FEDERAL RETURNS

Forms for Past Year Released During the Last Week

Important Changes in the Federal Income Tax Forms

The information returns, forms 1096 and 1099, which were formerly sent by the taxpayers to Washington, must be filed this year, with the Collector of Internal Revenue at Portsmouth, N. H., and must be in his office on or before February 15, 1930. Heretofore, taxpayers had until March 15th to file these returns.

The Collector is now placing in the envelopes containing the corporation blanks, the following notice:

"Since the Corporation Income Tax Return, Form 1120, for the Calendar Year 1929 was printed, Congress passed a Joint Resolution reducing the rate of tax for the calendar year 1929 as follows:

Reduction in Tax

The tax on the income reported on the return as Item 27 must be computed in Item 28 at 11% instead of 12%, and the amount $25,360, in Items 28 and 29 shall be reduced to $25,330. Taxpayers should therefore make these changes on the form when the return is prepared."

In the envelope containing the individual returns, forms 1040-A, he is enclosing this notice:

"The first $4,000 of the net income in excess of the personal exemption and credit for dependents, reported as Item 13, shall be taxed at 1/2% instead of 1 1/4%.

"In accordance with this reduction the normal tax on the net income reported as Item 14 must be computed at 3/4%; also the credit claimed in Item 15 for tax paid at source on tax-free covenant bonds shall be computed at 1/2% instead of 1 1/4%.

"The proper changes in the rate of tax in these items on the form should therefore be made by the taxpayers when the return is prepared."

And the taxpayers who file on form 1040 will receive the following notice:

Reduction in Normal Tax

"The first $4,000 of the net income in excess of the personal exemption and other credits shall be taxed at 1/2%, instead of 1 1/4%; the second $4,000 of the net income in excess of such credits shall be taxed at 2%, instead of 3%; and the balance of the net income shall be taxed at 4% instead of 5%.

"In accordance with this reduction the normal tax on the earned net income reported on the return as Item 27 must be computed at 1/2%, Item 28 at 2%, and Item 29 at 4%; and the normal tax on the net income reported as Item 44 must be computed at 1/2%, Item 45 at 2%, and Item 46 at 4%. The credit claimed in Item 53 for tax paid at source on tax-free covenant bonds should also be computed at 1/2% instead of 1 1/4%. If the interest was reported on Line 2 of Form 1000 (see Instruction 4 on Form 1040). These reduced rates in tax apply only to the portion of income attributable to 1929, derived from a partnership or an estate or trust computed on a fiscal year basis.

"Taxpayer should therefore make these changes on the form when the return is prepared."

As the forms to be mailed to the taxpayers do not carry the above reductions, the Collector wishes all taxpayers to carefully read these instructions in the notices so that they may benefit in this reduction of tax.

Memory a Faithful Servant

It is more or less amusing to read the political "stuff" put out by the special writers in the state dailies, especially when one's memory serves him well for a number of years back, under very many different conditions. One of the funny things is the way the "liberals" are selecting candidates for various positions; one would think that all this bunch of anxious office holders has to do is to bring forward their man, name the office they want him to have, and that's all there is to it. The voters are still a quantity to be reckoned with, as we see it. In former days these very ones that are now so exercised over the matter and are anxious that some one of their clique be nominated for office were running up and down the state "fussing" because some other "hand picked" men were likely to be elected. Very little is said about the ability of those now in office, but because they have a mind of their own and do not "bow to Baal," they must step aside for someone else. It will be well for any voter to take an added interest in politics, and look well into the selfishness and unreasonableness of the proposition.

AN ANTRIM RESIDENT

For Thirty-four Years Passes to Her Reward

Mrs. Grace, wife of Charles L. Merrill, departed this life on Tuesday afternoon, at her home on North Main street, after a number of days of serious illness of pneumonia, and a complication of diseases, with which she had suffered for some time. Her last sickness was not long, but gradually she weakened and her frailty could not long permit her to endure.

Mrs. Merrill was born at Elizabeth, N. J., 59 years ago, and came with Mr. Merrill to Antrim in 1896, since which time they have resided here. Mrs. Merrill was for many years connected with Hand in Hand Rebekah Lodge, being a Past Noble Grand; her church work was confined to the Methodist society, where as a member of the ladies' aid society she did much work which was greatly appreciated. Her life was spent largely in the home and here is where she will be greatly missed. The husband, and grand-son for whom she has made a home most of his years, are bereft of a loving and indulgent wife and grandmother; her loss will be keenly felt. The sympathy of the community is theirs in this hour of affliction. She also leaves one daughter, Florence, now residing in England, and a sister, residing in Boston.

Funeral services will be held from the home on Friday morning, at ten o'clock, and will be private. Interment will be in the family lot in Groton, Mass.

The State Needs the Money

A number of men throughout the state have told why the Legislature should be called in special session to consider the tax question as reported on by the Supreme Court; and as many think there is no need of it. After reading Representative Duncan's statements regarding same, we are more than ever of the opinion that a special session should be called, and in this way the tax program will probably be all fixed up; then why have a Constitutional Convention? This tax problem was about the only important thing considered when it was thought best to have a Convention. There are plenty of things a Constitutional Convention might ask the voters of the State to consider, but it is probable they would do as they have done in the past, and throw all the work of the delegates to one side. The Supreme Court's decision makes it very clear what can be done and what cannot be done, and with this report before them the legislators can speedily accomplish the desired end. A vote to rescind a former action regarding the calling of a Constitutional Convention could be taken. At a time like the present our State needs to practice economy if she ever did, and a considerable amount of money may be saved in this way. All in favor of the State saving money stand up and be counted!

Senator Keyes a Hard Worker

The many friends in this section of U. S. Senator Henry W. Keyes are pleased to know that he has decided to again be a candidate to succeed himself, at the coming primaries. At the moment there appears to be no opposition to his candidacy, and as we see it there should not be, for Senator Keyes is a good man for the position, holds many important positions on committees, is an indefatigable worker of rare judgment, and is able to accomplish things. His experience is of great value, and New Hampshire is fortunate to have an opportunity of keeping Senator Keyes in Washington to look after the State's interest, and also that of the nation. Our feeling in the matter is that he will be nominated without opposition in the primaries and, in the November election, be signally complimented by one of the largest votes he has ever received.

The Official Visitation

To Hand in Hand Rebekah Lodge will be on Wednesday evening, February 19, at a special meeting. The degree will be conferred, rehearsals for same are now being held. Mrs. Marcia P. Taylor, of Milan, warden of the Rebekah Assembly, is the visiting officer. A light supper will be served after the degree is conferred.

Owing to a vote of the Lodge, at a recent meeting, a charge of ten cents each to all members will be made for this supper.

Congressman Wason Will Ask to be Returned

Congressman Edward H. Wason, of Nashua, republican, representing the Second New Hampshire district, and who is so well and favorably known by the people in this section, has announced his desire to serve his district for another term in Washington. This is good news, and with a man of the Congressman's experience and ability the interests of the State and the Second District will be well looked after.

In a recent telegram regarding the matter, Mr. Wason said: "I wish to say that I will be a candidate to succeed myself at the primary next fall."

In the House of Representatives at the present time, Congressman Wason is serving on very important committees. He was first elected to Congress in 1914 and has been successively re-elected every term since that time. As this is a position in which experience counts for very much, the voters will see to it that is re-nominated and re-elected for another two years.

Community Building

Modernization of Home Worth Outlay Involved

Practically every woman would refuse emphatically to dress in the garments that were stylish ten years ago. And the average man would look with scorn at the thought of owning an automobile that was built back in 1918.

Yet both complacently live in a house that has the architectural designs of Spanish-American war days and think nothing of it. Both put up with the inconveniences that go with such a dwelling and are satisfied with the old home.

Only recently has the home-owner begun to realize that it is no longer necessary to live in odd-appearing houses simply because that was the way they were originally built. During the past year or so it has been brought to the attention of the property owner that houses clothed in out-of-date lines show as poor taste as dressing in clothes with the lines of yesterday. Both may have utility—but how unnecessary the old lines are!

The home owner who lives in an out-of-date house often hesitates to improve his dwelling because he has a mistaken idea of the costs of modernizing. These costs are usually moderate. A surprising range of improvements can be made for a few thousand dollars.—Exchange.

Co-Operation to Bring About Highway Beauty

The program of the state highway commission for putting the rights of way along the highways in order and to some extent beautifying them with trees and shrubs, will have more than the immediate effect indicated. If the people of Missouri are to have pride in their fine roads, and if the people of the towns and cities and farms are to be interested in co-operating for more attractive drives, then the first essential is to put the rights of way in order. The power of example is recognized. If the chambers of commerce in the cities and towns and the associations of farmers in the country can be enlisted to help in the planting program, in the adoption of uniform mail boxes and roadside racks, and if the owners of stands can be induced to make their places attractive, then there will be hope that more of the outdoor advertising concerns will abandon such billing as interferences with this program. Also when progress in these directions has been made, the state or local authorities will have better moral ground for any legal proceedings that might be necessary and helpful in the way of regulation.—Kansas City Times.

Types of Hedges

Ordinarily we think and speak of a hedge as being a row of plants closely together to effect a solid mass of foliage. In the formal hedge, the plants are trained in geometric outline by periodic trimming. The informal hedge is trimmed to gain compactness, but the plant is allowed to develop more or less naturally.

In landscape design, the formal hedge is almost indispensable. Its uses are legion. That is why most every home grounds can use hedge treatments to advantage. The formal hedge can be used to bound and screen the architectural garden. It can be developed higher than one's head, or, by using certain plants, it can be kept less than a foot high. Within the formal garden one often finds these low hedges bounding the flower beds and garden paths. In the simplest garden, hedges may be used to establish the lines and pattern of the design.

Children Set Out Trees

Approximately 400,000 pine trees were planted in New Hampshire this year by boys and girls. The trees were distributed through the co-operative efforts of the New Hampshire Forest nursery, the Smith Hughes vocational agricultural teachers and the Extension service.

The Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests gives books as prizes to the boys and girls under sixteen who do the best tree planting job. Everyone planting trees is eligible to membership in the American Tree association under a special provision of the association.

Determine to Own Home

The ownership of a home is an ambition to which every one should aspire. Have you, Mr. Tenant, this ambition and hope? Have you determined to accomplish the purchase of your own home? If not, do so at once. It is a step in the right direction. It makes for better citizenship. It supplies a new interest in life, and the benefits that accrue are worth many times any sacrifice that may be made.—Exchange.

Two Strange Seas

Scene on the Shore of the Caspian Sea. (Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE world's two most important and best known bodies of water that lie below sea level are the Dead sea and the Caspian sea. The Dead sea is really a gigantic sinkhole. In no other continent is there such a deep depression in the earth's crust; nor will one find greater desolation or more uncomfortable conditions for man and most other living things even in the hearts of the greatest deserts.

The Hebrew scriptures have thrown an atmosphere of tragedy about this country. There, the chronicle states, were situated the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, destroyed by the wrath of Jehovah; and there the modern reader sees the blasted region, seared by unbearable heat, with its bitter death dealing waters, to prove the story to his satisfaction.

According to the Biblical narrative the Jordan valley and the plain near its mouth on the shores of the Dead sea where the destroyed cities lay shared the early good fortune of the Promised Land itself and "flowed with milk and honey." But an end was put to this pleasant condition by the rain of brimstone and fire.

The story of the region deciphered from its rocks by geologists begins much earlier than the days of the patriarchs whose actions are recorded in the Bible. This record seems to indicate that Palestine and the whole western end of Arabia rose from the sea a million or more years ago in what the geologists term the Tertiary era. Shortly after the rise, it seems, a great slice of the land parallel to the coast of the Mediterranean sank to great depth, forming the huge rift valley, "the Ghor," now occupied by the Jordan river and the Dead sea.

It is not clear whether there was a connecting channel between the Mediterranean and the great valley; but a well defined ancient beach indicates that in those remote times the great depression held a sea or lake at about the same level as that of the Mediterranean. The Jordan did not then exist; its entire valley as well as the sea of Galilee was swallowed up in the parent of the Dead sea, which was some 200 miles long and 10 to 15 miles wide.

Dead Sea Has No Outlet. It is believed that the climate of Palestine in remote times was moist and that the great inland lake was for a while kept at its highest point. When drier conditions set in the lake began to shrink, eventually retreating into the present position of the Dead sea and exposing the valley now occupied by the Jordan. This is practically the only large river in the world which flows in a valley ready-made for it almost from source to mouth.

The Dead sea depression having no outlet, all the salts contained in the large original inland sea were retained when evaporation reduced the volume of the body of water to its present dimensions. In addition, for hundreds of thousands of years the Jordan and the other streams and torrents that flow from the desert hills into the basin have been carrying in additional salts until now the waters of the Dead sea constitute one of the most highly concentrated natural brines in existence. It is estimated that on the average some six million tons of water flow into the Dead sea daily, and since the level of the sea changes but little, an equal amount is pumped out daily by evaporation.

The present Dead sea is 47 miles long and about 10 miles wide. Its surface lies approximately 1,300 feet lower than sea level and at its deepest point its bottom lies another 1,300 feet down. This great rift in the earth's crust, therefore, lies 2,600 feet below sea level and is the deepest hole in the land anywhere in the world. Because of the intense heat and dryness and the presence everywhere of salt the land immediately about the Dead sea is a region of desolation.

Because the intense heat and pressure often prove fatal to others than the few hapless Arab nomads that manage to survive in the region, this area has until recently not been intensively studied by scientists. It was at first thought that there is no evidence of recent volcanic action and that the traditional destruction of the cities by a rain of fire and brimstone may have referred to the explosion of pockets of crude petroleum. A scientist who visited the region in 1909, however, reported a small extinct volcano near the northeastern corner of the Dead sea near the reputed site of Sodom and concluded that a shower of ashes from this vent may have caused the catastrophe so vividly described in Genesis.

Caspian Sea is a Puzzle. The Caspian sea was thought, in the earliest periods of recorded time, to be part of the great "stream of ocean" surrounding the habitable earth. Herodotus, the Greek geographer, mentions a visit to it in 453 B. C., when it was an even greater mystery than today, for then no one knew its extent.

Some authorities claim that the Caspian had its origin in a great inland sea, an Asiatic Mediterranean, with an outlet to the Arctic ocean. In support of the Arctic outlet it is pointed out that seals are still hunted in the Caspian and there are other forms of life which show evidence of Arctic ancestry. It is argued that the Caspian owes its present size to climatic changes and evaporation. That the sea has reached other levels is evident by the number of terraces that can be seen back from the coast. However, to complicate matters, the weak development of the terraces indicates that the sea did not stand at any one level for a long time. Walls and cities have been found in many sections underneath the surface, an indication that the level of the water was even lower at one period than it is now.

Shifting shore lines are not the only eccentricities of the Caspian. Although 85 feet below the level of its neighbor, the Black sea, and with no known or possible outlet, the Caspian is less than half as salty. It is only three-eighths as salty as the ocean. Furthermore, the northern part, which receives large quantities of fresh water from the Volga, Ural and Terek rivers, is so slightly salty the water is quite drinkable.

The Black sea, with approximately an equal surface and almost the same climatic conditions, not only retains a constant level but is continually discharging at the Dardanelles. Yet the volume of water poured into the Black sea is not nearly so great as that which the Caspian receives. The Volga, alone, drains almost half a million square miles into the Caspian.

No other inland body of water is so richly stocked with fish, nor has as wide a range of species. The Caspian presents an intermingling of salt and fresh water forms. Before the World war the annual catch, including the seals of Krasnovodsk bay, was valued at more than five million dollars.

With an area equal to that of the state of California, or more than all the Great Lakes combined, the Caspian sea today occupies the deepest part of a great depression situated to the west and south of the Ural mountains. The northern or fresh water half is shallow, nowhere reaching a depth of more than 118 feet. The southern half, however, is cut by two deep depressions and soundings have reached 3,600 feet.

Coastal Strip is Narrow. Both the north and the east coasts are flat and hard to approach. Caucasus mountains on the west and the Elburz on the southern, or Persian, shore are close to the sea and leave only a narrow coastal strip. On this strip are most of the important cities of the region. Taken as a whole the Caspian is not an attractive body of water. Its shores are as barren as the granite boulders of its bordering mountains. As there is no fresh water above or below the surface of the ground near the southern coasts, the inhabitants must bring drinking water from long distances or condense sea water. One of the distinguishing features of towns along this part of the Caspian sea is the floating condenser plant, usually some worn-out steamer or sailing vessel. Sometimes the water is piped ashore, sometimes it is carried in tank barges and then peddled around the streets, as is milk in other cities.

Chest Was Man's First Furniture

He Ate on It, Slept on It and Stored His Clothes in It.

Chicago.—Man sat on it, slept on it, ate his food on it, stored his clothes in it—in fact, he "lived" on, in and with it.

In this case has no connection with Elinor Glyn's impression of a magnetic personality. We are referring to the first piece of furniture ever made—a chest. And, of course, we are speaking of the primitive man who at that juncture in cavern progress was lucky to find a dry earthy spot on which to stretch his huge, hairy frame.

The chest became more important to the primitive man when he moved down from his hazardous niche in the cliff and built a hut on the ground. As men gained knowledge they formed tribes and found new instruments other than just a club with which to fight and kill the beasts and game that roamed the wild regions of their habitats. They learned, too, that wood could be used for purposes other than weapons.

Chests were made in great varieties, some richly decorated, inlaid with precious stones and metals. A distinguished man of those days would have as many as one hundred chests. When leaving his castle or kingdom on a trip he would carry many with him containing such comforts as food, clothing and utensils and also his gifts.

His Treasure Store.

In those days, it was man's treasure store, his companion during life and often when he died the chest was used for his coffin—his final resting place.

As we leave the crude stage of life in a study of the history of furniture, we view the avenue of progress with its increasing beauty and proceed until today we reach that pleasing point where man sits on a chair, sleeps on a bed and eats his food at a table.

He still stores some of his clothes in a chest, some in dresser drawers, on hooks and often on the floor. But the foregoing has only a small connection with the subject matter and to the unsuspecting reader we disclose our theme as concerning cedar and the many and interesting uses that has been made of the wood.

Looking back many, many years, information gathered from 22 manufacturers of cedar chests at the American Furniture Mart in Chicago shows that Solomon, the wise king of many wives, chose cedar for the temple of all his glory. That was 2,900 years ago and centuries later in the reign of Louis XIV, grand monarch of France, likewise selected the wood for one of the great Versailles gateways.

Our forefathers in America used cedar logs for their cabins and later for their stately mansions. President Andrew Jackson, it has been learned, had the chests at "The Hermitage" made in cedar.

Desiring to perpetuate the memory of their gods, the wise Greeks chose this durable product of the forest for their images to withstand the elements through the ages, a tribute to cedar sturdiness. Scriptures refer to cedar as a symbol of power, prosperity, longevity.

Had others appreciated its value as did Solomon, Louis XIV, President Jackson and other notables in history, and had they taken heed of the warnings that were sounded later, forest owners today say it would not now be necessary to scan the horizon closely for the beauty which is lent by this species of the genus Abies.

Bring Out Hope Chest.

The hope chest for several years has been accepted by the maidens of the land as a treasure box. In former years they hid it away in the attic because it was merely a chest in which to store the prospective bride's trousseau.

Now, however, it has been brought from the attic into the bedroom and often into the living room. Manufacturers realized the need of a general household appeal and have had expert cabinet workers adopt style and finish to make the chests into attractive pieces of furniture. The idea has created a greater demand for chests than ever before in the history of the industry, manufacturers say.

Choice of poets and artists, kings and rulers of nations throughout the world for centuries, this wood with its sweet, sharp odor has remained a favorite to the delight of those who live in its surroundings and to the discomfort only of the moth. To this insect, destroyer of wool and fur, the aroma of the oil has been a death-dealing barrier.

More than a century ago, cedar was used in numerous ways, for fences, barns, smokehouses, roofing and for log cabins. One author has written: "No hewn red cedar log house ever rotted down; if such a house ever was destroyed, it was by fire."

From the period between 1890 and 1900 virgin growth cedar with stock of good width and carrying very little of the white sapwood, was used extensively in the manufacture of coffins and caskets. This class of timber, however, became exhausted and its use in caskets by necessity was abandoned.

Benjamin Franklin sounded a warning for reforestation in his day, which, if followed, would have prevented the scarcity of the wood today. Taking up the prophecy of Peter Kalm, the Swedish naturalist, who toured the eastern section of the United States almost 200 years ago, Franklin urged that measures be taken to insure against exhaustion of the forests.

His prediction long since has been borne out as the red cedar suitable for commercial purposes has disappeared from all the Eastern and New England states and forests of the South have been so depleted that American lumbermen say it is nearing extinction.

No Substitute for Red Cedar.

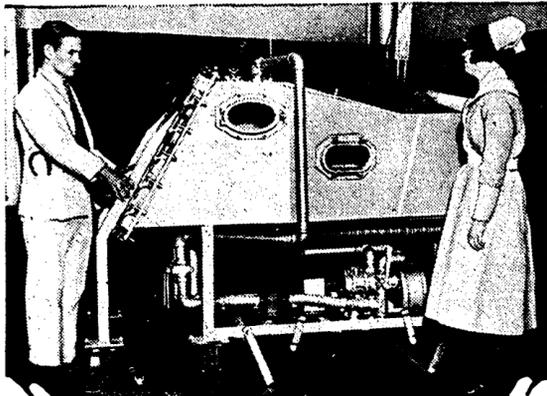

High-class cedar timber to be used for expert pencil wood vanished in the early '80s and since that time owners of pencil slat factories in the country have bought old log houses, barns and rail fences for their supply. Also from such wood, exposed to the weather for half a century, practically all of the oil of cedarwood produced in this country is made by the pencil slat mills.

The worst enemy of growing cedar is fire. The bark of the tree is thin and once the fire scorches the outer covering death results.

With the supply diminishing and the demand increasing, manufacturers claim there is no available substitute for red cedar. So scarce has the wood become throughout the South that only small mills are established and many of them at great distances from railroads.

Red cedar grows rapidly but the warnings of Kalm and Franklin were not recognized in time. The failure to employ conservation methods and artificial propagation has made it necessary for manufacturers to scour the Southland for what supplies are available today.

New Respirator for Gas Victims

Dr. C. Codelle with a nurse at Gouverneur hospital, New York, looking over a new type of mechanical respirator, said to be more effective than the pulmotor. Instead of pumping air in and out of the lungs through a tube and mouthpiece, the machine rhythmically increases and decreases the air pressure on the outside of the chest, the patient being enclosed in an airtight tank of sheet iron.

FOODS BENEFICIAL TO SOME ACT AS POISONS TO OTHERS

Specialist Gives Warning to Mothers Who Force Children to Eat Certain Things.

New York.—The mother who insists, "You must eat that; it's good for you!" may be unwittingly doing her child an injury.

Foods which may be beneficial to 99 persons in 100, may be positive poison to the one hundredth. Even such universal items of diet as milk, eggs, and potatoes should not be given to some children.

This is the warning voiced by Dr. Josephine H. Kenyon, widely known child health specialist, in the Good Housekeeping Magazine, where she discusses recent findings of science in regard to allergy, or the hyper-sensitization of certain individuals to particular substances with which they come into contact.

The most common form of allergy is a hyper-sensitiveness to substances breathed into the lungs, known popularly as hay fever, but parallel conditions can be brought about by taking in certain foods. Such conditions are usually evident in early childhood, says the child specialist, but they can affect the individual throughout life.

"Food allergies form a difficult study," says Doctor Kenyon. "The usual symptoms are skin rashes of many types, including eczema; indigestion symptoms varying from loss of appetite to vomiting and diarrhea, and such varied reactions as anaphylaxis, prostration, and fever. Often the correct diagnosis is not made until there have been many attempts to cure the child by cathartics, drugs, salves, etc."

"Occasionally, however, we are fortunate enough to see the same symptoms recur coincident to the giving of certain foods, so can draw conclusions. The fact that a child may be mildly sensitive to each of several foods, and not react until they are given in combination, adds to the difficulty of diagnosis."

The most effective method for treatment of such conditions, says the Good Housekeeping expert, is a process which eliminates all suspected foods, reintroducing them to the diet one at a time under the guidance of a dietitian. She outlines the findings of Doctors Dale and Thornburg, specialists, who have made a comprehensive study of the problem:

"They feel that the foods which have been found to cause trouble most often should be omitted, such as milk, wheat, eggs, potatoes, chocolate, oranges, tomatoes and other vegetables. This leaves a rather limited choice. They suggest that their exact diets be followed from five to seven days, then one new food at a time be added and the symptoms watched. They state that the only foods which have never been proved to cause this type of trouble are salt, sugar, and gelatin."

Knowledge is the antidote to fear.

Footwear for Spring, Summer, 1930

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Recently several hundred men and women shoe stylists met to discuss trends in footwear for spring and summer, 1930. According to the program voted upon at this conference, here is what you will wear this spring and summer:

First of all, kid leather, "they say," will take the lead for all but evening and the sturdier type of sports shoes. Secondly, for Palm Beach and other southern resort wear, and for summer throughout the country the all-white and the trimmed white kid shoe will be very important.

There are many reasons for this "white" forecast. First, there is no doubt whatever that the suntan mode will be strong as ever in 1930, and nothing goes quite as well with the many suntan tones as white shoes. Footwear of this class will be extremely simple, sometimes with pastel trims restricted to little more than plipps or straps.

For general street, business, shopping and town wear, black was duly stressed; also interesting browns; also tropical tan and suntan beige with nautical and other shades of dark blue. There will be many pastel shades, too, as well as such novelties as aubergine (eggplant), a dahlia range; also greens and reds. The idea is for colorful shoes to carry out the theme of the ever popular costume ensemble.

With the stunning silk print frocks in the picture the hemlines of which are longer, yet not too long to effect and radical change, ensemble shoes give the finishing color touch. With her blue-and-white print crepe dress the young woman standing wears navy pumps. This frock is cleverly styled with a unique jabot drape. The sash is drawn through a slot and ties at the right side, indicating a normal waistline.

Dark red enters into the color-study of the other silk gown and the one-strap shoes are of the same rich hue. For daytime wear one-strap shoes pictured, pumps, tie-effects, oxfords, and even sandals are included in the list of shoes-elect.

In the evening shoes, dyeable fabrics such as moire, satin crepe, and multi-color brocades are sponsored. It has become the custom among women of discriminating taste to buy evening slippers in white or near-white with a view to having them dyed to order.

And now for the climax in the story of color for shoes—it is said that men's shoes are also to be colorful, including dark red, dark blue and dark green.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

If doughnuts crack in cooking, try a little less baking powder in the recipe.

Use paper napkins instead of cheesecloth to strain fat that has been used for frying; it saves laundry.

Light-colored walls and woodwork help to make dark rooms light and they also make rooms appear larger.

Take the children shopping occasionally and give them some of the responsibility of selecting their own clothes.

To foster a love for reading in children, comfortable chairs of suitable size and correctly placed reading lights are great helps.

Furniture placed parallel or at right angles to the walls gives the room a more restful appearance than when rugs or furniture are on diagonal lines.

Something Good for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

May every soul that touches mine, Be it the slightest contact, get there from some good. Some little grace, one kindly thought One aspiration yet unmet, one bit of courage For the darkening sky, one gleam of faith To brave the thickening mists of life. One glimpse of brighter sky beyond the gathering mist. To make this life worth while And heaven a heritage.

—The Outlook.

When one has a can of small beets and would like to change the serving of them, try the following:

Pickled Beets.—Remove the beets from the can and place in a scalded fruit jar. Put enough vinegar to cover the beets in a saucepan and for each cupful of vinegar add one tablespoonful of sugar, two cloves and one-eighth teaspoonful of salt. Simmer until the sugar is dissolved and pour over the beets. Close the jar and let stand for three or four days before serving. Anise seed is liked for flavor by many in place of cloves. If the vinegar is too acid, dilute it with water, to the ordinary acidity.

Deviled Peanut Sandwiches.—Mix one small can of deviled ham with one-third of a cupful of peanut butter, one-fourth cupful of mayonnaise, and a bit of salt. Spread on buttered slices of graham bread and serve with a hot drink of fruit juices or cocoa when the young folks come in from skating.

Swiss Date Sandwiches.—Mix equal quantities of chopped dates and nuts, moisten with mayonnaise. Spread canned swiss cheese on buttered whole wheat bread as thickly as desired, then cover with the date and nut mixture. Cover with a slice of buttered bread.

Orange Poultry Sauce.—Take a teaspoonful of bouillon extract, one cupful of water, to make stock. Season with pepper, paprika, one cupful of orange juice, two oranges, with a few slices of rind. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, cook until creamy, add the stock mixture, stirring all the while. Cook until thickened, remove from the fire and add one-half cupful of white grapes which have been skinned and seeded.

This is excellent with fish, poultry or game.

Rabbit Tastes Like Chicken

Young Domestic Rabbits Deliciously Cooked.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Was it chicken, or was it rabbit? The guests will have a hard time telling, until they examine the shape of the pieces. Your domestic rabbits, cooked in any of the ways young chickens are cooked, are very delicious. They may be eaten throughout the year, as they are not subject to the "open" and "closed" seasons. Domestic rabbits are raised in hutches, under sanitary, clean conditions, and fed rolled cereals, alfalfa hay, and leafy vegetables. The nature of their food makes the meat sweet, tender and excellently flavored.

Just as with poultry or with various cuts of meat, young tender rabbits may be fried or baked, while the older ones require longer, slow cooking. The bureau of home economics has co-operated with the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture in trying different methods of cooking domestic rabbits, and has evolved a number of excellent recipes. Here is one for fried rabbit:

Fried Rabbit.
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup flour
1 young domestic rabbit
Fat

Beat the egg, add the milk and the salt, and stir into the flour to form a smooth batter. Wipe the rabbit with a clean damp cloth and cut into pieces of the right size for serving. Dip each piece of rabbit into this batter and be sure that it is thoroughly coated. In an iron skillet heat well-flavored fat until it is hot enough to set the batter quickly. Brown the pieces of rabbit evenly, then reduce the heat, and cook at a lower temperature for 25 or 30 minutes, or until tender.

To each cup of gravy desired use 2 tablespoonfuls of the fat in which the rabbit was cooked and 1 1/2 tablespoonfuls of flour. Blend thoroughly, add 1 cupful milk. Cook until thickened. Add 1 tablespoonful of chopped parsley, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, and a dash of pepper. Serve around the rabbit or in a separate dish.

Chocolate-Coated Apples

Here's truly wholesome confection that is easily made with materials to be had almost anywhere. Be sure to use firm-fleshed, tart apples for good results. The recipe was originated by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

1 cup sugar
1 cup honey
1/2 cup water
1/2 tsp. salt
3 tart well-flavored apples

Prepare a syrup of the sugar, honey, water and salt by boiling for 2 or 3 minutes. Wash, core and pare the apples, cut into half-moon shaped pieces about half an inch thick, drop into the syrup, and cook rapidly until the apples are transparent and practically all the syrup has been absorbed. Lift onto waxed paper to dry. Cut up into small pieces some of the cake chocolate made especially for dipping candies. Put into a shallow dish over hot water to melt slightly, and stir with the fingers until the whole mass has melted. Dip the pieces of apple into the melted chocolate until well coated and place on waxed paper to dry, which requires only a short time when this method of coating is used. Pack the apple candies in layers between sheets of waxed paper.

to seasoned egg and water, roll in crumbs and pack in a dripping pan in which a little minced salt pork is fried out. Dot with butter or pork bits and brown in a hot oven. Serve garnished with small baking powder biscuits around the platter of meat and pour over a cream gravy made from the fat in the pan with added flour and milk.

Moisten chopped dates with orange juice, add a few chopped nuts and spread on buttered rounds of Boston brown bread. This will please the hungry children.

Movies in Daylight

Enabling the showing of home movies in daylight without darkening the room, and allowing the taking of four pictures in the same space formerly occupied by one, thus reducing the cost of film, a new type of home-movie outfit has been developed, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The cost of film has been reduced about 75 per cent by an apparatus allowing pictures to be taken crosswise, as well as lengthwise, of the camera. The film is of standard width, but gives four vision impressions instead of one in the same space.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Children at the Table

In some homes it is the custom for the children to come to all the regular family meals, no matter how young they are. In others, children are given their meals at their own little table, either before the family eats or at the same time. The plan adopted must largely be determined by circumstances, and it need not be the same for all meals. Whichever way is easiest for the mother and best for the children should be chosen. In homes where the evening meal must be late or the room meal hurried, the children will be better off if served earlier than the rest of the family. When children eat apart from adults there are fewer distractions and usually no questions to be answered about differences between their food and that of the grownups. If questions arise at the family table let the children know that they do not eat the same dishes that grownups eat just as they do not wear the same kind of clothes.

Children are observant, and will imitate what they see adults doing. Choosiness in foods is often the result of imitation. Further, mother, big sister and the rest share alike in their responsibility to set the example of enjoying carrots, spinach, or whatever the menu offers. The fewer the reminders to eat and the better the example set, the greater the result with observant children.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture makes the suggestion that if the china, glass, and eating tools belong to the child personally and are always set out for him, much will be added to the interest of the meal. Have the china gay in pattern, and everything of good shape and weight for little hands to hold. A child's own table and chair will prove more comfortable, usually, than a high chair.

Bibs may be attractive in color and easy to put on. There may be a tray or an oil cloth dolly at the child's place. The table, if possible, should be in a sunshiny room, the food should be good to look at as well as good to eat, and the mother should be calm and unhurried, ready for happy comradeship. The joy of accomplishment is so absorbing that the child who feeds himself seldom becomes a problem at meal time. A beginning can be made as young as 15 months, and with a little patience on the mother's part, over spilled food, and sensible protection of the clothing, the table and floor, the day of independence will soon be reached.

Fruit Juices in Roasts

One way of disposing of left-over fruit juices is in roasts of various kinds. Ham, beef or lamb roasts are much improved when this extra tart flavor is added in the cooking. Unsweetened apple, plum or grape juice adds a pleasing flavor, giving a taste that is different.

The Boy Adventurer and a Big City

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Now the boy adventurer was actually meeting a city. The city was not such as he would read about in a book—but the city had actually taken on the shape of a person and was talking to him.

The city told him she was one of the daughters of the world parents, Mother Earth and Father Atlas. And she told him that her name was London.

He looked at her face. "Yes, she was a good deal older, he should say, than New York, though he had never been any good about ages. But she didn't seem old at all. She looked strong and full of life and full of fun, too, and as though she could tell him so much.

"I can't have you sit on a skyscraper couch as American cities would," London continued, "but I thought maybe you would like my beloved river. You've no idea how much I love this river. Sometimes when I get so busy and so crowded and so hurried as all we cities do, I come down here for a little quiet. There are my parks which I keep so green and fresh but early in the morning and late in the afternoon I like to visit my river. I look over the bridges which go over this river. I think of all the jolly children in the world who have sung 'London Bridge Is Falling Down,' and you know I never minded that song."

"I played that sometimes when I was a kid," David said.

"Yes, I suppose you did," said London, "and when I think that London bridge carries more traffic than any other it does seem a great job. Some might think it a bit insulting but I have always said to myself that if children were having a good time let them have a good time.

"You can see my Parliament buildings from here where they talk about matters very serious such as what should be done about this and what should be done about that, and you know such questions are very hard to answer. So many people have different opinions. But I'm not going to talk about serious matters to you. I love to sit by my beloved Thames and hear the old clock strike. The hours have been piling up for so many years, and for so many years

"Cities Are Kind," Thought David.

I've been listening to them adding on to time, hour by hour, hour by hour.

"I'd like you to visit my home—all around here is my home and I'm only second to New York in the number of people I've welcomed to my heart. At one time I was larger than New York. I'd like you to walk around my streets and I'd like you to see my old buildings and courtyards, and you could visit my zoo if you wished—we cities like zoos. We can't be out in the wilds with our sociable natures, and so we have to have some animals here.

"And I'd like you to think of my people."

London paused, and David said: "You have ever and ever so many people with you, haven't you?"

"Oh yes," said London, "but I should love to have you think not only of the people there are here now, but of the people who at one time or other have walked through my streets, who have come in on strange old ships from strange old lands and who have brought me so much that is odd and different.

"The exciting thing about it is that I never know when one of these people walking through my streets today may become famous, too."

"That's like New York," David said. "She told me how she welcomed people and loved to have them successful."

"Did she, indeed?" said London. "Of course she did! That is what we cities like, and when small towns and country places cannot or do not help people to become famous, who discourage them or laugh at them, we love to feel that they wander to us, and then, quietly, quietly, they begin to show what they can do.

"We let them hide away for a bit. We let them try—and try again. We're not watching them every second to say to them that if they're not immediately successful there isn't much hope for them."

"Cities are kind," David thought, and London seemed to read his thoughts for she smiled and said:

"I'm so glad you think so. Maybe you've heard the humming going on?"

"I heard it when I was coming to talk to you and I noticed it at first when you were talking. Yes, I still can hear it."

More than eighty of our people, mostly members of the Antrim Citizen's Association, attended a supper at Maplehurst Inn last evening, and were well cared for by Landlord Kelley and his able helpers. The success of the affair was due to the ladies' committee: Mrs. Dearborn, Mrs. Tibbetts, Mrs. Daniels. While the most excellent supper was being enjoyed, Alwin Young led the community singing with Mrs. Felker at the piano. The menu consisted of oyster stew, cold ham, salads, scalloped potato, rolls, apple pie, ice cream, ginger ale and coffee. The waiters were obliging and everybody enjoyed themselves. A goodly number remained after supper to enjoy a social hour at bridge and whist.

Returns to the State

The following statement is issued from the office of the State Tax Commission, at Concord, by John G. Marston, Director of Taxation of Interest and Dividends:

The annual distribution of forms in making returns of income from interest and dividends has been completed at the office of the State Tax Commission. To each person reporting any income from intangibles last year, forms duplicate have been mailed. One form to be used in making report to the State Tax Commission, and the other to be used for a copy to be retained by the taxpayer. A supply has also been sent to every bank in the State, and to Town Clerks of every town, and to Assessors' offices in the cities. Taxpayers are urged so far as possible to use forms with their name and number stamped thereon.

Residents of this state are reminded that every person receiving income from interest or dividends is required to file a return with the State Tax Commission not later than March 15, 1930. In case of illness or absence from the state an extension of time will be granted upon application to the office of the Tax Commission. Failure to receive a form does not excuse any person for failure to file return.

NEW CEMENT BRIDGE IN BENNINGTON

Replaces the Old Wooden Covered Bridge Which Was in Use For Practically One Hundred Years

This is a picture of the new cement bridge over the Contocook river, at Bennington, which replaces the covered bridge that did service for about one hundred years. The arch showing so distinctly is the lower side of the bridge next to where was the temporary bridge while the new one was being built. This will be easily recognized by all who have occasion to use this bridge either often or just once in awhile. The approaches from either end are well graded and conditions at this point of travel were never better than they are today. The building of this new cement bridge is one of the best pieces of work that has been done on Route No. 32 since this bridge line was accepted as such by the State. It is wide and solid enough to accommodate and well take care of all modern day traffic.

The contract for the building of this bridge was awarded May 25, 1929, to the Luten Bridge Company, of York, Pa., with offices in Concord, this state, and who had done much work in New Hampshire; the contract price was $25,000.50. It was understood that in ninety days from the time work began the new bridge would be ready for use. The old wooden structure was closed to traffic July 8 and a temporary bridge was ready for traffic.

In the process of construction a quantity of quicksand was encountered which delayed the work considerably and made necessary unforeseen labor and consuming much time. This, however, was overcome and the bridge was practically completed and in use November 20, when the grading up of the road approaches at either end was begun.

In the cost of building the new bridge the town and state shared the expense.

DEERING

Installation exercises of Wolf Hill Grange, originally scheduled for January 4th, took place on Saturday evening, January 11.

Telephone service has been resumed between Deering Centre and the Hillsborough exchange. Extensive repairs were necessitated, as the line was broken in many places.

John Putnam has gone to Schenectady, N. Y., and is enrolled as a student in a school maintained by the General Electric company, in connection with its plant.

Edwina Weaver and Mary Poling have returned to Northfield school, Kenneth Bromage and Ann Louise Poling to New York, and Daniel and Clark Poling to Ohio and Michigan, respectively.

Miss Victorine Trotter of this town is one of a group of girls from Hillsborough and vicinity who have gone to St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will be employed the remainder of the winter.

ON DISPLAY TODAY

THE NEW OAKLAND 8

$1045 AND UP

General Motors' Lowest-Priced Eight . . .
. . . the Car with Superior Performance

Today a new eight-cylinder motor car makes its appearance. It is the newest General Motors eight and by several hundreds of dollars the lowest in price. It is the New Oakland Eight with bodies by Fisher.

The New Oakland Eight develops 85 horsepower and is the first stock car of its size and weight to employ an engine of such high power. Since performance depends largely on the ratio between horsepower and weight, the New Oakland Eight is exceptionally fast and powerful because it produces one horsepower to 37 pounds of car weight.

The New Oakland Eight has all the smoothness which results from the overlapping power impulses inherent in eight-cylinder engine design. In addition, it enjoys exclusive mechanical advantages which make it even smoother and more delightful to drive.

Several of the engineers who participated in creating General Motors' first eight back in 1914 were responsible for the development of the New Oakland Eight. To this latest task they brought a wide knowledge of eight-cylinder design. It is reasonable to expect that the Oakland is a finer eight because of this fact.

A demonstration will reveal how well the New Oakland Eight merits the description "the car with superior performance."

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

NEW SERIES PONTIAC BIG 6

$745 AND UP

A Famous Name—A Finer Car . . .
Introducing Important Improvements

The announcement of the first Pontiac in 1926 brought to the low-price field a new order of beauty, performance and reliability. And each Pontiac announcement since that time has introduced a car which represented an improvement even over its own highly regarded predecessors.

Now comes the New Series Pontiac Big Six—an even finer car with a famous name. It retains all those excellent qualities which have been responsible for Pontiac's success in the past. And in addition it introduces many improvements. New bodies by Fisher make this latest Pontiac Big Six more beautiful than ever.

The smoothness of Pontiac's 60-horsepower engine is further increased by the use of rubber engine mountings. Pontiac's non-squeak four-wheel brakes are now even more efficient. A sloping non-glare windshield adds to its safety. Greater handling ease results from the use of a new type of steering mechanism. Improved Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers give increased riding comfort.

Come to our showroom and see this finer car with a famous name—the New Series Pontiac Big Six.

The New Series Pontiac Big Six, $745 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Shock absorbers standard equipment. Bumpers and spring covers at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values. . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

Monday Urged as Best Day for All Holidays

Workers in retail establishments would share with industrial workers the benefits of an adjustment of our working schedules which I believe will come in the comparatively near future. This will be the celebration of all holidays except Christmas on Monday.

Everyone knows how the fixture of Labor day on Monday increases travel and the indulgence in sports. Whenever the Fourth of July, Memorial day, Columbus day, or any other holiday happens to fall on a Monday, the same phenomenon occurs.

Patriotism and sentiment would suffer no injury if these holidays were always celebrated on the nearest Monday; production would halt less than it does now when a holiday falls in the middle of the week; but consumption would be powerfully stimulated. With Saturday, Sunday and Monday ahead of them, people would really start out to do things.—John J. Raskob in North American Review.

Strict Obedience

When Mary entered an east side grade school, she promised to obey her teacher. A few weeks later her mother was shocked to see her little daughter with a hot water bottle at her feet and a damp cloth on her forehead.

"Why, Mary, are you sick?" asked her anxious mother.

Mary replied, "Teacher told us to always keep our feet warm and our heads cool. Don't you want me to mind my teacher?"—Indianapolis News.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

By James Oliver Curwood

WNU Service (©, 1925, Doubleday Doran & Co., Inc.)

CHAPTER I

This story is going to start like a lesson in geography. This is because it is largely a chronicle of real events in human lives. History, whether of things or people, rests upon the basic necessity of possessing certain aspects of situation which we encompass within the terms of latitude and longitude. The following narrative would quite profoundly miss its real drama if it were to ignore the points of the compass and the manner in which Fate played with them to bring about an unusual combination of ends.

We will begin with Peribonka. Peribonka is a quaint little French-Canadian village which nestles on the shore of the glorious Peribonka river, four miles above Lac St. Jean, in the province of Quebec. It is made up almost entirely of a single row of thirty or forty houses, all of which face the river. Should one adventure a little farther into the wilderness after having made the wonderful Saguenay trip up from Quebec to Ha Ha bay or Chicoutimi and come to know Peribonka for himself, he will understand why the houses are situated with no neighbors or obstructions between them and the river. For the river is a living, breathing, God-sent thing to the French-speaking people of the place, about whose drowsy lives there still remains, like a sweet-scented veil of old lavender lace, the picturesque simplicity of their great-grandfathers of a hundred and fifty years ago.

In contrast to the roaring, passionate Mississippi, fifteen miles away, the Peribonka is peculiarly like the men and women and children who inhabit a few acres of its shores. It has, I believe, given to them much of their character, for of all the people in the habitant country those of Peribonka are the gentlest and most lovable. Even in the dooziness of spring it is not an angry or menacing river, and in winter it is so generally smooth and well frozen that the habitant farmers use it for their horse-and-cutter races, or as a trail by which to come to town. In spite of its great size and the vast forces behind it, the kindness and gentleness of its nature must have made its people what they are. The men are truthful, their morals are right, they believe in God as well as in spirits, they are clean and courteous and hospitable. The women are bright eyed, clear skinned, unrouged, unbobbed, pretty. These people are always looking toward the river, in the evening when they go to bed, in the morning when they get up. They have built their picturesque little church facing it, and the good Father sleeps with his bedroom window opening upon it. The local cemetery occupies an acre of hallowed ground within a hundred feet of the water's edge. A venerable monastery is built at the mouth of it.

Until quite recently the two happiest people in the village of Peribonka were Maria Chappelaine and her husband Samuel. They are still happy, although Samuel is a bit overcast at present because of a financial loss which has come to him. For years Samuel has run his little store and Maria her kitchen, in which she prepares delectable meals for the few transients who come their way, and until this recent time to which I have referred, there is good reason to believe she was the happiest woman in her little world.

Now there is another. They call her the Crippled Lady. She is often seen sitting on the wide veranda of a quaint little home in a garden of flowers just this side of the church. There is a road which completely encircles Lac St. Jean, connecting the villages and farms in its narrow rim of civilization, and during the tourist season occasional automobiles pass through Peribonka. Their occupants always stare at the Crippled Lady if she happens to be on her porch. She is a vision of loveliness which one cannot easily forget. Women talk about her, and men silently bear away a picture of her in their hearts. Her beauty, if one has only a moment's contemplation of it, strikes almost with a shock. It is Slavic—thick, dark, shining hair drawn smoothly back, a face clearly white as a nun's, unforgettable eyes, a slim, beautiful figure in a big chair—and something else. It is that other thing which photographs her so vividly and so permanently upon one's consciousness. Perhaps it is some time before one realizes that what he has seen is not beauty alone but happiness. The Crippled Lady, who cannot walk, who cannot stand alone, is happy, and she covets nothing which God has not already given her. Her voice tells you that.

The people of Peribonka love this charming foreigner, who has made her home among them. The women are not jealous of her. She makes the significance of purity and beauty nearer and more comprehensible for the men. The Church prayed for her when she was very sick. She is of all religions, just loving God, so that even the sternest of the monks in their grim white walls down near the lake speak and think of her tenderly. The children worship her, and the big, wide porch of her home has become a shrine for them. In Peribonka youth still continues to grow up into manhood and womanhood believing with great faith in the visible existence of spirits, both good and bad, and in the varied and frequent manifestations of a divine interest and watchfulness. So the children have come to believe that it was a miracle which sent the Crippled Lady through the doors of death and then brought her safely back again, that she might remain with them always. Even the mothers and fathers believe this, just as surely as they believe it is a sin to steal from one's neighbor or speak falsehood against him. "Thus works the hand of God," the good Father has said. So the Church believes it, too.

They all know her story. And that story is an epic which will live for a long time in the country about Lac St. Jean. I doubt if it will die until the so-called progress of industrially active man thrusts up its grimy hand and laudates it, along with the quaintness and beauty and satisfying nearness to God of living up there.

It is this story I have set out to tell, with a bit of geography to begin with—who the Crippled Lady is and why she is there, how she bravely tried to give up her life for another woman's husband, and why she lives today so happily in Peribonka.

CHAPTER II

It is unusual that an Indian should be born in one of the wealthiest families in New York.

Yet it happened.

A traveler to the city of Brantford, Ont., will find within a few miles of the town a little church built for the Indians by King George the Third, and close about it an old cemetery, in which rests the dust of the last of the great Iroquois warriors and chiefs. In a tomb built of stone, which is green with age and moss, lies Thayendanegea, greatest of all the Mohawks, and more commonly known as Joseph Brant. Readers of the romance, as well as the act of history, may recall the day when Sir William Johnson, the king's right arm in the Colonies, first saw Thayendanegea's sister. He was attending a muster of his county militia when an officer came galloping by with a beautiful Indian girl of sixteen riding laughing behind him. Sir William, whose wife had recently died, caught a vision of lovely dark eyes and of flowing black hair streaming in a cloud behind a form of rare symmetry and grace, and in that moment the heart of the lonely and susceptible widower was smitten so deeply that evening found Molly Brant in Johnson castle, where she remained, thenceforth its mistress and the idol of its proprietor.

Geography and history skip a hundred and thirty-five years after this event until they arrive at the birth of the Indian boy on Fifth avenue.

When James Kirke married Molly Craddock neither thought very much about the strain of Indian blood in Molly's veins, except that Molly was always secretly proud of it. Kirke was not the kind of man to boast of ancestors, or even to think about them, for he had one consuming ambition from the beginning, and that was to pyramid his inherited millions into ever-increasing financial power. He became so completely absorbed in this task that after a few years Molly was left very largely to whatever dreams she may have had of the picturesque and romantic past, and to an absorbing love for her young son, Paul. She told him many of the pretty stories and some of the tragic ones which deeds had written in the lives of their ancestors, and twice she went with him to the ancient burial place near Brantford and sat beside the tomb of Thayendanegea, and tried to make him see as clearly as herself the stirring days when Molly Brant came with tresses flying before Sir William Johnson.

Used to It

The night was dark and the hour late as a solitary wayfarer passed along the deserted street. Was it deserted, though? No!—three slinking figures emerged from the shadows, marked their prey, and then attacked him.

Three to one is powerful odds, but the wayfarer held his own. One by one his assailants landed with a thud on the ground, battered and bruised, their clothing torn.

A policeman hurried up and surveyed the wreckage.

"Fine work!" he said, addressing the hero, who was calmly lighting a cigarette. "Ju-jitsu?"

"No," answered the other. "Railroad porter."—Pearson's Weekly.

Whitman's "Ballyhoo"

Walt Whitman, writes Harvey O'Higgins in Harper's Magazine, at the time his first book of poems appeared, ballyhooed himself, anonymously, in the American Phenological Journal as the "haughtiest of writers that has ever yet written and printed a book." And in the United States and Democratic Review, for the same month of September, 1855, he hailed himself anonymously, as "one of the roughs, large, proud, affectionate, his costume many and free, his face sunburnt and bearded, his postures strong and erect."

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

LOOKING AHEAD

A shopkeeper wanted to give his son a good education to fit him for carrying on the business after he had gone. He interviewed the principal of the school.

"Yes," said the master, "we will do our best, but is there any particular course of study you wish your son to pursue?"

"Well, now you mention it, there is. I notice you teach biology. That would be handy for him, as then he would be able to do all his own buying when he took over the business."

Distrusting Father

"Our youngest son said something very clever today," remarked Mr. Meekton.

"What was it?"

"He won't tell me. His mother has typewritten it and he says he doesn't want to take a chance on having his stuff stolen."—Washington Star.

COVERED THEM

He—Girls used to have curves. She—Yes—and bid 'em.

They Know Everything

Poor Harry starved to death one day because he had no dough; He tried to sell a little book, "What Every Girl Should Know."

Force of Habit

Mother (severely)—Edith! did I see you young Mr. Sotherly stroking your hair on the veranda last night?

Daughter—It's a mere habit with him, mother; he used to stroke on his varsity eight.

Agreed on One Thing

Mrs. Peck—I'd like to see the man who could tell me what I can and can't do.

Henry—So would I and I wish you were his wife instead of mine!—The Pathfinder.

Cause for Thankfulness

"Personally I've derived much benefit from your activities, doctor."

"Is that so? I don't recollect having had you as a patient."

"No, but you treated my dear deceased uncle and I am his inheritor."

WORSE STILL

Mary—She let that fool kiss her. Marie—But worse still, she let that kiss fool her.

Confession

I always lose an argument. But when I get to bed I think of all the clever things I might as well have said.

Good Reason

Bill—Have heard China is progressing a lot. They don't bundle their feet—

Joe—And they don't wear pig tails.

Bill—Wonder why that is?

Joe—On account of the high cost of pork.

Lull Before the Storm

Milds—Your wife seems to be very cheerful and smiling this evening.

Meeks—Yes, altogether too cheerful and smiling. She's got something on her.

The Better Name

"Isn't the man you were talking to a lobbyist?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "He's one of those claps who sell influence they can't deliver. He's no lobbyist. He's a short-change performer."—Washington Star.

No Nagging

"Yes, Dad, I have a chance to embrace a good opportunity."

"Well, be sure she's the kind that won't keep knocking after you've married her."

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

Does Money Always Talk?

"Dad, I think I must be more or less of a rebel. Don't know why I should be. Seems to me most boys are."

"What's the rebellion about now, Bob?" asked Mr. Smith through as he continued with his book. "Who has been treading on your toes now?"

"Well see here, Dad, here is a poor unfortunate duck who was caught stealing coal—had two bags full and he draws two years in the pen. In the same city, is a bank president who defrauds an estate out of fifty thousand dollars. He gets a new trial and will ultimately get off free. It doesn't seem square to me. One man is poor, has no resources of any kind, probably stole for the comfort of a family, not for himself at all and this other educated crook was just adding to his pile, has unlimited resources and can hire the best of legal talent. Dad, the Constitution of the United States promises every man justice, doesn't it? Well, he doesn't get it! It's money that talks, and pull and power. All you've got to have is a pull and you can pull anything—"

"Now wait a minute, son. There you go again—same old mistake. If you keep on you'll hold the world's record for jumping at conclusions. In no other nation in the world since time began has justice for all been as prevalent as in our own country. No doubt about it, sometimes justice moves very, very slowly, but, my boy, justice is also a tremendously involved thing. Scarcely, if ever, are all the facts given to the public and most certainly not in the average newspaper story. This old popular idea that 'money talks' is but another of the innumerable popular beliefs kept alive by the ignorant and radical elements. How many times before has this coal thief been guilty of the same thing or other thefts? Don't know? Likely a dozen or two. His is undoubtedly an aggravated case. It's just unfortunate that he has a family. He, more than likely, never attempts to find honest work—just lives by his wits because it's easier and he has probably gotten by that way a long time. A judge dealing with such cases year in and year out accumulates a vast knowledge and judgment of what is best for society and for the man also. He always braves, in his decision, the public opinion that knows nothing about the merits of the case whatever, yet he stands his ground."

"Bob, did I ever tell you of the time Parson Horton came sailing into the village store, hot all over and excited and shouted to the storekeeper in a loud and angry voice, 'Ben Hetherington, I've been robbed. I bought a paper of nutmegs here yesterday from you sir—been doing business with you these ten years—and when I got home I found 'em more'n half walnuts. Sir, that's just right down crookedness and I ain't agoin' to stand for it. If you can't be honest and square with your customers its high time we did our tradin' elsewhere. I—'

"See here, John," said the proprietor, "if you had taken the trouble to weigh your nutmegs you would have found that I put the walnuts in extra for the kids."

"Oh, you gave them to me, did you?" said the minister somewhat mollified.

"Yes, I threw in a handful for that boy Davie of yours. He's a fine square, straight-shootin' lad."

"Well sir, if you ain't a good one, said the parson, 'and here I've been making an idiot out of myself. Say, just let me have a sack of spuds, a couple of pounds of butter and a peck of onions. I'll stop and weigh things next time."

"And as for 'money talkin'," say, Bob, I just thrill when I recall how Sergeant Yurk, the famous one man army, turned down flat a theatrical offer of one thousand dollars a week for thirty weeks just to do and say what some one told him to say. His answer is typical of the best in America, 'not for sale!'

"At the very heart of our republic is justice as exemplified in our courts. There is always the chance of human error. There are many situations we cannot understand in detail but we must not surrender our loyalty to so fundamental an American institution. When courts of justice fall then civilization crumbles, and there are no such indications, my boy—not in America."

"If you, on the other hand, found yourself in the clutches of the law, you would want, expect and demand that every possible consideration be given you; that every single aspect of your case be carefully considered and I for one am firmly of the belief that you would get justice although your case might involve a long involved legal battle."

"Dad, you sure help me see things different. I wish all the guys could hear you explain things to me. If every fellow's dad would do like you do the bunch would be so much better off."

"Well, it's a pleasure to talk things over with you, Bob. I get quite as much out of it as you do."

"I was three times under an operation and I was very weak and nervous and could not eat. I suffered for ten years. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my husband bought me a bottle. I felt a little better and he bought me two more. I had the Compound in my home for two years and took it all the time. Now I feel strong and can do anything."—Mrs. A. Michalk, 5443 Mitchell Ave., Detroit, Michigan.

Wise Indeed

There is a woman of wisdom down in Wellfleet. Going out for an evening stroll she was accompanied by several pet cats. As she turned back to the house they scampered ahead and one in the group didn't look familiar. When a light was turned on it was found that the extra kitty had broad back and white stripes and had curled itself up in a corner of the room for the night. The woman left Mr. Skunk in possession, likewise left an outside door open, and went upstairs to bed. In the morning the uninvited guest had gone away, leaving no disturbing evidence of its sojourn.—Indianapolis News.

Miffed

"She didn't like my criticism of Fluddub's poetry."

"Can't blame her for that."

"Feh?"

"She's his inspiration."

Bishop Is Defensive Player

EVEN if he is woefully weak in hitting, Max Bishop was the second baseman for the Athletics in their struggle with the Cubs for the world's championship.

Max was not expected to drive in a lot of runs. His batting average last year was away down around the .235 mark but with the host of sluggers to do the hitting, Max can ride with them and do the fielding.

Because of the weak hitting of Bishop, the Cubs had a big edge on the Mackmen at the second base position with Hornsby, the leading hitter of the team matched against the helpless little Philadelphia fellow.

But those who watched the progress of the A's this season declare that the team always performed better when Bishop was at second even if it got little assistance from him in the attack.

Bishop went to the A's in 1924 and has put in all of the last six years with them. At the time he went the team was a helpless truller.

The sporting public may not believe that Connie Mack is wise in his choice of a second baseman, but Mack is old in the game.

Max Bishop.

LARGE CAGERS ON WOLVERINE COURT

Only Four Players Are Less Than Six Feet Tall.

Michigan's basketball team again this season gives observers an opportunity to dub the Wolverines "giants."

Of the 14 men Coach Veenker has retained on his varsity squad only four are less than six feet tall. Six men stand above the six foot mark, while four are an even six feet tall.

If Coach Veenker should pick Norm Daniels, sophomore forward, it is probable that every man on the team will hit the six-foot mark. Capt. Bob Chapman, who jumps center, is the second tallest man on the squad, being 6 feet 2 inches.

Henry Weiss, sophomore forward from Cleveland, is the midget of the squad. He is 5 feet 7, the same as was Danny Rose, star floor guard of last winter.

Twirler Yde Released

to Pacific Coast Club

Emil Yde, who left-handed for the Tigers in moments when stress bore down the regular pitchers, is going away from Detroit.

In fact, Emil already has departed from the pay roll of the Bengals for employment with Hollywood of the Pacific Coast league, from which the Tigers purchased Elias O. Funk, an outfielder.

On his return from New York recently Frank J. Navin made the announcement official. It was believed all along that Yde would not be with the Detroit club next season but until Mr. Navin made known his destination it wasn't certain what club he would serve.

The release of Yde is the first of several that are more or less probable. Phillips, Schuble and possibly Rice, won't be with the club next season. The first two are certain to be let out, while Rice can't miss going if the Detroit management can fool any other club into giving it something for the outfielder.

Sport Notes

Night golf is played on a miniature 18-hole course in Atlanta, Ga.

The Eastern Intercollegiate league of basketball teams is now 32 years old.

Georgetown university will take up boxing for the first time this season. Bucky Green is the coach.

St. Viator and Illinois college, two Illinois schools playing eight football, spent $3,000 on lighting equipment.

Martin Lang, southpaw pitcher, has been purchased from Omaha of the Western league by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Football fans of the United States spend upward of $4,000,000 to see gridiron battles each Saturday during the season.

Penn is the defending champion of the Eastern Intercollegiate basketball league and is out this season to win its third straight title.

Little Rock has bought three players from the White Sox. Taitt, an outfielder; Redfern, infielder, and Barnebee, southpaw pitcher.

Billy Boyd, now with the New York Americans Hockey club, was a Canadian aviator during the World war and the only one of his squadron not shot down.

Several minor leagues are expected to follow the lead of the International in cutting the player limit in an effort to reduce the expense of operating the clubs.

The veteran Pitt basketball team starts the season with hopes high. Charley Hyatt, captain and forward, has scored 594 points in the last two seasons—300 last season.

The Cubs have purchased L. Warneke from the Shreveport club of the Southern association. He is a large lefthander and is said to propel the apple with skill and speed.

The Fordham basketball team has lost only four games in the last three years, one last year to New York university, one the year before to City college and the year before that to Manhattan and Catholic U.

Minor leagues are kicking because the majors grab the college stars direct from the campus. It is estimated that in the last five years nearly $500,000 worth of star talent has been taken with no profit to the minors.

A combined water wagon, temporary ambulance and first-aid station to be used at football games was presented to Ohio State university by Guy Bowman, loyal fan, as a reward to the team for defeating Michigan two years in a row.

Jones at Oregon

Rumors are current that Capt. Biff Jones, West Point football coach, may be approached in connection with the vacant coaching position at the University of Oregon to succeed Capt. John L. McEwan, resigned.

Tilden Is Through

Big Billie Tilden, in the midst of intense training for the French covered courts championships paused long enough to outline his tennis plans for coming campaigns and reiterate that his days of Davis cup play are over. "I will not play Davis cup tennis any more, but I do intend to compete in the French hard court and the Wimbledon championships," Tilden said.

Fame as Gridiron Coach Fails Hanley of Wildcats

A policeman in Wilmette, Ill., arrested Dick Hanley for speeding.

Hanley tried to explain who he was, football coach at Northwestern university, and all that.

"So you're Dick Hanley, eh?" said the policeman. "Well, I'm Knute Rockne. Let's go over to the station house and meet Fielding H. Yost, Dr. Clarence Spears, and the boys."

At the station house Police Chief William Brautigan recognized the coach and released him.

"Humph," snorted the arresting officer, "If Northwestern had gone as fast on the gridiron as their coach did in that automobile, it might have gone somewhere."

Scoring Tells Nothing

Scoring statistics in football carry little significance. Among the leading scorers of the 1929 season there are few players of the first class. There is not more than one who is ranked among the leading backs. And there is not one who has been included on any of the all-American teams of national circulation.

The players who lead in point scoring are nearly always members of minor teams and they pile up their points against weaker opponents.

The leading scorers in the Western conference did not total one-half as many points as the leading scorers in the East and South.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Only the price of learning a simple health rule, this smiling youngster finds!

Schmitt of 2023 Stone Street, Falls City, Nebraska, discovered, which she could give to her baby that made her happy, well, strong and buoyant? Not a medicine; not a drug of any kind; just harmless bodily lubrication. Only that, and nothing more. "Happiness is on the other end of your phone too," says little Barbara take. All it can do is keep you internally clean, and make you continually feel better. Colorless, tasteless as pure water, Nujol will make you see the bright side of life; it will help you to get the most out of your life; it will make you wake up in the morning feeling fit, and help you to do a good day's work with a smile. Millions of people have discovered this fact—why don't you? You can buy Nujol in sealed packages at all drug stores. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Touching the Topics That Are
More or Less Timely

How many New Year resolutions have survived to date?

Wonder if any of the recent fires in Washington have been caused by explosions of hot air in Congress?

Weather prophets who predict a mild winter have apparently been unable to cut down the exodus to the sunny South.

Evidence has been found that man inhabited Western Nebraska 5,000,000 years ago. Do you suppose he had any trouble in making out his income tax return?

All this agitation for a five-day week must sound of little consequence to the man who feels thankful if he can obtain three days' employment out of seven.

Astronomers tell us that in 1930
 there will be two eclipses of the sun and two of the moon. Not to mention the many eclipses of the motion picture stars.

It is said that the U. S. census for 1930 will cost about $40,000,000. This will prove somewhat of an impetus to business, because somebody is going to get those forty millions.

Bootleggers who defy Uncle Sam's Coast Guards are fliriting with death.
 A few shots from the guns of the Guards proved fully as deadly as a few "shots" from the private stock of the bootleggers might have proven.

Within the next 20 years the population of New England will increase by about 2,000,000 according to a forecast by the New England Council.
 This prediction has been made after many months of careful study. As to whether the estimate is correct many of us will never know!

Massachusetts has a frightful toll of automobile accidents. That appears to be obvious, but when it is realized that for every fatal accident in which an automobile is involved nine million miles of travel is represented, the death record does not appear so black.

Can you believe the Weather Bureau expert who declares that from a standpoint of weather the year 1929 was not unusual? Most all of the laymen have felt that the year was abnormally dry. We know that rains were few and far between, and yet we are told conditions were not unusual.

Col Lindbergh prefers to be remembered as "the boy who flew the air mail." But American people prefer to remember him for that especially noteworthy flight to France, and with all the Colonel's innate modesty that trip to Le Bourget remains as an outstanding accomplishment.

During 1930 it is expected there will be a general decrease in the number of sun spots, and a corresponding improvement in radio reception. Here's a new source of trouble which may be blamed if your radio fails to function properly—do not find fault with your tubes or set, undoubtedly it's the sun spots causing all your trouble.

Bald heads may be partially due to poor posture says Dr. Emerson, director of physical training at Boston University. Sounds like a new theory, but there may be something to it. The doctor has prescribed corrective exercises by means of which he has been able to add an inch or two to the stature of each man. Now if he can add longer life to a man's head of hair many of the students will call his name blessed.

General Smuts, an old "war horse" of two major conflicts, declares that war is now a thing of the past. He says that countries will refuse to fight in the future, not because they abhor war, but because of the unspeakable terrors and sufferings which highly specialized war would most certainly inflict on the civilians. Well, whatever the reason advanced for outlawing war, we're thankful for continued peace.

Gov. Frank G. Allen of Massachusetts stands squarely for law enforcement. In his message to the Legislature he said: "The repeal of our State Enforcement Act would be an open invitation and an incentive to violate the law. It would breed and nourish lawlessness—lawlessness which spreads as a contagion to destroy all laws." The Governor of the famous "Law and Order" State realizes that order is impossible without enforcement of law.

Boston Globe: "In the opinion of Charles E. Thompson, the automobile a few years hence, will be equipped with four-wheel transmission; the motor will be located in the center of the car, probably under the front seat, and vibration will be eliminated completely by insulating the motor from the body of the car. Do you remember the days some 25 years ago when men hesitated to buy automobiles because they preferred to wait until the machines were perfected?
 And a few are still waiting!

State Bank Notes
 No state banks now issue notes.
 There is no federal law against it, and there remain laws in many states under which it would be possible; but congress has effectually disposed of such currency by imposing a 10 per cent tax upon it.

Electricity in Air
 In clear weather the atmosphere is almost invariably charged with positive electricity; in cloudy or rainy weather the conditions may change with the greatest rapidity from positive to negative.

Why Does He Do It
 The purse-snatcher who takes handbags away from women must have a woeful lack of information on what women carry in those things. Either that, or else he is starting a curio museum.

Jefferson Davis Memorial
 The Jefferson Davis monument is 351 feet high. It stands near the spot where Davis was born in Christian county, Kentucky. In design it is, quite similar to the Washington monument.

 same general race of mankind as the

The Dance of Life
 By LEETE STONE
 (Copyright)

A LICE JOCELYN left Highville for Broadway because Jim Riley was not a thrilling lover. Jim owned and ran the general store and he worked all day in khaki trousers and blue chambray shirt minus a necktie. Evenings he took Alice to enjoy the "talkies."

Jim was far from dashing; he was just adoring, and very solid and substantial both physically and financially. All of which counted next to nothing to Alice Jocelyn. She was romantic and she craved contact with the glamor of Broadway and its glossy-haired shels. Alice was a good girl;
 a very pretty girl; but she knew too little of life to speculate on the qualities that may lie beneath a gilded and a grubby exterior.

So Alice became a figure in the dance of life called Broadway. She left home with both a blessing and a bonus from solicitous parents, to say nothing of the inarticulate appeal in Jim's eyes.

Alice had decided to become a show girl in a musical hit; nothing less.
 She danced a number of tricky steps and danced them well. Her figure had all the attributes of beauty prize material. And she possessed confidence and temerity.

While pounding Broadway pavements peddling her talent and naive charm to casting officials of the theater, Alice met a narrow-shouldered young man. His necktie and eyes seemed to meet all her visioned requirements of Flaming Youth, and his approach was deft, disarming and courteous. After shelving the weather with a crisp phrase he dropped the momentous information that he himself, Gene Ransome, one of the cleverest dancers that ever tapped an agile toe and heel to a talcumed stage, was at liberty. Gene cordially suggested that they make the rounds together that afternoon. Alice gratefully agreed.

This casual touch widened into warm friendship. As their funds dwindled their attachment grew.

Proximity did an excellent job.
 The boy and girl finally vowed that unless both could secure an engagement in the same company they would face lean days together. The fact that Gene suggested this convinced Alice that love at last had found its winged way to her.

Young girls have a way of weaving dreams from the casual words of careless Romeos. When experience has turned them into women they link their filmy and starry stuff to surer signs.

Being all things winsome and desirable, but not a philosopher, Alice took Gene's socks and handkerchiefs home to her lonely hall bedroom at night and washed them out before she did her own. Gene accomplished his share of the mutual retrenchments by borrowing coffee and cake money from his friends.

At last the big "break." It fell on a raw November morning when Alice and Gene, sped by a tip that was spreading up the street, slipped by a sullen doorman backstage and made their plea to George Ramsay, a musical director of note, who was at that moment rehearsing the Chicago company of a New York success. The aspiring pair impressed him favorably and were engaged at once for the chorus.

From that moment it seemed plain sailing with all clear ahead for Gene and Alice. Their favored topic of conversation when alone concerned their costumes for a call at the Little Church Around the Corner. Two rehearsal weeks had flown when the director called them both to his table and inquired:

"Are you two kids in love?"
 Alice remained silent and Gene but Gene showed his perfect teeth in a winning smile.

"And how!" was his answer.
 "Well then, I'm sorry," the director calmly eyed them, "but one of you will have to quit the show. Grace and Godwin, the producers, don't favor love affairs in the chorus—makes trouble. Battle it out between you and let me know in the morning."

Creastfallen and wordless Alice and Gene went to their respective rooms and moped out the day. Alice expected Gene to rush over and say,
 "Buck up, girlie; we'll both quit an' land another job." But Gene did not come near her all afternoon or evening.

The chorus had commenced reheating next morning when Alice greeted the doorman at the stage entrance.
 He knew the lovers now.
 "Has Gene come in?" she asked.
 "He's in there rehearsing!" was the laconic response.

"So this is love!" was the way a lip reader would have translated Alice's answer. The doorman, blind to the motion of lips, resumed his morning paper. Alice went back to her room.

All afternoon and half the night she sat and pondered Broadway's answer to her aircastle. On delicate retrospective, balances she weighed sleek hair and tousel; silk shirts and chambray; eating and going without.
 Alice decided to have a different dance.

At 1:00 a. m. she went to an all-night telegraph office nearby and sent a message that read:
 "Jim Riley, Highville, Mass.: 'Come and get me, Jim. I'll even sweep out the store for you. Alice'"
