NEW HAMPSHIRE REPUBLICAN

Re-elects Congressman Tobey in 2d District

Re-elects Cong. Rogers in 1st.

H. Styles Bridges Elected Republican Governor Following Active Campaign

Election Day was rainy and Republicans generally felt that it was not a good day for them, and the Democrats were rather pleased with the outlook. In Antrim, it is thought the weather had very little to do with the result. This was an "off year," and as such the vote is always light; yet Antrim polled 334 votes, more than 50% of her voting strength, this being 30 more votes than were polled four years ago. Antrim stood by the Republican candidates in a fine way, and elected Erwin D. Putnam to the Legislature. The Town also maintained its reputation on the "wet and dry" issue, voting solidly "No" on both questions, as reported on another page.

The result of balloting in Antrim is given on another page, as is also the returns in the adjoining town of Bennington. Few other items also appear.

Gov.-Elect Bridges

Congressman Tobey

Boston-Antrim Party, at Y.W.C. A. Rooms, Scores Grand Success

About the usual number of interested persons attended this annual gathering this year, on Saturday evening last, nearly as many being present from outside the confines of the city proper as within its limits. Around sixty attended.

At eight o'clock, the company had come together, only a few arriving late; yet not too late, for the curtain did not go up on schedule time, and it was around 8.30 when the chairman, Roy Elliott, called the meeting to order, and in a few remarks prepared those present for such "surprises" as he had to offer. First, we are telling who made the program possible, and then will state who the performers were:

Roy Elliott, chairman, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Elliott, of Antrim, lives in West Medford; in his youth resided in Antrim.

Forest Appleton, secretary-treasurer, resides with his mother at Hyde Park; born and grew up in Antrim.

Harry Chamberlain, of Lynn, forty years ago a resident of Antrim, played the violin, with Mr. Appleton as piano accompanist; the selections were good and well rendered, and the stories he told were funny and much enjoyed.

Mrs. Bertha Putney Dudley, who in her younger days resided in Antrim, gave several vocal selections, and her rich musical voice was listened to with pleasure. She told a story or two.

Character sketches by "Lemuel and Ezra of North Branch" were given by Fred W. Robinson and Edmund Dearborn in costume; they played banjos and guitars, and did their parts very acceptably. They each spent their early life in Antrim and now reside in Arlington.

Miss Jean MacBrine, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold MacBrine, of West Medford, gave exhibitions of toe and tap dancing, which received hearty applause. Mrs. MacBrine was formerly Miss Edith Nay, of Antrim.

Two readings were given by Miss Dorothy Sessler, 12 year-old daughter of Carl Sessler, of Lynn, who spent his boyhood days in Antrim. The good work done by this young reader would be a credit to one many years her senior.

Miss Althea Dodge, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dodge, Jr., of Haverhill, rendered two piano selections in a most finished manner, which were attentively listened to and greatly enjoyed. This young lady's grand father was John Dodge, formerly of Bennington, and her grand-mother was Miss Lela Buchanan, at one time an Antrim resident.

A short but interesting letter was read from Mrs. E. V. Goodwin, now residing in Santa Monica, Calif., and formerly of Antrim.

Everyone joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne" as the closing program number.

By the numbers given, it will be realized that an interesting hour or two was thus passed; and in addition a season of visiting and meeting former friends, which is always pleasant. Then the refreshments, and everyone did their bit and pronounced them good. It was the minds of all that this was one of the best parties held; and at an early hour every one had departed from this place of happy memories.

It was voted to have another party next year about this time; Edmund Dearborn was selected as chairman, and he will appoint the secretary-treasurer.

Antrim Woman's Club

On Wednesday, October 31, Commodore Herbert Hartley addressed an interested audience in the town hall, under the auspices of the Woman's Club. He told of his experiences as Commander of the Leviathan, and of other incidents of his life at sea.

On Friday evening, November 9, at eight o'clock, the Woman's Club will observe its annual Guest Night in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Richard P. Carter, of Greenfield, will speak on "Trends in World Affairs". A one-act play, directed by Mrs. J. Lillian Larrabee, will be an added attraction. Music will be furnished by the High school orchestra.

The next regular meeting of the Woman's Club will be held on Tuesday, November 13, at 3 p.m. in Library hall. Four Counties of the State will be discussed by members of the Club.

On Friday evening, November 16, Thornton W. Burgess will speak in the town hall, under the auspices of the Woman's Club in co-operation with other organizations in town. The school children are especially invited, also the Women's Clubs from nearby towns. There will be no admission charge, and all residents of Antrim are invited to be present. This will be a special observance of Book Week. Miriam W. Roberts, Pub. Ch.

Mrs. E. R. Grant, of the north part of the town, returned Sunday from a week's visit with Mrs. R. F. Hunt, at West Newton, Mass.

GREEN'S GLOOMY STATEMENT ON UNEMPLOYMENT IS PARTLY OFFSET BY OTHER VIEWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD Western Newspaper Union.

WITH another winter at hand and millions of Americans still unemployed, organized labor, through President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, has asked the administration to appeal to all industries to increase production 30 per cent.

Mr. Green continued: "Could not the administration invite all industries to co-operate in a general program to increase production and put men to work?"

"If the nation-wide level of all production were lifted 30 per cent in a balanced program, adjusting production to consumption needs, each industry would then be assured that all other industries would increase their production, and the wealth produced by putting labor to work would create income to buy the product of all.

"The total number at work in the United States was 39,784,000 in September, 1933; by September, 1934, it had declined to 39,387,000. During these 12 months the normal increase in population has added close to 450,000 to the army of job seekers for whom industry provides no work.

Quite as gloomy as Mr. Green's report was a statement of the National Industrial Conference board. This agency noted that the general improvement in manufacturing activity usually occurring in September failed to materialize. Instead, declines of 5.7 per cent in the number of wage earners employed, of 6.1 per cent in total man hours worked and of 5.5 per cent in payrolls disbursed, were reported.

On the other hand, the United States Chamber of Commerce in its summary of conditions throughout the nation reports continued improvement of business sentiment although it has not as yet been reflected definitely in the volume of transactions.

Assurances by President Roosevelt that present governmental lending operations are not to be permanent and that private enterprise will be supported, the organization reported, have been received favorably by business and industry.

Steady improvement in the agricultural situation is noted by the farm credit administration. The volume of business of production credit associations registered an increase of 18 per cent during the first 15 days of October. Applications for farm mortgage loans are about one-third of the peak reached a year ago.

ONE of the most encouraging developments was the fact that the President and the bankers had reached a virtual truce which gave assurance of the expansion of credit for business and industry. When the financiers met in Washington for the annual convention of the American Bankers' association, many of them were still utterly at odds with the administration's financial and economic policies, believing that the government's credit was menaced by the unbalanced condition of the national budget and the unbalanced dollar.

Then appeared before the bankers in Constitution hall, President Roosevelt himself and made an appeal for "an alliance of all forces intent upon the business of recovery." He called on the banks to lend more money to finance the New Deal program. "Government should assert its leadership in encouraging not only confidence of the people in banks but the confidence of the banks in the people," he said.

"In March, 1933, I asked the people of this country to renew their confidence in banks. They took me at my word. Tonight I ask the bankers of this country to renew their confidence in the people of this country. I think you will take me at my word."

He said that the administration stood squarely back of continuance of the profit system and that emergency activities would be curtailed as fast as private business could pick up the load. It was noted that the President made no promise to balance the budget or to stabilize the currency; also that he did not comment on the proposal to create a central bank. His talk was heartily applauded, but many of his hearers were far from satisfied.

Before Mr. Roosevelt spoke, the bankers were addressed by Jackson Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York and a staunch sound money advocate. Further overtures to the bankers were made by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency. Both of them gave assurance that the economic condition of the country is sound, and Mr. Jones urged the bankers to expand their loans to business.

To all this the bankers responded by unanimously adopting resolutions promising to co-operate with the government but demanding a balanced budget.

Rudolf S. Hecht of New Orleans was elected president of the association to succeed Mr. Law.

MANY thoughtful persons comment on the apparent discrepancy between the pleas of William Green for more employment and the policy pursued by organized labor in fostering great strikes seemingly for the sole purpose of enforcing unionization and the closed shop. Many thousands of persons are thrown out of employment by these strikes, industries are hampered or shut down and often serious disorders result. To the bystander it does not seem fair that, in a time of distress, such methods should be followed in order that the strength of the unions might be increased. The latest example of this policy is the strikes which have resulted in the closing of all the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company's shops and warehouses in Cleveland and which are in effect in Milwaukee against the A. and P. and two other chain store companies. There was a prospect that these walkouts would spread throughout Ohio and Wisconsin.

IMMEDIATE cash payment of the veterans' bonus certificates was demanded by the American Legion in convention at Miami, Fla., despite the knowledge that it is opposed by President Roosevelt and the belief that he would veto any legislation providing for such payment. The vote was 987 to 183.

The Legion's new national commander is Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, now a banker. All other candidates withdrew and Mr. Belgrano was elected unanimously. In his speech of acceptance he said he would conduct his office with vigor and determination.

"Our country is filled today with too much talk about isms," he said. "Everywhere we hear about Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Hitlerism, and others too numerous to mention.

"There is room in this country for only one ism. That is Americanism. Without equivocation or reservation, I say to you that under my administration this American Legion is a sworn enemy of every other ism. That is a declaration of war."

The following were elected as national vice commanders: Daniel J. Doherty, Woburn, Mass.; Harold J. Warner, Pendleton, Ore.; John Kenelly, Mandan, N. D.; Milo J. Warner, Toledo, Ohio; and Quimby Melton, Griffin, Ga.

CHICAGO'S magnificent World's fair is no more. It closed formally and forever at midnight, October 31, amid a riot of gayety and with a final burst of fireworks, and the vast throng of last-day visitors left the grounds with a feeling of sadness. Mayor Kelly had proclaimed a half-holiday and thousands upon thousands of Chicagoans joined with the crowds that had come from elsewhere to celebrate the windup of this most notable exposition. After artillery salutes and parades, the final ceremonies were staged in the Court of States with Governor Horner, Mayor Kelly and President Rufus Dawes of the exposition as speakers. Exactly at midnight Mr. Dawes threw a switch that shut off all lights on the grounds and set off a gigantic fireworks display. This was not quite the end, however, for the lights were turned on again and, though no one was admitted after midnight, the Halloween carnival continued until three o'clock in the morning. Then the lights went out forever.

KING PRAJADHIPHOK of Siam is not satisfied with his present status as a limited monarch and has threatened to abdicate unless the government withdraws a measure proposed in the national assembly which deprives him of his traditional right to decide whether persons sentenced to death for crimes shall live or die. This, of course, is but one of the distasteful limitations prescribed by the national assembly since the revolution of 1932 which forced the king to give the country a new constitution. There is no revolution in this case, for the people of Siam generally know nothing about the dispute between the king and the government.

Prajadhipok is at present in England with his queen, and the negotiations are carried on by cable. His majesty's secretary there said the king's fight was really a fight for the principles of democratic government and that he would not give in. The secretary explained that half the members of the Siamese legislative assembly are elected directly by the people, and the other half nominated by the government, with his majesty placing "great importance upon the attitude of the elected members," who Prajadhipok claims opposed the measure relating to life and death prerogatives.

There were predictions of civil war in Austria between the two "private armies," Chancellor Schuschnigg's Catholic storm troops and the Fascist Heimwehr headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg. The cabinet stirred up the old taxation trouble by legislation talking from the provinces and municipalities their right to share in taxes collected in Vienna. With this as an excuse, the opposition to the government is exhibiting intense activity.

The Heimwehr leaders are demanding that the nation's corporate parliament be composed entirely of representatives of the auxiliary armed forces. Chancellor Schuschnigg and other Catholic leaders are bitterly opposed to this.

The financial situation has further complicated matters. There is a budget deficit of $14,000,000 for the first half of the year.

PROF. JEAN PICCARD made another balloon excursion into the stratosphere, and accompanying him was his plucky wife, Jeanette, the only licensed woman balloon pilot in the United States. They ascended from Detroit with their 600,000 cubic-foot bag, passed over Lake Erie, rose to a height of about ten miles, and then came down on a farm four miles west of Cadiz, Ohio. The gondola landed in a tree but the two occupants were only slightly bruised and scratched, and it was believed the delicate scientific instruments they carried were uninjured. The trip was made for the purpose of studying the cosmic rays, and no effort was made to establish a record for altitude.

SILK and rayon dyers did not join in the recent general strike of textile workers because of their contract, but 30,000 of them in the Passaic valley and the New York metropolitan area have now quit their jobs and the dye houses were closed perforce. When negotiations for a new contract began two months ago the union asked for a 30-hour week at $1 an hour and a closed shop. The closed shop was the sore point of issue. Neither side would change its attitude.

George Baldanzi, president of the Federation of Silk and Rayon Dyers, then waived the demand for a 30-hour week at $30 a week and said the union would accept a minimum guarantee of $20. This proposal was rejected by the employers.

BREAKING records all along the route, M-10001, the new streamlined train of the Union Pacific, made an extraordinary run from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours 55 minutes. The best previous time for a transcontinental train crossing was established in 1906, when the late E. H. Harriman, then chairman of the Union Pacific, traveled from San Francisco to New York in 71 hours 27 minutes.

The new tube-shaped train also established a world's speed record of 120 miles an hour as it sped from Buffalo to New York.

JOHN B. CHAPPLE, Republican candidate for United States senator from Wisconsin, proved himself to be a gentleman at Waukesha. He was listed as principal speaker at a rally there. John Gay, candidate for congress, preceded him on the program and alluded to President Roosevelt as "a man who can't stand on his own feet without crutches." Mr. Chapple arose and said: "Men and women of Waukesha, the President of the United States has been insulted by a previous speaker on this program in a serious personal way, and while I may differ with Democratic policies, I will not stand for that kind of an attack on the President's physical infirmity, and I therefore refuse to speak on this program and will return to Waukesha at some later time."

CONVERSATIONS preliminary to the 1935 naval conference opened in London, and the Japanese did what was expected of them. Ambassador Matsuura and Admiral Yamamoto told the British and the Americans in turn that Japan was not satisfied with the existing treaties—everyone knew that—and set forth these main points: 1. The powers should agree that Japan may have equality, "in principle," in defensive armaments.

2. The ratio system should be abolished, and "defensive" ships limited on a total tonnage basis, instead of by categories.

3. Each nation would drastically reduce "offensive" armaments, thus cutting down the chances of any war of aggression, while building whatever "defensive" ships within the tonnage limit agreed it feels it needs for security.

LIEUT. FRANCESCO AGELLO of Italy, known as "Crazy Boy" because of his daring aerial performances, set a new record for speed in flight when he drove his seaplane over a course at Desenzano, four times at an average of 440.29 miles an hour. It was his own record that he broke by about 16 miles an hour. He used his old plane but it had a new Flat AS-GV type motor developing 3,500 horse power.

THREE American physicians have been awarded the Nobel prize in medicine for 1934. They are Dr. George Minot and Dr. William P. Murphy of the Harvard medical school and Dr. George H. Whipple of the University of Rochester. The prize of $11,000 is divided among them for their development of liver therapy in anemia.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

For the first time since the federal reserve system was created a very real rift has developed between the federal reserve board and the federal advisory council, that group of business leaders which is supposed to act as intermediary between the reserve board and the public. The line of cleavage has developed over gold. How far it may go in disturbing faith in the federal reserve system as a banking structure it is yet too early to tell, but I find in many quarters frequent questions as to the indication that politics may be creeping into government supervision of the country's largest banking unit, the federal reserve system.

The controversy had its origin in a statement of views delivered to the reserve board by the advisory council last month. Of course, the advisory council has no power and can only function in accordance with its name and give suggestions to the reserve board. Its influence nevertheless heretofore always has been an important factor in federal supervision of bank policies and any wide difference of opinion between the advisory council and the reserve board naturally is an influential factor in financial conditions.

The reserve board did not enjoy the statement of views from the advisory council, which was to the effect that "no real or permanent recovery" can be hoped for until the federal government returns to the gold standard for our currency. It said unequivocally that the currency and credit supply now existing is ample for all needs and that business cannot be expected to go forward until it has some assurance of a permanency in our currency. In other words, the advisory council takes no stock in the "baloney dollar" which has been so strongly advocated by Prof. George F. Warren, one of the important brain trust advisors to the President.

In addition to the council's criticism of the currency policy of the administration, it did not pull its punches with respect to the countless governmental experiments in business. I quote that paragraph of its statement: "A serious factor of rapidly increasing importance is the tendency of business enterprises directly conducted by government agencies to reach out further and further into fields heretofore occupied by private capital, thereby destroying taxable values. The use of government money in competition with private business is not only paralyzing to private initiative but experience has amply demonstrated that it is costly, generally inefficient, and that its disastrous effects reach far beyond the limitation of the particular industry immediately affected."

The council had much more to say respecting other policies of the present administration. "Fear Savings Threatened" including what it described as a constant "threat of inflation," a condition that the council felt was stifling personal thrift. It asked directly whether there was any inducement for an individual to save or to buy life insurance and preserve earnings against the time when age will prevent continued production of income if there was an overhanging threat that all these savings may be wiped out by uncontrolled inflation of the currency.

Obviously, the federal reserve board was wrought up when the advisory council did the unusual thing of making public its views. Although the council withheld its statement until three weeks after the meeting at which it was drafted and given the reserve board, that lapse of time did not save the feeling of the board.

To show how it felt about the action of the advisory council, the board very promptly met and adopted a resolution by unanimous vote returning the council's statement to its secretary. This "spanking" has aroused a great many business leaders who have expressed fears that politics now is permeating the two federal agencies, for the advisory council is a body created by statute just as much as the federal reserve board. No one can tell what the outcropping of this situation may be. There are a number of men in the advisory council membership who have been outspoken in their support of President Roosevelt. Likewise, the President has named two members of the present reserve board, and one or two others of that group of seven are entirely in harmony with his economic policies. Consequently, there is much talk in Washington that the two schools of economic thought are engaged in a clash that may be serious in its effect on the supervision of the country's banking structure.

Whatever may be the attitude of the reserve board, I have found a considerable body of opinion holding that the advisory council was functioning within its rights.

In its own sphere when it made the statement to the board, as explained above, the board was under no compunction to abide by the expressions from the advisory council, and if it elected to do so it could allow the council's views to be pigeon-holed and "forgotten." But the point is that the council is representative of business and financial interests and therefore, when it considered federal policies it was speaking for that segment of our national life which otherwise had no means of making itself vocal, according to much opinion in the National Capital.

Further, the fact that the council took direct issue with the administration is being regarded in many quarters as a healthy sign. I believe there is no dispute about the right of individuals or groups to criticize the political party responsible for government management at any time and if the particular part of our commerce and industry, represented by the advisory council, feels dissatisfied with the gold policy, with the unbalanced budget, with the continual spending and experiments that have gone on, there is a great number of people who insist those views should be disclosed. Some students of economy and government here hold to the opinion that such expressions may have a tendency to lead to policies acceptable to both sides.

This phase of the situation may be linked to the efforts which the administration has been making to accomplish an understanding with some important business leaders through frequent conferences at the White House and through informal and indirect meetings outside of Washington. I refer to the dinners and meetings which have been held, many in New York, by Prof. Raymond Moley, formerly the number one member of the brain trust but now a magazine editor. Although White House sources deny any part in the Moley dinners, most Washington observers accept the denial with a grain of salt. They are convinced that Mr. Roosevelt is fully informed of the views expressed by individual business leaders in those meetings and that he is seeking some basis of understanding with business. It takes no stretch of the imagination then to connect these various happenings, despite the wounded feelings of the federal reserve board.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, said the other day he anticipated little increase in Republican membership in the house of representatives. He can see no method, he said, of defeating the disbursement of cash that has been going on in the Roosevelt administration.

"Makes It Losing Fight" in the house of representatives. He can see no method, he said, of defeating the disbursement of cash that has been going on in the Roosevelt administration.

The Republican chairman's statement followed compilation by the Democratic national committee of figures showing the amount of cash that has been paid out by the government through its various channels since President Roosevelt took the reins. The Democratic committee compiled a list of states and set off against each state the amount of money distributed therein for relief, agricultural benefits, public works construction and otherwise. Democratic campaigners were not invited to use these figures but Chairman Fletcher insisted that was the basis and the real reason for their compilation. Mr. Fletcher proved his statement with hands full of clippings gathered from newspapers throughout the country, each one quoting some Democratic candidate who had informed an audience as to the benefactions of the federal government in that particular state.

The Republican chairman told newspaper correspondents in a press conference that he was not accusing the Roosevelt administration of buying votes but he added with candor that votes naturally were going to go towards the source of money supplied. With several billions being distributed and a considerable amount being turned loose within the last month, Mr. Fletcher made a clean breast of his feelings that it was difficult to battle Santa Claus.

In connection with the Republican charges over cash distribution both of the national committees have been compiling statistics respecting registration of voters through the country in preparation for the election. These reports indicate that public interest is aroused far beyond the usual condition. Voters are awakened to the importance of these elections.

Obviously, there are many local issues to be fought out and settled by the ballot. The situation in California is illustrative of this. Never before, I am told, has California seen such a registration list as is made up there in anticipation of the vote on Upton Sinclair's program to "eliminate poverty in California."

Agricultural areas, according to the registration lists, are prepared to support or upset policies of the agricultural adjustment administration and some industrial centers show figures indicating widespread interest in the vote that is naturally to have a bearing on the status of the national recovery administration. Many astute politicians are saying that the great registration makes guesses as to the outcome rather hazardous, while the students of government welcome the large polling lists as encouraging evidence of an awakened interest among the populace in this thing we call government.

It is proof, they say, that whether right or wrong, more voters want their feeling known in the current election than hitherto has been the case except when the ballot involved the President.

To Keep Jars Airtight If you wish to keep food in jars airtight and have no paraffin or rings and covers, try this method. Dip the paper over your jars while very wet. Tie it in place and allow it to dry. It will dry like parchment and the jars will be airtight as long as it is left on.

Remember This It's a wicked world, and we all make a part of it.

DRUGS?

Don't make the mistake of giving even a 14-year old boy strong medicines meant for adults.

Boys and girls who have reached their "teens" are not ready to be given powerful drugs!

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts. Many stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can be traced to this single mistake.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Give that headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less, if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Get the true California Syrup of Figs containing senna and cascara, which will not weaken. Senna, bowels irritate the kidneys. You'll soon have full evidence that it safely relieves constipation in children.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

Bares Massacre of Old Alaskan Race

Scientists Find Skeletons on Kodiak Island.

Washington.—Evidence of a prehistoric "massacre" on desolate Kodiak Island, Alaska, at a time when it was inhabited by an unknown race of advanced culture, was uncovered this summer by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution, who has just returned to Washington.

This was the sixth expedition of Doctor Hrdlicka to Alaska, and the third summer he has conducted extensive excavations on this site, which in some respects probably represents the highest aboriginal art in North America north of Mexico, although there is as yet practically no clue to the exact identity of the people who developed it or brought it from Asia.

"Nest Burials" Puzzle.

In past years Doctor Hrdlicka has been puzzled by what he terms "nest burials," where a number of skeletons would be found together, of all ages and both sexes and without any of the customary mortuary offerings which the ancient people ordinarily placed in graves.

The clue came with the discovery that many of the skeletons had cracked skulls and other evidences of combat. This is a strong indication that they were not wiped out by some epidemic and justifies a picture of a village massacre from which a few escaped, to return later and bury their dead in heaps.

Assisted by five volunteer college students, Doctor Hrdlicka was able to make substantial progress this summer in uncovering the remains of the old settlement—apparently the "metropolis" of the bay on which it is located in the days when the island was an important center of population. The site rests on glacial till and in places on a peculiar geologic formation called by Doctor Hrdlicka "butter earth," a gritty, yellow clay, identified by geologists as representing old metamorphosed volcanic ash.

Had Higher Culture.

The unknown people were master craftsmen, especially in the making of beautiful stone lamps and in the carving of ivory. The latter art they carried to the extent of carving individual portraits.

Doctor Hrdlicka added extensively to his collection of skeleton remains and artifacts gathered there in other years; besides what was sent previously there are more than forty boxes of material on the way to the institution. But, he reports, one of the most important results of the excavations this summer was the great family difference found in the many ancient households studied.

All partook of a common culture, yet each family group had its own variation. Some were good lamp carvers, others specialized in other artifacts. The work furnishes a potent illustration of the fallacy of considering a prehistoric culture as almost invariably from individual to individual, or of judging of the whole culture of a people from a localized sample.

VICTORIOUS VITALITY

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The fatalist believes that, regardless of our best efforts, conditions occur according to the decrees of fate. Fruitless are all efforts to alter that decree. We may as well accept the inevitable without argument or explanation. If the decrees of fate are thus final and irrevocable the only alternative is wholehearted acquiescence. But is fatalism the true interpretation of values? Is there not some other explanation of the ills of life? Is a complete surrender to fate the only way out? If fatalism were accepted as a philosophy of life in the business world all progress would be blocked and complete disintegration of economic values would be near at hand.

A man must either drive his work or be driven by it. The latter may produce the fatalist but never the former. Resigning himself to the inevitable, like the prisoner caught with the goods on him, he sees no way out but suicide, so the fatalist commits mental and spiritual suicide. The man who drives his work, however, substitutes for the law of surrender the law of control.

A sudden calamity will either paralyze us or urge us on to "vaster issues." Much has been written about Theodore Roosevelt's "second wind." He never recognized defeat and the word failure was not in his vocabulary. This same philosophy of life which substitutes control for acquiescence is very greatly needed in the depression experiences through which many people are passing. Acquiescence kills pride, lowers the "morale" and makes one a prey to many of the false social theories rampant today.

Control creates a victorious vitality which refuses to be mastered by outward conditions. Instead of surrendering to fate it uses every unfortunate experience as a means to higher ends. The loss of money may lead to the conviction that "life does not consist in the abundance of one's possessions," and that life should be counted by heart throbs and not dollars in a bank.

Using misfortune for higher ends creates values which we may never have thought existed. An entire new world has been opened up to many who refused these days to surrender to the irony of fate. Victorious vitality may come to everyone who uses misfortune as a "stepping stone to higher things," and who hears, "A deeper voice across the storm."

The Household

GLASS is invading the realm of interior decoration. Never before has it taken quite the place it does now, although it has had repeated revivals. Today even the walls of a house may glint from tiny filaments of spun glass introduced into the wall paper together with similar filaments of metals to give a burnished surface. Mirrors have returned in all their glory and are hung to duplicate beautiful portions of rooms, or of bough, branches and landscapes glimpsed through windows. It is easy to see that the positioning of mirrors is important to bring out the desired reflections for beauty or for impressions of space.

Mirror dolly reflections of vases, usually of silver or glass, and flower-filled, give added attraction to tables, since the arrangement is in duplicate. These table mirrors are fascinating dining-table centerpieces as fleeting visions of those seated across the table are often caught, adding to the jollity of an occasion, or permitting swift, unspoken messages to be exchanged. It is true that these are matters apart from the decorative function of the dolly mirror which is to reflect the ornamental centerpiece standing on it, but interest is added just the same. Dolly mirrors come in round, oval, etc., shapes merely beveled at rims, or with dainty etched decorations on the glass. These mirrors are again in high favor after a lapse of several years.

The Table in This Living Room Has Crystal Book Ends, Reflecting Mirror Dolly and Glass Paper Cutters, Etc.

Collector's Glassware.

Glassware is still in the ascendancy as a collector's hobby. It results to the advantage of interior decoration as many of the pieces take their places on mantelpieces, tables, sideboards, and also on glass shelves in windows. The light shimmers through the transparent crystal white or colored surfaces in a gay and enticing fashion. Many of the pieces can be of genuine practical use, serving as vases, salad bowls, cream pitchers and sugar bowls.

paper weights, but we are not so familiar with glass book ends, paper cutters, and letter holders. Novel they are and handsome, whether in plain solid blocks or molded and enameled or cut and engraved. Speaking of cut glass, its vogue is becoming more and more in evidence each season.

Two designs are especially featured—pineapple and star cutting. Cut-glass goblets come in all sizes from the very small wine-glass size to the large water goblets. The cutting on this stemware has to be completed on the sides of the glass, for the rims must be polished smooth.

QUEEN'S RARE CHINA
One of the smartest apartments at Buckingham palace, London, which is sometimes shown by the queen for her friends, is the china room, where the walls are lined with plates, dishes, cups and saucers from the many rare and antique porcelain services in the possession of the king and queen. These are arranged in panel formation in cases which can be unlocked for periodical washing. The value of this china is so great that the experts are locked in the china room when washing the pieces.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

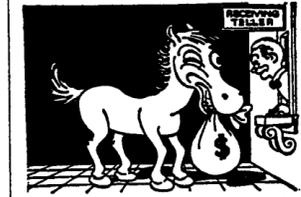

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

What Has Happened and Will Take Place Within Our Borders

The date of the monthly supper of the Center church has been changed to Saturday, Nov. 10, at 6 o'clock.

Roscoe A. Whitney has been spending a season with friends in the vicinity of Boston. He attended the Antrim Party on Saturday evening.

Miss Lulu Wright and Mrs. Oliver Wallace have this week been in a hospital, at Concord, where they each had an operation for the removal of tonsils.

Anyone desiring hand-worked pillow cases, luncheon sets, pillow tops, and other fancy articles, making splendid Christmas gifts, will find a selection at the home of Miss Mabelle Eldredge, on Grove street. Adv.

Some of our people who knew the family, they being Summer residents at White Birch Point, Gregg Lake, were shocked to read in Sunday's papers of the death at sea of Walter Champney, of Boston, on board ship for Bombay, India.

Government Work—this state, Washington. Open to Men—Women, sound health, age 18-50. For free particulars about examinations write Civil Service Training Bureau, Inc., Box B, this paper.

Jacob Sessler and sons, Richard and Carl Sessler, of West Lynn, Mass., were in town on Friday last, doing some work in their cemetery lot at Maplewood.

CHRISTMAS! Only a few more weeks. How about looking into useful and needed things for your family, such as a pair of glasses or a change of lenses. See us about it. Antrim Pharmacy, Antrim, and Chickering's Jewelry Store, Hillsboro; Thursdays. The Babbitt Co., Optometrists.

Members of Waverley Lodge, No. 59, I. O. O. F., are invited by the committee in charge, to an oyster supper on Saturday evening of this week, the 10th inst., following the regular lodge meeting. It is hoped that a goodly number of the members, who possibly can, will make an effort to be present at this supper. Interested ones will want to know the "why" of this occasion, and they must attend to find out about it.

The William M. Myers Post, No. 50, American Legion, will celebrate Armistice Day by giving a Military Ball, in Antrim town hall, on Friday evening, November 9. Music will be furnished by Zaza Ludwig and His Vodvil Band. A mixture of modern, old and war-time melodies, with dances dedicated to heroes past and present, and also to fraternal and educational organizations. Other particulars on posters.

The pupils of the Grammar school are rehearsing an operetta "The King's Sneezes," which will be given in the town hall on Nov. 23. The proceeds of the performance will be used to make the final payment on the school piano, due before Dec. 5. This operetta is quite different from others that have been given. A King, a Queen, a Princess, a Fairy, not to mention the Watchman, the Tailor, the Bakers and Max Luckyfoot, provide interest and amusement for listeners of all ages. Don't Miss It!

Mrs. George W. Nylander has returned from a few days' visit with her father, in Chatham, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Chaffee recently entertained for a short time Mr. and Mrs. Bates, from Maine.

Mrs. Oscar Hills, of Hillsboro, has been stopping for a time with her brother, W. F. Knapp, in East Antrim.

Miss Elizabeth Robinson has returned from a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carpenter, in Lowell, Mass.

Members of the local Presbyterian church attended the meeting of the denominational Synod, in Lowell, Mass.

Antrim people are reminded that the Red Cross annual drive begins on Armistice Day, the 11th, and continues to Thanksgiving, the 29th.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin D. Putnam were in Exeter last week, where he delivered his lecture to an enthusiastic audience, as a number in the Merrill Course of Lectures.

At the annual roll call of the Baptist church a most pleasant evening was passed and supper was served, at which 154 covers were laid; 95 members answered to the roll call.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie N. Nay, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Eldredge and daughter, Miss Mabelle Eldredge, spent the week-end in Boston. On Saturday evening they attended the Boston-Antrim party.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyman K. Flint have closed their summer home, The Flint Farm, for the season, and are now at their Boston apartment, at Hotel Sheraton, having left town today, Wednesday.

Mrs. John M. Burnham, who went to Nashua last Wednesday to enter the hospital for an operation, returned to her home here that night. On Monday of this week she entered the hospital and was operated on; reports say she is getting along comfortably.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Raleigh and son Walter spent a recent week-end at their home on Grove street. They have been living most of the Summer in Plymouth, and expect soon to go to Claremont. Mr. Raleigh and his son are both employed on State work.

Mrs. Walter F. Knapp, of East Antrim, has been operated on at Margaret Pillsbury hospital, Concord, for an abdominal abscess. This is said to have been a serious operation, and while the patient has been very sick, her friends are glad to learn she is getting along as well as can be expected.

In certain sections of the village, pheasants are real neighbors, and to give them further liberty, a few residents "posted" their lands so that hunters would keep away from Nov. 1 to Nov. 7. It ought not to be necessary to do this, but those who enjoy seeing and feeding these handsome birds wish to continue this pleasure.

A goodly company gathered at the town hall on Wednesday evening last to listen to the lecture by Commodore Herbert Hartley. He was formerly Commander of the Leviathan, and had many interesting and amusing incidents to relate. He was very good and the local Woman's club is to be commended for bringing him here.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society held at the Congregational church vestry, on Thursday evening last, was opened by the president, Mrs. John W. Logan, with the scripture, prayer and brief remarks, followed by the annual report of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Allan Gerard. The speaker of the evening, Mrs. E. S. Goodell, of Antrim, was then presented (she needed no introduction) by Mrs. M. C. Newton, committee chairman, and all listened with interest to an informative talk on Missions of this and other lands; the points stressed being spiritual, medical and social service, both here and abroad, which were presented in a practical, comprehensive manner. The junior choir sang two selections, and light refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Interesting Notes Made by One Who Visited the Chicago Fair

We have been interested in the articles in the Athol, Mass., Chronicle, written by its editor, H. Burr Eldredge, after his recent visit there, and we are copying them word for word, thinking they will interest others:

ARTICLE II

In the Physics section we find much of everyday value, various models and displays to present the laws of physics in such a manner that they may be easily understood by the spectator. Among the subjects treated are gases, liquids, solids, how sound is transmitted; electricity and magnetism, which makes possible electric generators, motors and transformers; the simpler laws of reflection and refraction of light, the structure of the eye; color and rays.

The Chemistry department has been very popular throughout the two years of the fair. The exhibits are arranged in a series of groups as follows: Chemical Changes, Colloidal Chemistry, Chemistry of Oil, Chemistry of Rubber, Electrochemistry, Chemistry of Coal Tar, and Chemistry of Digestion. Much might be written about each department, but we will mention only the last, that of the Chemistry of Digestion.

A Robot was used in this department. This ten-foot tall mechanical man showed the exact workings of the digestive organs, esophagus, stomach, etc. The Robot described the values of various foods and their effects on the digestive system. It seemed weird to stand in front of this mechanical man and watch the progress of food through his digestive system, each organ being illuminated at the proper time.

The Science of Biology comes in for its share of attention. Many divisions are included in this section, including the model of a growing twig. The Transparent Man, a figure composed entirely of cello, reveals every vein, artery and organ of the human body. It was brought from Dresden, Germany, and is said to have been built at a cost of $10,000. Working with every possible care the German scientists required eighteen months to complete this marvel.

A lecturer explains the functions of each organ and electric lights within the figure are illuminated as the part is discussed.

Progress in dentistry is shown from the hand-carved, spring-fitted denture used by George Washington, to the modern fully equipped surgery of a present-day dentist.

Geology is the science which deals with the history of the earth and its inhabitants. From this science we gain information relating to supplies of energy, coal and petroleum; glaciers, volcanoes, earth sciences as exemplified in the National Parks; oil fields, mining methods, etc.

After absorbing as much as possible of this "heavy knowledge" the Fair visitor will probably seek diversion in the amusements of the Villages, or if the Hall of Science trip has been concluded at the end of the day he may indeed be content to call it a day and leave additional exhibits for the morrow.

Monday morning dawned bright and pleasant. After partaking of a very satisfactory breakfast at the Marine home, the four Athol-ites embarked on a big day at the Fair. And was it a big day? Well, ask our feet, they know! During the day they (the feet) carried us to China, Belgium, Mt. Vernon, Hollywood, the Lama Temple, Italian Village, Mexico, the Hall of Science, and other exhibits. Tell us if we are mistaken in thinking that was enough to ask of one's feet in one day!

The Travel and Transport building was the first to receive our attention. This enormous structure, filled with historical and modern transportation exhibits, is a striking innovation in modern architectural design.

The main entrance of the building is under a huge dome, one of the world's largest, and the only one using the suspension bridge principle, whereby the great rounded roof is hung from sky hooks and cables, instead of being supported from below.

The dome is suspended 125 feet above the ground by cables attached to twelve steel towers. Atmospheric conditions create a contraction and expansion, thus causing the dome to "breathe." The reason for this suspension is to give a clear and unobstructed vision within the building, this being a necessity due to the nature of the exhibits.

"A Century of Progress in Transportation" is shown here, the historical exhibits being many and varied. A reproduction of America's first locomotive, built by John Stevens, of Hoboken, N. J., in 1825 was the forerunner of the giant Class "H" locomotive of the Chicago & North Western Railway. This giant Mogul of the Rails is capable of hauling a train about 1 1/2 miles long at a speed of 50 miles an hour. The engine and tender weigh 818,000 pounds. It is interesting to note that the locomotive was built at a cost of $212,000.

Are you air-minded? The huge Boeing Transport Plane, with its wings spread out to the right and left, gives an impression of plenty of power and speed. Indeed 'tis said that this plane has a cruising speed of approximately 200 miles per hour.

No. 9, the first sleeping car ever built, made its initial run from Bloomington to Chicago in 1858, and later was part of the train that bore the body of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President, to Springfield. Contrast old Number Nine with the present day, aluminum stream-lined, air conditioned Pullman! Each section has its own lavatory. The first all-aluminum Pullman car, on display in the Travel and Transport building, weighs only 96,980 pounds as compared with 180,000 pounds for a steel sleeper. Thermostatic control regulates the air-conditioning of the entire car, cooling it in summer, warming it in winter, and filtering the air at all times so that it is fresh and pure. Each room has its own thermostat.

And now while we have the older folks planning a trip on the Boeing transport plane or in the new Pullman, let's give the kiddies something of special interest. Boys and girls, you would be delighted to see the Pennsylvania Railroad exhibit of a miniature four-track system, with accurate models of passenger and freight trains of all classes, operating continuously. Four of the exhibition's "dioramas"—scenic arrangements—drive home the fact that the railroad gives constant service day and night the year round.

A Spring scene gives a representation of the agricultural districts—the Summer scene of course appeals particularly to the vacationist whether the objective may be the seashore, the mountains, the lakes or the country—Autumn with a night scene of industry, manufacturing, steel mills, and a great metropolis—and Winter with a lumber camp.

Just south of the Travel and Transport building is a large area where we were privileged to inspect superfine trains of the large railroads.

The famous Capitol Limited of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is the first completely air-conditioned train to give service to and from Chicago. This progressive railway system was born Feb. 12, 1927, and its splendid record of progress through the years is depicted through a series of dioramas, pictures, displays of early original pieces of equipment, culminating in a panorama of Washington, the National Capitol, as it will appear a few years hence.

The Union Pacific's streamlined train is truly "The Train of Tomorrow." Everything about this glistening aluminum mass suggests flashing speed with plenty of attention given to comfort and safety of passengers.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Knowledge is power—but only if it is used. For unnumbered centuries the Niagara river tumbled over its two tall cliffs, and produced nothing but the sand it ground from the stone wall down which it poured.

Then the discovery of the use of electricity enabled men to put it to work.

Today it turns wheels which, miles distant, run all manner of useful machinery.

However intelligent you may be, your intelligence will be of no value to you unless you set it to work.

To make it of any benefit you must learn how to put it to work, and for what kind of work it is best fitted.

Doubtless you have met many people of whom their friends said: "These fellows are keen witted and observing. Why don't they do something beside sitting around and making 'wise cracks'?"

Probably because they are too lazy—too averse to intelligent and consecutive thinking without which there can be no real education.

Not long ago I visited a town where I lived as a young man.

There had been many young fellows with great promise among my friends. Some of them were still there, going to sea.

They managed to make just about enough money to live on.

But there their ambition ended. There had been opportunities in their very town of which they might have taken advantage.

But that meant work and thought. It was easier to follow the line of the least resistance.

"Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers," said Mr. Tennyson.

Wisdom is the fruit of knowledge. Without it nobody can get the best out of himself, or make the most of his opportunities.

THE FEATHERHEADS

Learn all you can, but don't be a pedant who is contented with knowing things.

Put that knowledge you have acquired into running some business or practicing some profession.

Make it work. Make it do something for other people as well as for yourself.

Get all you can of it. You will need it today more than ever, for there is more competition.

Don't worry if you can't go to college. But if you don't, get your own education, for you will need it.

Only rich men's sons can get along without hard work, and many of these have discovered that there is more fun to be had in doing something useful than just loafing.

Today there is as much acreage in the world as there ever has been.

There is just as much intelligence.

Men Make 'Em perhaps more. The rivers still flow full banked, the rains descend to supply them.

At the present time nobody dreams that the supply of oil and coal on which modern industry depends will give out.

Who then was responsible for the lean years out of which we are now happily passing?

Men.

Some of them were too thoughtless, some of them were too greedy. Some of them were a little worse than greedy, and gathered in increment which did not belong to them.

The point is that we are living in the same world that we always had lived in, and that, as far as we can find out, this world is going to endure for a great many more centuries.

Well, what to do about it?

Make it teach us something.

Men learn by their mistakes, and enough mistakes were made in the last six or seven years to supply a college with curricula for the next generation.

Do a little thinking about people who got humped.

Take Jones, Brown and Robinson, for example.

Jones got a promotion in the firm for which he was working, and figuring that he would be sure to get another before long, moved out of a six-room house and into a twelve-room house.

Now he is trying to borrow money to keep it heated till the mortgage is foreclosed.

Brown was persuaded to take a partnership in a business about which he knew nothing. It was a promising business. But it never failed its promise.

Robinson became convinced that the rise in the market was going to continue forever, like the rivers in their valleys.

It didn't. Robinson wishes he could get the old job back. Let's hope he will. Times are improving, and maybe, with his new stock of knowledge he will be able to hang on to a good part of what he makes.

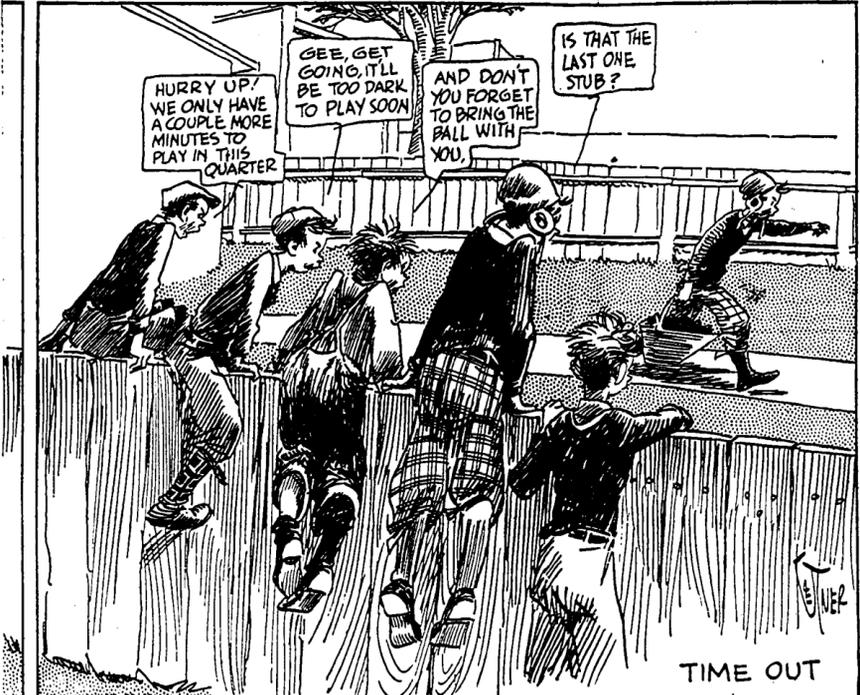

An old Forty-niner for whom I once worked in the neighborhood of a California town which was left after the breaking up of the gold rush, said to me one day:

"Young feller, you can drink whisky, if ye're keeful, you can chew tobacco without hurtin' you none, you can even smoke them cigarets, but if you want to git anywhere, you gotta leave gamblin' alone."

There is a piece of advice, which had it been generally followed would have saved people a heap of money.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy.

The legacy had providentially answered the on to the country problem. Now that the strain was eased, she had but a confused remembrance of the days during which she had cleared and sub-leased the apartment. At the last moment, Jane Mack had begged to go with her. Her eyes were giving out for sewing, she had said, but she knew almost everything there was to know about a house—she had been trained by a New England mother. Prudence had hugged her in her relief. Jane Mack might be grim and a confirmed pessimist but she could cook, while she herself farmed and, if opportunity and time allowed, worked at her craft.

Could she afford to keep Si Puffer as helper on the place? Her thoughts ran on. She couldn't afford not to at present. Already he had stood like a guardian angel between her and the voice in the fog; how he had growled the name, "Len Calloway!" What had the man wanted? Something in his demand had antagonized her. "Tomorrow" was almost here. Soon she would know.

The muslin hangings swung into the room like two frail, transparent wings. Had the wind changed? She ran to the window. The fog had cleared as if by magic. With a surge of indefinable longing, the girl looked up at the star-punctured heavens. With a shaky laugh at her own absurdity, she flung out her hands toward the man in the moon. "Your excellency, I thank you for this royal welcome! Prue of Prosperity farm salutes you!"

CHAPTER II

Prudence stopped settling her possessions the next day at noon long enough to inspect the outside of her inheritance. Her tour of inspection ended at the long weather-stained barn.

With a frenzied "cut-cut-cut-cada-kut!" a black hen flew down from the topmost loft. Prudence watched her switch and cackle and flap through the open doorway, before her eyes returned to the spot from which she had descended. Had she been stealing a nest? Could she find it? What fun!

She tugged a light ladder into place, and with excited agility mounted. Past the first row. Up to the highest, almost touching the roof. That black hen hadn't been sitting up here to see the soldiers go by, she must have left a nest. She touched warm feathers. A sharp peck from a yellow beak dampened her lashes but steeled her determination. She shut her eyes tight and grabbed. She flung the squawking fowl to an adjacent mound of hay where it made the rafters ring with its outraged cackle.

Prudence sat back on her heels and counted. Eight eggs!

"Si! Oh, Si!" The cheery call came from below. A man's voice. Not the voice in the fog. That had appeared in person early this morning. Who could it be? Prudence cautiously placed the eggs in her white skirt, gathered up the front of it, and leaned too far over. The hay slid. Struggling to retard her progress, she went with it, down, down into the arms of a man.

"Boy! That was a narrow squeak!" Prudence had closed her lids tight when she felt herself going. She opened them wide, looked up into the deepest bluest eyes she ever had seen. Her glance traveled on to light hair which had an engaging kink at the temple, then back to the face. Its expression sent a ripple along her nerves. Who was he? The muscles of his jaws were set, his arms still gripped her.

"Seems idiotic to say 'Thank you' when you really—" Her smile was tremulous, her voice shaken. She shivered.

"Don't think about it. I was the man for the moment, all right. What possessed you to lean over that hay-mow?"

Prudence freed herself and stepped back. She resented the dictatorial question.

"Don't lose your temper. That's my usual one-two-three-go! method of descending from haymows. Rather original—if you get what I mean." Now that his color had returned, the curve of his sensitive mouth set her on the defensive. It was so darn boyish for a man his age; he must be about thirty.

"Okay with me. Every move a picture. But is this method of transporting eggs also original with you?" He glanced at her white skirt which she still gripped with one hand. From the side a stream of egg yolks was dripping.

"My word!" She looked from her skirt to his perfectly tailored gray sports suit. It was liberally spotted with yellow which had not been part of the weaver's design. The slight wiped her eyes and voice clean of assumed indifference.

"I'm sorry! I'm terribly sorry. I—I've made you look like an omelette." His eyes deepened as they met hers contritely appealing. His lips tightened. Was he furiously angry because she had spoiled his clothes?

"Truly, I'm sorry. I haven't even thanked you for saving me from a horrid fall—I'd loathe being mushed—forgive me for being flippant. I am on my knees in apology for the damage to your clothes. Come into the house and Jane Mack will take off the spots. She's a demon cleanser."

"No, thank you, my man will do it." "If you scorn our help, you will let me say 'Thank you' won't you?" She held out her hand. "I am Prudence Schuyler of Prosperity farm."

"Don't apologize for the damage, which amounts to nothing, or the snub which I deserved. I am—"

"Well, Rod, here you are!" Si Puffer in work-stained blue overalls extended a knob-jointed hand. "What you doin' here? Thought you left High Ledges last week. Whatta mean is, didn't know you and Miss Prue was acquainted."

So this was the glamorous Rodney Gerard! The playboy whom she had planned to treat with superb disdain when or if they met! Life certainly had a nice sense of humor to fling her into his arms. Prudence debonairly answered the question in Si Puffer's slate-color eyes.

"We aren't—that is, we weren't, but quite suddenly I took the quickest way down from the haymow, Mr. Man-of-the-Moment caught me—and look!" She held out her skirt.

"Well, I'll be darned—and eggs forty cents a dozen! You'd better chuck the mess an' go get that skirt cleaned."

"I'm going. Good morning, Mr.—Mr. Rod, and thank you again." Prudence smiled and nodded to the two men watching her, as she left the barn.

"Pretty as a movie star and smart as a steel trap," Si Puffer commented.

"Who is she? What is she doing here?"

"Haven't you heard? Austin Schuyler left all his holdings here to that sloop of a girl. He up an' died, just after he'd paid a lot of money for an annuity, too. Can you beat it! Miss Prue came last night with a hatchet-faced woman who's going to be the housekeeper. She's come to the farm to see if she can get her brother David's health back. They say he had an income enough to live on—he was a lawyer—besides his practice till the crash came. Two years ago his wife walked out on him with his sister Julie's husband."

"Schuyler! Is that the family! That rotten scandal staggered even the most hard-boiled people I know. This Miss Schuyler's sister Julie was charming but too domestic for the man she married. Her husband wanted a woman who would make other men stop, look, listen. His wife's sister-in-law was that type, so he stepped up and took her. He didn't have her long. Mrs. David Schuyler was smashed up in an automobile accident a week after she ran away."

"Gorry-me. Makes me think of them words in the Bible, 'an' the wages of sin is death.' Folks say David Schuyler put in all his spare time helping the down-an'-out at a rescue mission. Mis Prue's got grit. Whatta mean is, last night when I brought them in, the road was so thick with fog you could cut it. Once when I looked round I could see tears glistening in her eyes, but she kept her voice like music. I'll bet she sings."

"So she intends to farm! Haven't they any money?"

"Lost it! Investments wiped out as quick and as clean as you can wipe writing from a slate. Whatta mean is, they lost their money, that's the talk in the village. She can get their living all right from the place if—if—only she will stick it out. In spite of radios an' movies, I guess 'twon't seem much like the city. Thought you'd gone, Rod. Don't you usually go flying or playing polo or visiting this time of year?"

Rodney Gerard looked quickly at Puffer's inscrutable face. "You're not crazy about me as a solid citizen, are you, Si? I was going, but Len Calloway held me up. He wants my decision on the timber now so that he can make his contracts for the increase in his cut."

Puffer rubbed his hand up and down his unshaven cheek. He drawled: "I'll donate one piece of advice, Rod. Don't trust Calloway. Whatta mean is, that old trouble between you two is only smolderin'. Len's always been a queer mixture of terrible temper and a sense of justice. When he gets mad he sees blood-red."

"He's all right now, Si. He has been mighty fair and agreeable."

"Hmp. That's because he wants something. Butter wouldn't melt in his mouth when he aims to please. Just the same, don't let him have that timber."

Rodney Gerard paused in the act of applying a lighter to a cigarette. "What's the idea? You told me yourself that a lot of big stuff ought to come out for the good of the forest."

"I did. There's thousands of feet of standing timber that's no longer growing, more than half of it decayin' an' likely to be destroyed by the first storm. I told you something else too—that you ought to have a forester here to mark every tree that was to come out, not leave it to the judgment of any man who can swing an ax, and that you ought to be here yourself when the cutting was done to see it was done right."

"I haven't forgotten, but, Si, they cut trees when the snow is on the ground. What would I do here in winter?"

"Folks have lived here through a winter, Rod, and slept and et like human beings. I calculate 'twouldn't hurt you none."

With a boyish shout of laughter, Rodney Gerard flung his arm about Puffer's shoulders.

"Don't you go back on me. I bank on you to stand by me as you have ever since you taught me to hold a gun. As to Len Calloway, I'll say 'nothing doing' to him now, and when I get around to it I'll have a forester give us a report on the trees."

"All right, Roddy. When you get the forester here, have him look over that wood lot of Miss Prue's. There's about five hundred acres along the rise that Austin Schuyler bought of Len Calloway's father. That stretch called The Hundreds between the highway an' the sky line. You an' I have been shooting over it year after year. It's the best stand of spruce and pine in the county. Ought to bring that spunky little girl a nice bunch of cash; but I'm afraid if Len Calloway gets hold of Miss Prue before she knows its value, he'll make a sharp trade with her. He's the kind of chap girls and women fall for—only the Lord knows why and he ain't telling—kinder mesmerizes them. I guess. He held me up in the fog last evening to ask when she was comin'. I didn't let on I had her in the back seat that very minute. Didn't want him to get in a lick till I'd warned her to watch her step. But he beat me to it. He's been to see her this morning."

"This morning?" "Gorry-me, Rod, what's there in that to get so excited about? Every unmarried man in the county—I wouldn't put it past some of the married ones—will come buzzin' round the red brick house like bees around a honey pot, now that girl is there."

Rodney Gerard thoughtfully regarded a fish hawk sailing high above him. He was looking at a different world from the world he had known as he entered the old barn. The sky seemed bluer, the air more sparkling; his blood raced through his veins. He had the sense of a new beginning, as if again, as in his ardent boyhood, he set his compass by a shining star. Of course he had given to charities—money, not his time. Spending for a round of amusement seemed flat, when you saw a girl taking life in both hands and forcing a living from it. He colored as his glance came back to the quizzical eyes watching him.

"Look here, Si, don't let Miss Schuyler sign up with Calloway. She will listen to you. I'll have a forester here within a month if I have to buy one. I was going to New York tonight—but I'll cut out the social stuff this autumn, stay here and attend to the timber."

Puffer strode after him as he left the barn. "Do you mean to say, Roddy, that you'll winter along with us and get out the logs? Mebbe I kin see you doing it?"

The not too thinly veiled taunt sent the blood in a red tide to Gerard's fair hair. He sprang into the low, long roadster, which had not a touch of color to relieve its shining blackness. He slammed the door and jumped the car forward.

"Mebbe, Mr. Puffer, you don't know as much about me as you think you do!" he flung over his shoulder.

Si Puffer's faded eyes were warm with affection as he watched the roadster skid round the curve.

"Got him mad, gorry-me, got him mad. Guess I went to work the right way to wake that young feller up." He chuckled, prodded thoughtfully with the straw, before he reflected aloud:

"I wonder, though, how much I really had to do with his staying."

Dusk and Mrs. Puffer appeared simultaneously at the red brick house. Prudence was placing a fresh blotter on her brother's desk in the living room when the massive woman waddled in and set a crisp golden brown loaf on the table.

"That's for luck. My grandmother, who was Welsh, always carried along a loaf when she went visiting. She claimed it brought good fortune."

"It smells marvelous! Raisins—hundreds of them! I'm going to eat that crusty end this minute."

"Glad you like it; knew you wouldn't have time to cook today, so left some things in the kitchen for your supper. I wanted to come up and help, but Si said you had everything planned so fine that the moving went as if 'twas on greased wheels. He thinks you'll be a wonder. Don't know but what I'll get jealous." Her small brown eyes, flecked with green, disappeared in rolls of flesh when she laughed.

Prudence dropped to a floor cushion beside the chair. She swallowed an especially plummy mouthful.

"Jealous! A woman who can make bread like this! You don't have to worry about keeping your men folk off the street. I'll wager they are on time for every meal!"

Mrs. Puffer's eyes filled, her lips quivered. "Si is all the men in the family now—we had one boy." She touched a tiny gold star pinned on the breast of her gown. "This stands for a white cross in France."

Prudence laid her hand on the plump fingers. "Dear Mrs. Puffer. I can understand your heartache. I wasn't very old when David went across, but I remember Mother's eyes when the doorbell or the phone rang. They seemed to knife through my heart even when she smiled and talked in her beautiful voice. She had such gay courage."

"Gay—courage! That's the sort. Most folks talk of grim courage. I guess that idea came from our Puritan ancestors. But your brother came back safe, dearie. They told me in the village that he wears ten bars on his Victory medal."

"Yes, for carrying ammunition to the Front of the Front in ten campaigns."

"They tell me, too, that isn't all you have to be proud of him for." She resolutely cleared her voice. "We're getting kind of solemn in the freight. You look real handsome in that dress, it's just the color of the shine in your hair, 'tain't red an' 'tain't yellow, it's like some of my prize zinnias—and those wax beads around your neck are awful pretty."

Wax beads! Julie's pearls! What would Mrs. Puffer say if she knew their value?

"What sort of man is Mr. Calloway, Mrs. Puffer? Something of an exhibitionist, isn't he?"

The stout woman's placidity was slightly shaken. "Dearie, you gave me a start. Si told me I must warn you about Len, and I was thinking how I'd best begin when you up and ask the question. Don't trust him."

Prudence chuckled. Mrs. Puffer's portentous voice was so out of character with her personality.

"Has he always lived here?"

"He was born in this house."

"Here?" "Lors, Miss Prue, before you've lived here a month you'll think every person in the United States had a relative who was born in this house, or one who died here. Folks is everlastingly stopping to ask if they may look around because someone who belonged to them once lived here."

"Sort of a combination of maternity hospital and detention house for heaven, wasn't it? It is almost dark. Let's have a light." She applied a match to the wick in the lamp on the table. "It's out! I'm clumsy. Wonder why Uncle Austin didn't have electricity put in. There! It's lighted!" She adjusted the green shade.

Oregon's Forests

Names of historic national forest landmarks in Oregon reveal records of human history and migration. Typically historic names are Mount David Douglas, in the Willamette national forest, named in honor of the famous Scottish botanist who, in 1826, first classified the Douglas fir tree for science. Tomahawk island in Multnomah county marks the vicinity where Captain Clark's pipe tomahawk was stolen by Indians in 1835. Snoqualmie national forest is from the Indian tribal name, "Sdoh-kwalk-bluh," or moon people.

Men Had to Sew

It was considered improper among the ancient Abyssinians for women to wash or sew any article of clothing, these duties being more suitable to men.

To Keep in Mind for Cake Making

Light Use of Mixing Spoon Is Highly Advisable, Expert Says.

In order to make cake well there are certain things which should be remembered, and followed. One is to handle the mixing spoon lightly. It will help to think of the ingredients as delicate or foamy. The expression "fold in the beaten egg whites" indicates that they are not to be roughly, but delicately treated, lest they lose their feathery texture.

While the ingredients, such as sugar, flour and butter, are solid or of close consistency, they are expected after the cake is made and baked, to come out light. "As light as a feather" is the term often applied to fine cake of certain kinds. It will fall to warrant such a recommendation unless the ingredients have been handled lightly. Certain ingredients should be beaten, rather than stirred, while others should be whisked into the mixture.

Another essential to good cake making is to measure quantities accurately. Avoid guessing. When a quarter cup of butter, or half a cup, is stipulated, see that the butter is patted down into the cup to make the right amount. Do not melt the butter or whatever shortening is used, unless so directed, for cake made with creamed butter is of a different texture from that made with melted shortening. The recipe will say if the latter is wanted, otherwise use it unmelted.

Level spoonfuls are meant in modern recipes unless rounded or heaping spoonfuls are given. To level a spoonful of contents draw the blade of a knife over the top, seeing that the knife touches the edges of the spoon while so doing.

Ingredients should be mixed in the order stated. When the order is not given it is assumed that the ingredients will be put together as follows: Cream sugar and butter, add beaten egg yolks and flavoring, then flour and liquid alternately, beating in each one before adding another quantity. Last of all, fold in the beaten egg whites. If the eggs are to be added without beating, as in pound cake, it will be so stated, and how many to add at one time. If eggs are to be beaten but not separated, this will be stated.

It is advisable to add a dash of salt to cake mixtures. As salt helps to make egg whites beat well, the salt may be added to whites before beating. Or the salt may be put with the baking powder into the flour and be sifted into the cake with the flour. Sifting flour three times before measuring tends to increase the lightness of the cake. This is because the sifting process lightens the flour, which decreases the amount just a trifle.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Weekly Letter by George Proctor, Deputy Fish and Game Warden

The best story of the week comes down from Colebrook. This comes from "Sum" Forbush who was at the Colebrook hatchery and got the story right from Fred Richards, the superintendent. It seems that Fred is boarding a pair of old and a pair of young beaver, being used for display purposes. He had the big old male in a pen by himself. He was in a pen surrounded by two-inch hard wood plank. One night he made up his mind to move and he went through that plank in no time. The next morning he was A-W-O-L so Fred replaced the plank and everything was O. K. Three mornings later the old male found it was not so hot outside so he just chewed his way back and when found was over in the corner enjoying a beauty sleep.

Once in a while the poor old game warden "fits" and this happened one night last week when we were the "guest" (get that "guest" at a testimonial dinner to the politicians of Worcester county, Mass., by the Worcester County League of Sportsmen's clubs. Over six hundred sat down to a very nice dinner at the Bancroft hotel. There were 18 of us at the head table and it was some time. Even poor old Jim Peck had to sit down with the common herd and look up to us. It was by far the best hotel banquet I ever sat down to. Usually we get a lot of plates and too many knives and forks, but here we actually got something to eat. Among the big ones who spoke (including myself) were Hon. James Curley of Boston, Mayor Mahoney of Worcester, Director Kenney of Boston and Hon. Patrick W. Hehir, the president of the county league. Several United States Senators and Congressmen were in the lineup. This league now has over 17,000 members and no wonder the politicians were so nice in their remarks. The toastmaster was no other than Howard H. Gibbs, the man with the megaphone voice. This club publishes that speaks for itself. I have seen and visited a lot of clubs in my young life, but boy, this one has 'em all stopped in all lines of conservation work. Success to them.

Have at hand a fine letter from my old friend, superintendent Arthur L. Clark of the Connecticut State Board of Fisheries and Game. They are organizing a new department down in that state known as the Nature League. This is to go into all the clubs and the public schools. This could be well copied by the rest of the New England states. The future hunters and fishermen are now in the public schools. You have got to hand it to that man Clark when it comes to matters pertaining to conservation.

Have a nice letter from W. E. Gibney of Keene telling me about his place near Keene that he is catering to the needs of the hunters. He sends some pictures to back up his statements. Those camps sure look cozy to me.

Last Saturday we sure got an eye full in the basement of the Peterboro town hall. It was the annual exhibit of the Hillsborough County 4-H clubs and was it wonderful! The work that some of those young people are doing is certainly a credit to themselves and their leaders.

Was up to Concord the other day and run into the office of Joe Buckley. Joe has charge of all the license plates in the basement of the State House. Joe showed me some of the new heavy uniform leather coats that the Department is handing out to their motor vehicle officers. That department is sure good to its men.

The Hillsborough County Forest Fire Warden has an organization that's a comer. I sat in the other night at one of their meetings at the Milford town hall. Over 400 men were present from all over the county. Able out of state men were on the list of speakers. If there is anything I am 100% for it's an organization of this kind. Much valuable information is imparted at these meetings in the line of new ways to combat the fire hazard. If it was not for such men as these our fire loss would be very heavy. For real conservation work you have got to hand it to these men. Anyone can join this organization and it is up to us all to sign on the dotted line and dig down for that big iron man. To those outside of this county we ask you to join your nearest club.

F. E. Holmes of Dundee, Ill., sends us clippings from two large Chicago papers telling of the wonderful exhibition of one German Shepard dog named Prince and how he guided his blind master, Frank Hall, through some twenty hazards much to the enjoyment of a large audience at the big Coliseum. The article goes on to say that the German Shepard Dog club of the Great Lakes hopes to start an endowment that will enable the club to furnish a trained an up-to-date monthly magazine dog for blind people. A worthy object.

Some real-to-goodness sportsman up in Tilton writes me a letter that fairly sizzles. He is "hot" on the stray cat problem and he says that up his way the cats are as thick as fleas on some dogs backs. He thinks that something should be done about it. When a full grown male pheasant is chased by a bunch of strays and runs right up to a house for protection it's time that something was done about it. We agree with you, Brother.

Spent the other night with Jim Peck, otherwise known as Bull-of-the-Woods. Jim is now located in Westboro, Mass., and is his district wild and woolley? Worked with him one morning and did he find plenty of hunters.

On the way home I stopped off to see my old friend, John H. Trayne at Groton, Mass. John has held every important office in that town and is now running a small eating place and writing political songs. He wrote two for Jim Curley and he sang several of them to me. He holds the world's record for the number of songs written by any one man in a year's time. John is still raising Boston and Japanese Silkies. Just tell him what you want in a song and in ten minutes it's all on the paper and rarin' to go. John has a voice like a three and a half year old bull (guernsey) and can he sing.

So many people have fleas, or I mean their dogs have fleas, that I am swamped with letters asking all about it. Well, just drop a letter to Sylburn Kennels, Milford, and you will get all the dope. And save me from hiring a typist.

After all the printer's ink that I have spilled in the past few years telling about the poor old skunk being protected by law till Nov. 1st there are still people that never heard of it. Well, I am surprised. You cannot trap a skunk or kill one unless that skunk is doing you damage until the open season which starts Nov. 1st. Many people think they have a right to kill a skunk at any time of the year. That's all wrong. And why not? The little black and white fellow has rights. He is worth into the millions every year and many a family can thank their stars that the little fellow is protected. That little fellow will never harm you unless you start something first.

It won't be long now to the whistle of the basketball referee. Many of the towns will this winter have town teams and the high schools will be stronger than ever. We can't seem to get warmed up to football but when it comes to basketball we will be there on the front seat.

Now that the fire season is about over for forest fires we can sit back and check up. I don't believe that there has been a year with so little bad fires in my district that the season just closed. It's a great compliment to the boys in the outlook stations and to the Forest Fire Chiefs and the men themselves who fight the fires. Then the people are getting educated to the great loss by fire. We are to suggest to State Forester Foster that he send some of his men this winter into the public schools and talk to the coming generation on the dangers of forest fires. It will help on the lines of conservation.

Much has been said the past few weeks about the big movement to poison the rats in the different counties. Much care should be used as to where the poison is placed. There is a big fine for anyone placing poison where any wild bird or animal can reach it.

Still a lot more of those gun accidents in the state and a few in other states. Everyone of them I have read about were unlawful as the boys injured were under the age of licenses.

Run across a gang of young fellows one day last week on the south side of the Capitol building, Concord. Each had a rifle shot and one had an air rifle. We stopped to see what they would say. Didn't you know it was against the law to have an air rifle? The answer was something like this, "Hey, fellow, be you a Dick?" When asked if the rifle would work, the boy said "watch". A taxicab came along and the boy let it go and that taxicab driver stopped so quick and the interview was at an end. Did he catch that gang? Ask us another. All this happened within 100 feet of the State House.

If a man does not want you to trap on his land, don't. Respect his wishes. He may want to let his own boy try his luck. He may own a pack of fox or rabbit hounds himself and not want them to get caught. Play the game.

We know where there are hundreds of No Trespass signs that will come down as soon as the bird season is over. Many people want to protect the woodcock, quail, grouse and pheasant but as soon as the open season is over down come the signs.

The trapping season starts Nov. 1st. Be sure you have your trapping license and your land permits properly made out. One copy for Concord and one you keep yourself.

Traps to be plainly marked. No, the Game Warden is not supposed to carry a glass to read the name on the traps. The law says "plainly marked."

Talk about your apples. Way up on Norway Hill in Hancock lives Eric Strombeck and can he raise apples. Never in my life have I sunk my teeth in anything like Eric's Macks. Boy, o boy, but they are wonderful. You should run up to this fruit farm some day and see the wonderful view from his yard. You can see for miles in most every direction. Eric is some fox hunter and has he got a nice bunch of dogs? We raved about the wonderful view from his place but Eric said, "Well, you can't eat that view. Have a Mac." Which we did.

Met an old friend the other day and he remarked how thin we were getting. Only lost twenty pounds in the past few months. Let me wise you up how to get that perfect 36 (not yet). We have been picking rocks and cutting ground junipers. That's the whole secret.

Had a card from my old friend, Owen Shepherd, Jr., of Madison, Conn. He is a game bird breeder and has some wonderful goldens.

Have had several nice hornets sent in the past week and George H. Gould of Georges Mills says he has one as big as a ten quart water pail. Wish I had it.

The next meeting of the Hillsborough County Forest Fire Warden's will be held at Hillsborough Upper Village some time in November. You don't want to miss this meeting if you want to see and hear a good snappy meeting. Tim Barnard of Nashua says that the City Clerk nearly had writer's cramp last week writing out dog licenses which he should have done last May. However, the city, through its drive to clean up all unlicensed dogs made enough to pay all sheep damage and a little for the school fund. We also see where the city of Manchester has started a drive with a similar result.

Did you see the news item the other day about the Game Warden who shot the cat and later had to talk it over with the farmer? No, that was not me. I hardly ever carry a gun in the car. On the other hand it was nothing on the Warden as the cat was in the highway and off its owner's land. The Warden had a perfect right to shoot that cat. And the courts would back him up.

To guide a bunch of hunters is against the law unless you are a licensed guide. Even if you do not receive compensation for your services. We know this is being done and the practice must stop. It only costs you a dollar to become a licensed guide and the O. K. of the local Warden. Sometimes the O. K. of the Warden is harder to obtain than the big dollar.

That big meet of the N. H. Fox Raccoon and Rabbit Association at Holderness was a big success. This was all last week. They report a wonderful time. This week a similar hunt is being run off in Pepperell, Mass., by the Fox hunters of that section.

A new breed of sled dogs are in the making at the farm of Harold Eastman at South Peterboro. They are half wolf, half dog, and he expects to make them into a fast team.

Saved by new Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil in tasteless tablets.

Pounds of firm healthy flesh instead of bare scraggy bones! New vigor, vim and energy instead of tired listlessness! Steady, quiet nerves! That is what thousands of people are getting through scientific latest discovery—the Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil concentrated in little sugar coated tablets without any of its horrid, fishy taste or smell. McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, they're called! "Cod Liver Oil in Tablets", and they simply work wonders. A little boy of 8, seriously sick, got well and gained 10 1/2 lbs. in just one month. A girl of thirteen after the same disease, gained 3 lbs. the first week and 2 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not eat or sleep after baby came got all her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month. You simply must try McCoy's at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McCoy's—the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets—approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes— insist on the original McCoy's—there are none better.
