Concerning the Election --- Some Things the Law Says About Voting

It would be expected of an independent newspaper, with Republican leanings, to say a little something at this particular time concerning registration of Republican voters and its importance, also a few things of interest to voters.

This year it is essential that every Republican be sure his or her name is on the check-list, or if not, to register, so that all may support the full ticket on November 8. Not for many years has our Republic stood in such danger of choosing the wrong path. Every vote is needed to carry on the policies which have already started our upward progress.

Registration is an easy matter. You merely present yourself before the town supervisors and show you have been a resident of the town for six months, are of legal age, and a native or naturalized citizen. If naturalized take your papers with you.

The necessary formalities take but a few minutes. Here in Antrim, the supervisors will be in session Tuesday evening, November 1, and Monday evening, November 7, in the selectmen's office in town hall block, from 7.30 to 8.30 o'clock.

In every election questions arise which need explaining, and while the law for the most part is very plain there are times when proper attention is not given to details. Perhaps these extracts from the election laws may be of interest and help to some:

If any voter spoils a ballot he may successively receive others, one at a time, not exceeding three in all upon returning each spoiled one.

Any voter who declares to the Moderator, under oath, that he cannot read, or that because of his blindness or other physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, shall, upon his choice and request, receive the assistance of one or both of the election officers detailed for that purpose.

To vote a straight Republican ticket a cross (X) should be marked in the circle at the top of this party column; or the may mark a cross (X) opposite such names as he may choose to vote for. The cross (X) at the top votes the entire ticket; don't mark a cross (X) at top and also opposite all names.

Copies of election laws will be posted in the hall and are easily understood. Having election but once in two years, it is an easy matter to forget some of the details connected with the laws governing biennial elections. These extracts are given that our readers may be reminded of certain things concerning their voting privileges.

What is said to Republican voters, of course is also true for Democratic voters. All are privileged alike in this franchise matter.

Odd Fellow and Rebekah Lodges Entertain at New I.O.O.F. Home

Waverley Lodge, No. 59, I. O. O. F., and Hand in Hand Rebekah Lodge, No. 29, have been planning for an entertainment to be given at the Odd Fellows' Home, in Concord, and on Thursday evening last were successful in carrying out their plans. About twenty men and women in private cars accompanied some twenty members of the Antrim band in a truck, arriving at the Home about 7.30 o'clock. All had a splendid opportunity to inspect the new Home from cellar to garret, and were extremely pleased with what they saw, for this is one of the most finely equipped and nicely furnished homes of its kind anywhere in this or any other jurisdiction.

The band, under the leadership of George E. Warren, gave a number of selections which were heartily applauded; likewise were pleasingly received the group songs by Mrs. Vera Butterfield and Mrs. Ethel Roeder, with Mrs. Gertrude Thornton at the piano, and the readings by F. I. Burnham. Practically the entire family of the Home and attendants, as well as the Superintendent and Matron were assembled in the Robert Whitney memorial hall to listen to the entertainment; about one hundred were present. The business of announcing and directing was done by H. W. Eldredge.

A most enjoyable evening was passed. The committee desires to express thanks to all who assisted in making this occasion a success; the members of the band, the other entertainers, to G. H. Caughey for the use of truck, to others who furnished transportation, and to all who in any way rendered assistance.

From Moses-For-Senator Club of Washington, D.C., to N.H. Voters

OF, BY AND FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE
Washington, D. C., October 19, 1932.
Editor Antrim Reporter:

New Hampshire's stake in the 1932 Senatorial contest, between Senator George H. Moses and Ex-Gov. Fred H. Brown, can be stated, from the Washington angle, in ten words:

Whether to swap an acknowledged leadership for a potential leadership.

Senator Moses has made good in Washington. Mr. Brown, if elected, would have to start at the foot of the class.

Senator Moses is at the peak of his power and prestige. Mr. Brown, if elected, could command none of that influence.

Senator Moses is close to the top in Republican circles. Mr. Brown would be wholly submerged by the Democratic Solid South.

Senator Moses knows everyone worth knowing in the United States. Mr. Brown is virtually a stranger, even to Washington.

Senator Moses will be little less effective in a Democratic Senate than if the Republicans held control. Mr. Brown, with Dixie in the saddle, would be listed as an apprentice.

Senator Moses keeps New Hampshire in the foreground. Mr. Brown could not hold that place from Florida or Alabama. Senator Moses can get things done. The United States Senate gives scant heed to the wishes of a new member.

Senator Moses' chance utterances are front-page news. Mr. Brown would get little publicity for New Hampshire.

When Senator Moses is elected, New Hampshire's vote in the Senate will be cast as a unit, for or against, all important legislation.

If Mr. Brown were elected, New Hampshire's vote would be split hopelessly. Mr. Keyes casting his lot with the Republicans and Mr. Brown going along with the Democrats.

New Hampshire might just as well have NO representation in the Senate as to have one REPUBLICAN and one DEMOCRAT offsetting and nullifying each other's acts.

There are many other arguments for the re-election of Senator Moses:

1. Since the death of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator Moses has been New England's only STATESMAN in Congress.

2. Should Senators Sreet and Watson fall by the wayside Nov. 8, Senator Moses would be the OUTSTANDING Republican leader on Capitol Hill.

3. Elected originally as a REPUBLICAN, he has always been one, never abandoning the party for any personal advantage he might have obtained thereby.

4. His rigid honesty in public life and his fearlessness in debate have made him admired even by his Democratic colleagues.

5. The Democratic Party would rather defeat Senator Moses for re-election than to return any other member of Congress.

The issue goes beyond politics. It goes beyond mere partisanship. It reaches down into the basic welfare of the Granite State in its dealings with the country as a whole.

Please ask yourselves, then, before you vote:

"Shall we swap an AKNOWLEDGED leader for a POTENTIAL leader? What can I, or the state itself, hope to gain by such a move? What could Mr. Brown if elected, do for me, or for New Hampshire which Senator Moses—able, forceful, widely known, highly influential, could do even better?"

There will be no doubt then about the outcome.

THE MOSES-FOR-SENATOR CLUB
of Washington, D. C.

A. S. Beane, Secretary.

U. S. BUILDING PLANS SUPPLY JOBS

Treasury Department Ready to Begin 142 Structures.

Washington.—Using funds from the $100,000,000 granted by the emergency relief and construction act passed by the last session of congress, a federal public building program that will ultimately give employment to hundreds of thousands of men is under way throughout the country.

That 400,000 persons are at present employed in connection with some phase of the construction of 41 post offices, custom houses, and other buildings was pointed out in Washington by Ferry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, who is director of the building program. A total of 100,000 are actually engaged in working on the buildings and 300,000 others in fabricating and material plants, he said.

Meanwhile, plans are being made to launch work on 142 more such construction projects, in 35 states involving an outlay of $20,810,000. This list includes new federal buildings that will cost between $300,000 and $100,000 each. The 41 projects now being erected each will cost more than $300,000.

Workmen in the West have also been encouraged by the act of the Reconstruction Finance corporation in granting a $40,000,000 loan to the Los Angeles metropolitan water district, which covers more than a dozen southern California cities.

This loan is to aid in piping water from the Colorado river above Hoover dam at a final cost of about $220,000,000. The loan will be made through the purchase of $40,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds of the water district.

Huge Sum Not Allocated.

In announcing the loan, officials in Washington said that 1,000 men probably would be employed by the end of this year and about 4,500 by next July.

Besides creation of employment directly on construction work, much indirect employment will be created, for a vast amount of materials and supplies will be required. The aqueduct itself will be 239 miles long. Eighty-five miles of 16-foot tunnel must be driven through the mountains and lined with concrete.

Of the $100,000,000 set aside by the last congress through the emergency relief and construction act as a means of providing employment through a public building program, $74,500,000 has thus far been allocated, leaving $25,500,000 yet to be assigned. It is expected that the greater part of this balance will be distributed for the construction of federal buildings that are to cost less than $100,000 each.

This third list of construction jobs will be forthcoming soon, according to announcement made at the time the second list was made public.

In the list of 142 projects costing between $300,000 and $100,000 each, New York state receives the largest number of projects, 24. California is second, with 17. Of the 35 states receiving such buildings, only 12 received but one structure.

Another federal agency, the War department, is also planning to provide work through a vast construction program. This program calls for the expenditure of $41,577,200 on flood control and rivers and harbors projects. By this program War department officials expect 25,000 persons to be removed from the ranks of the jobless.

Work to Begin Now
No delay in getting the program under way is expected by army engineers. Many of the projects already have been started, and plans have been drawn up for the rest.

Under authorization of the last congress, the War department also expects to spend $15,104,000 on construction work at military posts. This is expected to begin soon, and officials believe it will give work to 10,000 persons.

In announcing the fact that 400,000 persons are now at work on federal construction projects under the emergency relief and construction act, Director Heath said that by June 30, 1933, the government will have under contract virtually 90 per cent of the public works necessary for the next 25 years.

It is expected that millions of dollars will be saved the government when the construction of large working post offices is completed. Among the large post offices now under construction are those at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati,

Chicago, Kansas City, Atlanta, and Albany, N. Y.

Through the use of private architects for many of the projects, progress in carrying out the building program has been speeded up more than 100 per cent. Since the program was begun, contracts have been made with 264 architectural firms for plans on buildings representing a cost of more than $200,000,000.

During the last ten months 105 federal buildings have been completed at a total cost of about $310,000,000, according to Mr. Heath.

LEGION'S COMMANDER

Louis A. Johnson, an attorney of Clarksville, W. Va., who was elected national commander of the American Legion at the convention in Portland, Ore. He is forty-two years old and was in active combat service during the Meuse-Argonne offensive, afterward going to Germany with the Army of Occupation.

Nebraska Yields Bones of Camels

Roamed That Section About 3,000,000 Years Ago.

Denver, Colo.—The skeletons of a herd of eleven camels, found in Nebraska, 3,000,000 years old, will soon adorn the halls of the Colorado Museum of Natural History here.

The camels, although built almost the same as the modern camel common to the Sahara desert, are much smaller. The Nebraska prehistoric creature stood only three feet high.

Proof that the camels lived in Nebraska when that country was a desert of fine, blowing sand, comes from the strata of sand in which the fossils were found. They were native of the miocene age, according to Director J. D. Figgins of the museum.

For many years the camels roamed the sands. They did not travel fast. Large herds of them, thousands perhaps, would return for weeks to the same bed of sand at night. They would gather close together for rest and protection from night prowlers.

During this period that a herd slept on the same spot, some of them were bound to die. And in such a place were the skeletons found which were brought to Denver for the education of the world.

Archie, the skeleton of archidkoden meridionalis Nebraskensis, a mammoth elephant, which occupies an exhibition stall adjoining the small camels, also came from Nebraska. But the two animals never met. They could not have lived in the same type of country. Archie is only 20,000 years old, as compared with the 3,000,000 years of his neighbors.

Uses Window in Chest to Study Internal Diseases

Arnold's Park, Iowa.—Use of a window placed in the chest to observe the action of the heart, lungs and diaphragm of animals in the study of internal diseases has been perfected by Dr. Walter E. Mendenhall, former head of the Drake university physics department.

Mendenhall is head of the department of pharmacology at the Boston university school of medicine.

The device is expected to prove valuable in the treatment of tuberculosis, heart disease and lung disorders. The window is made of photographic film and is placed in the chest opening, inserted between the muscles.

Physicians believe it is possible that the window could be used for treatment of disease by ultraviolet light by substituting a quartz window for the photographic film window. Doctor Mendenhall demonstrated his experiment in April before the Federated Societies for Experimental Biology in Philadelphia.

Veteran Regains Memory and Kin After 14 Years

Rome, N. Y.—Separated from his wife and children for 14 years by a lapse of memory, Lewis N. Greeney, thirty-nine-year-old World war veteran, has just been reunited with his family here.

Greeney was injured at Camp Wadsworth, S. D., in 1918, when he saved a child from being run down by a truck. His memory was gone, and he knew nothing of his former life. Recently Greeney recalled he had once lived at Blossvale, N. Y., and through the American Legion his family was located.

Detective's Daughter Proves Self Good Sleuth

Seattle.—Rita Callahan, ten, daughter of Detective E. S. Callahan, is a sleuth in her own right and has $5 reward to prove it.

Rita found a wallet containing $21. She returned to the "scene of the crime," as all good detectives do. When a man came along, apparently seeking a lost article, Rita questioned him. Satisfied he was looking for the wallet and also satisfied he was the owner, she returned it to him. He gave her $5 for her sleuthing.

Motorists Get Free Gas as Tank Truck Is Struck

Seattle, Wash.—When a large gasoline truck overturned in a ditch, passing motorists became the recipients of hundreds of gallons of free fuel. The truck had to empty its 3,000 gallon container, before it could be towed out. Scores of motorists stood by to dip up the gasoline as it formed a miniature lake.

Relief From Neuralgia In Few Minutes

Quick Dissolving Property of BAYER ASPIRIN Starts Relief 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Think of a headache going in three or four minutes. The pains of neuralgia, neuritis or rheumatism being eased, often, in that little space of time!

Due to important, scientific developments in the famous Bayer Aspirin laboratories, millions of people are enjoying this almost unbelievably quick relief from pain.

That is because Bayer Aspirin dissolves almost instantly in the stomach. And thus almost INSTANTLY starts to ease pain. The average headache, for instance, eases in as little as four or five minutes. Think of what a time saver this is to busy people. Remember it is Genuine BAYER Aspirin which provides this unique property. So see that you get the real article when you buy. See that these three words "Genuine Bayer Aspirin" are on any box or bottle of aspirin that you buy. And that the name "Bayer" is stamped in the form of a cross on any tablet that you take.

Remember that when you buy. And remember, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the genuine. Take care you get the

Amusing "Frog Races"

The frog races are an annual affair called the "Calaveras County Frog Jumping Contests," held on or about May 20, at Angels Camp, Calif. This little town is the scene of Mark Twain's classic jumping frog tale, and it is probably this story that has suggested the present contests. The last contest was attended by at least 20,000 people and the scene was highly reminiscent of frontier days. A frog named Budweiser again won the world record and broke his former record by the tremendous leap of 13 feet 5 inches.

Identified by Love Letters

Yellowed love letters penned in 1890 resulted in identification of a body as that of John J. McCarthy, sixty-one, and saved him from burial in Potter's field at Peabody, Mass. A check found among the man's effects was traced by police to a trunk, long unopened, in storage in Boston. In the trunk were found the love letters written by McCarthy in his early manhood. Through these, authorities located a brother and a sister at Potsdam, N. Y.

Mother of 7—Still Young

The woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

Weekly News of Interest From a Few Towns Surrounding Antrim

DEERING

Daniel K. Clark, Mary, Jane and Treva Poling were at home to attend the Swift-Ekks wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry N. Holmes, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Sherwood and Dr. William J. Doherty were among the summer residents here recently.

Miss Mary Jane Ekks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ekks of Deering and Mount Dora, Fla., became the bride of Joseph Baker Swift of Tangerine, Fla., in an afternoon ceremony in the old church at Deering Center. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the international Christian Endeavor, and now conducting a nationwide speaking campaign for the selection of President Hoover, was the officiating clergyman.

The church was beautifully decorated in a color scheme of green and white. Preceding the ceremony Louis P. Elkins, of Concord, a summer resident here, sang very effectively "Oh Promise Me." Miss Jane Poling acted as accompanist, and played the wedding march from Lohengrin as the wedding party advanced from the rear of the church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Ruth Holsington of Canton, O., as matron of honor. Her bridesmaids were Miss Mary Poling of Deering and Miss Lois Shurter of Phoenixia, N. Y. Mr. Swift had as his best man, his cousin, Newcomb Fuller of Concord, Mass. The ushers were Demorest Cassidy of Amsterdam, N. Y., and Orson and Samuel Hathaway of Milton, Mass.

The bride's gown was of white satin, with tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was in blue, with bands of white fur; while the bridesmaids wore pink with similar trimmings. All carried bouquets of mixed flowers.

Following the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, High Pines, East Deering. The bride is a graduate of Northfield school and studied at Rollins college, Winter Park, Fla. Mr. Swift is the son of Mrs. Josephine A. B. Swift of Tangerine, Fla., and attended Tome school at Port Deposit, Md. He has a position with the

The Selectmen of Antrim have posted the Election Warrant in the required places for the biennial election on Tuesday, Nov. 8, at 10 o'clock, at the town hall. At this meeting the important business is voting for town, county, state and national candidates for office. It is hoped that our voters will turn out in large numbers and show the interest they should have at a time like the present.

The committee in charge of the Antrim Party wishes to announce that their annual party will be held on Saturday evening, November 5, at the Y W C. A. rooms, 140 Clarendon St., Boston. The people of Antrim are cordially invited to attend. There will be a short entertainment and refreshments served. Those intending to be present will please notify Forrest Appleton, 29 Loring St., Hyde Park, Mass., on or before November first. The approximate cost will be sixty-five cents per person.

In front of the nice residence of Arthur W. Proctor, on Main street, a fence is maintained with large, square posts—twenty in number. It did look just too bad, when our attention was called to the matter, to see pencil marks all over the face of these posts, and these marks are such that can't be washed off; only repainting can put them in the condition they were before being defaced. This looks like the thoughtless act of some child, but all young persons should be taught differently. If only one or a few posts were marked, that would have been too many, but for every one of the twenty to be so defaced, naturally makes the owner feel that he would like to know who did it.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

To The Honorable Judge of Probate For the County of Hillsborough

Your petitioner Frank E. Bass, of Antrim, in said County, respectfully represents that at a Court of Probate holden at Manchester, in said County, on the sixteenth day of September, A. D. 1932, a certain instrument, purporting to be the last will and testament of Clara L. Little, late of Antrim, in said County, deceased, was offered by Ralph D. Bass, a residuary legatee, therein named, for Probate; that the same was proved, approved and allowed, as the last will and testament of said Clara L. Little in common form and without notice; that no appeal has been prosecuted or claimed; and that your petitioner is a brother of said deceased and interested in said will; Wherefore he prays that the probate of said will may be re-examined, and the same proved in solemn form before the Court of Probate for said County, and that the former probate thereof be decreed void or affirmed, as to law and justice shall appear, agreeably to the laws of said State.

Dated the fifteenth day of October A. D. 1932.

FRANK E. BASS.

Hillsborough, ss.
COURT OF PROBATE

At a Court of Probate holden at Nashua in said County, on the 18th day of October A. D. 1932, upon examination of the foregoing petition, it is ordered that a hearing be had thereon at a Court of Probate to be holden at Peterborough, in said County, on the 25th day of November next, when and where you may appear and show cause, if any you have, why said will should not be approved and allowed; and that the said petitioners give notice to all persons interested therein, by causing said petition, and this order thereon, to be published once each week for three successive weeks in the Antrim Reporter, a newspaper printed at Antrim, in said County, the last publication to be at least seven days before said day of hearing; and also by giving in hand to, or leaving at the usual place of abode of, said Ralph G. Smith, Administrator, with will annexed, an attested copy of said petition and of this order thereon, at least twenty days before said day of hearing;

And said administrator with will annexed is ordered to summon the several subscribing witnesses to said will to ap-

High School Notes
The class in Commercial Geography of the Antrim High school, with their instructor, Miss Maxfield, have made visits to our industries and taken such notes as they could use; they have written very good papers about their visits, and The Reporter is privileged to use them. In this issue appears the first of the series:
THE WILSON SHOP
By Gertrude Clark
In 1922 the Wilson Shop was erected on West street, in Antrim, but later in 1928, it was erected on Grove street, because more room was needed.
Mr. Wilson selected Antrim for this business, because it is 100% American. When a boy Mr. Wilson worked in a loom mill.
The raw materials are obtained from Manchester, Alabama, Lexington, Texas, and North and South Carolina. The looms come from Pennsylvania and New York.
The lug strap is made in this factory, and is used on looms.
All the machinery needed for this work is made at this shop.
The process is: the leather is cut out, in the right shape, by a machine. Then upstairs the cloth is cut out, taken to a bench, rubbed over with glue, folded to the right shape, bent down in the form of a strap and a piece of leather is put in the bend or neck, and it is then put into a machine and left until another is made. Then it is put into a box to dry. After it is dried it is taken to a machine which cuts the ends off, and then to another which makes an opening near the end. They make box straps, some eight inches and some fourteen inches long.
The employees do not have to be experienced because machinery is used so extensively.
The products are sent to New Hampshire, the New England States, North and South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Boston and Texas. Most of the goods are shipped to the South now.
From three to six people are employed. The help works nine hours on week days and five hours on Saturdays. Mr. Wilson works from fourteen to sixteen hours a day.
The pay roll for the year amounts to $5,000.

The Antrim Woman's Club
Observed its annual Guest Night on Friday evening, Oct. 21, when about 150 members and guests assembled in the town hall. Greetings were given by the president, Mrs. Mildred Zabriskie, who introduced the speaker and announced the program.
The Antrim High school gave a program of music, under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Felker; Miss Virginia Temple, of Hillsboro, reader and tap dancer, gave a program of clever impersonations; Mrs. Ethel Roeder and Mrs. Vera Butterfield gave a group of songs, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Gertrude Thornton. This last number on the program, as is always the case when these ladies appear together, proved a most pleasing feature.
The speaker of the evening was Hon. Charles Tobey, of Temple, who gave an inspiring address on "The Balanced Ration." He mentioned toleration, inspiration and consperation, as some of the means by which the world may move forward to a brighter and better day, following the dark period through which we have passed.
The orchestra played during the social hour which followed, and refreshments of ice cream, cake and punch were served.
Mrs. Ethel Nichols had general charge of the affair as Guest Night chairman, ably assisted by Mrs. Mattie Proctor, in charge of decorations, Miss Sadie Lane and Mrs. Abbie Dunlap, in charge of refreshments, Mrs. Nellie Clark, presiding at the punch bowl.
Alice G. Nylander, Pub. Com.
The Industrial Revolution has changed this industry. It has changed the way of making the straps, because before it was necessary to make everything by hand, but now everything is done by machinery.
The Amoskeag Mills in Manchester have thirty-two thousand looms, and they use four straps on each loom.
The ticking is obtained from the southern mills, and the leather from Concord.
Mr. Wilson has the machinery now

To Save Famous Goodnight Herd of Buffalo

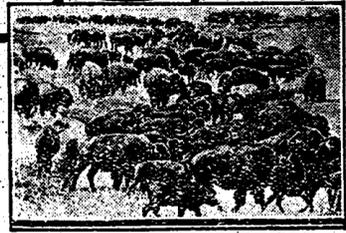

Col. Chas. Goodnight

Mrs. Chas. Goodnight

A Monarch of the Herd

A Part of the Goodnight Herd of Buffalo

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WHEN Col. Charles Goodnight died in Tucson, Ariz., on December 12, 1920, at the age of ninety-three years, it not only marked the passing of one of the most interesting figures of the Old West but it also seemed likely to spell the doom of the largest herd of buffalo in the United States—more than 200 in number but only a pitiful remnant of the millions which had once roamed the Great Plains. For the famous Goodnight herd of buffalo in Texas had passed into other hands and there were sensational rumors afloat that the new owners were planning a "big game hunt" where Eastern sportsmen (upon payment of a big fee) would be allowed to enjoy the thrills of an old-time buffalo chase.

Immediately a storm of protest against the destruction of the Goodnight buffalo herd arose among Texans and the legislature passed a bill authorizing the state game and fish commission to purchase the buffalo, provided a suitable place for keeping them could be obtained. But no appropriation was forthcoming for the project and it was not until a syndicate, headed by A. C. Nicholson of Dallas, was formed to take over the buffalo and a part of the Goodnight estate and to finance the project of maintaining the herd intact that its preservation was assured. No finer monument could be erected to the memory of Col. Charles Goodnight, "the Father of the Texas Panhandle," and his wife, Mary Dyer Goodnight, than the preservation of this rearguard of the "hunting herds" of long ago. In fact, the existence of this particular herd is due largely to the efforts of "Aunt Mary" Goodnight, as she was lovingly known in the Texas Panhandle. Back in the late seventies this pioneer woman, witnessing the ruthless slaughter of the buffalo by hide hunters, realized that it was only a question of time until the great shaggy beasts would be extinct. She began talking to "Uncle Charley" about capturing a few of the calves and starting a herd of their own.

So in June, 1870, Colonel Goodnight roped two buffalo calves and gave them to his wife. She was much interested in the little brown fellows, was greatly delighted at the alacrity with which they learned to drink milk and was surprised at their appetites, which seemed to be insatiable, one of her pets requiring as much as three gallons a day. Two years later a neighboring ranchman captured two full-grown buffalo and presented them to Mrs. Goodnight and three calves were also added to her little group, the present of her brother. From this beginning came the great herd of nearly 250 today. On the "zaine refuge" which the Goodnights established on their ranch were also started herds of elk, deer and antelope, but they never thrived, as did the buffalo.

It was on the Goodnight ranch also that a new animal was created—the catalo, produced by crossing buffalo with Aberdeen Angus cattle. This hybrid, according to Colonel Goodnight, was harder than range cattle, thrived on less food, was immune from all disease, did not stampede so easily nor drift with storms and had other advantages which made it a more valuable type of beef animal for the plains. He found an enthusiastic disciple in the work in the person of the late "Buffalo" Jones and at one time it seemed likely that their experiments in producing the catalo might have a revolutionary effect upon the cattle industry of this country.

Although Texas claims Col. Charles Goodnight as one of her greatest men, he was a native of another state, Illinois. He was born there March 5, 1826. Just three days after Texas declared her independence from Mexico, so his history paralleled her history. His parents moved to Texas in 1845, the year Texas entered the Union, and young Goodnight grew up as a pioneer of the Lone Star state with its hardships as a part of his every-day life.

By the time he was nineteen he decided that he knew Texas pretty well and was about ready to move farther west to a newer country—California. With a young companion, and an ox team and a few horses, they started on the long trek west. But by the time they had gone a few hundred miles into West Texas they decided that the state was large enough for them. So Goodnight went back to Palo Pinto county where he ranched and supported his widowed mother. During the Civil war he served with the Texas Rangers, fighting mostly Indians, Mexicans and cattle thieves.

After the war, there was no cattle market. The plains swarmed with herds, and cattle could be bought on credit. Goodnight saw the necessity of finding a western market. So did some others, but the young plainsman, then thirty, differed from the rest in that he determined to find it. There was already one, up at Abilene, Kan., where many of the cattlemen took their herds to sell, but Goodnight saw a greater opportunity up in New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming, where there were Indian agencies looking for beef and willing to pay well for it.

The drawback in the scheme was that between the Panhandle and this promising territory lay a great expanse of desert and territory inhabited by Comanche Indians ready to pounce upon invaders and drive off the cattle. Without heavy protection, no herd could get through. Goodnight knew that as well as any of his neighbors, and he laid the plan before them. He knew the country, and mapped out a route by which he hoped to trail his animals up into Colorado. But the other cowmen had troubles of their own to attend to when he sought their co-operation. They saw only the danger connected with the venture, and excused themselves.

But young Goodnight found a partner. He was Oliver Loving, who became one of his closest companions. Loving was probably the most experienced cowman in Texas at the time. In 1850, while the Comanches were quiet, he had taken a herd through to Colorado on a direct route. Young Goodnight had helped him out of the timber country as far as Red river. Loving also had trailed cattle into Illinois and to the New Orleans markets. He asked to go with Goodnight on his trail-blazing venture.

Goodnight had prepared a huge bolt of rare wagon, requiring twenty oxen to pull, which he believed the first chuck wagon ever seen in the cow country. Each man gathered up his own cattle, making a combined herd of some thousand head of mixed stuff. They started in June, with eighteen adventuresome cow hands and reached Fort Sumner two months later.

On the whole trip not an Indian had been sighted. Through 600 miles of totally uninhabited country a new route for Texas cattle had been blazed, immediately becoming known as the Goodnight trail, the first and greatest of the colonel's trail breaking achievements. Later it was extended through the Raton mountains, past Pueblo and Denver and into Cheyenne and Fort Laramie. Three hundred thousand cattle passed over it in six years, while thousands perished on the way or fell into the hands of the Comanches.

When Goodnight arrived at Fort Sumner he found the government had 9,000 Apaches "loose herded like cattle" there. Loving and Goodnight sold their cattle two years old and up on the hoof for eight cents a pound, an enormous price for the time. Loving took the stock cattle cut back by the government into Colorado and Goodnight took a part of the hands and $6,000 in gold and silver, and returned to Palo Pinto county. There he purchased extensively of his neighbors and trailed back over the route he had marked out.

It was in the spring of 1867 that Loving lost his life. The partners started with two herds, the two men going ahead with the first one. The second herd, made up of weaker cattle, lost 1,000 head to the Comanches before it had reached the Pecos. Another band of Indians attacked Goodnight and Loving on the Clear fork of the Brazos. Joe Loving, who was no relation to Oliver Loving, was shot in the neck, the herd stampeded and 100 head of cattle ran out. Goodnight pulled an arrow out of Loving's neck with a pair of nippers and Joe got well.

After the herd had been driven about 100 miles up the Pecos from Horseshoe Crossing, Oliver Loving decided to take one man and go ahead to Fort Sumner, One-Armed Bill Wilson, the "coolest head in the outfit," according to Colonel Goodnight's description, was selected as escort. What happened on the trip is still an epic of the cow camps.

The second day out, in the southern part of New Mexico, the two men were attacked by some 500 Comanche warriors. The only shelter was the Pecos, four miles away. They headed for it on a long run. Dismounting, they hid in the cane brakes. An Indian, creeping through the cane, shot Loving in the arm and side. Not wishing to die and his folks not know of his end, Loving persuaded Wilson to go for help. Wilson swam the river and, barefooted, walked three days down the Goodnight trail, through cactus, mesquite and other plants containing thorns until he came to the Goodnight herd.

Colonel Goodnight took all available hands and set out for the scene of the fight, sixty miles away. Late the next day the party arrived, but there was no trace of Loving. Two weeks later a Texan told Goodnight the story-ing, news Loving was at Fort Sumner. Goodnight hastened there and learned that the day after Wilson's departure for help the Indians had left Loving's Bend, as the place is now called. Loving had dragged himself five miles to a narrow pass, where he remained five days, and was eating a glove when some Mexicans found him. He gave the Mexicans $150 to take him the 150 miles in a cart to Fort Sumner. Although Loving was walking about, the wound in his arm was infected, and nine days after Goodnight's arrival Loving died.

Goodnight went on up into Colorado and in January returned. Exhuming the coffin, he drove with it 600 miles to Weatherford, Texas, where he delivered it to Loving's family. A year later he turned over to the Loving estate $40,000, gave his partner, Sheek, $20,000, and with $20,000 as his own share, went his way alone.

The second of the famous trails blazed by the colonel was that known as the New Goodnight trail, from Alamogordo, N. M., to Granada, Colo.

Colonel Goodnight found ten cents a head was being charged for all stock which passed through Raton Pass, the only known passage through the Raton mountains, in New Mexico, by the famous "Uncle Dick" Wootton, the "keeper of the gate, through the mountains." The colonel refused to pay. He struck another trail, 100 miles shorter, through the mountains and up to Cheyenne.

Goodnight was married on July 26, 1870, to Miss Mary A. Dyer of Tennessee, and soon afterwards established a ranch in Colorado. But the panic of 1873 ruined him financially and he had just 1,800 head of cattle with which to make a new start. He turned his face as always toward the new country, and the Panhandle seemed to hold the greatest possibilities with the fewest inhabitants, in fact, none but Indian and buffalo. It held, though, that great Palo Duro canyon, with its rim of Cap Rock, its ragged depth of 1,300 feet, its marvelous valley 15 miles wide in places, a paradise for cattle. Palo Duro canyon proper begins in the western part of Randall county and extends approximately 75 miles.

Colonel Goodnight took supplies for six months, erected a four-room log house and returned to Denver for Mrs. Goodnight.

At this time John George Adair of Wrath-dair, Ireland, was consumed with the idea of a ranch in America. He was breezing about in Denver, talking cattle and range and looking for a man big enough to handle his project. A few years previous John Adair had opened a brokerage office in New York city, had met and married an American girl in 1860, and they then divided their time between their estate in Ireland and the joys of the New world. Mrs. Adair was the daughter of Major General Wadsworth and the young widow of Montgomery Richie, attached to General Wadsworth's staff.

John Adair and Charles Goodnight met in Denver and made a contract which brought the first development to the Panhandle. It is today, the J. A. Ranch, with its 400,000 acres and its 15-room ranch house that was built around the log home of Charles Goodnight. The ranch at one time comprised 1,300,000 acres and more than 100,000 head of cattle.

The first contract made was to run five years and specified that 12,000 acres should be bought the first year with additional increase to 25,000 acres. Adair, however, so respected the judgment of Charles Goodnight that he gave him personal authority to buy what he saw fit, and at the end of the first five years 92,629 acres were on record.

Goodnight bought land at various prices as well as in various places, paying on an average of 25 cents to 35 cents an acre. He admitted that he bought up every good water hole, every good range, every place a rancher was likely to go, and that it was the "very devil to survey." This original section was called the Old Crazy Quilt.

John Adair bought the land, gave Goodnight a $2,500 yearly salary and at the end of the five years one-third of the land and cattle, but charged 10 per cent interest for the use of the money during that time. It might seem a little salary, and a big rate of interest, but Charles Goodnight knew he would be rich in the end, and incidentally the contract was renewed for another five years.

From the J. A. ranch Colonel Goodnight next laid off a trail to Dodge City, Kan., traversing territory then inhabited only by Indians and buffalo. It was 270 miles in length and known as the Palo Duro-Hodge City trail. This was the third of the great trails he had blazed.

After a partnership of ten years with Adair, Colonel Goodnight sold his third interest in the property to his partner and together with a man named Moore from Kansas City bought the Quitaque ranch. Later he sold this property and in 1888 purchased what was known as the Goodnight ranch which he operated until recent years. Mrs. Goodnight died in 1928, and a year later Colonel Goodnight's marriage to Miss Corinne Goodnight, a twenty-six-year-old tele-graph operator and former nurse in Montana, attracted nation-wide attention. Although bearing the same name, the ninety-one-year-old plainsman and his young bride were not related, their romance developing during a correspondence started by the similarity of their names.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 23 Redoubling

WHEN an opponent has doubled your bid or your partner's, it is never advisable to change the declaration unless a really advantageous switch can be made. If your partner is a sound bidder, do not worry about flying in his rescue. More than likely he has no desire to be rescued. He might even be prepared to redouble, in which case he would most bitterly resent your needless attempt to "save" him.

Many players are entirely unaware of the highly advantageous odds in favor of a redouble at contract. These favorable odds are produced by the huge increase of "trick values" in a successful doubled and redoubled contract.

The following table is computed on the assumption that the declarer will never fail to make his contract by more than one trick. This assumption may be considered arbitrary, but between partners who thoroughly understand each other's bidding only an abnormal distribution should result in the loss of more than one trick when one or the other has redoubled.

BONUS INCREASE ON SUCCESSFUL REDOUBLE

WHEN NOT VULNERABLE

No Trumps	Majors	Minors	Tricks	Points
1.....	120	110	90	100
2.....	190	170	130	100
3.....	290	230	170	100
4.....	330	290	210	100
5.....	400	350	250	100
6.....	470	410	290	100
7.....	540	470	330	100

WHEN VULNERABLE

No Trumps	Majors	Minors	Tricks	Points
1.....	170	160	140	200
2.....	240	220	180	200
3.....	310	280	220	200
4.....	350	340	260	200
5.....	450	400	300	200
6.....	520	460	340	200
7.....	590	520	380	200

To illustrate how these odds work out, let us assume that a player not vulnerable has bid six hearts and been doubled by the opponents. If he fails to make his contract by one trick he would pay a penalty of 100 points. Had he redoubled his penalty would have been increased only by 100 additional points. Now, assuming that the declaration was successful, doubled and redoubled, the winning player would score 720 below the line and 100 above for his successful contract. In short, the redouble would have increased his score by 410 points. Supposing that the contract would hinge on the failure or success of one finesse or one drop, the odds favoring success in a redouble are 4.1 against 1.

Should the bidding indicate, however, that there might be a wide swing, either above or below contract, it should be borne in mind that the bonus for over tricks is generally only one-half as great as the penalty for additional under tricks. Therefore, if the information has not been more or less exact, it would tend to diminish the advantage of a redouble.

Slams

When contract was a very young game, players new to its strategy and somewhat overawed by the unheard-of necessity of having to bid for a contract to score it, grasped at every straw that might help them in the novel and hazardous enterprise of bidding for a slam. "Slam cues" of every sort and description were invented. Spectacular methods some of these were, by which slams could be arrived at only after an intricate and horribly confusing series of bids, which purported to show the location of all the aces and (in some systems) even kings.

Fortunately, for the good of the game of contract, it was not long before more thoughtful types of players came to recognize the inherent weaknesses of this supposedly technical "slam bidding." It soon became apparent that by the time partners succeeded in locating all the aces in the pack, they had usually managed to push each other up to a slam bid which failed because of the lack of additional honor-cards and distributional values to back up their aces.

Modern contract has discarded all the outworn methods of "slam bidding," and recognized the fact that the only way to arrive at a sound slam contract is just as one arrives at a sound game contract—by partnership information, trick valuation and deduction.

A few basic rules which must always be adhered to for successful slam bidding are:

From your first declaration to your last, concentrate on showing dependable honor-trick values.

Be sure that every bid you make has some sound reason for its existence.

Never give a direct inference for a slam unless you have some slight doubt as to its favorable outcome and wish to invite your partner's cooperation in deciding the matter; be cause the most important rule of all is this: When you are sure of a slam, bid it; do not ask your partner to bid it for you.

Scraps of Humor

GROWING IMPATIENT

The office boy knocked timidly on the door of the manager's private office. "Well, what is it?" asked the manager testily, when the boy entered. "There's a salesman outside—a man with a mustache," replied the boy. "Tell him I'm in conference," snapped the manager. "I did," the office boy informed him. "Now he wants to know if you'll be out of it before he has a beard, too."

RUN OF HARD LUCK

Hodge—Poor Mrs. Fickie has always been unlucky in the selection of her husbands.

Dodge—Why do you say that? Hodge—Her first husband was a guide in the Adirondacks; her second was a baseball umpire; her third was a manufacturer of dynamite, and her last was an aviator.

Mere Technicality

"Ha! Ha! You poor old henpecked! I saw you yesterday having to sew a button on your coat."

"You're a liar. I tell you I did. I saw you with my own eyes."

"I tell you you didn't. It was my wife's coat."—Dublin Opinion.

A Bit Inconvenient

"How did you find the dog you bought for your week-end cottage?" "A splendid watch dog. He lies in the house and won't let us go in."—Der Wahre Jakob.

Fitting Comeback

John—Where are all the nice girls this evening? Pauline—Out with the handsome men.—Vart Hem (Stockholm).

Best Method

"Did you catch your husband firing?" "Of course. Wasn't that how you caught yours?"—Byrstander (London).

Now They Don't Speak

Ella—A strange man tried to kiss me last night, dearie. Bella—He must have been a strange man to want to do that, honey.

SAD THOUGHT

Ruth (poetically)—Isn't this glorious? Couldn't you just drift thus forever, down Life's long, shadowy stream?

Jack (prosaically)—Well, yes, I could drift down all right, but it'd be no joke piddling back.

Wrong Answer

"What became of that clerk you had here?" "A man came in to buy a book to read on his honeymoon, and the stupid assistant offered him 'Travels With a Donkey.'"—Das Kleine Witzblatt.

Revenge

First Girl Usher—What's up? You look tickled. Second Ditto—A boy friend of mine came in with his latest girl, and I've separated them.

Much Worse

"What emotion one must feel facing a wild bull that is going to attack one, and it falls, struck by lightning." "Yes, but the emotion must be greater when it is not struck by lightning."—Gazzettino Illustrato (Venice).

Bad Beginning

"She said I was interesting and brave." "You could never marry a woman who deceived you from the start."—Karikaturen (Oslo).

She went ahead and began to clamber down the cliffs. Half-way down she wondered why he was not following. She looked up just in time to see him, standing at the mouth of the cave, clutching a heavy bag; he had been tying the mouth of it. Now he cast it outward so that it fell, rolling and dropping to disappear at last in the snow-bank below. And then he began, though hesitatingly, to follow her.

"That's one thing Mark King won't get," he announced with emphasis. "At last he stood beside her in the snow. 'That bagful is mine! There's a fortune in it—and it's mine.'"

"This stuff is disgusting. Just now the thought of gold sickened."

"We are wasting time," she reminded him.

He followed her to the cave, casting a last look behind him.

Gloria was trying to put out the fire; if ill fortune should lead Brodie's crowd here, it would be just as well if they found no smoldering sticks to tell them that the fugitives could not be far off. She called to Gratton to help her.

"Maybe," he said thoughtfully, "I'd better bring that bag in here and hide it."

"No," she said. "Leave it where it is. We must hurry back to the other cave."

But he grew stubborn over it. Heedless of her expostulations, he left her extinguishing the fire and went back for the gold. He appeared, dragging the heavy sack after him, and disappeared swiftly, going into the deeper dark of the further end of the cave. What a treacherous, thieving, petty animal he was!

She started and whirled about. There was a new sound in the air, a low murmur, a vague murmur. Men's voices. Her first thought was of King; then she knew that it was too soon for him to have gotten out of the mountains, found assistance, and returned.

Gloria whirled again, this time toward the dark into which Gratton had gone. Blindly she hurried after him; clutched at his sleeve.

"Listen!" she whispered. "They are outside. They have followed you!" The voices came nearer, rose higher. Gratton began to shake as with a terrible chill.

"If they find me—oh, my God, if they find me—they killed a man they thought had the bacon—I had it all the time! My God, Gloria, if they find me—"

"Sh!" she commanded. "Be still! Maybe they will go by—"

Two or three men out there were speaking at once; then all were silent. The silence lasted so long that Gloria began to breathe again. Surely, surely Brodie and his men had gone—

Then again came Brodie's deep, sinister voice:

"Back this way, boys," he shouted. "He's gone in here. We've trapped the dirty white rat."

Gratton, had he been left to his own devices, would have stood stock-still where he was, frozen to the ground in terror. Gloria tugged at him, whispering over and over: "They are coming! Don't you hear them? Quick! We must try to hide."

At last he seemed to awaken from a trance; he started and began hurrying with her, crowding by her, stumbling on ahead in the darkness, seeking the cave's unfathomed depths of darkness. Gloria, looking back, saw Brodie's great bulk outlined against the snow outside. He came in; she saw his rifle; his figure was absorbed in the shadows. She saw other men following him; how many she did not know. She had bumped into a wall of rock.

They could go no further. This was the end. Brodie shouted: "Gratton! Hyster step out lively like a man now, we got you anyway." Then he began to gather the scattered firewood; a match flared in his hand; his face leaped out of the dark like a devil's. Gloria's heart sank in despair; she felt as though she were going to faint.

But all the time her hands had been groping. At the moment when she felt that her knees were giving way under her, she found where an arm of the cave continued, narrow, slanting upward steeply, cluttered with blocks of stone. She tugged at Gratton's sleeve; she crept into this place and felt him close behind her, crowding, trying to press by her. She gave way briefly, felt him scrape past, and began crawling, following. A few feet further on they came to the end of the tunnel. They were in a pocket with no outlet save the way they had come. She stood, turned toward the front of the cave, and waited.

"Get a fire going, boys," Brodie's rambling bass was calling. "The little skunk's run to a hole; we'll smoke him out."

Brodie lit his fire. The other men—dully she counted them now; there were five of them all told—were gathering wood, heaping it on. The light flared higher, brighter. She could see the faces of the men now; their eyes reflecting the fire, looking like the eyes of wolves. Brodie carried his rifle as though he fully intended using it. At his side a man they called Benny fidgeted and blinked. By Benny stood a scarecrow of a man, Brall. Close by were a squat Italian and the man who had brought the "judge" to marry her to Gratton, the leering Steve Jarrold.

"More fire, boys," called Brodie. "I think I see where he is."

It appeared clear that immediate discovery was inevitable. Gloria thought of King with wild longing, while Gratton cringed and tried to screen his body with hers.

"Here's the grub he stole!" It was Benny's cracked, nervous voice, full of wrath.

The light of the fire flared higher, brighter. Suddenly the man Jarrold called sharply:

"There's some one with him. There's two of 'em, Brodie. Go easy!"

"I don't care how many's with him or who they are," Brodie bellowed.

"The grubstunting that has got us coming to him. Step out, you lily-livered sneak, and take your medicine."

Gloria pressed back against the rock, her flesh quivering. She saw two men and then another two coming toward her. The first sound broke from Gratton's lips now, a little gurgling moan. Then Gloria, with more shuddersome thought of rough hands upon her than of a rifle ball, broke away from her cowering companion and came hastily to meet them.

"I'm coming out," she cried.

It was all that she could do to hold herself erect and come back into the more open cave. In the flickering half-light she looked a slim frightened boy.

"All of a sudden the woods is getting all cluttered up with folk," grunted Benny. "Who in blazes are you, kid? An' where's your mamma?"

A shout broke from Jarrold. He clutched her shoulder and drew her closer to him, his face thrust down to hers.

"Let me go!" she cried.

"Easy does it," said Jarrold. "Easy—kid! I'm of a notion I've seen that face of yours somewhere."

"Never mind the kid," Brodie was growling savagely. "It's Gratton first. Out with him, Benny."

The others bore down upon Gratton. He shrieked at them; he heaved shrilly; he battered them with his fists, striking weak, vain blows. Benny, though the smaller man, had him by the collar.

"So," said Brodie heavily.

Gratton began an incoherent pleading, arrested impatiently by Brodie's great voice.

"Shut up! You've had your innings; it's mine now. You swiped grub when it's the same thing as slitting a man's gullet. Now you get yours!"

He jerked up his rifle. Benny and the Italian let Gratton go and jumped nimbly aside. Gratton stumbled and sagged.

"Stop!" Gloria shrieked. She broke away from Jarrold's grasp and ran toward Brodie. "You don't know what you are doing. You—"

"Close your trap, kid," Brodie thundered at her. "Unless you want the second bullet."

"Easy does it, Brodie," Jarrold shouted. "She ain't no kid, I tell you. She's a girl. That's Ben Gaynor's girl, the one Gratton wanted to marry, the one King took away from him. Keep your eye peeled; King would be around somewhere!"

Brodie said ponderously, "Ben Gaynor's girl, you say? Then we're red hot on the right trail, boys! You know what her and King would be after!"

"The gold is here, Brodie!" Gratton cried out wildly. "King had got to it before us, but I've found it. I was coming back to tell you—"

Brodie had small liking for a coward and now his bull's voice cut Gratton's chatter short.

"No solid mountain of gold is going to save your hide—"

Benny began to jig up and down in a frenzy of excitement.

"Hold your hand, Brodie, you big fool," he shouted. "If he does know where it is, give him a show to lead us to it. Before King gets back. If you popped him off now, how would we know where to look?"

Brodie snarled at Benny. But he saw wisdom in obeying the command to hold his hand. Gratton began a rapid, vehement talking, explaining, arguing, pleading; he had not meant to steal the food; he could lead them to the gold.

"Shut up!" Brodie cried disgustedly.

"So's you keep your lying face closed. I'll give you one show. Step lively; where is it?"

Gratton turned and sped toward the spot where he had hid the gold. Brodie, his rifle shifting in his hands, leaped after him. Gratton was down on his hands and knees, scratching among the loose stones like a dog digging for a buried bone. Brodie put a heavy hand on his shoulder and jerked him back, hurling him to one side. Thus it was Brodie who found the bag and dragged it forward to the fire, dumping its contents on the ground. All rushed forward and snatched up bits of the ore that had rolled from the sack; one of them shouted in wonder:

"Another seized the nugget from his hands; they all talked at once."

Gloria had stood powerless to move. Now she saw that in their flush of excitement no one was looking toward her. She began slowly, silently, edging toward the side of the cave, toward the way out. Her one thought was to dart out and hurry up the cliff to come to the hiding place of which Mark King had told her.

"I never see such gold, and me an old-timer in the mines." It was Steve Jarrold muttering. "This was broke off the mother lode. Oh, my Gawd!"

Gloria made another quiet step—and another. Still no one saw her. Another step; she went quicker; their backs were toward her. And still no one saw. Yes, Gratton alone had seen. He watched her with bulging eyes. She could read his thought so plainly: he was screwing up his courage to make a dash for the open himself. His eyes followed her step by step. Oh, if only he would look in some other direction! If any one of them saw Gratton's telltale face—

Then Gratton began a slow withdrawal from the others; he meant to do as he saw her doing.

Gloria tasted the clean fresh outside air; she was within three paces of the line of snow. Then there was a sudden noise; Gratton, inching off backward, had stumbled over a dead stick. The men by the fire were startled out of their oblivion. She made a dash for the exit. In two great strides Jarrold was upon her and had caught her by the shoulders, dragging her back. And Gratton stood again, his feet glued to the ground.

"Trying to make a sneak for it!" boomed Brodie. "I'll show you—"

"Not yet, Brodie, you big fool!" yelled Benny. "This is only a sackful. He's got to show us where this come from."

Gratton pointed to Gloria with shaking finger.

"King found it first. She was with him. I made her show me the sack of gold. I was going to go back to your camp, to tell you—"

"Cut it," commanded Brodie. "Leave out the lies and talk straight and fast. Where is the rest of it? Where did this come from?"

"I'm trying to tell you," said Gratton hurriedly. "There—there's another cave; up above. That's where King hid his camp; that's where I got the sack. It's up there—"

"No wonder she wanted to skip out," jeered Steve Jarrold. "Where's King all this time?" he demanded. "Up in the other cave, maybe?"

"No," Gloria said dully, seeking to jerk away from his evil glance and whiskey-laden breath. "He has gone—"

"That's good; let him go. We don't care, do we? Eh, girlie? But gone where?"

"We were short of food—he is hunting—maybe he has gone for help—"

"And you showed Gratton where he hid his gold? That's a nice little she-trick, ain't it? Well, while the showing's good, lead us to the rest of it."

Gratton, grown nimble, darted ahead with Brodie always close at his heels. Gloria, forced on by Jarrold, came next, and after them the others. They made the climb safely and hastened into the upper cave eagerly.

"It's somewhere back there," said Gratton.

"More fire," shouted Brodie. He tossed on an armful of dry wood; the flames caught and roared; shadows quivered and danced. Already Benny was at the far end of the cave; the others ran after him. Even Jarrold relinquished Gloria's arm, eager to be in at the finding. But he called to her as he went:

"You stick where you are. I'm not forgetting you this time."

Fascinated, she watched them. They ran like blood-thirsty dogs that had briefly lost their quarry, that were seeking everywhere, in every cranny, with slavering jaws. They turned aside into side-pockets of the main cavern; they got torches and looked high and low; they went back and forth, up and down; they stumbled, against one another and cursed angrily; they caught up bits of stone, ran back to the fire to see if the fragments were shot with gold; cursed and hurled the useless things from them, and ran back again, to jostle and seek and be first; they were not so much like dogs now as human hogs, fighting to get first into the trough.

But they did not forget Gratton, and they did not forget Gloria. No escape now was possible.

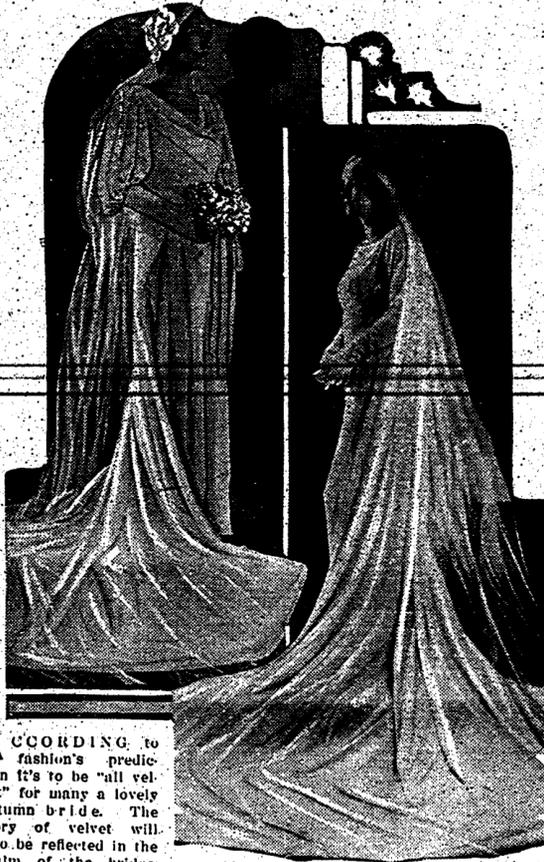

For an hour they sought tirelessly. Their fagots burned out; the smoke choked them; they coughed and cursed, came out for fresh air, dived into the dark again. The short day was passing; the entering light, grew dimmer, along straight belted lines has a narrow bib of black galyak.

And still they searched.

Comes the Bride in Lovely Velvet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ACCORDING to fashion's prediction it's to be "all velvet" for many a lovely autumn bride. The glory of velvet will also be reflected in the realm of the bridesmaid, in that this picturesque individual is to wear most ravishing headgear (brimmed or brimless) together with little jackets and other such fan-tastes as neck ruffles, girdles, bows and muffs made all of velvet in as delectable colors as fancy can picture.

The whereof of this fair for velvet for the smart bridal cortege is easily accounted for in that the call of the new modes is for the most beautiful and luxurious fabrics that it is possible for human ingenuity to devise. Naturally fashion turns to velvet as the exponent of all that is coveted in the way of sumptuous weaves for, we ask you, was there ever a material which so perfectly interprets the desired note of elegance as velvet?

One of the charms of velvet as a medium for the wedding gown is that it shows handsomest when it is styled with utmost simplicity. The wedding gowns pictured bear out this statement. The classic simplicity of these models instantly makes its appeal to discriminating taste.

A very interesting feature about these gowns is that an entirely different type of velvet is employed in the making of each. The exquisite gown to the left in the picture declares in favor of the new dull-surfaced white velvet. The suppleness and draping qualities of the velvet yield graciously to the soft puff treatment of the sleeves and at the neck of the directoire bodice. The cap is trimmed with petals made of the same dull velvet.

Shown to the right is a bride who chooses white transparent velvet for her gown in a simple princess line unadorned—enhancing her own loveliness by the luster and quality of the fabric. The wide-at-the-ankle sleeves and the high neckline are details to be noted. She carries a little prayer book instead of a bouquet.

Speaking of velvet-batted bridesmaids, an early this-season wedding scene took on glowing autumnal colorings in that the attendants wore, captivating little hats made of ruddy brown velvet. Their frocks were of yellow-crepe topped with short tulle jackets in nasturtium shades. The bouquets of dahlias which each carried were in the superb golden and bronze and deep red tones for which they are noted.

As to the members of the smart set who witnessed the ceremony, they flaunted velvet on their heads, about their necks and on their hands which is literally true, for the majority wore velvet hats, for as every woman knows when it comes to dressy millinery, velvet is ever first choice. Some of these chapeaux were quite wide-brimmed, for the large velvet hat which Bruyere launched at the beginning of the season has met with flattering success. Perhaps the most striking effects were the ensembles of heret, box-planted neck ruche, pocketbook and gloves all of velvet.

The new velvet gloves must be seen to be appreciated. They are really charming. Of course they must be worn at the right time and with the right costume.

COLORFUL HATS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fashion is having its fling at color via clever little chapeaux such as these. Each is an Agnes model. The skull cap at the top is in bright red, stitched all over in rows as close as the machine can work them. The flower-like ornament is also stitched, with a frill to give it a finish. The other hat is in a beautiful sapphire blue. The adorable white tulle wrap has a velvet scarf which shows a charming arrangement about the neckline of the coat. The frock is also in sapphire blue. Both of these hats are unmistakably youthful. They are smart and utterly devastating and, according to the latest mode, they are velvet.

New Frock
A leaf-green wool crepe frock made along straight belted lines has a narrow bib of black galyak.

Straighter Skirts
Skirts this fall are to be definitely straighter for daytime; many of the skirts for evening show fullness, gathered, or plaited, both front and back.

SILHOUETTE PLAYS PART IN DRESSING

Take your choice. Your evening silhouette this fall and winter will make you look either like a floor lamp or a pencil.

Broad and lace dresses usually follow the lampshade silhouette with huge sleeves, full and loose to the wrist, or to the middle of the lower arm, or sleeves puffed above the elbow. Some sleeves are stiffened with horsehair.

The pencil silhouette is achieved with skin-tight costumes, designed with straight lines marked by a slight flare at the bottom. Usually these models have a draped bodice and covered shoulders.

For daytime, a leading American designer says all skirts in dresses are cut with a straight back and bias front. Skirt lengths are about eight to ten inches from the floor. The wide shoulder line and bloused back distinguish the waist of daytime frocks.

Fashionable Interested in Sleeves and Gloves

Those new sleeve lengths that Chanel is showing in her winter collection are causing quite a lot of varied comment. They are impressive for the first sight of them makes a phrase something like this pop into your mind, "Just a minute till I rise out this pair of hose and I'll be with you!" For you feel sure that the mannequin has just shoved her long sleeves up her arm to a couple of inches above the wrist to keep the cuffs from getting wet, and forgot to pull them down again!

But they do have their virtues. Gloves, on occasion, come up to meet them and their being different like that gives us all something to talk about.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

Good Word for Starlings
Stomachs of 14 starlings killed near Norristown, Pa., showed the contents consisted of 95 per cent of clover weevils, a destructive plant pest. The record was sent to the state department of agriculture in defense of its claims that starlings are beneficial to farmers.

Indian Wampum

John Fitzpatrick says that wampum was made "of a comparatively rare shell of great beauty, which was pierced longitudinally and strung upon deer skin thongs. These strings were woven into bands or belts, and the size of the belt was generally proportioned to what the Indians considered the significance of the occasion."—Washington Star.

A Doctor's Beauty Secret

TAKE it from your doctor, beauty is more than "skin deep." It begins with your digestive system. Facial blemishes, eruptions and skin troubles merely reflect an upset stomach. Garfield's is the pleasant Garfield's way. A cap nightly, for several weeks will do more for your complexion than costly cosmetics. (It will strengthen your health.)

HUSH!

Weekly Letter by George Proctor, Deputy Fish and Game Warden

Talk about Game Wardens sitting on top of the world. Listen to this one. "Bill" Callahan of Keene is sure sitting pretty. A brand new uniform, a brand new (four) Ford and one of the very few candidates in the state that's sure of his election to the New Hampshire Legislature. Bill is on both tickets. Can you beat that? "Bill" is the oldest man in point of service in the New Hampshire House. Although BILL is seventy-two years young, he can show us younger Wardens a lot of new tricks. When it comes to walking in the underbrush. Well, just try it.

The field trials held at Beech hill Columbus Day were well attended. It was a real fox hunters' day. Cold and a bitter wind. There was a large crowd present and the hunt was good. A roast beef and lamb dinner at noon cooking over an open fire by Uncle Bill of Hill was all to the merrily. This was the second outing of the New Hampshire Fox, Raccoon and Hare Hunters' Association, and was a success. That Parson-Treasurer from Hill was on the job and added a large number of new members.

We have a word from Prince Toumanoff of Hancock that night hunters are causing him a great deal of financial loss at his turkey ranch. Either coon or quill pig hunters have caused his large flock of turkeys to become very scared and fly over into the woods. Later he does not care how much they hunt in his section but just now he hopes they will hunt elsewhere. This same warning will also work out well in other places where turkeys are being raised for the November trade. The Prince is a good sport and we hope the boys will let him alone.

The bobcat season is on. Wheeler of New Ipswich, Rice of Rindge and Barnes of Mason have each brought in one to have the ears runched. Rice had a 26 lb. cat, the other being much smaller.

Believe it or not but the State of Connecticut has set aside a nice trout brook in that state for ladies only and they have even hired a lady Game Warden to instruct the ladies how to fly cast. What next?

Albert Converse of Amherst, N. H., has been elected President of the Profile Kennel Club. Converse is an ardent fox hound hunter.

Speaking of puppies Lyons of the Lyons Cocker Spaniel kennels of Nashua has got some of the cutest puppies we have seen for a long time. You should see the bunch of ribbons he has won with his old dogs in the past few weeks. O boy, O boy!

In last month's Field and Stream is an article by the son of Jack Miner on "ducks and crows". It's an article that everyone should read. He tells of the large number of crows in Canada. He caught 510 in one set of a trap. He claims that the shortage of waterfowl can be laid to the crow.

The response to my appeal for clothing for a few needy families has been very gratifying. We knew that some of our readers were good sports.

If this lost dog craze keeps up we will be round shouldered carrying around a bunch of letters and pictures of the dogs lost.

The really dangerous season of the year is at hand. Slippery roads, a lot of leaves and the worst of all the menace of wild deer that are backed by your headlights. One night last week a woman in Nashua tried to dodge four deer and hit one. Warden Barnard was called and had to put the animal out of its suffering. Just a few years ago at Antrim a man hit a small buck and when the man came too, his car was over in a field a wreck with a dead deer. When you see a deer on the road slow up and stop. Turn on your lights for a second and then go along. The darkness puts that deer into the woods in a second.

Last Sunday at Greenfield, N. H., I saw a large number of bluebirds and crows. No doubt getting ready for the big trip south.

A breeder of migratory birds can only sell to another breeder that has a license to breed. This is so the United States Government can keep track of where the birds are being raised. In selling to someone else a report must be made so that the owner can be asked to purchase a permit to breed.

Have a letter from a bird hunter that wants to buy an Irish setter. Claude M. Kelley of Franklin, N. H., has that breed and did have some nice puppies.

It won't be long now, fellows, to see a shrill call of the whistle of the referee. Basketball this winter is going to be good.

Speaking of black woodchucks. Will Howard of Milford tells me that a few years ago he was visiting a friend in Vermont and up in that section they were all black. He shot several nice ones and they were jet black.

How would you like to hook a salmon that weighed fifty-seven pounds? Well, a boy on the Pacific Coast did that little trick, but had to have help to land him. The boy only weighed 65 lbs.

How long does a trout live? This question was answered last week when a Dolly Varden trout died at a California hatchery that was 19 years old and weighed 13 lbs.

Down in Massachusetts they can shoot the hen pheasant this year provided they can hit her. These birds have increased so in the past three years that it was necessary to have an open season.

Down in Connecticut they have tagged a lot of ruffed grouse and Supt. Arthur L. Clarke has asked the Massachusetts hunters to check up on these birds. It is feared that as soon as tagged and liberated, they start for Massachusetts. Well, we will give them a glad hand here in New Hampshire.

Have a friend over in Chester, N. H., who has a wonderful collection of wild animal skulls and sea shells. He may have an exhibit at the coming Sportsmen's show in Boston in February. We are asking the boys to save us all good skulls of any wild animals that they may kill. We want to see bobcat, coon, skunk, mink, fox, and in fact all kinds of skulls.

Up in Fitzwilliam is the Tavern. It's run by Judge Blair and it's just as it was 100 years ago with the exception of electric lights. It's the most wonderful place we have visited for a long time. Even the old "tap" room is still intact. The old-fashioned furniture is worth going miles to see.

Without a question the only orchestra in the world composed of all rabbit hunters has been formed at Fitzburg, Mass., with Game Warden "Jim" Peck as manager and director. At the carnival of the Fitzburg, Mass., Sportsmen's club held at the Chamber of Commerce hall the other night this orchestra made its first appearance and made a great hit. You should have read what the Fitzburg paper said about that orchestra the next day. The orchestra composed of ten men and their bright yellow sashes with pictures of a dog chasing a hare were a big hit. It's known as the "Trailers Band" and formed from members of the Fitzburg Rabbit club. They played old-time melodies and I'll say they are good. Jim with his high silk hat and his graceful movements of the baton was a scream. If you ever see them advertised to appear don't miss the chance to hear them. You will get a big kick out of it if you don't believe it, ask "Hare" Butterick.

That pesky Game Warden is always taking the joy-out of life for someone. Just now Bill Callahan up in Keene has stopped a nice little gratt that's the rounds. Now Bill advises all Selectmen who pay the bounty on quill pigs to insist that the head of the pig be brought in. In the past they had a scheme of using other parts of the pigs to manufacture noses. We stopped a similar gag at Dublin last fall but the Dublin Selectmen weren't born yesterday.

One of the most interesting magazines, which finds it way to my reading table is the 40-page magazine entitled, "Louisiana Conservation Review." Edited by the State of Louisiana at New Orleans. It's a snappy little sheet and well worth the reading.

We see where the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles is to put on night officers. A late trip over Peterboro mountain the other night and meeting a long row of machines and not one was correct as to headlights. Nearly 75% had only one light.

Believe it or not but here is a story that's going the rounds and take it for what it's worth. On day recently just about dusk a fellow from out of state was in the ditch and trying to fix his car. Finding that he needed the help of a mechanic he hailed several cars without success. Everyone stepped on it when he hailed them. Hearing a heavy truck coming, he with a wrench in his hand, went out into the middle of the road and waving that wrench he signaled the truck to stop. Did he stop? I'll say he did not, but instead threw something at the motorist. Going over to pick up the object that had been thrown he was somewhat surprised to find the bundle was a roll of honest to goodness real Uncle Sam's money to the count of two hundred big iron men. What do you suppose that man had for a cargo? Potatoes? Guess again.

In telling the story the out of state man is patting himself on the back that the bundle did not contain a brick or a stray bullet from a gat. No, I would not advise this practice to every stranded motorist.

If you see a brand new tire laying in the road after dark it's the best plan to side step and if you need a new tire I know a lot of real dealers who will save you money on the buy. That little gag is being played in this section right now.

Don't forget that the duck law stops every night at sunset. Better carry along an almanac as the time of sunset changes every day. The presence of a hunter in a boat or on a shore of a pond after that hour is enough to introduce you to a Judge.

Had a nice little lady ask me the other day, "Did anyone ever tell you they were going to shoot you?" O, yes, several times I have had the pleasure of hearing that remark. One fellow was so hot that he was going to do it right on the spot. I had to tell one fellow that I was ever found shot that he would be the first one that Sheriff Bennett would be hunting for. He saw the joke and apologized. Bill Callahan has had so many fellows tell him that he now thinks it's a compliment for being active.

Over in Fitzburg, Mass., lives "Herb" Butterick. "Herb" is the backbone of the Fitzburg Poultry club. He now is located just outside the city and is in the rabbit game. His plant is one of the best I ever had the pleasure of visiting. O, yes, Herb has a few hens and will be in the ribbons when it comes to Reds and Black Minorcas.

We know where there are a dozen or so large dogs that want a good home. No charge for same. Some of them are good watch dogs. We will be glad to tell you where they are. We will also throw in a few kittens for good measure.

Charles Wheeler of New Ipswich brings down another 18 lb. bobcat for the bounty. Last Saturday Wheeler lost his best coon-catch dog the old female that's trailed so many. She got caught in the cut over in Mason and the train run her down. He was offered big money for her a number of times. But he has a number of her offspring that are making good.

That heavy rain Tuesday was a blessing to the farmers whose wells are dry and to the trout brooks. This will make the stocking of the brooks safe for the winter.

One hunter the other day up in Hancock witnessed a sight he had never seen before. He saw two otter at play and the antics they go through would be hot on a news-reel.

Chief O'Neill of East Jaffrey is starting a collection of air rifles. The small boys of that town will have to keep the (B-B) rifle behind the piano if they want to keep it. The Chief has guns of a higher caliber that he has taken away from other careless shooters.

Games laws for the season of 1932-33 issued by the U. S. Government are out in publication No. 151. Can be had from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

We are asking the parents and guardians of all boys under 16 to check up on them over the weekend to avoid any more terrible shooting accidents.

Hanako's Holiday

Little Hanako Tanako opened her eyes slowly. She raised her black head from the wooden pillow and stared at the sunlight coming through the paper walls.

She rolled quickly out of bed, which was made of soft quilts piled on the floor. She put on her gayest, brightest kimono with big red flowers on it, her white stockings which had places made for the big toes, and she slipped her feet into her red sandals.

"Good morning, little one," said a gentle voice as her mother came into the room. "We are glad that honorable sun most kindly shines upon this great day of dolls." Mrs. Tanako pushed back the sliding walls and let the sunshine and the playful breezes of March pour into the room.

"Now may we have the beautiful steps?" Hanako asked after she had eaten her breakfast. She watched eagerly as her mother took out of a big chest five steps covered with red silk. At the top of the steps she placed a dazzling golden screen.

"Here come most honorable emperor and empress," said Hanako, taking two dolls from her mother's hand. Hanako placed each royal doll on the top step in front of the golden screen.

"Next come the ladies-in-waiting," said Hanako. She arranged the three dolls in their bright kimonos on the step below the royal family.

"Here are the orange and cherry trees which are like the trees at the gate of the royal palace," said her mother.

Hanako put the gay little trees at each end of the third step, with a royal sentinel beside them. In between them she placed the court musicians who were seated cross-legged on soft cushions.

"Now we prepare the fourth step," counted Hanako with a happy smile. For a whole year she had waited to see again all these beautiful dolls, for these were the special dolls which were used only on the day of the Doll Festival, when every little Japanese girl had a holiday.

Later the boys would have their holiday, when queer paper fishes would fly from tall poles and the boys would fly kites and have kite races.

"We now greet the three coolie dolls," said Hanako as she placed them on the fourth step. They were dressed in plainer clothes and carried brooms and brushes to show that they did the household work. Then came a little platform holding some doll actors who were giving a play.

At dinner time there was company and Mrs. Tanako's little maid servant heaped trays with good things to put before the guests. There were hot soups which every one drank, and blue and white bowls full of rice. There was golden brown fish served with preserved apricots, green chrysanthemum leaves in yellow batter, and bamboo shoots and mushrooms dipped in custard, and of course every one used chopsticks.

After dinner Hanako went visiting other little girls all up and down the street, and she carried gifts for them in her kimono sleeves.

"Alas, the smiling sun is going far away," said Hanako, as the third day of March ended. "The most beautiful dolls must go again into the big chest. Of all Doll Festivals this has been best." She cuddled down into her quilts.

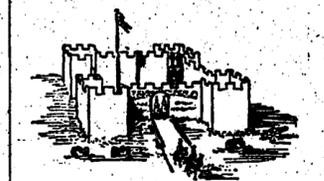

How to Build Your Fortress

1. A soft wood box about 19 inches by 13 inches is used for the main part, and a similar one is cut up for the turrets at the four corners.

2. Tools you will need are: a coping saw, chisels, a small cross-cut saw, plane, hammer, assorted nails, sharp knife, a pencil and ruler.

3. Pieces are cut in the parapet with coping saw and knife and are 1 inch long and 3/4 inch high.

4. The platforms inside turrets, for soldiers to stand on, are 2 inches down from the top. Small ladders can reach from the floor to platforms.

5. Two doors, each 2 inches wide by 4 inches high, are placed on hinges and open inward.

6. The drawbridge can be made of several pieces of wood called slats, and can have small chains (obtained at ten-cent stores) to raise and lower it.

7. The fortress should be painted a gray color.
