PETERBORO MAKING PLANS FOR GIRLS' TOURNAMENT

Plans for the annual girls' state basketball tournament to be conducted in Peterboro under the auspices of the Boys' Club, March 3 to 5, are nearly completed by the committees. Eight teams, selected from a score of entries throughout the state, will compete for the feminine hoop crown.

Teams which will be considered for this year's tourney are Keene, Peterborough, Lincoln, Laconia, Charlestown, Meredith, Penacook, West Lebanon, Hampstead, Henniker, Stevens High of Claremont, St. Mary's of Claremont, Farmington, Milford, Hopkinton, Goffstown, Lebanon, Bristol, Bath and Wilton. The teams will be chosen February 23, after which word will be sent to each of the teams selected. The committee which will make the selections comprises Forrest C. Mercer, James B. Sweeney, Major A. Erland Goyette, Paul C. Cummings, John A. Fitzgerald, Waldron C. White, Vincent Smith, Matthew P. Cavanaugh, John R. Clark and Albert Stromgren.

A departure has been made from the former method of selecting the All-State teams at the conclusion of the tourney. Heretofore, a committee of coaches has made the all-choices but in the coming tournament the selections will be made by a board of three outside men, consisting of a member of the state headmasters' association thoroughly familiar with girls' basketball, a neutral coach and a newspaperman.

It will be of interest to note that the trophies to be given the winners this year will be more beautiful than ever before.

"DO YOU REMEMBER"

NO. 22
Wednesday, July 13, 1892, was a red letter day in the history of Antrim, as on that day Antrim citizens and veterans of Civil War did honor to her illustrious soldier dead, by the dedication of a handsome monument.

The Reporter of that day carried several columns regarding the event, from which we quote as follows:

Commander, headed by the Antrim Brass Band, left its headquarters in Jameson's Black and marched down Main and Depot streets, to the square near Factory street, to receive the visiting organizations which were to arrive on the 10:15 train.

WEEKLY LETTER BY PROCTOR FISH AND GAME WARDEN

Well, here we are at the big show. With a portable from the main office we will try and tell you about this the biggest of all Sportsmen's shows ever attempted in New England. It's been my good fortune to attend all of the shows in the past and I will frankly say that this one is the tops. There are attractions this year that you have never seen before in this country. The African exhibit on the top floor is well worth the trip down to see. In the basement the reindeer and the boys from the art circle are a world of information in themselves. As usual New Hampshire yanks the Bun in putting on the best exhibit in the huge building. The two government mounties in their brilliant red and many badges are a big drawing card for Nova Scotia. The highland lassie with her dances in the same exhibit draw a crowded aisle. The exhibit from Maine this year is the best they ever had, the live beaver being a wonder attraction. In our exhibit this year are Reggie Evans and Bill Height of Warren, Harry Hurlburt of Errol, Everett (Slim) Baker of Bristol, Conservation officers, Harry E. Hubbard, Supt. of Hatcheries and "Speck" Rockwell of Bristol. One of the big shows is the four trained deer owned by Frank Baldwin of Pittsburg. These deer jump through hoops much to the enjoyment of the large number of people. Saturday 25,000 people attended the show and Sunday the crowd was much larger. The log lean to, built and erected on the spot by Harry Hurlburt of Errol, is one that the crowd all want to own. This will be taken to the show at New York week after next. There is a large display of sporting fish by all the states. There is everything that a sportsman needs from a tiny bob to a $7,000 sea going cruiser. Jim Derocher of Nashua, from the Federal hatchery is showing them just how fish are raised from the egg and his booth is crowded from morning to closing time.

The big tank in the main hall is a scene of many a battle royal and if you want a good laugh you want to take in the shows both afternoon and evening.

There are Indians galore, dog teams and their equipment.

Here is a chance to see the biggest and best show ever attempted. The show runs all this week and does not close till 10 o'clock Saturday night. Come on down and join the crowd. See you next week in the sticks.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR ALBERT G. HARRIS

Funeral services for Albert Harris were held last Thursday afternoon at the home, with Rev. William McNair Kittredge officiated, assisted by Rev. Ralph H. Tibbals. The house was filled with his many friends who had come to pay their final respects. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. The bearers were Archie Nay, Walter Cleary, George Griswold, and Freeman Clark. Interment was in the family lot in Maplewood Cemetery.

Seems to us we hear giggling coming from the direction of Maine and Vermont.

The girls, it is complained, won't accept invitations to go anywhere if they have to walk. Yet they seem willing to accept invitations to walk up the church aisle to meet the minister.

"If you really feel I'm all right, I'll go back, of course." She was glad of the interruption of the telephone bell. Mr. Terriss grabbed his hat. "I'm going along," he said. "You keep right on doing like you've been doing and you'll turn up something before long that'll give us the right steer. I'm certain of it. Let me hear from you as often as you can."

Curt had a suggestion. "We'll go see a news reel and then stop in at a nice little club I know about and have a sandwich and listen to the music, there's a wench there who sings 'Stormy Weather' like nobody's business. I'll be down for you presently."

CHAPTER X

"But I tell you, Elinor, that if he doesn't enter in February he'll have to wait until next fall." Mr. Cayne had invaded his wife's room and stood, the picture of asperated powerlessness, reflected by her mirrors in every direction. She was there, too, the indomitable piece of fluff, which does not combat but slips away untouched from strength and force, her peach velvet negligee lay around her shoulders carelessly and she adjusted it into a more becoming line. Rachel, every curl banished, neat as a nun in her gray afternoon taffeta, concentrated on the tiny darn she was placing over a cigarette burn in one of Mrs. Cayne's lace slips, tried to look as blank as Mr. Terriss and not miss a syllable.

"Do you like this color on me, Peter?" Elinor Cayne asked at last. "We weren't talking about that. Listen, I want Holbrook to enroll in the spring term of the university." "But I thought this year's classes were all arranged, or enrolled, or whatever they do."

"He can take special work. Better for him than loafing and running around to parties with all these crazy kids."

Rachel wondered if Elinor's indifference could be as complete as it seemed. She stitched more slowly, she must know what Mr. Cayne and his wife had to say about Holbrook's friends, for so far she had been able to discover nothing significant about them.

"They're really very sweet, Peter. Of course they're young and thoughtless." Her tone implied: "And you're old and set."

Mr. Cayne caught the implication fully. "Oh, I know you think I'm in my dotage, but that's beside the point. Holbrook must have an education, this is the time of his life when he ought to be studying hard."

"Holbrook would study hard if you'd let him go to art school."

"Now, Elinor, look here, I've gone into this art racket thoroughly. What'll it get, the boy? He can be an illustrator of stories for magazines, or he can draw pictures to go with advertisements or into catalogues, and unless he's a topnotcher neither one will give him anything but a poor living. If he paints portraits and landscapes and murals—well, my God, think of the square miles of canvas that are covered every year and what per cent of 'em sells? Be practical about it! An artist has got to be mighty good, in the first rank, and then he's got a long hard struggle and mayn't land anywhere."

Elinor's face twisted in rage, her voice shrilled. "You never cared anything about Holbrook, ever since he was born you've wanted to make him into a hard miserly money-grubber like you are yourself! You think that's all there is in life! There's everything you don't see—beauty—and pleasure—and—"

"O Lord, hysterics again! If you'd just talk things over reasonably."

"You don't want reason—you only want your own stupid way. But I'll fight for my child—he's not going to be ruined by your loathsome materialism."

Mr. Cayne went out of the room, banging the door; his wife burst into tears of temper. "I'm the most miserable woman in the world," she sobbed, "I don't know why I ever married him, I was nothing but a child. I was so young—and so ignorant—and now I'll have to do my face all over again! It's maddening to cry!" She turned sharply to Rachel, who was still working over her long-finished darn. "Don't sit there like a dummy. Bring me my special cream out of the bathroom—no, bring me a towel wrung out of hot water—and get some ice from Lena—hurry, hurry, I'll be as red as a lobster, and puffy—I could kill Peter Cayne when he's mean and obstinate like this."

Rachel, soon standing ready with lumps of ice wrapped in gauze, trying to look impersonal and yet concerned, was thinking in an odd, lost way: "She loves Holbrook, she loves him in that crazy possessive way I missed in Anne. I wonder why she loves him so much and didn't care enough about me even to try to keep me? I wish I could understand her better. Queer, I've almost stopped thinking about her as my mother, it only comes on now and then." Aloud, "Here's the ice, Mrs. Cayne, if you'll hold it on your eyelids—"

"Don't fidget—you're dripping it all over me. You are the most awkward girl; here, give it to me. Now go and see if Mr. Cayne's gone out. If he has, tell Mr. Holbrook I want to see him. If Mr. Cayne's still here, come back and tell me and don't speak to Mr. Holbrook."

Rachel hurried into the library. No sign of Mr. Cayne. Towers was coming from the drawing room where he had drawn the curtains for the evening. He said yes, Mr. Cayne had left just a minute ago, but he wouldn't be gone long, he had said he was going to walk around the block and buy some cigars. Towers nodded knowingly and whispered, "He's sore as a crab."

So Rachel tapped at Holbrook's door. "Mrs. Cayne wants to speak to you, Mr. Holbrook," she said, primly.

"Is that you, Rachel?" came the boy's voice. "Wait a minute." She opened the door and he beckoned her inside. The dandified dark green and gold brocade of his lounge suit was a bad contrast for the distress on his too-old, too-weak face. "I say, Rachel," he began, "does father pay you by the week?"

Rachel's first impulse was to say, "It's none of your business," but she reflected that this was her first chance to talk to the boy. "Yes, sir," she said, "he pays me by the week."

"Well, look, I'm in an awful jam, my allowance isn't due till the end of the month, couldn't you lend me something till then?"

"How much do you want, sir?" "How much have you got?"

Rachel seemed to be calculating. "I could let you have five dollars, I guess," she said haltingly.

"Oh, damn, I've got to have more than that. Haven't you got any savings?"

"No, sir—but Towers and Lena have."

"Yes, I know, the swine! They wouldn't let me have a plugged nickel to save my life. Can't you raise more than five dollars? When do you get paid again—Saturday?"

"I might let you have eight dollars, but I need my Saturday's money."

"I need it worse than you do! The end of the month's next week, can't you let me have the eight dollars and the money you get on Saturday—how much is it, anyway?"

"Fifteen dollars," lied Rachel, "but I need that myself. You ask your father, Mr. Holbrook, he's nice and kind, he'll let you have it. Or your mother would."

"Nice and kind like a steel trap when it comes to money! And mother's as hard up as I am. Look here, you put the eight dollars under my pillow when you fix my bed tonight, will you?"

"What'd you need it so bad for?" asked Rachel. "My gracious, you're rich people, I shouldn't think you'd need to borrow anything."

The door was flung open and Mrs. Cayne stood there. "What are you doing in here?" she said savagely to Rachel. "I sent you to tell Mr. Holbrook to come and see me—"

Holbrook broke in glibly: "I asked her to come in and look at the way that dumbbell Rosie did my new shirts, I wanted her to speak to Rosie, I never see her."

"Oh, was that all? Where are the shirts?"

"She just put 'em back in the drawer and was going. I'm sorry I kept you waiting, beautiful. Don't be cross. It spoils you." He lounged over to his mother, put his arm around her neck and winked at Rachel over her shoulder. "Anyway I'm glad you came—what did father say about the school?"

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about—go ahead, Rachel, attend to your work."

Rachel went out, very straight and tall and angry. Her feelings against these two had darkened and increased. "I don't like them!" she thought with all the ruthlessness of youth. "I don't like them! Mr. Cayne's the only decent person in the family—and he's the only one not any kin to me."

She went back to the kitchen where Lena was preparing dinner. "Can I wash that salad for you?" she asked mechanically.

"I wish you would, I can't see when the stuff's clean any more. My glasses ought to be changed, but I can't seem to get round to it."

Rachel took the salad to the sink, filled a pan with water and turned on the light just above it. "Lena," she said, "I'm going to tell you something because I'd like your advice. Mr. Holbrook just asked me to lend him my wages till he gets his allowance first of the month. D'you think I ought to do it—I mean wouldn't Mr. and Mrs. Cayne be sore if they found it out?"

Lena's hand paused above the roast she was larding. "Oh, he's begun on you, has he, the little devil? Well, I don't now what this world is coming to! No, don't you let him have a nickel. You'll never get it back if you do. He's had—let's see—in the past year or so—he's had over a hundred from me and half as much again from Bert, and he's never paid back a penny."

"But doesn't he get an allowance?"

"He gets a bigger allowance than your wages or mine neither. He gets plenty! No fear of that."

"What does he spend it on, then?" "The Lord only knows, helling around playing the Crown Prince, I guess: I told him this summer whiles we was in the country that I'd not let him have another cent, and Bert did the same, and he tried it on Yates, then, but Yates was smart, told him he was all tied up in a mortgage and said to Bert and me that he'd lose his job before he'd let that young monster put it over on him. Don't you begin it, for mark my words it'll be a gift and not a loan."

"Why don't you or Mr. Towers speak to Mr. Cayne?"

"How can we, and him so good and kind and trying to do his best for the boy and her all the time hampering him and cutting across his intentions! He's got so much trouble with them both—Bert did threaten the boy he'd tell on him, but we can't do it, we think maybe he'll grow out of it. Lotta kids get a wild streak about this time, when their bodies've grown up and their wits are still children. See what I mean? I'd cut my hand off for Mr. Cayne, let alone bearing the loss of a hundred dollars. But you stay out of it. Let his ma wheedle the cash for him, she's done it before and she'll do it again."

Rachel dropped the clean wet romaine into the salad bag and whirled it blithely around. "Then I'm going to save my eight dollars," she said. "Thank you for telling me. I'll never mention it."

"I know you're not the kind to blab," allowed Lena, handsomely. "I knew that from the first."

It was two days later, in the afternoon, when Lena called Rachel from the laundry where she was doing some of the endless pressing required by Mrs. Cayne. "Look at here," she said, "here's the master's special curry ordered for tonight and bled if I'm not out of curry powder. Skip out and get it for me, will you, that's a good girl. There's just the one shop that carries the kind I use and they'll never get it here if I phone and Bert's not up on her jewelry. I do that every few days now. And the bracelet's gone."

Rachel followed him into Mrs. Cayne's room, watched while he unlocked the safe and took out a worn blue leather box. "There—peridot brooch, pink pearl pendant, topaz and enamel chain, moonstone cameo brooch, carved lapis bracelet and those three rings. The sapphire bracelet was here last Saturday. I haven't looked them over since." He put the colorful trinkets back in the box and closed the safe.

Rachel had never felt less like a detective, but she followed her instructions. "I'll find out who's been in the house since Saturday and—will you notify Terriss, or shall I?" As she said this she recalled Holbrook and his need of money, and the fact that she hadn't put the eight dollars under his pillow as he had asked, nor had he said anything about the omission. She had supposed that he had got the money from his mother, as Lena had said he would. But now—her suspicion came alive.

Mr. Cayne divined her double thought. "What is it, who've you got in mind?" he demanded. "Was anyone here while I was out—any of Mrs. Cayne's friends, or Holbrook's? Quick, think!"

Rachel simulated intense thought. "No, no one came in for bridge, and Holbrook's had no friends except a couple of boys on Monday."

British Masked Men Operate in Secret and Specialize in Saving Scenic Cliffs

Although masked and working in secret like the Italian "Misericordia," "Ferguson's Gang" of London, unlike the Florentine society, does not wait until death calls into action their ministrations—the Ferguson's help the living. After one of their periodical eclipses, they were recently discovered, by the Land's End correspondent of the Times of London, operating in Cornwall.

At intervals in the last few years masked men and women, emissaries of the "gang," have visited the prosaic offices of the National Trust in Buckingham Palace Gardens to hand over bags or wads of currency, acquired no one outside the gang knows how or where. A recent gift was the second and final installment of the purchase price of 15½ acres of cliff land, in order to keep it safe for the nation for all time.

Exactly how this money reached the Trust has not been disclosed. But it is now known that the first installment changed hands some time ago. During the annual dinner

National Topics Interpreted

Washington—A good many persons in Washington still are arguing the point whether President Roosevelt and Secretary Roper, of the Department of Commerce, made a mistake in arranging for the so-called conference of nearly a thousand "small" business men. The conference that turned into a near riot provided plenty of publicity, if that was what was planned, but it was publicity of a distinctly bad sort from a political standpoint. On the other hand, some way, some how, there came out of that conference a score or more of recommendations, and some of them were the very "recommendations" which Mr. Roosevelt wanted from "business interests." It is a new vehicle on which bureaucrats and advisers can ride.

But before I attempt an analysis of the results that may flow from the conference, a review of the meeting itself should be recorded. The business men, widely publicized as being "small and independent fellows" were convened in the Commerce Department auditorium. It had all of the earmarks of a session for which a program had been drawn up here in Washington. It appeared to be cut and dried. No sooner had the session convened, however, than things began to happen. Since there were nearly a thousand individuals, there were nearly one thousand different views, and the individuals sought in various ways to express themselves. The result of the first day's meetings can be described, therefore, as nil—unless you want to consider the riot, the necessity for physically ejecting some of the members who became violent in their objections, as a result. It was a session in which shouts were heard about "hand-picked chairman" and "log rolling" and "you can't dictate to me."

With the first day's session a flop, machinery somehow was set in motion for the second day so that a recurrence of the riot would be avoided. The conference was broken up into group or sectional meetings. It was hinted that big things could be expected from these in the shape of concrete recommendations. Well, we observers found instead that the big conference-riot of the little business men had been broken up into some ten or twelve smaller conference-riots. Just as an example: one session was so uproarious that it was found necessary to call in the building police and forcibly throw out one little business man who measured over six feet and weighed plenty.

Those were the physical phases of the two-day conference. Yet, believe it or not, there were "recommendations" made by those nearly one thousand business men representing small businesses of the country. They were duly presented to President Roosevelt who sent out word to the newspaper correspondents afterward that some of those recommendations were, indeed, quite constructive.

I shall not attempt to set them down here. They would take more space than is available. I noted among them, however, one item that urged the government to "establish a procedure to encourage and facilitate loans to small business." It recalled to me that there has been much talk among "advanced thinkers" in the administration that the government should have an agency to make loans to small businesses. It was discussed in these columns recently. Undoubtedly, it was just a coincidence that this "recommendation" should come from the small business men while the advisers to the President were considering it.

Included in the recommendations, however, were proposals for the administration to do several things that thus far have not had administration backing. One of these was a recommendation that wage and hour regulatory legislation should be abandoned. No one seems to know from whence that item came; and it was variously reported as not having had the "full support of the conference." It may have been that even the 12 chairmen who carried the recommendations to the White House meeting with the President performed a miracle—but there is no denying that the item was included and quite a few members of the Democratic party in congress were glad to see it.

So, the conference has been held and its work and efforts to solve the depression problems are spread on the first pages of newspapers. The results in this direction would seem to justify Mr. Roosevelt's recent intimations that the business men do not know what they want. Such a view would be correct if the conference itself had been representative. True, the delegates came from all sections of the country. True, all excepting a very few were of the type known as small business men. But it must not be overlooked that the conference was planned, invitations extended and program written from Washington. I think it is quite unlikely that men would be invited without somebody in the administration having knowledge of their general attitude toward the New Deal. There actually may be something to the charge that was variously hurled in the sessions that chairmen were hand-picked and that there was a bit of log rolling done, just a teeny, weeny bit of it.

Concerning the after-effects, one can hear many observations. Some say that the bulk of the small business men went away from Washington nursing a grudge; others add that many of the delegates went back home with a sour idea of government conferences and, therefore, with a willingness to ridicule the administration, and still others hold the conviction that the very confusion that came from the meeting provided Mr. Roosevelt with his criticism of business leadership. It seems to me there is ground for each of these three conclusions. Time, alone, will disclose the ultimate effects. Mr. Roosevelt may utilize the recommendations in a fireside chat or a message to congress. Some of his advisers may bear down on the lack of agreement and understanding among business men. Or, the whole thing may be treated very seriously and an attempt made to convince the country that the administration is being guided by what it believes the business interests want—as shown in the recommendations of the conference.

The Treasury laid some stress on announcement the other day that it will begin a series of borrowings late this month that likely will be the last borrowings by the federal government "in this generation." It was stated that between 200 and 300 millions will be borrowed during the next several months, but that June tax payments and subsequent collections will provide money for current needs. That is to say there will be no need for "new money" which is money borrowed out of the money market or banks.

It has not been made clear how the Treasury will accomplish the objective of cessation of borrowing at this time. President Roosevelt has predicted that there will be a deficit of about one billion dollars in the next fiscal year. A Treasury deficit can mean only one thing, namely, that the amount of income is less than the amount of the expenditures. Something appears to be screwy in a circumstance where there is a deficit of a billion and only a few hundred millions have to be borrowed.

However it may be accomplished, it is hopeful that borrowings are going to be terminated. The Treasury has been doing it for a long, long time. I think it is about nine years that the Treasury has faced a deficit each year and there has been new money borrowed to pay the bills. Those borrowings ranged anywhere from half a billion during 1930 to more than four billions in 1933 and 1934.

The Treasury's announcement explained that the Treasury would receive more than one billion dollars for the account of its trust funds during this year. Trust funds are segregated moneys, such as the fund for payment of social security benefits. Well, it strikes me as a bit unfair to say the Treasury will not borrow any new money this year when it actually is borrowing from the social security fund. There is no violation of law in that course, because the law says the social security funds must be invested in government bonds.

The borrowing from social security funds calls attention to another phase of government finance. Those funds come from payroll taxes. They are taxes paid by the workers as well as by the employer. It has occurred to me, therefore, that unless the government's revenue can be made to balance its expenditures, sometime in the future workers will want to obtain payment under the provisions and there will be nothing but government bonds in the fund. Further, there is every possibility—indeed, I believe it is a probability—that these payroll taxes are going to bear more heavily on the workers of the future than they do today.

There seems little doubt that the social security dream is here to stay. Unworkable as it is, there will be no politician with sufficient courage ever to tell the voters of his constituency that the social security act will fail. Some of the "advanced thinkers" among the New Dealers have had spasms when remarks like that were made in their presence. The real spasms, however, will develop when the public is given a clear understanding of what that law does to a civilization—when it is shown by operation that the ideal of protection takes much more out of the pockets of those who are supposed to benefit than they ever can get back.

up on her jewelry. I do that every few days now. And the bracelet's gone."

Rachel followed him into Mrs. Cayne's room, watched while he unlocked the safe and took out a worn blue leather box. "There—peridot brooch, pink pearl pendant, topaz and enamel chain, moonstone cameo brooch, carved lapis bracelet and those three rings. The sapphire bracelet was here last Saturday. I haven't looked them over since." He put the colorful trinkets back in the box and closed the safe.

Rachel had never felt less like a detective, but she followed her instructions. "I'll find out who's been in the house since Saturday and—will you notify Terriss, or shall I?" As she said this she recalled Holbrook and his need of money, and the fact that she hadn't put the eight dollars under his pillow as he had asked, nor had he said anything about the omission. She had supposed that he had got the money from his mother, as Lena had said he would. But now—her suspicion came alive.

Mr. Cayne divined her double thought. "What is it, who've you got in mind?" he demanded. "Was anyone here while I was out—any of Mrs. Cayne's friends, or Holbrook's? Quick, think!"

Rachel simulated intense thought. "No, no one came in for bridge, and Holbrook's had no friends except a couple of boys on Monday."

Here is what to do: Take two BAYER tablets when you feel a cold coming on—with a full glass of water. Then repeat, if necessary, according to directions in each package. Relief comes rapidly.

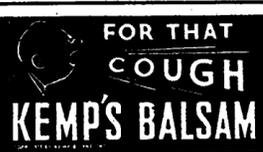

The Bayer method of relieving colds is the way many doctors approve. You take Bayer Aspirin for relief—then if you are not improved promptly, you call the family doctor.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—fast tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed by the country over. Found at Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Puzzle No. 45 Solved:

Only One Type of Tree

Produces Real Camphor

Camphor is an odd substance. The several kinds of camphor known to science are hydrocarbons, compounds of hydrogen and carbon, and are relatives of our common turpentine. However, the camphors are a little different in the manner in which the atoms composing their molecular structures are put together, reveals an authority in the Boston Globe. Thus, while turpentine is useless for the purpose, camphor can be united with cotton, nitric acid and sulphuric acid to make celluloid, and, by another operation, modern high explosives—the kind used to supply the energy to hurl shells out of the great cannon.

Oddly enough, four kinds of plants produce camphor. One kind, the mints, such as monarda and mentha, is very common in America. But, sadly enough, the camphor they produce is not the right kind to make explosives. The second kind of plants are also common; certain composites, such as chrysanthemum parthenicum and blumea. But, again, the composites' camphor is the wrong kind, too. The third is a rare tropical family, the dipterocarps. Their camphor is excellent—but it is so rare that the price it commands is so very high that it is used for but one purpose—embalming wealthy persons in the Orient.

The fourth kind of camphor is the camphor of commerce; the camphor produced by one tree, cinnamomum camphora. This tree has relatives in New England—the spice bush and the sassafras—but their camphor, again, is not commercially available or chemically useful.

Thus, in all the world, only one tree, Cinnamomum camphora, produces "real" camphor. And this tree is native only to one place in the world, the Japanese island of Formosa. It has been transplanted to southern China and to the Malay states, but it thrives best in its own home, Formosa.

And it is there that nearly all the world's camphor is harvested.

Arizona Crater a Wonder

Near Winslow, Ariz., the great meteor crater is an object of unflagging interest. This tremendous hole, a mile in diameter, was formed by the impact of the head of a small comet that plunged into the earth ages ago and now lies buried more than a thousand feet beneath the surface. The bottom of the crater is about 50 stories deep, and around the rim is an even hill as white as snow, that indicates the intense heat that scorched the earth all around as the flaming comet struck.

Name Reginald Teutonic

in Origin, Means Wise

The name Reginald, of Teutonic origin, means "of wise power." For centuries it has been a favorite name. St. Reginald of Picardy is patron against fever, states a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sir Reginald Bray (d. 1503) knighted for his bravery in battle, was one of the leading architects of his time, designing the interior decoration of St. George's chapel, Windsor.

Rt. Rev. Reginald Heber (1783-1826), English poet and bishop of Calcutta, wrote many of our favorite hymns, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" being one.

Reginald DeKoven (1861-1920), so called although the first two of his given names were Henry Lewis, composed many songs and light operas, among the latter being "Robin Hood."

Lord Reginald Esher (d. 1930), friend of the rulers of England and governor of Windsor castle, had access to the papers of Queen Victoria. Among his books is "The Correspondence of Queen Victoria." In 1921 he sent his diary and a sealed package of papers concerning the war to the British museum with instructions not to open until 1981. It is expected that these papers will give future historians valuable information.

Indian Archers

The Indian archer carried his arrows in a quiver usually made of skin, but sometimes of tough bark; this was slung at his back or side, and was large enough to hold from ten to twenty arrows. The feathers used for making the vanes on the shafts were taken from the wings of wild geese, turkeys, eagles, vultures and herons, for which reason these birds were much sought after. Boys from infancy were taught the use of weapons, but their arrows were pointed with heavy wood instead of stone or bone. They were able to kill small birds, and in the clear water of shallow streams they waded and shot fish, of which they were very fond, sometimes eating them raw.

Moose Has Most Skin Surface

As a mouse has far more skin surface for its weight than most other animals, says Collier's Weekly, it can fall down a mine shaft of any depth without being hurt. After the first hundred feet or more, the acceleration, due to gravity, meets the retardation due to air resistance and a steady rate of fall is maintained during the remainder of the drop, the animal landing only in a dazed condition.

Cold Has a Limit

There is a degree of coldness beyond which it is not possible that anything should be colder; but there is no limit to heat.

Can Spring Be Far Away?

WITH Winter almost over, March blizzards to the contrary notwithstanding, you find yourself eyeing the fashion sheets a little more than casually. Indeed you probably already have your needle threaded, just waiting for some nice Spring patterns to make your acquaintance. And here they are, three quick tricks, each pleasantly awaiting your choice, each designed to make some wardrobe happy. Which do you prefer?

Fitted Bodice.

Look your Sunday best in this graceful afternoon frock with its snug and softly shirred waistline. The skirt flares slightly to the front and emphasizes the slimness of the silhouette. Note the saddle shoulder and short, puffed sleeves—details that are unusually becoming and make for distinction. One of the new widely spaced flower patterns in rayon or silk will make your informal afternoons and evening a double delight, and the pattern is a particular joy to work with. So simple, and so pleasing.

Trim Morning Frock.

Don't be caught around the house without your best foot forward. You needn't be, with this crisp and flattering morning frock at your beck and call. Simple as pie, yet charming fresh and youthful, this model dispenses with all fussy details yet achieves an appearance which will see you through the busiest day. The skirt flares a bit from a neatly fitted waistline, and the ric-rac trim, in contrast, adds a note of brightness. Just nine pieces including the belt and pockets. Try dotted swiss or a printed percale.

For the Full Figure.

This charming frock is really more than a house frock—you'll find it flattering enough and dressy enough to wear throughout the day. The slim, straight lines make every provision for comfort. The skirt has a kick pleat at front, the sleeves are full and pleated, and the neck line is just right to be very flattering. Furthermore you can make this dress, of a rayon print or gay percale, in a brief afternoon.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1450 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (32 to 38 bust). Size 14 (32) requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material with short sleeves. Fourteen inch zipper required for front closing.

Pattern 1312 is designed for sizes 14 to 44 (32 to 44 bust). Size

The Drawbacks

"Dear Mrs. Pucket," a school teacher wrote to the mother of a pupil, "William was absent this morning. Will you please tell me what kept him out of school?" "Dear Ma'am," was the reply. "William is keeping time for his father. Last nite he cum home with an exampel about how long would it take a man walking 3 miles an hour to walk two and a half times around a field 4 miles square. And as Willie ain't no man, we had to send his pap."

16 (34) requires 3 3/4 yards of 39 inch fabric; 1 3/4 yards braid required for trimming.

Pattern 1444 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4 3/4 yards of 35 or 39 inch material; 1/2 yard required for revers facing in contrast. Bow requires 1/2 yard ribbon.

TIPS to Gardeners

The First Step

THE first step toward a successful garden is an early start. Spade or plow as soon as possible. If a handful of soil gripped firmly can be crumbled readily upon release, the soil is in condition to be worked.

It is important that fertilizer be used cautiously, advises Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute. An excess is often harmful, particularly in growing fruits, such as tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers.

Garden preparation effort is wasted if you do not plant seeds from dependable sources. Select your favorite varieties from the nearby store before the supply is depleted, even though it is not yet time to plant. Make sure the seeds you buy are freshly packed.

Weather conditions permitting, it is advisable to spade into the soil some rotted manure, rotted leaves or lawn clippings, or rotted garden refuse. Clay soils are improved in texture by this treatment, and sandy soils are improved in water holding capacity.

Bennington

Congregational Church
Rev. J. W. Logan Pastor
Morning Service at 11 o'clock.

William Gerrard of Holyoke, Mass., was here on Tuesday attending the funeral of Scott Knight.

The Penny Sale conducted by St. Patrick's Church Guild at the Grange hall on Monday evening was a very successful affair, there being a large attendance, and a good sum of money was realized.

SCOTT W. KNIGHT DIES FOLLOWING SHORT ILLNESS

Scott Whittemore Knight one of Bennington's most respected citizens died Saturday at Margaret Pillsbury Hospital following a few days illness.

He was born in Bennington March 6, 1874, the son of Royal V. and Ella A. (Whittemore) Knight. In 1907 he went to Boston and worked there for about 20 years, when he returned to Bennington to care for mother and father. He was a member of Pacific Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Franconstown, Waverley Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Antrim, a trustee of the Bennington Congregational Church, and an employe of the Monadnock Paper Mills for several years.

Survivors are one sister, Mrs. Helen Young of Somerville, Mass., and two nieces, Mrs. Evelyn Bennett of Nantucket, Mass., and Mrs. Frances Van Iderstine of Somerville, Mass.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Congregational church with Rev. Logan officiating, assisted by Rev. Fred Bennett, a nephew. The Odd Fellow service was used at the Church. Waverley Lodge and Pacific Lodge were represented by a group of members. Mrs. Vera Butterfield and Mrs. Eibel Roeder of Antrim sang, accompanied at the organ by Miss Edith Lawrence.

The bearers were Ivan Clough, George Edwards, Fred Knight, Harry Clafin, Philip Knowles, Bert Holt, and the ushers were John P. Weston and Fred Sheldon; George Church, assisted with the flowers.

Interment was in Sunnyside Cemetery, with committal service by Rev. Logan.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Philip Woodbury.

JOHN N. ADAMS

Funeral services for John N. Adams were held Friday afternoon at the Woodbury Funeral Home. Rev. Father Hogan, of Bennington, officiated.

The bearers were James Hennessy, Joseph Garafoli, Elton Matthews, Fred Knight and Walter Cleary, of Bennington, and Mr. Bleauclair, of Keene. Interment was made in Mount Calvary Cemetery at Bennington under the direction of Philip J. Woodbury, mortician.

There were many floral tributes from friends, relatives, Hillsboro business men and the Elks lodge of Keene. A delegation from the Elks was also in attendance.

Card of Thanks

We desire to express our thanks to the many friends and neighbors of Scott Knight, for the many kindnesses shown and for the beautiful flowers at the time of his death.

SEE VAST BENEFITS IN WEATHER DATA

Forecasting System Declared Best in History.

Washington.—The United States has developed the most advanced weather forecasting system in history. Dr. W. R. Gregg, chief of the weather bureau, discloses.

The bureau this year has saved many lives and hundreds of millions worth of property through advance warnings of floods, freezes and storms, Dr. Gregg said in a report to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Most notable of the advances made in weather forecasting during the last year was made, Dr. Gregg said, in weather reporting for airway services. The bureau added 120 airway reporting stations bringing the total to 782 stations.

The public, he said, hears much of the few airplanes that crash, but nothing of the hundreds of crashes which probably were averted through advance warning of unfavorable weather conditions. A new airway general supervising and forecasting center was established at Arlington, Va., during the year.

Bahama Stations Set Up.
Hurricane-warning service by the bureau was strengthened by establishment of an improved reporting system in the Bahamas. Twenty stations on the islands now supply daily information of vital importance in forecasting the approach of hurricanes toward the mainland.

"The year afforded some forceful and dramatic examples of the important, at times tragic, part that unfavorable weather plays in human affairs and of the highly constructive role that an efficiently organized weather service can assume in mitigating the effects of such weather," Dr. Gregg said.

The weather bureau was of "inestimable value," Gregg said, "in day-to-day reports of the 1938 drought and the floods of last spring. Economic losses from the floods were enormous, he said, but would have been infinitely greater but for the timely warnings of the bureau.

Advance news of high river crests kept down the death toll and economic losses, he said. They enabled the American Red Cross and government agencies to plan and work more effectively in relieving suffering and in effecting rescues, he said.

Citrus Fruit Saved.
Without the bureau's timely warnings of extremely low temperatures, Dr. Gregg said, virtually the entire citrus fruit industry of Southern California would have been wiped out by the record-breaking freeze last January.

"Other life and property losses that would have reached the public ear were prevented—and so never noticed—by holding ships in port when the bureau's storm warnings were hoisted; by special provisions for heating or cooling perishable fruits or truck crops when a cold or hot wave was forecast; by concentrating fire-fighting forces when the weather favored destructive fires in national forests," the report said.

Dr. Gregg said that long-range forecasts still are not practical, but that during the last year the weather bureau has definitely strengthened its service by more frequent reports of surface atmospheric conditions from a closer network of stations; a more complete program of sounding the upper air, and by expanding its research.

Complexes Found Rising on Campus, Teacher Says

Berkeley, Calif.—Masculine ego is diminishing and is being replaced by inferiority complexes and other "personality" troubles, according to Dr. Sidney K. Smith, University of California psychiatrist.

Dr. Smith based his statement on requests for assistance made to him by 500 students of the university. He said that inferiority complexes harass 25 per cent of the men students entering the institution.

Some of the problems presented to him by students at the time of taking entrance physical examinations, he revealed, included: Lack of self-confidence, lack of interest in the opposite sex, monetary worries, inability to concentrate, self-consciousness, and inclination to daydream.

Dr. Smith said that a lack of balanced interests might be responsible for most of the students' troubles.

He pointed out that "many students have no social life, no hobbies, no particular friends and no amusements. Their whole life consists of study, classes, three meals and sleep. Mental disturbances under these conditions are extremely likely."

Dr. Smith at the same time praised men students for their "honesty in presenting their difficulties."

Hillsboro High Outing Club To Sponsor Interscholastic Meet

Gibson Mountain Will Be the Scene of the Activities on Saturday, February 19. 30 High Schools Invited to Compete.

The Hillsboro High School Outing Club has voted to sponsor an interscholastic ski meet to be held on the slopes of Gibson Mountain on Saturday, February 19, 1938. The day's activities will be limited entirely to skiing. Three events will be run off as described in the following schedule.

Events	Time	Place
1. Downhill	10:30 A. M.	Gibson Mountain
2. Slalom	1:00 P. M.	Gibson Mountain
3. Cross Country	2:00 P. M.	Riley and Gibson Mountains

Arrangements have been completed to care for schools desiring to compete for the beautiful trophies. An invitation has been sent out to 30 schools within a radius of 50 miles from Hillsboro. The meet will be run off by the Outing Club of the high school with the assistance of a committee of citizens acting as starters, judges and technical advisors. Dr. Henry Baldwin and Paul Scruton will officiate in the cross country race. "Doc" Cassidy and John Tasker will officiate in the down hill race and Philip Woodbury and Leslie Coad in the slalom. George Boynton will act in an advisory capacity with the committee.

Provisions have been made for First Aid and medical assistance in case any is needed. Dr. Mildred Chamberlain has consented to act as physician on the course and to direct the activities of the First Aid unit comprising Paul McAdams, Charles Taylor and John Leeds.

The secretary of the Outing Club, Robert Harrington will act as chief scorer and clerk for all activities. He will have as his assistant, Scott Spofford.

Trophies will be offered in many classes. There will be an individual trophy for those placing first, second and third in the various events. Plaques will be offered to the schools obtaining the second highest number of points and the third highest number of points in the meet. A silver loving cup has been donated by interested citizens to be awarded the school scoring the highest number of points in the meet. This cup is to be held for one year. Permanent possession of same may be obtained by winning it three times. The trophies other than the loving cup have been made in the cabinet shop in the high school. They are in the form of plaques bearing the name of meet, the event and the place. The following members of the Outing Club will serve as checkers, timers, and guides during the meet, John Carter, George Colby, Wallace Mardough, Lester Rysnik, David Cushing, Wallace Wooster, Norman Coad and Roger Stafford.

Visiting schools will register upon arrival at the high school on School Street. Numbers will be given the contestants at that time and the party will move at 10:00 a. m. to Gibson Mountain where a trail has been cleared by the Outing Club Members for a distance of approximately one-half mile to the top of the mountain. This trail has a drop of 680 feet. A slalom course has been laid out under the direction of Philip Woodbury on the same slope. The cross country course will start near the residence of the Bradley Estate and will finish at the same place as the other two events, at the foot of Gibson Mountain. The course will be approximately two miles in length.

Cocoa and coffee will be served by the high school to all contestants officials, guides, scorers, and timers at noon. Contestants plan to bring their own lunches.

Citizens in and about Hillsboro will find observation of the events very fine indeed. Visibility is available for nearly the entire length of the down hill course, the starting and finishing of the cross country course, and the slalom. There will be no admission charged. Those interested in finding the best route to Gibson Mountain may either cross the aqueduct at the

Favorite Recipe of the Week

For Washington's Birthday, FEBRUARY 22 would not be completely celebrated if cherries were not featured in some way during the day. It is true that the story of the cherry tree and George Washington is more closely connected in the memory of many of us than his great prowess as the Father of our Country. We seem to take for granted his ability as a leader and talk about the cherry tree episode of his youth.

This recipe for cherry pie is made to use the entire contents of a No. 2 can of cherries, which holds 2 1/2 cupsful.

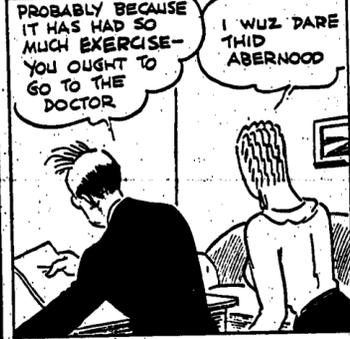

Cherry Pie.

1 No. 2 can Pitted 2 tablespoons corn-
Red Sour Cherries 1/2 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons sugar 1/2 teaspoon butter.

Line an 8-inch pie pan with pastry. Drain the cherries from the juice and place them in the pastry shell. Mix together sugar, cornstarch and salt and sprinkle over the cherries. Pour on the juice; dot with butter and cover with a thin top crust or with strips of pastry. Bake in a hot oven (475 degrees) for 12 minutes; reduce temperature to 425 degrees and continue baking for 45 minutes.

MAMMOTH cave at Cave City, Ky., first discovered in 1799, is not only one of the oldest but also one of the most fascinating tourist and vacation spots in the nation. Last year 67,000 people from every state and 30 foreign countries visited its 175 miles and underground trails that have been explored and opened to the public. This year even more visitors are expected, for under the direction of planning experts many of the cave's features, which earned it a place among the seven wonders of the world, have been improved without injury to their natural beauty. A new route has been opened, offering more thrills to the sightseer, not the least of which is squeezing through narrow places such as the Needle's Eye in Corkscrew Stairway (above). Caves are mysterious places, offering many surprises to first-time visitors.

Above is the historic entrance to Mammoth cave, otherwise known as the "old" or "natural" entrance, discovered in 1799. Here earth was mined for making gun powder during the War of 1812. Here, too, is the onyx "arm chair" where Jenny Lind, the Swedish nightingale, sang in 1851. At the left is Crystal lake, being examined by boating tourists.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

An Interesting Border for a Braided Rag Rug.

The center oval part of this serviceable braided rag rug is 32 inches long and 16 inches wide with 8-inch scroll border all around. The scrolls are made in pairs from braided strips 2 3/4 yards long. These strips are braided tight so they are not more than 1/2 inch wide. The center of each strip is marked as shown here at A and the ends are then sewn around and around, working toward the center as at B. The pairs of scrolls are sewn together and also to the edge of the rug as indicated here at the lower right.

This kind of rug has infinite possibilities for color schemes. One seen had a blue center, a band of mixed color and then a wide band of red. The pairs of scrolls alternated red and blue. Full instructions for making the chair seat covers shown in this sketch are in the book offered herewith.

Enjoy Them All at Their Best and Still Save Expenses

Thousands of travelers, following the sun to Florida, have reaped and are reaping the benefits of our wider scope of vacation pleasures; our more economical plan of vacation expenditures.

Let us give you the information we gave them... important data on vacation costs in Florida... facts and figures garnered after years of experience and research in this business of winter vacationing... valuable hints on how to enjoy the best at less cost.

Our representatives in New York and Chicago—specialists in Florida vacation knowledge—will be glad to give you the "low-down", accurate facts, either in a personal interview (if you are in these metropolitan areas or even in Boston, Philadelphia or Washington) or by correspondence, answering all your questions. This service is yours for the asking. There are no strings to our offer. You do not obligate yourself in any way.

Undoubtedly you know the two great hotels—among the finest resort hotels in the world—that make you this offer: the RONEY PLAZA, America's finest oceanfront hotel, Miami Beach, and the MIAMI BILTMORE, center of the wintertime world, Miami (Coral Gables).

They represent the BEST in vacation living—also, the MOST VALUE for your vacation dollar.

For instance, when you are a guest of either hotel, you are spared the considerable expense of hiring taxis, sightseeing cars or other transportation to get around to all the sports and social activities in this famous playground. There's a private fleet of aerocars—big, comfortable auto lounge cars—available day and night, free of charge, to take Roney Plaza and Miami Biltmore guests to the races, theaters, nightclubs, jai alai, airports, polo games, even to the Florida keys and bring them back. This economy alone saves you approximately one-third of your normal vacation expenses.

And there are many other rare advantages offered by this revolutionary policy of guest privileges and entertainment. One of the greatest courtesies ever offered is that of membership privileges in three of the finest sports clubs in America, after the guest's name has been approved by the clubs' membership committees. These privileges are granted without payment of initiation fees or dues. Think what these privileges would cost you, if you were not a guest of the Roney Plaza or Miami Biltmore. Moreover, this enlarges your vacation opportunities to include every phase of resort pleasure—from surf bathing on a private beach and golf on "the course of champions" to deep-sea fishing at the celebrated Key Largo Anglers Club.

But let one of our representatives tell you about it personally, as well as giving you other valuable information about Florida in general, various costs, routes, resort activities, etc.

ZERO WEATHER

What's the cause of all our aches, Our misfortunes and mistakes, Zero Weather. Doctors now deal out their pills, For sore throat and other ills, And we all have colds and chills, In Zero weather.

What makes us so doggoned cross, Forget our gains and count our loss, Zero Weather. Weather is but just a name, We'd be grouchy just the same, Still it's nice to lay the blame, On the weather.

If it had but been our fate, To just sleep and hibernate, Thru zero weather, How we envy the poor frog, Fast asleep beneath a log, At the bottom of the bog, In Zero weather.

And to add to our chagrin, A bright Candlemas day was ushered in,

Oh ye weather, Winter has taken another flight, Six more weeks of cold in sight, How we dread the long cold nights, Of zero weather.

But Peavey hath a robin seen, We all know that this doth mean, Bright spring weather, So cheer up and try to smile, Forget cold weather for awhile, Robins should our cares beguile, In Zero weather.

Mistress spring is round the bend, Chills and colds must have an end, And zero weather, We'll pluck violets bathed in dew, Bask in the sun neath skies of blue, And forget that we've been thru, Zero Weather.

Concocts 150 Varieties Out of Cherries Alone.

Toronto.—Monroe Boston Strause, at a salary of $100 a day, is telling a chain of Toronto sandwich shops how to make pies more inviting to the public palate.

Strause eats pie all the time and his waistline has not suffered from his gustatory exploits which earned him the title of world's champion pie-maker. He has won so many pie contests and created so many new kinds of pie that he can't remember them all.

He claims to have originated "chiffon" pies and said he held the secret for four years before it became "public knowledge." He made a fortune out of the recipe while it lasted and traveled 30,000 miles in one year to show hotels and restaurants how to make them. He averages that distance every year.

Out of a job in Los Angeles, his home town, he heard about a $25,000 prize offered for the best pie made in California. He went to the baker at a prominent hotel with a proposal and they divided the $25,000.

"Pie is swell food," says Strause. "I eat scads of it. I have a good complexion and marvelous digestion. I always tell people who say pie gives them indigestion to try eating pie first and the rest of the meal last. They get indigestion just the same, but if they eat only the pie they don't. It's overloading that gives them the pains, not the pie."

Nobody knows how many kinds of pie there are, says the pie king. "I think up new ones every few days, usually while I'm standing watching a baker work. Out of cherries and pineapple I made 380 kinds in one test. Out of cherries alone I made 150.

Strause believes that bakers make the best pies. Mother was good, but not as consistent. The pie champion "sneaked" his pies into a score of big contests and in every case won from the amateurs. In Chicago he won a contest in which 2,548 pies were entered.

You cannot change Strause's mind about it—as a dessert pie is "tops."

FARM TOPICS

KNOW TOPSOIL FOR EROSION CONTROL

Farmer Should Be Familiar With His Land.

By Dean J. O. Schaub of the North Carolina State College—WNU Service.

It's hard for a farmer to adopt the kind of erosion control practices that would be most effective on his land unless he knows what type of soil covers his fields.

He needs to consider the thickness and texture of the topsoil and also the subsoil underneath. He needs to consider the slope of the land over each field, how badly the soil tends to erode and how much soil has been washed away already.

In some sections so much topsoil has been washed away that the farmers on it have to eke out a living as best they can by virtually tilling the subsoil.

There are soils being cultivated that are better suited to making brick than to producing crops.

Within a single field there may be big differences in the type of soil found in various places. Or differences in the slope over a field cause it to be badly eroded in some places while in others there is still a fairly good layer of topsoil.

The badly eroded places should be retired to thick-growing cover crops, but the more level places may still be good for careful farming.

A striking example of differences in soil may be gained by examining the thin topsoil on a place where row crops have been grown for a long time, then compare it with the thick, spongy soil in a wooded area nearby.

A careful study of the soil on each farm has proved one of the most important steps in the "whole-farm" method of controlling erosion now being demonstrated in erosion control areas.

Buff Turkey Not Among Recognized Varieties

Whether or not the Buff turkey has become extinct, it has evidently lost its place in official recognition as a variety. The present standard recognizes six varieties, among which the Buff does not appear. A Department of Agriculture publication of something over 30 years ago, while recognizing the Buff as a variety, says of it that it is not generally known throughout the country and, in many localities, is almost unknown.

The standard calls for a pure buff color throughout, says this publication, but this shade of coloring is seldom seen. "As bred for market, these turkeys are of a reddish buff or light chestnut color, mixed with white and some dark shadings." It would seem very likely that this variety has become merged with the Bourbon Red of similar colorings and its identity lost. It may be that some may still be able to offer pure golden yellow turkeys of the old Buff variety but the chances are, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, that the offering would be what has been found before, Buff Bourbon Reds. Here would appear an opportunity to back-track to an old and lost variety and make it of such distinction as to call for favorable recognition.

To Tell Age of Sheep

The age of a sheep can be determined by looking at the teeth, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide. There are eight front teeth in the lower jaw and none in the upper jaw. Lamb teeth are small, white and narrow, and are replaced by larger, wider, permanent teeth at yearly intervals as follows: One year, two permanent teeth (center pair); two years, four permanent teeth; three years, six permanent teeth; four years, full mouth of eight permanent teeth. After four years there is no definite method of telling the age by the teeth.

Farm Notes

There are usually 10 eggs to a pound.

Turkeys have been known as guinea hens and cocks of India.

Flour makes up 57 per cent of the weight of the average loaf of bread.

"Large" eggs, so labeled, must weigh 24 ounces a dozen, according to law.

Poultry experts estimate a pullet eats 25 to 27 pounds of feed before reaching maturity.

Only those pullets that are well-grown, well-fleshed, well-pigmented, and free from disease are profitable.

Horses and cows and sheep must rely on their lips to gather grass or grain, and they can take in only a lipful at a time.

A white Leghorn hen at Lady-smith, South Africa, laid an egg 3 1/4 inches long, 2 1/4 inches wide, and weighing 5 ounces, nearly three times that of an ordinary egg.

Score for Psychology

"BILL FERGUSON'S wife, Vonnice, was in again today and asked us over some night this week," said Jack, as he pushed back his chair after dinner.

"Oh, I don't mind; she's an interesting specimen," consented Angie, a sly bit of mockery in her tone. Angie was a recent enough graduate of college to have made psychology a hobby, and she insisted on analyzing everyone she met, but only to Jack, however, which resulted in many a good laugh.

"Yeah. Well, I told her we'd come over Thursday."

"Wonder what she'll have on her mind this time. Did she say anything more about the gate-able?"

"Yeah. She found one just like Auntie Kelly gave you, except that its legs aren't solid mahogany and it has no carving. That satisfy my Mrs. Psycho Cat?"

"Perfectly, Mr. Baldy Bean."

The hostess was gracious.

"What an adorable hat!" she gasped, as she took Angie's transparent straw. "Bill, look at it. Isn't it just a dream of everything I've wanted in a hat all summer?"

One evening about a week later, Jack's after dinner story concerned Vonnice's obsession. She had shopped for a hat like Angie's and couldn't find one, so she got a bargain for about four times as much. Next day the Rogers took her out in their smart sport model, and then she must have one like it. "Bill's worried. Business has been quiet and he wants to get out of that expensive apartment and build a bungalow, but that's the only thing she doesn't want. Bill's too easy with his wife," he added.

"Well, never mind that now. They're coming here tomorrow evening, aren't they? Tell you what. Where is that plan of Dick's house? We'll pretend we are going to build, and maybe she will want one, too."

"Fine. You're all right. Bet she will fall for it."

The Fergusons visited the next evening. Though Bill delved into the plans, Vonnice gave a disinterested look and turned to the window, from which she could see thousands of cars flashing by.

On seeing that their scheme had failed, Jack wanted to put up the plans. However, Bill had his pencil and was going over every detail. Then he wrote, "Don't say anything about a garage."

Deliberately, Angie said: "Oh, yes, the garage space is here, you see." Bill looked thunderous. Jack was chagrined at this crass stupidity of his wife.

"Where would the living room be?" Vonnice was asking, forgetting all about the garage.

"On this side, with a big fireplace—this square is the chimney. The bathroom would be tiled."

"Couldn't think of it," said Bill, as if the plans were his own. "The garage will be expensive enough." But Vonnice spoke up:

"We could wait for the garage if we had the house with a sunporch, and a living room with a big fireplace, and a blue-and-white tiled bathroom, Jack, dear, you'll have to be reasonable. We couldn't get everything at once. Father said he would give me that corner land near Judith's place in Newton. We ought to start right away to build. I always said we should have a home."

Well, Vonnice was wound up, and she'd probably stay that way for some time to come, there were so many interesting things about a new house.

They left late, taking the blueprint with them for an inspiration.

"Good girl, Angie," said Jack, affectionately.

"Now we'll have to start on a house for ourselves to keep up her good intentions."

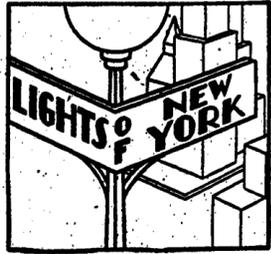

"You're right," agreed Jack heartily, "a splendid idea. We must have a place of our own."

Origin of the Airedale

The Airedale originally came from the Aire valley in England, hence its name, says Better Homes and Gardens magazine. He was developed from the Otterhound and an extinct black and tan terrier. The Airedale is considered king of the terrier family by many, is a loyal companion, splendid for children, and a good watchdog. He can be trained for hunting on both land and water, the latter trait having been handed down by his Otterhound forefathers.

Football Different in 1887

Football was different in 1887. A team had three downs to make five yards; a touchdown counted four points; a kick after, two; and a field goal, five. As a tackler laid hands on the ball carrier he was compelled to cry "Held!" The carrier responded "Down!" when he thought he was stopped. The ball-lugger generally did his yelling from the bottom of a pile of twenty-one players

By L. L. STEVENSON

New York of another day was recalled by the retirement of George A. Robb, a motorman on the Sixth avenue elevated. Jay Gould was president of the road when he was hired away back in 1885. In those days, the motive power for trains was not electricity but steam engines. Usually anthracite was burned. But when strikes shut off the supply, soft coal was substituted. That made smoke. Housewives of Harlem, which wasn't a colored section then, angry because their washings were soiled, threw bricks at the trainmen. Also in those days, on Sundays, a special car was attached to trains. This was for the benefit of bicyclists who wanted to go to Bronx park or Moshulu for exercise far from the throngs of the city. The wheels, as they were called in the gay nineties, were carried in the special car and Robb says that some of the old racks are still in existence.

Robb spent 32 of his 73 years running up and down Sixth avenue. In all that time, he never was late to work once. In all that time, he did not take so much as one drink—a fact which may have some bearing on his punctuality record. He started as a wiper, became a fireman and then an engineer. When the line was about to be electrified in 1903, he availed himself of the opportunity to learn to operate electric trains, qualified and swapped the throttle for a control handle. His various trips averaged 100 miles a day. Up until 20 years ago, when trainmen went on a six-day week, he made those 100 miles seven days a week. No vacations were granted, but once a year he took a week off on his own time. So despite the fact that his trips were only from the Battery to up into the Bronx, he has covered quite a string of miles.

Now that he has a chance to think back to the time when there were no block signals and when the keenness of the engineer's vision was a bigger safety factor than it is now, Robb is not quite sure what he will do. One thing is certain, however. He won't spend his time riding up and down Sixth avenue and visiting with former fellow workmen. As a matter of fact, should he desire to do so, he wouldn't have the chance for a great while longer. When the Sixth avenue subway, now being dug, is completed, the Sixth avenue elevated will come down.

Just learned why Phil Baker's affection has a keyboard just the reverse of conventional practice. It seems that back in pre-war days, in Philadelphia, the youthful Baker bought himself a pleated piano with a left-handed keyboard. Having learned to play on that, he is no good with the regular kind. His present instrument, built to his order, cost him $1,200. It is insured for $2,000, part of the indemnity being to cover loss should it be necessary to replace the accordion. There are none like it on the market and to make one, a master craftsman would have to work several weeks.

Before Spencer Bentley went into the show business, he was an assistant purser employed by one of the large steamship lines. The other day he received a call to report for duty as purser on one of the ships of the line. When he quit seafaring, he forgot to have his name removed from the active list.

On Broadway, the other afternoon, I encountered, swinging along with great, strong strides, an officer of the Scottish guard attired in his uniform including kilts, of course, sporran, jaunty feathered cap and long, flowing cape. Completely unmindful of the stares of the curious, including myself, he stopped now and then to peer earnestly into a shop window. And at any moment, I expected the bagpipes to start their skirling.

Subway eavesdropping: "His face was as red as if he'd dropped a couple of crap dice in the collection plate."

American Men Are Buying More Clothes

New York.—Style-conscious Mr. America has increased his clothes budget to almost double the figure it reached even in the boom year of 1929.

A survey of sales figures for the first ten months of 1937 by the Merchant Tailors Designers association, national organization of custom tailors, shows that the average American man of the business executive or professional type patronizing his local tailor, has ordered from one to three more suits in 1937 than he did in 1929, and has spent from three hundred to five hundred dollars more in the process.
