RECEPTION TO REV. WILLIAM PATTERSON

The Occasion Was Made a Public Affair and Enjoyed by About One Hundred and Eighty People

The congregations of the Presbyterian-Methodist church gave a reception at the Presbyterian church on Friday evening, March 2, to Rev. William Patterson and Mrs. Patterson. Mr. Patterson has recently come to Antrim from Shushan, N. Y., to serve the two churches as their pastor.

There was a representative gathering present from the constituency of the Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches, Rev. Ralph H. Tibbals and Mrs. Tibbals standing with Mr. and Mrs. Patterson in the receiving line, which was formed at eight o'clock, about 200 people taking this opportunity of greeting the new pastor and his wife who have come to live among us.

Following the reception, appropriate remarks welcoming Mr. Patterson to Antrim were addressed to him by Mr. Tibbals, after which a pleasing program of musical selections by a trio consisting of Miss Gertrude Jameson, Miss Florence Brown and Mrs. Vera Butterfield, a reading by Miss Esther Perkins, and an original poem by Milian Cooper were rendered. Music was furnished throughout the evening by an orchestra from Hillsboro, assisted by Mrs. Carl Muzsey at the piano.

Refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed by all at the close of the entertainment. The receiving rooms were attractively decorated for the occasion and the whole affair reflected credit on the competent committee in charge.

Original lines of welcome:

In Christian love and union;
In friendship warm and bright;
To greet our pastor and his wife
We're gathered here tonight.

To welcome them among us—
To their new field of labors,
To offer them our help and aid
As Christian friends and neighbors.

We welcome them, we need them too,
To counsel and to lead us,
And we will help them all we can
For we are sure they need us.

And so we greet them here tonight,
Our help and aid assuring;
And may the friendship here begun
Be sincere and enduring.

Our town is small, our numbers few,
And much work lies before us;
For each to do a willing part
The spirit now implores us.

And so we greet them here tonight
In friendship warm and true,
And from our hearts we bless them
And pray God bless them too!

Cords, Loads and Wagonfuls

For the Reporter

A townsman who sells fuel wood has asked me how it may be sold legally and I am answering for the benefit of all. Fuel wood may be sold by the cord, load or bushel in regular course, or in ways not standard provided both sides agree to it. The trouble comes over the misuse of the word load. A "load" as applied to fuel wood in this state is a definite measure, as much so as a bushel or a quart. It is not just a cart-or wagon-ful of whatever size the dealer happens to use, but is eighty cubic feet of wood in loose, and the cart used for such sales must be marked to show its cubic content in figures at least one inch high. Not all wood may be sold by the load. The statute says that wood not exceeding sixteen inches in length, edgings, bobbin wood, clippings, slabs and other waste may be sold by the load in the loose. If you use the word "load" it must mean 80 cubic feet, so be careful of the word. If you wish to use an odd size cart as a measure you can do so if you and your customer agree to it. The law is fair enough. Now a two-horse cart with two standard "loads," that is, 160 cubic feet of loose wood, stove length, contains on the average a cord; but it must not be called a cord. Some cords have more wood in them than others. A cord of large straight smooth wood has more stuff in it than one of small, crooked, rubby sticks. Buy such wood on a scale down of price or better have it cut into stove lengths and sold by the "load"

Well Known by Many of Our People

Hon. Albert H. Hunt, of Nashua, a member of Governor Spaulding's Council, is a candidate for Delegate-at-Large to the National Republican Convention in June, and one who knows Mr. Hunt personally says: "I am very glad to endorse Mr. Hunt's candidacy, for his personality, integrity, good judgment and unusual business ability all combine to make him a Delegate of whom New Hampshire can justly be proud, and it will indeed be an honor to have him represent our State in the above mentioned position."

Mr. Hunt is one of the coming younger men of the State; able, agreeable, with plenty of push and the right kind of sound judgment, and possesses the necessary qualities that make strong men.

While a member of the Governor's Council he has attended every meeting and given much of his time and talents for the good of the state. He has pronounced ideas concerning taxation and the administration of the state's business in its varied interests, and his wide business experience is valuable in this respect. More than all else, his keen insight and unusual fitness for a position such as this one he now seeks makes it seem wise to elect him as Delegate-at-Large. It is hoped that the readers of this paper will do what they can to get out a large vote for March 13 and that they will vote for Mr. Hunt for Delegate and speak a good word to their friends to do the same.

Governor Spaulding and Senator Moses being so well known, it does not appear to be necessary to call special attention to the fact that they are Delegates, as well as some of the others; seven are to be elected and it is our desire to call attention to Mr. Hunt's candidacy that they may know that he is the right kind of a man to be one of the seven.

The State Tax Commission will hold meetings which are open to the public for the purpose of conferring with and advising selectmen and assessors as to the law governing the assessment and taxation of property. Our officials can go to either of the following places: Manchester City Hall, Friday, March 16; Concord State House, Thursday, March 15; Keene Court House, Wednesday, March 21.

A VOTE for HOOVER

I have filed as a candidate for delegate at-large to the Republican National Convention. If chosen I promise to do my utmost to secure the nomination of Herbert Hoover for the presidency of the United States.

JOHN G. WINANT

Governor Spaulding, ardent Hoover man and leader of the New Hampshire delegation, issued the following statement to the press the day I filed:

"The action of former Governor Winant in filing for the presidential primary as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Republican national convention, unpledged, but favorable to Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover as the party's candidate for president, is one more indication of the fact that the sentiment of New Hampshire Republicans is practically unanimous for Mr. Hoover."

"It is gratifying to me that ex-Governor Winant has entered the field for delegates on the same basis with the others who seek to represent the Republican party of New Hampshire at Kansas City. In doing this, he has, it seems to me, made it possible for the choice of delegates to be made without factional bitterness with the one end in view of best serving the interests of Mr. Hoover in the Republican national convention."

Indian Scouts to Remain in Service

Full Pay for Life in Recognition of Heroic Services to Nation.

Washington.—The picture of the faithful Indian scout scanning from the mountain peak the country over which a marching column of troops is to pass, riding ahead to warn of the perils of ambush by hostile braves, standing at the council fire as interpreter for his white officer and serving the United States army tirelessly and well, is one full of the romance of the old West, whose winning depended much on the loyalty of the Indians.

For this reason the last of the Indian scouts—two corporals and nineteen privates—are to be retained in service so long as they live, according to official word from Washington. The sentimental considerations connected with their historical significance have outweighed the fact that their military importance in an era of tanks, tractors, airplanes and high-power artillery barracks has dwindled to a shadow.

The band, now living much as their ancestors did at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., is the sole surviving regular army unit made up of Indians. The commanding general of the Eighth corps area, in which the fort is located, recommended that the scouts—"well disciplined, well trained and performing work very efficiently"—be retained, and romance won against suggestions of economy. Too great a service has been rendered to the country by its Indian scouts for their last historic band to be dropped from the rolls.

Some of the braves once listed among them have saved thousands of lives by their sagacity in the field and at the council tepee. Scattered through all the campaigns that freed the West from the menace of tomahawk and knife are records of the Indian scouts, stanch comrades of the white soldiers and advisers to their leaders.

A Celebrated Scout.
One of the most celebrated government scouts, I-See-O, or "Plenty Fires," died on the reservation at Fort Sill, Okla., less than a year ago, honored by a special act of congress with the rank of sergeant. He was between seventy-five and eighty years old and was believed to be the oldest active soldier in the army. I-See-O kept the Indians of the Southwest from hurling themselves into the fanatical war against the whites that was precipitated by the "ghost dance" uprisings of 1890 and caused wide bloodshed before the revolting warriors, led by their "Messiah" in a concentrated drive to recapture their lands in the Middle West, met with defeat at the battle of Wounded Knee.

A typical representative of the best type of Indian scout, I-See-O, side by side with Gen. (then lieutenant) Hugh L. Scott, rode into the Kiowa and Comanche territory and by his eloquence persuaded the tribes to remain out of the "Messiah" war. Scott learned from him not only the language and signs of the Indians, but what was more important, obtained a tremendous insight into the character of the red man. Until 1897 I-See-O ranked as a sergeant in General Scott's famous band of scouts. When the general heard that his old-time ally had fallen on evil days he prevailed on congress to pass the act creating him a permanent sergeant. All regulations of the War department were brushed aside to honor the last soldier of the Kiowa tribe.

For years the old Indian sat in his tepee at the Fort Sill reservation, cooking his meals over an open fire and combing his hair into long braids. The army gave him a cottage, but I-See-O did not live in it; he used it as a storehouse for the supplies he drew from the commissariat. The white man's way was not for him in his old age.

As a boy of sixteen at the Medicine Lodge pow-wow he had been appointed to the committee which treated overboundaries with the whites. He had stopped an uprising at the Andarke agency and another on the Red river. He was the peacemaker always, seldom the warrior, trusted by the red men and relied upon by commanding generals.

Long Service in the Army.
There are braves at Fort Huachuca, attached to the service troop of the Tenth cavalry, who have been in government service for ten to forty years. Tehnehjeh, who died a year or so ago, was more than eighty years old and had served in the pursuit of Geronimo. It was a "war," costing the United States $1,000,000, in which the Indian scouts were indispensable. Only Indians, enrolled in the army, could trace the trail of the fugitive Geronimo and his handful of followers across the deserts of Arizona and far down into the Sierra Madre range of Old Mexico where he was brought to bay.

Close to 300 Apaches were sworn into service as scouts and put upon Geronimo's track, Capt. Emmet Crawford in command. They followed "signs" no white man's eye could see and clung like leeches to the heels of the flying medicine man. The government scouts chased Geronimo through Arizona, New Mexico and Old Mexico until finally they cornered him. Mexican troops, arriving on the scene, mistook the Apache scouts for Geronimo's hostiles and opened fire, wounding Captain Crawford fatally.

The crafty raider fled into the hills on the eve of yielding and the long, arduous chase was resumed, Gen. Nelson A. Miles directing the campaign. At last it ended with the capture of Geronimo and Natchez, the hereditary chief of the Chiricahua Apaches. The man-hunt, in which the government's Indian scouts had played so striking and successful a part, had lasted for 18 months. Natchez, who was removed to Fort Sill and classed as a "prisoner of war," enlisted in the army as a scout.

Singly and in troops the Indian scouts performed a service that cannot be overestimated. The lives that loyal braves like I-See-O and Tehnehjeh saved through their efforts as peacemakers, the uprisings they prevented, the feeling of trust and friendship that they inculcated in their fellows are not to be listed in cut-and-dried terms of value.

If the red scouts had not ridden with the troops in blue, if their voices had not been raised in peace parleys and their keen eyes had not been present to follow trails and spy out ambushes, it might have taken many more years and many more lives to pacify a West, menaced periodically by the threat of savage uprisings. The conditions out of which the enrollment of the Indian scouts grew may long since have disappeared and their military significance may have departed, but there is no one who remembers the stirring role that they have played who will not approve of the determination of the War department to see that the last of a brave band is protected to the end.

Old Kit Carson Scout Out of Office Again

Santa Fe, N. M.—Juan Jose Gutierrez, one time scout with Kit Carson, is again an ex-governor.

For three months he ruled the Indian pueblo of Santa Clara and carried a silver-headed cane, the symbol of office which was presented to one of his predecessors by President Lincoln. A recent election made another man governor, but Juan Jose may be a plain citizen only temporarily, for he has been elected governor so many times he has lost count.

He has seen many moons fit by, but he has lost count of his age, too. As the paleface reckons time, he thinks he is about one hundred years old. The Santa Clarans have turned to younger men for leadership, but they have always called Juan Jose back to the cane.

While he is waiting for a turn in political fortunes, the deposed governor sells pictures of himself in the regalia of office to get money for tobacco.

scribing that voyage he told of several occasions when steamers passed close and asked him if he needed aid.

He talks of these offers with scorn as if they had doubt in his ability to navigate and overcome the perils of the sea. That has been his attitude ever since toward his fellow men. He prefers to travel alone. He has no social bond.

On his last journey, which he expects to finish soon, he went through the Panama canal and across the Pacific, touching at scores of islands in Polynesia, thence across the Indian ocean to the island of Reunion, where Abdel Krim, the former Riff leader, is living in exile, and to Durban, in South Africa.

Community Building

Human Dignity Lost in Big City's Hustle

No person can live in an American city and maintain one's respect for humanity, one's belief in the dignity of man.

I defy anyone to look on the hundreds of people scurrying this way and that to their street cars, to the "L," to the subway, looking like so many swarming ants, and not lose entirely every scrap of admiration or sympathy for human kind. It offends not only a sense of mere personal dignity but of all human dignity.

Individuals seem larger on the small-town stage than on the large-city one. And human beings look more dignified when we see them as individuals—friends and neighbors—than in the mass.

A small town gives more opportunity to emphasize individuality and importance of self. Also, it gives one permanence, space and leisure. These things make for personal dignity. And seeing people, numbers of them, with a fair amount of importance, permanence, space and leisure gives to the onlooker an impression of human dignity and a consequent respect for humanity may not seem an important thing to city people. But to me it does seem important. It makes all the difference between life seeming worth while or not. For my part I want it to seem worth while. And so I prefer to live in the small town.—Emily Newell Blair in the Bookman.

Two Purposes Served in Identifying Town

In the simple, but essential, needs of commercial flying today as they have been shown by the experience of the test ship of the Shaw publications, "there is a real suggestion for every business man. Every chamber of commerce might well consider this need to make sure that its community has done its utmost to bring about more rapid development in flying."

"It would be an extremely simple matter," continues the story of the ship's experience in the Magazine of Business, "for the business men of every town to buy a few gallons of paint and identify their town with large block letters. The main hard boards entering the city could be used as signboards, if large roofs are not available. Arrows could indicate direction to nearest large cities and give mileage, just as our road signs do today. With such simple devices as these, cross-country flying could be immensely simplified.

"If business men all over the country will co-operate in providing these simple facilities, we shall not only have more efficient and effective commercial flying right now, but shall see more rapid developments in the airplane itself."

Care in Foundation Vital

Since dependence of the house on its foundation extends to every phase of its endurance through the years, and to the trouble-free pleasure in occupancy, the new home builder does well who looks carefully into the construction of that foundation. Any compromise with quality here will result in failure involving the entire structural frame of the home and even to wall decorations, since a settling house invariably cracks its plaster.

It involves also the peace of mind of the owner, for repairs caused by improperly constructed foundations are uniformly pretty costly.

Newspaper's Creed

A newspaper, whose aim is to serve the community, and whose purpose is to disseminate the news of the community and section from which it derives its patronage must of necessity express views and advocate measures to which some of its readers are opposed. But our views are held and expressed in good faith. We take no position on any subject because some one else entertains an opposite view. But in all matters affecting the community interest our aim is to advocate the measures which will mean the greatest good to the greatest number.—Andalusia (Ala.) Star.

Beautify the Home

One of the prettiest sights in some countries is the individualistic roof of a house as it appears in the distance. Perhaps it is centuries old. Looking down at such houses from a hilltop is to experience thrills of emotion that bind the past with the present.

We have in this country every reason to beautify our homes—outside and inside. It is both a family and a community duty. If it turns out to be a hobby, well, it will be a pleasing one.

Rules of the Road

The Alabama state highway department has assumed police duty of the highways of the state assisted by the various city and county officers in regulating traffic thereon. The rules of the road and the machinery which enforces the traffic laws will no doubt bring many a man to the sudden realization that Alabama has laws that really protect. Every citizen should inform himself of these new laws.—Lafayette (Ala.) Sun.

Design for This Small House Based on French Style of Architecture

By W. A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

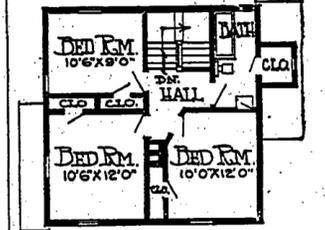

It is only of comparatively recent years that the people of this country have discovered the possibilities in home design based on French architectural styles. But now we find many houses, both large and small, in the French style and they are almost always of outstanding attractive appearance. The style is, in general, quite simple with stucco as a commonly used finish.

In the accompanying photograph we see one of these houses, the design of which has been based on the French type. The walls are of rough finished stucco, practically unadorned except by the well-placed openings for doors and windows. The roof lines are effective and the entrance detail possesses a charm which can best be described by the word quaint.

Though this home is a small one, measuring but 28 feet by 24 feet on the foundation, its nearly square plan and the economy of space in design afford a large amount of interior space. There are six rooms and a sun room, which practically makes it a seven-room house, for the sun room is so placed that it can be made thoroughly useful, either as a study, a sewing room, an emergency bedroom or other purposes as occasion may require.

Above stairs there are three bedrooms and the bathroom. It will be noted that each of these bedrooms contains an ample closet, while a bather unusual feature is a really large closet off the bathroom.

The rooms of the first floor follow the usual arrangement of living room, dining room and kitchen in the modern style of large living room and a compact efficient kitchen. There is a service entrance at the side giving admittance to the kitchen and the basement. At the rear will be found, harmonizing in style with the house, a garage, now an essential part of every house.

Woodwork Easily Treated to Aid Color Harmony

A home decorator recently said: "It's almost impossible to make my rooms artistic because of the woodwork. In every decorative scheme I've tried, the woodwork stands out like a sore thumb. What would you advise?"

Evidently this home decorator fails to appreciate the adaptability of woodwork. If it doesn't match—change its color. If, for instance, the color scheme is bright and gay, make the woodwork harmonize. And follow the same rule with a dark decorative scheme. There is nothing easier. On the soft woods and where the scheme calls for a color in the wood work, paint or enamel will give the desired finish. Nowadays, however, enamels are used more frequently than paint. Enamels come in such lovely colors that they can be mixed safely to secure a variety of tints and shades.

Today, woodwork in the same neutral tone as the background of the walls is decidedly the vogue. Sometimes it is a little lighter, sometimes a little darker. But don't let the woodwork unduly assert itself. Real hardwood finished in its natural color always will be in style; although often it is desirable to stain the wood so as to preserve the grain and at the same time change the color tone. This is not a difficult job. But be sure that good varnish or varnish stains are used. The finish should be waterproof—one that can be cleaned without harming its luster or durability.

The Bedroom

The bedroom is really the room which should express the personality of the mistress of the home. It gives a wonderful opportunity to display daintiness and elegance combined with comfort, and for this purpose there is no type of furniture which so enhances the beauty of a woman as a background in the French type of decoration.

Paint Touches Up and Renews Old Interiors

Have you ever been in a house that made you stop and think that you wished your own looked as nice?

Just what the difference was, you perhaps couldn't analyze. Your own home might have been better built, more expensively furnished, more conveniently planned, but somehow it lacked something, and that lack made it seem dowdy and cheerless. Perhaps you have let a few things slide—there is always an inclination to feel, once you have your house complete and in tip-top shape, that there is nothing more to be done. But houses, just as much as clothes, require a little attention right along. Let them go, and they soon become hopeless. But a touch here and there at the right time can change the whole appearance.

And so, when the woodwork and floors show signs of wear, or the steps become kicked and scuffed, your whole home—no matter how nice or even how trim the furnishings—takes on a really shabby look, while the simplest house with fresh, glistening surfaces reflects charm and refinement. There is, in fact, something about a house kept in tip-top condition that makes it suitable for any people or any occasion, and gives it unrivaled charm.

Color in Stucco

Stucco in all its endless varieties of finish and color has been used for century upon century in almost every part of the world. Here in America we are just beginning to appreciate its possibilities. We are experiencing a renaissance in the use of color and texture for the stucco in our home.

Prevents Waste

If your heater is old and worn-out, you are paying the coal dealer a lot of money which might better be applied toward buying a new heater. It will soon pay for itself and then go on saving money.

LONE NAVIGATOR ON LAST HOP OF LONG SEA JOURNEY

French Tennis Player Using Small Sloop in His Efforts to Circumnavigate the Globe.

Paris.—Alain Gerbault, the French tennis player who became a circumnavigator of the globe, using a tiny sloop, is on the last lap of his journey, which has taken him up and down the seven seas for two years. He is now somewhere in the south Atlantic bearing due north from Cape Town, via the island of St. Helena, where Napoleon passed his last years in exile.

Even Gerbault's close friends, and they are very few, are unable to explain his liking for solitude and long sea voyages far from civilization. It is ascribed by some to a hopeless love affair, by others to financial reverses, and by others to deep-seated misgiving amounting to a positive hatred for modern life in civilized communities. It has even been reported recently that he intends to take up his permanent residence in an island of the South Seas.

Gerbault was, however, always a lover of the sea. In his youth he lived for years in Dinard and St. Malo on the Breton coast. The local fishermen were his pals and from them he learned all they knew about seafaring. The old corsairs were the heroes of his boyhood reading. He was an insatiable reader of books of travel and adventure even when he was an engineering student in Paris. Of exceptional physical strength and agility, he made a name as a tennis player. In the World war he distinguished himself as an aviator.

After the war he played tennis and other sports for some years, and in 1923 started out on his 142-day lone voyage across the Atlantic from Cannes to New York. In his book de-

"Oh, you monster—the poor dear trusting heart," she muttered, all in the same breath.

Auntalmiry, flushed and radiant with excitement, was the first to arrive for the party. She was joyously pleased at the unusual tenderness of Alice Andover's greeting, and took her all about the room to point out to her, with sky pride, how cleverly she had managed things, explaining all the little economies she had used, the ruses to which she had resorted, in her desire to make least money go farthest. Alice was sympathetic, solicitous, warmly approving, but kept always one sharp and terrified eye upon Gay, both of them in a panic of fear lest the creature upstairs regain his sober senses and spoil the party for which Auntalmiry had worked so hard.

At Gay's direction, Auntalmiry took up her position by the window, with Alice Andover and Gay on either side, and pressed the electric button which set the solitary pine a-sparkle with colored lights from top to bottom, flashing a brilliant holiday greeting all over that end of the island.

"It is the last invitation," she cried, and her thin little voice quavered with excitement. "Come to my party, come to my Christmas party! Everybody can see it. It will guide them up the hill. How the children will laugh! It is very nice, Gay."

The island trooped to the party in a body, a long stream pouring up the hill through the snow, so that all in a moment it seemed the Lone Pine was a-surge and a-throb with it. There was much laughter, much shrill squealing, the piercing staccato of children's voices, the high nervous laughter of young girls, and deeper older voices, calling loud and cheery greetings.

"If this babel doesn't wake him up, he might as well be dead," whispered Alice Andover.

"I'll go and have a look," said Gay. "It is enough to bring the trees to life."

Gay listened outside the bedroom door a moment, hoping to hear the muffled heavy breathing that presaged the sleep of their unwelcome guest. But with the din below she could hear nothing, so she opened the door quickly and stepped in. The room was wrapped in silence, utter and heavy, and in the darkness she could not distinguish the shadow by the window-seat that was Buddy Bridges. She pressed the button that flooded the room with light and showed in a flash its emptiness. The rugs lay in a rumpled heap upon the floor, but Buddy Bridges was not there.

The window was open. Gay ran over and looked out, but in the shadow of rocks and trees by the house she could distinguish nothing. Her eyes swam giddily.

"Such-a Christmas," she stammered. Already with that vividly creative mind of hers she could see him lying on the rocks, a bleeding mangled shape, Auntalmiry's son. Suddenly she was afraid to be alone, and ran downstairs. Alice Andover awaited her coming at the foot of the steps.

She read fear in Gay's eyes. "What now, good heavens, what now?"

"He is gone. He is not here."

"Gone! Gone where? Gone how?"

"Come! Let's look." In the joyous confusion that reigned about the Christmas tree, with Santa Claus noisily distributing the pretty gifts, the laughing voices, the crackle of tissue paper, and the treble of children's voices over all, they went out unnoticed. And with an electric flashlight, looked beneath the window for the crushed and bleeding—

Yes, he had certainly dropped down into the bank of snow. There were many signs of trampling, footprints, but the white snow bore no stains of red. And Buddy was not there. The outraged divinity whose patience still is infinite had guarded Auntalmiry's boy that night.

So they went back, with what don-ehalence they could muster, and joined the merriment within. But Gay was sick at heart. Everybody had come to the party, the Captain was there, the two ministers were there, even Buddy Bridges had come home. But Rand came not.

"Well, well," boomed Santa Claus, "well, well! Here's another present for little old Auntalmiry! Auntalmiry!"

Santa Claus, powerful young giant that he was, caught her up bodily into his arms, so that she was quite crushed in the shaggy fur of his big coat.

"Auntalmiry, Auntalmiry!" chorused the children gaily.

And then on the way of that joy-

ing joyous call, the door opened, and he stood there, soft but crushed low on his forehead over the big dark eyes, collar turned up about his chin—tall, thin, and weak, very pale, Buddy Bridges.

Santa Claus, with little Auntalmiry still in his arms, turned as the others did, to look at this one who came so unceremoniously into the party, his face alone unsmiling, set and grim.

He crossed without a word into the center of the room, walked swaggeringly, perhaps to hide the fact that he could not stand erect without swaying weakly, and stood before Santa Claus, with Auntalmiry in his arms. It was she who moved first, moved vaguely, slipping to the floor, and then, not seeming to walk, seeming to float rather, she was beside him, her eyes riveted to his eyes, haggard and dark-lined, and her fingers crept softly up his coat toward his face, touching the curve of his chin uncertainly, inquiringly, as though it were by feeling she would be convinced.

"Aimry, come away," broke in Alice Andover harshly, but it was pity that hardened her voice. "Come away. He's drunk."

"It's Buddy," Auntalmiry said faintly. "It's Buddy. It is Buddy."

"Come away, I tell you; he's drunk." Then suddenly Buddy Bridges laughed. "Drunk," he shouted weakly but with derision in his voice. "Oh, it's you, Alice Andover, up to your old tricks! Drunk! So that's what you thought. Well, I thought you were crazy, the pair of you, stuffing me up with cognac, locking me in—I'm not drunk, mom, I'm sick. They couldn't tell the difference."

Every eye in the bright, disordered, crowded room was intent upon Buddy Bridges, who held his mother in his arms, and laughed with her, wept with her, and talked to her in a fond weak voice. "Sick as a dog. In the hospital—weeks. Weak as the dickens. I was in the hospital when they told me you were here. I got out of bed—knocked two internes down—sick as I was. Came on here—clear from California, mom. Twice I fainted away, and when I came to, they had me off the train and in hospital again. But as soon as I got my wind, I beat it again. Came on. Drunk! Isn't that like her, mom? I'd know in a minute it was Alice Andover! You haven't changed much, mom—a little. How his eyes caressed her! Twenty-five years, mom. Not a word from you in twenty-five years. I wouldn't have believed it, mom. It was—not just—like you. Was it because they sent me to the pen, mom?"

"The—pen, Buddy? The pen?"

"Oh, hush, you fool!" begged Alice Andover.

"In Jersey. Twenty-five years—"

"Buddy, you don't mean the penitentiary—Buddy—"

"Mom, didn't you know it? Didn't you ever know it?"

"Buddy—"

"Mom, you've just forgot. You knew it. You must have known it. It was in the papers—Is—is she all right?" he asked falteringly of all the room. "You must have known it."

Alice Andover was tall and fine in her dignity. "Yes, Buddy Bridges, we knew it. We all knew it. But nobody told her. Aimry never knew to this day—"

"Nobody told her—"

Alice Andover's dignity was simply killing. "On our island, Mr. Bridges," she said greatly, "we tell one another no news unless it's good news. There was nobody here low-down enough to tell Auntalmiry that her son had gone to jail."

"Buddy—" Auntalmiry's voice was pleading.

"Aw, mom, it wasn't much. A roughhouse, a row over a game. You know I was always quick in a scrap. It wasn't much. But a man was hurt. So they sent me up for it. But, mom, since then, everything fine and dandy. No nonsense since. Got a fine woman, got three nice kids, made a lot of money—Great, mom. And then, suddenly, mercurial man as he had been a mercurial boy, he glowered, glowered with sudden anger around the room. "See here," he demanded sharply, "who sent me that paper-marked Portland paper—that told me mom was dead? Twenty-five years ago! One of you sent me a paper—that lied."

And then on the way of that joy-

The silence throbbed. Everybody looked at Alice Andover. She was the administrator, and this was a terrible charge he brought.

Alice Andover did not flinch. She turned directly on the Captain.

"John Christian Wallace, do you mean to tell me that you dared to take it upon yourself—without consulting me—the natural administrator—"

The Captain removed his pipe and ambled amiably into the arena, a gentle, dignified little old figure. He put an affectionate hand on Buddy's arm. His voice was wavering with age and with excitement, but he was not daunted.

"Buddy, I say to myself, 'Jailbird or no jailbird, he's Auntalmiry's son. He's got a right to know she's gone. We said plenty of hard things against you, times enough, but nobody ever said that Buddy Bridges didn't love his mom.' No," says I, "he's got a right to know it." So I marked the paper, and sent it right off to you, Buddy. In jail or what-not, for I don't hold to them as say—"

"But, Gramp," he interrupted, for everybody called the Captain Gramp, "Gramp, she was not dead! She was not dead!"

"No, but we thought she was. It said in the paper she was. We didn't know till next day, or day after, that she pulled through after all. No," says I, "he's her son, and as soon as I read in the paper she was dead, I marked it and mailed it, and—"

"But, Gramp, my God, when you found out—that she wasn't dead—"

"If they catch me, I do not care," she told herself hotly. "I've got to find him." She could not bear that recurring, evanescent vision of Rand's face on the winter sea.

The cold fingers to her party dress from her, pulled on heavy silk and woolen undergarments, her thickest woolen stockings, stout boots. She donned her warmest blouse beneath the fawn-colored suede wind-breaker, and bloomers beneath her heaviest knickers. The leather cap she pulled down to her ears, caught up her leather fur-lined gloves, and then her dark-colored slacker enveloped all.

"If they see me, they'll think I'm a man," she said sturdily to her stout reflection in the glass, "with this cap, this slacker, these boots."

Schooled by the experience of six months on the island, Gay slipped a flashlight into one pocket, and her pistol in the other. She was trembling all over.

"But I'm not afraid," she said firmly. She pressed the last electric button, and the cottage merged into the darkness that covered all the coast. She opened the door gingerly an inch at a time, listening intently. The island was asleep in the darkness. There was no moon; the stars, remote and cold, were pin-points of ice.

She did not hesitate. She quite confidently believed that she would rather die than endure the suspense of uncertainty. Not daring to use her flash, she made her way through the snow slowly, from tree to tree, toward the Little Club, stumbling often, running into unsuspected pines, falling over hidden shrubs. But she went on. When she came at last to the row of trees that circled the clubhouse, she stood for a long moment, as Rand had taught her, flattened against the bark, listening.

Neither sound nor sigh from within.

"Sealed," she thought, "hermetically sealed."

She crept cautiously around the corner, feeling her way inch by inch until she reached the spot where Rand had taken out the rocks to get under the piazza. It had seemed simple enough as she had watched him, and Gay felt she could easily do the same thing, and thus obtain a view of the interior, perhaps a confirmation, or denial, of her fears. But for all the strength of her young arms, for all the power of her stubborn will, she could not so much as stir the smallest of the rocks, which were now deeply wedged into the frozen soil, packed solidly, presenting a firm and immovable barricade to entrance under the piazza.

Thus balked, she stopped a moment to consider. One thing was absolute, she would not go home. But she was puzzled as to wise procedure.

Tempted for a moment to fire her pistol into the air, hoping that fear of a raid would draw the gang from the shelter of the clubhouse, second thought convinced her it would be sheer foolhardiness. At last she decided to go down into the cove, to examine the great door and look for a light beneath the window curtains.

Getting into the cove itself was very difficult, for the crevices among the rocks were covered with snow, and she was obliged to claw her way along, hand over hand, sounding with her feet for standing ground. Down, down, she slid, from rock to rock, from snowy crevice into snowy crevice, kicking, holding on with both hands like grim death, down, lower and lower, until she attained the level beach of the cove. She moved warily now, feeling the great helplessness of her position. In the woods she could at least run for cover. Here in the cove she was at the mercy of whoever might come upon her. Softly, keeping in the shadow of the rocky cliffs, she crept to the clubhouse door.

She ran her hand over the locks carefully, and then softly turned the knob. Well oiled, silently it moved beneath her hand. The door to the Little Club was open.

hands. Tears came to her eyes. A sob swelled in her throat. She wept noiselessly. What was the success of all the noly merry party to her, when Rand had not come, and she knew not where he was?

In her heart she knew that Rand had not remained away of his own volition, that something had kept him against his will. He had pledged her to solemn secrecy in regard to his movements, but his prolonged absence without word or reassurance terrified her greatly. She sank down into the window-seat and looked out. The tall, gayly lighted pine was hateful, garish to her saddened eyes. Impatiently she pressed the button, and the hillslope was plunged into darkness.

"It—it's that d-d old clubhouse," she said bitterly. "I have a big notion to—to burn it down."

With the passionate words came sudden determination. She could not bear this anxiety, she must know the worst, however bad it be. She would slip into the forest, and reconnoiter. Rand had sternly ordered her to keep entirely out of the woods and away from the Little Club, but Gay, in an emergency like this, and goaded by her fears for him, was not one to be balked by obedience. If she found the place raided, and demand Rand of them. In her thoughts, vividly, she saw the slim worn face, the shapely strong hands of the one who had come to her on the waves in the Little cove. Almost she saw Rand's face, like that, with the merry eyes closed, the mocking lips set hard, swept by salt water.

"Oh, no," she cried faintly. Then she sprang to her feet, and pounded hotly up the stairs. She was feverish with excitement now, her face flaming, her lips parched, her eyes tingling hot. But her slender, strong hands were like ice.

"If they catch me, I do not care," she told herself hotly. "I've got to find him." She could not bear that recurring, evanescent vision of Rand's face on the winter sea.

Two Girls for Bill

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD
(Copyright)

WILLIAM BRONSON, ordinarily known as Bill, had been brought up by two loving but slightly over-zealous aunts.

But now William had outgrown schooling. Not that he was particularly well educated, although he could hold his own with the average young man when it came to intellectual discussions and that sort of thing. What I mean is that the problems which now kept his devoted Aunt Elizabeth and devoted Aunt Louise awake at nights were somewhat more complex.

And the most difficult of all to settle was just where there was to be found in the whole of Tolland county, or for that matter in the entire state itself, a girl suitable for their nephew to marry.

Now, ordinarily, these two good women got together on anything which concerned the boy of whom they were both equally fond, but at the time this story starts, Aunt Elizabeth was engaged on a little scheme of her own.

After all, there was nothing very dreadful about Aunt Elizabeth's little conspiracy. It had come to her attention that the daughter of an old friend, a Marjorie Marden, was running a tea-room in the next town; that she was considered a very capable young woman and that she was anxious to get in touch with her mother's old friend.

Therefore, without saying anything to anybody, she drove over to the tea-room and made herself known to the brisk young lady whom she met there and who proved a second edition of her charming friend.

"And well expect you to supper next Tuesday, dear child," were her last words, as she resolved that Bill should be home that night to receive the girl.

Now it is impossible to live all your life with a person and not get wise when there is something in the air. Tuesday morning, Aunt Louise knew at the very instant that her sister rose half an hour earlier than was her custom that something was afoot.

And when she saw that preparations for certain special dishes were under way she put two and two together and got a wrong answer. She figured that her sister was going to ask a favor of Bill and was planning to approach him, as from time immemorial it has been customary to approach a man, through his appetite.

It gave Louise an idea, however. Why not kill two birds with one stone? There was that nice little librarian she had been planning to have Bill bring to supper some night and what better night than one on which her sister was getting up a specially attractive menu? She could return a book to the library and make the invitation appear casual enough.

Bill was, as it happened, reclining in the couch hammock on the porch with half a dozen apples and a book on exploration, when his Aunt Louise came up the path and went into the house by a side door. Nor is it reasonable to expect him to get up and walk away when he begins to overhear a conversation between the two women who have been second mothers to him. In the first place, so seldom was there anything said between them that he was not quite welcome to overhear, that such an idea would not have occurred to him. Only when he heard the strained tones of his Aunt Elizabeth did he become aware that something was going on.

"But, Louise, I have already invited my old friend Marjorie's daughter to tea. I intended to tell you, of course, but you hurried away right after lunch. She would make a nice wife for—"

"So that is the idea!" said Aunt Louise coldly. "Well, it was with some such idea in mind that I asked the little librarian. I am sure she would be much more desirable for Bill than any highly-tighty tea-room manager. I guess our nephew can make his own way without marrying a woman that would probably want to keep on working and leave her children to manage anyhow and not half run her house!"

It was at this point that Bill woke up to the fact that his future wife was the cause of the whole trouble. He grinned all by himself out there on the porch. Then he rose slowly. "I guess," he said, "this will be as good a time as any to break the news." But first he stole upstairs to the telephone in his little study.

Ten minutes later he came downstairs setting the table for five places and not speaking to either other.

"I say, Aunt Lou and Aunt Bee," he said gently. "Set another place there, will you? I've invited somebody to supper myself—a friend of mine. Want you to give her the once-over, and if she meets your approval, she's going to be Mrs. Bill."

"William!" the outcry came from them both.

"Yes, sir," said Bill. "She's Janet Jean Johnson."

"The girl next door," said Aunt Elizabeth.

"The girl next door," said Aunt Louise.

"The girl next door," said Bill. "The darling!"

"Might Have Been Worse"

"The verdict was most unexpected. It took my breath away."

"You recovered nothing?"

"Well, yes, my breath."

CANDIDATES NUMBER 34

But New Hampshire is Allowed Only 22 Representatives at National Convention

While, in a long list of candidates for delegates to the Republican National Convention there is only one person who is not enlisted for the cause of Herbert Hoover (and that one is for Coolidge), there are numerous contests for places on the "at large" delegation.

New Hampshire is allowed seven delegates at large and two from each congressional district, a total of 11. The same number of alternates is also to be voted for, which makes a grand total of 22 delegates to be elected. For the 22 places there are 34 candidates, 33 of them apparently for Hoover.

This means that twelve of those who have filed their names as candidates cannot be chosen.

The voting will be at town meeting and special city elections, Tuesday, March 13.

Naturally, there is some confusion in regard to the situation and the clouds are best dispersed by presenting the list of which Mr. Hoover said in his telegram to Governor Spaulding that "the arrangements made with respect to the New Hampshire delegation entirely satisfactory to me and I hope you will be able to secure the cooperation of my friends in the state to their support."

The declaration which is entirely satisfactory to Mr. Hoover, was contained in the telegram sent to him on the first day of the filing, Jan. 14, 1928, and was as follows:

"Dear Mr. Hoover: The undersigned candidates in the New Hampshire primary for election as delegates or alternates to the Republican National Convention wish you to know that each of us favors your nomination and intends, in the event of election, to go to the convention determined to do everything in our power to bring your nomination about."

At Large Candidates

The candidates at large who signed or subscribed to this telegram were as follows:

Huntley N. Spaulding of Rochester, Governor of New Hampshire.

George E. Moses of Concord, Senator United States Senator.

Arthur E. Moreau of Manchester, Mayor.

Thomas P. Cheney of Laconia, Chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Albert H. Hunt of Nashua, member of the Executive Council from District No. 4.

Jesse M. Barton of Newport, former President of the Senate and an attorney-at-law.

Thomas Rice Varick of Manchester, one of the leading business men of that city.

Mary P. Remick of Concord, wife of former Judge James W. Remick.

Frances S. Hall of Dover, wife of Hon. Dwight Hall.

Ellen Rice Robbins of Manchester, prominent in Red Cross Work.

(Only seven of these ten names should be voted, as New Hampshire is entitled to only seven delegates at large.)

First District

The First District delegates who signed this declaration are:

William J. Britton of Wolfeboro, attorney-at-law, and William J. Carter of Portsmouth, a retired merchant.

Second District

Those in the Second District are:

William A. Barron of Carroll, proprietor of the far famed Crawford House, and Roscoe S. Milliken of Nashua, retired agent of the Nashua Manufacturing Company.

Candidates for Alternates

The candidates for alternates at large on the declaration are as follows:

William C. Swallow of Manchester, Superintendent of the Employment Department of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co.

Harry C. Shaw of Keene, Managing Editor of the Keene Sentinel.

Perley R. Bugbee of Hanover, Cashier of the National Bank.

Stephen A. Frost of Fremont, manufacturer.

Frank E. Kennett of Conway, banker and manufacturer.

Grace W. Hill of Concord, wife of Isaac Hill.

Edith O. Emery of Manchester, wife of Dana A. Emery.

The candidates for alternates in the First District are:

J. R. Coolidge of Sandwich, retired, and J. Levi Meader of Rochester, agent of the Gonic Manufacturing Company and President of the Public National Bank of Rochester.

In the Second District the alternate candidates are:

Obe G. Morrison of Northfield, proprietor of the Elm Mills, and Clarence M. Damon of Fitzwilliam, for many years chairman of the Board of Selectmen of that town.

These names are those which are reported as satisfactory to Mr. Hoover and, while there is no evidence that there can be no question in relation to those given above. The purpose of this statement is to prevent confusion in the selection of delegates. With the one exception noted previously, there seems to be no doubt that Mr. Hoover will have at the National Convention the solid support of New Hampshire, but there should be no doubt of the loyalty of the list-headed by Governor Spaulding and Senator Moses which is so heartily approved by the candidate for Presidential honors.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night; Next day, bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall or Liggett Drug Store.

Dismore Dodge who died suddenly in New Boston was a son of the late John C. Dodge; born in Bennington; and married here in the early eighties to Hattie Muzzey, whose parents kept the hotel here for a number of years. They soon went to Nebraska, where they lived until just lately when 'Din' returned here; his wife died several years ago. Besides a daughter and son in the West, he leaves a younger brother, John, in Haverhill, Mass., a sister in Manchester, and a sister in New Boston, who is an invalid and with whom he lived and cared for.

HOCKEY GAME

The hockey game here Saturday night was a very good, fast game, the score being 7-2, favoring Greenfield or Canada.

This game was supposed to be between our Community Club and Greenfield and a League game. Bennington is at the head of the League by 6 points: Bennington 13 points, Greenfield 7 points, Peterboro 2 points.

When the game was called, Bennington had all Bennington boys or boys who live and work in Bennington, excepting Big Bill Edwards, whose home has been in Bennington for twenty years and is still considered a local boy.

To offset Bill, Greenfield wanted to have only three hired men or they wouldn't play; these were from Quebec, Canada, who played with Nashua Pro-League all winter and won the League. When the game started, Greenfield had four men from Canada on the ice, and two from Greenfield. Was it Greenfield or Quebec, Canada, we played? We think they were out to win.

We will say that Greenfield cannot play Bennington either at Greenfield or Bennington and even score. We will play them any time they want to come here and play us. They still owe us a game.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Birmingham, Ala.—Seemingly from the world of spirits an unseen band has impressed the pictures of two faces upon panes of glass in windows at the Pickens county courthouse at Carrollton, Ala.

Such men as Probate Judge B. G. Robinson, Sheriff Lester May, Rev. W. A. McCain, pastor of the Baptist church, and other well-known citizens of Carrollton, vouch for these pictures. They have been viewed by several hundred citizens of Pickens county. One face, they say, has been visible on one of the windows ever since the courthouse was built in 1876. Recently a second picture appeared on a new pane of glass inserted in an attic window by J. E. Oglesby, carpenter, to replace a pane broken by a storm.

The old face is said to resemble Sam Burhalter, a negro, who was killed many years ago while trying to evade arrest for burning the old Pickens county courthouse. This face is full of troubles and crossed with pain.

The new face resembles that of Lee Summerville, a negro who killed Deputy Sheriff Burt Johnson in November, 1928. He was shot to death recently by a Sumter county deputy sheriff, at York, Ala. The face may be seen a distance of two blocks.

Neither picture indicates whether the faces are white or black. They are purely studies of expression.

Soon after the second face appeared, the glass was removed from the window, washed with acid and replaced. At a close view of the two panes of glass nothing can be seen.

"These pictures are not an hallucination," said Judge Robinson. "Any one who cares to do so may see them at any time, just as many hundreds of people have seen them in the past." He says the images move from place to place on the glass when the sky is cloudy.

Largest Optical Glass Ever Cast Is Flawless

Washington.—An event of great interest to the scientific world occurred here when the largest piece of optical glass ever cast in the United States was uncovered at the bureau of standards and found to be flawless. The great disk, 70 inches in diameter, 11 inches thick and weighing 8,500 pounds was cast in May, 1927, and has been cooling for nine months.

The glass is destined for the Perkins observatory at Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, Ohio, for use as a concave mirror in a new reflecting telescope. An entirely new process, devised by A. N. Flinn, a scientist, was used. Four unsuccessful attempts to cast the piece were previously made.

A thousand pounds of special broken glass, 4,000 pounds of sand and chemicals were poured into a single pot in a gas-fired furnace at the bureau on May 7. The molten mass was stirred by hand for six hours and run into a special electrically controlled mold at a temperature of 2,400 degrees Fahrenheit. Throughout months the temperature has been gradually lowered, over periods as slowly as 4 1/2 degrees per day.

Dogs Leading Blind
Make Rules at Berlin

Berlin.—Requests by the lead dogs for the blind are contained in a pamphlet published by the association of Berlin's blind:

"Do not pat us.
"Do not try to lure us away from our masters.
"Do not feed us. Our master supplies us with sufficient food and delicacies.

"If you want to help our master, do it on the other side, not on the side on which we are leading him.

"Facilitate our crossing a street during the hours of busy traffic by calling to us the moment the street is clear.

"Keep a watch on your own and other dogs lest they annoy us.
"Don't molest us by your inquisitiveness.

"If you have a complaint to make about us do it with the organization of which our master is a member; the local association of the blind."

Plowing for 110 Hours
Called World Record

Tamarac, Minn.—Harold Anderson of Tamarac claims the record for continuous plowing. He remained at the throttle of his tractor for 110 hours without sleep, and left the machine only long enough to eat and fill the fuel tanks of the machine.

The youth left his home with the tractor and two bottom plows at seven o'clock on a Monday morning and plowed continuously until nine o'clock the following Friday night. Farmers in the neighborhood timed the operations.

In the 110 hours he plowed 60 acres with the tractor running at slightly under normal operating speed and covering a distance of about 240 miles. Anderson lost eight pounds during the five days.

Long Lost Silver Vein
Rediscovered in Mexico

Mexico City.—The famous mother lode silver vein two miles from Guanajuato City, in the state of Guanajuato, which was worked by the Indians before the coming of the Spaniards and for many years after the conquerors' arrival, has been rediscovered, according to Arthur Chippenale, geologist at the People's Mining company. The find was made by miners with diamond drills 2,000 feet under the surface.

Guanajuato is one of the most famous and largest mines in the world. Much has been written about it in fiction. Mining men say the strike probably will bring a boom to the section, as the discovery is one of the most important made in many years in Mexico.

U. S. CROOKS WORRY
POLICE OF ENGLAND

Epidemic of Big Store Robberies Baffling.

London.—Scotland Yard's latest baffling problem concerns an epidemic of big store robberies. An American gang is suspected.

During recent months five of the leading establishments in the West end of London have been raided by expert cracksmen. It is estimated that $120,000 worth of jewelry and other goods have fallen into their hands.

Police officials believe it is the work of one gang and are inclined to lay it at the door of an American mastermind by reason of the expert and modern methods employed.

Super-Criminals.

Another reason for their belief is the warning they received last year from police officials in the United States that a flock of American super-criminals were likely to invade Europe and that their pet hobby was expensive jewelry.

Scotland Yard's conviction became almost a certainty when a fashionable jewelry store in Bond street, the heart of aristocratic London, was raided recently and $50,000 worth of gems extracted from a supposedly burglar proof safe, despite the fact that the safe was in full view of the policemen patrolling the beat.

The most modern appliances were used. Acetylene blowpipes were first brought into play to prepare the safe for the steel cutters. Previously a hole had been made in the ceiling above to enable the thieves to lower themselves and their apparatus preparatory to operations.

Water was strewn on the floor to prevent an outbreak of fire from the heat of the blowpipes. The job was done in a few hours. The cracksmen made use of the electric light burning above the safe for illumination purposes. Not a clew was left. The policeman who occasionally glanced in to see if everything was in order was innocent of what was happening.

In three of the cases of big store robberies the thieves mingled with the customers during Saturday and then prior to the closing hour hid themselves in some convenient spot. They robbed the store at leisure during Sunday and escaped before business began Monday.

Acrobatics, eclipsing the feats of the renowned "cat" burglars, played a prominent part in the latest store robbery. Finding the floor on which they had hidden inclosed by locked doors and powerful steel shutters, the thieves knotted hose pipes and bung them down the parcels chute.

They then slid one by one down the dark spiral passage, ransacking floor by floor. For their escape to the street they utilized the same knotted hose pipes. Burglar alarms availed nothing.

Police officials declare these cracksmen set a new standard in burglary without noise or violence. They paid tribute to the manner in which the burglars swung themselves inside the building by means of the hose pipes.

Scotland Yard has put a large force of detectives to work on these cases.

Japan Will Protect Buyers of All Gems

Tokyo.—Dishonest pearl dealers and jewelers in Japan are to be put out of business if the government can accomplish it.

The department of commerce, at the request of legitimate dealers, intends to stamp all genuine jewels with the words "guaranteed by the government." Jewel inspectors will be attached to the department and every gem examined and attested will be properly stamped.

Numerous foreigners touring in Japan have been the victims of unscrupulous jewelers, paying exorbitant prices for imitation pearls. Probably no other people are as adept at "faking" gems as the Japanese.

The imitation gem dealers are located principally in Tokyo, Yokohama, Osaka and Kobe. Government inspection offices are to be located in each of these cities, beginning in April. Thereafter foreign buyers may assure themselves of some measure of protection by watching for the government stamp.

DEATH VALLEY SOON TO "PAY THE PIPER"

Scientists Seek to Harness
Sun's Energy.

Stove Pipe Wells, Calif.—Death valley may be made to give up a far vaster treasure than ever has been dug from its blistering hills. It is about to be made to pay the piper.

H. W. Eichbaum, desert lover and believer in nature is making plans to entertain a group of scientists who will make some tests to ascertain the best methods of imprisoning the energy developed by the sun in Death valley.

An effort is being made by Eichbaum to bring to Stove Pipe Wells, here in the heart of the valley, Prof. Duffel F. Comstock, formerly of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, now a consulting engineer, who has developed ideas as regards to the controlling of solar energy.

The solar constant, says Eichbaum, corresponds to one horse power per square yard, or 3,000,000 horse power to the square mile. Here in Death valley it is believed there are greater opportunities for the testing out of this new process of developing power from the sun's rays than anywhere else in the world, save, perhaps, on the Sahara desert.

This Texan Was Busy for One 20-Year Period

Huntsville, Texas.—Thirteen murders, six marriages, enlistment in army and navy and a prison term for desertion were crowded into a twenty-year period by George J. Hassell. On the morning of February 10 the death penalty for which Hassell himself asked ended his strange career.

Hassell killed his sixth wife—the widow of his brother—and her nine children in 1926. After conviction Hassell told a life story that revealed three more killings.

Married at the age of eighteen, separated from his wife and infant son, Hassell joined the army, deserted to join the navy and then rejoined the army. After serving two years for desertion, he wandered for years and was married five times.

Hassell drew charts that revealed where he had buried the bodies of a woman and two children under a house in Whittier, Calif. It was after these killings that he married his brother's widow. The tenfold tragedy occurred at Farwell, Texas. Hassell never gave any reason for the slayings.

Discovery Reported of New Food Factor

London.—A discovery which it is claimed makes available a new food factor was announced here. Results of the study of vitamins D and vitamin A were made public in the annual report of the British medical research council.

Vitamine A, which was formerly confused with vitamins D, is stated to be quite distinct from it. Cod liver oil up till now had been regarded as the substance richest in this vitamin, but research has shown, the report says, that liver fats of cattle and sheep yield ten times as much of vitamin A as cod liver oil. It is contended that the discovery of this makes available a new food factor of immense value, and also that these fats are entirely free from the unpleasant flavor of fish oils.

Vitamine D, a mysterious and vital factor essential to health, and until lately obtained only as a product of living substance, is now stated to be producible by the action of ultra-violet rays upon a chemical substance called sterol.

Quart of Water
Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Got Hornsby Through Joke

THE Boston baseball world was recently inclined to the belief that there is a Santa Claus. While various explanations and rumors concerning the origin of the deal which brings Rogers Hornsby to the Hub to captain the Braves still eddied about in the wake of the sensational announcement, Boston fandom and officialdom seem content to let the New York Giants' explanation of the deal stand for itself.

Officially, from Braves' headquarters, Boston "has been after Hornsby for some time and gave up two promising as well as youthful players, both of whom are wanted by the Giants, to further that end." Unofficially, the deal was something of an accident, growing out of Boston attempts to obtain the services of a different New York player.

According to the unofficial version, President Emil Fuchs of the Braves met Manager John McGraw of the Giants on a dicker for another Giant infielder. The deal fell through, but at a later conference, McGraw intimated that he would like Francis Hogan, the young Braves catcher and Jimmy Welsh for his outfield, if the Braves president really had any trading in mind. More in amusement than in earnest, Judge Fuchs replied that "it would take Hornsby himself to get these two." When McGraw gave serious thought to the statement instead of an answering smile, the Braves' chief executive got down to business and the deal went through as much to his own surprise as that of the lay baseball world.

And the only additional comment forthcoming from the Braves president regarding the deal was a statement to the effect that Hogan and Welsh were valued at $150,000, and worth a lot to the Giants. "That's their value to me and the Braves," he said, "and any statement such as one I have heard that Rogers Hornsby, a $200,000 player, was traded for $25,000 worth of material is absurd."

Here We Have Rogers Hornsby.

Cat Finds Only Bridge

How Bonzo, a black cat belonging to Bert Pierson of Hertz, England, found his way back home, is puzzling his owner. Pierson moved recently from Sheerness, on the isle of Sheppey, to Hertz. The only means of access to the isle of Sheppey is by way of the King's Ferry bridge. The cat found the crossing and traveled the 80 miles back to the old home, where he remained until found.

Pineapple to Furnish Future Paper Supply?

Carao, a species of wild pineapple found in Brazil, may soon be used to provide pulp for making first-class paper.

For centuries the natives of Brazil have cut the long narrow leaves that protect the carao fruit, and obtained fiber from them by beating the leaves between two stones. From this they make twine and ropes by "wet rotting."

In the experiments the pulp was obtained from this native rope, which was cut into short lengths, threshed, cooked in a solution of caustic soda, bleached, and beaten. The carao fibers are cylindrical and comparatively long, but of small diameter, properties that enable them to mat together easily, giving compactness and strength to the sheet.

Gum, oil, balsam, pitch and acid, are also obtained from this pineapple.

The Overactor

Louis Marshall, the New York lawyer who represents the theater ticket agencies, was criticizing a young actor.

"This young fellow," he said, "over-acts. I'd like to tell him the anecdote about Doctor Johnson. It would do him good."

"Doctor Johnson was finding fault one day with the acting of his friend, David Garrick, in the ghost scene of 'Hamlet.' He ridiculed Garrick's over-acting, and when he finished Boswell said:

"But that famous start! Wouldn't you, sir, start just as Mr. Garrick does, if you saw a ghost?"

"I hope not," said Johnson. "If I did, I should frighten the ghost."

New Platinum Supply

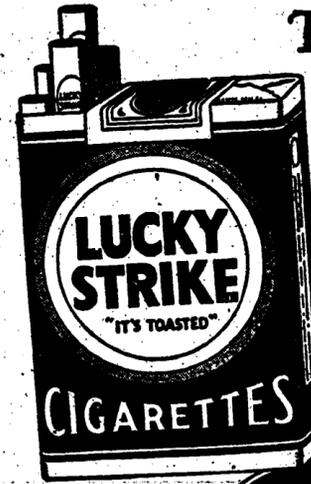

The London colonial office announces that a platinum-bearing area of about forty square miles in extent has been discovered in Sierra Leone, West Africa, because the deposits, which are alluvial, are "likely to be of considerable importance."

Platinum is the most valuable of all metals. The present price is about $70 an ounce.

An interesting point in connection with the new discovery is that at present the world depends on Soviet Russia for more than half of its platinum supplies.

People Never Partial to Perforated Coins

Perforated coins were never in favor in the United States, though various efforts were made to popularize them. The first United States coin with a perforated center was a gold dollar issued in 1849, which had a square hole in the middle of the planchet. It was the forerunner of the gold dollar issued by the United States mint in 1849. The coin was engraved, not struck from dies. The next United States coin with a perforated center was issued from the Philadelphia mint in 1850 and was of the denomination of 1 cent. It was about the size of the bronze cent now in use.

At that time the large, old-fashioned copper cent was in general circulation and the perforated coin received the name of "ring cent." The designer reasoned that by means of the perforation the cent could be distinguished by touch from the dime. Another perforated cent issued the same year showed two rings in the field, with the words "Cent, one-tenth silver." The reverse showed an olive wreath around the perforation and the words "United States of America." The mint authorities undertook to design a coin that would answer all requirements, and the pieces were struck with both pierced and perfect centers in silver, copper, nickel and composition metal, six varieties in all, without counting the various metals, but none of the designs was favored by the government authorities, and consequently they were never put in general circulation.

Marriage No Light Ceremony in China

Getting married is complicated business in China. Anna Louise Strong, writing in Harper's Magazine, gives the following description of Chinese wedding customs as related to her by a Chinese student:

"If a marriage is honorable in China, the parents of the groom will pay the money needed. They will send notes from the groom's father: 'On such a date my son will marry the daughter of Mr. So-and-So. Your presence is requested at the feast.' But it is worth much to him, for at the wedding, all honor is shown to this old man, who will now be a grandfather, since his son has taken a wife.

"But if the marriage be without parents' consent, then the young folks cannot be at home on their wedding day. A proper, honorable marriage—it really cannot be done without the parents; otherwise, all is disorder. There are only two other ways for young folks. One is to wait and beseech the parents. Even if they do not like the girl, still they love their son, and if they see him always unhappy, refusing to take any other woman or to give them grandsons, in the end they will often give way."

To Clinch the Bargain

A Kansas City man employed in an expert capacity received an offer from a rival firm recently, and went to talk the matter over. The prospective employer named a certain sum to start the salary discussion, but the expert did not like the looks of the new job, and so he said, "I'm sorry, but I have a contract with my company which has two years to run."

"Contract be blown!" said the rival boss, who is also a lawyer. "I can break any contract ever written. Now, you come with us, and I'll give you $100 a month more than you're getting now."

"Well, I guess I'd better not."
"Listen, I'll give you $150 more."
"No, I—"
"And a contract."—Kansas City Star.

Jewels in Legend

The fact that the misfortunes that have so often attended the careers of famous jewels may be explained away as coincidences, just as the mystical qualities ascribed to pearls may be dispelled on scientific grounds, will probably not lessen the appeal of the stories and legends about them. On the other hand, optimists may point with some pleasure to a contrary example, in which the pawning of some more or less valuable jewelry financed Columbus' discovery of a new world.

Youth Laughs Last

A professor at George Washington university failed to show up on time for class. The young men waited 15 minutes. No professor! The class evaporated. Next day the teacher avowed he had been "constructively present" because his hat had been on his desk. On the third day the instructor entered the classroom to find the usual chairs, each with a hat upon it. American humor is still "constructively present."—Lafayette Journal and Courier.

Burial of Giantess

To bury a woman who died at Maquass, South Africa, the services of 30 men were required. The coffin was 3 feet 4 inches high at the shoulder and 6 feet 3 inches in length. Twenty men had to assist in putting the corpse into the coffin, and 30 pallbearers lowered it into the grave. The deceased, who was a young woman, had been bedridden for a year. Owing to her weight a special bed had to be made on the floor.

Americans in Ranks of Canadian Legion

In the earlier years of the World War many thousands of Americans joined the Canadian expeditionary forces. Such an incident as here follows, was of daily occurrence in Canadian recruiting depots.

The place, say, is Calgary. There walks in a strapping, travel-stained man. "You're British, of course?" says the recruiting officer, carelessly. "I've come in from Spokane." "Um. Sorry, but we can't take you. Only British, you know," says the recruiting officer, but he gives the man a queer sort of look, which is lost upon him for the moment.

The man moves off, crestfallen. A Canadian corporal sidles up. "Say, you've come here to enlist? Well, take half an hour's walk around the city, and just recall that you were raised in Medicine Hat, or Port Arthur, or anywhere you can think of this side of the line." The hint is grasped, and the only possible further trouble is with the medical officer.

In this way Americans to a total strength of five battalions joined the Canadian forces. For a time these soldiers wore a distinguishing badge, but for diplomatic and other reasons the badge was subsequently modified. The five battalions were known as the American legion. They were the most unruly lot of an unruly but heroic army, the Canadian expeditionary force.—Chicago Journal.

Nothing Suffices to Break Punning Habit

In the kingdom of Roumania a law against punning has been passed. Citizens in that country may play upon horses, roulette, keno, pianos or even saxophones, but they must not play upon words.

Abube-Asap was the first man condemned under the new law. Convicted of first-degree punning he was sentenced to be hanged.

However, on the night before the morning set for the execution the warden entered the cell of Abube-Asap bringing good news.

"Congratulations, Abube-Asap!" he said. "The king has signed your pardon. You are a notorious punster, the worst in all Roumania. However, the king has decided to give you another chance on condition that you swear never to pun again! What do you say to that?"

"No noose is good news!" said Abube-Asap.

So the pardon was withdrawn and Abube-Asap was hanged.—Stray Stories.

River Under Ground

Lost River is a name given to a deep gorge where the water of the Moosilauke Branch brook disappears from sight, and at times from sound, for a considerable distance under massive boulders. It is the third great natural wonder in the Franconian mountains, standing next after the Profile and the Flume, far surpassing the latter in its surprises. Its massive rock architecture, and unique in its dark, gloomy caverns. The gorge itself is about one-half mile long, 200 rods wide and 40-75 feet deep to the brook bed. It was discovered in 1835 by R. C. Jackman of North Woodstock.

Dog Witness for Itself

A dog recently testified for itself and its master and mistress at a court in Nottingham, England. The owners swore that they had been wantonly attacked by a man who declared that the dog should be chained up when it started frisking around the assailant. The case turned on whether the dog was vicious or merely playing, and throughout the hearing the dog sat quietly on the clerk's desk or gently licked the hand of anyone who approached it, and the magistrates decided that the assault had been unprovoked.

Gift Worthy of Prince

The costliest Christmas card ever made was prepared at the order of an Indian prince. Although the card measured only 12 by 10 inches, it involved six months' incessant work for the artist, who produced it. Forty elephants were killed before tusks of exactly the right quality were obtained to yield the tusk ivory card. On it four of the talented Indian artists reproduced 100 scenes from the life of Buddha. Around the edge of the masterpiece, to form a frame for the pictures, 44 of the finest diamonds were set.

Night Winds in Mountains

A meteorological phenomenon found among the high mountains and noticeable in many places in Waterton lakes national park in southern Alberta is the night wind from the mountain tops. During the heat of the day the warm air rises from the valleys, but at sunset a current of air from the peaks rushes downward, bringing with it the scents of pines and larches, and it may be of the flowers of some alpine meadow a couple of thousand feet above.

State of Mind

Your state of mind has a direct relationship to your state of health. The individual who is bored with his work, tired of its monotony, depressed with its sameness oftentimes reflects his mental state in the condition of his health. There is no question of the vital influence of a happy frame of mind over the physical forces of the body.

The Runaway Car

PERRY LANCE lifted the dish cover and regarded the bacon and eggs with a skeptical eye. "All the world loves a lover," he quoted glumly. "But—"

"But—I have not finished my breakfast," added his guest, Billy Latham. "Of course, we all know that the world loves a lover, and all that, and of course I am aware that not one fair daughter of Eve cares two whoops for you? Right?"

"Right," gloomily assented Perry as he helped himself to a hot roll.

"It is all your own fault," went on Billy Latham. "You are a recluse—a woman hater—yes, indeed, dear boy! And yet you wonder why you have reached the advanced age of thirty and have never loved a woman!"

"A girl would do," avowed Perry. "Once upon a time you were engaged to a girl."

"She thought I was a flat. All that she liked about me was my bank-book."

"All girls are not alike, Perry. But on your old clothes and come with me for a tramp. We can act as agents for Potcleaver's cooking utensils—eh?"

"Get about a bit and see the world through clearer eyes?" Perry laughed heartily.

"A lark, I'll say," replied his friend. "Come, Perry, it is a fine day. Let's go out and buy a rummy looking old car and some sample pots and pans!"

"Wait until I change my clothes and pack a bag."

Half an hour later the two young men drove away from the garage.

"Some pranks those rich fellers play," grinned one of the workmen as the car disappeared.

"It is Lance's vacation—they say when he does work that he's at it day and night—writes books, you know."

Billy Latham was at the wheel of the hired car. They had excellent luck in selling the pots and pans and they took many orders for them, but no money would be paid until the goods were delivered. That first night they stopped at a village tavern. They ate a hearty supper, filled out their order blanks and mailed them at the post office and afterwards slept like the proverbial tops.

Other days and the sun was like gold and the air like rare wine that acted as a tonic, lifting their spirits high. Girls they had met in numbers—not one of them with the unusual beauty, spirit and fire that Perry Lance yearned for in the girl he might love and who might love him.

One day he thought he had met her when a tractor passed them—a small tractor driven by a girl dressed in khaki overalls with a black smudge on her cheek.

"That is a wonderful girl, Perry," remarked Billy Latham.

"Yes," said the other briefly.

"Although!" cried Billy and stepped on the gas.

What happened to the vital parts of the old car just then no one could ever afterwards discover, but it darted forward and by jumps and bounds proceeded on its way. The two young men pulled levers, pressed pedals and pulled out knobs, but in spite of their experience with all kinds of motor cars, they thought of jumping out before they overtook disaster. Even the steering gear became jammed and refused to function. They had passed the tractor at top speed and the girl's warning voice floated after them.

Behind them sounded the deep blare of a motor horn and the rumbling clatter of the tractor. Then it shot past them at top speed.

"There will be a crash now!" muttered Billy.

Perry tugged desperately at a lever. "Ye gods!" yelled Billy. "She's put the tractor across the road!"

Perry stared ahead and saw the girl jump from the tractor and run toward them. It did not surprise him when she jumped on the running board of their car which was evidently bound for destruction.

"Get off!" he shouted.

"Get off yourself," she laughed at him. "Come, jump off before it strikes!"

This being good advice to follow, she jumped off gracefully with a little running movement in the road and the two young men followed.

The driver was not going fast but it hit the tractor with a sharp impact that seemed to settle her own disorganization, for when she stopped with no damage to either one beyond a shattered windshield on the small car, the three of them looked at one another cheerfully.

"We have to thank you—" began Perry when she beckoned them both to the top of the rising hill. They looked down a hundred feet upon an ocean beach.

"The government is closing this road—you passed the traffic sign at the cross roads," said the girl. "We are building a stone wall right here next week."

If Perry Lance discovered that Betty Dunlap was the one girl in the world for him, and if he wooed her as an agent, who can blame him? He found out that her father was the contractor who had this particular job and Betty was driving the tractor because she felt like a lark. This particular lark led both of them to the altar and they are both extremely happy ever after.
