and only a little shearing and pruning is required thereafter to make it very neat and trim. There is scarcely any other improvement which may be put upon a piece of property to increase its value and beauty more.—Detroit News.

Outside Shatters Add to Home's Appearance

It is frequently the case that when the home is first built necessarily stringent financial limitations prevent the incorporation of many features or embellishments which later can add much to the livability and attractiveness of the house.

An embellishment of this sort which may seem, offhand, nonimportant, is that of outside blinds or shutters, nowadays more useful for their addition to architectural balance and interest than for their original purpose of protection from storms.

The architectural type which best lends itself to the addition of the shutter is the colonial, but if proportion permits, shutters are quite as appropriate on any modern adaptation of design.

The colonial shutters may be of either the louver type or the solid blind or batten construction, usually pierced with some sort of characteristic design. Diamond, crescent, pine tree, candlestick and many other designs symbolic of the colonial era are popular and appropriate, but an individual design is probably best. Thus, one householder has pierced his shutters with the outline of a sloop, as he is a yachting enthusiast.

Proper City Planning

Individual students, familiar with the subject in all its phases, assert that city planning is hampered and seriously menaced by politics of a certain sort. Too many inferior aldermen, after voting zoning ordinances, or professing to favor them, pass orders in violation of the plan. Where favoritism and discrimination thrive, such orders threaten to nullify the zoning system. They create distrust and dislike of it. Chicago, for example, has known of instances where aldermen, by obtaining special orders out of harmony with the zoning ordinance, provided themselves with a source of private revenue.

Equitable city planning presupposes clean, capable, honest municipal administration.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tourist Camps

The economic value of the tourist and the effect of the itinerant population upon communities are being studied by the United States Chamber of Commerce through a survey now under way. Many communities have spent large amounts for such "tourist bait" as automobile camps, parks and roads, but while it is believed they make a profit, it never has been determined.

Stop Leaks at Once

A leak once started often will keep the best of repair men. It keeps getting worse. By and by a large area has to be stripped and reshelved to prevent the leakage that in itself may not cover one square foot. Stopping one leak counts for little, as new ones start operations without warning. Cheap shingles are expensive.

Clay Coping a Protection

Vitrified salt-glazed clay wall coping will enduringly protect any type of masonry or concrete wall from the effects of erosion at the top. It is inexpensive and easily available in various widths.

Money Well Spent

To make a town, big or little, beautiful, it is necessary to spend money. But why not spend money on that, if it's interesting?

Wouldn't Take Free Bread

Something for nothing failed to go over in Pittsfield, Mass., says the Boston Globe. A salesman trying to introduce a new brand of bread to that city stood on a busy corner with a truckload of freshly baked bread, all wrapped up, too, and was not able to give away a quarter of the entire load. Nine out of every ten persons would refuse to accept a loaf when it was handed to them.

Severe Head Colds and Sinus Trouble THE MOST ANNOYING OF ALL AILMENTS

Any stuffy nose from cold that does not clear up in a few days produces Sinus trouble. Some Sinuses are large cavities in the bones of the face. They are small (USA, BOMER, COMB) and when a cold gets into them it causes pain or pressure in the eye balls, over eyes, in temples and back of head. Fullness in ear, and mucus dripping in throat. This leads to a tickling cough, sore throat, head noises and catarrh. It is due to improper drainage. To clear this up require CAMPHROLE and inhalant according to directions. CAMPHROLE opens up the nose, and gets into the Sinuses, killing the germs that multiply by millions in those stuffy cavities, reduces the inflamed swollen mucous membrane, and gives good drainage for the discharge. This is what every specialist tries to obtain in order to get results. It is impossible for germs to live in the antiseptic atmosphere produced by CAMPHROLE. Keep a jar handy and use at the first sign of a cold.

There ain't no use of going through life grumbling,
And feeling blue,
Because things in this life don't "pan out!"

Just right for you;
Trouble's here, and trouble's come to stay—

But this is true:
Joy's here, too, fifty times as strong as trouble.

And it's for you!

This world's a garden full of flowers,
If flowers'll do,
Or it's a land where darkest shadows lie—

It all depends on you!

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. CHAPTER X—Continued

Rand helped with the Christmas party plans. On little white cards, gay with candles and holly, they printed the invitation.

Auntalmiry's Christmas Party at the Lone Pine Christmas Eve Five O'clock.

Just one week before Christmas, the budding boys waded through the snow all over the Evergreen end of the island, and delivered the invitations, one to every house. It could not have been more than ten minutes after she received the announcement that Alice Andover was to be seen sailing grandly up the hill, a sort of full-rigged majesty in her advance. Gay met her beneath the pine.

"Now don't blame me. I hadn't a thing in the world to do with it. I only lent her the cottage as she asked. She did everything herself. She sold everything, she owns to pay for it, and it isn't going to cost you a cent. She has gone without jelly, gone without butter, gone without cake, gone without sugar—it's her party, and none of our business, if you ask me." Alice Andover sank weakly into a chair. "I might have known it. That's the thanks I get. That's now folks take to good, honest, conscientious administration. And then the audacity to invite me to the party."

"Oh, please come! She'll be so disappointed if you don't come. She wants you to see how cleverly she has managed."

"Oh, I'll come. And since she's got the unmitigated audacity to have a Christmas party in spite of my orders, I'll send my presents as usual. Oh, I always give little things—people been here for years—all in the family, you know, and I being the administrator. So you can tell the foolish old woman I'll send my presents as usual. I've never missed one of Auntalmiry's parties yet, not since that first devil-cursed one fifty years ago when—"

"Oh, don't. She—she thinks maybe he is the Unknown Soldier at Washington; she—"

Alice Andover stared. She opened her mouth, closed it with great firmness and blinked hard at times.

"Unknown Soldier!—Good heavens. What next?" Then she added humorously, with a bright glint in her gray eyes. "Well, whatever he is, thank God, it is unknown. That's all I've got to say for Buddy Bridges—Unknown Soldier."

The next day Rand climbed the tall pine and strung it with Christmas lights from topmost point to lowest branches, round and round, a hundred little colored bulbs, and connected them to a switch beside the window where Auntalmiry could turn it on before the party. Auntalmiry was enchanted with the idea of wiring the tall pine; she had not dreamed of such royal welcome to her Christmas guests. For days before the party she talked of little else.

It was only three days before Christmas, the twenty-second of Deember. In the thick darkness of the early evening, that Ronald Ingram came again.

He entered hurriedly, his manner for the first time showing something troubled, something furtive. He glanced over his shoulder nervously, and closed the door behind him swiftly.

"I shouldn't have come," he began hurriedly. "But I had to. I came to Portland to close up some contracts, and I simply stole the time and made the trip over on the afternoon boat to see you. I must catch the first boat back. Short—but I had to see you. Gay, I have thought of you constantly. Your face has swum before my eyes, your voice rung in my ears, the light little touch of your fingers—"

He shook his head impatiently. "Mr. Ingram," she said with pretty dignity, "please don't do that. I assure you I do not like it."

"Oh, you think I am chaffing. But I mean it. Miss Delane, tell me. If I should sell out—all my interests—my business connections—would you—marry me? Would you even think of it? I know it is too soon for you to know— But would you let me come where you are, let me see you, try to make you love me— Is there any chance for me at all? I would have some money. I could take care of you. We could go any place—West, or to Europe, anywhere."

There was no doubting the sincerity of his words, the eagerness of his desire.

"Don't," Gay said gently. "You will spoil our pleasant friendship, and I have liked it. It is because you have been away, you have been lonely, perhaps worried. It isn't really I you want. Why, you don't even know me. It is just—woman's companionship, sympathy, soft things. That is all."

But he shook his head, clung to her hands. "Gay, it is you. Nothing else. Nobody else. You. From the moment I saw you down in the cave— Oh, I know you don't love me now—but couldn't you? If I get things all straightened out, and—do something else— Gay, isn't there a chance?"

From somewhere down the lane sounded the low siren of a car.

Ronald listened a moment, but still clung to her hand. "Gay, don't say no. Don't say anything. Just wait, think of me a little, and as soon as I can—I will come again. But try to think of me—if not with love—at least with a little tenderness."

Quickly he lifted her hands, palms upward, kissed them passionately, one after the other, crushed them to his face and went away.

Gay sank into the big chair and buried her face in her arms. A criminal! That artless, boyish, ingenuous man, with the pleading voice and the eager eyes? But even a criminal deserves some kindness of thought from the woman to whom he gives his love. Gay was very kind.

The next day, very early, Rand appeared at her door, dressed roughly for outdoor winter weather. In heavy oilskin coat and breeches. He was hurried in manner, preoccupied. He told Gay he was obliged to run down to Boston for a few days on business.

"Now you sit tight while I'm gone," he cautioned her. "I'm on the trail, and I'm going through with it. I've told the folks I'm looking for a job, and they won't expect me home until they see me. You just wait here. Say nothing to anyone. Do nothing. Don't set your foot in those woods under any circumstances. And at night, Gay, please, to please me, go down and stay with Auntalmiry. And don't worry, for I shan't be in any danger."

"You are not going to Boston," she said bitterly. "You are going into those woods, to lie under the piazzas and watch the murderers. They'll catch you, first. Rand, don't, please don't. What business is it of ours if they break the law? What are their affairs to us? Why should you risk your life—"

"Oh, there's no danger, Gay, not a bit of it. I'll be careful. I promise you. Just a little weather eye out for squalls. No, I am going to Boston. I have gone to Boston. Get that in your mind, and stick to it. I shan't be able to write you, and I may not be home for several days. Just wait for me, and don't worry."

But Gay did worry, worried heart-breakingly. But she would not go to Auntalmiry. Rand might come, and she wished to be there, waiting for him where he left her. He might need her—a shot in the night, a scream of terror—Gay set her small sleek head determinedly. Nothing, nothing in the world should keep her from going to him in answer if he called for help.

She was glad for the excitement of the Christmas preparations to occupy her hands, if not her thoughts, through the dreary days that intervened.

It never occurred to her that he would not be back by the twenty-fourth of December for the party on Christmas eve. But the morning passed, and he did not come. Gay had no heart for the laughter, the young excitement of the island lovers, the flushed joyousness of Auntalmiry. Rand did not come. It would be Christmas eve, her Christmas eve, and Rand did not come.

At three o'clock Gay took Auntalmiry by the hand and led her down to the Apple Tree, where she put her bodily to bed, tucking the blankets about her and begging her to take a sadly needed rest.

So it could have been but very little after three when she softly closed the door of the Apple Tree behind her and set her feet in the path through the snow to the top of the hill. And glancing ahead of her in the path, saw a man walking toward the cottage. Gay almost called out to him, expecting Rand, because she wanted Rand. But before sound left her lips she silenced the call, for she saw that it was a stranger, one who seemed to make his way unsteadily in the face of the brisk wind from the sea, staggering a little.

When he reached the piazza of the Lone Pine, he did not wait to knock, but opened the door slowly and went in, closing it after him. Gay was but a little way behind, and she ran in breathlessly, but stopped short in surprise when she did not find him in the living room nor the kitchen.

"Hello," she called. "Hello! Anybody up there?" But received no answer.

Frightened by the unnatural silence, and mindful of Rand's words of warning, she went to the desk, slipped her pistol deftly into the pocket of her heavy coat, and then she climbed the stairs, watchful and alert.

And there indeed she found him, lying face downward on the soft rug of her bedroom floor.

"What are you doing?" she demanded foolishly. "What do you want?"

He neither moved nor answered. So Gay went to him timidly and bent over him that she might see his face. His eyes were closed, his lips hard set. She tried to raise him, but his head fell limply from her hands.

She shrunk away from him, shuddering with fear.

CHAPTER XI

The crisp voice of Alice Andover had never sounded so sweet to Gay's ears as at that moment.

"Gay Delane! Where are you? I saw you take that foolish creature home, so I came to see if I could—What is the matter?"

Gay beckoned to her sternly from the top of the stairs. "Come up," she said, and her voice was hollow. "Come up."

Alice Andover was never one to hesitate in a crisis. She came at once, breathing hard. Gay pointed dramatically to the bedroom.

Alice Andover gave one wide-eyed glance and saw the prostrate form. "Good heavens, oh, good heavens! Where did he come from—where did you get him—I mean—"

"He came up the hill just ahead of me. Walked right in. Came upstairs, and evidently fell down there. Or lay down. There he is."

Alice Andover crossed the room and stood above him, touching the inert body tentatively with the toe of her shoe.

"Drunk," she said disgustedly. "Dead drunk." Gay breathed more freely, in some relief. "Oh, is that it? I—was afraid of—oh, terrible things!"

At that moment, spasmodically he moved, and his face rolled back into the light.

"Oh, oh!" Alice Andover's explanation was a startled gasp. "Oh, my God, I believe— Oh, poor Almiry, I believe it is Buddy Bridges. Come home to his poor trusting mother—dead drunk. Oh, it is all my fault. Oh, what in the world have I done? Buddy Bridges—poor Almiry. All my fault."

"Buddy Bridges? Oh, really? Oh, Auntalmiry—how happy—"

Then came sickening realization of the pain it would be to the little old woman to have him come home to her like this, dead drunk. Better a thousand times for her to live on in her trusting ignorance, fondly believing him an unknown hero, pure and fine. "Oh, poor Auntalmiry! See here, Mrs. Andover, this drunken creature shall not spoil the poor dear's Christmas party. The way she has slaved, and saved, and starved herself— He shan't! Let her have one happy night—it may be her last, since Buddy came home like this. He shan't spoil it. Not if I have to poison him."

Alice Andover, trained to efficiency by years of hard administering, suddenly became practical and decided. Being in charge of things always aroused her latent cleverness.

Flint Axes of Stone Age Found in Sweden

The 4,500-year-old-stock-in-trade of a Stone Age peddler in flint axes has been found by some workmen in a gravel pit in the Swedish province of Soendermanland. The peddler's hoard consisted of a number of light-gray flint axes of exquisite shape and workmanship, evidently hidden in the ground by the trader, who seems to have wandered a long way from the south of Sweden to barter his axes for the precious furs of the hunters of the Soendermanland forests. The poor peddler seems to have met his death, for he never returned for his axes that now are said to be the best find of its kind ever made in that part of Sweden.

The spelling of this sentence is said to trip up many of the best stenographers: "It is agreeable to view the unparalleled embarrassment of an harassed saddler or peddler serenely sitting upon a cemetery wall gauging the symmetry of a perfectly peeled potato."—From the Outlook.

"We'll just roll him over in the corner out of the way," she said briskly, and cover him up with the rug, and let him sleep it off. We'll lock the door, and keep him here till it is over."

"Will he stay drunk all night?" Gay asked. "Shouldn't we give him something—"

"Whisky! I wish we had some whisky. If we had time—maybe we could keep him drunk for a week. I don't know just how long it does last, but I know the party lasts all night. He may sleep it off."

"I have a little cognac. Brought it in myself—from Paris—in the toe of my dancing slipper. Real stuff," Gay said proudly. "I was keeping it for a wedding, but he can have that."

"Good! We'll give him a big-swig—of it." She brought out the nautical term with a nautical swag.

He neither moved nor answered. So Gay went to him timidly and bent over him that she might see his face. His eyes were closed, his lips hard set. She tried to raise him, but his head fell limply from her hands.

She shrunk away from him, shuddering with fear.

ger, both doubtless inherited from the long line of seafaring ancestors.

"We'll keep him as-tight as a lord—until the party's over."

Carefully but sternly they rolled him over half out of sight beneath the window-seat, and covered him.

So Gay brought the precious smuggled bottle of cognac, never yet unsealed, and they gave him a generous swallow, forcing the bottle between his teeth not without much difficulty. He choked over it and coughed painfully, while the conspirators held their breath in a panic above him. But presently he relaxed into troubled breathing again.

"That'll hold him for a while," said Alice Andover grimly.

They locked the door upon him and went downstairs. But when Alice Andover moved as if to go to her own home, Gay refused to be left alone in the house with the drunken creature upstairs, and Alice Andover was obliged to remain, fixing herself up for the party as well as she could with Gay's face powder and electric curlers. They had tea to strengthen their shattered nerves, and at five o'clock tiptoed up to the bedroom to give him another potent draught of the cognac. He swallowed this time with less difficulty, and as he drank, to their horror, his eyes opened, eyes large and dark, Gay noticed even in that horrible moment, eyes now visionless, not seeing. When the muffled heavy breathing recommenced, they tiptoed from the room.

Alice Andover, because the opening of his eyes had frightened her, was freshly furious. She shook her fist at the door when it was safely locked behind her.

BRIGANDAGE WANES WITH OLD LEADERS

Travelers in Mediterranean Countries Safe.

Rome—Brigandage in Mediterranean countries, traditionalized in opera and romance, is now at a low ebb. One by one the leaders of banditry have fallen into the hands of the authorities and in Italy, Greece, Corsica, Asia Minor and Turkey the lawless have been curbed.

Recently "The Wolf of Sina," who was captured by troops about the middle of the last century and sentenced to life imprisonment, died in a Calabrian village, where he had lived since his pardon, at the advanced age of ninety-three. Styled the last of the "classical brigands," the Wolf gave the government plenty of trouble before the forest wilderness of Calabria, a bandit domain for hundreds of years, was swept clean of robbers. Romantically slain by French soldiers not long ago, was a brigand who mixed in politics as well as carrying on the trade of an outlaw.

Found Easy Pickings.

The business of capturing travelers and holding them for ransom was revived by Mediterranean brigands about 1880 and far better systematized than it had been by the robber barons of the Middle Ages. Once it was discovered that the British government would pay ransom for those of its subjects who were too poor to settle for themselves, what amounted to guerrilla warfare against the British treasury was set afoot in Italy, Spain, Greece and other places infested by brigands.

The sum of £25,000 was paid for the release of Lord and Lady Lancaster, seized with a party of four in Greece, and three of the party were slain before the money was handed over. The governor of Gibraltar once paid out £27,000 as ransom for two Englishmen captured in near-by Spanish territory. Ransoms of size became the order of the day.

It was extremely difficult to trap the old-time brigands, who flung gold about freely among the peasantry, and not until the populace had been educated to understand that the bandit was a menace to them did it become possible for the Mediterranean governments to stamp them out. In the Pyrenees, the Apennines, Sicily, Corsica and the mountains of Greece and Turkey the brigand continued to flourish until recent years. Long ago he lost the complexion of a patriot or partisan, such as Fra Diavolo, Pietro Mancino and others of classical reputation, and became merely a preyer on his fellow-men.

Changed by Transportation.

The railroad, and still later the automobile, helped put an end to brigandage as a craft. Travelers no longer rode on horses over lonely ways or lumbered along in coaches stopping at inns whose proprietors might be in league with bandits.

The high ransoms demanded proved the final factor in the downfall of such brigands. The Mediterranean governments as well as the British were stirred to action by the protests of influential citizens and called out the troops in a general effort. Even then there were reverses: Andoloro, the Sicilian brigand, destroyed a company of soldiers before his capture, and Tchakirdji in Asia Minor dispersed Turkish forces sent against him.

The bandits of an earlier day appear to have been a long-lived race. There is record of Vassili Tchoumik, condemned to twenty years in Siberia at the age of seventy-four, escaping and finally dying in a prison hospital of injuries he had received at ninety-six.

Same Statue Used for Many Notables

Paris.—Statues with interchangeable heads, so a long series of notables could be honored with the same monument, date back before the Christian era, say French archeologists. The recent proposal in Warsaw that such an arrangement would be economical, recalled to the French that their research workers in Greece discovered that such a system was used more than 2,000 years ago.

As the name of the temporarily famous person could be inscribed just under the head, it was possible to make a new head in the likeness of the new notable and put it on the old marble base, for as long as the notable needed to be honored.

Vinegar Aids Reducing, but Costs Woman Life

Shrewsbury, England.—Literally pickled alive, a woman who for 30 years drank a pint and a half of vinegar a day, has died in Salop infirmary weighing 38 pounds.

Dr. D. A. Urquhart, who attended the woman recently, said that she never ate anything without washing it down with vinegar. At one time she weighed 112 pounds, but when the doctor was called she had taken no solid food for five weeks, drinking only vinegar, and weighed 38 pounds.

The coroner's verdict was death from chronic intoxication—the intoxicant being commercial vinegar.

BABY'S LIFE TO BE RULED BY SCIENCE

Savants Will Study Every Move of Girl.

New York.—Poor Harriet, Kallen. Her life is to be just one psychologist after another.

They are going to study her every gurgle, make notes on her first laughter, catalogue her first curiosity, analyze her moods and go into conference when she cries.

They want to know why she wiggles her toes and they hope to find out what makes her put her fist in her mouth.

Harriet doesn't know that she is to be the object of such close observation for the sake of science, for she is only six weeks old.

The reason for all this is that Harriet's family is just naturally interested in psychology. Her father, Dr. Horace M. Kallen, is a lecturer on philosophy and aesthetics and has been on the faculty of Princeton, Harvard and the University of Wisconsin. He is a disciple of William James and has written books.

The child's mother is the head of the Hamilton Grange school of New York.

The mother will specialize in the child's laughter; her father in her curiosity. Other scientists have been called in to divide the rest of the work.

Prof. John B. Watson will study the emotions and Prof. Edward B. Holt will devote himself to the physiological aspects of the case. He will watch the nerves and motor reactions and study the facial changes.

Ancient Bones Found in English Village

Rainham, England.—The importance of Great Britain as a field for further archeological survey has been borne out by several important discoveries made by workmen during excavations here.

Bones which are believed to have belonged to two ancient Britons who were buried at about the time of Julius Caesar's invasion were found in a stone coffin which was unearthed two feet beneath the surface.

The coffin was hewed from a solid block, while the lid was composed of two large stone slabs and several smaller stones. Fragments of bone were found inside.

A quantity of rubbish was also found inside the coffin, but one interesting discovery was a horn drinking vessel. Two clay pots, one almost spherical and without ornamentation, and the other about five inches high and bearing traces of crude design, constituted the remainder of the discoveries.

The finds are expected to be turned over to experts of the British museum for thorough examination.

Goats Replace Dogs in Laboratory Work

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Resourcefulness is as necessary in the scientific laboratory as it is in industry.

Dogs are among the most valuable animals for laboratory study in the medical sciences. In the South, however, they are difficult to obtain. Regardless of their lack of any sort of a dignified pedigree, hardly anybody is willing to part with them, even for a good price, in the interest of training physicians and surgeons to alleviate the ills for human beings.

No such sentimental feeling, however, attaches to goats. And they abound in the South. So Dr. George T. Pack of the University of Alabama medical school has turned to these mammals for experimental work in surgery and pathology, finding them valuable substitutes for dogs and much less expensive. They are not only as easy to handle as dogs, he has learned, but they stand operations well and their reactions in certain pathological experiments are satisfactory.

Six Pieces of Chicken Held Ample for Bride

Clarksburg, W. Va.—If a husband can furnish his wife six pieces of fried chicken, six biscuits, a pair of shoes, a dress, two suits of underwear and six boxes of snuff in a week, there is no ground for an action for non-support.

Such was the ruling handed down in Magistrate R. Edward Kidd's court here in a case wherein John Six, fifty-three, was sued for non-support by his bride, Naomi Six, sixteen years old. Six, employee of a dairy, said his girl-wife wouldn't even kiss him after he had bought her the things enumerated and lived with him only a week. Magistrate Kidd dismissed the case.

ASK SCIENTISTS TO FIX STATE BOUNDARY

Maryland and Virginia Seek True Line of Potomac.

Washington.—Instead of following the usual course of employing lawyers, Maryland and Virginia have called in scientists to end their 200-year-old boundary dispute.

The boundary is described by law as the southern bank of the Potomac river from Harper's Ferry to its mouth at Smith's Point "without following indentations, bays, creeks, inlets or affluent rivers." At such points it follows a straight line, from low-water mark at the other.

That description was accepted in 1877, when the last of a series of compacta, the first of which was drawn up in 1688, was ratified by the state legislatures and congress. Its legality is not in dispute. The question is, What does it mean?

Resulted in Controversy.

Inability to produce a satisfactory answer has resulted on some violence and much controversy for the last 50 years. Jurisdiction over rich oyster beds and fine hunting grounds is involved.

Some months ago the problem reached a crisis. Interpretation of the legal description of the boundary was the problem set before the official geologists of the two states, Dr. Edward B. Mathews of Johns Hopkins university and Prof. Wilbur A. Nelson of the University of Virginia. They are now putting the finishing touches on their work, with the expectation of providing a scientifically exact definition which will leave no ground for further controversy.

To reach their conclusions they have had to determine by personal inspection the true course of the Potomac and the exact location of headlands, and to find out who drafted the 1877 compact by such loosely used words as "bay," which ordinarily means a body of water abutting on the ocean.

Must Go Back to 1877.

At some points, where headlands and other parts of the bank have been built out with sediment or washed back since 1877, they have had to determine just where the low water mark was 50 years ago by investigating the ground and comparing old and new coast and geodetic survey maps.

Legally, of course, no land or water is being taken from either state, but acceptance of the boundary will bring several changes in the commonly circulated maps which will be in the nature of corrections. All, however, will be of slight extent, the geologists assert.

Marriage Fee Will Be Based on Bride's Beauty

Linesville, Pa.—A sliding scale for marriage ceremonies is announced by N. B. Graham, who became justice of the peace here with the beginning of the new year. He has issued the following announcement:

"I will marry the first couple coming to me for a very nominal sum, compared with the regular charge. The scale will, of course, be sliding. The conditions are that the prettier the woman, the less the fee, and the homelier the man the greater sympathy for the woman. Consequently a good-looking couple, or a good-looking woman and a very homely man, may expect the minimum charge, which will be nothing.

"There should be some heart balm at the beginning of a married woman's life, providing she is tied to a homely man, and, if any of our business men witness a ceremony of this kind, I will insist on the witness making some substantial contribution toward the household equipment of the contracting couple."

Lustrous Pearls From British Columbia Fish

Victoria, B. C.—A recent discovery made by American scientists gives promise of adding considerable revenue to the fisheries of British Columbia, one of the largest industries of the province, which already has an annual yield valued at over $25,000,000. These scientists have found that lustrous pearls can be made from an essence derived from the scales of herrings, which are very plentiful in the North Pacific off the coast of British Columbia.

Recently a plant was established at Nanaimo, B. C., for the manufacture of this essence with technical experts from New York in charge of the operation of the plant, which is equipped to handle 10,000 pounds of herrings' scales daily. The first shipment of the essence has been made to New York, where it is being converted into artificial pearls with, it is said, a luster that compares favorably with the hitherto incomparable product of the oyster.

NEARLY ALL FOR HOOVER

Few Contests for Delegates to the National Convention at Kansas City

That Honorable Herbert Hoover, candidate for the Republican nomination for President is wholly satisfied with the situation in New Hampshire is evidenced by a telegram which he sent Governor Huntley N. Spaulding last week. It reads:

WHEN PROMOTERS USE "CHARITY" TO DECOY TRUSTFUL CONTRIBUTORS

Investigations of Various Schemes for Defrauding Public Out of Money Disclosed by Bankers Association—Many Kinds of Fake Industrial Promotions Used as Bait.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

MILLIONS of dollars raised under the disguise of charity go to line the pockets of promoters. Ticket sales on raffles are commonly used, and while the loss to any one person who buys a ticket is small the aggregate loss for the United States runs into millions of dollars. Usually the promoters of these schemes first make a contract with some charitable institution to conduct a campaign for funds on behalf of the institution. They are to run the campaign in the name of the institution and share the proceeds. The whole scheme is often one of deception. To those who have been led to believe that their contributions go practically 100 per cent to charity, the following case we investigated should prove illuminating.

W. R. MOREHOUSE

A number of promoters recently contracted with a charitable institution to put on a campaign to raise funds by the raffle of a new automobile. So far as the public could tell from the banners used in displaying the automobile, the full amount of the sale price of the tickets went to the institution. There was nothing to convey any other impression. Apparently it was open and above board and was being conducted by men who were contributing their time gratuitously.

For several days a new automobile, mounted on a truck, was driven up and down the streets, with banners telling about the drive for funds for the charitable institution. One day the truck would go by displaying one of the popular makes of automobiles. A few days later it would parade by displaying some other popular make. Periodically the truck would pull into the curb where it would park for several hours while the promoters pleaded with passers-by to take tickets on the raffle and thereby help a deserving charitable institution to meet its bills.

Thousands "Touched"

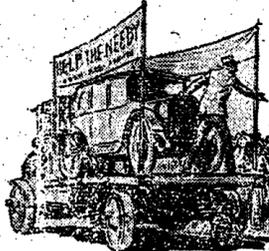

Thousands of people, touched by the appeal for help, bought tickets, the total sale running into the thousands of dollars. Contrary to the belief of the ticket buyers their contributions did not go 100 per cent to charity. Instead the charitable institution received but 26 cents on the dollar, the promoters getting 52 cents on the dollar as their net profit, or twice the amount received by charity, while the remainder of 22 cents on each dollar represented the amount charged against gross sales by the promoters as expenses.

In other words, every person who bought a 50 cent ticket for the sake of charity, contributed but 13 cents to charity and 37 cents to those promoting the scheme. Whether you give to charity or make an investment it will pay you to get the facts!

Unfortunately there is a general impression abroad that wildcat promotions are confined to oil, mining and new inventions. The truth is, many stock selling promotions are operated under the name of other industries.

False Claims

A certain group of promoters investigated offered for sale stock in a proposed woolen mill. In order to sell the stock they resorted to the use of misrepresentation and false claims. After renting space on the ground floor of an office building fronting on a busy street they began their campaign. Orally and by printed advertisements extravagant claims were made for the proposed corporation which were grossly false.

The "Charity" Drive

motors had not been connected with any mills for over twenty years and they had attempted at different times to promote mills, all of which had failed. One of the promoters represented that formerly he was president and general manager of one of the largest woolen mills in Canada. The fact was the mill referred to had gone into bankruptcy and he had been caretaker of the plant.

This story of misrepresentation can be duplicated in practically the whole industrial field, and because our industries are being exploited with intent to defraud, it behooves every investor to investigate carefully. He should consult his banker before drawing his savings out and losing them on some wildcat investment.

Schoolmaster of Old Stern in Discipline

An occasional copy of the People's Magazine for 1838 is found in New England's "attic libraries." In one of these yellowed volumes treasured in a Bradford (N. H.) home is a casual mention of a statistical matter that might be of interest to present-day pedagogs.

It is stated that a certain schoolmaster named John James Hauberle had taught school 51 years. In that time he had given the youths entrusted to his care 911,937 blows with a stick, 24,410 strokes with a rod, 29,890 furlings, 136,715 blows with one hand, 10,326 slaps on the chops, 7,905 boxes on the ear, 1,115,000 raps on the head, 12,342 Nota Benes with the Bible, catechism, Psalm book and grammar, and had made boys kneel 613 times on peas and 777 times on a three-cornered block of wood.

Perhaps Not

Macaulay, one of the most brilliant Englishmen of his century, couldn't commit the multiplication table to memory. Mathematics proved too much for him. It is said Emerson was never quite certain about nine times seven. This supposed deficiency in mathematics on the part of men who are brilliant in other lines does not always really exist. Some men and women think they are unable to understand mathematics when the truth is they were badly taught. They may have the same capacity that others have, but they have approached the subject in the wrong way. Many people have more intellectual capacity than they suspect. What they are afflicted with is not dumbness but mental indolence.—Grove. Patterson, in the Mobile Register.

Birds Public Benefactors

Contrary to popular opinion, says the biological survey, various birds eat even the hairy types of caterpillars, like those of the tussock gypsy and brown tail moths, and the tent caterpillars. That bureau has found forty-five species of birds which feed extensively on the alfalfa weevil, while sixty-six attack the cotton boll-weevil. Orioles will pick weevils out of the squares or flower buds of the cotton, while swallows feed on them when in flight and extending their range. Mallard ducks have been effectively used in ponds for mosquito control. Red-eyed vireos seem to be attracted by fall webworms, while cutworms form a large part of the diet of starlings, crows and jacksnaws. Blackbirds help to keep down the number of boll worms and many other pests. Sparrows and other birds have been observed to clean up infestations of termites. Birds should be regarded as an ever-present force that should be kept at a maximum efficiency by protective measures so that their service may be utilized whenever possible.

Products

In an English school, the examiner asked one of the children to name the products of the Indian empire. The child was well prepared, but very nervous. "Please, sir, the answer ran, 'Tudra produces curries and pepper and rice and citron and chutney and—'" "There was a long pause. Then, as the first child remained silent, the little girl raised her hand. The examiner nodded. "Yes, you may name any other products of India." "Please, sir," the child announced proudly, "Indigestion."—The Furrow.
