IN EFFECT JULY 15

New Rates of the N. H. Power Company Approved

Finding that the new rate schedules filed for the Hillsborough-Henniker and Antrim-Bennington divisions of the New Hampshire Power company will in the aggregate save to the people of Hillsborough and Henniker some $2500 a year over the present charges, and in the Antrim-Bennington division some $2200 a year, the Public Service Commission last Friday approved the new schedules with some modifications agreed to at the hearing.

The new rates schedules accept and adopt the room rate schedule as are in effect in Concord and some other communities in the state. In the Hillsborough-Henniker case the commission found that 97 1/2-10 of the customers would share in the reduction approximating 8 1-10 per cent in rates under the new schedules.

Modification contained in the orders in both cases and agreed to by interpretation of the language of the schedules at the hearings permit customers to take advantage of "power rates" for domestic refrigeration and house heating.

It will therefore be seen that the rate made by the towns in this matter amounted to something after all. Modifications and interpretations mean considerable, as given out in this connection. New rates go in force July 15.

Poor Roads Expensive

Recently conducted experiments show that bad roads cost the motorist the equivalent of a tax of 22.3 cents on every gallon of gasoline used. This figure is reached by the assumption that a car makes 10 miles to the gallon on poor roads. On a basis of speed of 33 miles per hour, tests in several states showed the cost of gasoline and tires per thousand miles over a rough road used in experiments, was $35.10 for an average four-cylinder car loaded. The cost for the same car running at the same speed over a smooth highway was shown to be only $12.80. What better argument can there be for improving highways as fast as funds can be made available? Road oils are constantly playing a more important part in transforming thousands of miles of unsatisfactory road into modern serviceable highways.

This certainly is a reasonable argument and quite naturally the motorist feels in going about that the highway departments of state, cities and towns should be running in high speed at all times. Their observation is however, that this is not the case. Some officials get "peevish" when criticised, but they are only servants of the people, using the taxpayer's money, and why shouldn't the taxpayer have something to say!

Regarding One Candidate

Formally opening the Republican campaign in Kansas, William Allen White, Emporia editor, in an address at Olathe, Kansas, last Thursday, praised the personal courage of Governor Alfred E. Smith, but declared "his election would menace the nation." It is not that Governor Smith is a Catholic and a wet, which makes him an offense to the villagers and town dwellers, but because his record shows the kind of President he would make—"a Tammany President" the editor said. "He is a man of unusual intelligence, splendid courage and rare political wisdom, yet he has a curious record."

Reviewing the Democratic nominee's record, Mr. White said that in the New York legislature he had voted 10 times against allowing the people to vote on any sort of restriction on the sale of liquor; four times against stopping gambling and prostitution in connection with saloons; three times against repeal in the law keeping the saloons open on Sunday; four times in favor of removing zoning restrictions which would keep open saloons from churches and schools and three times in favor of laws sponsored by organized gambling.

THE NEW ROAD

For The Antrim Reporter

The new road is nearer
And smoother and wide,

It's a very pleasant road
By the river's side;

The old road is narrow
And climbs up over the hill,

And the old farms beside it
Are lifeless and still.

Most people take
The new road these days.

It's of modern construction
And saves quite a ways.

But somehow I like
The old road the best,

And I like to pause
When I reach the hill's crest.

For 'twas over this road
There passed on their way,

Father and mother
On their wedding day!

Tobey and Brown are Gubernatorial Candidates

First filings of the September primary campaign in the Republican and Democratic parties were received at the office of the Secretary of State in Concord Friday, the 13th, with Republican candidates predominating.

Both announced Republican candidates for governor entered their names promptly, Ora A. Brown of Ashland designating himself as his financial agent under the new law, and Charles W. Tobey of Temple designating John R. McLeane of Manchester.

Congressman Edward H. Wason of Nashua, Republican, filed for re-nomination and re-election. He was the first in either party to file for congressman from either of the two New Hampshire districts.

For County officers the following have filed the necessary papers:

Lottie B. Copp, Republican, Nashua, for register of probate.

James J. Collins, Republican, Manchester, for commissioner.

Joel S. Daniels, Republican, Manchester, for County sheriff.

Walter M. Goodale, Republican, Merrimack, for commissioner.

Richard M. O'Dowd, Democrat, Manchester, for County sheriff.

L. Ashton Thorp, Republican, Manchester, for County solicitor.

Thomas A. Carr, Democrat, Manchester, for County commissioner.

George I. Haselton, Republican, Manchester, for re-nomination for County solicitor.

Seek History Data in Southern States

House-to-House Canvass to Be Made in Search of Old Documents.

Washington.—Plans for collecting millions of old letters, diaries, statistical and other original documents calculated to shed light on southern history were outlined here by Dr. Joseph Gregoire de Rouhae Hamilton, professor of history at the University of North Carolina, speaking under the auspices of the local chapter of the alumnae of that state's college for women.

The collection has been started on a small scale, but it is to be broadened now that preparations have been made to provide a fireproof structure for the State university at Chapel Hill, N. C., in which to preserve the data.

Doctor Hamilton said that the material would be available to historians or other research workers interested in learning actual social, economic and other basic conditions connected with the settlement and development of the South.

The plans contemplate a collection throwing light upon the past and present of the states of Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri and Texas.

To Ransack Through Garrets. Material will be sought not only in old garrets, closets, trunks and cellars in those states but from Southerners who have moved elsewhere and who have such letters and documents. Where material is given by or concerning, those now living it will be sealed and not thrown open to inspection until such time as may be designated by the donors.

Doctor Hamilton emphasized the urgent need of rescuing such papers now from the danger of fire, rats and other causes of destruction.

In recent months Doctor Hamilton has rummaged in several attics in North Carolina for letters which the owners thought useless. Some of the communications found are considerably more than 100 years old. In many instances he discovered that letters had been burned to get them out of the way.

At one farmhouse he ran across a batch of love letters written in the early '80s, which the owner said would be of no interest to anyone. Picking up one letter at random, Doctor Hamilton discovered that it was from a young man who had gone to Tennessee and later to Mississippi. It gave a minute description of the country and social conditions when he arrived.

Southern Diaries Found. At Fayetteville, N. C., Doctor Hamilton saw a box of yellowed documents, some of them relating to business matters of a century and a half ago. Again he was told that there was nothing of importance in the collection. He picked up another letter at random. It was from a pioneer seeking information about a water wheel desired for his plantation.

That communication was a valuable sidelight, Doctor Hamilton said, on an economic condition respecting farm machinery prevailing at the time, and would prove of great value in constructing the true story of early efforts to improve production.

He said that he had discovered that many Southerners, from the earliest days, kept diaries after the fashion of New Englanders and that these contained pictures of living conditions not yet clearly depicted in history. One diary he found ran from 1806 to 1918.

He added that Southerners generally had been more careless than New Englanders or Westerners in keeping their old records and that not until recent years had attempts been made to gather and preserve them for their value in studying both southern and national history.

Calls Situation Unfortunate. "The whole situation," he said, "is unfortunate. The time is ripe to remedy it so far as possible by the establishment of a great library of southern historical material, or to express it, perhaps, more accurately, of southern human records."

"With the completion of plans for its new and permanent library building, authorized by the last legislature, the University of North Carolina, in pursuance of a plan it has contemplated for many years, is now undertaking the establishment of such a collection and beginning active prosecution of that work."

The North Carolina material already includes 40,000 bound volumes and pamphlets. These relate also to early affairs in Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia. In addition, there are many newspaper clippings that have been classified. As new material is received it will be filed and catalogued and made readily accessible to the historical student.

"The southern collection, as planned," said Doctor Hamilton, "will include, so far as possible today, every book or pamphlet of any kind on any subject written in the South or by a Southerner, every one which deals in any way with the southern states, their people or their problems."

Many Kinds of Material. "It will contain state publications of every sort, general historical works, monographs, biographies, town, county and other local histories, genealogical works, essays, poetry, fiction, sermons, files of periodicals, statistics, maps, broadsides, the catalogues, minutes, proceedings and reports of educational bodies and institutions, fraternal orders, commercial, professional, philanthropic, religious, social, patriotic and scientific organizations, as complete files of southern newspapers as can be secured and files of papers from other sections which carry southern material.

"Nor will it be confined to printed material. It will include great masses of manuscript material, such as diaries, unpublished reminiscences or other autobiographical writings, letters of every description, plantation records, and the ledgers and other records of industrial and business undertakings."

"It will contain not only papers and letters of prominent individuals and families, but all kinds of records which reveal the life and thought of the masses of the people."

Doctor Hamilton said that this material would show hitherto unknown facts in economical, social, religious, scientific and political fields. He predicted that the South within fifty years would be the scene of a "tremendous economic and social development" and that the matter to be gathered would enable it in the immediate future to "wisely chart its course."

The plans contemplate sending investigators through several states on a house-to-house canvass to collect all available documents up to at least as late a period as 1880 or 1885.

Waiter Peels Grapes for Prince of India

Paris.—The Aga Khan of India, whom England accords a salute of eleven guns, is head of the Ismaili Mohammedans.

The Aga Khan doesn't like the skins of grapes, and he is the kind of a prince who won't be bothered by any such small job as skinning.

When he came to Paris for the racing season he brought with him a little jewel case in which were two small silver instruments, one to hold the grape and the other to jerk off the skin.

He turned them over to the maitre d'hotel of the restaurant where he usually dines. Now, whenever the Aga Khan favors that place by appearing a waiter peels grapes, so all the Aga Khan has to do is to put them in his mouth and swallow.

The bonds disappeared shortly after they had been received in New York from the Union Trust Company of Cleveland by registered mail.

On the slight chance that they might be found in the waste paper removed from the office on that day, the bond corporation officials communicated with the company which disposes of the paper and learned that it had been baled and shipped to the Roberts Garb company.

When one of the bond company officials arrived here he was told that six of the twenty-two bales received already had been ground into pulp. An examination of the other sixteen bales was started and before the search had gone very far the envelope containing the bonds was found.

Diary Makes Garden Growing Much Easier

A diary is of inestimable value in caring for a garden. Entries should be made every day not only of the work done, but its results as well as weather conditions. Experience is the most valuable teacher, but its lessons often are wasted on poor memories. A diary makes information on all discoveries and observations readily and permanently available for reference.

In planting the wise householder uses a stake and line to make rows straight and strives to give the garden an attractive appearance as well as making it productive. By the skillful use of vines, flowers and a little landscaping with pergolas and arches, it is possible to add immeasurably to the appearance of the garden.

There is such a thing, however, as overnicety. For example, some gardeners in planting green and wax beans go through the ordeal of placing each eye down. Despite their claims to greater success by this method the improvement is not sufficiently imposing to warrant that much extra trouble.

Germination may be hastened by covering the seeds with water before covering them with earth. Sometimes, as in the case of parsley, which is slow to germinate, it is profitable to soak the seeds in warm water 12 minutes in the house before planting them.

Park Spaces Now Seen as Commercial Asset

Indiana, with 7,854.71 acres in city and county parks, stands tenth among the 25 most populous states in the nation in such park space, according to a national survey by the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

California leads with 20,858 acres, and New York state is second with 19,415. Following Indiana are Minnesota with 9,080 acres and Missouri with 7,733.

Of 54 Hoosier cities reporting to the survey, Indianapolis had the largest total park area, 2,566.16 acres, and Evansville was second with 623 acres. The smallest town to report a park was Fowlerton, population 225.

Parks are promoting health and child safety and reducing juvenile delinquency, as well as adding to the beauty of communities, says L. E. Weir, director of the study. The use of city parks for active recreation has been the most significant trend in recent park development. Though more than a billion dollars have been spent in the United States to acquire and equip municipal and county parks, few cities as yet provide adequate park facilities and hundreds of small towns have reserved no park space, the survey revealed. In urban communities, children's playgrounds and neighborhood recreation fields are the greatest lack, Mr. Weir pointed out.

Hedge Worth Consideration

A well-cared-for hedge adds a touch of privacy to your home and is more pleasing than a wooden or wire fence.

The most commonly used shrub for hedging is the privet. The best results will be obtained if three-year-old plants are used. They should be cut back about one-half their size and set several inches deeper than they were planted in the nursery.

For single row planting, the plants should be set 12 inches apart in a row and placed about one foot back from the lot line to allow for the spread of the bush.

If double row planting is done, the plants should be set 18 inches apart. No two plants should be opposite one another. This will give a zig-zag effect.

Shrubs as Screens

Often in planting the garden, some sort of screen effect is required to hide an unsightly object; something for quick growth with sufficient height and foliage density. For this purpose there is nothing better than the tall, quick-growing shrubs Deutzia, Rose Weigela, Smoke Bush, Mock Orange, Rose of Sharon and Bush Honeysuckle. If several varieties of these plants are planted around the yard, they not only afford beauty, but also a feeling of privacy and seclusion.

Pays to Plan Garden

In the creation of your garden, which should bear the stamp of your individual fancy, let the first step be the free play of your imagination. Vague day-dreaming, however, will not do it. Your dream garden must be definite, practical. Plan the garden with a fair degree of definiteness before going to the seed store, or sitting down with the catalogues to actually make out the order for your seeds.

Details That Improve Home

Next to your house, nothing adds more to the impression people get of your property than the appearance of the steps, walks and driveways. And nothing can detract more than worn, uneven or shabby approaches.

ODD THINGS IN AUSTRALIA

"Laughing Jackasses" of Australia.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

AUSTRALIA, possessor of so many features unfamiliar to the rest of the world, might be catalogued, by a nature lover by her trees and her birds. One readily understands why the Australian loves his trees. The groves of giant eucalyptus form pictures never forgotten, and the scent of the wattle brings a homesick feeling like the smell of the sage to a Westerner.

The flora is not only beautiful, it is unique, without counterpart in other lands. Of the 10,000 species of plants most of them are purely Australian, and are unknown even in New Zealand. The general impression one gets of Australian forests is their total unlikeness to anything seen elsewhere. The great forests of timber trees are not damp and shaded and all of one species, but are well lighted and filled with other forests of shorter trees; in places the woods consist of widely spaced trees surrounded only by bunch grass, and even in areas where water is not to be found on the surface for hundreds of square miles true forests of low trees are present.

Forms which may be recognized as tulip, lily, honeysuckle and fern take on a surprising aspect. They are not garden flowers, but trees, and the landscape of which they form a part reminds one of the hypothetical representations in books of science of a landscape of Mesozoic time, a period antedating our own by millions of years.

The trees are indeed those of a bygone age. In America and Europe shadowy forms of fossil leaves of strange plant species are gathered from the rock and studied with interest; in Australia many of these ancient trees are living. The impression that one is looking at a landscape which has forever disappeared from other parts of the world is so vivid that the elms and maples and oaks in some of the city streets strike a jarring note. The transition from Jurassic to modern times is painfully abrupt.

With a flora of such great interest, it occasions no surprise to find that Australia is the home of many eminent botanists, and that geologic history is a common subject of study in schools.

Eucalyptus the National Tree.

Australia is the home of the wonderful eucalyptus, a tree about which a fair-sized library of books and pamphlets has been written, without exhausting the subject. For geological ages the eucalyptus have remained undisturbed in this "biological backwater," and, spreading over the continent, have adapted themselves to many varieties of soil and climate and elevation. About 300 species have already been discovered in the small part of the continent explored by botanists.

It is a hopeless task for the tourist to gain an acquaintance with this national tree. As he passes through woods and open spaces, seeing trees of widely different aspect—different in form and method of branching, different in color and kind of bark, different in shape and size and color of leaf, some oozing gum, others clean and dry—it is disconcerting to be quietly told by his botanist-guide that this surprising array of trees "includes only varieties of the genus eucalyptus."

The Australian is likewise embarrassed by these prolific variations of eucalyptus. The trees in general are "gums"—white gums, red gums, blue gums, spotted gums, cabbage gums—or ironbark, stringy bark, woolly bark, smooth bark; and when distinctions are necessary we get such combinations as narrow-leaved-red-ironbark, or broad-leaved-yellow-stringy-bark.

Plants That Grow Rapidly.

The eucalypts include some of the tallest trees in the world. The Victorian forests department records trees which measure 329, 333 and 342 feet, and states that there are "scores of trees about 300 feet in height." The surveyor of the Dandenong ranges made notes of the tallest trees felled during an eight-year period and reports that "all those measured were over 300 feet in length."

Eucalyptus trees reproduce themselves readily and grow about seven times more rapidly than oak or hickory. From a ton of bark of the gum tree was obtained by analysis 416 pounds of tannin extract and 308 pounds of oxalic acid. From the gums and leaves of these trees come also the highly valuable eucalyptus oils, from which no less than twenty-seven constituents have been distilled for pharmaceutical purposes and for the separation of metals by the flotation process.

The eucalyptus is the great timber tree of the continent. Of sixty varieties in Victoria, twenty have high commercial value and are finding an ever-increasing market. The Tasmanian blue gum is one of the strongest, densest, and most durable woods in the world. Timbers 2 feet square, exceeding 100 feet in length, are readily obtained, and, when used for piling, need not be weighted, for the density of the wood is such that it sinks in water. Their strength is twice that of English oak, and they are practically immune from attack by the teredo, which plays such havoc with ordinary timbers.

The Jarrah, a eucalyptus of west Australia, is another famous tree. It is one of the few woods of the world which successfully resist the ravages of white ants; it is practically immune from the attacks of marine borers, and, like the iron-bark of Victoria and New South Wales, has been known to withstand fire better than iron girders.

Many Beautiful Birds.

Australia is stocked with beautiful birds, many of them of unusual aspect. The man who originated the popular saying that "Australian birds have plumage, but no song," must have lived in a sound-proof box. Among the 775 species are included some of the most brilliantly colored, sweetest voiced and most unusual birds in the world.

Along the northeast coast is the bower bird, which adorns its nest and decorates its playing ground with shells, seeds, and other bright objects, not desisting brass buttons and cartridge cases.

The lyre bird, famous for its plumage, is the rival of the mockingbird of the South in sweetness of tone and skill as a mimic. The crow-shrike ("magpies"), the brown flycatcher ("jacks winter"), the bush warbler, the rock warbler, the reed warbler, the bush lark, the cuckoo, the honey eaters, and the "willy wagtail," constitute parts of a bird chorus difficult to surpass. Cockatoos are as common in Australia as crows in the Central West; even in the desert flocks are frequently seen. Some of them are excellent talkers, most of them gorgeously dressed.

A most surprising bird is the koobourra, or laughing jackass. All at once in the quiet bush come loud peals of uproarious, mocking laughter. One is not inclined to join in the merriment—it all seems as foolish and weird as if an idiot boy were disturbing a congregation in church. When the source of the laughter is located it turns out to be a silly-looking bird with clumsy, square body and open mouth, sitting unconcernedly on a stump.

The ibis occurs by thousands, and the gigantic black-necked stork, or jabiru, standing 5 feet high, inhabits the swamps of the northern coast, while the graceful black swan frequents the estuaries and lakes. The wallie hen and the brush turkey build mounds of sticks, leaves, and earth 8 to 10 feet high. The eggs are laid in burrows excavated in the mound and are left to be hatched by the heat resulting from decomposing vegetable matter—a homemade community incubator.

The casowary of the forests of Queensland and Papua and the emu, which is found throughout the continent, are unknown outside the Australian region. The emu is the national bird and shares with the kangaroo the task of upholding the shield on the commonwealth coat of arms. It is a powerful bird and can run at the rate of 15 to 20 miles an hour.

"NINETY DAYS MEAN NOTHING TO ME," DRIVER TELLS JUDGE

This Chauffeur Had to Laugh When Arrested for Violating Parking Rules.

Omaha.—Patrolman Percy Saplonicka was irritated when he saw a large, expensive sedan parked in a "no parking" space.

"What're you doing in that safety zone?" he demanded of the chauffeur. The chauffeur lolled back in his seat and dragged comfortably on his cigar.

"This place is good enough for me," he announced. "You can't scare me." "Come and see a judge," shouted Saplonicka.

In Police court Judge George Holmes was equally irritated. "Just because you drive a high-priced car you can't get away with that," said he. "I ought to give you 90 days." "Ha, ha," laughed the chauffeur.

"You laugh at me and I'll give you 60 days," threatened Judge Holmes. "Ha, ha," gurgled the chauffeur. "You still make me laugh."

"Put this impudent fellow in jail for 90 days," exclaimed Judge Holmes. "How do you like that, my good fellow?"

"Pretty fair for a police judge," chuckled the chauffeur. "It doesn't impress me greatly, but that's because time doesn't mean much to me anyway. You see, I'm one of Warden Fenton's chauffeurs at the Nebraska penitentiary at Lincoln. I'm in for life."

The RETURN of ANTHONY TRENT

by WYNDHAM MARTYN

Rousing the footman, Thorpe examined the unoccupied rooms carefully and found nothing to alarm him. At any moment he expected to come upon the vigilant Yeatman, whose absence was probably of a nature to be accounted for. Soon the business of the household began.

It was Payson Grant who had the most vivid shock. He awoke at nine, the better for a deep sleep. Those late hours, he thought, played the deuce with him. Hereafter he would retire reasonably early.

He was making new resolutions with all the reckless abandon of an insouciant man, when he perceived a folded piece of paper just inside his door. Idly he stooped down and picked it up. He knew in a moment that angular and unmistakable writing. Few knew so well as he the signature whose forgeries had helped to send Sutton to Sing Sing. Grant sank into a low chair and read the message:

"Do not think, because I have so far kept out of sight, that I am out of reach. I am nearer than you imagine. There are bad days coming for you.

F. W. S."

Payson Grant was oppressed with a sense of physical fear that overpowered any emotion he had before experienced. He had guarded himself with the utmost care and yet Sutton must have been within a few feet of him as he slept. But for the bolts of fine steel securing the door he would have been killed. Even now the convict might be outside. The cunning criminal would devise just such a plan, hoping to get his man as he rushed out to summon help.

The other door in the room led to a dressing-room beyond which was Natica's suite. Perhaps, even now, Sutton was crouching there ready for vengeance.

He took up the telephone and spoke with Thorpe.

"Send Mr. Yeatman here immediately," he commanded. He had been a fool not to tell the detective about Frank Sutton. What was the guarding of the jewels of his guests compared with his own safety? Yeatman's very presence would bring comfort.

"Mr. Yeatman is not in the house, sir," Thorpe answered him. "His bed has not been occupied. The grounds are being searched now."

"Why?" Grant asked. It seemed odd that before he had told Thorpe he wanted Yeatman a search had been begun.

"The two dogs were poisoned last night," Thorpe answered, "and I suspected burglars."

"Have you looked through the house thoroughly?" Grant was distracted at the news.

"I went into every room where guests were not sleeping. Nothing seemed disturbed. I don't think they got in."

"Yes, they did, you d—d fool," shouted his frightened employer. He hung up the instrument with hands that trembled. What folly for this smug butler to assume there had been no prowlers inside the house. The death of the dogs showed calculated malice. While Yeatman absented himself, a potential murderer had stalked the quiet corridors. It did not occur to Grant that the detective had been attacked. He was used to regarding the police and their allies as resolute men from whom criminals fled.

He wanted to talk to Natica, but between them was the dressing-room whose door he dared not open. He called up Thorpe again. "Come to my room at once," he commanded.

"Look here," he began, taking no notice of the butler's aloof manner. "You were wrong about thinking nobody got in last night. They did. I've proof of it. I want every place searched thoroughly." Grant pointed to the door of the dressing-room. "Just take a look in there and see if the window was forced." His fingers closed around the butt of his revolver in the dressing-gown pocket as the man swung open the door.

"Everything seems all right, sir," Thorpe reported.

"You are sure the dogs were poisoned?"

"Yes, sir," Thorpe answered, "and I'd like to get my hands on the men who did it."

"Well, keep a sharp lookout and you may get the chance. Keep everything as quiet as you can till Yeatman comes, and then send him to me."

Thorpe took his stately leave of the frightened man and met the house-keeper in the passage outside the room.

"It's a funny thing," she remarked, "but Mademoiselle Dupin has gone and her bed hasn't been slept in. All her things are gone, and I found this note on a table in the hall; it's her writing."

Natica was surprised at her husband's visit. She was uneasy when she heard of Yeatman's absence, and started when she learned of the death of the dogs. Had she taken the detective too much on trust, she wondered.

"I don't think you need be alarmed about that. He'll come back."

"That's the least of my troubles," he said gloomily. "Just read that."

"It certainly looks like Frank's writing," she exclaimed.

"It is his writing," he declared.

"Could I be mistaken? He pushed it under the door while I was lying there asleep. My God! Nat, don't you see how close we've been to murder? He must have stood there in the dead of the night trying to pick the lock. I shouldn't have stood a chance. You know how strong the brute is!"

"Well, we're not murdered," she said soothingly.

"And he's not caught. Something's got to be done. What are our precautions worth if he can get in and threaten me in my own house?"

She broke off to answer the telephone. When she put it down she could see she had received disturbing news.

"What is it?" he demanded eagerly.

"I don't understand it at all," she said, frowning. "Mademoiselle Dupin has gone. Miss Brewster is sending up a note she thinks Mademoiselle wrote and left on a hall table."

"My God!" her husband cried.

"More mystery. First Yeatman, and now the French woman. Odd she had between them was the dressing-room whose door he dared not open.

to go off like that. By heck, Nat, perhaps she cleared out with Yeatman. He wasn't American born."

He saw his wife turn pale. The thought horrified her. For if these two had gone it meant that they had succeeded in robbing some of Natica's guests. So humiliated did she feel that Payson Grant found himself bundled from the room.

At breakfast the talk was of politics. None had heard of the dead dogs, or were sufficiently interested in the accountant to mention him.

Anthony Trent was down. He wanted to know if Yeatman had been found, what effect Sutton's threat had had upon Grant, and if Mademoiselle Dupin's departure had caused comment. But he got no satisfaction at breakfast. There was a furtive, crafty look about his host, who had evidently steeled himself to betray a jovial heartiness which tasked his energies to enact.

Most of the ladies remained in their rooms. Few of them were slim, and the no-breakfast fad appealed to them as the logical thing. They were all charmed at receiving visits from pretty Natica Grant.

Natica went from the room of the last one of these estimable women, breathing sighs of relief. She had inspected the jewel-cases of them all, and not a piece was missing. The elopement theory was worth considering after all; Mr. Yeatman might still be guiltless of theft, no matter how careless in matters of the heart.

It was at high noon a gardener discovered Pierre Redlich. The Grants were favored with luck. The guests had gone to the Allenhurst Casino to bear the band.

When the detective had recovered from his cramp, and his bruises and scratches had been dressed, he gave a graphic description to his employer. Suspecting that strangers were in the grounds, he had crept quietly along the silent paths, only to run into several evil men. His fight had been heroic. In the end he had been beaten by numbers and thrown over the wall. There was one tall man, a giant, who had been particularly active.

To Payson Grant's ears this could mean only Sutton. Sutton was a big man. He was doubly certain now. Yeatman begged to be allowed to snatch a few hours of sleep before he took his tasks on again.

"That's a great relief," Natica said when he had gone.

"I don't see it," Grant said crossly.

"I don't believe Frank ever got in this house at all."

"I'd know his writing anywhere," her husband said stubbornly. "I tell you, Nat, I can feel him here. This thing is going to drive me crazy."

She looked at him impatiently. Man had always seemed to Natica the inferior sex.

"Don't let it make you stupid tonight when the Bizels come to dinner."

"I'm mighty glad it isn't a costume dance," he commented. "I'll swear if it were he'd manage to get in somehow. It's no good calling me down. I'm not built for this sort of life. I don't mind a fight if I've got to get into one. It's the suspense that gets me. That chateau scheme of yours begins to sound pretty good to me. I think I ought to get away for a bit of a change."

"You take it too much to heart. That letter was sent to frighten you, and you're playing his game by being so scared. He can't possibly be anywhere near us."

Under her influence Payson grew more cheerful. He envied her the courage she always showed. At luncheon none would have guessed that she had a care in the world. Natica declared he was out of danger; insensibly he began to incline to her belief. The presence of other men heartened him, and the cocktails had brought him courage. He hoped there would be no mention of crime during the meal. Trent brought up the subject.

"I haven't noticed the dogs today," he observed. "Usually they look through the windows as we are eating."

Mr. Gimbert could not hold back his direful news.

"Some scoundrel poisoned them in the night. Looks like the work of a gang of crooks to me."

"I'm glad it's nothing so alarming," Natica said. "A careless gardener is to blame. He put poisoned beans in the molar runs."

"Dogs don't eat beans," said old Gimbert.

"It was the poisoned moles they ate," Natica said, explaining.

Brewster loudly decried the notion of alreidies eating dead moles.

"This," said Brewster, conscious that he held the table, "is just what I have been expecting. If my worthy host and I were in the burglary business we should mark down just such a house as this."

"Nonsense," Grant exclaimed crossly.

"We certainly should," Brewster retorted. "The loot is right here. Last night when I looked round the table I said, 'This place is a magnet that will attract high-grade crooks.' Killing the dogs is the first precaution. Very likely they were scared away before they could get in. Does that mean they've given us up? Not by a long shot. They imagine that we shan't expect them tonight because they failed last night. Ladies and gentlemen, tonight's the night."

"You're crazy," Grant declared rudely.

"I think it's good reasoning," Anthony Trent remarked.

"Well, I'll be there," said old Gimbert. "You can count on me. While some of these illy-fingered experts here were at grammar school, I was trailing Geronimo. Many an Apache I've killed. As for these society burglars, I'd eat 'em up."

"What can be more reassuring than that?" Grant said. He was making an effort to seem at ease. "Godfather, you're elected to patrol the main corridors tonight. You punch the clock at eight and knock off when the help gets up."

"Sure," said Gimbert. "I'll do it rather than let the ladies get nervous." He turned to Anthony Trent. "What about you, young fellow?"

"I'll watch outside," said Trent.

"I've a grade of my own against dog-poiseners."

"Fine," said Grant heartily. This program suited him. "I'll call your bluff on that."

Things were turning out very well for Anthony Trent. It would create no astonishment or suspicion now if he were to be seen prowling about the grounds. He believed, with Brewster, although he had private information which the other did not possess, that Pierre Redlich would make his raid tonight.

"This talk is making the ladies nervous," Grant declared. "If burglars come we shall be ready for them; but it's a million to one they won't come. For heaven's sake, let's talk about something else."

A Cold Day

Going through Montana recently we got into conversation with a native son of that great state. "Gets pretty cold up here in the winter, doesn't it?" we observed, with considerable originality.

"Well," replied the Montanian, "there's a statue of Old Man Wilbaugh, the pioneer cattle king, on a little hill over in Golden valley. There he stands with his hands hanging helplessly at his sides, while he gazes forever across the plains he loved. But, believe me or not, it got so blamed cold up here once last winter that the old man had to keep his hands in his pants pockets all day long."—Harry Daniel, in Thrift Magazine.

Cobb Greatest of All Time

BILL CARRIGAN, the iron gray haired, keen-eyed chieftain of the Boston Red Sox, doesn't live on a baseball past, even though he might be accorded some privileges in that respect as the manager of world's championship teams in 1915 and 1916. Bill has young ideas and a young team, for the most part, and he is fast developing into a combination that must be reckoned with in the American league.

Bill Carrigan.

Nevertheless Carrigan, in the midst of this reconstruction program, may be persuaded to turn back the pages a little to tell you that Ty Cobb was probably the greatest all-around player he ever knew, with Tris Speaker a close rival; that Nap Lajoie, the famous Frenchman of the old Cleveland club, was the greatest natural batter; and that Babe Ruth, who came to the big show under Carrigan, was as great a left-handed pitcher before the war as he is an all-around star now.

"Cobb probably ranks as the best of them all in general ability, but Speaker was not far behind," Carrigan asserts in siding up the two famous outfielders now with the Athletics, both of whom, incidentally, were in their prime in Carrigan's days as manager-backstop of the old Red Sox ball team.

"Ty had a little edge at bat, perhaps, but not much. He was also a better baserunner, but Spoke was greater on defense. I don't think there has been any outfielder in the game who outshone Tris in this respect, although he had a pair of great teammates in Hooper and Lewis on our old team."

"Ty was always a bigger gate attraction than Tris. He was more of a firebrand on the field. Spoke was the sort who went about his business quietly."

"I never saw Ed Deleahanty and I can't pass any opinion on Rogers Hornsby," Carrigan went on. "But I would rank Lajoie as the greatest righthander. Ruth, of course, is the greatest long distance hitter, without an argument, but Lajoie also could hit 'em far as well as often."

Carrigan can't be drawn into the debate that Connie Mack, John McGraw and Wilbert Robinson engaged in last season as to whether the present-day Yankees, with their slugging power, eclipse the great teams of other days, such as the Baltimore Orioles, the Chicago Cubs, the old Athletics or Red Sox. "How can you stop a team with that hitting?" Bill ironically asks. "The Yankees don't need great pitching."

George Hoffman Remains as Fighter in Olympic

George Hoffman, national amateur boxing champion and America's representative in the heavyweight class for the coming Olympic games, has decided after a talk with Tex Rickard not to turn professional at least until after the Olympics, it was announced by Jacob W. Stumpf, chairman of the Olympic boxing committee and manager of the team.

Stumpf said he had been notified to this effect by Rickard who said he has advised Hoffman to remain an amateur. It had been announced that Hoffman would become a professional to box for Rickard on the Tunney-Heeney championship fight card, July 26, thus passing up the chance to go to the Olympics. He now expects to make the trip.

Human Speed Boat

Sport Notes

Erich Hagenlacher, former holder of the world's 18-2 balking championship, is now an instructor at one of the billiard academies in New York city.

Russell "Puss" Ralph, forward of Phillips university basket ball team for three seasons, will captain the Haymakers during next season's campaign.

Spanish promoters have Paulino signed for a bout in Barcelona with George Godfrey and hope to get the big black's signature for the bout this summer.

It is estimated that more than $200,000,000 was invested in the parimutuel machines at the race tracks in the United States and Canada during the season of 1927.

Phillips Finley, freshman at Harvard university, is the latest entrant in the ranks of long-hitting golfers. Experts believe he can outdrive any amateur or professional in the country.

Classes in golf instruction are to be a part of the regular physical training work for girls in the University of Texas. Instruction will be given in driving, putting and general tactics of playing.

LEFTHANDERS CAN TOUCH SOUTHPAWS

Stars of Olden Days Could Hit All Pitching.

This recently introduced baseball practice of switching lineups to put in as many right-hand batters as possible against left-hand pitchers is sheer bunk, if you will believe the old-timers.

The big leaguers of the day of Keeler, Jajoie and Wagner were never switched around, no matter who was pitching, and they hit just as hard and as often as the pampered athletes of today, they'll point out.

Take, for instance, Mike Donlin, who is quoted by Bozeman Bulger in the Farm Journal. Mike, who was about as good as they come when he was a Giant fifteen years ago, thinks the modern ballplayers are suffering from a "southpaw complex."

"You see," says Mike. "We didn't know in the old days that we were supposed to be weak against these corksneakers. Most any of these fell-wos today, I think, could hit left-handed pitching if they hadn't been influenced by fool talk."

Bulger, himself, who has followed the big leagues as a sports writer for more than a generation, declares that "twenty or thirty years ago such a procedure would have been hooted at."

"Most of the managers," he says, "will agree that the belief that a left-hand batter cannot hit a southpaw is largely psychological, but it has become so fixed in the minds of some batters that most all of the clubs are now put to the expense of carrying what are technically known as 'switch hitters.' Leslie Mann, a veteran of several clubs, has earned his living for years simply by his ability to 'murder' left-handers. He is used for practically no other purpose, although he is a good outfielder and a great baserunner."

There may be a point of logic, Bulger admits, in the fact that right-hand batters are more effective against southpaws because they do most of their hitting against right-hand pitching. That being the hardest pitching for them to hit, they are consequently more effective against left-handers.

But to offset that argument, his Farm Journal article points out that great players of the Speaker, Cobb, Ruth or Collins caliber, whose presence is necessary to the team on the defensive as well as the offensive, have refused to admit any such weakness and, consequently, have gone ahead hitting left-handers with all the effectiveness that they apply to the right-handed brethren.

Berghammer Shouted in Hank O'Day's Good Ear

Hank O'Day, National league umpire, is one of the most interesting figures in the game today, relates Al Demaree. Hank is slightly hard of hearing and while this may be an advantage to an umpire, it has led to many an amusing situation.

O'Day managed the Cincinnati Reds for a while a few years back. Some of the players used to take advantage of Hank's bad ear, and, sitting on his deaf side, would indulge in some choice personalities at Hank's expense. Hank, of course, couldn't hear them and it was great fun for the other players.

One day Marty Berghammer, second baseman, sat down beside O'Day, and, winking at the other players, shouted, "Go take a jump in the river, you old fathead."

Quick as a flash Hank turned around and yelled, "Go take a jump in yourself and see how you like it."

Marty nearly fell off the bench. He had sat down on the wrong side of Hank and yelled in the good ear.

Players used to pull the same stunt on Frank Chance, the old Chicago leader, who had been "beamed" so many times that it affected the hearing in one ear.

Connie Mack's Aids

One of the best reasons why the Philadelphia Athletics stand in second place in the American league, it is said to be because Mr. Connie Mack, one of the oldest managers in the game has three players wearing the ancient regalia and represent ninety-three years of professional baseball. They are Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins and John Pione Quinn. The photograph shows Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

BASEBALL NOTES

Being an umpire must be a soft job. All you have to have is a head harder than a pop bottle.

Frank Crossett, rising young star, playing in the San Francisco Seal's infield, is only seventeen years old.

Rogers Hornsby, the slugging infielder of the Boston Braves, who is paid $40,000, is insured for $250,000.

Bill Mullens, third baseman with the St. Louis Browns, has been purchased outright by Dallas, of the Texas league.

Umpires in Omaha have to have good voices. There are two pitchers in a league there, and both are named Zaporozowsky.

Among the pitchers wearing spectacles in the major leagues are "Specs" Meadows, Carmen Hill and Haskell Billings.

Jimmy Welsh, Giant outfielder, still carries with him, a card of membership in the St. Louis Knottolers' gang. It is dated 1915.

Herman Conrady of Hartsburg has been elected captain of the Illinois college baseball team. He is a pitcher and first baseman.

Buck Greene, trainer for the Giants last year, has been signed to play second base for the Eastern (Md.) club of the Eastern Shore league.

Only two pitchers—Urban Shocker and Herman S. Bell—have been able to win two complete nine-inning major league games in one day.

Harvey Pursell, of Phillipsburg, N. J., was elected captain of the Lafayette college baseball team, succeeding Paul Koch of Schuylkill Haven.

To aid in the curtailment of betting, a move has been started on the Pacific coast to curb the announcement of batteries until just before the game time.

The Boston Braves announced the release of Dinny McNamara, former Boston college outfielder, under option to the Providence club of the Eastern league.

Western league players say a trip to Pueblo is an acid test, the infield being a new skimed affair which is the roughest and hardest in the league.

Charlie Sullivan, tall right-handed pitcher of the Tigers, has been released to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league under an optional agreement.

Eugene H. White of Hagerman, N. M., was unanimously chosen captain of the 1928 Washington and Lee baseball team. White played second base regularly in the season just closed.

Fans at Wrigley field, home of the Chicago Cubs, no longer may cast a pop bottle at offending umpires. Plenty of pop is sold, but the vendors pour the liquid into paper cups and retain the bottles.

King Bader has adopted the idea of skull practice. Every morning King gathers his Providence warriors to discuss yesterday's mistakes, and to map out plans of strategy for coming encounters.

COLOR In The KITCHEN

The old Drab or Yellow Kitchen has given place or is fast giving place to the Bright, Lively, Colorful Jazzed Up Kitchen of Today.

COLOR FIRST CAME INTO THE KITCHEN WITH THE FLOOR COVER.

The bright colors in Linoleum gave so much added cheer to the room that it started something all along the line.

NEXT THE FURNITURE TOOK ON COLOR

The Kitchen Cabinet had to be in Grey or Blue. The Kitchen Table and Kitchen Rocker had to match each other and provide contrast to the Cabinet.

THEN THE RANGE HAD TO BE IN GREY ENAMEL

The factories tried to make the enameled range go in black, but it just could not be done; the lady of the house wanted a lighter, more cheerful color, and she got it.

THAT BROUGHT COLOR TO THE OIL STOVE
Contrasting colors in grey and white with blue or turquoise trimmings.

THE VERY LATEST IS THE UTENSILS IN BRIGHT, LASTING ENAMELED COLORS—ORANGES, BLUE, GREENS, REDS

Making a very pleasing contrast with the grey of the Range and Cabinet and all fitting into the Linoleum and wall covering colors.

Any discourse or declamation abounding in acrimonious invective is known as a philippic. One of a series of famous orations of Demosthenes, the Greek orator, denouncing Philip, king of Macedonia.

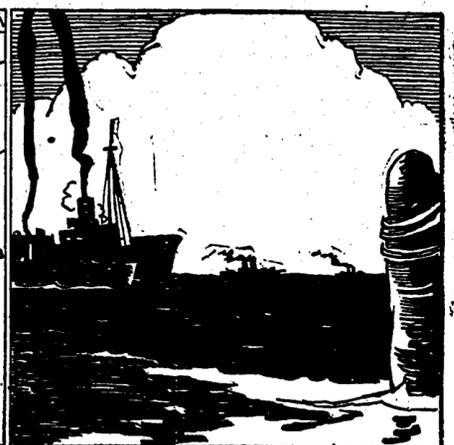

PICTORIAL LIFE OF HERBERT HOOVER

No. 12

By Satterfield

1. As Director of Belgian relief, Hoover became the center of great diplomatic and financial questions.

2. At his command food and supplies were safely convoyed through a blockade made bitter by hate.

3. Despite almost insuperable obstacles, the Hoover food got through to the people of little Belgium.

4. His first meeting with King Albert of Belgium was on the battle field.

REPORTER RAMBLINGS

A former newspaper man in Cleveland is giving a course of training for business men in the art of giving an interview to a reporter. Our idea is that if a business man has acquired sufficient importance to rate an interview he can very easily take care of any reporters without special training.

In their national conventions the Democrats and Republicans pledged themselves to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. This presents a real problem to the Democratic nominee who is an avowed Wet. How can he give the people liquor in one hand and enforce the Dry laws with the other!

The town of Bloomfield, Nebraska, has adopted a "Cash Only" basis for its various business enterprises. The retail merchants formed an association and are allowing no charge accounts. At first the citizens were very indignant, but when the policy produced much lower prices for merchandise the idea rapidly increased in favor.

New England hotel managers generally are opposed to bill board advertising, realizing how much it defaces our natural scenic attractions. It is discouraging for them to spend thousands in urging tourists to visit New England, and then have the billboards obstruct many of the best views. We believe public opinion is hostile to the billboard form of publicity.

Sixteen contracts aggregating $564,989.16 for bridge construction in Vermont have just been awarded in Montpelier, bringing the total for flood reconstruction work this year up to three and one-third million dollars. With such a construction program under way it's reasonable to expect that tourists will sidestep the Green Mountain route this year and be more anxious than ever to visit there next year and see all the new roads and bridges—after they are all built.

With special sport equipment, no smarter car than this Smart as a racing craft to begin with. Long and low... with rakish, youthful lines. But with special sport equipment... it's even smarter. The peer of any car in its class.

 Six wire wheels... their colors contrasting with body shades. Spares carried jauntily forward in special fender wells. A trunk rack behind... suggesting a series of week-end journeys. There's real style, if you ever saw it. There's swank... snap... personality.
 Add to all this the charm of bodies by Fisher. The deep-cushioned comfort and luxury that Fisher bodies provide. Then you'll find the All-American Six leagues ahead of any rival. And you'll marvel again at its truly remarkable price.

Bugle That Ended War

The principal museum of Wenden in Westphalia contains a treasure in the form of the bugle that sounded the end of the war. It was blown by German Staff Bugler Zebrowsky on the eve of November 7, 1918, to announce to the allies the passage into their lines of the German emissaries, who were coming to sign the armistice.—Chicago News.

DEATH FROM HEART DISEASE ON GAIN

Emotional Strain of Modern Life Blamed.

London.—The mental and emotional strain of modern life is mainly responsible for the 400 per cent increase in deaths from heart disease in Great Britain and other countries, in the opinion of Dr. J. Strickland Goodall, London cardiologist and physician.

"While the death rate from cancer has increased rather less than 25 per cent, that from heart disease has increased nearly 400 per cent," Doctor Goodall informed members of the Institute of Hygiene.

"The form in which we take our pleasure," he asserted, "is a direct inversion of nature's demands for adequate rest."

The habits of visiting night clubs, drinking cocktails and smoking excessively were listed by Doctor Goodall among the destructive pleasures. He further maintained that "the emotional character of modern plays, novels and films, with their appeals to the baser passions, inevitably tends to overstrain, with results which are reflected in the enormously increased number of deaths from heart disease."

These deaths are occurring at an earlier age than formerly, Doctor Goodall reported. Whereas a few years ago the common age of sudden death was between fifty and sixty years, an analysis of recent deaths had disclosed that "the age is becoming much less."

The physician recalled that 12 persons died suddenly in the United States while listening to the running account of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago, and that seven of these succumbed when Tunney was floored in the seventh round. He attributed all to emotional strain.

A critical investigation of thousands of cases of sudden death shows, said Doctor Goodall, that most of them are due to arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, a disease often caused by hard physical work, mental strain and emotion.

Makes 14th South Sea Trip to Study Snails

New York.—Snails offer "a sure proof of evolution," says Henry E. Crampton, professor of zoology in Barnard college, who has sailed from Vancouver, B. C., on his fourteenth expedition to the South Sea Islands to study land snails living on bushes in the high mountain valleys of the oriental and American tropics.

Professor Crampton goes as research associate of the Carnegie institute of Washington.

"I care nothing and know nothing about snails," the professor said. "My interest is in the history which they have written down, for those who can read it, of the processes by which evolution comes about in wild nature."

"How the snails differ from valley to valley, from island to island, and from group to group, is part of the story. Principles of their distribution are to be derived from their layout. When the distribution is analyzed, we obtain sure proof of evolution."

Where Gold and Silver Are Trodden in Dirt

Algiers, Morocco.—Gold and silver "dust" that has been accumulating for centuries is to be taken from Moroccan jewelers' "souks" and sold. The "souks" are the market places; Jewellers, like all other tradesmen, work there in the open or in squalid little shops, son succeeding father in the business, always on the same spot.

The "sweepings" so valuable in American and European jewelry work-rooms, never have been gathered and smelted here. The first effort to do this will be tried by a newly formed French company, whose experts believe there are fortunes in gold and silver filings trodden into the dirt floors of the native shops.

Mexico Palace Addition Cost Lives of 80 Workmen

Mexico City.—When the magnificent fourth floor addition to the National palace is completed, its cost will have to be reckoned not only in pesos, but in human life. To date eighty workmen have been killed in falls and other accidents resulting from building operations on the upper extension of the administrative edifice of Mexico's federal government.

Not New Species

Canton, China.—An American biologist sent a native to get specimens of the "tiger-crabs" of whose ravages villagers complained. The collector returned to report "tiger-crabs" were lawless soldiers.

Big Oil Company Uses Goats to Cut Its Grass

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The mowing-machine and lawn mower business took a blow at Ponca City, Okla., recently when a big oil company decided to use goats to keep the grass cut on its 160-acre tank farm. There are on the farm more than 100 tanks, holding about 140,000,000 gallons of crude oil and gasoline, and strict precautions against fire are necessary. As goats do not play with fire, they won the contract on the grounds of safety and economy.

U. S. BREAKS UP GANG OF ALIEN SMUGGLERS

Immigration Inspectors Nab Two Leaders.

Brownsville, Texas.—With the trial conviction and sentencing to jail of Isaac Amram and Juan Samano on charges of smuggling aliens into the United States, it is believed by United States immigration authorities here that the two leaders of a far-reaching band of border lawbreakers have been disposed of, temporarily at least. An investigation is now being made to determine whether or not the smuggling organization had ramifications in New York, Europe and the different ports of Mexico. Hundreds of aliens, most of them Greeks and Italians, were clandestinely brought across the Rio Grande by Amram and Samano.

Amram, who is only twenty-six years old, speaks English, Spanish, French, Greek, Italian, German and Turkish fluently and has a smattering of various other tongues and dialects. He has traveled extensively through Europe, Asia, Spanish America and the United States, acquiring his education in this country.

Charge is $100 a Head

According to his story, his grandfather, a Spaniard, settled in Turkey, and he was born in that country, coming to Mexico several years ago. Some of the languages he acquired as a youth along the Mediterranean; others he studied in universities.

Juan Samano was until recently a magistrate at Reynosa, Mexico. According to Amram's version of the gang's activities, Italians and Greeks were brought across the river, the smugglers charging $100 a head for this service.

Belief that the organized gang of alien smugglers operating from Reynosa had been broken up by the arrest of Samano and Amram was expressed by Brownsville immigration officers, who assert that through the activities of the organization many Greeks and Italians were brought to this side of the Rio Grande. The confession of Amram and the details brought out in stories told by the captured aliens coincided.

Leader Smuggled In

American immigration officials had ascertained from several Greeks and Italians, apprehended after they had crossed the river, that Samano was a member of the organization which had its headquarters at Reynosa and had been endeavoring for several weeks to effect his capture. He was finally apprehended at the American customs office at Hidalgo when he crossed to get a manifest on an automobile he had purchased.

Amram stated he was smuggled across the river at Reynosa two years ago, Samano leading him; that he went to New York, where he was employed as a musician, and later came back to the border and became a member of the Reynosa band.

Future Seaplanes to Be Less Cumbersome

Langley Field, Va.—Seaplanes of the future need not be so cumbersome as those of the past. This has been established by experts of the national advisory committee for aeronautics in a minute examination of the work actually done by a seaplane's pontoons, which enable it to alight on water, but cut down its speed in the air.

Present specifications for navy seaplanes call for pontoons having a structure sufficiently strong to withstand a shock on landing of 15 pounds to the square inch. Measurements made here with delicate instruments attached to various points on the floating surface of pontoons in operation, however, show that only seven pounds of pressure is exerted to the square inch, suggesting that their strength can easily be reduced with a material saving in weight and a corresponding improvement in performance and endurance in the air.

Wants Typist Job, But Has Only One Hand

Detroit, Mich.—Mrs. Flora Parker is looking for a job as typist or stenographer and she has only one arm.

When she was two and one-half years old in London she was the victim of an accident. After she grew up she taught school in London and then there was a young chap who had "gone out," as they say over there, to Canada. He sent for her. They were married. Two years later there was a baby and then, suddenly, Mrs. Parker was the Widow Parker. Little Flora is three.

"I intend to make my own living," she said. "It is going to be difficult to make any prospective employer believe that I can be efficient. I can be. I am fast on the typewriter and my missing arm has never been a missing one to me. You see, I lost it so young that I never knew its use, and what we never have we do not miss."

Kill Sacred Cow

Simla, India.—Six persons were killed and nine wounded near here when a party of pilgrims attempted to prevent the slaughter of a cow held sacred by them. The cow was killed, and a riot ensued.

Canned Music Stirs Ire of Paris Critics

Paris.—Something must be done to head off canned music, say the terribly shocked musical critics who contemplate the speedy abolition of the element in orchestras. It is the recent excitement over machine played violins, the perfection of phonographs, and the construction of mechanical orchestras for motion picture houses that has stirred the classic ire of the judges of the press.

Girls Wear "Galluses"

Visalia, Calif.—Not to be outdone by the men of the Tulare county courthouse, girl employees have taken to wearing suspenders. When young men clerks and deputies suddenly appeared in the courthouse wearing "galluses," Mrs. Edna Dewey Harkins, deputy county recorder, started something by donning a pair of red suspenders, and now there is an epidemic.

FAMOUS BELL BACK IN SAN FRANCISCO

Used in Early Days to Call Out Citizens.

San Francisco.—Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine department of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the necks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1856 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connors, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronze.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and struck terror to the hearts of the vicious when the Vigilantes found it necessary to take the law into their own hands.

In 1858, when the bell no longer was required, the residents of Petaluma bought it from the Vigilantes for $550 and hung it in their first Baptist church. There it was used both for religious services and as a time bell, sounding the hour at 6 a. m., noon, and 6 p. m.

When the Civil war started, Union sympathizers rang it to announce Northern victories and those friendly to the Southern cause became angry. To prevent discord among members of the community, the bell was taken down and hauled away one dark night to a warehouse. A few hours later Northern sympathizers returned it to the steeple, hoisting the Stars and Stripes above it.

The next night a Southerner made his way unobserved into the belfry, and with a hammer sought to silence the bell forever. He made a big crack in it, not unlike that in the famous Liberty bell, but this had no silencing effect. The bell remained in use until 1907, and its chimes could be heard through the countryside within a ten-mile radius.

Preacher by Day Is Cab Driver at Night

New York.—By day he is Rev. Thomas H. Whelpley, ministering to his flock at the Chelsea Presbyterian church, but by night he is plain Tom Whelpley, hack driver.

His motive is not hard to understand. He is alive with curiosity about how the many thousands who seldom appear at church on Sunday spend the long Saturday nights before and driving gives him a chance to know.

Recently, while out on a run, he remembered he had a wedding to perform. In a minute he had rushed into his room, changed into his clerical garb and walked solemnly into the transept.

After the ceremony, as the young couple were being congratulated in the doorway, Rev. Whelpley did his Jekyll-Hyde act and appeared at the wheel of his cab.

"Cab!" shouted the young groom. "Yes, sir," answered the preacher, who had just tied the knot. They were off through the rain to Woodside, L. L. and their new home.

Lonely After Release, Convict Kills Self

New York.—To James Brackett the stone walls of Sing Sing meant home. "I can't stand the loneliness of freedom," he said after he had been released on parole recently. Seventeen years ago Brackett was convicted of murder and sentenced to the death chair. One hour before the time of his execution a reprieve was granted.

After fifteen years he was released on parole, but the loneliness preyed on his mind.

"All my pals are up there," he said. "I want to go back."

Brackett was found dead in his bed, the gas jets open. He was buried by Capt. Stanley Shepard, the Salvation army parole officer, who saw to it that his remains did not lie in the Potter's field.

Girls Wear "Galluses"

Visalia, Calif.—Not to be outdone by the men of the Tulare county courthouse, girl employees have taken to wearing suspenders. When young men clerks and deputies suddenly appeared in the courthouse wearing "galluses," Mrs. Edna Dewey Harkins, deputy county recorder, started something by donning a pair of red suspenders, and now there is an epidemic.

Forget last year's jelly failures This year you have PEXEL

PEXEL jells all fruits. Requires less boiling. Obtains more jelly. Does not change the most delicate flavor or color of any fruit

EVEN if you've had a dozen failures—or if you never made jelly before—you can make jellies successfully with Pexel. Just add it to fruit juice and bring to full boil. Then add sugar. Bring to vigorous boil once more. Take kettle from range. Skim. Pour into glasses. That's all—it will be jelled as soon as it is cool.

When you use Pexel, its price—30c—is repaid from one to three times. Time and fuel are saved. You make more jelly because fruit juice, sugar and flavor are not wasted by prolonged boiling.

PEXEL is a 100% pure-fruit product. It is absolutely colorless, tasteless, odorless. It is a powder, not a liquid. Keeps indefinitely. Just as effective in any season with bottled juices or unsweetened canned fruits.

Get Pexel at your grocer's. Only 30c. Recipe booklet with easy-to-follow directions in every package. The Pexel Company, Chicago, Ill.

Here are a few examples of how much jelly Pexel makes: 4 1/2 cups strawberry juice, Pexel, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses of jelly. 4 1/2 cups raspberry juice, Pexel, 8 cups sugar make 11 glasses of jelly. 6 cups currant juice, Pexel, 10 cups sugar make 14 glasses of jelly. 4 1/2 cups grape juice, Pexel, 7 cups sugar make 10 glasses of jelly.

Vast Quantities of Water Under Earth

The quantity of water underground, beneath the crust of the earth's surface is nearly one-third the total volume of the oceanic waters, according to estimates of Dr. Chester A. Reeds, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, who has just completed investigations of buried rivers and caves. The earth's ground water extends to great depths, perhaps six miles, and has been accumulating for countless ages. This great mass of water percolates slowly through the porous and jointed rocks to form great systems of underground drainage, creating such beauty spots as Mammoth cave in Kentucky and the Endless caverns in Virginia. In the limestone regions, where so many of these unfamiliar streams are found, the formations of huge stalactites, stalagmites, columns, and stony curtains in the cavernous depths remind one of the artistic handwork of ancient artisans on the Renaissance palaces.
