HAPPENINGS AROUND AND ABOUT

Mostly Concerning Matters in the State, and Some Other Things Our Readers May be Interested In

Ernest W. Butterfield, New Hampshire commissioner of education, has resigned his position in this state and accepted a like position in Connecticut. He has been associated with the administration of the state Department of Education for 15 years.

Its name derived from a Latin word meaning "to open," April is one of the loveliest months of the year. It is the time of opening buds.

It is really surprising how many people who should know better, persist in speaking of Mt. Crooked—dearly beloved by so many in this section—as if the last letter in the word was f.

Automobile registrations for 1930 have passed the 76,000 mark and are a fortnight ahead of the records of a year ago. The first of April is expected to begin another rush period in the issuance of numbers.

No, you cannot trap rabbits or hares in any kind of a trap. Rabbits are not fur bearing animals and must be only taken by a gun at arm's length. This may surprise some of the readers of this column, but it's there in the law book just the same.—Proctor, in Sportsman's Column.

Pictured as a "Pole Sitter—Still Sitting," a cartoon in the Ohio State Journal shows the Volstead Law being storm-torn on every side with votes, pro and con, as indicated by the title, still sitting. Here is the sort of pole-sitting endurance test that not only will win considerable favor, but will actually outlast the poll.

Dr. J. Kirkwood Craig, D.D., general secretary of the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mrs. Craig sailed April 5 from New York for a trip to the Holy Land. Near East, Italy, Switzerland, the Passion Play, Germany, and France. Dr. Craig is a member of the New Hampshire Methodist Conference, and was stationed at Milford for a time. When he was a student at Boston University he occupied for awhile the Congregational pulpit at Antrim Center.

On Friday, March 28, Dr. Oliver S. Baketel completed sixty years in the effective relation as a Methodist preacher. He is still a member of the New Hampshire Conference, and will be remembered by some of our people as a former Presiding Elder in charge of the Methodist churches in this part of the state. While he is soon to retire from the editorship of the Methodist Year Book and the General Minutes, he will remain in the effective relation as librarian of the Methodist Historical Society of New York. With Mrs. Baketel, the Doctor resides in Maplewood, New Jersey.

An ordinance has been adopted at Athens, Georgia, that makes it illegal for anyone to solicit an automobile ride within the city limits, and it's backed by a $25 penalty. Any speech, motion or gesture to an autoist for a ride will be considered a violation.

According to published statistics of research committees, the stork is most likely to arrive at 1 a. m., and the death angel at 3.30 a. m.

The ban was lifted on Route 32, or the Contoocook Valley Trunk Line, on Saturday last, when a number of other state aid and trunk line roads were relieved of state restrictions.

The state highway department is issuing a new map, designed primarily for the use of tourists, which, in addition to the map proper, contains information on camp grounds, suggested tours, automobile registration rules and tables of distances.

The law is off trout April 15. There is evidence that the fishing is going to be good this season. The brooks were clear of ice much earlier than usual. More small trout have been planted in the past year than ever before. They have been big, healthy fish. Every indication points to a favorable season.

The unusual suit case in Tilton, this state, brought to recover $10,000 against Tilton School and Headmaster Watkins, by Mrs. M. A. Tabor, who alleges that her son, John, suffered injured feelings as a result of a dispute in regard to his attending school, will be watched with more or less interest. The case appears to be one of legal residence in the town.

To know exactly what the roads are in the outskirts of the town, the first of April is a fine time for the Assessors—who are also the Selectmen—to be roaming around in different parts of the town. Most likely there would arise occasions where residents or travelers in some particular section would take it upon themselves to mention to those guardians some facts relating to the highways and byways outside the village.

Samuel H. Mildram, engineer and rate expert, of Boston, has been retained by the state public service commission to make an inquiry into the utility rate structure of New Hampshire. It has been learned. Mr. Mildram, well known for his work in the Worcester, Mass., rate case, will complete a preliminary survey in about 10 days, it is said. For the present attention will be concentrated on electric utilities. At a recent town meeting day two communities, Conway and Jackson, unanimously voted to petition for reduction to electric power rates.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE CONCORD Executive Chamber

May Day — National Child Health Day

The first day of May having been designated by the Congress of the United States as National Child Health Day, it becomes my official duty, as well as a personal privilege which gives me pleasure, to call upon the people of New Hampshire to join heartily and usefully in this dedication of one day upon the calendar to the welfare—physical, mental, moral and spiritual—of the children of our country.

The advance of the seasons, with its blossoming of new life upon every hand, its renewal of joy in living and of strength and desire for living to some worthy purpose, makes it appropriate that May Day should be set apart for formal recognition of our duty to youth and for planning further progress in that program of child health and happiness upon which New Hampshire already has accomplished much.

Let us all assist to the full measure of our ability in this good work.

For The Antrim Reporter,
by Potter Spaulding

Time paused one day and lingered
In a corner of our land.
To view the work of Mother Nature,
In grandeur spread on every hand.
New Hampshire, Nature's workshop!
The panorama state!
Time lingers there contented,
And "dreams come true" for men await!
Summer's joys are longer,
The Autumn days are rare!
Friendship's ties are stronger!
Life at its best is there!

Met at the home of Mrs. W. A. Nichols on April 4. Mrs. Cochran and Mrs. Muzzey assisted in entertaining the 24 members who were present. A paper on "Making New Citizens," written by Mrs. Harriman, was read by Mrs. Butterfield. A piano solo, by Mrs. Muzzey, and a reading by Mrs. Lang, completed the program. A social hour and refreshments followed.

Dewey Flagship to Be a National Shrine

The Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship during the Spanish-American war, shown above as she rests in the Philadelphia navy yard, is almost certainly to be preserved. The house naval affairs committee approved a bill authorizing the expenditure of $25,000 for reconditioning the vessel and taking her to Washington where she will be a national shrine.

'Tree Man' Keeps Secret 25 Years

Lives in Suspended Iron Tank, Gets No Mail and Seldom Talks.

Horatio, Ark.—"My past is buried, ask no questions!" For a quarter of a century these curt words have been the only reply of "the tree man of Horatio" to all who have sought to penetrate the wall of mystery he has raised about himself. So successful has been the recluse in veiling his past that few persons ever question him now, and in fact only a few residents of this little town know of his existence.

It was a bitter cold night more than 25 years ago when, a few minutes after the night train south had made its brief pause here, a middle-aged man walked into the small hotel and asked for a room. "Just call me Fred Brown," he replied in a German accent to questions as to his identity.

The hotel proprietor soon discovered that Brown had placed a secret lock on his door. The eccentricities of the stranger continued to arouse the curiosity of the landlord. He investigated. Finally he discovered a small iron ring at the base of the hall opposite Brown's room. A pull on the ring released the secret lock on the inside of the stranger's door, but the sudden arrival of Brown cut short any exploration by the hotel man, and a few minutes later the mystery man checked out.

Lives in Tree.

A few days later, Brown requisitioned a huge cast-off iron tank along the railroad right-of-way, rolled it about a hundred yards away and "squatted" on land owned by Tom Green of Horatio. There he remains to this day.

Cutting the ends from the old tank and then hinging them as doors, Brown swung the contrivance high up in a large tree. In the tank, he established his home, becoming known as the "tree man." A rope ladder furnishes means of reaching the aerial house, and as soon as Brown is perched in his swinging home, the ladder is pulled up. A large piece of tin securely fastened to the trunk of the tree prevents anyone climbing up without arousing the tree dweller. In winter Brown closes the doors of his home, while they are allowed to swing open in warm weather. For many years the tank was the only abode of the recluse, but recently he has built a six-foot square shack without windows which he occupies on some of the coldest nights. Another shack houses a few chickens and furnishes storage for food supplies which he grows on about an acre of ground that he has fenced off from the owner's estate.

Only one man, O. T. Brinkley, Horatio storekeeper, is on intimate terms with Brown, and he has never been able to delve into the recluse's past. Brown has worked on Brinkley's farm at times for the last 20 years, and makes all his purchases from his employer's store.

More than 20 years ago Brown purchased a suitcase from Brinkley and returned the next day with it packed and asked Brinkley to allow him to leave it in the store. The suitcase remains in the store today. On rare occasions Brown comes into the store, opens the suitcase, takes or leaves some article and then departs. No other person has ever seen the contents, says Brinkley.

Sells Vegetables.

The recluse grows a small amount of vegetables on his plot of ground, which he sells through the Brinkley store. He comes into town about once a week, but always after dark. From his garden and a few chickens he derives most of his necessities.

Last summer he complained that some one was stealing his chickens, and in order to thwart further raids on his fowls he nailed a long pole upright on the gate of his chicken yard. On the top of the pole he fastened a white flag and, while working in fields nearby, he kept his eye on the white cloth. Any movement of the cloth denoted the opening of the gate. Theft of his chickens ceased, he said.

Several weeks ago Brown was summoned to De Queen to court as a witness in a minor case which originated in the vicinity of his place. He ignored the court order and a deputy sheriff was sent for him. When brought into the courtroom, Brown vehemently expressed his opinion of all courts in general and the Sevier county tribunal in particular. The judge sentenced him to jail for contempt, but he was allowed to depart after a few days. While Brown was in jail Sheriff Roy Hooper made intensive inquiries in the North and East but could obtain no information on the recluse.

So far as is known Brown has never received any mail through the post office here and he never reads, although he apparently has a good education. He now appears to be about sixty years old and is in the best of health.

Mentions "Mounties."

"One day while I was talking to him he mentioned having been with the mounted police in Canada, but when I tried to continue the trend of the conversation, he departed suddenly and it was several weeks before I saw him again," says Brinkley, the storekeeper. So far as anyone here knows, that is the only time the recluse has ever mentioned any incident in his past. He appears to be an expert naturalist, and will talk for hours about trees and birds, but only of those in this section. Brown is violently opposed to photographers and the only pictures ever made of him have been taken while he was caught off guard and with the cameraman running the risk of having a chunk of wood or some other object hurled at his head.

"Brown, as he chooses to call himself, may be a titled European who fell into disgrace, he may be a man disappointed in love, or a number of other things, but I will never believe him a fugitive from justice," declares Brinkley, his closest friend. "Apparently, he is a man who wants to be let alone to live his life as he sees fit, and I hardly believe anyone here will ever interfere with him, for they haven't during a quarter of a century. He is getting along in years now, but is robust from his outdoor existence. He may live many more years, but my guess is that he will take his life's secret to his grave."

beautiful new American Legion building, which is only a stone's throw from the embassy where Herrick died.

Herrick's untiring work in founding and improving the American hospital in Paris commemorated by a Herrick ward, which, although it was intended to honor the memory of Mrs. Herrick, who worked herself to death nursing soldiers in the hospital during the war, is also a monument to the generosity of the ambassador.

Without a doubt Benjamin Franklin and Myron T. Herrick were the most beloved American ambassadors who ever served in France.

Small Towns to Become Centers of Industry

Not long ago the nation was stirred by the drift of population away from farms and rural areas into the great cities. Young men, attracted by the high wages paid by industry and what appeared to be the superior social and economic advantages of urban life, deserted the soil for the city.

In the past quarter-century rural America has made tremendous progress. Better schools, good roads, the automobile, telephone and radio have created a rural civilization greater than any in history.

Industrialists, attracted by such factors as lack of labor difficulties, low taxes and uncongested, pleasant living and working conditions, were barred from entry into the small town only because of lack of power.

Now, according to authorities, the smaller towns are on the road to industrial leadership of America and the countryside is staged for the next scene of our industrial progress. The drift of population has turned. At present the only pronounced gain in industrial wage earners is taking place in the country.

It is safe to say that many towns which are almost unknown today will be the great industrial centers of the future. The industrial revolution of the Eighteenth century apparently doomed rural progress—now the electric revolution of the Twentieth is reversing the process. — Longview (Wash.) Daily News.

Extensive Survey of North Carolina Roads

Reports from various fronts in the battle to reclaim and preserve our roadside beauties are constantly being received by the American Nature association.

One of the most interesting developments is the inauguration of a demonstration survey by the National Council for the Protection of Roadside. This is the new name of the organization previously known as the National Committee for the Restriction of Outdoor Advertising, through which more than one hundred organizations joined to work in this common effort.

North Carolina has been selected as the state for the survey, particularly on account of the progressive attitude of the highway department of the state, which has been doing effective work in roadside planting and beautification. The survey will be thorough and cover the entire state. Each highway of importance will be covered, mile by mile, and extensively photographed. A complete consideration will be given to the various phases of North Carolina's particular problem and a full report with recommendations will be made and published as a part of the demonstration. At least two months will be devoted to the study.

Renovate Where Possible

In some cases it might be necessary to raze an existing building in view of the fallacy of the belief that all that is old is good. In other cases it would be folly to do so because sometimes additional structural features and an architectural treatment are all that would be necessary to achieve a fine result. There lurk in some of our shabby streets, possibilities for the finest of banks, theaters, stores and office buildings, multiple garages, professional buildings, and great beauty—in fact, all those elements contributory to civic excellence with which the architect conscientiously concerns himself and which, in conjunction with city planning he eventually bring about.—Exchange.

Think Before Buying

Some things are essential in the selection of the place where you are going to have your home. Think of transportation, churches, schools and your neighbors. When you have decided to buy a lot or a home already built, buy it not for speculation or resale but for the specific purpose of owning a home. Let the idea of a home be the dominant thought. That will make it a safer purchase and bring greater assurance of happiness rather than grief.

A two-apartment building is sometimes a safer and more conservative home than the proverbial bungalow.

Rubbish Pile a Menace

Sixty per cent of all persons burned to death met this tragic end in their homes. Approximately one-half of this number are children less than ten years of age.

The majority of dwelling-house fires have their origin in cellars, attics and closets. Rubbish accumulation is generally the cause. Experience has demonstrated the fact that periodic and systematic inspection of all buildings for the elimination of fire and health dangers has materially improved the general outlook and safety of communities.

Drab Roof Departs

The day of the drab roof is gone—the roof that simply shuts out the rain and weather. True, the roof of a home must give protection against the elements. It must last. But as one of the most prominent architectural features of the home, the roof should also add much to its beauty.

France in America

View of Point a Pitre, Island of Guadeloupe.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

FRANCE'S far-flung colonial empire was advanced at the London conference for the limitation of naval armaments as a reason for a large French navy. The vast area that France once owned in the Western hemisphere has shrunk while her possessions in Asia and Africa have greatly expanded. But even in the Americas the French flag still flies at a number of scattered points.

France's farthest north territory in America, the Miquelon island group off the southern shore of Newfoundland, is little known. Even this tiny parish of granite-ribbed, fog-shrouded islets that recalls the rich empire of New France has had a stormy time of it remaining under the French flag.

It had been captured from France by Great Britain before Wolfe's victory at Quebec marked the beginning of the end of French control in Canada; and when the defeated nation ceded its vast areas to Britain, the latter gave back the Miquelons as a sort of "consolation prize." The little islands were to serve as a base on this side of the Atlantic for the French fishermen who had built up an important industry on the Newfoundland banks, as had the British themselves. The unsettled status of the islands continued, however, and between 1763 and 1815 they changed hands half a dozen times, sometimes being depopulated. Since 1815 France has held undisputed control.

St. Pierre, the capital and chief port of the islands, became very prosperous as a result of the thriving French fisheries, and in 1884 it was the leading fishing port of the world. There were handsome homes in the little town and a social life that made St. Pierre a miniature Paris. But the Miquelons' prosperity and gaiety were cut short by a pro-sec factor—bait. Affairs of empire in 1904 moved statesmen in Paris to sell the French treaty rights to catch small fish on the Newfoundland coast for some millions of francs and territory in Africa. The Newfoundland fishermen had been jealous of their French rivals on the banks, especially since a generous government subsidy enabled the French to undersell all competitors in the principal world markets. Newfoundland soon passed the "Bait Act" which prohibited the sale of bait to ships of aliens, and from that time the prosperity of the islands has waned.

Miquelon Islands Now of Small Value.

St. Pierre is now only a gray little village with a past but no apparent future. A quarter of the houses are vacant, and the quays, once thronged with vessels whose yard-arms interlocked, now have but a sprinkling of ships, even at the height of the fishing season. When bait was plentiful St. Pierre was a real base of operations. Now the decimated French fishing fleet operates from France, putting in at St. Pierre only incidentally. Economically these last of France's North American possessions amount to little; but France values them for the same reason that Great Britain has valued Newfoundland: as a field for the training of seamen, and therefore as a strengthener of her navy.

The Miquelon archipelago consists of Grand Miquelon, some twelve miles long by six wide, Petite Miquelon or Longlade, a trifle smaller, and St. Pierre, only seven miles by two. In addition there are a number of tiny rocky islets of little importance. St. Pierre, though the smallest of the three major islands, has always been the center of population because of its harbor. In the days of its prosperity the town had 6,000 residents and 10,000 additional Frenchmen sometimes thronged its streets during the fishing season. Now the village never sees more than 3,000 people at any time. Many of its discouraged residents have emigrated to the United States.

What was long the only French cable to the New world emerges from the Atlantic at St. Pierre and then continues from that station to the Massachusetts coast. But even as a news door to America the Miquelons no longer seem essential. Since 1898 a second French cable has stretched directly from France to the United States.

A political detail is eloquent of the changed status of the Miquelons. At St. Pierre is the "governor's residence." But no governor now graces it. In these, the days of their decadence, the affairs of the Miquelons are attended to by an "administrator."

Almost due south 1,500 miles are

France's next American possessions, islands at the eastern edge of the Caribbean sea. Guadeloupe is the largest of the Lesser Antilles. This island group has suffered many natural calamities.

France in the West Indies.

To the visitor going ashore, Point a Pitre, the commercial capital of Guadeloupe, does not look like a town prepared for the worst. But it always is. Point a Pitre is prepared, and Basse Terre, the capital, and all Guadeloupe is prepared for hurricanes, earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. Its preparedness is to be seen principally in the construction of its houses. When a news story says that suburbs of Point a Pitre have been laid flat, it gives more worry to the outside world, probably, than to the Guadeloupians. Frequent experience with hurricanes has taught them to build with light wood. Let the wind blow their houses down. This type of house can be built quickly and cheaply.

Guadeloupe, with its nearby islands, Marie Galante, named for a Spanish flagship; Desirade, named because it was the desired island sighted by Columbus; and the Saints, comprise an area half as large as our smallest state, Rhode Island. All year around the natives enjoy the perfection of a tropical sea climate; all the year except when a hurricane bursts out of the east.

Two shipping lines connect Guadeloupe to France. The island people are proud of France. They copy her sidewalk cafes and her food; they cling to a French patois; three thousand of them marched to Moscow with Napoleon; and many of them served under the Tricolor in the World war.

By travelers, however Guadeloupe is remembered chiefly for her portences, her swizzles and for oeah.

The swizzle is a drink made of ingredients produced by the islands—Guadeloupe rum added to crushed limes, ice and a little sirup. The concoction is whipped into a froth and sipped at the end of each sentence during a leisurely conversation.

Oeah, on the other hand, is something that does not exist. Almost no one can be found who will admit he believes in it, yet many do. Oeah is a charm; it is black magic, allied to the practices of voodoo worship. In the past sudden and unaccountable deaths have been charged to the oeah "doctors" so the government and church authorities have tried strenuously to eliminate this pagan custom brought from Africa. Advice sometimes is given to strangers that in a crisis they can escape any difficulties with the natives by shouting an oeah curse which will make them scatter like chaff in a hurricane.

Fame of Martinique.

Farther south, beyond the British island of Dominica, lies perhaps the most famous of French American possessions, Martinique, island birthplace of Empress Josephine. The island has an area of 385 square miles, much of it mountainous. The population is about 250,000 and is therefore very dense—much greater in the inhabited portions than the indicated average of 649 to the square mile.

Martinique suffered a great tragedy in 1902 when its famous volcano, Mt. Pelee, erupted and totally destroyed the nearby city of St. Pierre with a loss of 40,000 lives. There was even a suggestion that the whole of Martinique be abandoned; but only one-tenth of the area was devastated, and the island is now more prosperous than before, while the population has increased from 182,000 to 250,000. St. Pierre, which was the metropolis and most beautiful town on the island, has never been rebuilt. Fort de France, the capital, has grown rapidly since the catastrophe and is now a city of more than 40,000 inhabitants.

The southernmost of France's American territories is French Guiana on the mainland of South America. This, too, is the most extensive patch of French land in the Western hemisphere, embracing 84,740 square miles. The area of the colony is thus slightly greater than that of Maine or South Carolina. In this extensive region there are less than 50,000 inhabitants (exclusive of native tribes) and about one-third of the 80,000 live in the chief town, Cayenne. French Guiana is, on the whole, hot and moist, and large areas are covered with dense forests. The colony is best known, perhaps, because of its off-shore penal colony, Devil's island, to which France sends her most hardened and notorious criminals.

FRANCE PLACES HERRICK ON PAR WITH FRANKLIN

American Ambassador's Life Work Wins Highest Praise of Parisians.

Paris.—Four spontaneous movements among French and Americans to honor the memory of the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland will make the Ohioan diplomat rank with Benjamin Franklin as the most honored diplomat the United States has ever sent to France.

The first honor was the decision of the city of Paris to name one of its most beautiful avenues Myron Herrick, the only American ambassador or minister, with the exception of Franklin, who has been so honored. There are streets for Presidents Wilson, Washington and Lincoln.

The American and French admirers of Ambassador Herrick have started a fund for the erection of a statue near or at the beginning of the new Avenue

Myron Herrick. Agate Benjamin Franklin is the only other American diplomat who has a statue in Paris. Ambassador Herrick's friends in Cleveland subscribed $40,000 for the equipment of a Herrick hall in the

The Crippled Lady Of Peribonka

By James Oliver Curwood

W.N.U. Service

Copyright, 1927, By Doubleday Doran and Co. Inc.

STORY FROM THE START

Introducing some of the people of the pretty little French-Canadian village of Peribonka, particularly the Crippled Lady, idol of the simple inhabitants. Paul Kirke is a descendant of a sister of Molly Brant, sister of Joseph Brant, great Indian chief. He has inherited many Indian characteristics. His father is a powerful New York financier. Paul marries Claire Durand, daughter of his father's partner. He is in charge of engineering work near Peribonka. Paul's wife is in Europe. She dislikes the woods. Paul becomes interested in Carla, village teacher. Paul writes his wife to join him. Carla's mother, long an invalid, dies. Claire announces her intention of joining Paul on the Mistassini. She writes a letter of sympathy to Carla. Paul becomes aware of a guilt between him and his wife. Paul, Claire, Carla and two friends make up a luncheon party to visit the "Big Gorge" of the Mistassini. Paul and Carla carry a large log to the edge of the rushing water.

CHAPTER VII

"I've a notion to ride this log through the gorge!" exclaimed Lucy-Belle. "I want to know what is under and between those walls which you say no one has ever explored. (Oh, What do you suppose can be there?"

"An inferno of devils, I imagine," replied her husband.

"Possibly not. Fairies might live there," suggested Claire.

"A black and sunless place where lovely water maids without eyes frolic in the darkness," added Paul.

"Or a kingdom of Micomicon, where dreams are made and sent out into the world," said Carla.

Derwent was preparing his end of the log for a final heave. "I insist it is a place of devils and death. Still, like Lucy-Belle, I'd like to see what's there. After all, it's fifty million years of mystery! Are you ready, Paul?"

"Ready!"

The log pitched down, and as it went the end of it swung like a living thing and struck Paul. Even before the blow—in the lightning flash of time when eyes behind could see it sweeping upon him—a sudden scream filled his consciousness, and as the timber caught him he saw it was Claire whose cry had tried to warn him. Then he was over. With photographic clearness his eyes beheld his fate. The water seemed to reach up and catch him on its oily breast, and for a brief instant after this there was a sensation not unpleasant about its hold. For some unaccountable reason he felt no sense of fear or terror even when forces that were irresistible but gentle pulled him down. He knew it was death, the death they had played with and lightly talked about, yet its presence closing about him did not rob his mind of its vision and judgment, nor frighten him into senseless wrestling with it. He would come up again, alive, near the jagged tooth of rock; after that would be his end, and in such an hour as this seconds became eternities of life. His wife, Carla, Lucy-Belle, and Derwent were still nearer to him than the final stroke of death; he would see them, especially Claire and Carla, when he looked back in those few moments of grace which the monster of the undertows would give him. These two, and the supreme faith which had wrought a comradeship between him and all the forces of Nature, gave him, instinctively and without effort, the courage not to be afraid.

The undercurrent's indraughts and refluxes carried him with a quiet and deliberate leisureliness, which gave him no physical discomfort except that of holding his breath. Yet they were so powerful, so utterly sure in their grip, that when he made an experimental effort to reach the surface it was as if he were struggling against a wooden wall. To save the air in his lungs he restrained himself from further exertion, and when at last he came up near the rock, and felt fresh air in his face, he had suffered no greater inconvenience than if he had taken a long dive. His first thought was of the log, his second of the granite snag. Against this, after a moment, he felt himself being slowly lifted, and throwing out his hands he was thrilled by the fibrous, slimy touch of a rope-like substance which had gathered thickly about it just under the surface of the water. River weeds and flag had wrapped themselves in a tough belt about the rock, and so firmly had they attached themselves to it that he knew they would, for a time at least, hold up his weight from the sucking undertow which was already beginning to drag at his limbs.

He looked toward the cliff and raised one hand to wave at the four who stood there. With the distance, and the water in his eyes, he could not make out which was Claire or Carla or Lucy-Belle. But something told him it was his wife who stood nearest to the edge, with her arms reaching out toward him.

And then, on the cliff, one woman said to another: "Are you going with him?"

The woman spoke to gazed wide-eyed—motionless—voiceless—and after a moment of tense waiting the other said: "Then—I am!"

CHAPTER VIII

Paul saw the swift, deliberate plunge through space of the slim body, which, in the uncertainty of his vision, an instinctive and positive impulse told him was Claire's. A woman's piercing cry came from the cliff, but no responsive echo of horror escaped his own lips, no sound, not an articulate gasp as the figure struck the water and disappeared. An appalling and devastating weakness seized upon him, a deadly sickness of shock, a thing that loosened the grip of his fingers from the clinging belt of weeds and made him limply impotent against the dragging force of the undertow. For an instant his brain reeled in darkness. He began to go down, easily and slowly, as if the cruel and murderous hands below were fearful of arousing the inertness to which he had momentarily succumbed. Then water struck into his face and startled him. Heart and brain leaped in response to its warning, and he thrust up wildly and caught the weeds again. They hung closely to the rock, allowing him to drag his body up until his shoulders were out of water once more. He heard Derwent shout, as if from a mile away, but he paid no attention to the cry, nor did he look toward the cliff. The thought in his mind was that Claire would be with him in another moment or two. She would come to the surface near the rock, and he must be ready to seize and hold her with him until the weeds gave way—or a miracle happened.

Five or six feet from him, where the water was like a pool of oil that had no motion, a little disturbance suddenly flecked its surface—a change of light, a drifting up of something intangible and shadowy, a nebulous blotch which changed under his eyes to substance, a floating mass of hair. The sun was shining, the water was almost black, but there was no glint of gold in what he saw. The hair was dark. Carla's face became a part of it in a moment. It seemed to him that the monsters who lived about the rock held her up for him, with a smile on her lips and in her eyes, her face toward him and her arms reaching out. He was half in a daze, and might have fancied some of the things he saw. But Carla was there. She, not his wife, had come to join him in death. The quiet, terrible drama of it held him from calling her name as he waited for her to come within his reach. But the undertow brought her no nearer. For a second, two of them, three or four, it held her away from him, and each of these seconds was a lifetime in passing. Then he saw the distance between them widening, and as it widened the things below began to drag Carla down. She made no struggle, did not cry out to him, but only raised her hands so that he might see they were waiting for him, and wanting him, as she went to her kingdom of Micomicon, her land of dreams.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK, A. M., Sc. D., Director of Public Health Education, State of Pennsylvania.

Handle With Care

AUTOMOBILING has been defined as the greatest sport on earth. And there seems to be a large amount of evidence to sustain that point. On the other hand, like everything else, there are two sides to the question. For example, in the United States within the last twelve months there have been more than thirty thousand deaths which were directly attributed to the motor car. Not to mention the many times that number of accidents which did not result fatally. It should, therefore, be quite plain that gasoline can do much damage as well as create much pleasure.

With the use of the automobile practically universal, and tourist travel growing by leaps and bounds, it is logical to warn the man at the wheel. It is only natural that by rolling along on a fine highway the operator will develop a keen enthusiasm. But the zest and fascination associated with this sort of thing can very quickly dull one's judgment, which unfortunately frequently occurs. When this happens, selfishness and recklessness step in—and many drivers and passengers are out!

It cannot be gainsaid that to operate a car as to make a hospital case or worse of one's self or friends is the height of folly. Yet by "heating" trains and in turn by being heated by them, by failing to keep a firm grasp on the steering wheel at all times, by disregarding caution signs and lights, and by permitting impatience to keep the car in high when caution demands less speed, many thousands of automobilists will conclude their ride by adorning a hospital bed or by making business for the cemetery people.

It seems a shame that with streets and highways admirably marked to aid in careful operation, with water supplies in many jurisdictions designated safe by health officials, with adequate supervision of wayside stands and camping grounds and finally, with all the health and pleasure which may be derived from the wide open spaces, so many drivers will put an untimely end to themselves and others by careless driving.

Remember, that all the personal health in the world coupled with a life expectancy of many happy years will be of no avail whatever if caution on the road is thoughtlessly tossed away. Therefore, at all times handle that automobile of yours with care. And live to drive another day!

Forcing the Issue

NO ONE wants to grow old. But no one can prevent it. Man is born, lives and dies—a sequence which the wisest can in no way avoid. Any worrying will not help matters in the least. Intelligent living, on the other hand, is of great value in postponing the inevitable old age condition.

One has but to look around to realize that young men and women, as well as older ones, are foolishly engaged in habits that tend to shorten life. The consequence is that many a person who has actually only existed fifty or sixty years is a septuagenarian from a physiological standpoint. Where is the sense to that?

Continual worry, lack of the proper amount of rest, over-playing or over-working, failing to exercise, excesses of all kinds, and in general, forgetting that the body as well as business requires intelligent direction, are the factors that prematurely hasten old age.

If it is an established and scientific fact that careful living, barring accidents, will defer old age. Therefore, so conduct your life that when you look old you actually are that way. Why force the issue? (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Revelation Put Beau in Unfavorable Light

Butler Gluzner, critic and poet, was talking about a biography of George Washington that does not flatter the Father of his Country. "Few men's lives at that," he said, "can stand the searchlight as well as Washington's stands it. A girl turned the searchlight on her beau once, and if the poor fellow came out badly in one way—well, we'd all come out badly in another.

"This poor fellow I'm speaking of gave his girl an umbrella on her birthday. She didn't like the umbrella any too well, and since the ticket of the department store where it had been bought was tied to the handle, she decided to exchange it without saying anything to anybody beforehand. "So she trotted to the department store, went to the exchange man and said: "I'd like to exchange this umbrella, please, for another at the same price." "With pleasure, madam," said the man. He was all smiles and bows. But after he'd unwrapped the umbrella, he looked very stern. "This umbrella," he said, "wasn't bought from us, madam." "Oh, yes, it was," said the girl. "Look, there's your ticket on it." "Ah, yes," said the man, "that's our ticket—our ticket for re-covering."—Detroit Free Press.

Scraps of Humor

BY VIRTUE OF NECESSITY

On a very stormy Wednesday evening the congregation who arrived for the mid-week service at the village church were the minister and John, the sexton. The disappointed minister said: "Surely, John, if you and I could venture out in the storm, others should do so."

"Deed, sir," said John, "if you an' me wiesna' paid for it we wuldna' be here, either!"

NOT NEEDED NOW

Jim—Do you still do your deep breathing exercises, old boy?
Nasium—I haven't recently, I'm rooming next to a tannery at present.

And softer than putty,
Although you're no Shelley,
You're certainly nutty.

Thankful for Harp

Crashing into a telegraph post, the motorist smashed his machine and was picked up in an unconscious state entangled in the wires. Just as his friends feared the worst, a smile swept over his face and he was heard to murmur as he fingered the wires, "Thank Heaven, they've given me a harp!"

Fare's Fair

"What's the fare," inquired the woman of the taxi driver, when he stopped at her destination.
"Two dollars, ma'am," was the prompt reply.
"Well, here's a dollar and a half—I'm not such a fool as I look."
"No," said the driver, "I wish you were, ma'am!"

Necessary

Traveler—In heaven's name, why did you come out in the middle of this dried-up, barren, God-forsaken prairie to build a house? There isn't a tree within a hundred miles of you.
Homesteader—Wot else could I do? The wife was dead set on learnin' to drive the car.

Easy to Believe

Mrs. Askem—Are you and your former husband still good friends?
The Grass Widow—Why, we are better friends than we were when we were married.

WHEN IN THE VEIN

Tom—"Why do you call that dog a bloodhound?" Joe—"He's so savage when he's in the vein."

Words and Principles

Spinks—These modern couples evidently would rather have a divorce than a golden wedding.
Jinks—Yes, it is getting so a wife gets as tired of keeping a husband as quickly as she does of keeping a diary.

The Ayes Have It

Bim—Do you think it right to buy an automobile on the installment plan?
Bam—Sure, 10,000,000 people can't be wrong.

Stale Joke

Finding his audience very difficult to please, a comedian cracked another joke and added, "I suppose you will laugh at that next year?"
"No," said a voice, "but we did last year."

Saxophonist—I wish I had money and I would never play another note on the saxophone.
Neighbor—I wish I had money—I would give it to you.

Russian Soviet Puts Ban on Time-Honored Kissing

Moscow's latest edict is "Thou shalt not kiss!" according to travelers recently returned from Russia, who relate that the Soviet chiefs, not content with abolishing church, crown, marriage—and other institutions beloved of man and woman—are now conducting a furious campaign against the kiss. The campaign will come as a shock to those who knew Russia in the good old days before the war, when friends embraced each other whenever and wherever they met—sometimes as many as twenty times a day. A kiss approximated to a handshake or to a lifted hat then. "In no land," declared Alexandre Dumas pere in one of his travel books, "have I seen people embrace each other so much as in Russia." Now propaganda has invaded literature, and the latest novel from Moscow ends with this last page advice: Eighteen-year-old heroine, to her lover: "A kiss? Young man, do you realize what a kiss means?"

No Laughing Matter

Admiral Hugh Rodman, who commanded the American battleship squadron with the grand fleet during the World war, tells this in his book, "Yarns of a Kentucky Admiral": "I had on my staff during the World war a British officer who adored London Punch. One day one of my aids said to him jokingly: "Captain, don't you think that British jokes are so obscure that one needs an interpreter to explain them?" "Mr. X—," he replied, "I want you to understand that British jokes are not to be laughed at." "This yarn went the rounds of the grand fleet," pipes the admiral, "and my good friends, the Britishers, appreciated it as much as we did."—Kansas City Star.

Speedy Toys in Europe

Children in Europe are demanding speed in their toys. Six-year-old Mario Conterio recently appeared on the streets of Paris on his motor-driven unicycle. Three-year-old Warner Kimpel, son of a famous German auto racer, has his own electric racing car, and Alfredo Bonifatti, aged four, drives through the streets of Rome on a tiny, but speedy, motor cycle.

Nation's Gold Production

The production of gold in the United States which averaged about $92,740,000 for the eight years up to 1913, has steadily declined until in 1928 it was only $48,165,000, representing practically a 50 per cent decrease.

The Scott Antarctic expedition cost $500,000; the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition about $200,000; the Noble Italia expedition, $300,000, while the cost of Byrd's Antarctic expedition will probably be $1,000,000.

The upsets of Children
All children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.
Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give a few drops to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown! Every drugstore has Castoria; the genuine has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

Shampoo the CUTICURA way
What a delightful and beautiful shampoo it gives! Anoint the scalp lightly with CUTICURA OINTMENT; then make a strong lather with CUTICURA SOAP by describing hairings of the SOAP in hot water. Wet the hair thoroughly, then shampoo with the suds and rinse, several times, finishing with tepid or cold water. This will keep your scalp in a healthy condition and your hair will be soft and lustrous.

G.A.R. Day April 6

An April 1st party was held at the close of the regular Woman's Relief Corps meeting, at Library hall, with a good attendance.

General Orders were read concerning the W.R.C. convention to convene in Concord April 9, 10 and 11, at which our President, Mrs. L. C. Edwards, and a number of delegates and members will attend.

The Grand Army selection was by Patriotic Instructor, Miss Josie Coughlin, which was very instructive and urging us to fly our flag on that day.

The April 1st party took the form of "Mother Goose Rhymes." These were represented in costume, causing much merriment, as each acted her rhyme. Prizes were given; games and April 1st jokes were indulged in.

Refreshments of sandwiches and punch were served in a manner suited to the day.

Next meeting, April 15, we will

Barn and Contents Burned

The large barn connected with the Harold Harvey farm, near the "Three Ways" station, in Hillsboro, on the Antrim to Hillsboro state road, was destroyed by a fire of unknown origin on Sunday night, between 10.30 and 11 o'clock. In addition to the barn, the owners lost several head of cattle, two horses, an automobile, and several pigs. The loss was estimated at near $15,000, with a small amount of insurance.

Further losses were prevented by the heavy rain and the lack of a wind, which kept the flames from spreading to the home nearby and the other farm buildings.

Firemen were called from Hillsboro but the farm is outside the hydrant system of the precinct, and they were powerless to help in stopping the fire, but did assist in saving some of the equipment and preventing the flames from spreading.

Action Taken by Government Against Radio Concern

A number of weekly papers have been carrying a classified ad during the past few weeks substantially as follows:

"WILL SELL MY 1929 RADIO, complete with six tubes, at sacrifice $20.00. Cost over $100. Now in storage at 356 Broadway, Everett, Mass."

Write

Upon complaint of a reader who had purchased a radio from this party, says the Maine Press Bulletin, through a similar announcement in his paper a year ago, and who was dissatisfied with the transaction, a certain publisher brought the matter to the attention of the Postmaster General.

The following reply was received:

"Replying to your letter herewith, which was referred to me, beg to advise that the matter has been investigated and all of the facts referred to the Solicitor for the Post Office Department with a view to having a 'Fraud Order' issued against this person."

The matter is brought to the attention of those publishers who printed the ad as they will undoubtedly wish to warn their readers against patronizing the advertiser.

Congregational Church
Rev. J. W. Logan, Pastor
Sunday School 11.50 a.m.
Preaching service at 11.00 a.m.
Christian Endeavor at 6 p.m.

Rev. and Mrs. Logan entertained guests from Cleveland, Ohio, one day last week.

Both Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Knight are somewhat under the weather, or have been the past week.

James MacLoughlin attended the funeral of an aunt, in New London, Conn., a short time ago.

Mrs. Irene Hart Meehan, of Lynn, Mass., has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hart.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Vieno arrived from Osteen, Florida, on Friday, and as usual are located with Mrs. Philbrick.

John Eaton injured one of his hands quite badly awhile ago, and has been with his sister, Mrs. M. E. Sargent, since.

Miss Marion Diamond has been at home for a week from the Plymouth Normal. She made a change some time ago from Keene Normal to Plymouth.

On the evening of Good Friday, there is to be a service in the Congregational church, at 7.30 in the evening. The usual Thursday evening gathering will be held.

Mr. Sullivan, who occupied the Sarah Burt house, on the Hancock road, has moved to Peterboro with his family. Mr. Sargent has moved into the Burt house, just vacated.

The Basket Ball Town Team routed the strong Battery A Team, of Concord, by a score of 24 to 18. Cossette was high scorer for Bennington, while MacDonald showed the way for the soldier boys. This was Battery A's second defeat out of twenty games.

The Missionary society, which met with Mrs. Allan Gerrard, had twelve ladies present, and the Lenten offering amounted to eleven dollars and fifteen cents. The readings were from the book, "Friends in Africa," and were interesting. During the social hour ice cream and cake were served by the hostess.

The Citizens Association

At their last meeting took the necessary steps toward having roads better marked in adjoining towns, so that tourists may know there is an Antrim and in which direction to go to get there. In addition, other matters of importance were considered.

A regular meeting of the Antrim-Bennington Rod and Gun Club was held last Thursday evening.

HANCOCK

Mrs. Emma Vinkler has been at the Peterborough hospital for a season.

Charles A. Brown, having received the appointment of census enumerator, is performing the duties of the office.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank Pearson have returned by auto from St. Augustine, Fla., where they have spent the past winter.

The meeting of the Hancock Woman's Club is being held today, the 9th, with Charles S. Emerson of Milford the speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Knowlton of Leominster, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Paulson, were recent visitors of Mr. Knowlton's mother, Mrs. Lucella E. Shea.

Richard U. Devens has been home for a week's vacation from his studies at the Kimball Union Academy. Allan M. Hadley was also in town for a short vacation from school work. Mr. Hadley is a teacher in the Springfield, Mass., High school.

DEERING

Supt. A. A. Holden spent last Friday in Plymouth attending the spring conference of superintendents.

Mrs. Harry Worth, Elmer and Grace Worth, former residents of West Deering, have been visiting friends in town.

The Boy Scouts, following their last meeting, took a hike to East Deering. It is planned to hold meetings regularly on Saturday afternoons.

Mr. and Mrs. Weldall Putnam and daughter, Anna, who have been passing the winter months at Southern Pines, North Carolina, are expected home soon.

Misc Myrtle Flanders, of Concord, who has charge of Red Cross work throughout the state, has recently been in town for the purpose of forming a class in nursing.

Misses Jane and Treva Poling, Mr. and Mrs. John Freson, Mrs. Lilyane Bromage, Kenneth Bromage and Miss Catherine Butterfield were guests of Concord friends recently.

The forest fire in this town last week was seen from the look-off station on Mt. Crotched and telephone communication put the fire warden on the job at once. While many acres were burned over, had it not been for timely warning much more damage would have been done.

GREENFIELD

Rev. Clark W. Myers is enjoying a week's vacation from his studies at Boston University.

Mrs. Charles Chase, who has been in Lyndeboro throughout the winter caring for her father, has returned to her home here.

Friends of Mrs. Clifford Waite, who is at Memorial hospital, Nashua, for a surgical operation, are pleased to know that she is doing well.

Mrs. Ida M. Felch, who came to Greenfield from Goffstown about two years ago, passed away last Thursday at a hospital in Manchester, following an operation.

Rev. Eugene Thrasher, of York Beach, Maine, who with Mrs. Thrasher has been spending the winter in Dr. and Mrs. Cheever, attended the New England Methodist Conference at Cambridge, Mass.

FRANCESTOWN

John Flah is improving slowly. He will be taken to the hospital for treatment.

Harry Miller took a short ride one day recently and called on his grandparents for the first time. He has been seriously ill.

George E. Miller and Mrs. Mary A. Woodbury, of Bloomfield, N. J., have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Miller.

The Misses Nellie Nutting and Harriet Nutting have returned to their studies at Cushing Academy and the University of New Hampshire respectively, after a week's vacation with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Nutting.

REPORTER RAMBLINGS

New York now has the biggest bank in all the world. How soon will it be before other mergers take place and a new biggest bank is formed?

The U. S. form of questionnaire compels the census taker to list the housewife as having no occupation. Isn't that a first class April joke?

Uncle Sam tells everybody to stand up and be counted, but he also wants answers to many questions and just now he is a fairly inquisitive personage.

Des Moines Register: "Motorists have one consolation. Their license plates last twelve months without needing any repairs." Guess again, brother. We've seen plenty of license plates in need of repair, and they had only been in use a few months.

Clarence Darrow, criminal lawyer, is quoted as saying that it is a duty to violate the prohibition law. This may be a strange statement to come from a lawyer, but if lawyers devoted their full time and energies to having laws enforced just think how few lawyers we would need!

"The craze for exercise—unintelligent exercise" has aroused a protest from William Muldoon, well known trainer and body builder. He says that "rest and relaxation are what men need" and exercise only in moderation. Is the playing of golf a relaxation or an exercise?

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin has signed a contract for mail and passenger air service across the Atlantic. Of course it's one thing to sign a contract and quite a different thing to carry it to performance, but somehow the Germans usually accomplish what they set out to do.

With a reported shortage in its accounts of about $285,000 the Hampshire Trust Company is bringing some very undesirable publicity to Northampton—home town of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. A lax system of accounting is blamed for the total reaching so large a figure.

Style, beauty and personal appearance are now stressed as business factors says Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. In many instances durability and basic worth have been thrown into the discard. That's why "the latest model" is so much desired by most of us.

There's no such thing as Spring fever, says Dr. Winchester, of the Georgia State Board of Health. Perhaps he hasn't much regard for this annual "ailment" as few of those afflicted feel the need of a physician's services to help them get over the attack.

Dr. Alfred Adler, the Viennese psychologist, startled an audience at Columbia university recently by the statement that bridge players are usually sufferers from an inferiority complex who take to the game as an easy way to satisfy their longing for superiority. Wonder how many are satisfied?

Late news from Scotland is to the effect that a professional pipe lighter has been employed at Glasgow to keep street railway laborers from wasting so much time in lighting their own pipes. Probably this is all right as another Scotch story, but the catch is that the men must supply their own tobacco and matches. With all the publicity given the Scotch somebody should invent a way in which it can be turned to profit for the canny race.

"As savings bank deposits for 1929 showed a decrease for the first time on record the banks may find it necessary to urge upon the public the merits of that form of accumulating money, rather than, for instance, investment in common stocks."—Thomas H. Sanders, professor of accounting in the Graduate School of Administration, Harvard University, before the Eastern Regional Savings Conference in New York. And most banks could emphasize the idea of safety for savings, which cannot be said of stock investments.

ENGLISH MONKEY

1 cup stale bread cut in small cubes
1 cup milk
½ cup cheese cut in small pieces
1 tablespoon butter
1 egg
¼ teaspoon salt
Few grains of paprika
Soak bread crumbs in milk 15 minutes. Melt the butter, add the cheese and when melted add milk and bread, egg slightly beaten and seasonings. Cook three minutes and pour over toasted crackers or toast.

SCALLOPED TUNA FISH

Into a buttered casserole, break one egg, beat slightly, add ¼ cup bread crumbs and ½ cup milk and mix. Add one can flaked tuna fish, salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly and if it seems too dry add more milk. Dot with butter. Bake about one-half hour.

One cup of any kind of left over fish or meat, chopped fine, may be used instead of tuna fish.

BAKED CHEESE FANCY

Put 2 cups bread cubes in a buttered casserole, sprinkle in 1 cup grated cheese. Beat 2 eggs and add to 2 cups of milk and pour into casserole. Sprinkle in salt and pepper and bake one-half hour in hot oven.

RICE CROQUETTES

1 pint cold, cooked rice
1 or 2 tablespoons milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper and paprika
Warm the rice in a double boiler, with enough of the milk to soften it. Add the butter, seasoning and beaten egg, and cook until the egg thickens. Spread the mixture on a shallow plate to cool, then shape. Roll in fine crumbs and cook in deep fat until brown. Serve with jelly or maple syrup.

GRAPENUT MOUSSE

2 cups cream
¼ cup powdered sugar
2-3 cup grapenuts
¼ teaspoon vanilla
Whip cream until stiff and fold in the remaining ingredients. Put in tray of refrigerator and freeze.

ONLY A DOCTOR KNOWS WHAT A LAXATIVE SHOULD BE

Danger lies in careless selection of laxatives! By taking the first thing that comes to mind when bad breath, headaches, dizziness, nausea, biliousness, gas on stomach and bowels, lack of appetite or energy warns of constipation, you risk forming the laxative habit.

Depend on a doctor's judgment in choosing your laxative. Here's one made from the prescription of a specialist in bowel and stomach disorders. Its originator tried it in thousands of cases; found it safe for women, children and old folks; thoroughly effective for the most robust man. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. It is composed of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients. You can get it in generous bottles and ready for use, at any drugstore.

NEED SOMETHING BESIDES HITTING

Figures Show Big Punch Doesn't Win Flag.

Base hits, especially home runs, may be as decisive as any factor in modern big league baseball, but the National league averages for 1929 reveal conclusively that something besides the big punch is needed to win pennants or even get into the first division.

The Phillies led the circuit in hitting last season with the remarkable average of .309, seven points better than either Pittsburgh or Chicago, but the Phils finished no better than fifth. Their pitching staff, or rather the lack of it, was the answer to where Burt Shotton's men finished.

The Phils pounded out 153 home runs, as compared with 140 for the clotting Cubs. This mark was only five short of the major league record of 158, set by the Yankees in 1927.

Only four pitchers in the American league in 1929 held opposing teams to a batting average of .200 or less. They were George Earnshaw, Edward Wells, Fred Marberry and George (Rube) Walberg. Earnshaw held opponents to .241 and that is top mark for the American league in 1929. Robert Moses Grove, with .262, and George Pipgras, of New York, and Jack Russell, of Boston, each with .264, were close by.

When you add walks to hits and divide the total by times at bat plus walks, you discover that the leading pitcher in the league last year was the giant Marberry. Thomas, of Chicago, ranks second; Pipgras third and Huddlin, of Cleveland, is fourth.

Gene Tunney, an extremely conscientious, methodical, painstaking boxer, admits that he has fouled opponents and been fouled by them. He says that "every boxer is fouled."

Practically every bout sees fouls committed. That does not justify claims of fouls. Few are intentional. A real boxer accepts fouls in a spirit of give and take, knowing that in the hurly-burly of battle all sorts of accidents can make for foul blows. Only the weak sisters seek sanctuary behind a claim of foul except when incapacitated.

In 1930 Navy will play both Ohio State and Notre Dame in the West, two games in Philadelphia and two in Baltimore.

"Keep your eyes on the White Sox. They are the dark horse of the American league race." That is the opinion of Connie Mack, while making an interesting observation in the course of a rambling discourse on the circuit over which he holds sway for the first time in fifteen years.

"Don't misunderstand me," said the veteran of every American league race. "I am not picking them to finish first or even second. But under Donie Bush the White Sox are bound to be the most improved ball club in our circuit. They are likely to have a lot to say before September rolls around."

Max Carey has a suggestion for developing the proper swing in baseball.

"Tee up a baseball the way you tee up a golf ball and swing at it. Of course you've got to tee the baseball high, or at the various heights that a baseball would be pitched."

Carey himself tried out this scheme and it helped. He has used it in coaching others and found it successful.

"Practice this method and you will learn to meet a ball properly," says Carey.

Arrangements have been completed for a football game to be played between the Cuban Cadet school and the United States Military academy freshmen at West Point, N. Y., on Thanksgiving Day. Gen. Alberto Herrera, chief of staff of the Cuban army, has announced.

The contest was said to have been suggested by Maj. Joseph O'Hare, military attache of the United States embassy. It will be the first game between the two institutions. The Cuban Cadet school has not had a football team, but will begin formation of a squad immediately.

Sport Notes

Ring records of 1929 show that 60 important fights were won by fouls.

George Cumming has served as professional at the Toronto Golf club for more than a quarter of a century.

Buffalo was awarded the 1931 tournament of the American Bowling Congress at the annual meeting of delegates at Cleveland.

Now that the violet ray machine is being used on athletes, it is just possible the Red Sox will lose a bit of that old cellar pallor.

An indication of the phenomenal growth of golf is evidenced by the fact that in 1894 there were only ten courses in the United States.

"The whole secret of talking a good game of golf," said a sportsman recently, as he sank into an easy chair in a local club, "is relaxation."

Karl Schafer, world's figure-skating champion, represented Austria in both the figure skating and swimming competition at the last Olympic games.

The biggest man in the minor leagues, Jim Weaver, a pitcher, will be with Baltimore this year. He stands 6 feet 7 and weighs 230 pounds.

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., is captain of the United States polo team and also chairman of the committee in charge of the international matches with England.

Membership in the average golf club in England may be had for a sum of from five to ten pounds while in this country it is several times that much.

The letter men of the Yale hockey team unanimously elected Frank L. Luce, Jr., of Boston, captain for the 1931 season to succeed Capt. Bob Wilson.

The solar plexus blow, generally credited to Bob Fitzsimmons, is said to be 200 years old and originally was called "Broughton's Mark" by the British.

Red Smith, former Braves catcher, now owned by Albany, will reduce his baseball to the months of June, July and August, because of coaching duties at Georgetown.

The annual international soccer football match between England and Scotland is to be played at the Empire stadium, Wembley, adjacent to London, on Saturday, April 5.

James J. Johnston has managed more than 5,000 boxers during his long association with the ring, including Jim Driscoll, Johnny Dundee, Harry Greb, Ted Lewis, Mike McTigue and Phil Scott.

Breaks Six Records

Sixteen-year-old Helene Madison, Seattle, Wash., broke six world's records during one swim at the Lackawanna pool at Miami, Fla. The records were for free style swimming, 200, 220, 300, 400, 440 and 500 yards over the short course.

Bride Tells Her Secret

"FOR a young bride of twenty-one to lose her vitality and pep is disastrous, almost a sacrifice," says Mrs. George E. Pillow, of Franklin, Va. "That, however," she continues, "is just what I did."

"I had only been married a few months to an athletic husband, who went everywhere and did everything. I tried to keep up with his pace, and simply collapsed under the strain. I never was really ill; just fallow-skinned, depressed, and lifeless. Swimming, dancing, golf, I just couldn't face them. When I began to lose my clear complexion, I was desperate.

"Then one day a girl friend came to pay me a visit. In the bottom of her little bag of clothes lay a crystal-clear bottle—Nujol! A short woman-to-woman talk—a telephone call to a neighboring drug store—and my future happiness was settled.

"That was a year ago. Now I too am never without Nujol, which has brightened and cleansed my body like a cake of pure soap. I eat, sleep, swim, and hike with the enthusiasm of a child. My complexion is all it used to be—and best of all—I am my husband's little pal again."

The wonderful thing about crystal-clear Nujol is that it is not a medicine; it contains no drugs—it cannot hurt even a baby. It is simply the normal internal lubrication which your body needs. Let Nujol clear the poisons out of your body (we all have them), and flood the sunshine of happiness into your life.

It sounds like a fairy tale, but millions of people have proved it. So can you. Get Nujol at any drug store—sold only in sealed packages, with the Nujol trademark. It costs but a few cents and it will make you feel like a million dollars!

Fate's Little Joke

For thirty years Edward Lane, Palo Alto (Calif.) carpenter, left his tools unlocked, despite warnings from Mrs. Lane that they would be stolen. One night he told his wife: "Well, for once my tools are safe. I locked them up in the garage I finished today." The next morning the tools were missing, taken by a thief who looted the garage during the night.

Angler's Odd "Catch"

While fishing in a tributary stream of Pitt river, Charles Grant of Redding, Calif., had the surprise of his life when he hooked a deer instead of a trout. On an overcast into a pool he found a yearling buck on his line, hooked in the ear. The little buck was in the brush behind him. The frightened animal was released by Grant and went scampering over the hills.

Three Mothers Agree

When mother is tired, nervous or ill the whole home is upset. For her family's sake, every mother wants to be well and strong. These three women tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps them to care for their families.

Mrs. H. Dolhonde, 6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana

"Before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren, too. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."

Mrs. Harold Goodnow, 36 Cane St., Fitchburg, Massachusetts

"I cannot praise your medicine enough. After my baby came I was rundown. I had to go to bed often through the day. I took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I felt like a different woman. If any mother has those tired feelings I advise her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Lloyd R. Blasing, 115 So. Ohio St., Anaheim, California

"After my baby came I was so nervous and tired that I felt miserable. One day a booklet was left at our door and after reading it I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now on my fourth bottle and I feel much stronger. It has helped me in every way and I feel sure that other women in rundown condition will pick up if they will only take a few bottles."

USING QUILLS

"The day has come for the children to go to school," said Mrs. Porcupine. Old Professor Porcupine is going to have a school this spring in the Moss Stump in the deep woods.

"Shall We Go for Him?"

fine walks and talks with the old Professor. One day, however, they were off on a walk—the whole school—and the Professor—when they heard a low barking.

"That is a dog," said Professor Porcupine quietly. "A dog," slivered the little Porcupines, as they had heard a dog spoken of as a terrible creature.

"We will be quite safe," said Professor Porcupine. "Shall we go for him?" asked one of the children.

"No, my dear," said Professor Porcupine, "we shall not go for him." "Let it always be truthfully said of the Porcupine family that our quills are only used when we're in danger—not to hurt other animals.

An Ad That Got Results By H. IRVING KING

PAUL read the newspaper clipping over for the hundredth time. It was an advertisement offering a large reward for information concerning the whereabouts of Claudia Bogartz.

The more he saw of Margaret Downs the more Paul was convinced that she was none other than the missing heiress. "One has only to look at her to see," he told himself.

When Margaret invited him to tea Paul accepted the proffered hospitality, trying his best to conceal the rapture the invitation gave him.

"What is the matter?" exclaimed Margaret, gazing at his anxious face. "Is the tea so very dreadful?"

"No, it isn't the tea," stammered Paul. "It's oh, hang it all—excuse me, Miss Downs, but do you know anything about that?"

"What is true?" she asked. "That you are Claudia Bogartz!" Margaret buried her face in her hands and her shoulders shook convulsively.

"Well, then," sighed Paul, "it would break my heart; but I suppose you ought to go home."

"I didn't," confessed Paul, meekly. "I am a stenographer in the advertising office which handles the McGuffey advertising," she went on.
