BIG STORE OPENING

Improved Goodnow, Derby & Raleigh Store to Open

The grand opening of the remodeled store of Goodnow, Derby & Raleigh here will take place on Saturday. The local store is now a part of the Independent Grocers' Alliance of America which has about 12,000 concerns in it. It is an association of wholesalers, retailers and manufacturers in the grocery field organized for the purpose of buying and selling.

The local store has been entirely remodeled and refinished both inside and out to bring it in conformity with other stores in the chain. The front has taken on a new and improved appearance and has been painted in cream color with blue trimmings so as to make it conform with all the stores in the parent organization.

Patrons of the store who enter there Saturday will find many interior changes, the most distinctive of which will be the layout providing for self-service. On entering the store, the customer may take a basket, take from the shelves what he or she wishes and pay for the same when leaving. This is an idea in merchandising which has been carried out successfully in many places and promises to be a popular feature here.

The local store, together with all others in the organization, will continue to maintain its own identity and ownership. The idea of linking up with the national buying and selling organization is such as to enable the purchase of goods at rock-bottom prices and to sell them according to the most modern and approved merchandising methods. The Goodnow and Derby officials believe that the change will work to the advantage of the large trade which they enjoy here as well as to the store itself.

Anna's Convenience Shoppe Opening Today

A new store which the ladies are greatly interested in is to be opened this week Wednesday, the 30th day of October, by Miss Anna Noetzel, at her home on Elm street. She has had rooms in the Noetzel home conveniently and tastefully fitted up and decorated in a very pretty manner for the express purpose of carrying a nice line of Gowns, Hosiery, Costume Jewelry, Lamps, Paper Novelties, and Gifts, to please the ladies. All will find here an assortment of goods especially selected to suit their varied tastes; everything is new and in the latest styles; the wide experience of the proprietor gained in her years of catering to the wishes of the ladies has worked to her great advantage in selecting the right goods. So far as prices are concerned, Miss Noetzel will be governed entirely by the prevailing market, and her customers are assured that they will receive the best of values, latest styles, and lowest prices that such goods can be sold for.

This is an opportunity to buy goods at home, in a desirable assortment and variety, that the ladies of Antrim have not enjoyed, and doubtless the chance will be hailed with delight. In deciding to carry this line of goods and do so in a satisfactory manner, Miss Noetzel was convinced that these other lines of goods were necessary to complete her stock. This will be a delightful store for the ladies and doubtless will be appreciated by all in this section.

Annual Meeting of the Antrim Citizens' Association

The annual meeting of the Antrim Citizens' Association will be held in the James A. Tuttle Library hall on Friday evening, November 1, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting a report will be made of the work accomplished during the past two years, in which the Association has been in existence. The circular letter issued to citizens of the town follows:

You are a citizen of Antrim, and whether you are a member of the organization or not, it is the earnest desire of the Association that you be present at this meeting, and hear these reports. We feel that the Association in all its undertakings has at all times considered that which would best benefit the town at large; and the least any one can do who has an interest in the affairs of the town in which they make their home, is to plan on this one evening's attendance, and learn what the Association is for.

Will you consider that this appeal interests you personally and attend this one meeting?

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Presented to Reporter Readers in Concise Form

To most of us these big slumps in the stock market don't mean a single thing; even talking billions is a foreign language to us.

Hon. Fred Wadleigh, of Milford, who is a candidate for the Governor's Council at the coming Primary election, was in town on Thursday last, calling on a number of friends.

Who is there who does not remember November 11, 1918? Oh, boy, it was some day, on both sides of the big pond! It is now a holiday in New Hampshire, made so by the last session of the state legislature.

The care that hunters take when in the woods will have a whole lot to do with "keeping the ban off hunting." The scarcity of rain has been unusual and in dry weather extra care with matches and fire is a crying need by hunters in the woods.

There are different ways of committing suicide, and the popular one at present seems to be to "take off" in a plane of almost any old kind—and this is the last heard of it, unless the wreckage of the machine may be reported as seen on the water or somewhere else.

For a fast moving road construction crew, the one now doing business on the state road through North Branch to Stoddard, on what is known as the Keene road, goes ahead of anything we have ever had in town. The equipment they are employing is up-to-date and the help is showing great activity.

That the strong arm of the law is at the same time very long, is made evident by the fact that a verdict has just been rendered against Albert S. Fall, who was Secretary of the Interior during the late ex-President Harding, dating back to 1921. Accepting a bribe while in office is what the jury says.

It is always interesting to read what the leading educators of the day have to say concerning that which is taught in some schools today, and so was the report of the joint convention of teachers held at the Boston Garden last Friday. No doubt there is truth in the statements made by these outstanding men of letters.

It may be somewhat of a surprise but not wholly unexpected when it was announced that the Grand Jury of Merrimack County had found indictments against former Fish and Game Commissioner Mott L. Bartlett for embezzlement of state funds. He was arraigned before Chief Justice Sawyer, pleaded not guilty, and furnished bail in the sum of $3000. His trial is not expected to come till sometime in November, possibly later.

The Reporter has received a copy of the first issue of the Keene Chronicle, the State Normal School monthly which will be printed regularly during the school year. Harry B. Preston, of Henniker, is conducting this new enterprise, he holding the position of faculty advisor; he is teaching ancient history in the school and assisting in general English work. This publication is an eight-page paper somewhat after the tabloid form, and will likely prove of great interest to all present and former attendants of the school.

This is a bit drastic, but if every driver of an automobile who is at all mixed up in a case of being under the influence of liquor was given a jail sentence, much of this kind of trouble would be ended. Leniency in suspended sentences does not work out satisfactorily. Hard boiled justices, performing their duties according to the oaths they have taken, will very materially assist in clearing up a situation that has become very bothersome and unpleasant to say the least.

The annual roll call of the American Red Cross will start on Armistice day—November 11 — and continue until Thanksgiving day. Our readers will be asked to renew their membership in the local Chapter, and help carry on the splendid work of this most worthy missionary organization. Their motto—"Always Ready"—is one ever before the eyes of the management, and the great good performed by this society is known the world over. Your annual donation to this cause should be cheerfully given!

Proctor, in the Sportsmen's Column Says:

The town of Greenfield should feel proud of the new road from their town to the Bennington line. It's as good a road as we drive over anywhere.

A man up in Antrim got a real thrill the other day when an aviator from Keene landed in his front yard and sonality of the British Premier, Ramsay MacDonald when high New York city officials are introducing him as "premier of the United States," the solid good sense of Senator Moses' address upon the celebration in this city, brings the feet of many of us back to the ground. He called to public attention the fate of a once great nation, done to death by the peaceful propaganda of its neighbors. It is an historic example; an outstanding example of all history. To bring it to attention just at this time isn't trucking to the popular sentiment of the moment, not by a long shot. Between common sense and a grand-stand play, New Hampshire's senator is on the common sense side.—Nashua Telegraph.

walked up and said "howdy."

In trapping on a small brook or river, remember that you must get a permit from the owner. The only rivers in the state that you can trap that way on are the Connecticut and the Merrimack rivers. All other rivers require a permit from owners of the land adjoining the water.

Every boy caught out alone in the woods off his own land will lose his gun. That may be hard boiled, but we don't want any fatal accidents in our district if we can help it. We have warned a dozen or so boys the past week. We want to encourage the boys to hunt, but let's do it right.

Down in Massachusetts, they have issued an order from the office of the motor vehicle department that no more dogs shall ride on the running boards of any car or truck. That's as it should be. We had quite an argument with a man several weeks ago on that very point. I made the man put the dog on the back seat. We maintained that it was not a humane act to let a dog ride on the running board.

Many Isolated Spots in the U. S.

Uninhabited Areas of Country About Which Little Is Known.

Washington.—The disappearance of an airplane in New Mexico, and the four-day search before its wrecked remains were found, emphasize the fact that in the heart of the United States are uninhabited areas, some even unsearched for long periods by the eye of man. A bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society deals with some of these blank spots on the map of the United States.

"Uncle Sam and his states have taken fairly complete stock in the East," says the bulletin. "Surveying instruments came over with the early colonists and were put to immediate use. Since those early days lines of some sort have been run over almost every square mile of territory east of the Mississippi river.

"But although the eastern states have been rather thoroughly surveyed and are on the whole heavily populated, they are not free from isolated areas. In the forests of north central Maine extensive regions, for many months of the year, still know only the hunter and the trapper. In certain sections of the high Appalachians live families of isolated mountaineers whose domains are seldom visited by outsiders.

"The only actual blank spots in the eastern United States, however, are in the swamp regions of southern Florida. There are relatively large tracts that have not been surveyed or mapped.

Large Blank Spots.
"It is only after the Mississippi river has been crossed, going westward, that the extensive blank spots appear. Portions of northeastern Minnesota are virtual wildernesses; but the areas are not great, and, as in the remote sections of Maine, hunters and trappers traverse the country. The bad lands of southwestern South Dakota form a sizable area, largely barren, in which only a handful of people live; and similar areas are found in northern Nebraska, and eastern Wyoming and Montana.

"All along the Rocky mountains from Canada into New Mexico are uninhabited and practically inaccessible mountain fastnesses. In Texas there are still unfamiliar areas in the 'Big Bend' region, close to the Mexican border, where the Rio Grande river makes a loop far to the south.

"In all this country, however, as is noticeable by reference to a large scale map, no very large areas are free from what the mapmaker calls 'culture marks'; trails, roads, highways, railways, power lines, dams, canals, fumes, factories, villages, towns, and cities—the evidences that man has invaded and taken for his own much of the territory.

"The really remote regions, untouched by man, can be tested by this matter of map making. In the eastern states maps show railways and highways so close together that they form a fine-meshed network over the entire country. In the first tier of states west of the Mississippi river this network is still closely spaced; but farther to the west the lines become fewer and the unlined spaces greater. In the mountain and inter-mountain states are the largest areas uncrossed by 'culture lines.'

"Again the story is told by the maps showing the township surveys of the United States general land office. These square subdivisions have been laid out in general over the surface of all the states west of the Mississippi except Texas. Texas has been excepted because none of that state's area was owned by the United States before it entered the Union, and all public lands were specifically retained by the state.

Big Blank Areas.

"Only a few relatively small desert and mountain spaces in New Mexico have not been divided into townships by land office surveys. But farther west large spaces appear on the map free from these squares. One of the largest of the blank spots shows in southwestern Arizona north of the diagonal line that marks the Mexico-Arizona boundary from the 111th meridian westward to the Colorado river. The international boundary commission has surveyed the actual boundary and an adjoining strip two miles wide; but to the north lies a region nearly 200 miles from east to west and from 20 to 50 miles wide that has not been mapped.

"This is one of the most conspicuous of the blank spots on the map of the United States. Other relatively unknown regions of considerable size (aside from Alaska, where there are extensive unexplored tracts) lie in northwestern Arizona, north of the Grand Canyon; in southern Nevada and eastern California, along the boundary between the two states; in Utah and southwest of Great Salt Lake, and in southeastern Utah. The latter region was explored in 1924 by an expedition of the National Geographic society which found an area of hundreds of square miles consisting of deeply eroded clay, shale and sandstone, with the sparsest of vegetation. Throughout an extensive area the explorers found not a single human inhabitant and very few animals and birds.

"The United States has literally thousands of isolated spots of small extent in which an airplane might crash and its wreckage remain un- found for weeks. But the isolation of most of these places is relative. Many are only a short distance from the beaten path. It is significant that Mount Taylor, on which the recent crash occurred, is only ten miles from a transcontinental railway and an improved highway, and is plainly visible from both. It is in a region that has been well mapped and is part of a forest reserve that is frequently patrolled. If a plane should crash in one of the real blank spots of the United States, its fate might remain unknown for months."

Boy, 13, Builds Plane; Won't Fly It Himself

Memphis, Texas.—Construction of an airplane by a thirteen-year-old boy is said by Memphis residents to mark the city as the home of one of the youngest plane builders in the country.

Bobby Ragsdale, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ragsdale, will have his plane completed in a few weeks. He is building it in the rear of a local garage where he has worked every day except Sunday since school closed last May.

L. E. Clark, garage employee, has aided young Ragsdale in doing the welding and metal work and James G. Hammond helped to cover the wings.

The engine develops 28 horse power. It was bought in Fort Worth by Bobby.

Bobby expects to get an experienced pilot to try out the plane. "I am too young," he says. The test flight will be made either in Amarillo or Wichita Falls. "I want to learn to fly before I try this machine," the youthful builder added.

Famous Oregon Gold Mine Is Rediscovered

Port Oxford, Ore.—Considerable excitement has been caused here by the belief that the Lost China mine on the Sixes river has been found.

The story of Lost China runs back 75 years to the days when Capt. Williamson Tichenor, early-day sea captain, founded this little southern Oregon town.

Captain Tichenor did considerable prospecting in the early days. He is said to have taken out some $80,000 worth of gold from the mine.

Chinese laborers and Indians figured in the subsequent prospecting, and obliterated the fissure, while white men searched other gold fields. Then a fire swept over the country, changing the aspect of the terrain, and the Lost China became somewhat of a legend.

A new discovery of the mine, has been reported by S. A. Laurence, local attorney to F. B. Tichenor, deputy United States marshal during the World war, and grandson of the old captain.

Another "Meanest Thief"

Nashville, Tenn.—Another "meanest thief" has been discovered here. Carl Jones, twenty-nine, Memphis, was brought before City court on charges of drunken and disorderly conduct and carrying a pistol. His arrest was brought about after he had taken an ice cream cone from the hands of Duke Vincent, fifteen, son of Patrolman H. S. Vincent.

Community Building

Homes Made Possible by Loan Associations

Statistics made public by the building loan and savings associations of the United States show that in the last eight years the 13,000 thrift associations scattered through the country have financed 3,798,000 homes, valued at $13,144,600,000. The number has steadily increased and it was estimated that 700,000 homes were financed last year, to the value of $2,300,000,000.

More than one-seventh of the entire population of the country is now housed in buildings financed by these associations, the number provided for being 18,935,000. Of the 3,798,000 homes, 2,600,000 are being paid for on weekly or monthly payments. There are at present more than 12,000,000 members of these associations and the current assets are $3,135,000,000.

Approximately $6,000,000,000 of the expenditures of the associations was paid out to workmen and artisans who helped to construct the homes. More than 92 per cent of the money invested went to finance home owning. This latter result was not accidental, but due to the reason that the primary purpose of these associations is to help people in owning their own homes.

Appearances Add Much to Real Estate Values

Agreements on the part of real estate developers to maintain sold and unsold property in a presentable condition by setting out trees, shrubbery and flowers, of grading parkways and keeping weeds out on individual lots form one of the strongest factors which make for increased realty values, according to a prominent Chicago real estate broker.

"Property values rise through an influx of purchasers," he says, "and purchasers are attracted to an unbelievable degree by the physical appearance of the property itself. People of means insist on well-kept surroundings, and it is a fact that every development around Chicago which has been operated under maintenance agreements as regards the upkeep of appearances has not only been populated quickly, but has undergone noticeable increases in realty values.

"The appearance of property is actually part of its value, for its desirability depends to a great degree on looks and the prospective owner should insure that the looks of his neighborhood will not be allowed to deteriorate."

Beautiful Small Garden

Within the smaller garden there is no room for the larger architectural features such as the pergola or garden shelter, but there is always a place for a bit of furniture or ornament.

Such an object may occupy the center of the garden. For example, a sun dial of statue standing alone may be the principal factor of the design. Or possibly a bird bath may form the focal point of a vista, or may be considered a sufficient motive for the direction of a walk.

Other objects may mark an entrance gate to the garden by symmetrically flanking either side. A series of smaller objects might determine the outer corners of a formal flower bed, thus aiding materially in emphasizing the design.

Save the Wild Flowers

Miles and miles of highways are being constructed, square corners are turned into sweeping curves, more direct routes cut across woods and fields, says Nature Magazine. Every year hitherto untouched woodlands are being cleared or opened for grazing. Watch for opportunities like these to rescue flowers and shrubs otherwise doomed to die; study their needs and give them a home as much as possible like the one that was taken to supply the needs of man.

Hospitable Home Entrance

The entrance should be hospitable and so placed as to help the harmony of the building—not necessarily in the exact center of the front wall, but in harmony with the other features of the house. One too frequently seen fault of modern houses is that the doorways are small. The fine, big doorways of some of the old-fashioned houses frequently reach well up to the sill of the second-story windows and seem to extend a hospitable air of welcome to the incoming guest.

Paint Frequently

Repainting is as important as painting at all. This is as true of painted metal as it is of painted wood. When paint wears out, as it does eventually, it must be renewed. The frequency of renewal should not depend upon the whim of the home owner. As soon as paint shows signs of breaking down it should be reinforced with fresh paint.

Architectural Value

A house of true architecture costs no more, excepting perhaps a little at first, than the ugly, poorly built house. It costs no more at any time than is necessary to insure you the absolute minimum of sound construction, and yet it yields dividends year after year in satisfaction, pride and joy in possession.

Oddities of Bali

Temple Grounds in the Capital of Bali.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE island of Bali, only a name to thousands of people who pass on round-the-world trips, is a social and sociological curiosity. Its natives are what biologists might call "sports" in East Indian ethnology.

It lies a night's cruise east of Java. It is about 90 miles long, with a 10,500 foot peak and more than a million peaceful, polygamous people. Its women are the fairest in all Malaysia—and a dressmaker would starve.

One strange aspect after another breaks on the observer. Books are bound from tree leaves. Religion is the chief occupation. Trial marriage usually takes. It is a land of the slimmest women and the fattest pigs. Birds talk and butterflies fly like birds. Praying to pagan gods and fooling pagan devils are the main pastimes. Tourist attractions are many, but tourists few.

The quest for photographic adventure along the island paths, past green fields, temples, and walled villages, is an endless delight—unless a carabao suddenly founders up from the mud to chase the white man. Bali children ride these clumsy creatures, and even when one runs amuck it is said a small boy swishing a switch through the air may cause the mad beast to turn aside in his charge. But here, as in the Philippines, there seems to be something in the looks or smell of a white man which the carabao doesn't like.

Such butterflies as one sees in Bali! Orange and white, black and yellow, or black and green, and huge purple ones, all flying like birds, not fluttering, as ours do. And there are wild chickens in the woods, the cocks brilliantly colored, and a talking bird they call the beo, a black, sluggish fowl with dangling yellow wattles—an ugly thing, like a waddled old woman.

The Bali village is a group of kampongs or compounds. Each surrounds several little houses and a few smaller structures used as granaries and built high to save the grain from pigs and rats. One house may shelter several families. Usually the Bali but itself is a small, nipa-like, thatched affair, with a frame of poles. A few feet above the ground is a platform, where one sees the family lying around at ease during much of the day. But whenever one of these family groups is approached with a camera, the members of the household will roll off the platforms and slide over to the next house.

The "Underslung" Pig.

The Bali pig is a physical curiosity—like a dachshund with a pig's make-up. Even in infancy his tummy almost drags on the ground. In youth he has no youthful figure. He is "underslung," so to speak, and could never travel a road with "high centers." The older he gets, the bigger his waistline. And his back sags like that of an old family nag ridden when too young.

Bali, too, is the land of big noise. There's no bawling, but if it isn't the native orchestra, it is the roosters that keep up the racket. They crow by the thousands, long before day. Before they quit, the pigs begin to squeal—not from hunger, for they're all fat. Foraging or lying in midday shade, morning or lying in midday shade, they test their squealers. They seem to want to tell the world that here no Moslem prejudice against pork can cramp any pig's style or restrain him from self-expression.

One sees these Bali pigs, each in his own wicker cage like a prize bird, being loaded on ships for export to Singapore. The deck is piled five tiers high with the fat, waddling creatures, whose squealing chorus almost drowns out the ship's siren.

Here pork is the only meat eaten. Cattle are raised, but for export. Big, brown, beautiful creatures they are, with a singular white patch on their hind quarters. Seen from behind, they look as if they were wearing white pants. At times the bulls figure in a religious ceremony and are decorated with big bells.

Artists who have known many famous models in American and European art centers, assert that few specimens of the human race are so easy to look at as the beautiful women of Bali. Erect, slender limbed, small of wrist and ankle, with tapering fingers, and long, wavy tresses falling over a smooth skin nearly white or light bronze; with perfect, even teeth and a singular grace and dignity of carriage, they have few physical equals among womankind.

Drama, Dance and Religion.

In Bali the play's the thing, and all over the island the drama and the dance go on throughout the year. But a playwright would starve; and no "new steps" are ever introduced by Bali dancing girls. Here there's never a "first night" nor a new show. Today Bali enjoys the same songs, dances, and drama it knew centuries ago, all based on island folklore, mythology, and historical legends. Yet nobody seems bored. Even the children know the lines and songs by heart; they follow the players' every word and gesture with close attention.

Such demons as ruin the rice crops or bring disease to carabao, and the demigods who have influenced the lives of the Balinese through the centuries, figure in the songs and drama.

Shows are usually given in the daytime, against a temple or a natural backdrop of jungle green.

Hindu temples, big and little, cover this thickly inhabited island. Moslem immigrants have come over from Java, of course, and one sees Chinese proprietors of shops where even American-made hand sewing machines are on sale, but neither Cross nor Crescent seem to have gained much foothold on Bali. One singular story is told of an early Christian missionary who, after long efforts finally made one Bali convert. But this native apostate, thus cut off from his kind, finally turned on the missionary who had made him a social outcast and killed him.

Religion is everything in Bali. It seems to inspire all work and play. No one seems lonely; there are no beggars, no drunkards, no prostitutes. Every act is service to the temple gods; every spot is holy, and every peaceful hour seems sanctified to daily life. Here the external and spiritual world are closely akin.

In the prettiest spot on every little farm stands the family altar, usually shaded by trees or plants. Here the farmer builds the wood or stone altars to the gods of his choice. Should a man's prayers go unanswered, he is quite justified in demolishing his existing altars and building new one to a new divinity.

Irrigation is Skillful.

No region on earth is more highly cultivated than the tillable parts of Bali. Here irrigation is applied to its utmost refinement. In building reservoirs, or waduks, in laying out, and digging canals and laterals, the Balinese are among the world's most skillful engineers. So highly was their system developed that when Dutch engineers came they had nothing to add.

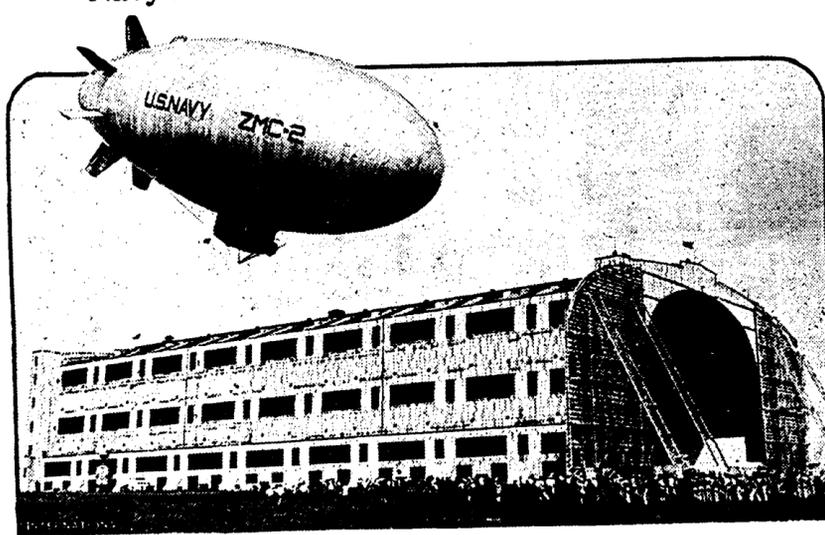

On Bali, as in the United States, irrigation districts are set up. Each controls its own water supply, and water rights are equitably distributed. It also regulates land transfers and holdings. The planting of crops, the tending of cattle, and collection of rates are all supervised by these cooperative associations.

Rice is the chief food, but wheat, copra, groundnuts, tobacco, fruit, and onions are also grown. Cattle, hides, horns and swine are exported. For its soap, crude hardware, tools, and a limited amount of cloth and clothing, Bali depends on imports handled by Chinese and Dutch traders; but, to a singular degree, the island is a self-contained garden of Eden, where life is easy and food plentiful.

Swift and sweeping as change is in our modern, inventive world, Bali responds but slowly. Here the well dressed young man and everybody else need wear only the sarong—a multi-colored strip of batik, about a yard wide, wound around the waist and hanging to the knees. Till cheap factory-made sarongs came from Europe, these simple garments were works of art, for at weaving, as at carving and in the fabrication of objects of gold and silver, the Balinese are skillful. Only on entering the temples must women cover the upper part of their bodies. For this they use a light scarf.

When one stops to think that Bali, with its singular charms, is only a night's run from the tourist path through Soerabaya, one wonders that irretrievable civilization has not already upset its primitive life.

TEN CHINESE NAMED "AH" GIVE COPS MERRY "HA-HA"

Charged with Disorderly Conduct When All They Were Doing Was "Singing."

New York.—Ten Chinese—Ah Foo, Ah Me, Ah Ha, Ah Sha, Ah Hoo, Ah Gee, Ah Well, Ah No, Ah Choo and Ah Be himself—were arraigned recently in West Side court before Magistrate George Ewald.

They had been arrested charged with disorderly conduct and chow mein by detectives from the staff of Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan, led by Detective Archibald McNeil.

McNeil told the court that complaints had poured in from all the people living anywhere near 183 Claremont avenue that so much noise was going on there that they couldn't sleep. He and his colleagues had rushed up there, he said, and heard the racket themselves. They traced it to a rear room on the ground floor listened at the door till they thought their ear drums would burst and then broke in.

Inside, said McNeil, were the ten Chinese. They were seated at a table, he asserted, upon which were a pair of large white bone dice and several pieces of English money—half-crowns, shillings, sixpences, ha'pennies, and he believed a thruppence or two. The ten men, he said, were shooting craps, and, unless he was the victim of an auditory delusion, it was they who had been making hideous noises.

"What do you mean by hideous?" asked Magistrate Ewald.

"Well, your honor," replied McNeil, "when a Chinaman wins at craps he wails out a long, loud, exultant 'Wahoo!' And when he loses he throws back his head and lets loose a long, loud, despondent 'Wa-hee!' And as some were winning and some were losing, the combined yells were, we repeat, hideous."

Ah Foo, who said that he is a laundryman, was spokesman for himself and his nine companions. The magistrate asked for his version.

"We were no playing craps, we were playing mah jong," said Ah Foo. "That is, only three of us were playing—Ah Me, Ah Ha and Ah Sha. And we were not very noisy."

"What were the rest of you doing?"

"Three of us were asleep—Ah Hoo, Ah Gee and Ah Well."

"And the rest?"

"Three of us were telling bedtime stories—Ah No, Ah Choo and Ah Be himself."

"And the tenth?"

"He was singing, to amuse us all."

"Dismissed," said Magistrate Ewald.

"Aw, what's the use?" said Detective McNeil. "Now all these Ahs will be giving us the Ha-Ha."

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

"I wonder where the devil I am!" Leslie murmured.

Then his thoughts turned upon the big fighter whom he had knocked out. That knock-out, Leslie admitted, was more or less accidental. If the unknown stranger had not turned his head obligingly as an owl booted, he would probably have won; but who was he, that he should stand guard outside the Flahy home at night?

Leslie presently dropped into a troubled sleep. When he awoke there was the smell of strong tobacco in his cell. He looked into the twinkling eyes of Luigi Bartoli, strong man, colner, and, alas for his impetuous temper, a double murderer.

"Where am I?" Leslie demanded.

Luigi was easily moved to mirth. This seemed an excellent jest.

"If I tell you," he answered, "these happen to me!" He made the expressive gesture of cutting his throat.

"You come with me. If you make a much noise, I break a your neck, so!" Again the graphic action of a man bending back the neck of a victim until the cervical vertebrae snapped.

"Now!"

Leslie knew that this stocky jailer had the power to inflict such a punishment. His forearms were enormous, and his chest measurement could not be less than fifty inches.

Along a narrow stone corridor lighted by an overhead electric lamp went Leslie and his jailer. Luigi paused outside a metal-sheathed door and knocked. Apparently he was hidden to enter, for he gripped Leslie by the wrist and pulled him in.

Mr. Appleton and two companions faced him. It was a room fifteen feet square, well furnished, and artificially lighted.

"Ah!" said Mr. Appleton benevolently. "Here we have Mr. Barron Jr." He turned to a good-looking well-dressed woman, who was smok-

"He is Quite a Nice-Looking Boy, Isn't He?" the Woman Said.

ing a Russian cigarette. "I have the highest respect for this young gentleman's family."

"I don't like your way of showing it," Leslie snapped.

He had seen by this time that the third person was the wild man who lay at ease in a big chair, puffing at a cigar.

"He is quite a nice-looking boy isn't he?" the woman said, in a low pitched, charming voice.

"The Barrons are all good-looking," said Mr. Appleton. "I have commented before on the Grecian cast of Mr. Leslie's head."

"Have the kindness to leave my head alone," Leslie growled.

"Certainly, certainly!" Mr. Appleton assented. "My attentions to it last night were dictated by motives of caution, not of hatred. Others were dependent upon me, and I must consider them."

"James Delaney here, formerly a power in the ward politics of our common city, seemed at the moment to be a corpse. You are younger, stronger, and swifter of foot than I. I did not think you were in a frame of mind which would permit me to wish you good evening and disappear. Had you reported my presence to Mr. Flahy, a search would have been instituted which might have had unpleasant consequences."

"A search will be made," Leslie snapped, "and, believe me, it will have unpleasant consequences for you all!"

Appleton was urbane, untruffed. "What makes you suppose that?"

"Because I shall be missed."

"But will you? That's the point."

"Why shouldn't I be missed?" Lee-lie said heatedly. "The Gray house isn't a hotel where one checks out and is promptly forgotten."

"Fortunately for us," said Mr. Appleton, "you did check out."

"That silly lying doesn't impress me."

Leslie was annoyed that the wild faun and the woman found in his assurance something almost humorous.

"But you have checked out—oh, dear me, yes!" Mr. Appleton took from his pocket the letter that Leslie wrote to Cella. "Miss Hanby will find this tomorrow. The references hidden from us will be clear to her. You have had a quarrel, it seems, and, with the folly I expect from youth, you have decided to go away. Very well, Mr. Barron, you have carried out your threat. Do you think Miss Cella will sink her pride to send out an alarm for you? No! This stupid, unappreciative lad, she will say, 'will come back later to be forgiven. He shall find that there are others to console me. Her parents, being still amazingly wrapped up in themselves, will not worry. Until I read this, I was a little perturbed at the situation; but you have clarified it.'"

Leslie opened his mouth to speak but thought better of it. He was about to remind Appleton that the household would be alarmed because he had gone away in evening clothes, leaving his other belongings in disarray, and had neglected to take his automobile.

"We have attended to all that," Appleton said kindly, guessing his thoughts. "Oh, dear me, yes! A lifetime of a business in which detail plays so important a part is a great aid. I shall presently pack your grip. I have keys to every room in the house. I shall bring them to you here. Your car will be removed by James. It will be in Philadelphia by noon. Tomorrow night you would not recognize it. James has an interest in the business. You will be our guest here for a time."

"Where are we?" Leslie demanded.

"His spirits had fallen. The Barrons were accustomed to his absences and long silences. The unfortunate letter would exasperate Cella. For some weeks, at all events, he would be an untroubled prisoner."

"In Westchester county," replied Mr. Appleton. "We are the guests of one who is dear to me." He bowed with distinguished courtesy to the lady. "You will have no opportunity to escape."

"Am I held for ransom?"

"You are held because it would be inconvenient to let you go."

"You said it!" James commented. "So mighty inconvenient that it wouldn't make me sleep no worse if I had orders from the chief to crouch you!"

Luigi here made his expressive gesture of slitting a windpipe.

A sudden panic swept over Leslie. He was not used to consorting with criminals. The sense of real danger came to him. He had no chance to escape, and at least two of three men were openly hostile. It must be that he was impeding the success of some secret affair. The two might sway Appleton to their views. He glanced at them wildly.

"You can't get away with murder!" he cried.

"We should not try," Appleton told him considerably. "It would be an accident. Your body would be picked up in the sound. We might even arrange that it should be clad in a swimming costume. I rather think the Thimble Islands would be suitable—somewhere near Stony creek."

"Why frightened the nice-looking boy?" suggested the woman, in her caressing voice. "It is only if we think he is trying to escape that we should have to do that. Really and truly, Mr. Barron, we are not murderers or kidnapers.

"You will be held until a certain deal that we are putting through is successfully accomplished. Your treatment depends on yourself. Luigi will be your jailer. Look at him, Mr. Barron, and judge for yourself whether it would be wise to try to escape. He has carried a grand piano on that broad back of his. Luigi has a system which has proved very effective with another uninvited guest here."

"He eat a out of my hand now," Luigi said proudly. "These one, too!"

Assuredly Leslie could expect no mercy from Luigi, the strong man. So there was another prisoner! Leslie felt lonely and fearful. Why had he allowed himself to take offense at Cella? Cella! It was hard work to keep tears from his eyes as he thought of her. Perhaps she would never know how much he loved her. If cruel death took him here among these hardened men, she would think of him as one who allowed the irritation of a moment to overcome the affection he had protested.

Even in that moment Leslie wondered by what magic of authority the little plump man controlled such ruffians as these. There was no question of his dominance; and this was the same quiet, modest, affable person whom Leslie had grown used to seeing at the Hanby table, the man who rarely ventured an opinion, and listened deferentially to those of others! Of the three, Appleton seemed the most sinister and alarming.

CHAPTER IX

The day on which, as the Hanby family supposed, young Barron had taken his early morning departure, saw the arrival of half a dozen visitors. His absence was in a measure overshadowed. Mrs. Hanby spoke of Leslie, and hoped that there had been no quarrel. Cella assured her mother that he was no more than a friend, and that she was well satisfied to be rid of him for a little while.

Dina Hanby put her arm about the girl's shoulder.

"Do you expect me to believe you?" she asked. "I wonder what was in that letter he wrote to you!"

"Here it is," Cella said. "If you can interpret what he means by threatening to 'jump off the road for good,' I should like to know."

"I don't understand references to a wild faun," said Mrs. Hanby.

"That was nothing," Cella replied. "Here's dad with his house detective. Not a word to them! I'm going to play tennis with my new cousin. He looks most attractive. I've often wanted to contrast Ann Arbor and New Haven."

Dina looked at the two as they sauntered to the courts. Leslie had been very unwise to go just now, she thought.

"You two look as if you were conspiring," she said to her husband.

"I'm reminding Bill of what he said a few weeks back. He remarked that it was beneath the dignity of a lord of the manor to do his own sleuthing. Bill was boosting himself for the job."

"Have I fallen down?" Bill demanded.

Hanby's bantering tone ceased. Dina could see that something worried him.

"Bill," he said, "you have; but I shame myself, too. I assumed, rather illogically, that when Miss Selenos proved merely an emerald in disguise, we had been making mountains from molehills. Seymour's letter puzzled me; but when nothing happened, I put that aside. There was one other threat."

"The woman who said that Ted Kerr was killed because he was like you in build? Oh, Hil, you don't think that was anything serious?"

"It prevents us from being dull," replied her husband, laughing. "I find I rather thrive on suspense, and certainly this house has given us enough surprises one way and another. I'm now due to show it to Tom Burton. He's a man who always has a hobby—some sort of bug or other. I've got to listen. Lords of the manor have their duties."

"Do you think he's nervous?" Bill Pellham asked, as he disappeared.

"Not a bit," replied Mrs. Hanby. "He's getting annoyed, and that means that he wants to fight. His mental reactions are quite simple. Look to your laurels, Bill, or he will get ahead of you in this affair. I wonder if there is anything in it!"

Some Original Ideas of American Builders

While siding and shingle exterior coverings for homes did not strictly originate in this country, being largely modifications of existing methods brought over by the early settlers, the availability of the materials and suitability to native architecture give houses sheathed in siding or shingles a distinctly American flavor.

Houses covered with rough hewn siding boards, or clapboards, and crudely split shakes, or shingles, directly succeeded the first log cabins of the early colonists in this country. These materials have been refined by improved methods of manufacture into types which are individually appropriate to the variations of modern colonial architecture and to the architectural adaptations of other countries in American adaptations.

Cedar and pine and other durable native woods are used in modern manufacture of shingles and siding, which are frequently stained to enhance their appearance and resistance to weather. Wood siding and shingles have integral insulating value in themselves. Increasing comfort and fuel economy in the winter and keeping the house cool in summer.

First to Cross Australia

The first journey across Australia was made in 1844-45, by Frederick Wilhelm Ludwig Leichhardt, who went from Germany to Australia in 1841. Setting out from Darling Downs, in the south of Queensland, he made his way to Port Essington (Northern Territory), the most northerly tip of Australia.

Shorter Season Favored by Brooklyn Nationals

So far as the individual members of the Brooklyn National league baseball club are concerned, the National league can shorten its season next year without causing any hard feelings. Recently the athletes, most of them eager to get home, laid around almost a week. Their last game was with the Braves at Ebbets field on Sunday. Rain on two successive days finally washed out their final contest with the Giants and kept them idle from one week end to the other.

None of the players got a break. Because Wilbert Robinson got extremely anxious to finish fifth, he carried almost his complete team to Boston for the one day.

After the official season ended most of the Robins scattered to the four corners of the country. A few exceptions were Duzzy Vance and Dave Bancroft, who attended the world series games in Chicago, and Babe Herman, Austin Moore and Billy Rhie, who played in a few exhibition games around New York.

President Manager Robinson, who hopes to grab a couple of promising players in the draft, also attended the Chicago games of the world series.

Bob Shawkey Appointed as Manager of Yankees

The plans of Miller Huggins for the Yankees were so far-seeing that the midget manager actually provided, as long as five years ago, a course of action to be followed in the event of his own death. Jacob Ruppert, commander-in-chief of the Ruppert Rifles, had such great faith in even the slightest suggestion of his diminutive field marshal, that he faithfully followed Huggins' lead in announcing that Robert I. Shawkey would be the next manager of the Yankees.

Tackle Most Important Position on Grid Team

There's the material for a thousand arguments in which is the most important position on a football team. The subject has been discussed for years in baseball without being decided and there is no chance that any quicker decision will be reached in football. But, it is quite probable, that if one went to the coaches of 100 of the biggest universities of the country and asked as to this "most valuable" position, a majority would answer the question by saying, "Well, you see that I have two big husky and fast tackles and I'll take care of the rest of the team." Naturally, a good field general comes high in importance but a coach can do a lot of the "general" thinking for him. Nebraska has the best record of any college against Notre Dame; Nebraska always has a pair of good tackles. Which may or may not prove anything.

Sport Notes

Both the Yankees and Glants are about to stage a big shakeup in playing talent.

Dan Howley, former manager of the St. Louis Browns, has been named manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Max Bishop, A's second baseman, has spent twelve years with two clubs, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Non-resident hunters in Alaska are required to have guides who are licensed by the Territorial Game commission.

Rube Benton, soon forty-four, was one of the leading pitchers of the American association. He pitched for Minneapolis.

Handball is rapidly becoming one of Germany's most popular sports. In Berlin alone more than 13,000 men and women play the game.

The major league record for hits made in a season is 257 safeties, made by George Sisler when he played with the St. Louis Browns in 1922.

Fred Lindstrom of the New York Glants scored 20 runs in 13 consecutive games for the longest run-scoring streak in the 1929 National league season.

It costs about seven dollars a day to maintain the average race horse, or about $2,500 a year, which is more than the average American family has to live on.

Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Al Watrous, Chick Evans, Francis Outmet and Johnny Farrell, all prominent American golfers, graduated from the cuddles' ranks.

John M. ("Red") Corriden has signed to manage the Indianapolis American association baseball team next season. He succeeded Albert F. ("Bruno") Betzel.

Los Angeles made $10,000 on the sale of pitcher Augie Walsh to the Cubs. He was bought from the Phils a year ago for $10,000 and turned over to the Cubs for $20,000.

Cricket, rugby and soccer among the English; baseball, basket ball and football in the United States, are the recognized Anglo-Saxon contributions to the games of the world.

Herb Pruett, veteran southpaw, who had a good year with Newark, is demanding a salary for 1930 that is twice the amount he received this year. His present pay is $5,000.

Emmet Swanson, Minneapolis dentist, who holds the United States small bore rifle championship, has an unofficial world's record of 20 consecutive bullseyes at 300 meters.

George Snider, one of two pitchers bought by the A's from Portland, has been in league baseball less than one full season. He was signed late in the spring by Portland. He is only eighteen.

Among the Americans who are owners of racing stables in France are Joseph E. Widener, Ralph B. Strassburger, J. R. Macomber, J. L. Replogle, Julian Goldman and Countess of Granard.

The Cubs and the Glants are tied in the number of National league pennants each has won with twelve. Chicago won six titles before 1900, while the New Yorkers won all but two after that year.

Only once in history has the Belmont Park Futurity been captured three times in succession by the same turfman. Collin, Maskette and Sweep, owned by the late James R. Keene, were victorious in 1907, 1908 and 1909.

Old Town to Change Name

Trondhjem, an ancient Norwegian town, which is known principally in the public mind as the most northerly town of any considerable size, will change its name after the first of next year. It will return to the original name by which it was known up to the middle of the Sixteenth century and that is Nidaros. The town is situated but a short distance below the Arctic circle.

The Right Way to Redye Fine Silks

Textile makers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the best way. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home dyers to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the Blue Package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors than any "all-purpose" dye. And they are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, these dyes contain an abundance of the highest quality anilines. The blue package dyes silk or wool only; the white package dyes, or tints, any material. Either package; 15c, drugstores.

A party enjoying (?) themselves probably but being too overcome by that which inebriates, and were making a very crooked wake over the road in a car, were taken in by Chief Nylander Saturday night and safely housed in his hotel in the basement of the town hall block over the week end. For an hour or two on Sunday afternoon there was considerable traffic on the Antrim-Hillsboro road, the occasion of same being the landing of an airplane in the field on the Verto Smith farm in Antrim. During the past two weeks this plane has landed here several times and on Sunday the excitement ran high; and cars for a quarter of a mile were parked on both sides of the road so that it was hard for through cars to pass. The plane came from Keene and intends to make this field a regular landing place.

The Reporter man was looking over the work on the new cement bridge in Bennington on Sunday morning and could see that considerable progress is being made. In talking with one of the men on the job, who seemed to have something to do with it, he said that in two weeks' time there would not be much left of the bridge to be built. That sounded pretty good to us, for knowing nothing of such work we should have said that by the looks it would be several weeks before it would be completed.

Good Posture Important

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Posture is the result of habit—the unconscious reversion, by the muscles and bones, to the positions they have been allowed to take day after day. Finally they assume these positions automatically, and if they are not correct we develop bodily distortions, an unattractive appearance, and a whole series of unsatisfactory consequences. Poor posture leads to fatigue, to backache, to strain on the wrong parts of the body and often to one-sided growth or such physical imperfections as a narrow chest, round shoulders, protruding abdomen, and many others. It is possible to maintain a good posture while engaged in almost any household task. The fact that all household activities must be performed repeatedly, suggests that they may be made to encourage habits of good posture or to correct poor posture if one thinks definitely of how one is standing, sitting, or stooping while at work. Take such a simple matter as standing at a pass closet or cabinet to operate an electric toaster, shown in the photograph by the United States Department of Agriculture. A home demonstration agent in Massachusetts used this frequently recurring activity to show farm women how to stand and how not to stand. She showed them how they looked when they allowed their shoulders or hips to slump forward, and the right way to stand while working at a counter or table. Various demonstrations of posture have been given, showing farm women the right and wrong positions for dishwashing, mopping, handling foods in the oven, sitting to prepare vegetables, and so on. Any one interested can apply this idea to a scrutiny of her own way of working. It is sometimes possible to see oneself in a large mirror as a particular task is carried on, and to note improper positions of head, shoulders, hips, back, or feet.

HOMEMADE SHOWER BATH

An old barrel or an inexpensive steel tank set on four posts or a platform and equipped with faucet and a short length of garden hose makes a shower bath for father and the boys and the hired man. The gas engine or windmill can be turned on a few minutes in the morning to fill the tank and the old reliable water heater, the sun, removes the chill from the water during the day.

Food for the Family Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

The following recipes, gathered from here and there are sure to please the family:

Cheesettes.—Fold in one and one-half cups of grated cheese in the well-beaten whites of three eggs, add salt and cayenne and pile on circles of toast and brown in the oven. These are nice to serve with a simple salad.

Rice and Beef Cutlets.—Take one cupful each of chopped uncooked beef and rice (cooked), combine with one well beaten egg. Make a sauce by frying one-half tablespoonful of onion in one tablespoonful of butter and then add one tablespoonful of flour and one-half cupful of milk. Simmer until smooth, add one-half teaspoonful of minced parsley, one-half tablespoonful of tomato sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Add this to the rice and beef mixture and form into cutlets. Brush with beaten egg, roll in fine crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—Crush one junket tablet and dissolve in a tablespoonful of cold water. Add one cupful of sugar to a pint of milk that has been warmed to new milk temperature. Add the dissolved tablet, stir well, pour into a freezer and freeze to a mush. Add a half pint of cream whipped, two cupfuls of crushed strawberries, and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Mix well and let stand until well frozen.

Lemon Crumb Pudding.—Pour two cupfuls of milk over two cupfuls of bread crumbs, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, the grated rind of a lemon, three tablespoonfuls of the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Pour into a buttered baking dish and serve with a creamy pudding sauce.

A dainty canape and easy to serve is one prepared thus: Prepare very small cream puffs—just enough for a mouthful—fill with any prepared mixture one desires—caviar, or seasoned chopped egg with anchovy.

Molasses Cake.—Take one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of sour milk, one and three-fourths teaspoonfuls of soda, one-third of a cupful of butter, one egg, two teaspoonfuls of ginger, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and two cupfuls of flour. Mix as usual and bake in a slow oven. Bake in a sheet.

It is surprising how much more flavorful many of our foods are made by the addition of a bit of sugar. Our best meat cooks add a pinch or more to all roasts and stews of meat; a bit added to almost all vegetables is an improvement, especially corn, peas and beans, which sometimes lack sweetness.

For the coffee sirup make extra strong coffee—one and three-fourths quarts of water to a pound of coffee, add three and one-half pounds of sugar and boil for three minutes. Bottle for use.

Brazilian Salad.—Take equal parts of finely cut fresh strawberries and pineapple with one dozen Brazil nuts cut into very thin slices. Marinate with lemon juice and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Tarte aux Oignons.—Slice thin four large onions. Put in a quart of cold water for a few minutes, add a teaspoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of salt and cook a few minutes. Drain and add to a saucepan in which has been melted one-quarter pound of butter and cook until lightly browned. Add three slices of bacon that have been cut in small pieces, and let cook. Let the mixture cool until just warm, then add three eggs lightly beaten with four tablespoonfuls of cream. Fill tart shells with the mixture and pour melted butter over them and bake until set.

An Attractive Bathroom

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An attractive bathroom is a housekeeper's pride, and the care given it is well repaid, not only from the sanitary standpoint, but because somehow its gleaming porcelain and well-shined fixtures, as well as its fresh dainty linen, reflect the standards of the home. Because it is in constant daily use by every member of the family, the bathroom and everything in it needs going over every day. The hand-basin and tub must be scoured, the toilet made scrupulously clean, nickle or other metal fixtures wiped and polished, and the floor mopped or wiped, depending on its condition and kind. The water pipes and traps should be frequently examined, too, for stoppage or leaks, either of which should receive prompt attention from a competent plumber.

The regular replacement of soiled towels and wash rags with clean ones, and attention to soap dishes, shelves, and the linen and medicine closets at frequent times are also very necessary details of bathroom care. Fine scourers may be used on all fixtures, says the bureau of home economics. For porcelain and enameled fixtures, the grease and whitening are especially good; the kerosene cuts the abrasion. Some of the commercial cleaning preparations used for enameled and porcelain fixtures are so gritty that they scratch the surface and thus make it harder to keep them clean. Special care should be scalded and dried, preferably in the open air.

Tiled walls and floors are easily wiped clean with soap and warm water unless the floor is dirty enough to need a scouring powder. It is a good plan to use two cloths, a wet and a dry one, and to clean a small area at a time, wiping it dry. The use of too much water may result ultimately in loosening the cement in which tiles are laid. If the floor is covered with linoleum this treatment is preferable to mopping.

The photograph, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows a bathroom in a farm home in Montgomery county, Virginia, installed after a water system had been put into the house on the advice of the extension agent. It is light, well ventilated, and quite easy to care for.

Fur and Lace, Felt and Velvet

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

There is no doubt about it, hats are far more interesting than they have been for many and many a season.

In fact, all indications point to a revival of the real art of millinery. One feels, viewing the autumn and winter displays, that hats are no longer just hats, rather are they "creations" which tell of an era in headwear where the touch of the "milliner born" becomes absolutely imperative in the scheme of things.

In the conjuring of modish millinery, the employment of lace and of fur unfolds an endless vista of possibilities to the designer. From hat to coat, frock and ensemble, the idea of enlivening black with touches of white fur wins appeal. To wear with a dressy black velvet or broadcloth or perhaps suede-finished cloth coat or jacket-suit where white fur appears at neck and wrists modistes are creating hats of the type of the little ermine-trimmed hat pictured at the top of this group to the left.

The two other fur-touched models in the illustration employ black broadtail for the toque in the lower left corner, and leopard skin for the scarf-and-hat set shown next to it. In the instance of the black broadcloth smug hat with its bow and flat cuff of broadtail again is seen the tendency to match the hat to the costume. This ensemble theme is resulting in all sorts of fabrics entering into the list of hat media, such as broadcloth, tweed and novelty wools. In fact any material used for the dress or suit is apt to be duplicated in its accompanying hat. It follows also, what with the observance of complementing the costume with a matching hat that women who keep pace with the mode, will find it necessary to buy many more hats than they have in some other seasons.

Three of the sketches herewith demonstrated that lace is being as effectively worked by milliners as fur. Lace treatments may be said to be approached from two different angles, one is the use of insets as shown in the brimmed hat centered at the top of the picture, also in the sketch to the right; the other is the adding of an ornamental veil, such as gives such a piquant air to the concluding model in the group.

When motifs of circled lace are inset into felt shapes, which they so frequently are, emphasis is placed on their being a perfect color match. These matched lace effects are developing into one of the most fascinating themes offered in millinery fashions this season.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Minna had been taking a walk. And now she was stopping before the music shop in the little town where she lived.

She was looking at everything in the shop. It was such an interesting window.

She always loved to look at it. Whenever she had time she stopped and gazed into the window—and sometimes, when she really hadn't the time at all she stopped and looked in!

Although it was late in the afternoon and she should be hurrying home, she stopped now and looked.

There were several lights in the shop, and she could see everything distinctly.

A light shone directly on a violin, the only one left, for Minna knew that the other four had been bought this year by three of the older boys and one older girl, who were taking violin lessons.

The violin looked rather lonely by itself. How she wished she could hear it played!

There was a saxophone in the window, too, a radio and a talking machine, a music box, ukulele and a harmonica, and, too, a metronome.

Minna didn't like a metronome. A friend of hers was made to practice with the metronome going all the time.

That was different from Miss Drumble. She didn't believe in the metronome. It made a pupil too mechanical and without enough sense of rhythm, Miss Drumble said, and Minna quite agreed with her.

A metronome so insisted upon every note being played right on time, and that wasn't so easy, but a metronome never seemed to care whether you found time difficult or not.

To a metronome everything should be so dreadfully right.

Some notes, Minna felt, wanted to go more quickly even if the time of the music and the metronome did agree that they shouldn't.

She Was Looking at Everything.

The metronome was so strict. It always wanted its own way, and always appeared so satisfied with itself.

To be sure, Miss Drumble wanted her to keep correct time, but Miss Drumble wanted her to understand and feel rhythm more than anything.

Minna tried to see back in the shop where there were many other sheets of music, more musical instruments, radio, pianos, even a bugle, and such a dear looking little piccolo.

There weren't many books of exercises—that was another reason why the shop was so fascinating.

There were any number of song books, Minna like to sing songs.

What a wonderful shop this was. Minna liked it better than any other in town.

To be sure, she liked the peanut man's little stand, where peanuts were always being roasted, and popcorn was always popping—ready to be put into bags with the butter soaking through the paper.

But the peanut man's stand couldn't possibly be called a shop.

It was quite different. And, certainly, if she ever were given her choice of the two there wouldn't be a doubt about choosing this one.

She had lingered and looked long enough. She must be on her way now.

But there was something about the manner in which the lights back in the shop were blinking and flickering that kept her there.

It was as though something must be going to happen. Something exciting, something surprising, something—

Had some one spoken to her? She was sure she had just heard a voice, a squeaky voice.

It wasn't very loud. Maybe she had only imagined she had heard it. And then she heard the voice again.

It was quite distinct this time.

To think that some one from this fascinating shop was noticing her, too!

Lost Treasure in Peru Causes Stir

Maps Show Location of Gold, but They Can't Find It

Lima, Peru.—The lure of buried treasure is once more holding the attention of the Peruvian public. Over the alleged existence of an enormous treasure of gold and silver in the town of Arequipa the press of Lima and Arequipa is carrying columns and a legal battle for title to the yet undiscovered fortune has begun.

During the reconstruction of the city hall of Arequipa a laborer, Andres Rodriguez, discovered beneath a partially demolished wall a bottle containing maps and sketches showing the location of treasure. A small metal box, the contents of which are not publicly known, was also discovered. Constantino Manrique, son of the contracting engineer, Andres Manrique, was present at the discovery and carried the bottle and box to his father.

Makes Formal Claims

Having examined the maps and sketches, Andres Manrique sent his son, Jose, to Lima to make a formal legal claim for the treasure before the federal government. Meanwhile, members of the city council of Arequipa were complaining that the claim should have been made before a local court and have claimed the treasure in the name of the city since the maps were discovered on property rented by the city from the Arequipa club.

The purported treasure is supposed to have been buried by the Jesuits before their expulsion in 1772 on property then belonging to an alleged Marquis de la Encina y Zaragoza. Both the Arequipa and Lima press have published denials that such a title ever existed in Peru, but an old woman in Arequipa, who claims to be a descendant of this nobleman, has put in a claim for the treasure if discovered.

Andres Rodriguez, the laborer, has also entered a denunciation, while members of the Arequipa club, owners of the land, are contemplating taking action if the situation justifies it.

Jose Ugarte, seventy-seven-year-old employee of the municipality of Arequipa, declares that 40 years ago Dr. Moscoso Melgar, then mayor of Arequipa, was in possession of the maps and made a thorough search without locating any treasure. At that time it was thought that a large solid gold image of St. Ignatius Loyola had been buried beneath the building. The search, made at night, led to the discovery of two subterranean passages beneath the city hall—one leading to the church of St. Augustin and the other leading to the church of the Compania de Jesus.

Passages Reopened

Another former employee of the city government, Manuel Nunez, who alleges that he was a close friend of Mayor Melgar, declares that he has no knowledge of such search having been made, but adds that it is entirely possible that the information was not communicated to him.

As a result of the various claims made in the municipal court in Arequipa, the mayor and the councilmen have had the passages reopened and a search made, without any treasure having been discovered.

A municipal judge, Dr. Pedro Germain Delgado, has ordered Senor Manrique to produce the original maps and plans, but inasmuch as the denunciation already had been made by Manrique before the federal government it is believed that legal technicalities will prevent such presentation for a number of weeks. Meanwhile other claimants are coming forward, hoping to share a treasure the majority of the Arequipinos believe to be nonexistent.

Boy Loses Foot Saving His Dog From Train

Kansas City, Mo.—When Smoke, his police puppy, was in danger, Charles Breilstein, sixteen years old, didn't hesitate to leap in front of a train to rescue him. Smoke reciprocated by barking until Charles' father found the boy on the right-of-way, one foot so crushed that it had to be amputated. Charles and Smoke had been on a bike when the dog got on the path of a Milwaukee train. The youth scooped him off the track but failed by a fraction of a second to jump clear of the locomotive.

English Lead Other Foreigners in France

Paris.—The Englishman leads all nationalities as a permanent resident of France, according to recent statistics of immigration, 84,000 now being classed as fixed homeholders in this country, and not including transient voyagers and tourists. North Americans follow second with 60,000.

Rattlesnake Proves to Be a Hitch-Hiker

Goose Creek, Texas.—A 16-inch diamond backed rattlesnake with a lust for travel, and a motorist making a tour of west Texas, recently combined to make a filling station attendant wary of future requests for a change of battery water.

T. C. Jordan, of Pelly, little realized while driving peacefully on his way that he was playing host to the ride-stealing reptile. He became cognizant of the fact rather abruptly, however, when the attendant informed him of the presence of the snake which was curled up placidly on the battery box, having ridden a distance of 500 miles.

Nebraska City Boasts of Two-Headed Snake

McCook, Neb.—One can go to almost any county fair and see a two-headed calf or a two-headed snake, but McCook has a two-headed snake.

The reptile is about eight inches long, perfectly normal in its actions, and to the casual onlooker just twice as dangerous as an ordinary snake. The heads are about an inch long. When the snake decides to move across a room it rests one head on the other and wriggles along in snappy style.

Both of the heads are apparently normal in their functioning. Forked tongues protrude from both, both have eyes, and both dart around with lightninglike rapidity.

Witch Doctors in South Africa Organize Union

Cape Town.—The witch doctors of South Africa, tired of abuse and ridicule, have decided to form a trade union to protect their regulation and presumably their "consulting fees." The inaugural meeting of the Dingaka, as the union will be called, was held recently in a public hall in a Transvaal town. Four European medical men attended at the invitation of the witch doctors.

Answers Little Awry

Blue Mountain, Miss.—At least one negro applicant for a certificate to teach school in Mississippi failed here recently. His answer to the question: "Name two Indian tribes of Mississippi, and give something about their costumes and habits" was: "The Coca Colas and the Semicolons. They wore feathers in their costumes and there habits wuz bad."

Picts' Flint Shop Found in Orkney

Sandwick, Orkney.—Another underground dwelling was discovered recently at the Skara Brae Picts' village in Sandwick, Orkney. One side of the hut is almost complete. Excavators reached the floor level through an accumulation of clear sand and the site of the central fireplace was disclosed. At one side a "treasure store" of flint implements was uncovered. Prof. V. Gordon Childe, who is directing the excavations, has named this hut the "flint knappers' workshop" for more than seven score flints were found. Finely worked scrapers of dark flint and numerous flakes were strewn around the floor level.

Sleep Walker Killed

Troy, N. Y.—The old theory that harm never befalls a sleep walker has been refuted. Michael Rubus, an aged recluse, walked off a back porch in his sleep and died in Troy hospital as a result of hemorrhages suffered in the fall.

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

Castoria is a safe and effective remedy for children's ailments. It is a mild laxative that soothes the infant who cannot sleep and helps regulate the bowels of the older child. It is available at all druggists.

Lucky Man! Wilt—"Who is that congratulating the bridegroom?" Whap—"The fellow tried to get but couldn't."

In Boston "That policeman is eyeing you suspiciously." "Yes. I asked him to direct me to a book store."

The Mark of Genuine Aspirin..

BAYER ASPIRIN is like an old friend, tried and true. There can never be a satisfactory substitute for either one. Bayer Aspirin is genuine. It is the accepted antidote for pain. Its relief may always be relied on, whether used for the occasional headache, to head-off a cold, or for the more serious aches and pains from neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or other ailments. It's easy to identify Bayer Aspirin by the Bayer Cross on every tablet, by the name Bayer on the box and the word "genuine" always printed in red.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monosaccharide of Salicylic Acid

First-class talent in the editing of high-class magazines is the hardest to find. Popularity has to depend too much on the good will of other people—and that may change.

When a White Collar Man "Goes Army"

Perhaps he doesn't learn a few things!

DON'T envy a man who "only has to work a typewriter." So we were told by Mr. Solon S. Bloom of 3503 Woodbrook Avenue, Baltimore, Md., whose health began to give way because his work gave him no bodily exercise.

"I decided to get away to a military training camp," says Mr. Bloom, "thinking the rough and tumble with the army would do me good for a month. I asked the doctor what to do about my condition. 'I've seen men, I've known men,' he said. 'I know what they eat, drink, and how they live. I know cathartics, physics, and all the ways men try to keep themselves regular—and the only two that go together well are men and Nujol. Nujol soothes and heals the membranes and expels bodily poisons normally, naturally, easily, so that you are regular as clock-work.'"

That was what Mr. Bloom learned when he left his typewriter and went into the army. If you are like most other people, you too will find that Nujol will make all the difference in the world in the way you feel.

Remember Nujol is not a medicine, for it contains no drugs of any kind. It is simply bodily lubrication that everybody needs.

You can get a bottle of Nujol at any good drug store, in a sealed package, for the price of a couple of good cigars. If you will start today and try it for two weeks you will agree that Nujol is the easy normal way to keep well and make a success out of your life. You will be astonished at the results!

"Everyman" Performed on Porch of a Cathedral

For the first time in the history of England, music and drama were presented in a cathedral on the occasion of the Canterbury Cathedral festival. Plays took place outside the west door and in the chapter house, concerts were held in the nave, serenades and chamber music in the new chapter house. The photograph shows the folk dancers dancing before "Death" during the performance of the drama "Everyman" outside the great west door.

200 SEEK ROOMS IN MODEL POORHOUSE IN OKLAHOMA

New Institution Has Every Comfort and Convenience of Modern Resort Hotel.

Newkirk, Okla.—"Over the hill to the poorhouse." That's a journey nobody wants to take, although it has furnished material for poets, dramatists, painters—even movie producers. To thousands of penniless, homeless ones, who have been forced through circumstances to make such a journey the grave would be more acceptable—but that is all changed now in Kay county, Okla., of which this city is the county seat. Today 200 names are on the waiting list, men and women clamoring for places as guests of the fine new $60,000 county farm home just nearing completion on a rolling hillside three miles east of this city. The new building is made possible through oil tax money, the structure itself costing $30,000 and as much more to equip it. It will have dormitories, private rooms with bath, a fine dining hall and every convenience of a modern resort hotel. There will be a music hall, radio, player pianos, a chef who can prepare the finest of foods, a private hospital and the inmates will be given only such odd tasks about the grounds as they may desire to keep them occupied, for which they will receive small sums weekly as spending money. The twenty-two inmates of the old home will be preferred customers and first on the guest list for the new institution. "No, we are not pampering them," says H. E. Cook, superintendent of the home, "we are just providing adequately for the unfortunate of this district. Kay county is fortunate in having plenty of funds, and we are building for the future as well as for today."

 Dr. Hadley's, and will then go to Montclair, N. J., her winter home.

Now there is a fully equipped drug store on wheels, which also carries Christmas novelties. It is surprising how much can be stowed away in it, and the wares conveniently displayed and handled.

There have been Mission services held at St. Patrick's church every evening of the past week. The visiting clergyman who conducted them was entertained at the home of Mr.

Sunday was Rally Day for the Congregational church S. S. with a concert in the evening. The decorations were symbolic of the harvest time and very pretty. A very interesting program was given.

There will be a joint installation of officers of the Sons of Union Veterans and the Auxiliary at the first meeting in November, which comes on Monday evening, the 11th. Mrs. Ruth Wil-

 the coming winter, formerly the Amasa

The barberry hedge in front of the Bixby Inn tennis court, with the leaves

Feign Death to Escape

Its Actual Visitation
 Nature has provided the majority of animals with some means of self-preservation. The bold overcome the enemy by fighting "tooth and claw";
 the timid escape by rapid flight. Some creatures take shelter behind a plating of armor; others rely mainly upon their protective coloration. Some inject deadly poisons; others emit assaulting fluids and even electric shocks.

But probably the most remarkable of all methods of evading the enemy is that of shamming death; and one need not necessarily travel beyond the confines of one's own garden for proof of the fact that some creatures do sham death, for quite a number of caterpillars, spiders, toads and snakes are addicted to the habit, says
 M. D. D. in the Times of India Illustrated Weekly.

It is a well-known fact that certain birds will pretend to be lame or wounded in the wing in order to draw away intruders from the vicinity of their eggs or young. The American ground dove, the ruffed grouse, the green plover and the wild duck are among those that practice this art of deception. Among birds that actually sham death may be mentioned the land rail and the water rail.

When Amateur Sleuth
Lost Interest in Case
 Most men possess a huge contempt for the detective ability of the police and nurse a confident belief that if it were put up to them they would solve any mystery in jig time.
 On Long Island lives a man who not only believes that Sherlock Holmes was a slouch compared to him, but who gets in some active practice. If a crime is committed in his locality he makes a bee-line for the police station and starts in to "help" the department. The police do not relish his interference, but they've got to humor him because of his influence.

But this man proved to be too good a detective. One day he called at the station to see if there was anything doing and was told of a motor car accident in which a woman, after driving through a store window, had backed up and driven away. The Long Islander immediately went to work on the case. He solved it, all right, but he did not report his success to the station.

For he discovered that it was his wife who was the guilty culprit—and that the police had known it all the time when he went out to solve the mystery.—New York Sun.

Why Guides Go Insane
 It is related that a Kansas City woman on vacation up in Minnesota went out on a lake for a fishing trip, and complained to the guide that there was water in the bottom of the boat.
 "Yes, ma'am," agreed the guide, who rowed on unconcerned.

After half an hour, the Kansas City woman protested again about the water in the boat.
 "There's nearly always some water in this boat," confessed the guide, "but I don't know what we're going to do about it."
 "Well," said the Kansas City woman, "there's a plug in the bottom of the boat. If I were you, I'd remove it, and let the water out."—Kansas City Times.
