TOPICS OF THE DAY

Presented to Reporter Readers in Concise Form

Eliot A. Carter, of Nashua, has been elected as chairman of the board of trustees of the State Industrial school, and has assumed the duties of his new position.

There are very many throughout the state who join with Keene in their loss of a favorite son, Hon. Charles Gale Shedd, well known and beloved by a wide circle of friends.

An official statement by the Secretary of State indicates that the Republican majority in the next Legislature on joint ballot will be 120. The State Senate will be made up of 19 Republicans and five Democrats; the House of Representatives of 263 Republicans and 157 Democrats.

Woods Chapter, No. 14, R.A.M., of Henniker, will give an entertainment at Masonic hall, in that town, on Thursday evening of this week, Nov. 20, at 8 o'clock. Those who have invitations are Chapter members and Blue Lodge members, their wives and friends, not including children. It is expected that there will be a large attendance of those eligible to attend, and a pleasant evening is being arranged.

In the Hillsborough County Farm Bureau membership drive, last Friday, when interested ones gave their time for a one day activity along this line, much success attended their efforts. The Antrim parties taking charge of the efforts in town were: Harold Cate, W. R. Linton, Arthur Poor and Oscar Huot and the number of members received here was twenty-four.

The dedication, unveiling and presentation of the World War Memorial to the town of Jaffrey was an event on Armistice Day which will go down in history as one of the epochs in the life of the town. No other town has anything like this beautifully carved creation. The figures are of two boys in American uniforms, the standing figure holding in his arms a wounded comrade, evidently in a fainting condition. The sculptor gave two years of love to this work and the priceless memorial is a wonderful effort.

Proctor, in Sportsman's Column Says:

Charles Hanson, of Hancock, the coon hunter, seems to be leading the field with the number of coons taken this season. He has got 27 pelts. Dunbar of Wilton and Wheeler of New Ipswich are close up.

Sat in with the newly organized Bennington Sportsman's Club Thursday evening. "Les" Center, of Wilton, went up and we gave them some movies. This club is young, but they have a good membership and are going strong. They have started a rearing pool. Success to them.

Although I have not had the towns of Antrim, Hillsboro, and Washington, for several months, I still get a bunch of letters from that section asking all sorts of questions. They have live clubs in all three of those towns and I miss running in to give "Les" Connors the razz, also at the Three Ways gas station.

Observed Armistice Day

The Antrim Woman's club held an Armistice Day meeting in the Library hall, with the patriotic societies as guests. The girl scouts were especially invited as the day started the annual roll call of the Red Cross and the scouts are recruiting for the membership drive. Mrs. Elizabeth Bassett, president of the Woman's club, presided.

Mrs. Elizabeth Felker led in the community singing of World War songs. A poem, "Three Crosses," was read by Ruth Felker, and "The Red Cross" was read by Ruth Dunlap.

Rev. R. H. Tibbals gave a strong address on Armistice Day and World Peace, warning his hearers of some of the perils that threaten our country and our flag. A social hour followed and the hospitality committee served refreshments.

HELD THEIR ANNUAL

Antrim - Boston Party Scores One More Success

The Antrim-Boston party was held Saturday evening, November first, in suite 307, Y.M.C.A. building.

After a social hour, an informal entertainment was given. The first number was a paper prepared by Mrs. Ina Balch Brunell. It might well be called "Reporter Ramblings of an Earlier Day." The paper consisted of news items culled from an old Antrim Reporter, published in the '80's. An item of interest was the account of the marriage of George Hastings and Alice Tenney. The item concluded with the interesting announcement 'that there were more to follow'. This paper was followed by a reading given by Neil Robinson, consisting of a series of anecdotes and monologues reflecting Scottish characteristics, given in Neil's usual pleasing manner. It is needless to say that they were appreciated by this company.

We were unusually fortunate this year in having with us Miss Elizabeth Tandy, who sang a group of three songs, ably accompanied by Forrest Appleton. Miss Tandy's singing was most enthusiastically received, and as an encore she sang our Antrim song, composed for the occasion by Potter Spaulding (Perley Richardson). Miss Tandy inspiringly interpreted it, and with the company joining her in the last stanza and chorus, it made a fitting closing number for the program. It is the purpose of the committee to use this song each year.

A short business meeting followed. Edwin J. Whittemore was chosen chairman and Forrest Appleton vice chairman of next year's committee.

Refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, cake, fancy cookies and coffee were served.

As is usual at these gatherings, new faces were seen and welcomed, notably Mrs. George Appleton, Forrest Appleton, Mrs. R. F. Hunt, Mrs. E. McClure, Mrs. Mary Armstrong (Doll Campbell), Miss Susie Swett, Miss Elsie Kingman, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Barker, Willie White. We were pleased to welcome for the second time from the North Country, Mrs. Gertrude Fifield, Miss Ella Bullard and Mrs. Jennie Hartwell.

We note with regret, and with a deep appreciation of the strength and beauty of their lives, the passing of Squires Forsaith, Mrs. Ella Newman and Charles L. Wilder.

About eleven o'clock, Harry Duncan donned his overcoat, thinking it was time to start on his return to Lowell; Alf. Balch must drive to Brockton, accordingly, he, and soon all followed suit. Good byes were said for another year, all convinced that the Antrim-Boston parties must be continued.

ANTRIM SONG

Air: Silver Threads Among the Gold
The hills of home again we see,
They linger in our memory:
The rocks are strength, the waters peace.
The sunny slopes our love increase.

Chorus:
Antrim, Antrim, dear old home town;
Nearer, dearer with the days;
All thy wondrous beauty crown
With loving pride we sing thy praise.
A village street for years the same,
A school-house all unknown to fame;
Old homesteads, shops and stores a few
Dear to me and dear to you.

Home fires burning ever bright,
Faces in the dim firelight,
Memories of happy days;
Home, sweet home we sing thy praise.
When life was young and hope was high,

When love was sweet to you and I,
How fair those hills and skies of blue,
Panorama fair to view.

A neighbor was a brother there,
Ready all lives ill to share;
Warm hearted friends were wont to wait,
Beside some old familiar gate.

Through the hills the old roads winding,
Of happy days our hearts reminding,
The calm, deep lake, always serene,
Fields of memory ever green.

The gentle hush of Sabbath there,
The church bells' music on the air,
Sacred memories of that day,
Almost a benediction they.

Among those hills then may we lie
When earthly life we bid good-bye;
Old home of blessed memory
We'll rest with thee eternally.

Official Census of New Hampshire Taken in 1930

The figures of the last or 1930 census have not been published in any of the weekly papers that we have on our exchange list, and having received the official count: The Antrim Reporter is going to publish the figures. Our readers had better cut the article out and save it for future reference:

New Hampshire was one of the original thirteen States. Its population on April 1, 1930, according to the Fifteenth Census was 465,293, which represents an increase of 22,210, or 5.0 per cent, as compared with the population on January, 1920. DEBUTANTE FINDS VELVET FROCK IS SUITABLE FOR ALL OCCASIONS

appears with and without her adorable wrap.

Being fully aware that the smartest thing of the season is black velvet trimmed in white ermine for the evening wrap, she chooses a girlish cape-model as illustrated. When it comes to her gown she indulges in nille green transparent velvet, does the "coming out" daughter. Of course there is not a particle of trimming on the frock of her choice, for the better styles rely solely on the beauty and luster of their material for effect. And here's where fabric manipulation comes to the rescue. Its artful intricacies being sufficiently decorative, such as, for instance, the softly draped Vionnet neckline which graces the semi-fitted bodice and the deftly paneled skirt which is, as it should be, of dancing length as the standing pose of the pretty debutante so clearly shows.

Had this young fashionable selected light turquoise blue for her frock instead of pale green the color scheme would likewise have qualified as 100 per cent perfect, for the mode is all enthusiasm concerning costumes for both daytime and evening which have gone "black-and-blue."

A touch of blue enlivens many a black velvet chapeau this season and as for the myriads of dresses made of black velvet with splashes of flatteringly blue, the list is infinite. The latest note is the costume jewelry set to wear with black velvet. This same includes, in addition to necklace, bracelet and earrings, a clever ornament set with turquoise to be clipped on the hat at just that point which will make it most becoming.

Hints for Housekeepers

Eggs that are stored in water glass need not be put down all at one time; they may be added as convenient.

Glass supports under the legs of the stove or kitchen cabinet will keep them from cutting the linoleum.

If the color of a garment is likely to run, wash and rinse it rapidly in cool water and dry it quickly.

When asparagus is canned, the large tough ends may be used for canned soup instead of being wasted.

Silk and rayon garments should be washed in lukewarm water and dried away from direct heat and sunlight.

Keep egg custards, flavored with coconut, coffee or chocolate, in the refrigerator, for luncheons or late suppers for the children.

Slip covers for upholstered furniture of unbleached linen or similar materials help to make the living room look fresh and cool in summer.

Buttermilk is an excellent summer drink. It has the same food value as skim milk but is more easily digested by some people because the casein is clotted by the acid.

Tags Attached to Turkeys Indicate Birds Have Been Inspected, Graded

How Turkeys Are Marked by Government Inspectors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When grandmothers lived chiefly in the country and raised their own turkeys it was a widespread tradition for all the branches of a family to gather at the old farm home to share the Thanksgiving feast, praise the cook, and exchange news.

Modern conditions make it more convenient at times for both the younger and the older generation to discontinue these very large old-fashioned Thanksgiving gatherings. The various younger branches of the family often decide to celebrate Thanksgiving individually, or to take their turn entertaining the old folks. One reason for the change is the fact that fine turkeys are now available in almost every market throughout the winter, as well as at the holiday season. So they are less of a novelty in themselves, and other conditions lead the modern young housewife to try her hand at cooking them rather than to look for an invitation to the old home.

The less experienced housekeeper however is apt to hesitate before the problem of selecting the royal bird. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests that when she goes to market she should look for tags attached to the legs of the turkeys displayed for sale, indicating that the birds have been inspected and graded by the bureau of agricultural economics. The turkeys on the retail market generally fall under one of three groups: "Prime," "choice," and "medium." The principal difference is in the amount of fleshing and the occurrence of defects due to dressing. Prime turkeys are full-fleshed; choice are well-fleshed, and medium are fairly well-fleshed. A turkey that bears one of these grades carries its own assurance of tenderness and palatability if properly cooked.

These graded turkeys are widely distributed. A single group of chain stores may absorb as many as 150 carloads of 2,000 turkeys each. Of course the housewife must go to market with some idea of the weight bird she will need. If only four people are to enjoy the dinner, an eight-pound turkey will be ample; in fact, it would serve six or even eight if necessary. Perhaps a ten-pound bird would be a better choice for eight persons, and so on, correspondingly, with an increased number.

One must know, too, whether she wants to cook a young or an older turkey, the latter requiring longer, slower cooking. Age is distinguished, as with other poultry, by the flexibility of the tip of the breast bone, which bends easily in young birds.

As the government grades indicate, fleshing is the principal consideration in selecting a turkey. An exceptionally fine bird will have a broad full-fleshed breast, and the back, hips, and pin bones will be fully covered with fat. Young birds are softer meat than older ones, which have coarser flesh and require longer cooking.

A good turkey should also be well-bled, well-dressed, and free from pin feathers. The crop should contain no feed. There should be no flesh bruises and very few skin abrasions. A dry-picked turkey is to be preferred.

Lima Beans in Tomato Sauce Fine Winter Dish

In colder weather the dried legumes, such as peas, beans of different kinds, lentils and so on, come into the menu more often. This tasty recipe for limas is from the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture:

2 cups dried lima beans 1 large onion, sliced
2 quarts water 2 tbs. flour
2 cups canned tomatoes Salt
8 whole cloves Pepper
1/2 lb. sliced bacon Tabasco

Wash the beans and soak them overnight in water to cover. In the morning pour off this water, cook in two quarts of lightly salted water for about one-half hour, or until tender but not broken, and drain. Simmer the tomatoes with the cloves for ten minutes and strain off the juice. Cook the bacon in a skillet until crisp, remove from the fat, drain on absorbent paper, and keep warm. Brown the onion in the bacon fat, stir in the flour until well blended, add the tomato juice and beans, and cook until the sauce thickens. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and tabasco, and serve with the strips of bacon over the top.

FOOD HINTS THAT WILL INTEREST ALL MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"There must be no stint of labor where labor will tell for our neighbor's happiness; but no wasteful extravagance of it where it will not profit."

The personality in food is supplied in various ways, first its appearance, next its taste, then, of course, its food value, which appeals to the calorie counter. When food is dull, lacking in color, taste, and is insipid, look to the little spanish pepper to give zest to your dishes.

The flavor of the pimiento is not its only attraction; the color adds brilliancy to an otherwise dull dish. The little pepper comes packed in several sizes so that if one serves two, a small bottle is provided, and when it is to be the chief ingredient there is the seven-ounce can. For stuffing, one may use any desired mixture. The peppers should be drained, placed in muffin pans, and they are ready to be filled.

Pimientos Stuffed, With Mushroom Sauce.—Cook one small onion (chopped), one stalk of celery also chopped in two tablespoonfuls of fat until tender. Add one-half pound of round steak (ground), salt, pepper, and a dash of cayenne to season, and cook five minutes; remove from the heat, add three-fourths of a cupful of cooked rice, one slightly beaten egg; mix well and fill the peppers. Bake until brown.

Savory Sandwiches.—Take a small can of pimientos, three and one-half ounce size, chop after draining, add one-fourth cupful of peanut butter, one-fourth cupful of sweet pickle, and one-fourth cupful of mayonnaise. Chop the pickle and mix all together, adding salt to taste. Spread on lightly buttered bread and cut into any desired form.

Pimiento Canapes.—Split the six pimientos after draining, using a seven-ounce can. Sprinkle the inner surface with salt and cayenne. Place a rectangular slice of cheese lengthwise of the pepper and roll up. Skewer with toothpicks securely. Roll in flour, cook in a small amount of fat three minutes or until the cheese melts and the flour browns. Serve on oval slices of toast well buttered and hot.

Baked Spinach.—Pick over and wash three pounds of spinach, wash thoroughly and cook in only the water which clings to the leaves. When tender, chop and add salt, pepper, onion juice, butter and bread crumbs, using two tablespoonfuls of butter, one of onion juice, one-half cupful of fine crumbs. Now add three well-beaten eggs and beat in well. Put into a well-greased baking dish, sprinkle with more crumbs well buttered and bake in a hot oven.

Lyonnaise String Beans.—Cut four slices of bacon into small pieces and fry until crisp. Remove the bacon and add one onion sliced thin to the bacon fat, cook slightly until light brown. Add four cupfuls of canned string beans, bacon, salt and pepper to season. Serve with a dash of tarragon vinegar.

Liver Loaf.—Take one pound of calf liver and cook in boiling water with a small onion until tender. Cool, put through a food chopper, onion and all. Mix with one teaspoonful of salt, one beaten egg, one cupful of soft bread crumbs, one-half cupful of milk and form into a loaf. Bake in a well-greased baking dish covered with three slices of bacon. Bake for an hour.

REALLY, a strong pipe is no joke. The next time you attend a Legion or a lodge meeting or a banquet, let the mild fragrance of Sir Walter's favorite smoking mixture precede you and assure a cordial reception. Sir Walter works mild magic with strong pipes—it's uniformly well aged, mellow and biteless and noticeably milder. It burns freely and evenly, and it's cool and sweet down to the last flake in the bowl.

IT'S 15¢—and milder

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Distressing muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond pleasantly to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant," because it gets action and is not just a salve. Musterole helps bring soreness and pain to the surface, and thus gives natural relief. You can feel how its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy; jars and tubes. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Women Take Lessons in Adjusting Their Sewing Machines

Ten women of Phelps county, Nebraska, recently took their sewing machines to a clinic. The machines had various minor but disturbing ailments, such as stitch skipping, thread breaking, or a general showing up in their operation. The average age of the machines was a little over seventeen years. The oldest had been in service thirty-nine years.

An engineer from the agricultural extension service of the state university, Paul P. Hoff, presided at the clinic. Under his direction the owners cleaned, oiled and adjusted their machines until they worked satisfactorily. After returning home, the women of the clinic, as part of their responsibility, gave their neighbors the benefit of their training, sometimes assisting in the adjustment of machines and in other cases showing the owners how to clean, oil, and adjust them themselves. Altogether 77 machine owners learned how to care for this item in their home-making equipment.

The clinic was one of the features of the home management program on which farm women of Phelps county are working with the assistance of Itha Anderson, county home demonstration agent, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture.

An Interesting Way to Prepare Sweet Potatoes

Boil six medium-sized sweet potatoes with the skins on until tender. Remove the skin, add one tablespoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of sweet milk, sugar to suit the taste and mash well together. Add one cupful of raisins that have been soaked overnight. Put into a baking dish and place marshmallows around the top. Brown in the oven. This makes a delicious dish to serve with meat at dinner.

Towne, of Dover, at the regular meeting on Monday evening; he was accompanied by a brother Patriarch, Thomas Beckford, also of Dover. A goodly number of members was present and a profitable meeting was held. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served in the banquet hall.

The annual Roll Call of the Baptist church was held on Friday evening of last week, in their church, with a large attendance of their people. Supper was served at six o'clock, which was one of the best yet given, and greatly enjoyed by everyone. Following, all repaired to the auditorium for the calling and answering the roll. A most interesting occasion was this part of the program, and many responses from absent members were read in addition to those given by members present.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank all my friends who so kindly remembered me in my recent illness, and the illness of my mother.

Mrs. Carrie Hubbard.

Antrim Locals

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Brown recently entertained relatives from Connecticut.

Miss Sarah F. Benedict was called to Connecticut last week by the death of an aunt.

Mrs. Eva W. White has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Lillian Cheater, of Royalston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. George DeFoe have removed to the Mudge home, on West street, and will occupy it as a home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendall Putnam will occupy the home of his parents during the coming winter, on Waverley street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Mower, of South Lancaster, Mass., former Antrim residents, were recent callers on friends in town.

A new railing of substantial nature has been erected by the side of the road opposite the residence of Mrs. Clara M. Abbott.

The flags on either side of the street on Armistice Day looked fine and made Main street a prettier thoroughfare than it ordinarily is.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Armstrong and daughter, Miss Lillian Armstrong, of Somerville, Mass., were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Warren.

George P. Craig places the editor under obligations to him by leaving at The Reporter office a nice squash to be made into a Thanksgiving pie. The thanks of the family are extended to Mr. Craig for his thoughtfulness.

A number of the village people attended the church supper at Antrim Center on Friday evening last. This is the last supper the Congregational people will give this year, taking a vacation till some time in the Spring.

A few members of the Encampment branch of Odd Fellowship visited Prospect Hill Encampment, at Milford, on Thursday evening last. It was visitation night and Grand Patriarch Edwin E. Quimby, of Manchester, was the official visitor.

The eleventh annual Armistice Ball, given by Wm. M. Myers Post, No. 50, A. L., on Friday evening last in the local town hall was a success in every way. The Ludwig music proved very good and was an attractive drawing card. The crowd was large and orderly, and everybody reports a most enjoyable time.

The December meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Woodbury Memorial Methodist church will be held in their social rooms on Wednesday evening, the third day of the month. This will include the accustomed Christmas sale. The supper will not be chicken pie, as announced, but will be an unusually good one.

Rev. R. H. Tibbals, pastor of the local Baptist church, was the minister having charge of the funeral service of the late Henry Speed, in Penacook, on Monday of last week. Relatives and friends in this place attended the final services. Interment was in the family lot in Chelmsford, Mass., near which town reside an aged mother and other relatives.

A party of young ladies connected with the Baptist church were recently entertained at the home of Mrs. Emma S. Goodell. A supper was served and a pleasant evening was passed. Special guests were Mrs. Mathew Francis and Miss Beatrice Hickey, of Chesham. The Stella Mower Chapter, W. W. G., was organized, officers chosen and committees appointed.

Resolutions of Respect

Boost a Little Bit

Anyone almost can be a knocker:
It's easier to tear down than to build,
So why not try your best to be a booster?
With pessimists the world's already filled.
You can't expect that things will always suit you:
In melancholy judgement then you sit?
No. Better far to help along a little;
Better far to boost a little bit.

It never pays to join the anvil chorus,
Or spread unkind reports about your town;
Many there are to hamper and retard it,
Who do their level best to run it down.
What if it has its little failings?
It has its good points, also—hasn't it?
So why not to the wheel adjust your shoulder;
Why not get out and boost a little bit?

A churlish dog may bay the moon in anguish;
The frog must croak, for nature willed it so,
The mules were placed on earth to do the kicking
(As any good zoology will show)
The good Lord has provided for the knocking,
So if a wider groove you long to fit,
Adopt this as a motto: "BE A BOOSTER"
And then get out and boost a little bit.

Cars Go Off Road but No One Receives Injury

In making a trip to the Antrim
railroad station early Tuesday evening, the car of Guy A. Hulett accidentally went off the road and down a bank, turning completely over. Fortunately Mr. Hulett was not hurt and his car was not materially injured. Since the rain this piece of road, from the residence of F. H. Colby to the iron bridge, has been in very poor condition, full of holes in the center, and both pleasure cars and trucks have taken more to using the sides. A heavy truck running too near the side had made deep ruts and tore away a portion of the railing, and by the looks of things, went over the bank.
We were unable to find out the driver or owner of the truck. This was near the first wooden bridge on the Colby end. We learn of another car going down the side in the same ruts. When Mr. Hulett drove slowly along the side, his wheels followed the rut made by the truck; he was able to steer the forward wheels out, but the rear wheels could not be drawn from their course, and the car was gradually drawn over the bank and turned over.
The distance that the railing was torn off was some two or three or more lengths. From the way everything appears, it would seem that a great deal of good fortune prevailed.

Rebekah Visitation

Mrs. Addie W. Newman, of Manchester, vice president of the Rebekah Assembly, made her official visitation to Hand in Hand Lodge, No. 29, I. O. O. F., on Wednesday evening last, November 12.
The night was a mild one for the time of year, and a large attendance was present.
In addition to a goodly number of local members, there were several from the Rebekah Lodges of Hillsboro, Henniker, Weare, Contoocook and Milford. In all there were upwards of one hundred present.

A supper was served at 6.30 o'clock, in the banquet hall, and on the menu appeared oyster stew, cold sliced ham, salads, rolls, pies and coffee. The committee in charge of this part of the evening's entertainment was an efficient one,
the assistance in the kitchen and at the tables being well selected for their respective needs. Courtesy combined with a generous supply of food made a pleasing combination which was received with much pleasure by everyone.

Supper being finished there was some time for visiting which is always considered one of the most necessary numbers on the program for an occasion of this kind. In addition to the visiting Grand Officers there were present several others of prominence in the Rebekah branch.
Not a few were in attendance who were strangers somewhat—had been here before, but their visits are far apart.
Taken altogether this was a most pleasing and profitable hour. Here were given two vocal solos by Mrs. K. E. Roeder, a former resident in town and when here passed the chairs and was a willing worker in the Lodge. All are pleased to welcome her again as an Antrim resident.

During the regular meeting and in addition to routine business, the Rebekah degree was conferred on one candidate.
The degree was put on by the local Lodge degree staff, many interesting tableaux and special features being worked in to make it attractive. The speaking parts and the floor work, as well as the secret work, was most admirably done,
and received from the visitor deserved praise. Others present complimented the degree staff, the manager, the supper, and everything which contributed to make a most happy occasion.

Divers Battle for Prize in Bullion

Seek Fortune in Gold and Silver Aboard Lost British Steamer Egypt.

Brest, France.—Off the coast of Brittany is now being waged a thrilling and desperate fight with the seas. The prize is a big one—1,080 bars of gold, 1,229 bars of silver and $530,000 in gold coin, in the form of British sovereigns.

This fortune—actually $6,124,395—lies in the strong room of the Peninsular and Orient steamer, Egypt, sunk in 1922 off Ushant. And today divers are battling with the problems and perils presented by the 400 feet of water covering the wreck.

The bullion in the Egypt had been insured by Lloyds for $3,204,205, and the great underwriting organization, aghast at the terrific loss, nevertheless accepted the verdict of divers and salvage experts that the treasure was beyond all hope of recovery and settled the claim to the last farthing. Then on the very next day it tendered a check to the Peninsular and Orient Steamship company for the insured value of the Egypt, a sum of nearly $3,000,000.

Paid More Than $9,000,000.
But that is not all, for when the great liner plunged to the bottom of the sea she took a toll of $7 lives, of whom 16 carried shipwreck policies with Lloyds, the aggregate value of which totaled $790,000.

All in all, the loss of the Egypt cost Lloyds the staggering total of $9,100,000.

Since that day, some eight years ago, an Italian salvage corporation has been searching for the wreck and between times conducting most thorough experiments on deep-water diving.

For the last two summers divers have been walking the ocean bottom at a depth of 400 feet, looking for their golden quarry, and just a few weeks ago they happened upon the treasure ship. It was only when a specially devised diving machine was so perfected as to insure absolute safety for its occupant that the men could be lowered into the ocean far deeper than any diver for treasure ever went before, that the wreck was located.

Ushant is a spot noted for storms, gales and fogs, and it may possibly mean that another eight years will elapse before the gold and silver is recovered—if ever.

Three Italian divers attached to the salvage ship, Artiglio—Gianni, Bargeolini and Franceschi—are huge men of superphysique. They have to be to withstand conditions at the tremendous depth at which the Egypt lies.

The chief diver, Alberto Gianni, probably knows the layout of the Egypt better than his two companions, for time and again he has been lowered to the bottom of the sea. Through going down repeatedly, he found the captain's small box or ship safe, and in it the keys to the strong room of the Egypt. Getting into the strong room and removing its treasure, however, is a Herculean task.

Admiral Stephenson, Lloyd's representative, who has been an interested observer of the salvaging operations of the Italian corporation, declared that it was too early to predict whether or not the $6,124,395, now in the strong room of the Egypt would be recovered. He said one good blow would undo the work of many years, though the work of the Italians up to this time has been little short of marvelous.

Lloyd's official observer vouchsafed the opinion that a huge fortune awaited the man who would be able to perfect a diving suit which would allow divers to work at any depth—without having to waste valuable hours in coming to the surface, as is now the case with the Italian divers.

There are more ships, laden with fortunes, at the bottom of the sea than the Egypt. In every sea and ocean, fortunes are waiting to be collected.

From Shanghai to Cape Town and

Heat Wave Warps Steel Swing Bridge

Copenhagen.—The recent terrific heat wave that passed over central and northern Europe so affected the great steel swing bridge at Aalsund that it could not be closed, owing to expansion of the metal. The steel got so hot that the bridge in the center of both sides developed a bend of two feet.

from John O' Groats to Auckland are wealth-laden ships rotting on the beds of the oceans. Wood rots and crumbles to nothing, iron and steel gradually rust away, but gold and silver and precious stones never lose their value.

That is the reason for the great international salvage competition for the sea's estimated $5,000,000,000 hoard.

London Loses 94,000 in 8 Years, Census Shows

London.—This town is growing smaller. The population has decreased 94,000 since the last census in 1921, according to figures compiled by medical authorities, showing the population of the area covered by the London county council was 4,430,000 in 1929. The figures for 1921 were 4,524,000.

The London county council's area is within a six mile radius of Charing Cross.

EARTH HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM BEING HIT BY COMET

French Experts Say Heavenly Body Missed Us by Mere Space of 5,000,000 Miles.

Paris.—French astronomers at the Meudon observatory have announced that all danger of a collision of the Schwassmann-Wachmann comet with the earth is past. The comet has swung as close to the earth as it will ever come and is now disappearing, having missed this globe by the comparatively small celestial space of five million miles.

French scientists insist that the earth had a narrower escape than most laymen ever imagined. Had the little comet come on at the speed and angle it did when it was discovered by the German astronomer, Schwassmann and Wachmann, on May 1, 1980, it would have put a dent in the globe and perhaps knocked the earth out of its smooth-running circuit.

Scientists are lost in weird conjectures of what might have happened had the collision actually occurred. Some argue that the earth would have broken into bits at the impact, others believe that, like a derby hat, the earth would have been dented but nothing more serious would occur.

The comet was traveling at a pace which would have left the world far behind. Through the telescope, watchers could see the comet streaking through the field of stars, its progress being such that movement was visible to the eye.

The Schwassmann-Wachmann will be back in five years, but its circuit will be even farther away from the earth. Instead of being 22 times as far away as the moon, it will be 30 times, so that from now on there will be lessened danger of a collision.

French astronomers point out that only three comets have come dangerously close to the globe in the last few centuries. Lexell's comet came nearest, missing the world by 1,440,000 miles on July 1, 1770, while the Pons-Winnecke passed by just 3,480,000 miles off on June 27, 1927.

Students Seeking Work Are Hit by Depression

Ann Arbor, Mich.—University of Michigan students that work their way through college are in dire need of employment, according to J. A. Bursley, dean of students.

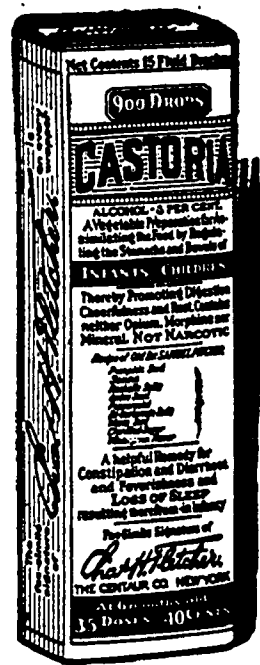

Indications at the present time, the dean said, are that many of the students who came to college with the expectation of working their way through school will leave school.

There are about 600 student applicants for work, he said, but so far only 75 jobs have been offered.

Castoria...for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine.

Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

CHAPTER XIV

Will and Ernestine Choose

Will was nailing up a wooden box. The shelves and the table were empty. Ankle deep on the floor was a litter of papers.

"Ernestine!" He stopped, a hammer in hand, to stare at her.

"What are you doing?" she exclaimed, and then, with a little cry of horror she stooped and picked up from the rubbish on the floor, a torn picture.

"Oh, Will, how could you tear it up? It was good—it was wonderful. Why did you destroy it?" With trembling hands she tried to put the ragged pieces together on the drafting desk. He looked at her astonished, voiceless. Before her, ragged against the wall, was the sketch of herself, with Elaine on her arm.

"I'm glad you didn't throw this away—oh, Will, I like it so! But what are you doing? Are you moving?"

"What do you mean, Ernestine?" he said sharply. "Did you know about this office—when have you been here?"

"Of course I knew," she said impatiently, confused to find the need for explanations, now, at this vital hour. I've known you had this office, since last spring. I knew, long before that, that you were hankering for something—some new work. You remember the night you made this picture?"

"You remember? Of course you do. I knew then, that you were working. Lillian had told me she saw you in this neighborhood, and I came here the next day, and looked at all your work. Oh, Will, don't look at me so! I wasn't spying on you! You were so strange, and I was very unhappy—I had to know what you were doing. But aren't you going to work here any more?"

He laughed strangely. "Rent's due tomorrow," he said. "I decided to let it go. I'm closing this office, and I'll never open another. I suppose, since you knew I was working here, that you were worried about the cats—but you needn't have worried—I'll stay with the job. I've given up my wild ideas. We'll keep the income—that's what counts."

"Why Will," she said swiftly, "you don't think there's any conflict between your desire and mine, do you? That's what I've been saying for—all this time. I knew that you would want to quit the cats, and I've saved a great deal of money—you'll be astonished. I had to know—it was right for me to know. It's made it possible for us to build a reserve. And why should I worry about the cats? Do you think I want you to stick to the cats, if there's something bigger, something more compelling upon you? Why, Will, Will—all I want is just what you want." Suddenly she remembered her errand, with a wail. "Oh, Will, Pastano wants the money for Loring—a bribe. Loring's in terrible trouble. He'll have to go to jail, but, oh, I don't want to give them the money for him. It's your money, Will—don't give it away—don't let them take it from us."

He caught her wrist and held it hard.

"Are you out of your senses?" he asked sternly. "What do you mean—money? What money have you?"

She opened her purse and took her small savings deposit book from it. She opened the book, and put it in his hand, the total across the narrow page. His eyes were wide, incredulous. He rubbed his hand across his face.

"It's yours, Will," she said with sudden gentleness. "I have robbed you of every cent I could get from you, and I've lived as cheaply as I could, and I've banked the difference—for you."

Deep within her she heard a warning bell. She remembered that they had much to tell each other. She laid her hand upon his arm, and said in the same low tone:

"Look at me, Will."

He looked at her—his brilliant black eyes fixed on her brown eyes—he looked at her deeply, with astonishment, and suddenly Ernestine was filled with a strange power and wisdom. She passed out of self-consciousness and was controlled and guided by deep instincts and ancient mother wisdom. She moved toward Will, put her face up to his and kissed his lips.

"Will," she said, smiling up at him, her lovely face alight with feeling, her tender mouth curved in a smile of sweetness. "Will, I love you. You forget it. You ignore it—you make love a burden instead of a support. I've seen it in the depths of your artist's mind—that love betrayed and entrapped you, instead of letting you free. Haven't you thought that?"

His arm trembled a little under her hand.

"Only once," he said, and his face flushed, "only once—the day after I had made that picture." He motioned to the picture she still held in her free hand. "The next day, I knew that I could not go on with my dreams. I knew I would have to quit it—that day, I felt so—it seemed as though—" He paused, stumbled on, with courage. "It just seemed to me—a woman is so sweet and warm in one's arms—so generous—so lovely; and then, suddenly, there are a house, and a car, and children, and nurse maids, and cooks, and doctors—a thousand things—just suddenly. I shouldn't have felt so—I fought it—but it got me. I'm telling you—you asked me."

Her eyes were full of tears.

"I knew, Will—not just that way, but I knew—that's why I've been saving and been silent—that's why I didn't ask you any questions. But, Will, I love you. It's the biggest thing in the world to me, Will. It means to me what these pictures—what this work means to you. I'm not an artist—I'm not even artistic—but I know what your work means to you, because I love you. And when you shut me out, Will, it was for me just as it was for you when you were shut off from your work. I want you to be happy." She was solemn, young, uplifted, filled with the glory of unselfishness, her face a blurred and lovely picture seen through tears.

"Dear heart, what does the money matter? Why, Will—even more than the children—yes, though I ought not say it—more than the children, than my people, than myself. You've told me how you felt, and I'll tell you, that for a little while, for one dark time, I was jealous of your work—of your love for it. But not any more, Will."

Deep Within Her She Heard a Warning Bell.

I want you to have what's best for you; I want you to have your work. There isn't any conflict between your desire and mine, Will, or your future and mine, because I want what you want."

His face began to shine. He reached up, took her hand and held it.

"Ernestine," he whispered, and stopped as she leaned forward, her head against his shoulder, her face hidden so, while she went on swiftly:

"Will, I knew you were tired of the cats. Will, I spent only about a third of what you earned, last year. But you wouldn't tell me, so I just went ahead, planning for the time when you would. I knew that you wouldn't want, probably wouldn't take, the money I'll have from grandmother and from papa, some day. But this is yours—it's savings from your earnings, Will. It's for your stake."

"You understood," he said hoarsely. "Will," she said again, and now her arm was around his body, the picture up between his shoulders, "I'll tell you again—I—"

"No, no, Ernestine," he said with quick passion, "you can't let me; we can't go back. Do you know what it means? A living—I think I could make that—but it will be precarious—I've been into it all with some thought. It will be years before I can make even half what the cartoons bring me. Even if I get darned good—there's not the money to be found—I've thought it all out. I've been up and down and around this problem. I've tried to save some, too. But it won't work. It's precarious—it's too scanty. I've been through it all, and made up my mind. Don't tempt me with your savings—they wouldn't last us a year."

"If we went back to the West side, back to the old house, I could do my own work, and the children and I could live on the trust fund, until you got started. You could keep this studio, and you could go to Philadelphia and to Paris and study."

"Would you—would you do that—for me? Ernestine, my wife." He kissed her, and she shook the tears from her own lashes and drew him down and pressed her lips against his eyes.

"It wouldn't be necessary for you to do that, darling," he said to her, and he laughed a little. "It wouldn't be that bad. I could make a living—and

A youthful actress has written a tragedy in which all the characters are strangled. This will be a nice change from the too-familiar type of play in which all the characters ought to be.—Passing Show, London.

Dwarfs were the lapdogs of medieval times. And so popular were they that many merchants specialized in selling them to the nobility.

"Marc Antony owned a dwarf," writes M. R. Werner in Liberty, whom he called, ironically, Sisyphus. In Rome there were dwarf merchants who, when they could not obtain natural specimens for the emperors and nobles, manufactured dwarfs by undernourishing normal babies, or by binding their limbs to prevent full development.

"Tiberius, Domitian and Heliogabalus paid high prices to their dwarf merchants, who experimented constantly to supply the demand. Cath-you're your trust fund, and your grandmother has promised you the house at Langley lake. No, you won't have to go back to the West side—you can keep Molly, I believe. We can manage that much, Ernestine, with good luck and good management."

"Oh, Will," she said to him, "I almost wish it would be hard like that again. I've been so lonely—longing to help you, feeling outside. What does the car and the house and the things mean if I'm cut off from you? I know I can't help you with your painting. I know that travail is yours—that's your work—your life. It must be first with you, Will. And that's right. Gifted people can't choose. But if your work must be first, to you, you can understand what love and marriage mean to me. That's my life. And if I can feel that you can go on—because I understand—"

They were both crying, his arms were around her—tight—tight. As their tears mingled and they stood together in the long embrace, the kiss that was free from passion but fraught with tenderness, the purest and holiest feeling, true married love, welled over them. It seemed to Ernestine, straining so in his arms, that for the first time she was truly wife to Will. Not only bride, bride of his body, star of his imagination, object of romantic adoration, not only the mother of his children and the keeper of his house, but wife—wife—in the deep places, the secret places of love.

"Ernestine," he whispered, after a little, and she wept a fresh to hear her name so on his lips as he had whispered it when first they loved, "forgive me—that I didn't understand, that I didn't confide in you. You seemed always to have a child in your arms, a thousand needs. I felt that this other was a foe to you. I was stupid, blind. I thought you wanted the money—needed it. You were hard with me that summer before I made the cats. I didn't want to go back to that bad time again. I didn't know how wonderful you are. You're my good luck—you always were. I'll never forget it again. Oh, Ernestine, I'll do big things for you—I will."

A clock somewhere boomed two, and Ernestine started in his arms. She had remembered Loring—at last. She withdrew herself from her husband's arms and made a gesture of helplessness.

"But here's this business of Loring," she said.

"What is it about Loring?" he asked, watching her.

So with the enchantment, the throb of love still on her, she told him about Loring—about all that Pastano had said to her that morning.

"But of course," he said at once, "you must let me take the money for you—at once. Give me the slip of paper."

She gave it to him with a reluctant sigh, and he gave a whistle as he looked at it.

"How could you have refused Pastano?" he asked. "Think what it would mean to your family—to your mother. And Lillian—with Loring dragged through the mud—"

"But Will! The money's yours—it's what we've just been talking about. It's your chance."

"I don't need twenty thousand dollars," he said quickly, and then gave a laugh of pure happiness. "Why, Ernestine," he said, "if you understand—if you know what it's all about—if you can live that economically and if you're behind me, I'll take a chance on it. Give the money for Loring—we can wangle it. After all," he added more seriously, "the understanding—the way I feel now—is worth more than the money. Let Loring have the money, we're rich. When we were young and poor we did as we liked. But after we got a little money we weren't free agents any more. The big income restricted us more than the little one. Look how Loring was bound by money! Let's let it go. After all, only beggars can choose."

"If you'll quit the paper and go ahead with this work, if you will stick to your own dreams, I'll gamble with you," she said.

"It's done," he answered. He reached for his coat and hat, and looked at his watch at the same moment.

"We'll have to go right back to the bank. Thank God, you've got the money and don't begrudge it. Nothing can stop us now."

And before they went out into the dark and narrow hall, they kissed again, hand in hand, simply, like children pledging a secret.

Ernestine saw Ruby Pastano near the bank entrance and, though he bowed formally and did not speak, he gave her a flashing, radiant glance, like the flash of a mirror held in the sun. She knew that he understood, from the happy countenance and from Will at her side, that they were looking after Loring.

Flo Ziegfeld advances the suggestion that Calvin Coolidge be ap-

Crime is decreasing in Massachu-

"The crime wave has been entirely orts is depending on the business obtained from tourists.

Big Ben's Message Now

London's most famous clock, Big Ben, which ticks off the hours in the tower above the house of commons,
and whose bells have been heard in remote parts of the globe through the instrumentality of the microphone, gives "wise counsel" to at least one well-known Briton, Sir Duncan Grey, traveler and writer.

As Sir Duncan puts it, "Bells by some trickery of our cheating senses say to us what we are actually saying to ourselves."

During the World war Big Ben was silenced and was never illuminated,
for it was feared that through sound and light it would give accurate direction to the German air raiders.

On still and clear nights it is often possible to hear the resounding thud
of the hammers on its bells a distance of eight miles or more.

For most night owls the message its bells convey at 12 midnight is the fear that the last street car or omnibus has departed and that a costly journey in a taxicab will be one at least of the disadvantages of such belated peregrination homeward.—New York Sun.

Followed Indian Trails

Over the Appalachians

A century after the first settlements were established it was evident that the future of the country depended upon overcoming the barrier of the Appalachian mountains and the great forests which clothed them. New colonists pushed inland along the rivers and later struck into the mighty forests from the head of navigation. They followed the Indian trails which they found and these trails came into general use. Thus Nemacolin's path which Washington followed on his mission to the French (1754) was the forerunner of Braddock's trail (1755) and the national road. The Kittanning path up the Juniata to the Allegheny furnished the route of Forbes' trail (1758). The Warrior's path from the Shenandoah valley through the Cumberland gap to the falls of the Ohio became Boone's wilderness road (1769) over which Kentucky was settled, and the Iroquois trail from Albany to Lake Erie developed into the Great Genesee road.

Determining World Time

Standard time seems to have been first suggested by Charles Dowd of Saratoga Springs in 1870. In 1879 the question was again raised by Sandford Fleming, chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific railway. It was brought to the attention of the leading governments of the world, and an international conference was called in 1882. It met in Washington on October 1, 1884. The delegates of 23 countries were present, but did not unanimously agree. However, most of them favored the adoption of Greenwich, England, as the origin of longitudes. The French were the only representatives of importance that would not agree, and it was not until March 10, 1911, that France abandoned the meridian of Paris and adopted that of Greenwich as its prime meridian.

Oklahoma Windiest State?

The weather bureau says that the question as to which is the windiest
state in the Union has never been accurately determined and it is probably impossible to make a positive statement. However, it is quite probable that Oklahoma as a whole is the windiest state in the Union. This is due to the fact that the winds are rather constant at moderately high velocities during the entire year in this state; in many other sections the winds may at times average higher than in Oklahoma, nevertheless, they are not so constant, or cover so completely the entire state.

Wrote His Own Letters

Grover Cleveland never dictated
any of his correspondence or public addresses, but always made the first draft in his own hand, recalls George F. Parker, quoting George B. Cortel-you, in his "Recollections of Grover Cleveland." "During my stay at the White House as his executive clerk
there was but one instance in which he dictated anything and that was the beginning of a very brief note. . . .
He dictated a few sentences of the letter and then, turning to the stenographer, said, 'Oh, you know what I want to find out; fix it up and bring it in to me.'"

Sacred Bunny Cats

The smallest cat show ever held in London took place recently, when 20 Abyssinian cats contended for the championship of their own exclusive world. Many experts say that they believe this breed to be descended from the sacred cat of ancient Egypt,
which the Egyptians used to embalm.
An elegantly built animal with large tufted ears, lustrous eyes and slender limbs, the Abyssinian cat has a silky coat not unlike a wild rabbit, hence the popular name, bunny cat.

NINETY DISASTERS CALL FOR RED CROSS RELIEF, AT COST OF $1,200,000

Vice Chairman Fieser Cites Readiness to Act of National Society, Which Lessens Loss of Life—3,500 Chapters Aid in Work.

Readiness to act in an emergency, should a disaster strike, has become part of the Red Cross Chapter program in thousands of communities.
The need for this training of local committees was revealed last year, when more than ninety communities required disaster relief work by the Red Cross.

As in former years, tornadoes brought the greatest damage. Twenty-four serious tornadoes occurred. Fire also took toll of life and property in twenty-four communities. Seven forest fires did great damage; eighteen areas were affected by floods, and nine storms caused heavy losses. Other disasters were cloudbursts, cyclones, epidemics, mine explosions and shipwrecks. In the insular possessions of the United States the Red Cross gave relief in twelve disasters, chiefly from hurricanes. In foreign countries relief was given by the American Red Cross in six instances of earthquakes, floods and to refugees.

The disaster relief work of the Red Cross cost $1,208,151 last year. Statistics showed an approximate death rate of 790 persons in these disasters;
buildings destroyed or damaged, 19,578; persons injured, 1,487, and persons assisted by the Red Cross, 96,872.

Through disaster preparedness of Red Cross Chapters, undoubtedly great numbers of lives were saved, and much distress and grief following the calamities was prevented, according to James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations of the Red Cross.

"This type of work is supported by the memberships of citizens of the United States, their volunteer contributions, and their devoted work," Mr.
Fieser said.

"Every man and woman is urged to join as a member of the local Red Cross Chapter, not only to be a partner in supporting the work through his membership, but also to serve should an emergency occur."

Life Savers Numerous

More than a quarter of a million persons are entitled to wear the American Red Cross insignia, denot-ing they have been taught the expert life saving methods of the organization. The number enrolled to date is 273,202.

Warrior and Athlete

Babar the magnificent warrior oriental monarch of the Fifteenth century, was apparently tireless, and as proud of his skill as an athlete as of his ability as a general, says an article in the Boston Globe. Once, for the fun of it, he swam the Ganges, performing this stunt, as he explains in his memoirs, "in 33 strokes." At another time he ran around the battlements of a fortress with a man under each arm, leaping the embrasures.
But these feats, added to his endless campaigns, weakened him, and he died suddenly at the age of forty-eight,
leaving his new empire to a son whose ability was less conspicuous.

Honolulu Smokeless

Honolulu is a smokeless city and for that reason it is rated clean or free from the smudge which has marred the structural appearance of New York and particularly Pittsburgh. Except for the chimneys of the gas and electric plants there are no chimneys in Honolulu. In the first place heating systems are not needed and the greater number of housewives or servants use gas for cooking.
Some more cook outdoors and others on a charcoal stove which does not give out any smoke. This interesting Hawaiian city, it was pointed out, is not a profitable field for painters.

Safety First

During the trial of a man on a serious charge of theft the evidence was so palpably insufficient that the judge stopped the case and directed the jury to return a verdict of "not guilty." A well-known lawyer, however, who wished to do something for the fee he had received for the defense, claimed the privilege of addressing the court.

"We'll hear you with the greatest pleasure," said the judge, "but, to prevent accident, we'll first acquit the prisoner!"—Montreal Star.

Didn't Need Any

Mary Jane's mother was in the back yard so she went to the door when a young man knocked.
"Please tell your mother I have a subpena for her," said the man.
"I'm sorry," said Mary Jane, "but mother just went to the grocery store
and has all the vegetables she needs."

Slow When Uninterested

The American girl! Very apt in some things. Very slow and dumb in other things. She can learn in 30 minutes how to operate a motor car, but it takes her 20 years to learn the first principles of a washing machine.
—Aitchison Globe.

"Join Red Cross," Urges Vice President Curtis

America's prominent citizens join in urging all men and women to become members of the Red Cross
during the period of the annual roll call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day.

The Honorable Charles Curtis,
Vice President of the United States, says: "The American Red Cross is in a position to and does more to relieve those stricken by misfortune than any other organization in the world. Its splendid work has done much to bring a friendly feeling in all parts of the world for the people of our country because they sustain the American Red Cross. This wonderful organization is entitled to the liberal support of our people."

The Honorable Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, says: "No one can predict when or where disaster may occur or acute emergency arise. The American Red Cross represents our community insurance against such misfortunes. The organization stands ready at all times to render speedy relief to any stricken area in the relief of disaster in foreign countries.
The Red Cross is the agency which carries on when emergency has disrupted customary modes and means of life in a community."

Six Foreign Countries Receive Red Cross Aid

Relief was given by the American Red Cross during the year in six foreign nations in disasters ranging from a tidal wave in Newfoundland, an earthquake in Persia, floods in France, to help the refugees from Russia and prevention of a smallpox epidemic in Costa Rica.

The $5,000 Red Cross contribution to Newfoundland, following the tidal wave, which took twenty-six lives and destroyed many homes and fishing boats, was the first from an outside country to reach the distressed people.

The sum of $5,000 was given to the fund for the relief of the Mennonite refugees of German descent, who had determined to leave Russia for new lands. About 13,000 passed through Germany, where the German Red Cross, aided by Red Cross societies of other nations, helped them. The majority are being transported to new countries in the western world and the American Red Cross has transmitted contributions from individuals in this country.

When Costa Rica was menaced by a smallpox epidemic, the American Red Cross sent fifty thousand tubes of vaccine, in two airplane loads, undoubtedly saving the country from a serious outbreak of the dread disease.

Peasant Had Definite if Peculiar Grievance

One of the most familiar stories of Athenian history is that of Aristides and the peasant, says an article in a Boston paper. The ancient Athenians were just as human as any other people of later times, despite their tendency to regard them as supermen.
Aristides, it will be remembered, was a great and good man whose policy was opposed to that of the brilliant and unscrupulous Themistocles.

The deadlock between the two leaders had to be broken by ostracism, which provided for the temporary banishment of the less popular leader. A peasant accosted Aristides and asked him to write the name of Aristides on his ballot. This was a vote for banishment and the leader asked the peasant if Aristides had ever injured him. "No," the man answered, "but I am tired of hearing him called Aristides the just."

Viking History

In a little island in the middle of the Irish sea there is held every year on July 5 (representing midsummer day, old style), the promulgation of the Manx laws. The scene of the ceremony is Tynwald hill, in the Isle of Man.

It is a living relic of the important part played in the history of England by the Vikings, who from the close of the Eighth century made plundering excursions to the British Isles, and then settled first in the Orkneys and Shetlands, later in the Hebrides, and thence gradually in the western Isles of Scotland; in Ireland, where they were met by their brethren coming round by the south, and in Man, whence they spread eastward till they joined forces with their kinsfolk in York.

Optimist

A little fellow of 5 years fell and cut his upper lip so badly that a doctor had to be summoned to sew up the wound.

The mother, in distress, could not restrain from saying:

"Oh, doctor, I fear it will leave a disfiguring scar."
Tommy looked up into her tearful
face and said:

"Never mind, mamma, my mustache
will cover it."

Improved Ice for Rinks

Max Heinrich Gurt, a Berlin chemist, claims to have invented what he calls opal ice. It consists of water balled with certain chemicals. The formula is secret. It is not a refrigerant. It is for the preparation of shining surfaces in rinks.
